WEBSTER The surname Webster is of ancient English origin, being a trade name, a colloquial term for weaver. The most important English family of this name claims descent from John Webster who was a resident of Bolsover, Derbyshire, in the reign of Henry IV, and whose descendants are settled in Essex, in which county as well as in Cambridgeshire and Huntingdonshire, Henry IV granted John Webster large estates about 1400. The Scotch family of Webster, very likely also descended from this John Webster, were in Edinburgshire before 1700, probably not long before that date, however. There is no other family of this surname in Scotland bearing arms, though descendants are found in other sections of the country. The armorial bearings of the Webster family of Edinburg: Argent a fesse gules between three crosses crosslet fitchee azure. Crest: the sun rising out of the sea proper. Motto, Emergo. Of the American families of the surname Webster, there are two important branches. John Webster who came from Suffolk, England, progenitor of Daniel Webster, is mentioned below. John Webster from Warwickshire, England, settled in Connecticut and was progenitor of the dictionary genius, Noah Webster.

He married Mary Shatswell, sister of John Shatswell, who remembered her in his will. She married (second) October 29, 1650, John Emery, Sr., of Newbury, and removed with him to Haverhill. He and his son John Emery were appointed guardians of Israel Webster, aged eighteen; and Nathan Webster, aged sixteen, at their request, November 26, 1662. The family removed to Newbury from Ipswich. Administration was granted to John Webster's widow Mary, November 4, 1646, and later at her desire division was made to the eight minor children; to the eldest son John the farm, he paying to the youngest son five pounds or a quarter the value of the farm; Mary, Stephen and Hannah to have equal shares in the island bought of Widow Andrews; Elizabeth, Abigail and Israel to have twenty nobles apiece; all at twenty-one years of age. He married, September 26, 1903, Annie Belle Carnes, born Saugus, Massachusetts, July 5, 1870, daughter of Martin and Christianna (Meservey) Carnes. They have one child, Helen Emily, born August 30, 1907.

Martin Carnes was born November, 1837, at Manchester, England, died at Saugus, buried in Milo, Maine, July, 1894. Mr. Carnes came to this country in 1846 and first found employment on a farm in Weston, Middlesex county, Massachusetts; after his marriage he left Weston, but soon returned and engaged in farming there until 1867; during the remainder of his life he followed the trade of stone mason at Saugus. In religion Mr. Carnes was an active and pious Methodist and a trustee for a period of twenty-five years. Christianna Meservey was a native of Marlow, Maine. The surname Phelps is a variation of the spelling of the name Phillips, meaning son of Philip, in the case of the original ancestor using it. The spelling of the surname has been varied and a number of well established family names are traced to the same origin. One branch of the Phelps family, however, claims to be of the Guelph family of Germany to which Queen Victoria belonged, but no proof of record has been found to establish the claim. Some branches of the American family of Phelps are descended from the ancient family of Tewksbury, Gloucestershire, England. Among them is the family mentioned below. The ancient coat-of-arms is described as follows: Sable lion chained and rampant. Various branches of the English family have their coats-of-arms.

(I) James Phelps was born about 1520 and is supposed to have been a brother of Francis Phylppe, of Nether Tyne, Staffordshire, England. He married Joan ———, who was given permission to administer his estate on May 10, 1588. Children, baptized in the Tewksbury Abbey Church, England: 1. William, August 4, 1500, mentioned below. 2. Thomas, August 10, 1503. 3. George (Giles), September 5, 1500. 4. Alice, December 24, 1572, married, June 21, 1595, John Hope. 5. Edward, May 10, 1578. 6. Kendline, October 16, 1580. 7. Richard, October 16, 1583. 8. Robert, July 18, 1584. 9. Nicholas.

(II) William, son of James Phelps, was baptized at Tewksbury Church, England, August 4, 1500, and married Dorothy ———, who administered his estate and died in 1613. He probably died in 1611. Children, baptized in Tewksbury Abbey Church: 1. Mary, September 4, 1587, died young. 2. Mary, April 23, 1588. 3. Thomas, June 24, 1590. 4. Dorothy, February 20, 1595. 5. William, August 19, 1599, mentioned below. 6. James, July 14, 1601. 7. Elizabeth, May 9, 1603. 8. George, born about 1606.

(III) William (2), son of William (1) Phelps, was baptized at Tewksbury Abbey Church, England, August 19, 1599. He was the immigrant ancestor. He resided for a time in Tewksbury, and his first child, Richard, was baptized in the church there. Soon after this he probably removed to one of the southern counties, as there is no further record of him in Tewksbury. He and his wife, six children, and his brother George, came to New England in the ship, "Mary and John," Captain Squeb, sailing from Plymouth, England, March 20, 1630, and landing at Nantasket, now Hull, May 30, 1630. He settled at Dorchester, and was among the first settlers and founders of that place. He was a prominent man, and often served on important committees to lay out boundary lines. He applied for admission as a freeman, October 19, 1630, and was admitted soon afterward. He was one of the jury on the first jury trial in New England, November 9, 1630. He was constable in 1631; deputy to the general court, 1634-35. He removed to Windsor, Connecticut, in the fall of 1635, and William Phelps was one of the six who formed the first town meeting of Windsor. At a court held May 1, 1637, William Phelps presiding, it was ordered that there "shall be an offensive war against the Pequots." He was a magistrate from 1639 to 1643, 1645 to 1649 inclusive, and 1656 to 1662. He was deputy in 1651. In 1641 he was the governor of the Windsor colony. He was a man of property, as shown by the high pew rent that he paid. He subscribed also toward the fund for the poor. Not being able to prove his title and payment for the land he bought of Sebat, an Indian in Windsor, William Phelps paid for it the second time, the legal tender used being wampum. He resided on the road running northerly, a short distance north of the Mill river valley, and he was among those who suffered from the great flood in 1639. Soon after the flood he removed farther north and settled on what is known as Phelps meadows, and his son William lived a short distance east of him. The cellar of the old house may still be seen. He married (first) ———, who died in 1635. He married (second) in 1638, Mary Dover, who came from England on the "Mary and John." He died at Windsor, July 14, and was buried July 15, 1672. His wife died November 27, 1675. His will was dated April 22, 1660, and proved July 26, 1672. Children of first wife: 1. Richard, baptized in Tewksbury, England, December 26, 1619. 2. (IV) Nathaniel, son of William (2) Phelps, was born in England about 1627, and came to New England with his father. He settled first in Dorchester and then in Windsor, Connecticut, where he married, September 17, 1650, Elizabeth Copley, of England, a descendant of Copley, the celebrated artist. She died in Northampton, Massachusetts, December 6, 1712, and her will was proved there. Nathaniel Phelps resided on the Orton place opposite his father's homestead, which he purchased of his brother Samuel. About 1656-57 he removed to Northampton, Massachusetts, and was one of the first settlers there. He was one of the first deacons of the Northampton church, and occupied his homestead forty-three years. The farm was occupied by his descendants until 1835. It comprised the land which was formerly the site of Miss Margaret Dwight's school, and later the College Institute of J. J. Dudley, and which is now Shady Lawn. The old house stood a few rods north of the present house. On February 8, 1679, he and his sons Nathaniel Jr. and William took the oath of allegiance before Major Pynchon, and May 11, 1681, he was admitted a freeman. He died in Northampton, May 27, 1702, aged seventy-five years. Children: 1. Mary, born in Windsor, June 21, 1651, married Matthew Closson. 2. Nathaniel, June 2, 1653, mentioned below. 3. He married, August 11, 1676, Grace Martin, born 1656 in England, died at Northampton, August 2, 1727. There is a tradition that she was engaged to be married to a lover who proved faithless, and she came to New England to join relatives in Hadley. For some reason she could not get to them, and was in danger of being sold to pay her passage money. Children, born in Northampton: 1. Grace, born November 11, 1677, died 1677. 2. Descendants of William Sawyer.

SAWYER the immigrant ancestor, went from Newbury, Massachusetts, to Maine, in every generation. His son, William Sawyer, settled in Wells, Maine, and left a numerous posterity. Descendants of other sons settled at Falmouth, now Portland, Maine. Edward Sawyer married, January, 1734, at Falmouth, Abigail Plummer; Job Sawyer married there, May 28, 1737, Mehitable Blake; Daniel Sawyer married there, December 15, 1739, Sarah Woodbury; Abraham Sawyer married, November 7, 1742, Elizabeth Graffam. The records of marriage of Jeremiah, Samuel, Solomon, Job, Zachariah, Abraham, Anthony, Ebenezer and others follow in the Falmouth records. Isaac and Sarah Sawyer were married before 1733 and had a family in Falmouth; Jeremiah, Jacob, Joseph and John Jr. had families born in Falmouth, and we have reason to believe that Isaac, of Falmouth, was an ancestor of Isaac Sawyer mentioned below. The deficient record of Falmouth and other Maine towns in which the family located make it impossible at the present time to complete the record of the family to the immigrant ancestor, William Sawyer. According to the federal census of 1790 seven heads of families of this surname were then living in Falmouth: Merrill, Isaac, Obadiah, Benjamin, Anthony, Thomas, Zachariah.

(1) Isaac Sawyer, probably the sixth in descent from William Sawyer, a sketch of whom appears in this work, was born about 1802 in what is now Auburn, Maine. He was educated in the common schools, and learned the trade of blacksmith. Early in life he established his shop at Hallowell, where he made chains, bolts and other iron used in ship-building and equipment. He was industrious and skillful and had a large business for his day, employing a number of journeymen. He was a man of fine intellect and physique and much inventive genius. Had he patented his devices he might have been wealthy. One of the most valuable was a method of introducing hot air from the forge to create a draft necessary for heating heavy iron. He was highly respected by his townsmen and had more than local fame as the "honest blacksmith" of Hallowell. He died at Augusta, Maine, in 1868. He married, at Hallowell, Diana R. Gaubert, born at Bowdoinham, Maine, about 1804, died at an advanced age, daughter of Nicholas Gaubert, who was a nobleman by birth, a native of Marseilles, France, who came to this country when nineteen years old to complete his education in New Orleans, where he later married a girl of French parentage and settled in Richmond, Maine, where both died. Children: 1. Margaret, born in Hallowell, Maine, married David Goodwin, of Dresden, Maine. 2. Katherine, married Henry Winslow, a contractor and builder of Augusta, Maine. 3. Mary Jane, married Joseph Patterson, a prominent merchant of that city, once mayor. 4. Robert, died in Nantucket, Massachusetts; a tailor by trade, at one time postmaster of Lancaster, New Hampshire; married Nancy Moore, of Hallowell; both now deceased. 5. Isaac Jr., a blacksmith by trade; drowned on a trip to California when in middle life. 6. William, a blacksmith by trade; died in Somerville, Massachusetts, where he was employed many years; married Hannah Lord. 7. George A., mentioned below. 8. Twin, born June 16, 1826, died in infancy. 9. Frances, married Alden Buttrick, of Lowell, Massachusetts, a prominent grocer of that city. 10. Hannah, married Captain Isaac Smith, a shipmaster of Hallowell.

well, Maine, where both died. 11. Diana R., married Captain Jonas Smith, a prominent master mariner of Maine.

(II) George A., son of Isaac Sawyer, was born in Hallowell, Maine, June 16, 1826. He attended the district schools of his native town. He was ambitious to make his mark, and at the age of eighteen left home and began a mercantile career as clerk in the well known establishment of Haskell & Howland, dealers in dry goods. According to the custom of that day he was apprenticed for a term of years, and his wages were fifty dollars the first year, one hundred the second year and one hundred and fifty the third year. By 1847 he was receiving three hundred dollars a year as clerk in the store of George Hill & Company, corner of West and Washington streets, where he continued for the next ten years. The firm removed to Summer street and took the name of Chandler & Company, under which it is still doing business and enjoying an extensive trade. It was the first dry goods house to locate on Summer street. By rigid economy Mr. Sawyer saved a modest sum of money with which he established himself in business in 1857, a men's furnishing store at the corner of Washington and Franklin streets as partner in the firm of Merriam, Sawyer & Company. A few years later he took the advice of friends and unwisely decided to sell his business and settle in California. His affairs did not prosper in California and he soon returned to Boston and with the remainder of his capital made a new start in the men's furnishing business in a store on Washington street between West street and Temple place. His trade grew rapidly and he soon found it wise to move to larger quarters, at the south corner of Tremont and Winter streets, 120 Tremont street, the present location. He built up one of the largest and most substantial concerns in this line of business. Since 1907 the store has been conducted by his son, and Mr. Sawyer has been spending his days in a quiet and comfortable way at his beautiful home, 306 Marlborough street, Boston. Mr. Sawyer is well known to the trade as a man of the highest principles and integrity, enterprising, sagacious and upright in business. In religion he is liberal and in politics a Republican. He married, in Boston, July, 1855, Hannah E. Russell, born in Bath, Maine, May 20, 1825, died at her home on Marlborough street in December, 1907, daughter of Jesse Russell, of Bath, Maine, later a provision dealer in Quincy market, Boston. Her mother was Mary (Robinson) Russell. Her father married (second) ——— Dudley, who died in Boston when about eighty years of age. Children: 1. Mamie, born in Boston, died unmarried at the age of thirty-five, an accomplished, capable young woman. 2. Frederick R., July 17, 1857, mentioned below. 3. George A. Jr., 1860, died in 1895; married Isabella F. Finch, born in Cornell, New York, who since her husband's death has resided with his father and has been to him a most devoted and greatly beloved daughter, especially since the death of his wife and his retirement from business.

(III) Frederick R., son of George A. Sawyer, was born in Boston, July 17, 1857. He received his education in the public and high schools of Boston, and was then associated with his father in business. He was admitted to partnership in 1888 and after his father retired he became the sole owner of the business, though the old name of the firm is retained. He resides at Center street, Roxbury. He is a Republican in politics. In religion liberal. He is a member of Boston City Club and Boston Athletic Club. He married, November 6, 1879, in Melrose, Cora Austin, born July 10, 1850, died at her home, June 15, 1895, daughter of John S. and Harriet A. (Morris) Austin. He married (second) August 29, 1907, Mrs. Edna W. (Brooks) Prescott, born in Charlestown December 21, 1883. He has no children.

John Whitcomb, immigrant ancestor, was born in England and the name was originally Whetcombe. He was long supposed to be the son of Symon Whetcombe, who was one of the original patentees of the old Massachusetts Bay Colony, but the publication of the will of John Whetcombe, of Sherbourne, Dorsetshire, England, proved in 1598, shows that Symon was then a minor, and that he could not have been the father of the American progenitor, who was born about 1588. Some authorities believe that the American John was brother of Symon, and the John Whetcombe mentioned in the will of Symon's father.

John Whitcomb settled in Dorchester, Massachusetts, and was a church member there in 1635; this and the birth of his youngest son Josiah in 1638, are the only events of his family life recorded during the years he spent in Dorchester. Later evidence shows him to have been well-to-do for the times, a man of intelligence and enterprise, much given to buying and selling land. In 1640 he removed to Scituate, where he owned land, one piece being a farm of one hundred and eight acres near the mouth of the North river, on the Marshfield side, and after 1646, when he became one of the Conihasset partners, he owned the lands which through that transaction became his share. While in Scituate he was constable. He was admitted a freeman, June 3, 1652. In 1644 he sold his farm on North river to Thomas Hicks; in 1654 he sold half his share in Conihasset lands to John Williams Jr., giving the other half to his son Robert. In the same year he removed to Lancaster, where he had bought a share two years before, when the town was laid out. Not all his children accompanied him thither. Catherine remained and settled in Scituate; Robert remained in Scituate and settled in Boston. John Whitcomb and his son John are counted among the pioneer settlers of the town of Lancaster, originally the Nashaway Plantation. The homestead of John Sr. was on lot No. 33; John Jr. had lot No. 34. The present post-office and bank building in Lancaster is on the original house lot. He died September 24, 1662, aged about seventy-four years. He married, in England, Frances ———, who made a will May 12, 1671, and died at Lancaster, May 17, 1671. The agreement of division of John Whitcomb's estate has the name spelled by his own children three different ways—Wetcomb, Whetcomb and Whitcomb, October 7, 1662. Children: 1. Catherine, married, 1644, Rodolphus Ellmes, of Scituate. 2. James, born in England, settled in Boston; owned five acres of land opposite Boston Common, died in Boston, November 23, 1686; married (first) Rebecca ———; (second) Elizabeth ———. 3. John, may have been the eldest son; was most closely associated in later life with his father; married, May 19, 1669, or 1671, died April 7, 1683, leaving wife Mary and two daughters. 4. Robert, mentioned below. 5. Jonathan, born about 1630 in England, settled in Lancaster and Wethersfield. 6. Abigail. 7. Job, land surveyor at Lancaster, married, May 19, 1669, Mary ———; settled at Wethersfield, Connecticut. 8. Josiah, born in Dorchester, 1638, married, January 4, 1664, Rebecca Waters.

(II) Robert, son of John Whitcomb, was born about 1623-25, doubtless in England. He removed to Scituate at the time his father went to Lancaster and perhaps lived in the family of his eldest sister, Catherine Ellmes. In 1654 Robert received from his father a half interest in his Conihasset lands, and as he was not mentioned in his mother's will, nor in the division of his father's estate, he probably received his full share by deed. He was in sympathy with the Quakers, and his father and brothers were Puritans. There may have been some estrangement over religion. He settled at Beechwood in the "Beeches" at Scituate. The only record of the names of his children is found in the will of General James Cudworth, his father-in-law, who bequeathed to his four Whitcomb grandchildren. Whitcomb married Mary Cudworth, born July 23, 1637, daughter of General James Cudworth. The Cudworths had become Friends and Whitcomb was married by the Quaker form, not then accepted as legal by the Puritan authorities and he was obliged to have a civil ceremony performed March 9, 1660. Children: 1. Israel, born 1661-62. 2. Robert. 3. James, 1668, mentioned below. 4. Elizabeth, married, 1710, Daniel Lincoln, of Hingham.

(III) James, son of Robert Whitcomb, was born in 1668, died June 26, 1728. He removed from Scituate to Rochester, Massachusetts. He was a set-work cooper by trade. His will was dated September 22, 1727. He married, November 22, 1694, Mary Parker, born 1667-68, died November 30, 1729. Children: 1. James, born May 31, 1695, died young. 2. Nathaniel (twin), August 19, 1697, mentioned below. 3. James (probably twin of Nathaniel). 4. Mary (twin), March 22, 1699-1700. 5. Joanna (twin). 6. Robert, mentioned in father's will.

(IV) Nathaniel, son of James Whitcomb, was born in Rochester, August 19, 1697, died March 18, 1771, according to his gravestone at Hardwick, Massachusetts. He removed to Hardwick from Rochester about 1742 and cleared a farm. He became a prominent citizen and was selectman there in 1745-52-53-58-59; assessor 1745-58-59. He married (first), January 21, 1722-23, Rosilla Coombs, who was said to be "half-French," who died March 8, 1737. He married (second), July 27, 1738, Phebe Blackman. Children of first wife: 1. On account of Indian attacks he and the other settlers had to leave their homes and he found refuge for a time at Harwick, Vermont, but later returned to his clearing and settled there. His wife used to say that for a time she was the handsomest woman in Barnard, because she was the only one there. He was a soldier in the revolution in 1776 in Captain Benjamin Wait's company, Major Huntington's Vermont Rangers. In 1778 he was on the committee of safety and correspondence. He married, December 9, 1762, Lydia Nye, of North Bridgewater, Massachusetts. She died February 22, 1831, at Stockbridge, Vermont. He died April 7, 1797. His epitaph:

He removed thence to Cambridge and was a town officer there. He had a grant of "coal or iron ore which may be found in any common land in this Country's disposing," November 2, 1637, and it is presumed that he made a search for minerals at a time when great mineral wealth was expected from the earth in New England. He worked several years at his trade in various shoe factories, returning at length to his father's farm to take charge of the milk business. He conducted the farm for his father a number of years and finally succeeded to it, conducting it to the time of his death. He was well known also as a dealer in horses, making many trips to Canada and other sections to buy horses for the local market. He bought and sold a number of farms and at the time of his death owned the homestead at Weymouth. Mr. Shaw was an upright, generous, kindly man, supporting many good causes and contributing to the funds of various churches in the vicinity. He had many friends in all walks of life. In politics he was a Democrat. He married, 1858, Georgianna Bass, daughter of George Washington and Ann (Arnold) Bass. (See Bass family). His widow survives him, residing on the homestead at North Weymouth. They had no children.

The surname Bass is from the BASS French bas, meaning low of stature, and derived in the same way as the English Short, Stout, etc. Le Bas became common in England after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. The surname Bass dates back many centuries, however, in England. An ancient coat-of-arms of the family is described: Sable a bordure argent. Crest: Out of a ducal coronet two wings proper. Another coat-of-arms borne by the family of Bass of Curzon street, Mayfair: Argent on a chevron gules, between three greyhounds' heads erased sable each ducally gorged and chained or as many cross crosets of the last. Crest: Out of a mural crown gules masoned argent a demi-greyhound issuant holding in the mouth a rose between two leaves all proper.

“He beareth gules two chevrons ermine between three eagles displayed or: By the name of Parsons. Crest: An eagle’s head erased at the thigh, standing on a leopard’s head—gules.” Such is the distinction which Charles I in 1634 bestowed on his faithful subject, Sir Thomas Parsons, bart., of Great Milton or Great Torrington, the immediate ancestor of the principal founder of the family of that surname in America, and himself a descendant of an English family of great antiquity, dating to Walter Parsons, of Mulso, Ireland, 1290, and back of him in England to the time of the conquest, for the Parsonses of Ireland went there from England.

(I) Cornet Joseph Parsons, son of Sir Thomas Parsons, bart., and who is said to have been an officer in the English army, sailed from Gravesend, England, July 4, 1635, in the barque “Transport,” Edward Walker, master, for Boston, and next appears with William Pyncheon’s colony of planters who founded a settlement at Agawam, now Springfield, Massachusetts, in the year 1636. On July 15 of the same year his name appears as witness to a deed of cession from the Indians of the Connecticut valley to Pyncheon’s company, conveying to them all the lands in the region of Springfield, for the “consideration of 18 yards of wampum, 18 coats, 18 hatchets, 18 hoes, and 18 knives;” but the consideration was fair, for William Pyncheon was a just man and they who comprised his company of planters were all just and honorable men, and none other were admitted inhabitants of his plantation. Cornet Joseph Parsons was born in Great Torrington, near Exeter, Devonshire, England, and on his voyage to New England was accompanied by his brother Benjamin and others of the family, but it is with him and his descendants that we have particularly to deal in these annals. He was a man of considerable importance in the plantation at Agawam and Springfield, and in 1642 he was one of the founders of the new plantation at Northampton, and one of the first purchasers of Indian lands there in 1645. He was a fur trader and had the sole right of barter and traffic in furs in the valley, for which right he paid annually the sum of twelve pounds. He accumulated a large estate in lands and goods. He died October 9, 1683; married, November 26, 1646, Mary, daughter of Thomas and Margaret (Ford) Bliss, of Hartford, Connecticut, and by her had eleven children: 1. Joseph, born November, 1647. 2. Benjamin, 1649, died same year. 3. John, August 14, 1650, died 1728. 4. Samuel, January 23, 1653, settled in Durham, Connecticut. 5. Ebenezer, May 1, 1655, killed by Indians in King Philip’s war, September 8, 1675. 6. Jonathan, June 6, 1657, died 1694. 7. David, April 30, 1659, died young. 8. Mary, June 27, 1661, accused with the heresy of witchcraft and was tried before the court of assistants at Boston, May 13, 1692, and acquitted of the charge. 9. Hannah, August 1, 1663. 10. (VI) Lyman, son of Josiah (2) and Sarah (Strong) Parsons, was born on the old homestead in Northampton, June 28, 1801, died there March 10, 1879. (VII) Chauncey Elijah (baptized Elijah Chamcey), son of Lyman and Letitia (Ellsworth) (Parsons) Parsons, was born on the old family homestead, November 22, 1847. His whole life of three score years has been spent on the old ancestral place on the west side of Bridge street, facing the common. The house in which he was born and still lives was built by Isaac Parsons in 1744, and is a substantial structure still, having required no material change during the century and three score and four years which have passed since its erection; and it has been occupied in succession by Isaac Parsons, the builder, Josiah Parsons, his son, Lyman, his son, and Chauncey E. Parsons, four generations one after another, and the children of the present owner, three in number, were born and reared within its comfortable walls. And best of all, the old mansion stands on land which originally was a part of a tract purchased in 1674 by Cornet Joseph Parsons, the immigrant ancestor, the planter of William Pynchon's company who under the especial of the great and general court pushed through the wilderness and founded the first settlement in the Connecticut valley in the colony of Massachusetts Bay. Mr. Parsons is a thrifty, practical and successful farmer, and although the greater part of his lands have been under continuous cultivation for perhaps a century and a half or more, they are today as fertile and productive as when first cleared of their forest growth; and he himself is regarded as one of the best practical farmers of the Connecticut valley. He is a member of the state organization of Patrons of Husbandry, and while not in any sense a public man or politician, he nevertheless has always felt an earnest interest in the growth and welfare of the town and city of Northampton and the well-being of its people. For many years he has been a member of the city sewer commission, was a member of the city council several terms, and in 1904 was a representative from Northampton to the general court. October 28, 1874, Mr. Parsons married Annie Augusta, daughter of William A. and Sarah Augusta (Wait) Spaulding. Five children have been born of this marriage: 1. Henry Spaulding, August 31, 1877, married, September 24, 1904, Gladys, daughter of John Bernard and Nellie (Crosby) McCarthy, and had Ruth Eleanor,

August 17, 1905; John Bernard, September 15, 1906; Ann Augusta, December 13, 1908. 2. Josiah Wait, July 26, 1880, married, September 14, 1904, Lilla Emma, daughter of Kirk H. and Emma (Rood) Stone, and had Josiah Wait Jr., November 6, 1905. 3. Chauncey Lyman, December 25, 1882, a teacher. 4-5. Louise and Lillian, twins, born May 11, 1891, died May 26, 1891.

Josiah Ellsworth (see Parsons VI) died 1689; married, November 6, 1654, Elizabeth Holcomb.

(4) Charles Ellsworth, born October 13, 1721, married Betsey Bell, of East Windsor, Connecticut.

(5) Calvin Ellsworth, born February 9, 1770, died March 24, 1838; married, January 1, 1800, Dolly Lovejoy, who died January 22, 1869.

(6) Letitia Ellsworth, born June 25, 1819, married (first) August 28, 1839, Chauncey Parsons; married (second) April 24, 1846, Lyman Parsons (see Parsons).

Jeffrey Parsons, immigrant ancestor, was born in England in 1631 at Alphington near Exeter, Devonshire, and the name is still common in that section. His brother James Parsons had a daughter Elizabeth, who wrote a letter to her cousin, James Parsons, of Gloucester, dated May 14, 1714. Copies of the letter have been preserved by the family:

"Dear Cousin: I sometime received a letter from my son, in which he sent me the welcome news that he had seen his relations in New England, and that my uncle Jeffrey had five sons and two daughters living near together in good fashion and good health, and that you had sent me a book for a token, which I take very kindly and give you many thanks for, though I have not yet received it, my son being not yet returned to England, but I had a letter from him the last week that he hopes to be home in a short time, being now in Port Mahon, in the island of Minorca. My father, your uncle, James Parsons, died about six years since, and my mother about twelve. They left behind them seven children, whereof John, Robert and Isabel are since dead; but James, Jeffrey and Sarah, who together with myself are (God be praised) alive and in good health, join with me in their kind love and service to you, and to the whole family of our uncle. I am married to one Francis Morgan, so that if you please at any time to send me a letter, you must direct for Elizabeth Morgan, at Ashprington, near Dartmouth, in Devon, England.

I have had no opportunity of making you any requital for your present, and therefore must desire you to accept of my prayers and good wishes for yourself and family and all my relations, to whom I desire once more to be kindly remembered, and so rest their and your most affectionate kinswoman and hearty servant,
Elizabeth Morgan."

Jeffrey Parsons left England when quite young and went with an uncle to the Barbadoes, where he resided for several years, coming thence to New England, where he made his home in Gloucester, Massachusetts. He bought an acre and a half of land in Fisherman's Field in April, 1655, of Giles Barge, and later a house and land in the same place, once owned by George Ingersoll and still earlier by George Norton. He lived on this place and his descendants have occupied it to the present time. Among his descendants were Chief Justice Parsons of Massachusetts. According to a family tradition he met the girl he married one hot day when walking by Vinson's Spring. He stopped for a drink and she was at the spring and offered him a cup. The acquaintance thus begun developed into a courtship, followed by marriage. He married, November 11, 1657, Sarah Vinson, who died January 12, 1708. He died August 19, 1689. He was a prominent citizen and served the town as selectman and in other offices of trust and honor. He was a husbandman. His will was dated December 7, 1688, and proved February 24, 1689. He bequeathed to his wife Sarah and son James the residue of his estate "to improve for themselves and bringing up of ye young children and keeping of the family together;" to James the three acres on which his house stood and other lots of land and stock; to son Jeffrey land and stock; to Jeffrey's son Jonathan; to sons Jeremiah, Nathaniel and Ebenezer, and daughters Sarah, Elizabeth and Abigail ten pounds each; to other grandchildren. Children, born in Gloucester: 1. James, born December 18, 1658. 2. Jeffrey, January 31, 1660-61, mentioned below. 3. Sarah, April 19, 1663, married John Lee. 4. John, May 14, 1666. 5. (II) Jeffrey (2), son of Jeffrey (1) Parsons, was born January 31, 1660-61. He received a grant of land in 1685 on the road to Starbought Harbor and Little Good Harbor Beach, at the Farms, and built his house there. Most of the Cape Ann Parsons families of the present day are descended from his son William, and his descendants occupied the homestead at last accounts. His will was dated March 14, 1734, and proved in 1750. He married, May 5, 1686, Abigail Younglove, of Ipswich, who died June, 1734. Children, born at Gloucester: 1. Christopher Wadsworth, WADSWORTH immigrant ancestor, was born in England and is believed to have come to New England in the ship with William Wadsworth, who may have been his brother, in the ship "Lion" in 1632. He is believed to have been the son of Thomas Wadsworth, from the records in a Bible he brought with him, and which is now owned by the Cowles family in Hartford, Connecticut. He settled in Duxbury where he was a prominent citizen. He was the first constable of the town; deputy to the general court, selectman and highway surveyor at various times. He is mentioned first in the records in 1633 and in 1638 drew land in Holly Swamp. The site of his house is west of Captain's Hill, near the new road to Kingston; his lands ran clear to the bay, on what was formerly known as Norton's Hole. The Swan family of England is widely distributed in various counties, and includes many noble families. Most of the coats-of-arms have the swan as an emblem. The Swan family of Kent has: Az, a swan ppr. The family at Southfleet and Denton Court, Kent, has: Az, a chev. ermine between three swans ar. Crest: a demi-talbot saliant gu. collared or. The name is varied in spelling, as Swann, Swanns, Swans, Swain, Swayne, Swaine, but Swan seems to be the original surname, suggested by the fowl, as many kindred names—Crane, Bird, Swallow, Sparrow, etc.

(I) John Swan, the immigrant ancestor, was born in England in 1620, died June 5, 1708. He came to Watertown, Massachusetts, and was brought up in the family of Thomas Bittlestone, who provided by his will, dated November 3, 1640, that his widow Elizabeth should be served five years by the boy John Swan, and she should then pay him five pounds. He was a proprietor of Watertown in 1642, but removed to Cambridge, in the section called Menotomy, where his posterity have lived ever since, now Arlington, Massachusetts. He was a farmer. He belonged to the church, but for some unknown reason was excommunicated in 1684. It would seem that he was not easily moved from his purpose, good or bad, for in that day, when excommunication was regarded as an effectual bar against salvation, he withstood the power of the church more than twenty years, but finally, in extreme old age, he made his peace with his brethren in the church, and was restored to communion December 22, 1706. He died June 5, 1708, aged eighty-seven, as written on his gravestone. His wife Mary died February 11, 1702, aged sixty-nine. He married, June 1, 1650-51, Rebecca Palfrey, who died July 12, 1654; married second, March 2, 1655-56, Mary Pratt. He had two sons in King Philip's war. He was taxed in Charlestown in 1688. Children: 1. Ruth, born March 10, 1652. 2. Gershom, June 30, 1654, mentioned below. 3. Samuel, May 1, 1657, died March 1, 1658. 4. Mary, May 2, 1659. 5. 6. Lydia, July 28, 1663. 7. John, May 1, 1665, resided in Woburn, 1712. 8. Hannah, February 27, 1667. 9. Ebenezer, November 14, 1672. 10. (Had ten children in 1676). We find in the "New England Historic Genealogical Register," at the rooms on Summer street, Boston, in vol. 2, p. 158, is the entry that one Hannah Swan married Samuel Peabody. In vol. 4, p. 261, we find the names of persons who were examined of their conformity by the minister of Gravesend, England; and took oath of allegiance and supremacy and were transported to Virginia in the ship "Globe," of London, Jeremy Blackman, master, August 6, 1635; among these appears the name of John Swan.

(II) Gershom, son of John Swan, was born in Cambridge, Massachusetts, June 30, 1654. He married, December 20, 1677, Sarah Holden. He settled in Menotomy, where he died July 2, 1708, his wife Sarah surviving him. He was taxed in Charlestown in 1688. Children, born in Menotomy: 1. (IV) John (3), son of John (2) Swan, was born in West Cambridge, March 23, 1728, was baptized August 4, same year, and died there October 26, 1804. He married (published January 15, 1774) Mary Richardson, born August 2, 1744, daughter of Reuben and Esther (Wyman) Richardson, of Stoneham, Massachusetts. He was a farmer all his life. His place was located where the present Winchester golf links are. He raised farm produce, for which he found a market in Boston and was quite prosperous. He was a man of strong personal traits, exact and methodical. He believed in having the best of everything, so far as he could, and was the first to own a carriage in the town. His farm was neat and attractive, and his personal appearance was above criticism. He belonged to the military company for several years. He had good horses, and was always well mounted, making a fine figure with his handsome saddle, his shining spurs and his military bearing. Squaw Sachem, who formerly owned the land, of which his farm was a part was called the Queen of the Mystic. The brook through the place is still called Squaw Sachembrook. Swan bought the farm May 9, 1765, of Henry and Hannah Putnam. They had it of Joseph Hartwell by deed dated April, 1753, and he purchased of the original owner. Swan was taxed from 1765 to 1773 in Charlestown. In 1757 he was admitted to the Precinct church; in 1761 he was on the prudential school committee. His will is dated 1800, proved December 22, 1804, devising to his first three sons. Children: 1. (V) Reuben, son of John (3) Swan, was born at West Cambridge, Massachusetts, March 27, 1778, and died at Dorchester, June 18, 1856. He was brought up on his father's farm, and received the education common to a farmer's son of that period, remaining on the homestead until after his marriage in 1804. He and his brother Stephen became joint owners of the farm at the death of their father. Soon afterward Reuben sold out to his brother and removed to Dorchester Lower Mills, where he engaged in the grain business. He used to buy his grain in Boston from the ship, teamed it to Dorchester, and had his corn ground at the mill there on the site of the present Baker chocolate mills. He sold his grain, meal, etc., in Dorchester and neighboring towns on established routes. One of his best customers was President John Quincy Adams, of Braintree (now Quincy), Massachusetts. He continued in this business until early in the thirties, and then returned to West Cambridge to resume farming, but after five years or more, returned to Dorchester and continued in the grain business another six years. He then retired and lived quietly the remainder of his days at his homestead near the site of the Baker mills. During his previous residence in Dorchester his home was at the foot of Dorchester Hill. He was a man of unusual physical strength, and is said to have been able to lift a barrel of cider into his wagon unassisted. He was a gentleman of the old school, and while strict in matters of conduct and religion in his family he gave his children the advantage of a liberal education, and several of his sons became school teachers. He was a member of the Dorchester Congregational church. He acquired a competence. He married, December 2, 1804, Ruth Teel, born July 30, 1786, at Charlestown, Massachusetts, died at Dorchester, August 17, 1847, daughter of Jonathan Teel, born January 30, 1754, died June 7, 1828; and his wife, Lydia (Cutter) Teel, who was born October 26, 1757, died September, 1831. of Smith Brothers & Gay, Boston, and was shipper for a year, after which he entered the employ of the French leather importing house of Sternfield Brothers on Pearl street, where he remained six months. He then for a short time was bookkeeper for William F. Norcross, a furniture manufacturer at Dorchester Lower Mills, remaining up to 1869, when he was in the employ of the city of Boston in the engineering department as rodman until 1870. He then entered the First National Bank of Boston and served as messenger three years; the following four years served as assistant receiving teller, and later served as collection clerk. In September, 1880, he was appointed cashier of the Brookline National Bank at Brookline Village, remaining in that position until November, 1898, when he was elected vice-president of that corporation, which position he now holds. Charles H. Draper is president and Clarence E. Burleigh cashier. Mr. Swan is a member of the Harvard Congregational (Orthodox) Church at Brookline, and while a resident in Dorchester attended the Unitarian church, singing bass in the choir. He is a Republican in politics, served his party as delegate to their conventions and in the common council from ward 24 in Dorchester. WRIGHT In old England when family names first began to be assumed he who wrought metals was called Smith and he who wrought in wood was called Wright, hence both are classed with our English patronymics which are derived from occupations. It cannot be claimed that the Wrights either of the mother country or of America are descended from a common ancestor, however remote may have been his origin; but it may be assumed that wherever the surname Wright is found the ancestor of him who bears it was in the remotest generations an artificer or worker in wood. In New England there are several distinct families of the surname Wright who date from the early colonial period, but they are not supposed to be of one kin. The particular family to be treated in this place traces back to an ancestor who came over in 1630, in one of the ships of Winthrop's fleet, whose father was John Wright, of Wright's Bridge, Essex, England, about forty miles from London, and whose brother, Nathaniel Wright, was a merchant of London and had an interest in the venture entrusted to the management of Winthrop.

(1) Samuel Wright, son of John Wright, of Wright's Bridge, Essex, England, and brother of Nathaniel Wright, of London, merchant, was born in England, married there, and came to New England with his wife and children in 1630. Where he first sat down is not known, and while it is said that he was with Pynchon's planters in Agawam and Springfield in 1636 his name does not appear in that connection and it is probable that he settled there in 1641, as is stated by Judd and other writers of contemporary history. He was made freeman in 1648, became deacon of the church in Northampton, having removed there in 1655, and in 1656 and 1657, after the retirement of Rev. Mr. Moxon, he was appointed "to dispense the word of God for the present." His home in Northampton was between what now is King and Market streets, and his household contained four and one half acres of land. He died October 17, 1665, his wife Margaret surviving, and she died July 24, 1681. They had three sons, Samuel, James, Judah (born December 3, 1642), and four daughters, Mary, Margaret (married Thomas Bancroft, 1653), Hester (married Samuel Marshfield, 1652), Lydia, (married, 1654, Lawrence Bliss, 1678, John Norton, 1688, John Lamb, 1692, George Cotton).

(11) Samuel (2), son of Deacon Samuel (1) and Margaret Wright, was born in England and was killed by Indians at Northfield, Massachusetts, September 12, 1675, during King Philip's war. He married, November 24, 1653, at Springfield, Elizabeth Burt, who survived him and married for her second husband, September 16, 1684, Nathaniel Dickinson, of Hatfield. Children of Samuel and Elizabeth (Burt) Wright: 1. Samuel, born Springfield, October 3, 1654. 2. Joseph, Northampton, June 2, 1657. 3. Benjamin, July 3, 1660. 4. Ebenezer, March 20, 1662-63, married, September 6, 1684, Elizabeth Strong. 5. Elizabeth, July 31, 1664, married, September 16, 1684, Thomas Stebbins. 6. Eleazer, October 20, 1668. 7. Hannah, February 27, 1671, married, November 18, 1686, Samuel Billings, of Hatfield. 8. Benoni, baptized September 12, 1675, died 1702; married Rebecca Barrett.

(II) James, son of Samuel (1) and Margaret Wright, was born probably in England and died in Northampton in 1723. He married, January 18, 1665, Abigail Jesse, who died May 24, 1707. Their children: 1. (IV) Ephraim, son of Preserved and Sarah (Hannum) Wright, was born in Northampton, October 25, 1712, died there January 25, 1794. On the death of his father he came into possession of the homestead and lands, and when his own brothers died he inherited their lands; and he also bought of the heirs of Jonathan Wright their interests in the old home farm. Ephraim Wright was a prominent man in the town and church, and his influence and example always were for good. About 1745 he married Miriam Wright, who bore him seven children: 1. Ephraim Jr., January 1, 1747. 2. Esther, December 19, 1748. 3. Moses, November 19, 1751. 4. Seth, August 24, 1754. 5. Miriam, May 12, 1757. 6. Eunice, July 11, 1759. 7. Tabitha, August 22, 1762.

In the following year he returned to his home in Northampton, settled on the old farm near his father and there spent the remaining years of his life, engaged in farming pursuits. Derbyshire and Yorkshire, Eng-
SHORES land, appear to have been the homes of the Shores at an early period of English history. In 1440 a charter was made by which John Shores, of Borsley, grants to William Shores all his lands and tenements in Sheffield. The name appears in the earliest pages of the parish register of Sheffield, and from some of those of the name there entered it is probable the present family in America is descended. John Shores descended from the Shores of Darley Dale, a place made famous by Wordsworth, who wrote some lines on a tree said to have been planted on a hill in Darley Dale in memory of the parting for life of two brothers, one, the elder, the ancestor of the Shores, Baron Feignmouth.

John Shores was born about 1650, resided in Sheffield, where he made his will March 2, 1682, and died soon after. By his wife, Sarah (Sims) Shores, he had three sons: Samuel, his heir; Sylvanus, whose family settled in Ireland; Isaac. Samuel, born May 17, 1676, married, November 7, 1700, Jane, daughter of George Sykes, of Norton, Staffordshire, and his heir Samuel was born August 21, 1707.

and married Margaret, daughter of Robert Diggles, of Liverpool. Besides his heir Samuel, born February 5, 1738; he had John, 1744; Joshua, 1749; William, October 13, 1752, a banker in Sheffield residing at Topton, who married Mary, daughter of George and Annie (Nightingale) Evans, of Cromford Derbyshire, and their eldest son, William Edward, born February 15, 1794, took the surname Nightingale in conformity with the will of his good uncle, Peter Nightingale, Esquire, by royal signed manual dated October 21, 1815. He owned the state of Embley, Hants county, and was high sheriff of the county in 1828. He married, June 1, 1818, Frances, daughter of William South, Esquire, of Parndon, Essex county, for many years member of parliament for Norwich. Their second child, Florence Nightingale, undertook the management of the war hospitals at Scutari, and in the Crimea from 1854 to 1856, which made her world famous and her work the initiative of her sister women all over the world in all subsequent wars, and in hospital work generally. In America the name of Shores first appears in Boston in the person of Sampson Shores (q. v.).

(I) Sampson Shores, the immigrant tailor, who came from England with his wife Abigail and son James, settled in Boston in 1641. He joined the First Church in Boston, January 29, 1642, and was made a freeman, May 18, 1642. They had other children born in Boston as follows: Jonathan, Sampson, Abigail, Elizabeth, Susannah, Ann. The family of the next generation disappears from the records of the church in Boston, and as Sampson appears before the general court several times charged with non-conformity with the Puritanical laws that existed in Boston, he evidently sought a more congenial atmosphere among the Pilgrims of Plymouth. This gives us three male representatives of the family to perpetuate the name and be mustered in the second generation in America.

(II) James, Jonathan or Sampson, sons of Sampson and Abigail Shores, were born between 1640 and 1645 and evidently settled in Plymouth Colony.

(III) A son of James, Jonathan or Sampson Shores was born probably between 1665 and 1675 and we find a Nathaniel (q. v.) with no record of parentage.

(IV) Nathaniel, probable grandson of James, Jonathan or Sampson Shores, was born in Plymouth Colony about 1675 and had a son Benjamin (q. v.).

(V) Benjamin, son of Nathaniel Shores, was born in Plymouth Colony about 1700, and had four children as follows: Mary, Benjamin (q. v.), Abigail, Zephaniah.

(VI) Benjamin (2), eldest son and second child of Benjamin (1) Shores, was born in Plymouth Colony in 1731, and had several children, as follows: Jonathan, Abigail, Benjamin (1765-1842), Sally, Silas, who had a son Silas, a preacher in Falmouth and Taunton, whose son David was born in Falmouth about 1843 and removed to Amherst and whose descendants removed to Springfield, Massachusetts. There was probably another son Joseph (q. v.).

(VII) Joseph, son of Benjamin (2) Shores, of Falmouth, was born June 28, 1762, and removed to the district of Maine probably with his father during the great exodus of families from Plymouth Colony under the incentive of grants of wild lands to soldiers, in return for services in the colonial wars. We find him in Parsonsfield, York county, Maine, where he married, June 15, 1786, Dorcas Ricker. Parsonsfield was named for Colonel Thomas Parsons, an original proprietor and settler of a portion of the large tract of wild land in York county, purchased by Francis Small and Nicholas Shapleigh from Captain Sunday, the Indian Sagamore, and was incorporated as a township March 9, 1785, and, as at that time Joseph Shores was twenty-three years of age, he was a settler of the place, contemporary with Colonel Parsons. His wife, Dorcas (Ricker) Shores, was born November 25, 1707, died in Parsonsfield, Maine, August 5, 1804. The children of Joseph and Dorcas (Ricker) Shores were four in number and were born in Parsonsfield, York county, Maine, in the order as follows: 1. Agnes, September 27, 1788. 2. Polly, November 14, 1791. 3. Clarissa, June 13, 1794. 4. Stephen (q. v.). Joseph Shores died in Parsonsfield, Maine, November 10, 1799, and after his death Stephen, his only son, then less than two years, his daughter Clarissa, a little over five years old, his daughter Polly, eight years old, and his daughter Agnes, eleven years old, were taken by their widowed mother to her father's home in Parsonsfield and they were brought up under his care and supervision, their mother dying when Stephen was seven years old.

(VIII) Stephen, only son and youngest of the four children of Joseph and Dorcas (Ricker) Shores, was born in Parsonsfield, York county, Maine, June 18, 1797. He was left fatherless when one and a half years old and an orphan when seven years old. He lived with his Grandfather Ricker in Parsonsfield and remained on the Ricker homestead until he married, in 1822, Sarah Knapp, of Parsonsfield, Maine, and he removed to Shapleigh, named for Nicholas Shapleigh, of Kittery, and first known as Hubbardstown. His farm was located in that part of the town of Shapleigh set off and incorporated as the town of Acton, March 6, 1830. Stephen and Sarah (Knapp) Shores had a son, Joseph Augustus (q. v.), and other children who died young.

He won the reputation of being one of the best teachers in New England, and while a resident of West Bridgewater, he was active in the affairs of the Baptist church. He served the town as an overseer of the poor, as a member of the board of health, as a selectman and as chairman of selectmen. He married, in 1852, Clara Melissa Towle, born in 1827, who survived him and was living in Haverhill, Massachusetts, in 1909. They had three children as follows: 1. Irwin I., born in 1854, graduated at Brown University, A. B., 1876, at Bellevue Medical College, M. D., 1880. He was assistant surgeon at the Soldier's Home, Hampton, Virginia, 1883-98; surgeon in the United States volunteer army in the Spanish-American war, 1898 to 1902; medical practitioner in Schenectady, New York, 1902 to the time of his death, May 5, 1906. He married, September 8, 1891, Nettie Metzler, who survived her husband and was residing in Mansfield, Ohio, in 1909. They had no children. 2. Sarah E., 1859, who died unmarried. 3. Harvey Towle (q. v.). Joseph Augustus Shores died in West Bridgewater, Massachusetts, July 14, 1896, and was buried in the cemetery at Exeter, New Hampshire, where also repose the bodies of his father, Stephen Shores, his son, Dr. Irwin I. She was educated in Northampton, Massachusetts, and their son, Paul Demond Shores, born in Northampton, May 12, 1901, represents the eleventh generation from Sampson Shores, the immigrant to Boston in 1641.

The name Hastings is older than the Norman Conquest in England. It was spelled Hastang also. The castle and seaport of Hastings were owned by the family that adopted the surname as early as 911, before the Normans were in Gaul. There was a Danish pirate, not of this family perhaps, who was a formidable foe of the Saxons occupying a part of Sussex. In nearly every county of England the family has established itself. Branches bearing coats-of-arms are found at Agmondisham, Bucks-shire; in Dorsetshire and Leicestershire; in Cambridgeshire; in Gloucestershire and Derbyshire; in Ireland; at Billesby, Lincolnshire; at Hinton, Northamptonshire; in Nottinghamshire and Northumberland; in Staffordshire, Yorkshire, Oxfordshire and in Scotland. Of the numerous coats-of-arms of Hastings, the American branch claims the following: A maneh sable. Crest: A buffalo's head erased sable, crowned and gorged with a ducal coronet and armed or. Supporters: Two man-tigers affrontee or, their visages resembling the human face proper. Motto: In virtute victoria. Also: Honorantes me honorabo. A plate on which this armorial was engraved was brought to this country by the pioneer and descended (not a direct line) through Thomas (2); Dr. Waitstill (3); Hopstiel (4); Dr. Seth (5); whose brother lost it about 1835 in the pursuit of one of those elusive, if not imaginary, English estates. On one side were the arms given above and an antique ship with two flags; on the obverse the arms of England, viz: Three lions passant, guardant in pale on the reverse of the seal St. Michael slaying the dragon.

(I) Deacon Thomas Hastings, immigrant ancestor, was born in England in 1605. Thomas, aged twenty-nine, and his wife Susanna, aged thirty-four, embarked at Ipswich, England, April 10, 1634, in the ship, "Elizabeth," William Andrews, master, for New England. He settled at Watertown, Massachusetts, where he was admitted a freeman May 6, 1635. He owned land in Dedham, but never lived there. He was selectman from 1638 to 1643 and from 1650 to 1671; town clerk in 1671-77-80; deputy to the general court in 1673, and long held the office of deacon. His wife Susanna died February 2, 1650, and he married (second) in April, 1651, Margaret Cheney, daughter of William and Martha Cheney, of Roxbury. He died in 1685, aged eighty. His will was dated March 12, 1682-83, and proved September 7, 1685. The inventory of his estate amounted to four hundred and twenty-one pounds. He resided on the west side of School street, then called Hill street. He bequeathed the homestead to his son Samuel; to his son Thomas he gave only five pounds, saying, "I have been at great expense to bring him up a scholar, and I have given him above three score pounds to begin the world with." Children: 1. Thomas, born July 1, 1652, died July 23, 1712. 2. John, March 1, 1654, died March 28, 1717-18; married, June 18, 1679, Abigail Hammond. 3. Hastings was licensed to keep a tavern in Watertown in March, 1695, in the same house used for that purpose by his father-in-law before him. A few years later, however, he returned to the Hastings homestead, which was afterward sold to the town for a ministerial residence by his son, Daniel, and Joseph Coolidge, guardian of his son Nathaniel, and was later occupied by Rev. Seth Storer. Samuel Hastings married (first) January 1, 1687, at Watertown Mills, Lydia Church, born at Dedham, July 4, 1661, daughter of Caleb and Joanna (Sprague) Church, of Watertown. (VI) Albert W., son of Ezra Hastings, was born in Boston, February 21, 1827. He attended the public schools in that city and spent his youth there. When he was fifteen he left home, like his mother's brothers and ancestors, followed the sea. He made the voyage to South America in 1842, visiting the ports of Buenos Ayres and of Montevideo, returning in 1843, and sailing soon on an East Indian voyage to Manila, in the Philippines. He went again in 1845 and on this voyage the vessel touched also at Hong Kong and Canton, China, returning with a large cargo of tea. The vessel encountered a typhoon on the return voyage, was dismasted and almost wrecked. A second storm threw her on the beam ends and all the crew had a narrow escape from death. The experiences of that voyage ended his love for a seafaring life. During the next three or four years he was bookkeeper for a West Indian trading company on Lewis wharf, Boston, filling this position with ability. He resigned in 1857 to establish an enterprise of his own. He began the manufacture of sash and blinds and other building supplies in a factory at 142 Friend street, Boston, and succeeded from the outset. He continued in business there until 1898, when he retired, leasing his business to his son, Albert B., who had been in business with his father for sometime before. He made his home in West Roxbury, now part of Boston, in 1850, buying several acres of land at the corner of Poplar and Dale streets. The small house then standing on the property he enlarged and remodeled for a residence and has since occupied. He is one of the best known and most influential citizens of this section, and has always co-operated in movements calculated to advance the welfare and enhance the attractiveness of the community in which he lives. Back in the fourteenth century the Lefevre family was prominent in France. They joined with the Huguenots and took up arms against their prosecutors in 1561. After a delusive edict of toleration, many were massacred at Vassy, March 1, 1562, at which time the civil war began which lasted for thirty years, with some intermissions, until the Edict of Nantes in 1598. After the revocation of this edict in 1685, the Lefevres, with many others faithful to the cause, fled from France into Germany, and settled in the province of Pommern, Prussia. Possessed of a hardy, substantial physical makeup, and strong mental attainments, the Lefevres, like many others persecuted on account of their christian religion, became devoted to the Lutheran faith. The Lefevres were industrious, and many of them continued to reside in the town of Passewalk, Prussia.

(1) Daniel Lefevre was born in the latter part of the eighteenth century, and spent an active life as an acreburger, which means he was a farmer but lived in the city; he had a well-improved German farm in the vicinity of Passewalk, where he was known as one of the substantial characters of that community. He was devoted to his family and to the welfare of the town. He was an earnest worker in the Lutheran church, and beloved by all who knew him. He died at the age of eighty-two years. He married Johanna Smythe, born in Premeleo. She came of a fine class of German people, and was a woman of brilliant mind, well informed on the current events of the day during her life. She died at the age of seventy-eight, two years before her husband. She was an active member of the Lutheran church. They had ten children, among whom are: 1. Henry J., born in Passewalk, June 25, 1830, mentioned below. 2. Wilhelmina, married (second), Ans Engel, a baker by trade, and resides in Germany, where they have a large family. 3. Daniel, a successful grocer in his native town; unmarried. 4. Bertha, married ——— Fraley, a German soldier still in the army.

(11) Henry J., son of Daniel Lefevre, was born in Passewalk, Prussia, June 25, 1830. Although his opportunities for an education were limited, his courage and determination enabled him to acquire a good amount of knowledge. At the age of fourteen he entered the trade school of his native town, and received his certificate and passports when eighteen years of age, as a successful baker, and worked as a journeyman baker for some time. In 1850 he went to Copenhagen, Denmark, where he remained two and a half years and then returned to Germany where he became a soldier in Stedtin, Prussia, in the Second Regiment called the Kings Regiment, in the Fusileer Battalion, Tenth Company. After an honorable discharge from the army he returned to Copenhagen, Denmark, again and remained two and a half years more. From 1852 to 1857 he worked hard and saved his money that he might come to America, where he had heard there were so many chances for young men to make a fortune. At last he returned to his native state, and on June 15, 1857, went to Hamburg and took a sailing vessel bound for New York City. The voyage lasted fifty-two days, and when he landed in New York he found it hard to get work. He decided to go west, and went as far as Cleveland, Ohio, which at that time was considered the far west. Here he worked two years and then removed to Massachusetts and found employment in Attleborough, working eleven hours a day for eighty-eight cents. His willingness to work and his desire to give faithful, honest service, brought him a position in Providence, Rhode Island, at small wages at first. But by using his best efforts, and using his brains as well as his hands, he soon proved his ability to his employer. Within four weeks he was offered the position as foreman of a large polishing room in Providence, having under him a large force of men. By close application to business and great thrift, he was soon enabled to start in business for himself. He established a salesroom and agency for beer in Providence, which in 1886 he sold at a good profit. He removed to Boston, Massachusetts, and established himself in the same line of business on Washington street, and locating on Tremont street, Roxbury, in 1873. By persistent efforts he advanced steadily and in 1879 purchased a large estate which he increased and improved. He now owns the property at Nos. 1407-09-11-15-17-19-19A-19B and 19C, besides a beautiful home at 8 Spring Park avenue, Jamaica Plain. In 1908 he retired from active business to enjoy the fruits of his diligence. He has won many friends in both business and private life. He is an active member of many German societies but never was very active owing to his close attention to business. In politics he is a Republican. He married, in Boston, October 19, 1864, Mrs. Margaretta Wonderly, widow of Gustaf Wonderly, and daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Creble) Heinlein. Her parents were of pure German blood, born in Saxony. Her father was a shoemaker by trade, and came in 1857 with his family to the United States and settled in South Natick, Massachusetts, where he followed his trade until his death, September 28, 1866. Her mother died April 19, 1866. Her parents were Lutherans, and parents of ten children, seven sons, all dead, and three daughters, of whom Mrs. Lefevre is the eldest; her sister Maria is a widow, first of Gustaf Seibert, by whom she had three children, one of whom, Gustaf Seibert, lives in Roxbury and has one child, Gustaf Seibert 3d; and widow second of Henry Brown, who died 1876. The other sister, Elizabeth Heinlein, married Emil Schultz, who died in 1887, leaving children: Emil Schultz, died young; Amelia Schultz, married George Shafter and has six children; Carrie Schultz, widow of Frank Hemline, of Brighton, with a daughter Liliam Hemline; Frances Schultz, married Charles Myerburg, of Roxbury, and has Carrie Myerburg. Mrs. Lefevre came alone to America in 1854, settled in Boston, and married (first) Gustaf Wonderly, a young German who became a prominent hotel proprietor of Boston, and who died in middle life, leaving a son, Gustaf Wonderly Jr., who had been twice married. Child of Henry and Margaretta Lefevre: Oscar C., born November 14, 1867, a successful real estate dealer and land speculator; lives at 494 Centre street, Jamaica Plain; married, 1891, Nellie Greenhard, born in New York City; children: Oscar, born July 8, 1894; Herbert, April 16, 1897.

This is among the earliest
 EMERSON American families, and has been traced to various localities in England, and has been associated with some of the most stirring events of American history, both past and present. The records show that a coat-of-arms was granted in 1535 to Radus (Ralf, Raffé or Rauff) Emerson, of Foxton, county of Durham, England. No pedigree was registered with it. Thomas Emerson, who was born sometime about 1540, was a resident of Great Dummow, in the county of Essex, England, where his three children are registered, namely: Robert, Joan and John. In 1509 the general muster of the county of Durham included forty-one Emersons, and it has been assumed that he was a son of Ralph, of Foxton, and he is presumed to be identical with Thomas, of Rumford, county Essex. Seven miles from Great Dummow is Bishop's-Stortford, in the county of Herts. There is found a record of the marriage of Robert Emerson, on November 24, 1578, to Susan Crabbe. He owned a field on the north quarter of the parish called Muggles Dale, and in earlier times Muffles Dane. Robert Emerson was buried at Bishop's-Stortford, January 6, 1620, and his widow, November 20, 1626, at the age of seventy years. Their children were: Alice, Margaret, Thomas, Ann, Robert and John.

(1) Thomas Emerson, of Ipswich, Massachusetts, is recorded in the church wardens book of St. Michael's church, in 1630, as collector for the poor. His wife, Elizabeth (Brewster) Emerson, is supposed to have been a daughter of William Brewster, of Scrooby, and the famous elder of the Pilgrims, 1620. It has been proven that Major-General Denison, a close friend of Thomas, and mentioned in the latter's will, emigrated from Bishop's-Stortford. Thomas Emerson was probably born in Sedsfield parish, county of Durham, England, and died in Ipswich, Massachusetts, May 1, 1666. He was baptized at Bishop's-Stortford, England, July 20, 1584, and was married July 1, 1611, in that parish to Elizabeth Brewster. Their children as recorded in St. Michael's Church at Bishop's-Stortford were: Robert, Benjamin, Ralph, James, Joseph, Elizabeth, John, Thomas, Nathaniel and Susan. Tradition says that they came from England in the ship "Elizabeth Ann," in 1635. He was at Ipswich, Massachusetts, as early as 1638, when eighty acres of land was granted to him. In the same year he received a deed of one hundred and twenty acres from Samuel Greenfield, a weaver of Ipswich, and this was the Turkey Shore farm, which remained in the family for generations. He is mentioned as a commoner in 1641, and in 1646 was one of the "seven men," equivalent to the present selectmen. He was the possessor of considerable property and the records show that he received damages from the town for the loss of a yoke of oxen that backed off a bridge. The inventory of his estate amounted to two hundred and twenty-five pounds three shillings. The records of England show that the family was nonconformist, and they probably found difficulty in getting out of England. The reference to Thomas Emerson as a baker in the Massachusetts records probably arises from the fact that he assumed the character of an artisan in order to make his removal from England less difficult.

(II) Robert Emerson, of Rowley, Massachusetts, is believed by good authorities to have been the eldest child of Thomas and Elizabeth (Brewster) Emerson, who was baptized May 24, 1612, at Bishop's-Stortford, Hertfordshire, England. He was probably a resident of Bishop's-Stortford in 1642. He was in Rowley, Massachusetts, as early as 1655, and took the oath of fidelity there in 1671, and removed to Haverhill, Massachusetts, where he was made freeman April 9, 1678. He subscribed to the oath of fidelity in 1671, and in 1672 received from the town compensation for the care of an orphan child. Before 1675 he had a house there. He died June 25, 1694. He married, October 22, 1635, Elizabeth Grave, of Bishop's-Stortford, England, and she was buried there June 22, 1636. His second wife was named Frances, and he married (third) November 4, 1658, Ann Grant, of Rowley, who was drowned July 28.

1718. His children were: Elizabeth, born in England, 1637. Thomas, Joseph, Ephraim, Stephen, Benjamin and Lydia. The elder son was killed by the Indians, with his wife and children, March 15, 1697.

(III) Stephen, fourth son of Robert Emerson, was among the original petitioners for, and proprietors of the town of "Pennicook," now Concord, New Hampshire, in 1721. At a meeting of the proprietors, February 8, 1726, at Andover, Massachusetts, he drew lot 9, range 3, consisting of five and one-half acres in the great plain, and house lot No. 9, in the first range, consisting of one and one-half acres. A search of the records of Concord fail to disclose any further mention of him in that town, and it is probable that he did not reside there. No further account of him has been found. On a petition for the parish of Hampstead to be erected out of Haverhill, Massachusetts, January 1, 1744, appears the name of Stephen Emerson, but this was probably his son Stephen, who became a resident of that town. He married, December 7, 1698, Elizabeth Dustin.

(IV) Stephen (2), son of Stephen (1) and Elizabeth (Dustin) Emerson, was born February 23, 1701, in Haverhill, Massachusetts. He was one of the original members of the North Parish Church in 1730, and was admitted to the parish of Hampstead by letter from there, June 3, 1752. About 1762 he removed from Hampstead to the eastern part of Weare, New Hampshire, where he died. When the province line was established in 1741, he found himself to be outside of Massachusetts, and petitioned for the establishment of a new parish in Hampstead. He was a resident of the West parish in 1740. The records of Hampstead church would seem to indicate that he had strayed somewhat from the narrow path, as shown by the following entry: "May, 20, 1761, voted that Stephen Emerson should again partake with them on his acknowledgement that he had gone contrary to ye Gospel in forsaking their communion." He married Hannah, daughter of James and Abigail (Webster) Marden, of Rye, New Hampshire, who was born in 1716. She was an original member of the North Parish church in 1730, and was admitted to the Hampstead church, June 3, 1752. Their children were: Ensign Stephen, Lieutenant Marden, Susannah, Abigail, Elizabeth, Moses, Mary and James.

(V) Deacon James, youngest son of Stephen (2) and Hannah (Marden) Emerson, was born January 10, 1739, in Haverhill, Massachusetts, and went with his father to Weare in early life. He resided for a time in Hampstead, and removed after 1760 to Weare. He and his wife owned the covenant in the Hampton church, January 11, 1761. He was deacon of the church at Weare, and was very strict about keeping the Sabbath. On one occasion while going to church, he observed a fox pursuing a rabbit, and was urged by his wife to scare away the fox and relieve the frightened bunny, but he insisted that such an act would be a profanation of the Sabbath, and refused to do so. In relating the circumstance his wife said that she was in doubt as to whether he was too pious or too lazy to dismount and do this act of kindness. He died in Weare in 1814. He married Lydia, daughter of Moses and Mary (Carr) Hoyt, who was born April 6, 1740, in Salisbury, Massachusetts. The records of Hampstead church show that both James Emerson and his wife were admitted there from the church in Weare, August 30, 1778. Their children were: Moses, Hannah (died young), Susannah, James, Lydia, Polly, Hannah and Stephen.

(VI) James (2), second son of James (1) and Lydia (Hoyt) Emerson, was born May 26, 1767, in Weare, and settled on part of lot 27, range 1, of that town, not far from the spot where his father first settled. About 1799 he sold his land and moved to Newbury, New Hampshire, where he died. He married Polly Cilley and their children were: Jonathan, Stephen, James and Lydia.

(VII) Jonathan, eldest son of James (2) and Polly (Cilley) Emerson, was born August 25, 1792, in Weare, New Hampshire. He later removed to Newport, and finally settled in Lebanon, where he died February 12, 1872. He was a farmer by occupation, and a highly respected citizen. He married, in 1813, Polly Collins, of Danville, New Hampshire, born July 3, 1787, died September 8, 1861. Their children were: Hiram, Susan, Jonathan, Arvilla B., James, Moses W., Albro V., Lucena A. and Lucina M., the last two being twins.

(VIII) Hiram, eldest son of Jonathan and Polly (Collins) Emerson, was born May 17, 1813, in Weare, New Hampshire. He spent his boyhood on the farm with his father, after which he learned the blacksmith trade, and was for several years engaged at that business in the town of Newport. From Newport he removed to New London, New Hampshire, and from there to Jefferson, where, with his brother-in-law, Hartford Sweet, he engaged in the lumber business. After about three years he removed to Littleton and was engaged in the manufacture of scythes until 1856. From there he removed to St. Johnsbury, Vermont, where for twelve years he was agent for the Ely Hoe & Fork Company. From there he removed to Lebanon, New Hampshire, where he was engaged in the manufacture of scythes and axes, being associated with his brother, Albro V. They continued in business until 1870, when he retired, and where he died October 17, 1898. He married, October 5, 1837, Lydia K., daughter of Hon. Jeremiah D. and Zilpha (Bowman) Nettleton, who was born May 15, 1817, in Newport, died at Lebanon, New Hampshire, October 25, 1900. (See Nettleton VII). Their children were: Zilpha E., died young, Fanny A., Willie, Z. Elizabeth, Ellen B., Edwin B., Marietta B. and Frederick H.

(IX) Edwin Brooks, son of Hiram and Lydia K. (Nettleton) Emerson, was born May 22, 1847, in Littleton, New Hampshire. When he was but six years old, his parents removed to St. Johnsbury, Vermont, and he received a good education at the excellent academy in that town. When seventeen years old he entered the employ of E. & T. Fairbanks & Company, scale manufacturers, and on attaining his majority went to Boston, Massachusetts, where he remained twelve years as a trusted employee of the old firm of Brown, Dutton and Company, after which he removed to Salisbury, New Hampshire. There he was engaged for a period of three years in the mercantile business and returned to Massachusetts, spending nine years in Holyoke, whence he removed to the city of Northampton in 1891, where he purchased a wall-paper and paint business, which has been wonderfully successful under his management, having increased four-fold, and he is now conducting a large wholesale and retail trade. During the entire year he employs twenty men on contract work and during the summer months, this force is very largely augmented. His well-stocked store is situated in the heart of the city, in Main street, where he caters to a steadily growing and desirable trade. Aside from business, he has devoted some time to public affairs, having been elected a member of the common council in 1900, and in 1901 was president of that body. Since 1900 he has been one of the overseers of the poor for the city, and is now (1908) a member of the city hall commission, which has under way the consideration of a new city building. He was made an Odd Fellow in 1870 in Franklin Lodge, of Boston, and subsequently became a member of the encampment, but has now withdrawn from that order. He is now engaged in forwarding the high fraternal principles which he there learned and occupies an exalted position in the Masonic order. He is a member of Springfield Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He is an active member of the First Congregational Church of Northampton and has held a position on the board of church assessors, being for three years chairman of that board. In all these activities, Mr. Emerson has demonstrated the breadth of his nature and has gained and maintained the respect of a large number of contemporaries. He married, July 6, 1871, at Lebanon, New Hampshire, Mary L., daughter of William B. and Elizabeth (George) Parsons, the latter a daughter of True George, of Salisbury. He was for many years keeper at the state prison in Concord, and was a member of the state senate from about 1845 to 1850, and was otherwise prominent in public affairs. Mrs. Emerson was born November 24, 1848, at Salisbury, was educated at a seminary in New London, New Hampshire, and was a teacher in the public schools of Salisbury. She is the mother of a son and a daughter, namely: Edward Nettleton and Ella May Emerson.

(X) Edward Nettleton, only son of Edwin Brooks and Mary L. (Parsons) Emerson, was born July 12, 1873, in Salisbury, and graduated from the high school of Holyoke, as president of his class. He subsequently entered Amherst College and was graduated from the class of 1896, being class day orator. During his college life he was identified with various activities among the students, being a member of the college Glee and Dramatic clubs. In 1897 he graduated with high honors from the law school of the College of New York, and immediately became identified with the law firm of Bissel & Emerson, at 50 Broadway, New York, where he is still engaged in practice. He married, October 20, 1908, Florence Boyce, whose home was next door to President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay, and who was a graduate of Bryn Mawr, near Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

(X) Ella May, only daughter of Edwin Brooks and Mary L. (Parsons) Emerson, was born June 17, 1877, in Salisbury, and is a graduate of the Northampton high school. She married, June 20, 1900, Dr. Payn B. Parsons, son of the Rev. E. B. Parsons, of Williams College of Williamstown, Massachusetts. Dr. Parsons is a member of the Bacteriological Commission of New York.

The Nettletons of Newport, and Sullivan county, New Hampshire, are all descendants of Jeremiah Nettleton, who made a settlement in the town of Newport in the year 1779, and lived there about thirty-five years, and at his death left a large family of children from whom in later years has come a numerous line of descendants, and in each succeeding generation from the time of the settler there have been men of prominence in the civil, political and industrial history of the state.

(I) John Nettleton, of Kenilworth, England, is mentioned in history as the founder of this particular branch of the Nettleton family of New England, but of his antecedents contemporary genealogists give little information of value. It is known, however, that he lived about fifty miles west of the city of London, and after his immigration to America was one of the early colonists of Connecticut. He married, and among his children was a son, Joseph.

(II) Joseph, son of the ancestor, John Nettleton, married, February 18, 1712, Hannah Bushnell, and had a son Jeremiah.

(III) Jeremiah, son of Joseph and Hannah (Bushnell) Nettleton, was of Killingworth, Connecticut, which appears to have been the principal seat of the family of that state. The family name of his wife is not mentioned by any of the earlier chroniclers of Nettleton history, but it is known that he married and that one of his sons was Jeremiah Nettleton, progenitor of the family of that surname in New Hampshire.

(IV) Jeremiah (2), son of Jeremiah (1) Nettleton, was born October 17, 1738, probably at Killingworth, Connecticut, and died in 1815, in Newport, New Hampshire. He settled in Newport in 1779, having come from Connecticut during that year with his wife and eight children, the eldest of whom was then less than seventeen years old. He settled on what afterward became known as the Paul farm, and owned Bald mountain and the land extending thence southward to the river. He married, November 19, 1761, Love, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Post) Buell, and granddaughter of Samuel and Judith Buell, great-granddaughter of Samuel and Deborah (Griswold) Buell, and great-great-granddaughter of William and Mary Buell. They were the parents of nine children, all except the youngest was born in Connecticut, namely: Mabel, Charity, Aaron, Jeremiah, Nathan, Rachel, Deborah, Joel and Daniel.

(V) Aaron, eldest son of Jeremiah (2) and Love (Buell) Nettleton, was born November 11, 1766, in Kenilworth, Connecticut. He removed with his parents to Newport, New Hampshire, at the age of thirteen, and lived and died on the spot where his father first settled. He was an excellent farmer, and also engaged largely in public affairs, being the first sheriff of Sullivan county. He married, March 5, 1793, Mehitable Dow, of Exeter, New Hampshire. Their children were: Jeremiah D., Lydia K., Fanny, Aaron and Mehitable.

(VI) Jeremiah D., eldest son of Aaron and Mehitable (Dow) Nettleton, was born April 10, 1794, in Newport. He lived on the farm which had been occupied by his father and grandfather all his life, and died December 8, 1852. He was a representative in 1837-39, state senator two years and selectman thirteen years. He was a member of the Baptist church, was ever courteous in his manner and enjoyed the confidence of his fellow townsmen. He married (first) in 1815, Zilpha, daughter of Zadoc Bowman, and (second) Orpha Sweet. His children were: Lydia K., Fanny E., Jeremiah and Orpha.

(VII) Lydia K., eldest child of Jeremiah D. and Zilpha (Bowman) Nettleton, was born May 15, 1817, in Newport, and married October 5, 1837, Hiram Emerson, of Lebanon, New Hampshire. (See Emerson VIII).

The surname Whittemore more is identical with Whitmore, which is a more common spelling in the English family. The name is of local origin the original family taking their name from the manor of Whitmore or Whytemere of Staffordshire, England. This manor was granted by the Conqueror to Ricardus Forestarius, according to the Domesday Book (1086) and he had as tenants Ulfac, Aldwin, Arnulf and Avisa. It is supposed that Avisa was the Saxon owner of the place. Avisa de Whitmore also held lands from the Conqueror in the hundreds of Pirehill, Staffordshire, and Brodford, Salop. The English ancestry of the family as given in this sketch is an abstract from the private records of Eli J. Whittemore, of Worcester, and D. J. Whittemore, formerly chief engineer of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, who collaborated in a very extensive research in England. The family was originally designated by the name de Botrel (Botreaux, Boterel, or Boterell) from a Norman estate. The first Duke of Brittany, Godfrey, was of this family. When Whitmore came into possession of the family the members were distinguished by the designation de Whitmore which later became a surname.

(I) The lineage is traced to the father of William de Botrel (1100-1135) and his brother Peter, mentioned below, but the father's name is not known. William de Botrel had a son William (1158-63).

(II) Peter de Botrel of Staffordshire, had a son Radulph or Ralph.

(III) Ralph de Botrel (1152-1171) married twice. His son William by the first wife married Avis de Whitmore (1179). William (4) (1174) had a son Reginald (5) who had a son Robert (6) (1238) who had a son Robert (7) (1260). This was not the American line. That descends from the second wife, by her son Ralph de Botrel, mentioned below, and not by Rad Fitz Wetmore (1220-40), an illegitimate son. Rad had a son Will le Burgvyllon (1242-54).

(IV) Ralph de Botrel had a son John.

(V) Sir John de Whitmore married Agnes (1252-76) and about this time bought of Robert (7), Lord of Whitmore, all lands and titles, the original deed being on parchment and signed with Robert's seal. It is written in old law Latin. Sir John had at least three sons: 1. John, mentioned below. 2. William, married Alice Ferrars, and had son Philip who founded what is called the Claverly branch. 3. Ralph.

(VI) John Whitmore, the heir of Sir John, married Margerie (1270-1301). He was founder of what genealogists call the Caunton line.

(VII) Richard of Whitmore married Susannah Draycote, daughter of Philip Draycote, of Painesly, knight. Children: 1. Jane, married John Blunt. 2. Mary, married John Gifford. 3. Beatrix, married John Chetwind. 4. Christina, married Richard Fleetwood. 5. Philip, mentioned below.

(VIII) Philip Whitmore, married Thomasine, daughter of Richard Okeover.

(IX) Richard Whitmore, son of Philip Whitmore, married (first) a daughter of Sir Ralph Bagot; (second) a daughter of Sir Richard Devereaux; (third) a daughter of Simon Harcourt, probably of Ellenhall, Stafford. By his third wife he had a son Nicholas.

(X) Nicholas Whitmore, son of Richard, married Anne, daughter of Thomas Aston, of Tixhall, Staffordshire. Children: 1. Mary, married William Lusone. 2. Anthony, mentioned below.

(XI) Anthony Whitmore, son of Nicholas Whitmore, married Christina, daughter and heir of Nicholas Vaux. Children: 1. Joan. 2. William, mentioned below.

(XII) William Whitmore, son of Anthony Whitmore, had a son John.

(XIII) John Whitmore, of Caunton, second son of William Whitmore, in the reign of Henry VI, married Alice Blyton, daughter and heir of Robert Blyton, of Caunton, county Notts. He married (second) Catherine Compton, daughter and heir of Robert Compton, of Hawton (Visitation of York 1563). Children: 1. William. 2. Robert, mentioned below.

(XIV) Robert Whitmore, son of John Whitmore, was the heir of Caunton and married Catherine Clave, daughter of George Clave, of Fimmingly, county Notts (Visitation of Yorkshire), and had a son William, the heir, who married a daughter of John Ridley; was of Rotterdam and died 1568. Robert married (second) Alice Atwoode, of Harlington, Bedfordshire, and died at Caunton in 1540. Children of the second wife: 1. Richard, died s. p. 1559. 2. John, living in 1545. 3. Charles, died 1568, mentioned below. 4. Thomas, living in 1559 and probably died about 1603. 5. Edmund, living in 1559. 6. Rowland, living in 1591. 7. James. 8. Randall, and three daughters. Edmund or Rowland Whitmore (Robert (14)) had a son who was Thomas Sr. of Hitchin, the parish where the immigrant, Thomas Whitmore, was born. Thomas Whitmore, the immigrant, was the son of another Thomas Whitmore, as will be seen later.

(XV) Charles Whitmore, son of Robert Whitmore, died in 1568. He lived at Tuxforth, county Notts. Children: 1. William, died 1582 in county Notts. 2. John, supposed to have lived in Staffordshire and died 1571. 3. Robert, died 1608. 4. Richard, died 1578. 5. James, died 1614. 6. Thomas, the elder, mentioned below. 7. Roger, of Hitchin. 8. Christopher, of county Bed, died 1640. Four daughters and a posthumous child supposed to be George. Three of the sons spelled the name Whittamore, three spelled it Watmore, and one Whitmore, the spelling which has prevailed in England.

(XVI) Thomas Whitmore, son of Charles

Whitmore, lived at Hitchin, county Hertford, England. He married Mary —— and died 1649. His two sons emigrated to New England; Thomas to Malden, Massachusetts, and John to Stamford, Connecticut. Thomas of Malden is the ancestor of most of the American Whittemores. John of Stamford had a daughter Elizabeth and son John Whittemore who was of age in 1649, and lived at Stamford and Middletown, Connecticut.

(XVI) Roger Whitmore, son of Charles Whitmore and brother of Thomas Whitmore above, of Hitchin, was the father of Nicholas Whitmore; Nicholas had two sons who also emigrated to New England: Francis Whitmore to Boston and Thomas Whitmore to Middletown, Connecticut. From these are descended the American Whitmores. Their father was first cousin to the Malden emigrant, Thomas Whittemore, mentioned below.

(XVII) Thomas Whittemore, son of Thomas Whitmore, was born at Hitchin, Hertfordshire, England. He came to New England prior to 1640, for at that time he was in Charlestown, Massachusetts, on the Mystic side, which later was the town of Malden, and signed a petition with neighbors for better privileges in 1640. In 1645 he bought of Rev. John Cotton of Boston "meadow for two cow's grass." This piece of land adjoined his own farm, and is now included in the city of Everett. It remained in the Whittemore family until May 1, 1845, over two hundred years after he had bought it. He married (second) April 14, 1623, in England, Sarah Deardes, who was buried November 17, 1628. He married (third) Hannah ——, who, according to her own deposition, was born in 1612. She married (second) June 3, 1663, at Chelmsford, Benjamin Butterfield. Thomas Whittemore died at Malden, May 25, 1661. His will was proved June 25, 1661. Children: 1. Sarah, baptized April 14, 1616. 2. Mary, baptized May 12, 1624. 3. John, baptized April 27, buried 29, 1635. 6. Nathaniel, baptized May 1, 1636, married Mary Knowler and left no male descendants. 7. John, baptized February 11, 1638-39, mentioned below. 8. Elizabeth. 9. Benjamin, married Elizabeth Bucknam and died July 16, 1726. 10. Thomas (one of the cases of two sons of the same name living at the same time) the elder Thomas Whittemore was in England and never came over) married Elizabeth Pierce, of Woburn, November 9, 1666, and had son Thomas, born August 14, 1667. 11. Samuel, married Hannah —— and removed to Dover, New Hampshire, thence to Somerville, Massachusetts; both he and his wife buried at Cambridge. 12. Peletiah. 13. She was a student from early youth, with remarkable intellectual gifts. Rev. Theodore Parker was an intimate friend of Mrs. Whittemore and a constant visitor. They discussed the great Unitarian movement, in which both were keenly interested, and they were associated in religious and charitable work in the community. Theodore Parker, the foremost minister of the liberal religious movement in his day, often called Mrs. Whittemore the most talented and capable woman in Massachusetts. The church of the First Unitarian parish now stands on the site of Captain Whittemore's house and in front of it is a beautiful bronze statue of the former pastor. The library which Mrs. Whittemore accumulated was one of the best and largest private collections of books in or near Boston, yet she generously converted it into a circulating library, when such institutions were all but unknown, and herself acted as librarian. Her generous contribution to the education and entertainment of the public continues to-day, being merged with the Boston Public Library. As a testimonial of her devoted service to the church, and community her friends and neighbors gave her a beautiful solid silver tea service, now in the possession of her step-son, Albert F. (II) Jacob, son of William Chamberlain, was born at Billerica, January 18, 1657-58. It is very difficult to distinguish the records of the various members of this family bearing the name of Jacob Chamberlain in the second and third generations. According to the researches of George W. Chamberlain for the Chamberlain Association, however, the Jacob of Newton whose wife was Experience, is the ancestor of the Westborough and Worcester families. Jackson himself, author of the History of Newton, altered the town records by inserting the name of Susannah as the wife of this Jacob in the copy of the birth record of Jason and Ebenezer. Jacob Chamberlain married Experience ———. He removed from West Cambridge to Newton about 1699. He was admitted a freeman in 1690. Children, born in Newton: 1. Jason, February 26, 1701. 2. Ebenezer, July 31, 1704, mentioned below. 3. John, married Mercy ——— and settled in Westborough.

(III) Ebenezer, son of Jacob Chamberlain, was born in Newton, July 31, 1704, died in Westborough. He married, November 28, 1733, Mary Trowbridge, daughter of Thomas Trowbridge. She died at Westborough, February 1, 1756, and he married (second) December 23, 1756, Mrs. Joanna ———, of Southborough. He was selectman of Westborough in 1766. Children of first wife, born in Westborough: 1. Anna, January 13, 1734-35. 2. Nathaniel Longley, July 1, 1736, died January 22, 1756. 3. Mary, July 17, 1738, died 1756. 4. Jonathan, June 10, 1759.

(IV) Daniel, son of Ebenezer Chamberlain, was born in Westborough, March 12, 1753. He was a leading man in the town and church in Westborough, deacon of the church for many years. Before the introduction of the new-fangled instrumental music, it was part of his duty to "line off" the hymns for the choir and congregation at the meeting. The practice was not given up without a struggle. In 1779, the Sunday following the discontinuance of the awkward old custom in Worcester, the deacon was told to discontinue it, but he persisted, and there was a short but decided conflict between the deacon and the choir in which numbers, not determination, won the victory. Deacon Chamberlain presented charges against John Robinson, former pastor of the church, August 10, 1814, and the charges were sustained at the trial. The deacon was a soldier in the revolution, a private in Captain George Baker's company, April 19, 1775, on the Lexington alarm. He was also in Captain Edmund Brigham's company, Colonel Job Cushing's regiment, marching August 21, 1777, to reinforce the northern army. He married, January 4, 1775, Lydia Harrington, born in Westborough April 24, 1754, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Harrington. He married (second) (intentions dated February 12, 1809) Persis Nye, of North Braintree. His will was dated January 5, 1824, and allowed September 6, 1825. He died July 14, 1825. Children, born in Westborough: 1. Joshua, October 15, 1777, married Lydia Metcalf. 2. Daniel, March 11, 1782, mentioned below. 3. Elizabeth, November 9, 1784. 4. (V) Daniel (2), son of Daniel (1) Chamberlain, was born in Westborough, March 11, 1782. He was appointed a Presbyterian missionary to the Hawaiian Islands, and was the first missionary to go to those islands from the United States. It is said that his wife was the first white woman to land in those islands, and when landing she handed her little baby to the natives, in order to inspire their confidence. She was ever afterward beloved of the islanders. After some years they returned to Massachusetts and died there. Child, Dexter, born in Brookfield, 1807, mentioned below.

(VI) Dexter, son of Daniel (2) Chamberlain, was born in Brookfield, Massachusetts, 1807, died in Boston, September 17, 1887. For many years he was a prominent man of the West Roxbury district of Boston. He was a skilled mechanic, and an inventor of note. Among his inventions was the Hartshorn curtain fixture which is in general use. He married, in Boston, Mrs. Sarah M. (Nickerson) Wallace, born in Nantucket, died West Roxbury. She was widow of John Wallace, and daughter of John Nickerson, who was a prominent vessel rigger of Nantucket. Children: 1. Maria M., born Boston, March 11, 1839, married John A. Whittemore. (See Whittemore). 2. Nathaniel L. 3. Edmund D., enlisted in Company A, First Massachusetts Regiment.

In our New England colonial history the family name Thayer has been known since the first half of the seventeenth century, and came to us from old England, from the village of Thaydon, in Essex, about eighteen miles north of London. Augustine Thayer, of Thaydon, through the grace of his sovereign was granted a coat-of-arms and received other marks of the royal favor; and evidently he was a personage of considerable distinction and exercised an influence in the shire in which he lived.

Both in the mother country and in New England this surname is found written Thear, Their and Theyer as well as Thayer, the latter being the generally accepted form of spelling by virtually all of the families on this side of the Atlantic ocean. The immigrant Thayers were Richard and Thomas, the latter of whom had lands granted him in 1635 and was made freeman the same year, and the latter in 1640. They are believed to have come to America as early as 1630, from Braintree, Essex, England, and were among the earliest settlers of Braintree in New England.

(I) Richard Thayer, ancestor of the family about to be treated in these annals, is supposed to have been born in Essex, England, and came thence to Boston, New England, with his wife and three sons. He settled in Braintree, where he was made freeman, had lands granted him, and is mentioned by contemporary writers as a man of understanding, influence and means. He died in Braintree, August 27, 1695.

(II) Richard (2), son of Richard (1) Thayer, was born in England and came with his father to America. His life was spent in Braintree, Massachusetts, and he married there October 24, 1651, Dorothy Pray. He died December 4, 1705, and his wife Dorothy died December 11 of the same year. They had seven children, all born in Braintree: 1. Dorothy, June 30, 1653. 2. Richard, July 31, 1655. 3. Nathaniel, January 1, 1658. 4. Abigail, February 10, 1661. 5. Joanna, December 13, 1665. 6. Sarah, December, 1667. 7. Cornelius, August 18, 1670.

(III) Richard (3), first son and second child of Richard (2) and Dorothy (Pray) Thayer, was born in Braintree, Massachusetts, July 31, 1655, died there September 11, 1729. Little appears to be known of him except that he is supposed to have been a husbandman. He married, July 16, 1679, Rebecca Micall, born 22d 11mo 1658, and who bore him ten children, all born in Braintree: 1. Rebecca, August 16, 1680. 2. Benjamin, October 6, 1683. 3. Richard, January 26, 1685. 4. John, January 12, 1688. 5. Mary, February 10, 1689. 6. James, November 12, 1691. 7. Deborah, February 11, 1695. 8. Anna, September 14, 1697. 9. Gideon, July 26, 1700. 10. Obadiah, May 1, 1703.

(IV) John, son of Richard (3) and Rebecca (Micall) Thayer, was born in Braintree, Massachusetts, January 12, 1688, spent his life in the town and was a yeoman. He married, May 26, 1715, Rebecca French, born May 13, 1664, daughter of Dependence and Rebecca

French, the former born 7 mo. 1648, son of John French, of Dorchester, who was admitted freeman in 1639, removed to Braintree and died there 28 mo. 1656. John and Rebecca (French) Thayer had ten children, all born in Braintree: 1. John, February 8, 1716, died young. 2. John, July 27, 1717. 3. Benjamin, January 11, 1720. 4. Obadiah, December 31, 1721. 5. Micah, October 31, 1723. 6. Richard, December 15, 1725, died January 30, 1727. 7. Richard, January 20, 1727. 8. Abiah, June 25, 1729. 9. Simcon, March 22, 1732. 10. Elijah, July 16, 1736.

(V) Abiah, son of John and Rebecca (French) Thayer, was born in Braintree, June 25, 1729, died there December 12, 1789. He was a farmer, a man of prominence and influence. In 1751 he married Elizabeth Hunt, daughter of Benjamin Hunt, one of the most prominent men of his town, possessed of large means and high social position. Abijah and Elizabeth (Hunt) Thayer had eight children, all born in Braintree: 1. Oliver, March 27, 1753. 2. Elizabeth, April 12, 1754. 3. Phebe, 4. Anna. 5. Amasa, March 26, 1764. 6. Eliphalet, March 14, 1766. 7. Sylvia, September 18, 1768. 8. Adonijah, October 26, 1770.

(VI) Oliver, son of Abiah and Elizabeth (Hunt) Thayer, was born in Braintree, March 27, 1753, and after his marriage settled in Williamsburg, Massachusetts, where the greater part of his life was spent. In 1774 he married Jerusha Hunt, of Braintree, by whom he had eleven children, all probably born in Williamsburg: 1. Ruth, February 10, 1775. 2. Eliphalet, May 12, 1776. 3. Jerusha, June 9, 1778. 4. Oliver, 1780. 5. Elizabeth, 1782. 6. Phebe, 1784. 7. Zena, 1787. 8. Mary, 1789. 9. Minot, 1791. 10. Luda, 1793. 11. Lucinda, 1795.

(VII) Eliphalet, son of Oliver and Jerusha (Hunt) Thayer, was born in Braintree, May 12, 1776, and spent the greater part of his life in Williamsburg, where he carried on a farm and also was a butcher. He supplied the families of the surrounding region with fresh meat, and it is said to have been his custom to travel on horseback as far as Hatfield in carrying meat to his patrons, and in passing through the dense forests his course was guided by marked trees. Mr. Thayer is remembered as an enterprising man and a thrifty farmer. He died February 2, 1861, aged eighty years. His wife whom he married April 9, 1799, was Mary Sears, a descendant of one of the first families of Ashfield, Massachusetts, and who bore her husband ten children, all born in Williamsburg: 1. Howard, January 13, 1800, died young. 2.

Ezra, September 3, 1801. 3. Williston, November 23, 1893. 4. Howard, March 13, 1807. 5. Oliver, March 13, 1809. 6. Marietta, September 19, 1812. 7. Emily, January 19, 1815, died young. 8. William E., October 11, 1816. 9. Rhoda, July 11, 1819. 10. Louisa, November 15, 1822, died 1840.

(VIII) William E., son of Eliphalet and Mary (Sears) Thayer, was born in Williamsburg, Massachusetts, October 11, 1816, and was one of the most successful business men of his day. When a boy he attended district school in Peru, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, but when about twelve years old went to Williamsburg and found work as clerk in the general store conducted by his older brothers, Ezra and Williston Thayer. As he grew older he was given more important duties to perform and when he was about sixteen years old he was sent out through the country selling homemade clocks and trading them for barter and merchandise which could be put in stock in the store in Williamsburg. Frequently he made journeys into the Black river country and there sometimes met people with whose language he was not familiar and occasionally he was under necessity of employing an interpreter in order to carry on his trade in certain localities. He was a shrewd young man, but perfectly honest in his dealings, and having once peddled his wares in a region his subsequent visits always were welcomed and still better success resulted to himself and his employers. While in the store at Williamsburg one of his duties was to receive and change the mails on the arrival of the post-riders, which nearly always was after midnight; but it is said that he was always waiting at the door, never was found asleep when the rider came. It is said too that he seemed to have an instinctive knowledge of the rider's approach and could distinguish the sound of the horse's steps when none else could hear even the faintest sound of the approach. At the age of twenty-six years he himself became possessed of a horse and wagon and then set up in business for himself, peddling clocks and other wares all through the surrounding country and occasionally making quite extended journeys, even in the most severe winter weather. Many times he was compelled to camp out through the night, and he became so accustomed to the severities of weather that an inch or two of snow on the covers of his bed was not sufficient to disturb his rest or affect his health. In the course of time he became quite prosperous and then acquired a partnership interest in the business formerly carried on by his brothers, his own partner being his brother Ezra. Among other things they engaged in the manufacture of steel pens for some time, afterward added general hardware to their stock and still later put in a line of kitchen utensils and furniture. This business they conducted as partners until 1856 and then dissolved, William E. taking the hardware branch as part of his interest. He soon became a prosperous merchant and manufacturer, replaced his old buildings with other and larger ones, gave employment at times to as many as twenty-five workmen, and soon gained a wide reputation for Thayer's cutlery, edged tools and other manufactures, all of which caused his name and fame to extend throughout New England and even beyond its borders. His general mercantile business also became extensive, and is still carried on by his son, Frederick W. Thayer. About 1842 Mr. Thayer purchased the old brick colonial mansion house on Main street in Williamsburg, adjoining the store property of his brother Ezra. The old house still stands and retains much of its former appearance and interior appointments, even to the ancient fireplace with its crane and other fixtures. William E. Thayer died in 1893, having lived a useful life and having attained the good old age of seventy-seven years. In politics originally he was a Whig and afterward a strong Republican. For several years he was a member of the board of selectmen of Williamsburg. He acquired a goodly estate in lands and other property and made good use of his means in support of the church of which for so many years he was a consistent member, and also in administering to the relief of poor and distressed families. His brother Williston met an accidental death in September, 1859. Mr. Thayer married twice. His first wife, whom he married October 20, 1840, was Maria S. Dickinson, of Saybrook, Connecticut, born September 6, 1813, died August 14, 1859. He married (second) December 25, 1860, Harriet E. Dickinson. He had in all seven children, five by his first and two by his second wife: 1. Frederick William, November 4, 1844. 2. Alice M., January 3, 1847. 3. Evalina, September 9, 1849, died young. 4. Adelville, August 26, 1852, died September 5, 1860. 5. George D., June 14, 1857, a physician and surgeon. 6. Walter Herbert, July 5, 1862. 7. Hattie Winford, January 8, 1868.

was born in Williamsburg, Massachusetts, June 14, 1857. He attended the public schools of his native town, and upon completing his studies there entered Seabury Institute Military Academy at Saybrook, Connecticut, remaining four years, during which time he received a thorough training and gained great proficiency in athletic sports. From a corporal he advanced step by step to sergeant, then to lieutenant and later to captain, being in command the last two years. He graduated with honors in the class of 1876. He took up the study of medicine under the preceptorship of his cousin, Dr. S. E. Thayer, in South Hampton, continuing for eighteen months, at the expiration of which time Dr. Thayer removed to Williamsburg and his pupil also accompanied him, continuing his study for six months more, making in all two years. George D. Thayer then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City, where he pursued a two years' course, and then matriculated at the New York University, graduating therefrom with high honors and the degree of Doctor of Medicine, being the youngest in a class of ten with high honors and fifth in a class of six hundred and fifty men. He began the practice of his profession at Northampton, Massachusetts, in association with Dr. Dunlap, and after practicing with him for a period of five years branched out for himself, continuing so to the present time. His well-equipped offices are located in the basement of his modern residence on New South street, Northampton, there being a separate entrance for his patients. In addition to his private practice, Dr. Thayer served as the first city physician of Northampton for four years, and has been county physician for the past eighteen years, during which time he handled many cases at the jail of different diseases, losing only one, a most remarkable record. He has been connected with the staff of the Cooley Dickinson Hospital almost from its inception, and served as physician for the Ancient Order of United Workmen and for about twenty insurance companies. He holds membership in the Massachusetts Medical Society, Hampshire District Medical Society, Northampton Club of Medical Men, is a Knight Templar, Shriner and an Elk. He is a Republican in politics. Dr. Thayer married, December 16, 1885, in Northampton, Massachusetts, Clara Louise Kellogg, daughter of Bela and Elizabeth Walcott. One child, Howell Kellogg Thayer, born September 10, 1891, now in sophomore class in the high school.

The Warner family emigrated at an early date from England to America, and among those who have borne the name have been prominent authors, lawyers and political favorites, as well as men in other honorable walks of life. The particular family here described have lived from the first within the confines of Massachusetts, and its members have borne their share in the development of the commonwealth.

(I) William Warner, immigrant ancestor, was born in England, and in 1637 came to Massachusetts, where he was among the earliest settlers of Ipswich; it is supposed he died before 1648. Record is found of the following children: Daniel, John, and a daughter who became the wife of Thomas Wells.

(II) John, son of William Warner, who was born about 1616, and may have come from England with his father, although some authorities say he was the John Warner who embarked in 1635 from London, on board the "Increase," aged twenty years. At the destruction of Brookfield, which was his home, he removed to Hadley, where his son Mark had previously settled, and probably died there. He married, in 1655, Priscilla, daughter of Mark Symonds, of Brookfield. She was his second wife, as he had several children recorded before this date. His children were: Samuel, born in 1640; Mark; John; Nathaniel, 1655; Joseph, August 15, 1657, at Ipswich, died in 1658; Mehitable, April 16, 1659; Daniel, April 16, 1661; Eleazer, November 13, 1662; and Priscilla, September 25, 1666. May 17, 1692, John Warner gave his real and personal property to his sons Mark, Nathaniel and Eleazer.

(III) Mark, son of John Warner, was born in Ipswich, Massachusetts, about 1645-46, settled in Hadley about 1670, and in 1687 removed to Northampton, Massachusetts, where he died May 3, 1738. He married (first) December 8, 1671, Abigail, daughter of Richard Montague, who died February 6, 1705, and (second) in 1713, Mary Root, of Westfield, who died in 1732. By his first wife he had two children: Abigail, born August 18, 1675, married Charles Ferry, of Springfield, and Mark.

(IV) Mark (2), son of Mark (1) and Abigail (Montague) Warner, was born February 20, 1678, at Hadley, Massachusetts, and died August 3, 1766, at Northampton, Massachusetts. In 1746, when the citizens of Northampton decided to build "mounts and fortifications" against the raids of Indians, one of these was built near the house of Mark

Warner. He married, April 16, 1701, Lydia Phelps, who died November 19, 1765, aged eighty-three years, and their children were: Lydia, born February 9, 1702; Abigail, February 6, 1704; Elizabeth, April 9, 1706; Mehitable, August 9, 1708; Downing, December 14, 1710, died February 8, 1729; Mark, December 21, 1712; Mary, May 24, 1715; Daniel; Naomi, September 26, 1719; Elisha, October 5, 1722; and Lucy, September 25, 1724.

(V) Daniel, third son of Mark (2) and Lydia (Phelps) Warner, was born about 1717, and resided in Northampton all his life; he died there in 1804; the house in which he lived was burned in 1790. He married Jemima, daughter of Samuel Wright, who was born in 1720, died in 1813, and they had a son Joseph, and probably other children. Daniel Warner took part in the expedition against Louisburg, and was a Revolutionary soldier.

(VI) Joseph, son of Daniel and Jemima (Wright) Warner, was born in 1751, died in 1836, at Northampton, Massachusetts. He married Jerusha Edwards, in 1779, and they had eleven children, seven sons and four daughters, among them: Oliver; Solomon; Joseph, born in 1789, died in 1840; and Professor Aaron, born in 1794.

(VII) Oliver, son of Joseph and Jerusha (Edwards) Warner, was born March 3, 1780, in Northampton, Massachusetts, and for many years kept a hotel known as the "Warner House." He married Rhoda, daughter of Erastus and Rhoda (Hulbert) Bridgman, born September 1, 1784, died June 3, 1868, at Northampton, and their children were ten, of which three were: Abner Barnard, born January 8, 1814; Oliver, April 17, 1818, was elected to the legislature and senate of his native state, and for fourteen years was secretary of the state of Massachusetts; John.

(VIII) John, son of Oliver and Rhoda (Bridgman) Warner, was born February 14, 1825, at Northampton, Massachusetts, died July 4, 1870. He married Amelia, granddaughter of Squire Paine, an old pioneer of Ashfield, and they had five children, among them Charles Forbes.

(IX) Charles Forbes, son of John and Amelia (Paine) Warner, was born November 8, 1851, on the present site of the Draper Hotel, in Northampton, Massachusetts; his name is in honor of Judge Forbes. He is the editor of the Northampton Herald. Mr. Warner married, December 10, 1890, Mary Dawes (see Dawes V), and they had four daughters, two of whom are living: Rowena

Dawes, born January 31, 1892, and Rhoda Bridgman, February 28, 1893.

This name is supposed to originate from Daw, the diminutive or nickname of David. The antecedent of most of that name in this country is William Dawes, who came over in 1635. His father had come over before this time, but it is said he did not remain long. Abraham Dawes, thought to be the English ancestor, was one of the richest commoners in England, under Cromwell helped to support the royal family in exile, and upon the return of Charles Second to the throne was made baronet. William Dawes, grandson of the emigrant, born in Boston, 1745, won for himself undying fame by being one of the two companions of Paul Revere, in his historic ride, and like that hero, had much ado to dodge the British sentinels.

(I) Samuel Dawes, of Pembroke, probably a descendant from the above-mentioned William, was born a little before the year 1700, and died in 1750. About 1714 he bought land in Bridgewater, Massachusetts, and in 1727 married Sarah Howland, of Pembroke, where he then lived, and had two children; he removed to East Bridgewater, where his other children were born. After his death his widow married Captain Daniel Reed, of Abingdon, in 1765, and died January 2, 1775. Samuel and Sarah Dawes had children as follows: 1. Robert, born about 1722, married Lydia Harden. 2. Samuel. 3. Abigail, 1729, married Josiah Vining. 4. Content, 1733. 5. Ann, 1735, married Daniel Reed. 6. Mary, 1738, married Nathaniel Prior. 7. Jonathan, 1745, married Lydia Snell, went to the revolutionary war, and never returned.

(II) Samuel (2), second son of Samuel (1) and Sarah (Howland) Dawes, was born February 24, 1724, died November 5, 1794. Before the revolution he removed from Abingdon to Hampshire county, and in 1755 married Abigail, daughter of Isaac Kingman, born May 19, 1730, died in February, 1808, and their children were: 1. Ebenezer, born March 1, 1756, married Elizabeth Bailey. 2. and 3. Betty and Sarah, twins, 1758. 4. Samuel, December 6, 1760, married Lydia Torrey. 5. John, March 4, 1763, married Dolly Shaw. 6. Howland, February 25, 1766, died unmarried in 1844. 7. Daniel, September 9, 1768. 8. Abigail, September 17, 1770, married Hatch Noyes. 9. Mitchell.

(III) Mitchell, sixth and youngest son of Samuel (2) and Abigail (Kingman) Dawes, was born August 15, 1772, and lived at Cummington, Massachusetts. He married Mercy Burgess, January 1, 1805, and they had children as follows: 1. Sally, born March 9, 1808. 2. Louisa Warner, March 21, 1810, married Thomas Reed Rawson. 3. Sophronia, March 8, 1812, married William Rogers. 4. Lucretia, March 20, 1814, married Isaac Williams. 5. Henry Laurens. 6. Francis Howland, May 11, 1819. 7. Thomas Spencer, April 23, 1822, married Elizabeth Russell.

(IV) Francis Howland, second son of Mitchell and Mercy (Burgess) Dawes, was born May 11, 1819, at Cummington, Massachusetts, in the room which had been the birth-place of the poet, William Cullen Bryant. A portion of the Bryant house had been moved about a quarter of a mile, and became part of the Dawes house. His opportunities for education were few, and he attended the school at Cummington but a few terms after which he won his knowledge by his own unaided efforts, studying evenings by the light of the fire, carrying a book with him when following the plow in the fields, and he also attached a candle to the head of his bed to use its light. He was the second of three sons, and while the other two were receiving college educations he was working on the farm to help them, and his study of law was carried on under difficulties which were hard to overcome, being accomplished mostly in the evenings, until very late of nights. When he began life for himself he had not a dollar and was indebted to the amount of seven hundred dollars, which he paid and then decided to marry, but afterwards thought better to wait until he was in better circumstances. He was the friend of everyone in the community in which he lived, and was considered a well educated and unusually gifted man, and from his knowledge of law was often called to settle estates. For over forty years he served as justice of the peace, and was one of the old trial judges who were later superseded by the district judges. He served several times as moderator for the town, and by his familiar friends was called "Square" Dawes, and was often known as the "Father of Cummington," so great was the respect for his opinions and advice. He was called on for toasts on all important occasions, and was many times the director of funerals. His friendship was sought by many men of rank and talent, among them Wendell Phillips, Charles C. Burleigh, and others of this type. At the age of twenty-one, Mr. Dawes cast his first vote for the abolition party, and at his house was the first underground station of the party. Later he removed to the Bryant place, and later to what is known as East Village, Cummington. Mr. Dawes was present at every public meeting in his time, and generally presided at same. He married Melissa, daughter of James and Phoebe Everett, born May 22, 1820, died March 29, 1905; the monument raised to the memory of Francis Howland Dawes and his wife bears this inscription: "The world is better for their having lived." They lived together many years to carry on good work, being united in heart and hand, and though they never had any children of their own, their home was filled with young people, for they took into their home and reared twenty children, giving them the benefit of a fine example, and leading them to live useful lives; they were taken from various places, but all felt much gratitude for their benefactors, who were, each in their way, father to the fatherless and mother to the motherless. The twentieth child to receive the benefit of this good home and care was Mary Bradley, born in Indiana, March 12, 1860. Her grandfather was Abner Bradley, and she was the daughter of George and Julia (Whitcomb) Bradley; her father was a soldier in the civil war, and at the age of thirty-one he died, leaving a widow with five small children, of whom Mary was one; she was taken into the family circle of the Dawes family in 1865, at the age of five years, and was the only child legally adopted by them. Mr. Dawes was a man who had a strong individuality, and his presence was greatly missed in the community; he became possessed of a comfortable fortune, and his adopted daughter was sole heir to the estate left by him.

(V) Mary, adopted daughter of Francis Howland and Melissa (Everett) Dawes, was born March 12, 1860, and lived with her foster-parents from 1865 until her marriage to Charles Forbes Warner (see Warner IX).

Robert Lawrence, first
LAWRENCE known progenitor of this family, was of Lancashire, England, born probably as early as A. D. 1150 and the ancestor of the early families of Lawrence in England. (IX) John, son of Nicholas Lawrence, was of Agercroft, ancestor of the Lawrence family of St. James Park in Suffolk. It is stated in the pedigree of the Lawrence family of Ashton Hall. He died in 1461.

(XVI) Henry, son of John Lawrence, married Mary ———. His father's will refers to him as having removed from Wisset to New England and settled in Charlestown. In the first division of land in Charlestown he received on the Mystic side five acres of land for a house lot, February 20, 1638. Another lot was transferred to him in 1635 by George Blott. He seems to have died in the early forties, and it is supposed that his second wife, Christian, is the widow, who with her son John sold house and land there July 22, 1646. The widow died March 3, 1647-48. The only child known was John, mentioned below.

(1) John, son of Henry Lawrence, was baptized at Wisset, county Suffolk, England, October 8, 1609. He is usually known as the immigrant ancestor of the family. In 1639 he gave his age as twenty-four; in 1657 as about thirty-five. But he was married before 1635 and his statement of age was not accurate in either case, or the clerks of the court recorded incorrectly—a very common thing in taking the ages of witnesses. Lawrence must have been born as early as 1609, the date of his baptism in England. He was admitted a freeman April 17, 1637, and received a grant of land at Watertown of three acres, February 28, 1636. In 1650 he bought of the town fifteen acres of common land. He was a carpenter by trade. He sold his mansion and land at Watertown in 1662 and removed to Groton. In December of that year he was elected selectman of Groton. He was evidently a man of some intelligence and influence and a large property owner. He continued his business of carpenter at Watertown as well as Groton, also in Boston. He died at Groton, July 11, 1667. In his will he appoints his wife and sons Nathaniel and Joseph executors, naming also sons Enoch, Samuel, Isaac, Jonathan, Zachariah, and daughters Elizabeth and Mary. His first wife Elizabeth died August 29, 1663, and he married (second) Susanna Bachiler, daughter of William Bachiler, of Charlestown. In her will she mentions daughters Abigail and Susanna, and her sisters Rachels Atwood and Abigail Asting. She died July 8, 1668. Children: 1. John, born March 14, 1636. 2. Nathaniel, October 15, 1639. 3. Joseph, March, 1642, died May, 1642. 4. Joseph, May 30, 1643. 5. Jonathan, buried April 6, 1648. 6. Mary, July 16, 1645. 7. Peleg, January 10, 1646-47, mentioned below. 8. Enoch, March 5, 1648-49. 9. Samuel, removed to Connecticut. 10. Son, married, April 19, 1682, Abigail Bellews. 11. Elizabeth, born May 9, 1655, in Boston, lived with Ensign Buss after her father's death. 12. Children of the second wife: 14. Abigail, born in Groton, January 9, 1666. 15. Susanna, born at Groton, July 3, 1667.

(II) Peleg Lawrence, son of John Lawrence, the immigrant, was born in Watertown, January 10, 1646-47, died in Groton, Massachusetts, February 14, 1692. He lived in Groton and removed to Concord at the Indian outbreak in 1676. He was two years selectman and held minor offices also. He lived on the farm now or lately owned by Samuel B. Marshall on the Boston road. He married, in 1668, Elizabeth Morse, born September 1, 1647. Children, born at Groton: 1. Elizabeth, January 9, 1669. 2. Samuel, October 16, 1671, resided in Sherborn and died at Killingly, Connecticut. 3. Eleazer, February 28, 1674, mentioned above. 4. Jonathan, March 29, 1679, married Abigail ——. 5. Abigail, October 6, 1681. 6. Jeremiah, January 3, 1686-87, died April 26, 1687. 7. Joseph, June 12, 1688, lived in Connecticut. 8. Daniel. 9. Susannah.

(III) Major Eleazer, son of Peleg Lawrence, was born February 28, 1674, died March 9, 1754. The cellar of the house still remains. He was frequently chosen moderator of town meetings and served as selectman and constable. He received the title of major about 1734. He died at Pepperell, March 9, 1754, aged eighty years. His will was dated December 29, 1749, and proved January 13, 1755. He married Mary Scripture, born 1679, died June 29, 1761, eldest

He was in the revolution in Captain Aaron Bullard's company, Colonel Samuel Bullard's regiment, December 30, 1777. He married (first) in 1726-27, Tryphena Powers, who died August 25, 1752. When a young man he settled in Cohasset, which at that time was a fishing town of importance, and worked at his trade. In 1796, at the time of his marriage, he removed to Ashby and followed farming, together with his trade for a short time. Returning to Cohasset he established a cooper's shop near the water at the head of the cove near his home, and made barrels used to pack mackerel. He received about seventy-five cents each for his barrels, which were made with staves of pine hooped with strips of white oak or birch. His later years were spent with his son, Josiah A. Lawrence. He was one of the twenty charter members of the Second Congregational Church at Cohasset, which first met at his home in 1824, and he was a deacon of this church. In 1807 he was one of the petitioners for a fire engine for the use of the town. He was sergeant of Captain John Pratt's company of foot, and during the war of 1812 was sergeant of the Cohasset militia under Captain Peter Lothrop. He received a medal in 1808 from the Massachusetts Humane Society. In politics he was a Whig. (VII) Josiah Oakes, son of Thaddeus Lawrence, was born at Ashby, May 6, 1805, died at Cohasset, April, 1805. When quite young he removed with his parents to Coliasset, where he attended the Little Harbor district school. He studied besides the common branches, geometry and navigation. In early manhood he made frequent fishing trips to the Newfoundland Banks, which proved profitable. He became interested in fishing vessels which he fitted and sent out, owning a number of such ships. In 1843 he and David Wilson were joint owners in the fishing brig "Casket" of one hundred and fifty-five tons, and he also owned the "Sarah Young" of fifty-four tons, in 1836. His vessels were engaged in mackerel trade and were unusually successful. He owned the Doane wharf at the head of the cove, where the fish was packed and sent to the Boston market. He employing many Portugese. During this time, about twenty years, he also kept a general store, and for a time was engaged in the coal and lumber business in Cohasset. His coal pockets were situated near Snow's wharf on the left side of the harbor. He sold his store to Abraham H. Tower, but two years later resumed the business in the village opposite the present St. Stephen's Church, and continued here until his death. He was the first man to use Portugese help, about four hundred of whom came to work on the fishing vessels. Mr. Lawrence was a prominent citizen and owned much property in Cohasset and Boston. He was a noted lifesaver, as was his father, and received a medal from the Massachusetts Humane Society. During the civil war he showed his patriotism in many ways. An amusing incident is related of him. A man living on Cedar street had been seen defiantly flourishing a Confederate flag, to the indignation of the neighbors. Finally a company headed by Mr. Lawrence got a bucket of tar and a bag of feathers, and marched through the streets amid cheers and much demonstration, to the home of the southern sympathizer. The man kept the crowd at bay with a shot gun for a time, but was finally persuaded to apologize, and to hoist the stars and stripes which he was made to salute, in place of the Rebel flag. In politics Mr. Lawrence was a Whig, and later a Republican, and was town treasurer for a number of years. He was a member of the state legislature in 1844-45. In 1840 he was a member of the Beechwood Debating Society. He was an active worker in the temperance cause and gave much of his time and substance towards advancing the temperance principle. OLD LAWRENCE HOUSE, IN THE TOWN OF LEXINGTON, MASS.

He soon started a small hardware department in his harness shop, which was so successful that he was soon obliged to move into larger quarters at his present store on Massachusetts avenue. From a small beginning the business has increased until it is the largest of its kind in Lexington. His success is due to his energy, foresight, and shrewd business ability. The hardware business being the most important branch, he has until recently conducted a harness making department, which he relinquished to accommodate the increasing demand of his general trade. He is a member of the Hancock Congregational Society at Lexington and of the church club. In politics he is a Republican. He is a member of the Simon W. Robinson Lodge of Free Masons of Lexington. He is trustee of the Lexington Savings Bank and on the board of investment. He married, March 26, 1864, at Fitchburg, Massachusetts, Sarah Jane Whitney, born July 18, 1844, daughter of John Milton and Emma Augusta (Willard) Whitney, of Ashby. Children: 1. From May to July, 1777, he was with his brother's company in Rhode Island, and in 1778 was with Captain Jabez Wilder at Hull, and with Captain Elias Whiton's company doing guard duty. He was a cooper by trade, and lived on the homestead. His will was dated July 28, 1824, and proved September 7 following. It bequeathed the homestead, after his wife's death, to his grandson, William Tower, mentioned below. He married, May 2, 1776, Esther Cushing, born in Weymouth, June 10, 1757, daughter of Frederick and Grace (Bate) Cushing. She died May 30, 1828, in Hingham. Children: 1. (See Batchelder family).

The English surname
 BATCHELDER Batchelder is identical with Bacheller, and is, of course, variously spelled in the early records. The name itself is doubtless from the word bachelor, the ancient meaning of which was simply young man. The earliest mention of the name indicates that it was given originally to mark the condition of its possessor as an unmarried man or a young man, when there was another of the same personal name in the vicinity. The English registers of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, where the name is first found, use the French prefix "le." Thus we find Jordanus le Bachelor and Gilbert le Bachelor, and we may be reasonably sure that the names Jordan and Gilbert were then so common in Normandy that it was necessary to indicate by some addition to the personal name that there was an older or married person of the same name in the neighborhood. In 1207 the "le" was used and dropped at a later date. Before 1660 the name was common in Kent, Surrey, Sussex, Wilts, Hampshire, Bucks, Middlesex, Norfolk and Suffolk, all in southeastern England. There were seven immigrants of this name to New England: Alexander of Portsmouth, New Hampshire; Rev. Stephen of Lynn, Massachusetts, and Hampton, New Hampshire; Henry of Ipswich; Joseph and John of Salem; William of Charlestown and John of Watertown, Dedham and Reading.

(1) Rev. Stephen Batchelder (Bachiler), the immigrant ancestor, was born in England in 1561. He matriculated at St. John's College, Oxford, in 1581, and in 1586, at the age of twenty-six, was presented by Lord de la Warr to the living of Wherwell (Horrall), a pretty village in Hampshire on the river Test. The Oxford registers do not give Mr. Bachiler's home, but there were at Kongsclere, Burghclere and Highclere (a few miles from Wherwell) a large family of Bachilers, and at Upper Clatford in 1571 there died a Richard Bachiler whose will mentions several family names found in Hampton, New Hampshire. While Stephen Bachiler was at Wherwell, there were living at Andover and Weyhill, a few miles away, Rev. James Samborne, whose son, Rev. James Samborne Jr., was rector of Grately (nearly) in 1604, and of Upper Clatford from 1610 to 1628. Mr. Bachiler was deprived of his living in 1605, presumably for holding Calvinistic or Puritan beliefs, and he took refuge in Holland, it is said, but no record of his life there is found. His son-in-law, Rev. John Wing, was the first pastor of the English church at Middleburgh in Holland from 1620 and it is worth noting that Mr. Samuel Bachiler, minister to Sir Charles Morgan's fighting regiment in Holland, was the same year called to a pastorate in Flushing, Holland. Samuel is thought by some genealogists to have been son of Stephen; but he was author of a book called "Miles Christianus"—perhaps the same volume that Rev. Stephen sent to the wife of Governor Winthrop in October, 1639, from Hampton. He said in this letter: "Present my great respect and thankfulness unto you in a little token. And though it be little in itself, yet doth it contain greater weight of true worth than can easily be comprehended but of the spiritual man. * * * Looking among some special reserved books, and lighting on this little treatise of one of mine own poor children. I conceived nothing might suit more to my love, nor your acceptance. As God gives you leisure to read anything that may further your piety, and hope of a better life than this, if you shall please to vouchsafe a little part of that time to read this by degrees, I shall judge it more than a sufficient satisfaction to my love and desire of furthering you in the way of grace."

When in London in 1631 making preparations to come to New England, permission was granted to him, his wife Helen, and daughter, Ann Sandburn (Samborne), widow, who lived in the Strand, London, to go to Flushing for two months to visit his sons and daughters there. Flushing is in Zealand, near Middleburgh, and was garrisoned by the English for half a century beginning 1572. Soon after leaving Wherwell, Mr. Batchelder settles at Newton Stacy, the nearest hamlet to the eastward, and bought land there in 1622, selling it in 1631. He sailed for Boston, March 9, 1632, on the ship, "William and Frances," being pastor of the colony sent over by the Plow company to settle the Plow Patent in Maine. His son-in-law, Christopher Hussey, of Dorking, settled in Lynn, where he was joined by

Mr. Batchelder, who formed a small church there, baptizing first his grandson, Stephen Hussey, born 1630. The Plow Colony was a failure. At Lynn Mr. Batchelder came into collision with the authorities and was restricted for a time to preaching to those that came with him. He was admitted a freeman May 6, 1635. In February, 1636, he removed to Ipswich where he was granted fifty acres of land. He was one of the founders of Sandwich, Massachusetts, and though seventy-six years old at that time, walked from Ipswich to Sandwich. But he soon moved again, this time to Newbury, where he had a tract of land July 6, 1638. Finally he, and his company who petitioned therefor, were granted liberty to begin a plantation at Winnicunnett, later called Hampton, New Hampshire. The settlement was begun October 16, 1638. The town was incorporated June 7, 1639, and soon afterward named Hampton. In 1639 Ipswich voted to give Mr. Batchelder sixty acres of upland and twenty of meadow if he would reside in that town as preacher three years, but he preferred Hampton, where he received three hundred acres for a farm, besides his house lot. He gave the town a church bell which was used until it cracked in 1703 and was then sent to England to help pay for a new bell. Soon trouble arose in the church and raged for several years. Even the personal character of the octogenarian was assailed. He had a call to Exeter, New Hampshire, and Casco, Maine, but finally accepted neither. He left Hampton and resided in Portsmouth in 1647. He gave all his property to his grandchildren in that year and returned to England sometime between 1650 and 1658, and settled in Hackney, part of London, where he died in 1660. He married (first) in England, Helen ———, born 1583, died 1642; (second) also in England, ———. His third marriage about 1648 to Mary ——— was unfortunate. Grave charges were made against her and he sued for divorce. When he went to England he left her behind. He may have erred, but in the main his life was clean and honorable. He was learned and had a very long and eventful, if not entirely successful life. A description of his coat-of-arms is given in "Morgan's Sphere of the Gentry," printed in 1661: Vert a plough in fesse and in base the sun rising or. Motto: Sol justiter exoritur. Children: 1. Theodate, born 1596, married Captain Christopher Hussey. 2. Nathaniel, 1590, mentioned below. 3. Deborah, 1592, married John Wing. 4. Stephen, 1594. 5. Ann, 1601.

(III) Nathaniel (2), son of Nathaniel (1) Batchelder, was born in 1630 in England and was the immigrant ancestor. He resided in Hampton, New Hampshire, where he held many offices of trust. He was some time constable, and nine years selectman. It is said that after the death of his first wife, when he had determined to marry again, he resolved to be governed in his choice by the direction in which his staff, held perpendicularly over the floor, should fall, when dropped from his hand. The experiment being tried, the staff fell towards the southwest, and in that direction he bent his steps. Having travelled as far as Woburn, he called on the Widow Wyman, and offered her his hand, stating that he was going to Boston and would call for her answer on his return. It was favorable, and they were married at once. His will was dated February 14, 1706-07. He died suddenly, January 2, 1710. He married (first) December 10, 1656, Deborah Smith, daughter of John Smith, of Martha's Vineyard, sister of John and niece of Ruth Dalton. She died March 8, 1675, and he married (second) October 31, 1677, Mrs. Mary (Carter) Wyman, daughter of Rev. Thomas Carter and widow of John Wyman, of Woburn. She was born July 24, 1648, died 1688, and was probably cousin of his first wife. He married (third) October 3, 1689, Elizabeth B. Knill, widow of John Knill; she survived her husband; she was admitted to the church at Charlestown, September 2, 1677. Children: 1. The surname Jacobs is derived JACOBS from the baptismal name and is common in many countries. We find it in use in England as early as the fifteenth century. William Jacobs was among the gentry of Berkshire in 1433; Nicholas Jacobs was living in Suffolk and Humphrey Jacobs in Warwickshire at the same time. The coats-of-arms of the various families in England vary but little from the following ancient arms of the family: A chevron gules between three wolves heads erased proper. Crest: A wolf passant proper.

(I) Nicholas Jacobs, immigrant ancestor, was one of the very few early planters who came to Bare Cove, now Hingham, Massachusetts, prior to the arrival of Rev. Peter Hobart and his company in 1636. According to the "Cushing manuscript," Nicholas Jacob with his wife and two children and their cosen Thomas Lincoln, weaver, came from Old Hingham (England) and settled in this Hingham, 1633." In September, 1635, he had a grant of a house lot at Hingham. He lived at Watertown for a short time before that, however, and owned a homestead which he sold before 1636. In June, 1636, he had granted to him six acres of planting ground upon Weariall Hill, and June 4, 1636, the first of the great lots next to the Weymouth river and a lot of six acres "at the head of the plain next to Edeard Gilman, his brother-in-law." He had also a house lot on Bachelor street, which he sold later to Gilman. He was admitted a freeman in 1635-36; was selectman in 1636; one of the committee of nine to divide Conulhasset in 1640; deputy to the general court in 1648-49; one of the three commissioners to be presented to the general court in 1656. He was honored with various other trusts by his townsmen. He kept an ordinary in Hingham in 1640. He died June 5, 1657, and his widow Mary married (second) March 10, 1658-59, John Beal. His will was dated May 18, 1657, and proved July 25 following, bequeathing an estate appraised at three hundred and ninety-three pounds to wife Mary and children, each of whom had to pay a stipulated sum annually to their mother. Children: 1. John, born in England about 1630. 2. Elizabeth, 1632, married (first) December 4, 1648, John Thaxter; (second) March 23, 1690-91, Daniel Cushing. 3. Mary, married John Otis Jr. 4. Sarah, married, February 25, 1652-53, Matthew Cushing Jr. 5. Hannah, baptized in Hingham, February 23, 1639-40, married, December 16, 1657, Thomas Loring. 6. Josiah, baptized in Hingham, November 6, 1642, buried November 4 following. 7. Deborah, baptized in Hingham, November 26, 1643, married, February 11, 1663-64, Nathaniel Thomas. 8. Joseph, mentioned below.

(II) Joseph, son of Nicholas Jacobs, was born in Hingham, May 1, and baptized May 10, 1646. He was a carpenter by trade, and was admitted a freeman at Hingham and had a lot of land near Great Hill, and four shares in the division of lands in 1670. He was constable in Hingham in 1685. He was mentioned in the will of his brother John, who died in 1693 and soon afterwards removed to Bristol, Rhode Island, where he died February 9, 1708. He married Hannah ———, born at Hull, April 30, 1650. Children, born at Hingham and recorded at Bristol: 1. Joseph, February 20, 1672-73, died young. 2. Joseph, April 10, 1675, died at Bristol, November 1, 1703. 3. Benjamin, June 27, 1677, died young. 4. Benjamin, April 10, 1680, died at Bristol, August 17, 1703. 5. Nathaniel, June 26, (Bristol records), June 29 (Hingham records), 1683, mentioned below. 6. Mary, September 16, 1686, died at Bristol, March 22, 1695-96 (March 22, 1694-95 according to gravestone).

(III) Nathaniel, son of Joseph Jacobs, was born in Hingham, June 26 or 29, 1683. He was a child when his father removed to Bristol, and there he spent his youth and early manhood. He removed to Woodstock, Connecticut, and after a short time to Thompson, buying of John Wiley for nine hundred pounds, old tenor, a tract of land of the Saltonstall tract, and Wiley returned to Woodstock. Jacobs and his five sons took possession and cleared the forest and settled. Afterwards the farm was and is still known as the Jacobs District of Thompson. His house was on the frontier at the time, on the route from Hartford to Boston, and was a welcome stopping place for travellers between those towns. It came to be known as the "Half-Way House." He was active in the town and church and served with Deacon Johnson on a committee to make provision for the entertainment and reception of the ordaining council in 1737 when Mr. Abel Stiles was ordained and installed July 27, 1737. So he must have been in Thompson a few years before he bought the Saltonstall farm. He married Mercy Whitman (Wightman or Weightman, as the name was originally spelled), daughter of Zachariah Wightman, born 1644, died 1726, and Sarah (Alcock) Wightman, daughter of Dr. John Alcock, born in England, 1627, and Sarah (Palsyore) Alcock. Children: 1. Mary, born August 28, 1715. 2. Joseph, July 12, 1717. 3. Benjamin, April 26, 1719. 4. Nathaniel, April 26, 1719, died young. 5. Nathaniel,

April 26, 1721, lived in Royalston, Massachusetts; soldier in the revolution. 6. Hannah, February 20, 1723. 7. John, May 29, 1725. 8. Whitman, May 3, 1727, mentioned below. 9. Mercy, April 20, 1729. 10. Elnathan, January 5, 1731, died August 1, 1745.

(IV) Rev. Whitman, son of Nathaniel Jacobs, was born at Bristol, Rhode Island, May 3, 1727, died at Royalston, Massachusetts, March 28, 1801. His age is given as seventy-nine, an error of several years, in the Royalston records. He became a preacher of the "Six-Principle" Baptists and was installed as pastor of the church at Thompson, Connecticut, in 1750. After a successful pastorate there lasting twenty years, he accepted a call to the Baptist church at Royalston, Worcester county, Massachusetts, where he was installed December 13, 1770. Like most churches of this denomination at that time, his was poor and weak, and his salary was but fifty dollars a year. But he was a zealous preacher and popular pastor. In 1786 he resigned and went to Guilford, Vermont, where he preached for a time. He was also at Oneida county, New York. About 1795 he returned to Royalston and was living there with his son Joseph at the time of his death. He bought land at Royalston, June 1, 1770, when his residence was given as Killingly (Thompson) of Isaac Esty, of Royalston on Chestnut Hill, later called after Elder Jacobs and still known as Jacobs Hill. He deeded land to his son, Simeon Jacobs, one hundred acres in Royalston, September 22, 1785, and shortly before his death land to his daughter Rebecca. (VII) Dr. Horace, son of Simeon (2) Jacobs, was born in Royalston, April 5, 1818. He was but six years old when his father died and a short time later he went to live with his uncle, Dr. Isaac Jacobs, of Exeter, Maine. He attended the public schools in Exeter and learned of his uncle the rudiments of the medical art. He worked at farming in the summer and when a young man he taught school for a number of years in the winter terms. He began the study of medicine in earnest after he came of age in the office of his brother, Dr. Sumner Jacobs, of South Hadley, Massachusetts, and two years later began to practice in partnership with his brother. Later he removed to Chicopee Falls and soon afterward the brothers dissolved partnership and Dr. Horace removed to Chicopee, where he practiced as an eclectic physician until 1855. He then spent two years in rest and study at Westfield, Massachusetts, and in 1857 came to Springfield, Massachusetts, where he resumed the practice of his profession, being one of the first eclectic physicians of that city. Dr. Jacobs was the first of the eclectic school to practice in the Connecticut Valley in Massachusetts. The innovation met with opposition from the other schools of medicine, but from a very modest practice at the beginning, Dr. Jacobs was soon in possession of all he could attend. His success attracted patients from a distance and won for him the respect of his fellow-practitioners as well as of the public. For many years he was the acknowledged leader of his school in this section of the state. He was often called in consultation, and his judgment was sought even by physicians of other schools. His kindly nature endeared him to his patients and made him a welcome visitor in the sick-room. "He was a man (said the Springfield Republican at the time of his death) whose worth was best known, and almost entirely known, to his family, his patients and those who from whatever cause became well acquainted with him. He was eminently genial in his home and among those with whom he had the greatest intimacy, but was never ostentatious in any relation. A steadfast sense of right determined his convictions and laid the course of his action. For this quality, together with his dignity, sound judgment and genuine good sense, he was much esteemed in the community." He served several terms in the lower board of the city council, and was for many years president of the Holyoke Paper Company. He was one of the original stockholders of the Springdale Paper Company of Westfield and was a director at the time of his death. Much of the early development of the southern part of West Springfield, which had a marvelous growth in the early seventies, was due to his efforts and influence, and he always had large real estate holdings there. In his boyhood he attended the Baptist church, but during his residence in Chicopee he became one of the most earnest and zealous of Methodists. In Springfield he was a prominent member of the official board of the Pynchon Street Methodist Episcopal Church. During the last years of his life he was a member and trustee of Trinity Methodist Church. He retired from active practice on account of ill health in 1882. He died May 3, 1884, at Salt Lake City, while returning with his wife and daughter from a visit to his brother Enoch in California. The cause of death was heart disease.

The independent and adventurous spirit of the men of this name is evidenced by the fact of their being very early settlers in the wilderness of New England. Francis, of whom very little is known, came in 1635; Nathaniel settled at Braintree before 1641; John was of Plymouth in 1643, and of Duxbury 1657; a second John was a member of Pynchon's colony at Springfield in 1643; James was of Saco in 1655; and there were others later. They have ever been men of enterprise and courage, leaders in business and brave soldiers in war.

(I) John Harmon, the propositus of the Harrison family of Suffield, Connecticut, was born in England in 1617, and died in Springfield, Massachusetts, "ye 7th of ye 1 mon. 1660-61," aged forty-three years. He was settled in Springfield in 1643, and was granted land February 12, 1649, the record stating: "It is ordered yt Geo; Colton and Thomas Cooper who is ye Towne treasurer should wth yr best discretion lay out the severall parcellis of Meadow granted ye last yeare, to Henry Burt 4 acres, Tho; Mirick 4 acres, Alex; Edwards 4 acres, Jno Harman 4 acres, In ye Longe meadow over ye Brooke." January 22, 1651, John Harmon was grantee of lot 6, two and a half acres "on Pacowick." "February 8th (1654) these parsells of meadow commonly called by the name of Wattlehnett was granted these inhabitants as followeth vid John Harman 3 acres," &c. He also received a grant of land "over ye mill river" containing three acres, in 1655. He also received other grants of land. In "a rate for ye raysinge of £30 for the purchase of the lands of the Plantation 1646." John Harmon is assessed 9s. 2d. on the thirty-three acres of land. John Harmon was one of six persons seated by the selectmen in the third seat of the church, December 23, 1659. He was a man of good character and was made surveyor of highways of the lower part of the town, November 2, 1647, and November 2, 1658; fence viewer, 1635; November 4, 1656, he was chosen to the office of "presenter to present breaches of the laws of the county or of town orders and to which service he took his oath." He married, in 1640, Elizabeth, whose surname does not appear. She was born in England in 1617. After the death of John Harmon she married Anthony Dorchester, who died in Springfield, August 28, 1683. She died in Springfield, May 16, 1699, aged ninety-one years. The children of John and Elizabeth were: John, Samuel, Sarah, Joseph, Elizabeth, Mary, Nathaniel and Ebenezer. The first two were born before John's settlement at Springfield.

(II) Joseph, third son of John and Elizabeth Harmon, was born in Springfield, Massachusetts, "11 mon. 4 day, 1646," and died in Suffield, Connecticut, October 28, 1729, aged nearly eighty-three years. In December, 1664, upon the request of Anthony Dorchester, there was granted by the town of Springfield to his own and to his wife's sons thirty acres of land each. Joseph Harmon was one of those who received one of these portions of thirty acres. In 1676 Samuel and Joseph Harmon were two of several persons desiring grants of land at, towards or about Stony river on the west side of the great river toward Windsor; and the selectmen granted to the Harmons "30 acres of land apiece there and six acres of wet meadow." Joseph Harmon's place in the church was "in ye south side at ye upper end of the Backer seate," in 1662-63. In 1670 Samuel and Joseph Harmon were required to furnish one load as their part of the minister's wood. Samuel and Joseph Harmon seem to have been successful hunters; on the town books, among similar entries, of date January 11, 1668, are the following: "To Samuel & Joseph Harmon for killing 6 wolves this Summer past £3." December, 1670, "To Samle & J. Harman for killing 4 wolves £2." January 14, 1670, the settlement of Suffield, Connecticut, was begun by the grants of land to Samuel and Joseph Harmon, Benjamin Parsons and others, says Burt in his "History of Springfield." D. W. Norton in his "Statement at the Bi-Centennial Celebration of the Town of Suffield, October 12, 1870, states that the settlement of the town was begun in 1670." John Lewis, Esq., at the same place says, "Unfortunately, no documents have yet been discovered, that definitely state the time, place, and circumstance of the first settlement of Suffield * * * While it is quite certain that the Harmons were the pioneers of the town, and that they came here in 1670, the exact date of their settlement is not known." "In 1669 the Selectmen of Springfield assumed authority to form and direct the settlement of Springfield. They made several grants of land, and among others to Samuel and Joseph Harmon, who it is thought, in the following summer, took up their abode on the Northampton road, in the vicinity of Stony Brook." This was about one mile west of High street, on what is now the road leading from High street to West Suffield. Joseph Harmon married Hannah Phillee, or Fille, in Southfield, Massachusetts, now Suffield, Connecticut, January 22, 1674. She was born in Windsor, Connecticut, July 3, 1653, and died in Suffield, August 28, 1729, aged seventy-six. They had ten children: Hannah, John (both born at Springfield), Samuel (died young), Elizabeth, Joseph, Sarah, Samuel, Ebenezer, Mary and Nathaniel.

(III) Joseph (2), third son of Joseph (1) and Hannah (Philly) Harmon, was born September 6, 1682, in Suffield, where he died August 19, 1747, aged almost sixty-five years.

He married, in Suffield, November 25, 1714, Elizabeth Granger, born in Suffield, March 26, 1692. She survived her husband and married (second) Ebenezer Harmon, born in Suffield, September 6, 1688, died in 1770. The date of her death is not recorded. The children of Joseph and Elizabeth were: Joseph, Elizabeth, Moses and Miriam (twins), and Ebenezer, next mentioned.

(IV) Ebenezer, youngest child of Joseph (2) and Elizabeth (Granger) Harmon, was born in Suffield, July 29, 1727, died January 17, 1807, in the eightieth year of his age. He married, in Suffield, January 17, 1753, Rachel Winchel, born in Suffield, September, 22, 1732, died there March 20, 1820. They had eight children: Israel, Rachel, Jehiel (died young), Elizabeth, Jehiel, Luther, Olive and Asenath.

(V) Israel, eldest child of Ebenezer and Rachel (Winchel) Harmon, was born in Suffield, October 29, 1753, died December 14, 1831, in his seventy-ninth year. The town of Suffield is believed to have furnished four hundred men to the revolutionary armies, among whom were ten Harmons. In 1776 Captain John Harmon raised a company of men in Suffield and Windsor, and Israel and his brother, Jehiel Harmon, were privates in that company. Israel Harmon married, in Suffield, February 5, 1779, Elizabeth (Kent) Pomeroy, born in Suffield, November 7, 1755, died May 4, 1825, in her seventieth year. Their children were: Ebenezer, Calvin, Israel, Rachel, Adolphus and Julius.

(VI) Israel (2), third son of Israel (1) and Elizabeth (Kent) (Pomeroy) Harmon, was born in Suffield, Connecticut, December 17, 1784, died at Suffield, April 20, 1844. He started as a peddler of woodenware, and later began business as a powdermaker, and continued in that line to within five years of his death. He sold his product on the road and furnished a large quantity for blasting on the Erie Canal, taking it there in his wagon. Once when returning from a western trip a great snow storm compelled him to stay over night at East Granby. The next morning, Sunday, when he renewed his journey toward home, three miles away, he was stopped by a constable and detained as a Sabbath breaker, but after a heated argument was allowed to go to his home. He commenced without capital, but by industry and good management he accumulated a comfortable fortune. He owned and operated four farms up to the time of his death. He was a whole-hearted and loyal supporter of church and state. He was in early life a Democrat and later a Whig, and took an active part in public affairs, holding every office in the gift of the town and representing it three years in the state legislature. He married, November 24, 1819, Paulina Harmon, of New Marlborough, born in New Marlborough, June 18, 1801, died July 6, 1868, in Fairbury, Illinois, where she had been caring for the motherless children of her daughter Julia Annette. Mrs. Harmon was the daughter of William and Betsey Harmon of a collateral branch of the Harmon family, descended from the first John. She possessed superior mental and personal endowments, was a sincere Christian (a member of the Congregational church), training her children "in the fear and admonition of the Lord." A true helpmeet to her husband, a devoted mother, a cordial friend, she was a model for future generations. To Israel and Paulina Harmon were born four sons and three daughters: 1. George W., born January 27, 1821, died in Suffield, Connecticut; married Mary St. John, of Simsbury, Connecticut, and they had one son, George A., who married Helen Wright, of Suffield, and one daughter, Anna, who married Rev. J. H. Laird, of Hinsdale, Massachusetts. 2. Eliza, July 23, 1822, married Anson Warner, and died at Marshall, Wisconsin. 3. Oliver, July 3, 1824, lived in Ohio; died unmarried in Suffield, Connecticut, January 7, 1857. 4. Martha, December 29, 1829, died August 7, 1857; married Charles W. Denslow, of Rainbow, Windsor, Connecticut; they had one son, Harmon, who died in California at twenty years of age; and one daughter Katie, who married a Mr. Morgan, and had one son, and is now living at Mendocino, California. 5. Israel, mentioned below. 6. Julia Annette, April 17, 1837, died at Suffield, October 28, 1867; she married Horace M. Gillette and lived at Fairbury, Illinois; they had a son, Harmon, who died when about twenty-five years old; and a son Henry, who resides in Chicago. 7. Julius Alonzo, twin to Julia Annette, married (first) Elizabeth Morgan, of West Springfield, by whom he had one son, Julius A.; they resided at North Adams, Massachusetts; she died and he married (second) ———, and (third) ———; he died and was buried at West Suffield.

(VII) Israel (3), third son of Israel (2) and Paulina (Harmon) Harmon, was born on his father's farm in Suffield, Connecticut, November 19, 1834. He was educated in the public schools and at Williston Seminary,

Easthampton, Massachusetts, and Wesleyan Academy, Wilbraham, Massachusetts. After leaving school he resided at West Suffield and was a successful farmer and school teacher. In 1867 he removed to Springfield, Massachusetts, and since that time has owned and carried on with success the business of the Springfield Dye House. Mr. Harmon is proud of his ancestry, and was to have responded at the celebration of the bi-centennial anniversary of the town of Suffield, to the following, to wit: "The first settlers of Suffield, Samuel and Joseph Harmon, and their associates;" but, unfortunately he was not able to be present to deliver it, and it was read by another. Mr. Harmon's response was as follows:

"Mr. President: Americans are a proud people, and justly so. To be able to say our in connection with the world's only republic that has realized the hopes of the oppressed and the theories of Philanthropists, is a source of pride higher than Roman orator or Athenian philosopher could ever glory in. Natives of Suffield are a proud people, and today as they view its religious and educational institutions, its thrift and prosperity, its patriotic record, who shall say their pride is not justifiable? The Harmon's are this day proud—proud of this town, planted by their ancestors through toil and suffering, and peril, and which today is without superior in this our favored land. They are proud of their descendants, who have never furnished lawbreakers for jails or prisons, but have well filled all positions in the gift of their townsmen, in religious, educational, Masonic and political organizations, and furnished judges and other officers for Ohio and other states. I, one of the youngest of the Harmon's, in the light of legend, tradition, history, look back through centuries to the time when Samuel and Joseph Harmon, about one mile west from where we now stand, first found rude habitations, laid tribute on the virgin soil, and made a nucleus around which, and from which, originated Suffield, Connecticut's brightest jewel. Fellow citizens, look at your fertile fields, your beneficent institutions and your happy homes, and be convinced that those first settlers did more for the good of the human race than did the first great Napoleon. Have we today a duty to perform? Do not the prayers, toils, perils of our forefathers, the prosperity of the past, the result of their labors, call upon us with earnest voice never to prove recreant to our great privileges and responsibilities? Do they not more thrillingly than bugle notes urge us to high resolve and endeavor that Suffield future history may never put to shame its past, but grow brighter as centuries roll? May pure religion be the sure foundation of our future greatness; may our fair women be educated, industrious, pure mothers of noble patriots; may our brave men be refined, enterprising, guided, and guided only by the great principles of eternal truth, and may the Harmon's, wherever on earth's broad surface they may be, do credit to their brave forefathers, and ever turn with fond recollections to the glorious old town of Suffield which their ancestors planted."

Mr. Harmon takes pride in paying every obligation in full, and fulfilled every duty to church and state through Christ in God. He is a member of the North Congregational Church and the national and state societies and George Washington Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Mr. G. W. Harmon, of Bennington, was the historian of the Harmon family and since his death the mantle has fallen upon Israel Harmon, the subject.

In England, in the seventeenth century, the name was spelled Lummas, Lommas, or Lomis, but in the nineteenth century it was uniformly spelled Lomas, while in New England in the seventeenth century it was spelled Lomis, Lomys or Lomas, and in the nineteenth century it was with a few exceptions spelled Loomis. The common ancestor in New England of the Loomis family was Joseph Loomis, one of the first settlers of Windsor, Connecticut, in 1639. The Lummis family have, for their common ancestor, Edward Lomas, born about 1606; came from London, England, to New England in 1635 and settled in Ipswich, Massachusetts Bay Colony, as early as 1648. Of his six children John settled in Salem; Samuel in Hamilton, Nathaniel in Dover; Jonathan in Ipswich. The only son who went beyond the bounds of the Massachusetts Bay Colony was Edward who located in Cohansey, New Jersey. This family generally spell their name Lummis. The Lomas family are descended from Joseph Lomas, born in England about 1761, a soldier in the army of General Burgoyne and after the revolution in America, settled in Andover, Massachusetts, and died in Erie county, New York, about 1830. He had ten children, including six sons who married and had children.

(1) Joseph Loomis, immigrant ancestor, born in Braintree, Essex county, England, about 1590, came from London, England, in the "Susan & Ellen," Mr. Edward Payne, master, to Boston, Massachusetts Bay Colony, arriving July 17, 1638. He brought with him his wife, five sons and three daughters, and they migrated from Boston to the west side of the Connecticut river with Rev. Ephraim Huet who arrived at Windsor, August 17, 1639. This territory was in the possession of the Massachusetts Bay Colony who granted to Joseph Loomis from the plantation twenty-one acres of land adjoining Farrington river and he also had several large tracts of land on the east side of the river by purchase. He built his home near the mouth of the Farrington river on what was an island at high water during the spring freshets, hence the location was known as the Island. The name of his wife does not appear on the records. She died August 23, 1652, having borne him eleven children, and Joseph, the patriarch immigrant, died November 25, 1658. He was granted forty acres of land from the plantation, May 3, 1643, and resided in Farmington from 1652 to 1660. He returned to Windsor in 1660 and became a deacon of the church. He married (first) February 5, 1812, Rebecca, daughter of Benjamin and Polly (Mott) Waite, of Goshen. She was born in Martha's Vineyard about 1794, where her parents then resided and when she was a mere child the British landed on the island in quest of supplies for the army and when they reached the home of her parents they drove off the cattle, sheep and swine, but through her childish persuasion they consented to leave one cow upon which the family depended for milk. Four children were born to William and Rebecca (Waite) Loomis, as follows: 1. Luther (q. v.), born May 12, 1814. 2. Maria, February 12, 1816, married (first) Rufus Buell, and

She was born June 22, 1795, and died in 1872. The children of William and Lucinda (Thayer) Loomis were: 5. Mary, 1822, died in infancy. 6. Elizabeth A., May 24, 1835, married (first) John Damon, and (second) Le Roy Huntley, of Florence, Massachusetts. William Loomis, the father died October 13, 1854. He was a professional builder of bridges, having learned the carpenter's trade when a youth and his skill as a bridge architect is to be seen in the large bridges at Chicopee Falls, Miller's Falls and West Springfield, Massachusetts. He lived in Whately, Massachusetts, up to 1822 when he removed to the town of Hatfield, and when the town was divided he lived in Williamsburg, where he purchased a farm of eighty acres, erected new barns and remodeled the old dwelling house. He left the supervision of his farm largely to his eldest son Luther and superintended under Captain Damon the construction of all the large bridges constructed or rebuilt on the larger streams and rivers of the Connecticut valley, he returning to his family to spend the Sabbath. His earlier days, before establishing his skill as a bridge builder, were spent upon a farm on which he built a shop where he manufactured wooden bench vises and screws as used on all farms for rough carpentering and repairing. His farming was of the primitive style, a single plow stock fitted with an iron point with a wooden mould board and drawn by a single horse, all home-made, as he was equally skilled as a blacksmith and carpenter. His political views were in harmony with the Whig party, and he held the office of member of the school committee for a number of years.

(VIII) Luther, eldest son of William and Rebecca (Waite) Loomis, was born in Whately, Franklin county, Massachusetts, May

12, 1814, and he died in Haydenville where he moved after marriage, December 12, 1891. He was educated in the public school of his native town, attending only during the winter months and carrying on as best he could his father's farm in the season of farm work. As he reached his majority, he established a livery business, keeping his teams on the farm, which was a quarter mile east of Haydenville, but as business increased he removed his stables to the village in 1846, renting a large barn for the purpose. He continued in the livery stable business all his life, and also engaged in the hotel business with his son Byron. He also speculated in lumber, of which he was an excellent judge, and he bought the standing trees on various wood lots and prepared the timber for market, finding for it a ready sale. His cash capital when he began with this business was $700, and he owned twelve horses and supplied all the lumber used by the Haydens, the largest proprietors of Haydenville. He was enabled by his thrift and industry to buy the Haydenville Hotel, and pay for it in two years. He also dealt in cord-wood, which was the by-product of his wood lots, and while making money by merchandising the wood he became a large owner of land. He associated his son Byron in all his transactions, and to make him able to meet the demands of modern trade, in which his own want of education handicapped him, he sent him to the Wilbraham Academy, where he gained a good practical education. Mr. Loomis was a member of both the church and choir of the Methodist Episcopal denomination in Williamsburg, and when a church was formed at Haydenville he contributed to its building and to its support, by purchasing a pew which remains in the family in perpetuity. Luther Loomis married, December 29, 1835, Caroline, daughter of Job and Patience Cowing. She was born in Chesterfield, April 26, 1813, died June 28, 1867. The children of Luther and Caroline (Cowing) Loomis were born as follows: 1. Byron (q. v.), December 4, 1836. 2. Lucinda and 3. Lucretia (twins), August 13, 1837; both died young. 4. Sarah Ann, September 22, 1839, died December 14, 1850; burned to death in school house. 5. Luther J., February 25, 1842, died June 1, 1862, a soldier in the civil war and member of the Twenty-seventh Massachusetts Volunteers. 6. Mary S., March 9, 1848, died February 8, 1867. 7. Levi, November 24, 1851. After the death of the mother of these children, June 28, 1867, Mr. Loomis married (second) Thankful, daughter of Reuben Lawrence, who was living in 1908, making her home in the Haydenville House, Haydenville, Massachusetts. They had no children. Mr. Loomis was highly respected by the people of Hampshire county, and he served the county as deputy sheriff a number of years, during the term of High Sheriff Longley. He was also accustomed to advise the neighbors on business as well as legal subjects up to time of his death.

(IX) Byron, eldest child of Luther and Caroline (Cowing) Loomis, was born on a farm, Haydenville, Massachusetts, December 4, 1836. He was educated in the public school and Wilbraham Academy. In 1855 he became a partner with his father in his various business projects, and he proved himself careful and thrifty with excellent judgment and good business tact. He was in partnership with his father in the hotel business up to the time of his father's death in 1891, and afterwards alone. He closed up the hotel business in 1907 to give his entire attention to the care of his landed estate in Haydenville and Northampton, including farming land, store property and the Haydenville House. He was made a trustee and president of the Haydenville Savings Bank, and is a public-spirited citizen in various other lines of investment and progress. His fraternal affiliations with the Masonic order includes membership in the Hampshire Lodge, A. F. and A. M. and Jerusalem Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, Northampton, Massachusetts. He is liberal in his political views but not a party man. His religious views took him in the spiritualist belief and he was made treasurer of the Lake Pleasant Camp Meeting of 1908, and he strongly maintained the views of the Spiritualists when the subject was introduced, but he never intruded his belief, except when drawn out in friendly conference with inquirers. He married, May 10, 1859, Joanna L., daughter of Samuel D. and Laura (Fay) Woodburn, and sister of Mrs. Edwin F. Miller, a sketch of whose life appears in another part of this work. The children of Byron and Joanna L. (Woodburn) Loomis were: 1. Walter Byron, born May 10, 1860, died September 13, 1862. 2. Parker Byron, died in infancy.

The traditions of this very HERRICK ancient family claims their descent from Eric Ericke, a Danish chief who invaded Britain during the reign of Alfred, and having been vanquished by that prince, who compelled with his followers to repeople the western districts of East Anglia, the government of which he held as a fief of the English crown. He is recognized in history as "Erick, the King of those Danes who hold the countrie of East Angle." The Norman invasion found this name represented by Eric the Forester, who resided in Leicestershire, and possessed extensive domains along the sources of the Severn, and on the borders of Wales. He fought the invaders, was vanquished, then taken into favor by William, entrusted with important military commands, and at the end of a stormy and eventful life, died in peace on his estate in Leicestershire.

(I) Robert Eyricke, of Houghton, England, is the earliest of the name to whom kinship is confidently traced in a direct line. He lived in 1450, had a wife Agnes, and children, Robert, and Thomas next mentioned.

(II) Thomas Eyrick, gentleman, of Houghton, died 1518. He settled in Leicester, and is the first of the name on the books of the corporation, where he is recorded as a member of that body in 1511. His will dated August 25, 1517, was proved at Leicester, and he was buried in St. Martin's Church in the same city. His children were: Nicholas, John and Elizabeth.

(III) John, second son of Thomas Eyrick, was born in 1513, died April 2, 1589, at Leicester. In St. Martin's Church is a part thereof called "Heyrick's Chancel," used as a place of burial long ago by this family. On the tombstone of John Heyrick, Esq., and Mary Bond his wife, is found the following epitaph: "Here lieth the body of John Heyrick, late of this parish, who departed this life 2d of Aprill, 1589, being about the age of seventy-six. He did marry Marie, daughter of John Bond of Wardende, in the Countie of Warwicke, Esquire, and did live with the said Mary, in one house, full fifty-two yeares; and in all that time, never buried man, woman, or child, though they were sometimes twenty in household. He had yssue by said Marie, 5 sonnes and seven daughters. The said John was Mayor of this town in anno 1559, and again in anno 1572. The said Marie departed this life ye 8th day of December, 1611, being of the age of ninety-seven yeares. She did see before her departure, of her children, and her children's children, and their children to the number of 142." Their children were: Ursula, Agnes, Robert, Mary, Nicholas, Elizabeth, Helen, Thomas, Christiana, John, William and Alice.

(IV) Sir William, fifth son of John and Mary (Bond) Herrick, was born 1557, baptized December 9, 1562, and died March 2, 1653. He was apprenticed in 1573 or 1574 to his brother Nicholas, who was a goldsmith in London; and on the death of the latter, in 1592, "his real successor in the goldsmith's business in Cheapside was his younger brother and former apprentice, William." The trade of goldsmith was then one of the most lucrative and honorable that an Englishman could follow. It meant much more than dealing in jewelry and trinkets. The old Goldsmith's Guild had the exclusive power of coining money, and to its members belonged especially that irregular sort of banking, which, before it was assigned to a particular class of traders, was often resorted to by great merchants like Whittington and Gresham. The goldsmiths, whose shops were generally in Cheapside, were great money lenders and money changers. They were something between the pawnbrokers and bankers of modern times. Among the goldsmiths of this sort, in the time of Queen Elizabeth, William Herrick came to be the most eminent. The Queen herself was one of his best customers, employing Gresham, Duckett, and others, to conduct her foreign monetary business, she went to Herrick for the small loans and minor bargains to which she very often had a resort. So high was Elizabeth's opinion of Herrick, that she once sent him as ambassador to the Sultan of Turkey. And as a reward for his singular diplomatic success he was appointed to a lucrative position in the Exchequer, which he held through the remainder of this and the following reign of James. His title was that of principal jeweler or teller to the crown. On Easter Tuesday, in 1605, says an envious letter writer of the time, "one Master William Herrick, a goldsmith in Cheapside, was knighted for making a hole in the great diamond the King did wear. The party little expected the honor; but he did his work so well as won the King to an extraordinary liking of it." In the same year he again entered parliament as a member for Leicester. He was also chosen alderman of Farrington Without, but from this office, as well as from employment as sheriff of London, he was afterwards excused on payment of £300, "in respect," as it was said "that the said Sir William is the King's sworn servant, and can not so necessarily afford the daily service as behoveth." During the next dozen years or more, Sir William Herrick was in almost daily service of the court. Great sums of money were lent by him to the King in formal ways for public and private uses; and he also lent much money in the less regular ways of personal friendships. "Since my being teller," he wrote in a petition dated 1616, "I have lent his Majesty divers great sums of money gratis, which none of my fellows ever did, to my loss and disadvantage of at least £3,000." He was a rich man, and found good use for his riches in charitable works and schemes for local improvement in Leicester and its neighborhood. In that vicinity, at his fine estate of Beau Manor Park, he seems to have settled down, as a retired merchant of great wealth, in or near the year 1624. There he lived splendidly and happily, dealing kindly with his tenants, and winning their hearts, love and esteem. He lived in well-employed retirement for nearly thirty years. He married, 1596, Joan, daughter of Richard May, Esq., of London, and his wife Mary, daughter of a Mr. Hilderson, of Devonshire, born 1578, died July 3, 1645. She was famous in her day for her piety and her beauty. They had twelve children: William, Robert, Richard, Thomas, Elizabeth (died young), Henry, Roger, John, Mary, Martha, Dorothy and Elizabeth.

(V) Henry, son of Sir William and Joan (May) Herrick, whose name was sometimes written Henerie Hiereck, Hericke or Herrick, was born at Beau Manor, county of Leicester, England, in 1604. He was named by command of the unfortunate Prince Henry, eldest son of James I. His sponsors were Sir David Murray, Sir John Spillman and Lady Aston. Various circumstances lead to the belief that this Henry Herrick settled in Salem, Massachusetts, though there is no positive and direct proof of it. Upham in his "Salem Witchcraft" says: "Henry Herrick * * * who purchased the Cherry Hill farm of Alford was the fifth son of Sir William Herrick, of Beau Manor Park, in the parish of Loughborough, in the county of Leicester, England. He came first to Virginia and then to Salem. He was accompanied to America by another emigrant from Loughborough, named Cleveland. Herrick became a member of the First Church at Salem in 1620, and his wife Edith about the same time." Another states: "Henry Herrick settled on 'Cape-Ann-Side' of Bass River (now Beverly), on which his farm was bounded. He purchased several farms at Birch Plains and Cherry Hill, on which he settled his sons Zacharie, Ephraim, Joseph and John." He was a husbandman in easy circumstances, but undistinguished by wealth, or by civil rank or influence in the colony. He was a very good and honest dissenter from the established church and the friend of Higginson, who had been a dissenting minister in Leicester. Mr. Herrick and his wife Editha were among the thirty who founded the first church in Salem, in 1639; and on the organization of the new parish, on "Ryal-Syde," 1667, they, with their sons and their sons' wives, were among the founders of the first church in Beverly, also. But there are reasons to suspect that neither Henry nor his sons were at all times, and in all things quite as submissive to the spiritual powers of their day as they should have been. On the records of Essex county is an entry like this: "Henerie Hericke and Edith, his wife, are fined 10s. and 11 s. for costs of Court for aiding and comforting an excommunicated person, contrary to order." He married Editha, daughter of Hugh Larkin, of Salem, who was born 1614, and was living 1674, and they are said to have had twelve sons and several daughters. Seven sons and a daughter survived their father and are named in his will. They were: Thomas, Zacharie, Ephraim, Henry, Joseph, Elizabeth, John and Benjamin.

(VI) Henry (2), fourth son of Henry and Editha (Larkin) Herrick, was baptized January 16, 1640, died in June, 1702. He inherited the Homesteading, at lower Beverly, a pleasant and valuable farm a part of which remained in the ownership and possession of the family until about 1850. He served as a juror at the witchcraft trials in Salem, in 1602. His first wife's maiden name is thought to have been Lydia Woodbury. By her he had five children: Lydia, Joseph, Elizabeth, Samuel and Jonathan. He married (second) 1690, Sarah, widow of John Giddings, of Gloucester, who died in 1711.

(VII) Jonathan, youngest child of Henry (2) and Lydia (Woodbury) Herrick, was baptized in 1672, died in 1724. He resided in Beverly whence he removed to Concord, where he had considerable property, in mills &c. He married (first) October 28, 1696, Elizabeth Dodge, born in 1672, died March 13, 1712, daughter of William Dodge. Their children were: Elizabeth, William, Hannah, Rebecca, Jonathan and Lydia. He married (second) September 13, 1713, Bethia Conant, of Beverly, by whom he had: Israel, a son, Mary, Lucy, and Joseph, next mentioned.

James H. H. H.

(VIII) Joseph, youngest child of Jonathan and Bethia (Conant) Herrick, was born in 1720, died March 16, 1795. He was born in Concord, Massachusetts, bought a farm in Groton, in 1744, and sold to Josiah Conant in 1746. He then lived in Townsend, Vermont, and finally settled in Brattleborough, in that state. He married, in 1742, Lois Cutler, of Chelmsford, Massachusetts, who died August 5, 1812, aged ninety-two. Their children were: Jonathan, Joseph, Shadrach, Lois, Amos, Abner, Bethiah and Mary.

(IX) Jonathan (2), eldest child of Joseph and Lois (Cutler) Herrick, was born September 26, 1743, died October 1828, in Brattleborough, Vermont. He married, 1770, Mehitable French, born March 10, 1751, died March 20, 1836. They had twelve children, as follows: Jonathan, Lydia, Mehitable, Elizabeth, John, Edith, Nathaniel, Joseph, Seth, Elizabeth Lucinda and Asa.

(X) Nathaniel, son of Jonathan (2) and Mehitable (French) Herrick, was born in Brattleborough, March 7, 1782, died October 2, 1853. He was a farmer and resided at Dummerston, in Windham county. He married (first) 1806, Lydia Eastman, born March 27, 1784, died February 19, 1825. Their children were: Esther, Harriet, Nancy, James and John. He married (second) January, 1826, Widow Anna Tenney, by whom he had: Jonathan Tenney, Lydia Eastman and Nathaniel.

(XI) Rev. James, son of Nathaniel and Lydia (Eastman) Herrick, was born in Broome, Province of Quebec, where his parents were temporarily residing, March 19, 1814, died in Brattleborough, Vermont, December 1, 1891, after an attack of heart disease lasting but a short time. Early in his life the family returned to the West Village in Brattleborough, and there he received the beginning of his education. His later childhood he spent in Newfane and West Dummerston. Determining on a more complete education he improved his opportunity as a youth to study at Brattleborough Academy. It was necessary for him to teach a district school in the winter that he might pay his way in preparation for college, and some of the time he boarded two miles away, but that was not an insuperable hardship for one of his vigor and stalwart purpose. One who knew him well, Rev. Mr. Grout, wrote of him: "He was eminently diligent, faithful, successful in all his studies, and was noted for his regular punctual attendance, upon every recitation and other engagement or duty." While he was in his academy course he first united with the Congregational church, on confession of his faith, being then twenty years of age. After the completion of his preparatory course he entered Williams College in 1837 and graduated in 1841. He taught school a year in Brattleborough, after which he entered Andover Theological Seminary, from which he graduated in 1845. In this course he steadily looked forward to foreign mission work, to which he had given himself body and soul. He was ordained as a missionary, October 8, 1845, and November 12, 1845, accompanied by his young wife, he set sail for the far-off land of India, the land that was to be the scene of his great life work. He went to Madura, South India, where he entered earnestly into his work, being supported by the American Board Commissioners of Foreign Missions. In 1864, after sixteen years service there, he returned to this country with his family and remained three years. He then returned with his wife and two sons and resided in India till 1883. Then on account of impaired health he left the scene of his labors, where thirty-seven years before his missionary work began, and spent his last years at Brattleborough. His heart was consecrated to his task as a missionary and he loved the poor people to whom he had given his best years, and he was often heard to say that he would gladly go back to that land and die. Mr. Herrick's devotion to the cause of foreign missions was ever sturdy, warm and strong, and did not abate when failing health compelled him to leave the field. His eminent natural fitness for such a work was seen in part, in his naturally strong constitution, and general good health. But for these, the heavy strain of mission work in such a field as that of India, would have made his days few and feeble instead of active and useful, as he was until his death. The last Sabbath of his life was an illustration of his constant purpose. He then performed his religious duties in their order as far as his strength would allow. He attended the morning church service; then the Sabbath school; then the Young People's meeting; and there he had to stop, not because he wanted to, but because he must. His Sabbath duties were only a portion of his work. He did much that was pastoral through the week; visiting the aged, the sick, the deserted, the desolate and afflicted. He corresponded much with christian workers and those whom he could comfort and cheer. He let his light shine among his neighbors and in society, and he was able in advancing the cause of Christ on earth. He would counsel for the welfare of the church and community, giving his views with clearness and cogency, yet with carefulness, lest he should offend and spoil the work. "One would search far to find a better illustration among men of what it is to follow the Lord with singleness of heart in all Christian life." The distinguishing features of his character were christian faith, love, sincerity and fidelity. At the last commencement of Williams College previous to his death he had the great joy of meeting there some of the few remaining classmates on the fiftieth anniversary of their graduation. He was fond of music, a fine singer, often led the choir, and was always ready to give himself body and soul, spirit and understanding also, to the service of song, whenever duty or privilege opened the way.

James Herrick married, November 2, 1845, Elizabeth Hopkins Crosby, of West Brattleborough. She was born January 27, 1817, died September 23, 1900. Her parents were Thomas and Katherine (Burt) Crosby. The children of this marriage were: A daughter, Mary Elizabeth, Catherine Harriet, deceased; James Frederick, Catherine Lydia, William Henry, Emily Jane, Joseph T., Ellen Maria and David Scudder. All were born in India. Four died in India and were buried there. Of the six who survived their father, James Frederick, born June 14, 1851, graduated from Williams College, 1875, was for several years on the staff of the Springfield Republican, and was later connected with the New York World. The second son, William H., born January 24, 1855, is a frontier missionary and is stationed in Utah. Joseph T. is mentioned at length below. The youngest son, David Scudder, born March 29, 1863, graduated at Williams College in 1884, and taught in India several years. Subsequently he fitted for missionary work in Union Theological Seminary. Mary Elizabeth, born October 2, 1847, married John H. Dunklee and resides in the West Village, and with her resided her parents in their old age, the constant objects of her care and oversight. Emily Jane, born June 16, 1857, married Rev. George E. Martin, now of Lowell, Massachusetts.

(XII) Dr. Joseph Thomas, son of Rev. James and Elizabeth H. (Crosby) Herrick, was born in the city of Maruda, South India, August 17, 1859. He resided with his parents until they visited their home in New England in 1864, when he accompanied them, making the voyage from Madras to London on the sailing packet "Renown," one of the Green line of ships. This vessel had as passengers a regiment of English soldiers returning from service in India. It made the voyage around the Cape of Good Hope, as all ships were then compelled to do, and took three months to complete it. After staying two years at Brattleborough, Vermont, he returned with his parents to India, making the passage from London to Madras on the ship "Isabella." After his return he remained six years in India, where his primary instruction was given him by his mother. In 1872 he returned to America with Rev. William B. Capron, on the steamship "Viceroy," of the Green line, passing through the Suez Canal, which had recently been completed. In each instance the voyage from Liverpool, England, to New York was made on one of the steamers of the Cunard line. On arriving in America he went to Newton, Massachusetts, where he resided at the Missionary Home, and attended the common schools till he was sixteen years of age. He then entered the St. Johnsbury Academy at St. Johnsbury, Vermont, from which he graduated in 1880. He then entered the medical department of the University of the City of New York where he took the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1883. The succeeding year and a half he was resident physician and surgeon in the almshouse and work house at Blackwell's Island, where he had the benefits of a busy practice and a widely extended experience which greatly added to his knowledge of medicine and surgery and fitted him for his private practice. In 1885 Dr. Herrick settled in Springfield, Massachusetts, and began practice which he carried on successfully until 1897, when he gave it up in order to take care of the large property interests of which he has the management. For some time he was assistant surgeon of the Second Regiment, Massachusetts State Militia, and also visiting physician of the Springfield Hospital. He is a member of the Hampden District Medical Society, the Springfield Medical Club, the Massachusetts Medical Society, and the American Medical Society. Although domestic in his tastes and habits, he maintains membership in the Nyasset Club, the Winthrop Club, the Country Club, the Hyannisport Country Club, the Automobile Club of Springfield, and the St. Bernard Fishing Club of Quebec. In politics he is a Republican. He is a member of Hope Congregational Church, member of its parish committee and chairman of its music committee. In 1905, accompanied by his wife and son, he visited the British Isles and made a quite thorough trip through the four kingdoms. He has also visited the Pacific slope, the southern states and parts of Canada, and in the year 1907-08 traveled twenty thousand miles by automobile. September 8, 1886, Dr. Joseph T. Herrick married Mary Florence Fairbanks, (see Fairbanks VIII) who was born July 26, 1859, daughter of Colonel Franklin and Frances A. (Clapp) Fairbanks, of St. Johnsbury, Vermont. She was educated in the public schools and at Miss Porter's school of Farmington, Connecticut. They have one son, Paul Fairbanks, born July 19, 1887, who graduated from Monson Academy in 1908, and is now a member of the class of 1912, Trinity College.

(The Fairbanks Line).

Nearly all persons in the United States bearing the name of Fairbanks or Fairbank, except by marriage, are related by direct descent from Jonathan, the first, while there are many who take a justifiable pride in tracing their lineage back to mothers born to the inheritance. The immigrant often wrote his name Fairbanke, and occasionally ffayerbanke. In his will and the inventory of his property there appears the variations ffarbanke, ffarebanks, Fairbaneke. Among the members of this ancient family are many who have distinguished themselves in the professions, in business and in politics, and one has filled the office of vice-president of the United States; another has been governor of a state, and many have been notable in the arts and industries; among the latter those of the later generations of the present line.

(1) Jonathan Fairbanks came from Sowerby in the West Riding of Yorkshire, England, to Boston, Massachusetts, in the year 1633, and in 1636 settled in Dedham, where he first built the noted "Old Fairbanks House," which is still standing as an ancient landmark, the oldest dwelling in New England which for the same period of time has been continuously owned and occupied by the builder and his lineal descendants. He was one of the earliest settlers of Dedham, which was established 1636, and signed the covenant, March 23, 1637. Before 1637 Jonathan Fairbanks had been granted at least one of the twelve-acre lots into which the first allotment was divided, with four acres of swamp land, for the same year he received as his proportion of a further allotment four acres of "Swamp" land, this additional grant being made on account of the swampy condition of a portion of the first grant. In 1638 he was appointed with others "to measure out those polls of meadow which adjoin to men's lots, and to mete out so much meadow in several parcels as is allotted unto every man according to the grant made unto them." In 1638 he was allowed six acres more, which was later exchanged for other land; and at other times following he received various small grants. He was admitted townsman and signed the covenant in 1654. He died in Dedham, December 5, 1668. His wife's name was Grace Lee. She died "28th 10 Mo. 1673." Their children were all born in England, as follows: John, George, Mary, Susan, Jonas and Jonathan.

(II) Captain George, second son of Jonathan and Grace (Lee) Fairbanks, came with his parents from England. He resided in Dedham until about 1657, when he removed to the southern part of Sherborn (afterward Medway and now Mills), where he was the first settler. In 1648 he owned some land and a dwelling house in Dedham. In that year he received a grant of a small parcel of land "as it lye against the side of his own yard for an enlargement and to set a Barne upon it." In Medfield, afterward Medway, he established a homestead which remained in the family name for several generations. His dwelling was the famous stone house near the northern border of Bogestow pond in the eastern part of the town, which is now included within the limits of the town of Mills, incorporated in 1885. This house was originally a garrison house, built by the residents of Bogestow farms unitedly as a place of refuge and defence, to which they could flee in times of danger from the attacks of hostile Indians. It was sixty-five or seventy feet long, and two stories high. The walls were built of flat stones laid in clay mortar. It had a double row of port holes on the sides, and was lined with heavy oak plank. The stones have all been carried away, and the spot where the building stood is unmarked. In 1662 George, with thirteen of his neighbors, signed the first petition for the incorporation of Sherborn. Again in 1674 he and twelve others signed a second petition which was successful, and by an act of the general court the petitioners and twenty more of such as they might consent to receive as inhabitants, were constituted proprietors of lands now comprising Sherborn, Holliston, and large districts of Framingham and Ashland. After the formation of the town he seems to have been an active citizen, engaged in public affairs. For four years he was selectman, and was chosen on a committee to engage and settle a minister. He was also a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company. He was drowned January 10, 1682. He was a man of sterling character, and a model pioneer. His descendants are found in almost every state of the Union, and in Canada and Nova Scotia. George Fairbanks married, "the 26 of the 8 mo., 1646," Mary Adams, of Dedham, who died August 11, 1711, in Mendon, Massachusetts, probably at the home of her son-in-law, William Holbrook. The children of George and Mary were: Mary, George, Samuel, Eliesur, Jonas, Jonathan and Margaret.

(III) Eliesur, third son of Captain George and Mary (Adams) Fairbanks, was born "the 8 of the 4 mo., 1665," and lived in Sherborn. In 1676 he drew a home lot of eighteen acres on the main street in Sherborn, adjoining Peter's Hill. He was selectman in 1703. The baptismal name of his wife was Martha. There is no record of the death of either of them. Their children were: Mary, Martha, Lydia, Margaret, Mercy, and Eliesur, next mentioned.

(IV) Captain Eliesur (2), only son and youngest child of Eliesur and Martha Fairbanks, was born in Sherborn, December 29, 1690. He resided in that town till his death September 19, 1741. He married Martha, daughter of Captain Samuel Bullard, December 25, 1712. She married (second) John Phips, December 22, 1743, and removed to Brookfield. The children of Captain Eliesur and Martha were: Eliesur, Joseph, Deborah, Moses, Sarah, Martha, Abel, Abigail (died young), David, Abigail, Ebenezer and Mary.

(V) Deacon Ebenezer, sixth son of Captain Eliesur (2) and Martha (Bullard) Fairbanks, was born in Sherborn, June 1, 1734, died June 6, 1812. He was a lieutenant in Captain Henry Leland's company of minute-men which responded to the Lexington alarm, April 19, 1775. He served eleven days at that time and afterward served a short time as a private in the revolutionary war. He removed to Brimfield in 1783, and settled on a farm in the northeast part of the town. He was a man of repute and influence in the town, and a deacon of the church. He married, July 2, 1761, Elizabeth Dearth, born September 24, 1743, died in Monson, June 15, 1818. Their children were: Asa, Joseph, Betsey, Ebenezer, Henry, Thaddeus, Elizabeth and Levi.

(VI) Joseph, second son of Deacon Ebenezer and Elizabeth (Dearth) Fairbanks, was born in Sherborn, November 1, 1763, died suddenly September 27, 1846. When he was about twenty-one years old his father removed to Brimfield, Massachusetts, and after assisting him a time Joseph bought a farm there and settled down. Like the other members of his family he was naturally a mechanic and found profitable employment in building. In 1815 he decided to remove to Vermont where his brother-in-law, Judge Paddock, and his son Erastus were already settled. With $1800 received from the sale of his farm and the avails of his furniture and stock he had enough to buy a small water-power and timber with which he and his son built a dam, a saw mill, a grist mill, and a wagon shop. 1816 was the "year without a summer," and the family endured the hardships of pioneer life, together with the special discomfort of snow storms and frosts every month of that year. He was a manly man of the best New England type, much respected, and of great influence and ability, and with the aid of his sons he prospered remarkably. He married, October 21, 1790, Phebe Paddock, born September 6, 1760, died May 5, 1853, daughter of James and Ann Paddock, of Holland, Massachusetts. The Paddock family gave many honored citizens to Vermont, and the sons of Joseph Fairbanks owned their strength of character as much to their mother as to their father. These sons were: Erastus, Thaddeus and Joseph Paddock.

(VII) Governor Erastus, eldest child of Joseph and Phebe (Paddock) Fairbanks, was born in Brimfield, Massachusetts, October 28, 1792, in the little red house near the Sturbridge line, and died in St. Johnsbury, Vermont, November 20, 1864. Lorenzo S. Fairbanks in his "Genealogy of the Fairbanks Family," thus speaks of him: "He came to St. Johnsbury alone in 1812, and for ten years thereafter in that and neighboring towns had severe training in the school of difficulties and reverses. He acquired early maturity of character and purpose; habits of frugality, industry, persistence, knowledge of men and various business. Following the invention of the platform scale by his brother Thaddeus, he became head of the firm of E. and T. Fairbanks & Company, a position which he held for thirty years, during which time under his energetic and skillful management the business grew to large proportions and well established fame. In 1836 he was sent to the state Legislature, where from the first he was a leader, especially active in the interests of education and temperance. He was a presidential elector of the Whig party in 1844, and again in 1848. About this time he was actively pushing the construction of the Passumpsic railroad, of which he was president, from White River to St. Johnsbury, at which terminus he greeted the first engine in November, 1850. Two years later he was elected governor of Vermont, and among other important legislative acts he had the satisfaction of affixing his signature to the prohibitory liquor law, which with some modifications has ever since remained in force. In 1860 he was a second time called to the chief magistracy, this time to be known as the 'War Governor' of Vermont. This situation was at first exceedingly embarrassing, but the people had such confidence in his wisdom and integrity that 'the extra session of the legislature which met eight days after the firing on Fort Sumter, had the good sense to place at his entire disposal a million of dollars, putting no check upon the use of it only as his judgment might deem prudent and best. To those acquainted with his good judgment, strict integrity, his high sense of impartial right, his systematic business habits so early and continuously trained to grasp business matters on a large scale, the result was no surprise.' In acknowledgment of his delicate, laborious and successful official acts, joint resolutions most complimentary were praised by the Senate and House. On his retirement from office it was found that 'the salary to which he was entitled was never touched, and that it remains in the treasury of the state, another evidence of his generous love for Vermont, whose interests were dearer to him than his own, and an honor to both people and the executive.' From earliest manhood Governor Fairbanks was a devoted, active, public-spirited, christian man. He was for fifty years a pillar in the home church, Congregational, and in later life a member and officer of many benevolent boards, which he supported by liberal contributions of money, time and personal service. 'In christian efficiency he stood in the front rank of our most devoted lay-membership.' 'He could not brook low aims and poor performances. He was a positive quality and power. Just where God placed him he stood. Calmly he listened to the voice of duty. Resolutely he handled the simple and obvious elements of his destiny. He was both strenuous and patient, frank and reserved sincere and wary.' 'His candor, zeal, judgment, his promptness and recollection in the midst of most absorbing civil occupations, were too conspicuous for commendation, and blended gently with the precious friendships and fine liberality of spirit.' His death removed from the community a man of great original force, and long and varied usefulness." He married, May 30, 1815, Lois Crossman, born November 13, 1792, died May 15, 1866, daughter of Samuel and Lois (Chamberlain) Crossman. The children of this marriage were: Jane, George, Horace, Charles, Julia, Franklin, Sarah, Emily and Ellen.

(VIII) Colonel Franklin, fourth son of Hon. Erastus and Lois (Crossman) Fairbanks, was born in St. Johnsbury, June 18, 1828, died April 24, 1895. The Fairbanks Genealogy says of him: "He received a good academic education, and at the age of seventeen began his connection with the scale business, which was continued just fifty years. He had a natural turn for mechanics, and not only kept himself familiar with the details of construction, but patented various improvements, among them the revolving beam for letter balances adopted by the government for use in the post office. He was for many years superintendent of the corporation of E. & T. Fairbanks & Company, and after the death of his brother Horace in 1888 he succeeded to the presidency of this, and of other business organizations at home and elsewhere. He was a member of the staff of Governor Hall in 1858, also of Governor Erastus Fairbanks in 1860; was active in military affairs, and superintended the manufacture of artillery and harness irons for the government during the civil war. He represented the town in the state Legislature in 1871-72-73, the last two years being speaker of the house. For twenty years or more he was an active member of the state Republican committee. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity; in 1877 he received the honorary degree of Master of Arts from Dartmouth College. He was an intelligent lover of nature; from boyhood he was a keen observer and enthusiastic collector of objects of interest of every sort. His collections, which represented more than half a century's accumulation of increasingly rare value and variety, were shined in a conspicuous and architecturally elegant building which was incorporated and presented to the town of St. Johnsbury in 1891, under the designation of the Museum of Natural Science. This was designed to be one of the educational features of the town, affiliated with the Athenaeum, Academy, and Union Schools. Colonel Fairbanks was not only always active in business, but in social life: full of geniality and kindly humor; much interested in the welfare of children and young people. He maintained most friendly acquaintance with the factory men, and did much in this way to secure good feeling and prosperity to the business. For more than thirty years he was superintendent of the North Church Sunday school, also for a long time a member of the International Sunday School Lesson Committee. In these and other services to the interests of religion and of missions he worked with zeal, and added to the permanent influence of a useful Christian life." He married, December 8, 1852, Frances A., daughter of Rev. Sumner G. and Pamela (Strong) Clapp, of St. Johnsbury. She was born in Enfield, Massachusetts, November 2, 1831, died in Springfield, Massachusetts, February 4, 1895. They had four children: 1. Alfred, born December 8, 1857, died December 9, 1857. 2. Mary Florence, July 26, 1859, married, September 8, 1886, Dr. Joseph T. Herrick, of Springfield, Massachusetts (see Herrick XII). 3. Margaret, June 29, 1862, died August 26, 1863. 4. Ellen Henrietta, August 18, 1872, married, January 29, 1896, Frank H. Brooks, of St. Johnsbury.

The surname Burrell is doubt-
 BURRELL less derived from the name of a locality. There is an ancient town in Yorkshire called Burrell. Borel was in use as a personal name in 1086 and earlier, before surnames were used in England. The coat-of-arms of the ancient Burrell family, seated in the county of Northumberland, England, was: Sable a chevron between three mullets argent. Another armorial of the family seated at Malfield and Brome Park, Northumberland: On a saltire gules between four leaves vert on a chief azure a lion's head erased between two battle axes proper. Crest: An armed arm proper holding a bunch of burdock vert. Motto: Adhaero. A branch of the Northumberland family settled at Dowsby, Lincolnshire. Other important branches of the Burrell family were at Beckenham, county Kent, a younger branch of the Burrells of Holmsted, county Sussex, at Valentine House, county Essex, and at Woodland, Devonshire.

(I) John Burrell, immigrant ancestor, settled in Weymouth, Massachusetts, before 1659. He married Rebecca ———. In the list of possessions, December 14, 1664, it appears that he had five acres of land, with thirty-three lots. In the second division on the Braintree line, he had fifteen acres, forty-one lots. His homestead is described in the records of the proprietors as three acres in the range first granted to Nicholas Norton, on the highway bounded by land of Thomas Bugbee on the west, of Hugh Roe on the north and of Goodman Hughes on the south. He owned an acre in King Oke Hill adjoining land of Thomas Dyer: two acres in the range first granted to Robert Jeffery. Children, born at Weymouth: 1. John, mentioned below. 2. Thomas, February 2, 1659. 3. Ephraim, July 19, 1664, married Lydia ———; and had children: Lydia Mary, Samuel, Ephraim, John and Sarah, all at Weymouth.

(The Bates Line).

The family of Bates, Bate or Batt, as it was variously spelled, is ancient in England, and many members of the family in England as well as America, have been distinguished. The Bates coat-of-arms is: A lion's head erased, gules. The name is a form of Bertelot (Bartlett), derived from the old name Bartholomew, when surnames came into vogue. Five generations of the family are traced in England in direct line of ancestry of Clement Bates, of Hingham, the immigrant.

(I) Thomas Bates lived in Lydd, parish of All Hallows, county Kent, England, and died there in 1485.

(II) John, son of Thomas Bates, died in 1522.

(III) Andrew, son of John Bates, had four sons and died at Lydd in 1533.

(IV) John (2), son of Andrew Bates, died at Lydd in 1580, leaving three sons.

(V) James, son of John (2) Bates, died at Lydd in 1614. Among his children authorities give the three American pioneers of this name: Clement of Hingham, Edward of Weymouth, mentioned below, and James of Dorchester.

(I) Elder Edward Bates, immigrant ancestor of this branch of the family, was born in England in 1605 and came from Boston or vicinity, Lincolnshire, to America. He joined the first church in Boston in November, 1633, and is called "man servant to our brother Thomas Leverett." He was among the fifty-seven inhabitants of Boston who in 1638 were disarmed for heresy, on account of their being followers of Ann Hutchinson. He was admitted a freeman, March 13, 1638-39, and was a proprietor of Weymouth in 1643. He was deputy to the general court in 1639-40-41, and again in 1660. He was a commissioner to end small causes in Weymouth in 1639-43. He was selectman in 1643 and was often employed by the town in legal matters. For more than thirty years he held the office of elder of the church, and held many offices of trust in the town. He owned a saw mill and corn mill. This cognomen has been made BOOTH prominent by numerous distinguished citizens of Europe and America. Among them are Sir Felix Booth, a wealthy manufacturer; Barton Booth, the actor; Ballington Booth, of the Salvation Army; Charles Booth, the author; Henry Booth, Earl of Warrington; and Junius Brutus Booth, the tragedian—all Englishmen. In America Edwin Booth, the tragedian, has made the name a household word. In the revolutionary war there were twenty-one enlistments in Massachusetts and twenty-four in Connecticut under this name, which is also spelled Boothe, Booths, Both and Bouth.

(1) Robert Booth, of Exeter, 1645, moved to Saco, Maine, in 1653, or earlier, and took a prominent part in the affairs of that town. He was representative from 1659 to 1670. Kidlon in his "Saco Valley Settlements and Families" says: "At this day the Court had the control of ecclesiastical affairs, and when, in 1643, the town was found to be destitute of a minister, the commissioners ordered while at court in Wells, that Robert Booth, a citizen of some education, 'have liberty to exercise his gifts for the edification of the people.' Assisted financially by an annual appropriation voted by the town, and voluntary contributions, he 'held forth' as a preacher for some years. Those he could not edify he probably mortified." Robert Booth died in 1672, aged sixty-eight. The probate of his will without date, made four days before he died, was made March 10, 1673, but the inventory was taken October 26 preceding. Robert Booth was married twice. The name of the first wife is not known. His second wife, Deborah, survived him. His children were: Mary, Ellen (or Elinor), Simeon (Simon), Martha, Robert, Mary, born September 30, 1627, married Walter Penewell; Ellen, born February, 1634, married Nicholas Bully; Simeon is mentioned below; Martha, born April 12, 1645, married John Lighthouse Jr.; Robert, born July 24, 1655.

(11) Simeon (Simon), the elder of the two sons of Robert Booth, born May 10, 1641, seems to have found life in Maine in the midst of savages often at war with the whites too strenuous for him, and he removed to Enfield, Connecticut, where he became a man of wealth and prominence. He is a party to many conveyances. December 7, 1693, Simon (Simeon) Booth, of Enfield, makes "a marriage deed" to Widow Elizabeth Eleaser, of Hartford, Connecticut; one-third of all land in Enfield; one hundred and thirty acres at Winter Harbor near Sagadahoc (Maine). July 26, 1696, Simeon Booth and wife Elizabeth convey to his son, Zachariah Booth, ten acres in the south field, river division, and five acres on Scantick river. October 14, 1696, Simeon Booth and wife Elizabeth convey to John Pryor, of Symsbury, Connecticut, all rights to Enfield lands, twelve acres house lot, Main street, east; thirteen acres in the South field, west division; ten acres in the South field, fourth division; and four acres near Freshwater meadows. November 13, 1696, Simeon Booth, weaver, and wife Elizabeth make an agreement in writing concerning alienation of Elizabeth Booth's rights as given her in marriage contract, given above; witness, John Pynchon (2d), Samuel Ely, John Holyoke.

Elizabeth Booth, of Hartford, Connecticut, widow of Simeon Booth, late of Hartford, Connecticut, deceased, and administratrix on his estate, made a power of attorney to Caleb Standley Jr. to collect of John Pryor all sums due the estate of said Simeon Booth, July 1, 1703. Simeon Booth, "late deceased in Hartford, left property inventoried at £67 10s; debts £28 14s; having distributed in his lifetime most of his property among his children. Simon (Simeon) Booth married (first) Rebecca Frost; (second) Elizabeth Elmer. The children by the first wife were: William, Zachariah, Elizabeth and Mary; by second wife: Sarah and Phebe.

(III) Zachariah, second son of Simeon and Rebecca (Frost) Booth, was born about 1666. He was the grantee of many pieces of land, and the records contain many entries of conveyances by him to others. He was a very active man, a good citizen, and the holder of several offices. In conveyances he is referred to as yeoman and husbandman. He married (first) Mary Warriner; (second) Mary Harmon. By the first he had one child, Robert; by the second nine children: John, Mary, Benjamin, Sarah, Elizabeth, Jemima, Joseph, Benjamin and Abigail.

(IV) Joseph, third son of Zachariah and Mary (Harmon) Booth, was born in Enfield, April 10, 1710, died November 9, 1784. He married Sarah Chandler, daughter of Henry and Lydia Chandler; she died August 16, 1777. Their children were: Joseph, Sarah (died young), Isaac, Samuel, Zachariah, Sarah, Henry, David and Mehitabel.

(V) Captain Joseph (2), eldest child of Joseph (1) and Sarah (Chandler) Booth, was born in Enfield, October 17, 1736, died February 4, 1810. He was a popular and influential citizen, a leader in the church, and a captain in the militia. He was an ensign in the force from Enfield which responded to the Lexington alarm, April 18, 1775, and served six days. He enlisted again May 15, 1775, and served as a private until October 30, in the Eighth Company, Jo. Smith, captain, of the Fifth Regiment, Colonel Waterbury's. He was ensign in the Seventh Company, John Simons, captain, Colonel Wolcott's regiment, which was in service about Boston between December, 1775, and February, 1776; and was second lieutenant in Captain Hezekiah Parson's company (Second) of the Third Battalion, Wadsworth's brigade, Colonel Sage. This battalion was raised June 26, 1776, to reinforce Washington at New York, and served in New York City and on Long Island. It was caught in the retreat from the city, September 15, and suffered some loss. It was engaged at the battle of White Plains, October 28. Its time expired December 25, 1776. In church affairs he was prominent. In the annual meeting of First Ecclesiastical Society in Enfield, he was chosen moderator 1778-79-80-81-82-84 and 1804. In 1780 it was voted to choose a committee to see if they can agree to come together or agree upon a method of peaceably supplying the pulpit, and Captain Booth was one of those selected. He also served on other important committees, often being a member of the Society's standing committee "for the year ensuing." His will dated June 2, 1809, was presented for probate, February 28, 1810. His son David was executor. He married, October 21, 1762, Mary Hale, daughter of William Hale, of Enfield. Their children were: Mary, David, Annis, Lydia, Joseph, Peter, Eliphalet, Independence and Hannah.

(VI) David, eldest son of Captain Joseph (2) and Mary (Hale) Booth, was born in Enfield, Connecticut, March 2, 1765, and died in Longmeadow, Massachusetts, April 12, 1827. When a young man he left the ancient seat of his ancestors and went a few miles north, where he obtained work of the widow of Samuel Colton, "Marchant," by far the richest man in Longmeadow, and its most aristocratic citizen during the period antedating the American Revolution. Young Booth was shrewd and diligent, and in a comparatively short time was entrusted with the management of the widow's property, and on September 11, 1794, was celebrated the marriage of David Booth and Margaret Colton, daughter of Samuel and Lucy (Colton) Colton (see Colton V). He was a farmer and spent the major part of his life in cultivating the soil; he left a large property. Margaret (Colton) Booth died January 7, 1817, and David Booth married (second) Peggy Burt, daughter of Elijah and Deborah (Colton) Burt, of Longmeadow. She was born September 14, 1768, and died February 23, 1837. The children of David and Margaret were: 1. David, born December 10, 1796, died April 12, 1827. 2. Lucy, December 11, 1798. 3. Peggy, October 3, 1800, married, April 19, 1830, Rev. Francis Bartlett. 4. Joseph, October 19, 1802, married, January 22, 1829, Sophronia Colton, and died September, 1867, at Warsaw, Iowa. 5. Flavia, December 23, 1804, married, December 16, 1828, Rev. Amasa Converse. 6. Mary, September 8, 1807, married, October 21, 1849, Paul A. Haralson, Stone Mountain, Georgia. 7. Sarah, December 17, 1809, married September 23, 1834, Rev. Jonathan Cable. 8. Samuel C., mentioned below.

(VII) Samuel Colton, youngest child of David and Margaret (Colton) Booth, was born at Longmeadow, May 6, 1812, died there September 23, 1895. He received his education in the schools of Longmeadow and in the old Amherst Academy. He was left an orphan when only fourteen years old, and soon after was obliged to lay aside his books. Mr. Booth's career was a remarkable illustration of the ordering of a whole life with one end in view, and that end the gratification of a scientific instinct. Mr. Booth's strong taste for mineralogy in particular manifested itself very early in life. But he was a poor farmer when he was a young man, and could give but little time to the subjects which interested him most. With the object clearly in view of making himself independent in a material way, Mr. Booth spent the first fifty years of his life in unremitting toil, carefully and skillfully cultivating his farm in Longmeadow, practicing economy and wisely investing his surplus funds. At the end of that period he found himself in the position in which he had been trying to reach, and from that time until he became too weak to move about his house, he was busily at work. The subjects of his study were mineralogy, geology and general natural history. Mr. Booth secured a license to shoot birds, and his collection of mounted specimens of our native birds is interesting and fairly complete. His collection of minerals and fossils was almost unlimited, nearly every available nook and corner of the buildings on his premises being filled during his life with specimens. His collection of Indian relics was without doubt the largest in the vicinity, and included specimens from almost every state in the union and from Canada. Mr. Booth made a practice of searching carefully through every locality in which he chanced to be staying, and a considerable proportion of his collection was in this way gathered in Canada, New York, Michigan, Illinois and Iowa. From 1872 he passed eleven summers on the Long Island coast, and his collections there, together with the work done by his wife, were of most valuable assistance to his invalid daughter, Mary A. Booth, in her studies of marine natural history. During the twelve years preceding his death he made numerous exchanges which brought him specimens from all parts of this country and not a few from Europe. In fact the rocks and minerals of all countries were represented in his collections. The success of Mr. Booth's efforts is the more wonderful when the circumstances under which he worked are taken into consideration. Living in a locality devoid of interest in the studies which most interested him, Mr. Booth worked persevering and steadily when it seemed as if the result of his collections must be solely the pleasure which he himself derived from them. But they gave him a happy old age, and an interest in life at a period when most interests fail. Indeed, Mr. Booth's physician positively stated that his interest in nature was the means of prolonging his life. One of Mr. Booth's last acts before he became too weak, was to prepare a number of boxes of assorted minerals for use in the grammar schools of Springfield. He lived to see the completion of the new art building, and one of his last works before he became ill was the preparation of a collection of minerals for that institution, and the last remnant of his strength was employed in preparing this gift. Indeed, it was over-fatigue in this work which induced the final collapse. During the last few months of his life Mr. Booth often expressed his gratification that the most of his life had not been in vain, inasmuch as he was leaving behind a mass of information which would be of great value to intelligent people in general. Mr. Booth's gift of his valuable collection gave the impetus to the movement which resulted in the building of the Science Museum; until this building was completed the collection was stored in the basement of the art building. Mr. Booth was a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Samuel C. Booth married (first) November 20, 1833, Mary Ann Allard, born about 1815, daughter of Hiram Allard, of Wilbraham. She died May 21, 1839, leaving one child, David, who was born in Longmeadow, August 9, 1837, and died August 18, 1907. He married (second) March 26, 1840, Rhoda Colton, born in Longmeadow, December 31, 1809, died March 7, 1883, daughter of Ebenezer C. and Phebe (Barton) Colton, of Oxford, Massachusetts. Of this marriage was born a daughter, Mary A., whose sketch follows.

(VIII) Mary Ann, only daughter of Samuel C. and Rhoda (Colton) Booth, was born in Longmeadow, September 8, 1843. In youth and early womanhood Miss Booth was an invalid, and she assisted her father in a manner to while away hours otherwise tedious. Soon she felt a strong interest in her father's scientific pursuits, and assisted and greatly encouraged him in his work. The knowledge acquired at the seashore led her to take an interest in marine natural history, which she soon made a special study. From that she went to microscopy and later photomicrography, in which science she has become one of the leaders, and a great part of her time is devoted to the photography of minute objects of interest to science. Her studies under the microscope began in 1877. She has never sought to make personal gain of her skill, although, if she cared to do so, she could get more work than she could do, making plates for scientific books and slides for stereopticons. This work is her recreation, due to her intense love of scientific research and nature study. Only two other women in the country are engaged in similar work. Miss Booth exhibited specimens of her work at the Louisiana International Exposition, held at St. Louis, 1904, and although others had exhibits of the same kind, she was the only one to receive a medal. She received first honor at the New Orleans exposition, 1885. In recognition of her work Miss Booth has been made member of the following scientific societies: Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, elected 1898; American Microscopic Society, 1882; American Association for the Advancement of Science, August, 1885; fellow of the same, 1894; New York Microscopical Society, 1890; National Geographic Society, 1899; fellow Royal Microscopical Society, London, England, 1889; Mercy Warren Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, May 12, 1900; Springfield Women's Club, and other organizations. The fellows of the American Association for the Advancement of Science are elected from such members as have by their labors aided in advancing science, and not many women have had the honor of election to this society. Only one other American woman is a fellow of the Royal Microscopic Society. April 6, 1896, in compliance with the wishes of her father, Miss Booth presented to the City Library Association of Springfield, the geological and mineralogical collections which Mr. Booth had spent so much of his life in collecting. So extensive and complete are the collections of Mr. Booth that this addition to the museum of the library makes a very satisfactory presentation of the mineralogy of Springfield and vicinity, and in view of this fact this division of the museum is known as the Booth department of local mineralogy. In January, 1902, Miss Booth loaned to the library the very extensive archaeological collection made by her father. This consists of Indian relics. The specimens now displayed in two table cases were classified and catalogued by Professor Albertus L. Dakin, of the Peabody Museum of Cambridge, who reports that the collection is of unusual value by reason of the different localities represented, and of the excellence and number of the implements. Nearly every state east of the Mississippi is represented. The following is a letter received by Miss Booth from Professor Bowne of the International Young Men's Christian Association Training School of Springfield, dated October 20, 1902:

Miss M. A. Booth,
60 Dartmouth St., City.

Dear Madam:

I write to express to you my hearty appreciation of the privilege you are offering to the Springfield public in depositing your very valuable collection of American Archaeology in our Science Museum. The wide area covered and the large variety of types show a deep interest in the whole subject on the part of the collector.

The recent classification and labeling by a competent archaeologist has added greatly to its educational value. It would seem as though the exhibition of this and the other collections should lead to a greatly increased interest in this fascinating study.

I regard the Booth collection as one of the most valuable additions yet made to the Science Museum.
Sincerely yours, J. T. BOWNE.

Miss Booth also presented a number of historical relics of much interest in connection with the annals of Springfield and Longmeadow. Samuel Colton Booth was a lieutenant in the Massachusetts militia, and here are his hat and sword; also his commission, dated 1836, and signed in the neat and scholarly hand of the most learned of all Massachusetts governors, Edward Everett. There is also a revolutionary musket, which was handed down to Joseph and Samuel C. Booth, the last receiving it in 1828. There is also an old fowling piece of about the same date, which has a broken stock, mended with hide. The fracture was made by an ancestor of Ebenezer C. Colton, while killing a bear in Longmeadow. Miss Booth removed to Springfield in 1895, and now carries on her studies in a house filled with many relics of the past and products of her skill. She also lectured and addressed many audiences, learned and otherwise, both in the States and in Canada. She has traveled much, and in her journeys she has visited nearly every state in the Union. She has been a contributor to most of the magazines in America and abroad devoted to Microscopy, and for about twelve years she edited the Practical Microscopy.

(The Colton Line).

The family of Colton which settled in Springfield, Massachusetts, is the earliest of the name in New England, and from its progenitor, George Colton, are descended the Coltons of today in America.

(I) George Colton is said to have come from Sutton Coldfield, a place about eight miles from Birmingham, county of Warwick, England. He settled first in Windsor, Connecticut, and was later one of the first settlers of that part of Springfield now Longmeadow. He was a freeman, 1665, a grantee of Suffield, 1670, and called "quartermaster" in the record. He was representative 1669-71-77. He has been called the "father of Longmeadow," and in 1677 stood at the head of the board of selectmen upon whom rested the burden of restoring the street to its former condition. George Colton was one of those present when William Pynchon negotiated with the Indian chiefs, Wequogan, Wawapaw and Wecombo, for their interest in lands to which Pynchon and his associates had but an imperfect title. Among the owners of land we find George Colton, taxed on sixty-one acres, sixteen shillings nine pence, 1647. Wheat, Indian corn and peas were accepted in payment of taxes. George Colton married (first) Deborah Gardner, of Hartford, Connecticut, by whom he had children, recorded in the Springfield book as follows: Isaac, Ephraim, Mary, Thomas, Sarah, Deborah, Hepzibah, John, Benjamin. He married (second) March 1, 1692, the Widow Lydia Lamb, who had been the wife of Lawrence Bliss, John Norton and John Lamb. She died February 13, 1698-99. "He d 17 Dec. 1699, at night."

(II) Ephraim, second son of George and Deborah (Gardner) Colton, was a man of character and of good standing in the church. He was chairman of the building committee, 1722, to look after the erection of a court house. He settled in Longmeadow, and probably about the year 1696 removed to Enfield. He married, November 17, 1670, Mary Drake, daughter of Job Drake. Children: Ephraim, Josiah, Job and Samuel. Mary, the mother, died October 19, 1681. Ephraim married (second) March 26, 1685, Esther Mansfield, daughter of Samuel and Catherine Mansfield. She was born September 6, 1667. Ephraim Colton died May 14, 1713, eight months before his last child was born; and Esther, his wife, died January 20, 1714, seven days after the birth of said child. The children of Ephraim and Esther were: Josiah, Esther, Benjamin, Sarah, Daniel, Deborah, Isaac, Margaret, Nathaniel, Thomas, Noah, Mary and Abiel.

(III) Samuel, fourth son of Ephraim and Mary (Drake) Colton, was born January 17, 1670, died March 13, 1744. He married, January 16, 1707, Margaret Bliss (see Bliss III), daughter of Samuel and Mary Bliss, of Springfield, first parish. She died January 16, 1736. Their children were: Margaret, and Samuel, next mentioned.

(IV) Samuel (2), son of Samuel (1) and Margaret (Bliss) Colton, was born September 7, 1727, died November 5, 1784. His father died when he was seventeen years of age, and he soon after fell out with his Uncle Ephraim, his guardian, and was allowed to go into business for himself, with his own cows for a working capital, and his negro servant Tony for a helpmate. He became a merchant and soon had the largest trade in the region. He built ships also and went into the West India trade. "His shipyard was on the Connecticut river bank at about the place where the Harvard and Yale boat crews used to finish their races. His vessels, the 'Speedwell' and the 'Friendship,' were launched at high water, floated over Enfield Falls, rigged at Hartford, and loaded with hoops and staves. These were exchanged for molasses and rum and sugar at Havana, and the West India cargo was sold at Bristol, England, for a general assortment of goods for home distribution at Piscataqua (now Portsmouth, New Hampshire), Boston and Longmeadow." "When the Revolution broke out he was the possessor of what was at that time a large fortune, amounting probably to $30,000 and he was by much the richest man in Longmeadow. His trade in slaves might have helped the enlargement of his estate. In his day-book for May 20, 1769, is the entry: 'George Cooley, Somers, Ct., By a negrow man named Jack, sd Cooley Gave me a bil of sale of sd negrow for £60.' This negro Jack turned out to be a lazy and saucy chattel, and was freed by Mr. Colton's widow, who was glad to be rid of him. Mr. Colton was a conservative man and did not join the ardent advocates of liberty in Revolutionary times. He claimed to be a patriot, but said he was not so 'liberty-mad' as some of his fellow townsmen who proceeded to call him a 'tory.'" "He would not sell his groceries for Continental currency at par value. He held stoutly to his right of keeping in his cellar the goods for which he had paid good English money. This was the gist of the accusation that he was a tory and 'inimical to the Liberties of the Country.' It was under the stress of a prejudice of this kind that Samuel Colton was mobbed. At midnight, July 23, 1776, a company of his neighbors, with whom he had always held the kindest relations, headed by Deacon Nathaniel Ely, Festus Colton, and Azariah Woodworth, including several reputable members of the church, with blackened faces and disguised as Indians, attacked the house, broke open his store, seized his rum, salt, molasses and other goods, and carried them to a building selected for storage. Meanwhile the keen eye of his wife peeping through the shutters had clearly marked each assailant and their disguise was of no avail. They appointed Jabez Colton, a Yale graduate, town clerk and select schoolmaster, to keep account of the stolen goods, as guardian and salesman. In mitigation of this high-handed proceeding, several months afterwards, when paper money had so depreciated that it would not purchase more than half the amount of goods purloined, a roll of continental bills was offered to Merchant Colton, which, however, he refused to take or even look at. The tradition is, that so utterly broken-hearted was the good citizen, who, according to his light, had always been loyal, both to his king, his native country and his neighbors, that after the cruel transaction of that memorable night, he never spoke to one of them, nor, indeed above a whisper to anybody, and in a few years more, though scarcely past the prime of his strength, died broken-hearted." Samuel Colton married, December 26, 1759, Flavia Colton, daughter of Captain Simon and Abigail Colton. She died April 6, 1763. They had one child, born February 1, died February 3, 1760. Samuel married (second) October 16, 1765, Lucy Colton, daughter of Lieutenant John Colton and Mercy his wife. Their children were: Adna, an infant, Flavia, Margaret (died young), Margaret, Lucy, Samuel (died young), Samuel.

(V) Margaret, daughter of Samuel (2) and Lucy (Colton) Colton, was born October 19, 1771, and died January 7, 1817; married, September 11, 1794, David Booth (see Booth VI).

The name Jordan exists in JORDAN England, Ireland and Wales, and is quite common in Dorsetshire, Devonshire and Somerset. These families have on their coat-of-arms a lion rampant on a shield, surrounded by nine crosses. The Wiltshire families have a bent arm holding a dagger. The name is spelled variously Jordaine, Jordayne, Jorden, Jordin, Jordon, and the present spelling, Jordan.

(1) Rev. Robert Jordan, immigrant ancestor, was probably the son of Edward Jordan, of Worcester, England. (See Trelawney Papers, Me. Hist. Coll. p. 269). As early as 1641 he was established as successor of Rev. Richard Gibson, as clergyman of the Church of England on Richmond's Island, near Scarborough, Maine. He came to New England as a religious teacher, and he and Rev. Mr. Gibson were the pioneers of Episcopacy in Maine. He was the chief supporter to the royal commissioners, and the anti-Puritan policy, and one of the leaders of the opposition to Massachusetts. Owing to his religious affinities he was an object of suspicion by the Puritan government, and was forbidden to perform marriages and baptisms. He nevertheless continued to discharge the duties of his office, and was accordingly arrested and imprisoned in the Boston jail in 1654 and 1663. For a long time he was judge of the court. He married, in Richmond's Island, Sarah Winter, only child of John Winter. On the death of her father in 1645, Rev. Mr. Jordan was made administrator of the estate, and in this way became one of the great land owners and wealthy men of that region. After the estate was settled, he removed to the main land on the plantation of Spurwink, in Falmouth. In the second Indian war he was compelled to flee from Spurwink, and his house was burned. He went to Great Island, in the Piscataqua river, then a part of Portsmouth, and never returned. An incident of his courage and good sense is related by Rev. John Hale, pastor of the Church of Christ in Beverly, in 1697, as follows: "One Mr. Thorpe, a drunken Preacher, was gotten in to preach at Black point under the appearance and profession of a minister of the Gospel, and boarded at the house of Goodman Bayly, and Bayly's wife observed his conversation to be contrary to his calling, gravely told him his way was contrary to the Gospel of Christ, and desired him to reform his life, or leave her house. So he departed from the house, and turned her enemy, and found an opportunity to do her an injury; and it so fell out that Mr. Jordan of Spurwink had a cow died, and about that time Goody Bayly had said she intended such a day to travel to Casco Bay. Mr. Thorpe goes to Mr. Jordon's man or men, and saith the cow was bewitched to death, and if they would lay the carcass in the place he should appoint, he would burn it and bring the witch; and accordingly the cow is laid by the path that led from Black Point to Casco, and set on fire that day Goody Bayly was to travel that way, and so she came by while the carcass was in burning, and Thorpe had her questioned for a witch; But Mr. Jordan interposed on her behalf; and said that his cow dyed by his servant's negligence, and to cover their fault they were willing to have it imputed to witchcraft; and Mr. Thorpe knew of Goody Bayleys intended Journey, and orders my servants (said he), without my approbation, to burn my Cow in the way where Bayly is to come; and so unriddled the knavery and delivered the innocent."

Rev. Robert Jordan died in Portsmouth in 1679. His will was made at Great Island, January 28, 1679, and proved July 1, 1679. He lost the use of his hands before his death, and was unable to sign the will. His wife Sarah survived him, and was living in Newcastle, in Portsmouth Harbor, in 1696. Children, born at Falmouth: 1. John, married, 1677, Elizabeth Styleman, of Portsmouth. 2. Robert, married Eliza ———. 3. Dominicus, married, 1681, Hannah Tristram, of Winter Harbor, Maine; died August 10, 1703. 4. (II) Samuel, son of Robert Jordan, was born at Falmouth, about 1660, and died at Kittery about 1720. He left Spurwink with his father on account of the Indian war in 1675 to reside in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and never returned. He inherited eleven hundred acres of land from his father, a hundred acres more than his brothers each received, his land being considered poorer. His farm was at Purpooduck in Falmouth, including Alewife cove at the mouth of Alewife brook leading from the great pond to the sea and a cove called Pond cove. He married Mary ———. Children: 1. Samuel, mentioned below. 2. John, born 1695. 3. Sarah, 1698; married, January 17, 1722, at Kittery, John Robinson. 4. Nathaniel.

(V) Samuel (4), son or nephew of Samuel (3) Jordan, was born May 12, 1746, died April 7, 1821. He married Lydia Grover, born September 26, 1740, died November 27, 1819. His record in the revolution appears as follows: Private in Captain Abram Tyler's company, Colonel Edmund Phinney's regiment, December 11, 1775, at Cambridge and at Fort George in 1776. He was a matross in Captain John Wentworth's company, Colonel Peter Noyes's regiment, raised in Cumberland county in 1778 and probably on Colonel Tupper's regiment in 1779. There was another Samuel Jordan, born in 1758, also in the revolution in Maine. Children: 1. Samuel, born August 21, 1771, mentioned below. 2. Lydia, November 11, 1773. 3. Polly, October 24, 1775. 4. (VIII) William Herbert, son of Josiah Jordan, was born May 6, 1859, at Dover, Maine. He came with his parents to Springfield when he was five years old and was educated in private and public schools in that city. He became associated with his father in the real estate and brokerage business, making loans on mortgages and other security, and when his father died he continued the business. He is a member of Springfield Lodge of Free Masons; of Morning Star Chapter, Royal Arch Masons; Springfield Commandery, Knights Templar and Melha Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is a member of the Church of the Unity and of the Winthrop Club of Springfield. He married, June 7, 1881, Cora L. Bishop, a daughter of George and Elizabeth (Billings) Bishop. Children: Wallace B. and Grace Cushman.

This surname has many spellings, among them Ammidon, Ammidown, Amadon, Hannadown etc. Family tradition says that the immigrant ancestor came to England where he remained several years, and then came to America with other French Huguenots. Although the name may be of French origin, there seems to be no evidence that he was a French Huguenot except that some of his descendants mingled with the Huguenots and perhaps intermarried with them at Oxford.

(I) Roger Amadon, immigrant ancestor, was in Salem as early as 1637, when he was mentioned as the owner of half an acre of meadow. He removed to Weymouth in 1640 and was of Boston in 1643. He settled finally in Rehoboth. His house was at the northeasterly end of the semicircle of houses comprising the original village of Seeconk, and was about a mile north of the church in the present town. He drew his house lot July 18, 1648, and other lots, June 3, 1662, June 7, 1665, and in 1668 and 1671. He was one of the original proprietors of Rehoboth and was there probably as early as 1645, when it was incorporated. He married (first) Sarah ———, who died at Rehoboth, June 20, 1668. He married (second) Joanna, daughter of George and Jane Harwood. She died July 1, 1711. He was buried November 13, 1673. There were suspicions at the time that his death was not natural, and an inquest was held. His estate was divided March 4, 1674. Children of first wife: 1. Ebenezer, mentioned in the settlement of the estate. 2. Sarah, born December 6, 1640, at Weymouth. 3. Lydia, February 27, 1643, at Boston. 4. Hannah, September 20, 1652, married Jeremiah Wheaton, of Rehoboth, September 13, 1719.

(II) Philip, son of Roger Amadon, was born at Rehoboth, January 26, 1670, and lived there until the death of his first wife, when he removed to Mendon. In 1717 he removed to Oxford, Massachusetts, where many French Huguenots settled about that time, and died there March 15, 1747. He was a farmer and cooper. He and his wife joined the Oxford church in 1720. He was selectman 1730 and constable 1735. His will was proved May 12, 1747. Of his old homestead three-fourths belongs to the farm now or recently owned by Franklin H. Clark, and the other quarter to Lucinda Morse. He married (first) at Rehoboth, May 27, 1698, Mehitable Perry, born April 30, 1680, died July 4, 1699, aged nineteen, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Willard) Perry. In 1739 he sold a part of it to John Curtis, a part to his brother Henry Amadon, and in 1740 the remainder to his father. He married, January 5, 1736, Ruth Curtis, who married (second) Daniel Child, and in 1747 was of Woodstock, Connecticut. Children: 1. Ithamar, mentioned below. 2. He served in the revolution five months and eleven days in the Tenth Massachusetts Regiment, and his discharge was dated at West Point, December 16, 1780. He served in Captain Abel King's company, Colonel Sears' regiment, from August 20, 1781, to November 20, 1781, on duty at Saratoga. He was placed on the pension roll in 1832. He married, February 28, 1788, Sabra Gilbert, born May 12, 1776, died May 13, 1852. Children: 1. Elial, born December 23, 1788. 2. (VI) Titus (2), son of Titus (1) Amadon, was born at Wilbraham, Massachusetts, July 7, 1803, died in Springfield, May 9, 1889. In 1820 he removed to Springfield and worked most of the time for sixty years in the United States armory. He served as assessor, overseer of the poor, selectman, alderman, and four terms as representative to the general court. He married, May 22, 1828, Eliza Chaffee, born February 20, 1807, died April 3, 1879, daughter of Willard and Lois (Davis) Chaffee. Children: 1. Edwin Bingley, born March 1, 1829, died June 5, 1858. 2. Frances Eliza, May 26, 1831, died June 7, 1887; married, June 20, 1867, Henry Thrall, of Springfield. 3. William Willard, November 24, 1835, mentioned below.

(VII) William Willard, son of Titus (2) Amadon, was born November 24, 1835, at Springfield, died February 29, 1908. In 1852 he started to learn the drug business with B. M. Ford & Company in the John Hancock Bank building on the Hill, and in 1856 was engaged as manager of the business by the owner, Joseph Ingraham. In 1857 he went west on a business and pleasure trip, and returning in the spring of 1858 bought the drug store. He continued in business until 1866, when he sold it to Merritt & Sinclair. He later bought the farm in West Springfield where the Riverdale market gradens were afterward situated, and conducted it until 1882, when he took his son-in-law, R. W. Cartter, into partnership. A year later he sold the farm to Mr. Cartter, and retired from active work. From the organization of the Republican party he was active and prominent. In 1856 he was on the Republican committee of ward five, and canvassed the ward within one vote of the actual number cast for Fremont and Dayton. In 1860 he canvassed the ward within three votes of the number cast for Lincoln and Hamlin. This was said to have been the closest canvass ever made in the city. In 1869 he was a member of the legislature. He was a member of the horse railroad committee, and through his efforts the original charter of the Springfield street railway company was amended and improved. He was in business during good times, and he used to relate that more than $30,000 was left to him at one time for safe keeping by friends, not one of whom had a scrap of paper to show for the funds, but all of whom received back every penny. During the civil war he contributed liberally for the soldiers at the front. While in business he was offered various city and county positions, but refused to accept them. He was a charter member of Hampden Lodge of Free Masons, and also a Knight Templar. He married, April 26, 1859, Frances A. Bodurtha, born May 2, 1836, died February 9, 1899, of apoplexy. He married (second) November 21, 1900, Sarah F. (Davidson) Darling, an artist of Worcester. Children: 1. Fred A., born September, 1862, died young. 2. Ada B., 1863, married, 1882, R. W. Cartter, of West Springfield.

Following is some account of MERRITT Henry Merritt and some of his descendants. Others of this surname came early to New England, but none so early as Henry, who is the ancestor of a sturdy progeny, among them being General Edwin Merritt, of St. Lawrence County, New York, once collector of port of New York, under President Grant, and kinsman to General Merritt, of the United States army. Soldiers have been numerous among his descendants, and fifty-five Merits and Merritts served in the revolutionary war.

(1) Henry Merritt was born in the county of Kent, England, probably in the parish of Tenderden, about the year 1590, and came to America perhaps as early as 1626, and with others called "Men of Kent," founded the town of Scituate, Massachusetts, though he was not a freeman until 1638. There is a deed in the Colony records dated 1628 from Henry Merritt to Nathaniel Tilden, of which the following is a copy: "To all Christian people to whom these printe, shall come greeting. Know you that I, Henry Merritt of Scituate in America Planter have in consideration of twenty shillings before hand payd by Nathaniel Tilden of Scituate Planter in consideration thereof, I, the aforesaid Henry Merritt have given, bargained and sold unto the aforesaid Nathaniell Tilden and his heirs forever, all that land which I had of Goodman Byrd, lying within the fence at the North end of the third cliff unto the land of the aforesaid Nathaniell Tilden.

In Witness Whereof, I, the aforesaid Henry Merritt have hereunto set my hand and seal. Dated this the tenth of April 1628.

Henry Merritt's house lot in 1633 was at the corner where Greenfield lane and the "drift-way" united; we believe it is now known as Merritt's corner. He had shares in the New Harbour marshes, and was also one of the Conihasset partners. That he was a man of substance and one of the leading citizens of the town, there is no doubt. His wife, called "Goodwife Merritt," joined the church in 1637. There is no other record of her. Henry died in 1653 and his son John administered on his estate. They left two sons: Henry, who died before 1673, probably without a family; John, next mentioned; and a daughter, Katherine.

(II) John, son of Henry Merritt, was born about 1625, and died in Scituate after 1670. He succeeded to his father's estate and was the only son of Henry Merritt who left posterity in Scituate. He married, April 3, 1655, Elizabeth Weyborn, daughter of Thomas Weyborn, of Boston. Their four children were: John, Henry, Jonathan and Deborah. There is no record of their births.

(III) John (2), eldest son of John (1) and Elizabeth (Weyborn) Merritt, was born in Scituate in 1660, died there June 5, 1740. He married, in 1686, Elizabeth Hyland, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Stockbridge) Hyland, of Scituate, and they had twelve children, most of whom had families. They were: John, born 1687; Thomas, 1688; Elizabeth, 1690; Mary, 1692; John, born and died 1695; Hannah, 1696; Henry, 1699; Abigail, 1700; Jonathan, 1702; David, 1703; Ebenezer, 1705; Ezekiel, 1709.

(IV) Jonathan, son of John (2) and Elizabeth (Hyland) Merritt, was born in Scituate in 1702, died in Hebron, Tolland county, Connecticut, October 21, 1758. He moved to Hebron about 1730 and town records show that he bought land there in November, 1735, also in 1736-46. He married, in Scituate, 1727, Mehitable Daman, daughter of Zachary and Mehitable (Chittenden) Daman. Their children were: Simeon, Noah, Jonathan, and probably others.

(V) Noah, son of Jonathan and Mehitable (Daman) Merritt, was born in Scituate in 1730, died in Templeton, Worcester county, Massachusetts, March 24, 1814. He was one of the first settlers of Templeton, as early as 1753, and was probably a builder by trade. In 1763 he contracted with the town and built the first bridge in Templeton over the Otter river. There is a stone structure still standing at this site and said to be the same bridge. Noah was a member of the first church of Templeton. He was an ardent patriot in the revolution, and according to family tradition was one of thirty-seven minute-men under Captain Ezekiel Knowlton, leaving his harrow in the field where he was putting in wheat, and machinery, and with his comrades went to Lexington and remained there till after the English were driven back to Boston. After Noah's return home he told his eldest son, Noah, that one of them must stay at home and take care of the family, and the other must go to the front and fight for liberty, and gave him his choice of places. The young Noah was as brave and proud-spirited as his father, and chose to serve his country, which he did till the end of the war. The Massachusetts Revolutionary Rolls give account of two or more Noah Merritts from Templeton. The younger Noah was the ancestor of General Merritt, late of New York. Noah, senior, lived to enjoy many years of life under the government he had helped to found, and he and his descendants, up to the outbreak of the civil war, were Jeffersonian Democrats. He married Sarah Loe; children, born in Templeton: Noah, October or November, 1758; Abigail, May 27, 1760; Lucy, May 25, 1762; Sarah, August 20, 1764; Henry, March 1, 1767; Esther, March 17, 1769; Simeon, May

(VI) Captain Simeon, son of Noah and Sarah (Lee) Merritt, was born in Templeton, May 23, 1771, died on the estate where his ancestors had lived, December 6, 1844. He was a leading citizen, a member of the church where his parents had worshipped, selectman, a member of the order of Free Masons, and was for years a captain in the militia. He married, July 20, 1796, Doreas Gay, born in Wrentham, April 19, 1775, died in Templeton, May 16, 1803. She was the daughter of Edward Jr. and his second wife, Mary Gay, and granddaughter of Edward and Rachel (Puffer) Gay, of Franklin, and was a descendant of John Gay, of Watertown, the immigrant. Children: An infant son, deceased; Increase Sumner, see below; Cynthia, February 13, 1801; Lucy, June 12, 1803; Doreas, December 13, 1804; Cordelia, January 16, 1806; Mercy Mann, November 25, 1808; Salome, March 25, 1811; Mary Ann, November, 1813; Julia Fisher, October 25, 1816.

(VII) Captain Increase Sumner, son of Captain Simeon and Dorcas (Gay) Merritt, was born in Templeton, October 15, 1799, died there April 15, 1877. He was a farmer, and spent a part of his life on the old homestead. He was a member of the Unitarian church and a diligent reader of the Bible; a man of liberal views who did his own thinking. He was a Democrat of the Jeffersonian type. For years he was a captain in the militia by appointment of Governor Lincoln. He married Susan Penniman, born in Gardner, November 9, 1805, died in Templeton, August 21, 1862. Children: Simeon, born March 21, 1823, died December 19, 1882; Ezra Moore, March 2, 1825; Sumner Lincoln, February 25, 1827, died April, 1882; Sarah Doreas, November 15, 1828; Christopher C., see below; Henry, January 8, 1833, died December 4, 1908; Dulcinea, January 1, 1835; Cordelia, March 22, 1837; Marcus Morton, April 1, 1839; Martin V. B., January 6, 1841; Salome, February 22, 1843. The ancestry of Susan (Penniman) Merritt is traced as follows:

(1) James Penniman came from England in 1630, resided first in Boston, admitted freeman March 6, 1632, removed to Braintree in 1639, was one of the selectmen in 1640, and died December 26, 1664. His wife was Lydia Eliot, born in Nasing, England, sister of John Eliot, the Apostle to the Indians of New England. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Penniman married Thomas Wight, of Medfield. Children of James and Lydia: James, Lydia, John, Joseph, Sarah, Samuel, Hannah, Abigail and Mary.

(2) Joseph, third son of James and Lydia (Eliot) Penniman, was born August 1, 1639, died November 5, 1705. He married, 1666, Waiting Robinson, daughter of William Robinson, of Dorchester. She died 1690. Their children were: Joseph, Moses (died young), Mary, Moses, Deborah, and James next mentioned.

(3) James (2), youngest son of Joseph and Waiting (Robinson) Penniman, was born in 1683 and died in 1724. He married, in 1705, a daughter of Thomas and Abigail (Veazie) Thayer. She was born in 1685. Children: William, James, Abigail, Mary and Hannah.

(4) William, eldest child of James (2) Penniman, was born in 1706, died before 1780. In 1729 he married Ruth Thayer, born 1707, died 1776, daughter of Ebenezer and Ruth (Neale) Thayer. They had fifteen children: Ruth, William, Ebenezer, Abigail (died young), Peletiah, Joseph, Ezra, Mesheck, Abigail (died young), Susanna, Mesheck (died young), Abigail, Mesheck, Elihu and Bethuel.

(5) William (2), eldest son of William (1) and Ruth (Thayer) Penniman, was born in 1732, died in 1813. He married, in 1755, Sarah Wild, born 1738, died 1806, daughter of William and Ruth (Hersey) Wild. Twelve children were born to them: William, James, Ezra, Sarah, Amosa, Barzillai, Elijah, Josiah, Susanna, Rachel, Anna and Prudence.

(6) Ezra, third son of William (2) and Sarah (Wild) Penniman, was born in Braintree, April 27, 1760, died May 21, 1823. He moved to Gardner, and was a resident there, in 1815, where he and his wife conveyed their right in his mother's property to his brother Elijah. He married, probably in Gardner, Lovisa Eager, and they had born in Gardner: Lovisa, Abigail, Benjamin, Sarah and Mary (twins), Betsey, Susan and Tabitha.

(VIII) Christopher Columbus, son of Captain Increase Sumner and Susan (Penniman) Merritt, was born in Gardner, September 29, 1830. At the age of eight years he was apprenticed to Asa Fessenden, of Templeton Center, to learn carriage making. After mastering that trade he also learned the machinist trade with Mr. Fessenden. In 1856 he went to Boston and worked at No. 69 Commercial street, constructing machines to cut corks. He next worked for Grover and Baker, making sewing machines, in 1857. He worked in Ottawa, Canada, and then returned to Templeton where he was employed two years by Walter Greenwood & Company, chair makers. He was with Baxter Whitney at Winchendon when the civil war broke out and then he went to Springfield, July, 1861, and was tool maker in the United States armory till the close of the war, being inspector and foreman. From 1866 till 1905 he was engaged in the retail drug business near the corner of State and Walnut streets. Mr. Merritt is a man who is sincere and earnest in his convictions, always following what he thinks is the right course. He cast his first presidential vote for John P. Hale, the Free Soil Democrat. In 1856 he voted for John C. Fremont, the first Republican candidate for president, and next for Abraham Lincoln, the emancipator, and so on down to the present time. In 1872 he was elected to the legislature from ward 5, Springfield, and was re-elected in 1876-80-81. In 1881 he was appointed by Governor Butler as trustee of the Northampton Asylum, and served in that office five years. For eight years he was one of the overseers of the poor of Springfield, and served in each case without pay. In 1892 he was elected to the senate. Mr. Merritt's official service has been of such a character as to reflect credit on him and please his constituency. He is fond of literary composition, especially of metrical composition, and has written hundreds of poems, which have been eagerly accepted by newspaper publishers, and his poetry is very familiar to the readers of Springfield papers for forty years past. From a financial point of view he has been successful, and among other holdings he has a farm on the Bay road where the Forty-sixth Massachusetts Infantry camped in the time of the civil war, being called at that time Camp Banks. There he spends a part of each summer and fall. Christopher C. Merritt married, October 13, 1860, Elvira Parker Brooks, born in Gardner, November 26, 1837, died December 26, 1883, daughter of Oscar and Sophrona (Jackson) Parker. Four children were born of this marriage: Josephine M., May 3, 1861, in Winchendon; Harriet S., November 11, 1863; Henry Romeo, December 24, 1869; Charles Junius, February 21, 1874, died May 12, 1905. The last three were born in Springfield.

The following may be taken as examples of Mr. Merritt's verse:

NOW!

O thou eternal now! All infinite
To-day! Thee full and precious hour to serve!

Forever present,—quenchless to survive'
Behind thee death! Before thee nothing is!
Great multiple in problem of an age,—
Each new-born moment crowding to fulfil
The true and pressing destinies of life,
Where all companionships, by time revealed,
Unite the present in magnetic ties
To perished ages in the calendar.

O man! bethink thee,—for this day is thine!
What of the Past? Dead as a mummy's dust!
Who from her moldy sepulcher of deeds
Can roll the massive closing stone away?
The Sphinx-like sentry of infinitude
Sits by her portals with the mysteries.
But thou, O living Opportunity!
Clothed in the shining panoply of life,
Nerved to the quick by essence of fruition,
Outliving all in deeds and mightiness!—
Thy vigorous hand, relaxing not its hold,
Strives for the prize of being's own ambition!

JANUARY.

The icicles hang by the wall, John,
The icicles hang by the wall;
They never were longer at all, John,
They never were longer at all;
But they'll melt and they'll fall in the sun, John,
But they'll melt and they'll fall in the sun;
Then ragged and broken and all, John,
They'll melt and they'll fall in the sun.

A type of our life now is here, John,
Like icicles cling we and fall;
As brief in our growth and decay, John,
As brief in our growth and decay;
So we live in our prime but a day, John,
So we live in our prime but a day;
Then broken and wasted away, John,
We live in our prime but a day.

The origin of this honorable FORBES patronymic appears to be surrounded with mystery and may have been derived from one of a variety of sources, just as it is found variously written in the records in Scotland and England as well as in this country. It is said in Burke's "Heraldry" that the surname Forbes was assumed from lands of Forbes in Aberdeen, Scotland, for it is a Scottish name and of Scottish origin. The lands of Forbes were granted by Alexander II (1249) to the progenitor of this noble family. John de Forbes, the first of his surname of whom there is any record, was a personage of rank and distinction during the reign of King William the Lion (1214). Following him is the long line of descendants of whom William Forbes, of Tullickerne, Scotland, wrote in 1580: "In all ages since our first aryse, we myght compair with neighbors, for greater loyalty and valor for pictie (which we think truely ennobleth a families); witness the many bishops and doctors att home and renownd divines abroad. Like as the root has ever done so the several branches of the house thought their greatest honour to honour God in their generations. As to their loyalty, it was never stained."

It is of this ancient and noble Scotch house whence comes the family of whom this narrative proposes to treat. John Forbes, of Deskrie, Scotland, died in 1739, and was buried at Strathdon, Aberdeenshire. His son Archibald died at Newmill of Leith, December 3, 1793, aged eighty years, and also was buried at Strathdon. One hundred and thirty years after the death of John Forbes, the father, his great-great-grandson, the late Robert Bennet Forbes, of Boston, caused a tablet to be erected within the walls of Strathdon Church, in commemoration of his ancestor, Archibald, son of John Forbes. This tablet contains a copy of the inscription on the gravestone outside the walls, and which reads: "Underneath this stone lies interred the body of Archibald Forbes, of Deskrie, who died at Newmill of Leith, the 3d day of December, 1793, in the 80th year of his age."

In his autobiography Mr. Robert Bennett Forbes gives us other interesting information concerning his ancestry, and says "the family memoranda show that we originated from the family called of 'Dauch.' William Forbes of that ilk lived in 1800, was brother of Alexander of Pitslago; and these were of the family of Newe and Edinglassie, brought down to my ancestor, John of Strathdon. My great-grandmother on my father's side was Dorothy Collingwood, aunt to the celebrated Lord Collingwood."

(I) Rev. John Forbes, immigrant ancestor of the family here under consideration, appears in American history as rector of St. Augustine, Florida, for he was a Scotch clergyman of distinction. He married, at Brush Hill, Milton, Massachusetts, February 2, 1767, Dorothy Murray, then twenty-four years old and also of a noted Scotch family. Mr. Forbes subsequently returned to England and died there September 17, 1793. He had three children: 1. Colonel James Grant, born November 22, 1769, served under General Andrew Jackson and held a commission as colonel in the service; was once commander at Staten Island, and was first marshal or governor of St. Augustine when Florida was ceded to the United States. 2. John Murray, born at St. Augustine, August 13, 1771, was fitted for college under the instruction of Dr. Samuel Kendall, of Weston, Massachusetts, and graduated from Harvard in 1787; studied law with John Sprague, of Lancaster, and Pliny Merrick, of Brookfield, Massachusetts, and in 1791 was engaged in practice in the town last mentioned. He then removed to Boston and associated professionally with C. P. Phelps during the years 1794-95, but after 1796 he lived chiefly abroad. He was a man of splendid character and attainments and one of the ornaments of society in his time. After leaving America he was consul general to the North of Europe, and made his residence at Hamburg and Copenhagen. In 1820 he went to Buenos Ayres as secretary of the legation to Caesar Rodney, minister to the Argentine Republic, and at the time of his death, in 1831, Mr. Forbes himself was charge d'affaires at Buenos Ayres. In speaking of him the "History of Milton," Massachusetts, says "He was troubled with gout; his crest was composed of a gouty foot couchant, crossed by two crutches rampant; and the motto was 'Toujours souffrant jamais triste.'" John Murray Forbes never married. 3. Ralph Bennett, born June 11, 1773 (see post).

(II) Ralph Bennett, son of Rev. John and Dorothy (Murray) Forbes, was born at Brush Hill, Milton, Massachusetts, June 11, 1773, and died there October 5, 1824. He lived with his mother at Brush Hill until 1783, when she removed with her children to Cambridge, Massachusetts. At the age of eight years Ralph was sent to Dr. Parker's school in Hingham, and his young life was spent chiefly at Brush Hill, Hingham and in Cambridge. At the age of fourteen he was apprenticed to John B. Murray, in Alexandria, Virginia, and remained with his master until he reached his nineteenth year, in December, 1791, when he joined his brother, James Grant Forbes, at Port-au-Prince, St. Domingo, where he continued to live until 1794 and then returned to his mother's home in Cambridge. In the winter of 1795 he sailed from Portland, Maine, in the ship "Rising States," (she was owned by John McLean, William Stephenson, and the firm of Loring and Curtis) bound south to Charleston, South Carolina, and other southern coast ports, and thence sailed in March for Bordeaux, France, arriving at that port in April with a cargo of rice and tobacco. From Bordeaux he set sail for Hamburg, Germany, having on board a cargo of brandy, and reached port there in August of the same year. He finally left the ship at Dover and went to England, arriving in London in September. There he met Colonel Perkins, and in December following he returned to Bordeaux and from thence sailed for America. October 13, 1799, Ralph Bennett

Forbes married Margaret Perkins, of Boston, and by her had seven children: 1. Emma Perkins, born May 18, 1801. 2. Thomas Tunno, April 11, 1803. 3. Robert Bennet, September 18, 1804 (see post). 4. Margaret Perkins, April 10, 1806. 5. John Murray, February 23, 1813 (see post). 6. Mary Abbot, September 4, 1814. 7. Cornelia Frances, still living.

(III) Captain Robert Bennett, son of Ralph Bennett and Margaret (Perkins) Forbes, was born at Jamaica Plain, Massachusetts, September 18, 1804, and soon afterward was taken by his parents to Boston and for several years lived in Federal street in that city. As a child he was sent to a private school kept by a Miss Doubleday, in Purchase street, where he continued to attend until 1811, when on January 17 his mother took her sons and embarked in the schooner "Midas," Captain William Ropes, of Salem, master, and sailed to join her husband at Marseilles, France. When off that port the schooner was captured by the British frigate "Resistance," whose captain sent her to Port Mahon, and it was only after considerable delay and much anxiety that Mrs. Forbes reached France. In his interesting narrative Captain Forbes in speaking of this event says "It was at that time the custom of our cousin John to detain American vessels bound to an enemy's port. We were ordered to Port Mahon in the Island of Minorca, to await the decision of Sir Charles Cotton. All my mother's energies were aroused, to try to induce the captain of the 'Resistance' to let us go. She went to his ship in a long gig, in a tumbling sea, without success. He said he must obey orders."

In Marseilles the boys were sent to a French school where the master was as ignorant of English as they were of French, but by the use of a French and English dictionary they soon acquired a sufficient knowledge of elementary French to enable them to continue their studies. However, in 1813, on May 13, Mr. Forbes and his family embarked at Bordeaux in the American schooner "Orders in Council" bound for New York. The "Orders in Council," says Captain Forbes autobiography, "was a letter of marque commanded by Captain Josiah Ingersoll." War having been declared between the United States and Great Britain, she was armed with six small guns, probably nine pounders, and had a crew of about twenty, all told. She was one of a large fleet of Baltimore and New York clippers, built to carry silks, wines, and other valuable goods, and to fight when attacked; hence the letter of marque.

Soon after leaving port the schooner was attacked by the British cutter "Wellington," which was beaten off after a fight of from one to two hours, but only to fall into the hands of the "Surveillante," Captain Sir George Collier, who treated his prisoners with much consideration and sent them to Coruna, in Spain. There they were released and soon afterward found passage with Captain Lovell in the "Caroline" bound for Boston, but on the eighth day out the old brig was boarded by the British frigate "Pomone," examined, taken in tow, and pulled by the nose into the Tagus. After remaining a day or two on the "Caroline" Mr. Forbes and his family escaped on a fishing boat and went to Lisbon, remained there about one month and finally embarked in the "Leda," of Baltimore, and in the course of thirty-six days arrived at Newport, Rhode Island, some time in the month of August.

These were rather trying experiences to a boy of hardly more than a dozen years, yet after all they served a useful purpose and made a man of him in experience, although only a child in years. Returning at length to Milton young Forbes and his brother were for a time put out to boarding school, but in 1816 he was employed in a minor clerical capacity with the house of S. Cabot, and James and Thomas H. Perkins Jr., of Boston, merchant importers and exporters. On October 19, 1817, then aged thirteen years, he shipped before the mast in the "Canton Packet" and made his first voyage to China, arriving at Canton in March of the following year, the vessel having sailed by the eastern passage. "Here," says the captain in his narrative, began an epoch in my life which was of great importance; a connection which led directly to fortune and which never ended but with the life of my cousin (John P. Cushing, then head of the house of Perkins & Co., Canton), in April, 1801. In June, 1818, he returned to Boston, and thus ended his first voyage to China and return. In 1819 he made a second voyage to the Orient in the "Canton Packet" and on the passage made a thorough study of navigation; and on his next voyage to the far east it was as third mate of the ship. From this rank he became second mate in 1821, and in 1825 as master of the "Nile" he sailed for Manila, Philippine Islands. Previous to this time he had been for a short time master of the "Levant," and thus was captain of a deep sea vessel before he had attained the age of twenty years. From Manila the "Nile" went to China, thence to California, and from there to Buenos Ayres, South America; and thence to Boston at the end of a long and successful trading voyage. In 1828 he sailed the "Danube" for Sturgis & Perkins on a trading voyage to Smyrna, Turkey, and other European ports, and afterward he commanded the "Niantic." About 1832 he made his last voyage to China and in 1840 became head of Russell & Company, the largest American commercial house in China. Of his large means he made generous provision for his mother and younger brother. He visited China several times and at one time was American vice consul at Canton. He traded between the United States, China, Europe, California and South America and was almost invariably successful in his voyages. In 1847 he commanded the United States sloop-of-war "Jamestown" laden with provisions for the starving poor of Ireland and made the voyage from Boston to Cork and return in forty-nine days. As a matter of fact Captain Forbes chartered the vessel for this voyage at his own expense, furnished her cargo and paid all of the charges without awaiting government action, although he was afterward reimbursed for all his expenses under an act of congress; but he had no assurance of being compensated by the government when he took such prompt measures for relief of the suffering people of Ireland. Still later he helped to load the frigate "Macedonian" on the same voyage of mercy. During the civil war he was employed as a volunteer by the government to inspect the building of nine gunboats and at the same time built for himself and others the "Meteor," of 1500 tons. She was built to cruise for vessels which were preying upon American shipping and destroying American commerce.

And besides being a famous mariner and deep sea sailor, and afterward an extensive foreign trader, Captain Forbes enjoyed equal celebrity as a ship builder, and during the course of his active life was concerned with the construction of as many as seventy vessels of all classes. His first ship was the bark "Lintin," built in 1830, and was owned exclusively by him until 1832, when she sailed into Chinese waters and remained there. In this connection it is interesting to note the name, class, approximate tonnage, and year of construction of each of the many vessels built under his order or supervision, or in which he had an interest: bark "Lintin," 390 tons, 1830; brig "Swan," 150 tons, 1831-32; schooner yacht "Sylph," 70 tons, 1833; ship "Hooghly," 350 tons, 1834; schooner yacht "Fawn," 30 tons, 1835; brig "Henry Clay," 250 tons, 1835; schooner yacht "Dream," 30 tons, 1835; ship "Levant," 400 tons, 1836; brig "Rose," 150 tons, 1836; brig "Isidore," 300 tons, 1836; ship "Luconia," 450 tons, 1836; bark "Canton Packet," 350 tons, 1836; schooner yacht "Breeze," 30 tons, 1837; steam schooner "Midas," 180 tons, 1841; schooner "Anglona," 90 tons, 1841; schooner "Zephyr," 150 tons, 1842; schooner "Mazeppa," 175 tons, 1842; ship "Narragansett," 500 tons, 1842; schooner "Ariel," 100 tons, 1842; ship "Paul Jones," 750 tons, 1842; bark "Paulina," 300 tons, 1843; schooner "Don Juan," 175 tons, 1843; ship "Farwell," 700 or 800 tons, 1843; brig "Antelope," 370 tons, 1843; bark "Coquette," 420 tons, 1844; steam bark "Edith," 400 tons, 1844; steam tug (iron) "R. Captain Forbes always took an earnest interest in everything connected with and concerning the seamen, so much so indeed that he came to be called the "Howard of the sea." He did much and wrote much about the best means of saving life in case of disaster, and several benevolent institutions for seamen found in him a very generous supporter. "In his long and varied career his feet were ever in the straight and narrow path of virtue, and it may be truly said of him that he never lost a friend, nor had an enemy whom he did not endeavor to conciliate. He was almost worshipped by the boys at Milton, and he made for them with his own hands more than one hundred models of sail and row boats. For many years he was one of the most efficient members and active officers of the Massachusetts Humane Society; and he was awarded the gold medal of that society and the medal of the Liverpool Shipwreck and Humane Society for his gallant conduct in 1849, when the Cunard steamship "Europa" ran down and sank the emigrant ship "Charles Bartlett" in mid-ocean. Captain Forbes jumped from the towering bulwarks of the "Europa" to save a woman and child and afterwards a man. He was president of the Boston Marine Society, trustee and president of the Sailors' Snug Harbor, one of the Boston pilot commissioners, member of the government of the Board of Trade, one of the vestry of King's Chapel, member of the Boston Port Society, and at one time and another a director of various railroad and insurance companies. The Massachusetts Historical Society concludes its memoir of Captain Forbes with these words: "Of no one can it be more truly said that he tried to do his duty;" and such was the motto he wished to be placed on his gravestone. In 1834 Captain Forbes married Rose Greene Smith, who died September 18, 1885, having borne her husband three children: 1. Robert Bennet, born 1837, died June 30, 1891. 2. Edith, married Charles Eliot Perkins. 3. James Murray, born July 17, 1845 (see post).

(IV) James Murray, son of Robert Bennet and Rose Greene (Smith) Forbes, was born in Boston, July 17, 1845, acquired his earlier education in Mr. Dixwell's school, and entered Harvard in the class of 1866, but left before the completion of his course to go to Canton, China, to enter the old house of Russell & Company, of which his father had been the head. He became a partner and in charge of the business at Canton and afterward at Hong Kong, and was vice consul for Sweden and Norway at Canton. He returned from China at the time of his marriage in 1871 and afterward for several years represented Russell &

Company as agent in Boston. Later on he became president of the Chicago, Burlington & Northern railroad and served in that capacity for several years. He is now a vice-president of the Suffolk Savings Bank. He holds membership in the Somerset Club, Eastern Yacht Club, New Riding Club, the Porcellian Club and the Country Club, as well as in other social organizations. In 1882 Mr. Forbes was the prime mover in establishing the Country Club at Brookline, Massachusetts, which was the first club of its kind in the whole country, and of which he served as chairman of the board of governors for twelve years. He seems to have inherited much of his father's love of yachting and horses, and is regularly to be seen in the saddle at all seasons of the year; and he is a strong lover of all animals, and formerly for many years was prominently connected with and a director of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. In 1871 Mr. Forbes married Alice Frances, daughter of Nathaniel J. and Elizabeth (Brown) Bowditch, and by whom he had three children: Allan, Mary Bowditch and Dorothy Forbes.

(V) Allan, son of James Murray and Alice Francis (Bowditch) Forbes, was born in Boston, November 20, 1874. He attended Noble's school, a private institution of considerable note, and after the completion of his course there tutored abroad for one year in England, Scotland, France and Italy; and on returning to this country he matriculated at Harvard, in 1894, and was graduated artium baccalaureus in 1897. His business career was begun as clerk in the employ of Bloget, Merritt & Company, with whom he remained for one year and then became assistant treasurer of State Street Trust Company, Boston. After four years in that capacity he was made treasurer, and two years later vice-president and actuary, which latter position he still holds, besides being one of the directors of the company. Mr. Forbes is recognized as a man of superior business ability and the strictest integrity, with a capacity to successfully direct large business and financial operations; and in one capacity and another he is identified in some prominent way with several of the best financial, industrial and philanthropic institutions of the city. He is a trustee of the Franklin Savings Bank, president of the board of trustees of the Bankers' Electric Protective Association, secretary, treasurer of the Bankers' Electric Protective Association of New England, a director of Cape Breton Electric Company (limited), member of the finance committee of the Boston Merchants' Association, director of Blue Hill Street Railway Company and of the Hotel Somerset Company, trustee of the Dana Lands and of the Boston Floating Hospital, director of the Boston Water Power Company, director and treasurer of the Dallas Light & Power Company, vice-president and director of Dallas Ice Factory, director and treasurer of the Riverbank Improvement Company, and treasurer and member of the executive committee of the Marine Historical Museum. He is a member of the Somerset Tennis and Racquet Club, Dedham Polo Club, Unitarian in his religious preference, and a Republican in politics.

(III) John Murray, son of Ralph Bennet and Margaret (Perkins) Forbes, was born in Bordeaux, France, February 23, 1813, and spent the greater part of his life in Milton, Massachusetts, the home of his ancestors and the birthplace of his own children. His home was in a splendid mansion house built for him by his brother. He was a man of superior mental attainments, for many years one of the most influential Republicans in the region, a member of the peace congress of 1861, delegate at large from Massachusetts to the National Republican convention at Cincinnati, Ohio, that nominated General Hayes for the presidency, and also delegate to the National convention of 1884, although subsequently he became a warm admirer and staunch supporter of Mr. Cleveland. In 1887 one of the leading New York papers printed the following tribute to the qualities and character of Mr. Forbes: "We believe there is no man in Massachusetts who stands higher in public regard and confidence than John Murray Forbes. During the last thirty years nobody has been readier to serve with purse and person all good causes. To no one man in Massachusetts, except Governor Andrew, was the government more indebted during the trying days of the war. From nobody has the Republican party in the state and nation receiving more and loyal service in money and counsel. There is no way in which he has not proved his devotion to it except by holding salaried offices. Moreover, there is probably no wiser or shrewder business head than his. He is a man of great wealth, but nobody would suspect it if it were not for the number and amount of his contributions to public interests, to charity, to art, to literature, and to science, and what is of more importance, he stands in Massachusetts as the very type and embodiment of commercial integrity." His firm of J. M. Forbes & Company, still in existence, stood among the foremost commission houses of New England. Mr. Forbes married Susan Swain Hathaway, of New Bedford, and by her had six children: 1. Ellen Randolph, twin, born 1838. 2. Alice Hathaway, twin, 1838. 3. William Hathaway, November 1, 1840. 4. Mary Hathaway, 1842. 5. John Malcolm, 1847. 6. Sarah, July 3, 1853.

(IV) William Hathaway, son of John Murray and Susan Swain (Hathaway) Forbes, was born in Milton, Massachusetts, November 1, 1840, and died at Naushon Island, October 11, 1897. He was educated in the public schools of Milton and in the city of Boston, and graduated from Harvard College in 1857. He began his business career as a clerk in the office of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company, but resigned his position there in 1861 to accept the commission of lieutenant in the First Massachusetts Cavalry for service during the civil war. He was in the field with his regiment until after the battle of Antietam, in which he took part. Late in 1862, when Colonel Lowell undertook to raise the Second Massachusetts Cavalry, he asked Lieutenant Forbes to join his command with the rank of captain. This offer he accepted and soon afterward was placed in command of a battalion and served with his regiment in Virginia, checking the activity of Mosby's guerillas in the vicinity of Washington. At Aldie, in July, 1864, he was attacked by a superior force under Mosby, and was captured. At that time his command consisted largely of recruits and untrained men from other regiments, and many of them failed to stand up to their work under the ordeal of a fierce engagement and were easily routed, but Captain Forbes and a few of his men charged the enemy with desperate courage and only surrendered after a hand-to-hand encounter in which he was pinned to the ground under his fallen horse, shot by Jack Mosby himself, it is said. For a time he was confined in the prison at Charleston, South Carolina, and afterward was sent to Columbia. He once escaped, but was recaptured, and the hardships of prison life permanently weakened his constitution. He was released on his parole in 1865, but was exchanged in time to rejoin his regiment with the rank and commission of lieutenant colonel, and to take part in the closing scenes of the war at Appomattox. At that time he was with the advance cavalry force which met the flag of truce sent by General Lee, and was among the first of the Union troops to learn that the war was at an end:

yet in the very last hour of battle he narrowly escaped being struck with a cannon ball.

Before going to the front Colonel Forbes evinced unusual ability as a soldier in his excellent drilling of troops at Readville, and afterward, in the field, in camp and in the prison pen, his courage, his patience and fortitude, and his solicitude for others won for him the regard of all men and soldiers alike. He was not only a close friend of Colonel Lowell, but one of his most efficient officers and one on whom that gallant commander frequently leaned for advice. After the war he became a junior member of the firm of J. M. Forbes & Company, of which his father was the head. About 1876 he became interested in the telephone as a commercial possibility, which then had been very recently perfected and brought to the attention of the public by Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor. Colonel Forbes at once recognized the great possibilities of the instrument for commercial uses, and from that time until his death devoted his best energies to the work of building up the great system of communication which has done so much to facilitate intercourse among men and to revolutionize daily life and methods of work.

In Moorfield Storey's memorial of Colonel Forbes we find this estimate of the life and character of that soldier and enterprising business man: "In this great enterprise which he managed with conspicuous success, he showed the highest abilities, courage, energy, sagacity, foresight and above all and always directness of method and an unbending integrity which have not always attended the development of great financial undertakings in this country. The American Bell Telephone Company, which he founded, enjoys an honorable pre-eminence among great corporations, for no step in its career has been marred by any taint of scandal. But great as were the demands made upon his life by his great responsibilities and his large family connections, he never failed to discharge his full duty as a citizen. He was early prominent in the movement to save the country from financial dishonor when the greenback craze for a time threatened to carry away the Republican party. To the political doctrines and methods of General Butler he was inevitable hostile and he never failed to oppose his constant attempts to control the state. He was an early advocate of civil service reform and was among the first to lead the revolt when Blaine was nominated in 1884. During the whole campaign his service on the national committee of independents was constant and ungrudging, and from that time until his death no movement for reform lacked earnest support from him. Following the fine example of his father, he had no political ambition, sought and expected no reward for what he did. His service was as silent as it was constant and effective. He acted wholly from a patriotic sense of duty and was willing after the war to give his time and his strength to the service of his country as during that struggle to venture his life in her defense. Brought up on the hills of Milton and on the island of Naushon, he was a lover of out-door sport and at home alike on the back of a horse or the deck of a yacht. He rowed in two victorious crews, with Abbot, Crowninshield, Russell and others, soon like him to be serving their country at the front. He was interested in rearing good horses and to this devoted a share of his business life, but he found time also to build and sail yachts and was never happier than when he was ploughing the waves which he had learned to love as a boy. It was characteristic of him that he sailed the 'Merlin' himself even in the races, as a sailor should, and not leave to others the responsibility while he reposed below. Yet, while he found leisure for sports and made them the means of affording his friends great pleasure, they never became to him a serious end of life. Those of his fellow citizens who, deaf to the call of public duty, devote their lives to acquiring and spending money, can find no countenance in his example. The purpose of his life was serious and high and he never allowed his love of sport to make him neglect any public or private obligation. Such is the bare outline of a wonderfully full and useful life. To the world he was a vigorous and commanding personality, but his more intimate friends saw another side of his character. The blood of Murray, Cameron and Forbes which flowed in his veins perhaps gave the strain of romance and imagination which belongs to the Highland clans. He had a singular refinement, a keen appreciation of all that is best in literature, especially in poetry, a deep sense of natural beauty, which made association with him delightful. From the Quaker ancestry of his mother's side may have come the simplicity of faith and the directness of his acts. Beneath the surface lay a rare tenderness that showed itself in acts of delicate kindness to those who needed help or sympathy, which seemed to be only the natural outcome of a generous nature. Only those who knew him in all the relations of life could recognize how many-sided his character was and in how many ways he touched his fellow men. Sprung from a singularly vigorous race, fortunate in his birth and in the circumstances of life, of strikingly noble and handsome presence, he inherited unusual strength of body and mind, and that far more precious legacy—character. He was essentially manly and lacked no quality which belongs to the highest type of manliness. Brave, true, pure, a soldier without fear and without reproach, he showed in every action of his life the high nature which his face revealed. He was equal to every position which he was called to fill. Nothing mean or low could live in the atmosphere which he carried with him, and he had the quality of a great nature—simplicity. Such men as he, by merely living, inspire all whom they meet, themselves unconscious of the good they do, and make an enduring impression upon their times, which does not end with their lives."

He was president of the American Bell Telephone Company until 1887, and member of the executive committee until the early part of 1897, and he also was a member of the board of trustees of Milton Academy, at one time president of the board, and at all times active in promoting the interests and efficiency of the institution itself. Mr. Forbes married, October 3, 1865, Edith Emerson, second daughter of Ralph Waldo Emerson, the poet and philosopher. Of this marriage eight children were born: 1. Ralph Emerson, July 10, 1866 (see post). 2. Edith, October 28, 1867, married Kenneth G. T. Webster, of Cambridge. 3. William Cameron, May 21, 1870, graduated from Harvard College, 1892; now vice-governor in the Philippines under appointment of President Roosevelt. 4. John Murray, August 27, 1871, died August 26, 1888. 5. Edward Waldo, July 16, 1873, graduated from Harvard College, B. A., 1895; married, January 29, 1907, Margaret Laughton; lives in Milton. 6. Waldo Emerson, February 28, 1870, lives in Milton. 7. Ellen Randolph, October 28, 1880, died April 30, 1881. 8. Alexander, May 14, 1882, lives in Milton.

(V) Ralph Emerson Forbes, son of William Hathaway and Edith (Emerson) Forbes, was born in Milton, Massachusetts, July 10, 1866, and gained his earlier education in Nichols' school and also in Hopkinson's school, both in Boston, then entered Harvard College for the class of '89, and remained there until the end of his junior year. He was educated for the profession of law at Harvard Law School, graduating LL. B. in 1892, and in the same year was admitted to practice in the courts of this state. Mr. Forbes is a lawyer in active general practice in Boston, but lives in Milton. He married, January 16, 1901, Elsie Cabot, born Paris, France, April 19, 1869, daughter of Walter C. and Elizabeth (Mason) Cabot. Mr. and Mrs. Forbes have four children, all born in Milton: 1. William H., February 21, 1902. 2. Ruth, October 4, 1903. 3. Margaret, May 19, 1905. 4. David Cabot, October 29, 1908.

(The Bowditch Line)

William Bowditch lived in Salem, Massachusetts, as early as 1639, and is said to have come from Dorchester, England. The baptismal name of his wife was Sarah, and she united with the church in Salem, May 10, 1640. She bore her husband two children: 1. William (see post). 2. Nathaniel, baptized in Salem 12 12th month, 1642-43.

(II) William (2), son of William (1) and Sarah Bowditch, was born in Salem in 1640 and died there before November 12, 1681. He was a merchant and collector of customs at Salem, and a man of considerable consequence in the plantation. His wife was Sarah ———, who joined the church in Salem, March 28, 1702-03. They had only one son, William, born 1663.

(III) Captain William (3), son of William (2) and Sarah Bowditch, was born in Salem in August, 1663, and died there May 28, 1728. He was a master mariner and merchant, the original treasurer of the Union Wharf proprietors, and devised his homestead to his son Joseph. He fulfilled various important public offices and was selectman and representative to the general court, a man of large influence and goodly estate, the latter of which inventoried at more than four thousand four hundred and fifty-two pounds. He married, August 30, 1688, Mary, daughter of Lieutenant Thomas and Mary (Porter) Gardner, and granddaughter of Thomas Gardner who was overseer of the planting at Cape Ann in 1624-25. Captain William and Mary (Gardner) Bowditch had eleven children, all born in Salem: 1. Mary, August 2, 1689, died October 2, 1689. 2. William, October 31, 1690, died October 12, 1706. 3. Mary, December 18, 1693, died February, 1723-24; married (first) James Butler, of Boston, (second) Captain Samuel Barton, of Salem. 4. Sarah, January 10, 1695-96, married Joseph Hathorne, of Salem. (Nathaniel Hawthorne, the famous novelist, was his descendant). 5. Thomas, June 5, 1698, died November 30, 1702. 6. Joseph, August 21, 1700, died October 6, 1780; was a captain and was called esquire; clerk of courts for many years, and a man of great humor; married Elizabeth Hunt. 7. Ebenezer, April 26, 1702 (see post). 8. Eunice, June 8, 1705, died July 2, 1705. 9. Eunice, March 22, 1707, married William Hunt, of Salem. 10. Daniel, June 19, 1709, died about 1730; mariner and lived in Salem. 11. William, January 18, 1712-13, died November 1, 1715.

(IV) Captain Ebenezer, son of Captain William (3) and Mary (Gardner) Bowditch, was born in Salem, April 26, 1702, and died there February 2, 1768. He was a master mariner and merchant and lived in Essex street in Salem. His estate inventoried at six hundred and sixteen pounds fifteen shillings. He married, August 15, 1728, Mary Turner, of Salem, who survived him. They had six children, all born in Salem: 1. Captain Ebenezer, September 28, 1729, died August 3, 1771; married Elizabeth Gilman, of Ipswich. 2. (V) Captain Habakkuk, son of Captain Ebenezer and Mary (Turner) Bowditch, was born in Salem and baptized there March 5, 1737-38. He lived in Salem and was a master mariner; died July 28, 1798. He married, July 23, 1765, Mary Ingersoll, daughter of Nathaniel and Bethia (Gardner) Ingersoll, of Salem, and a descendant of the sixth generation of Richard Ingersoll, one of the prominent characters in early Salem history. Captain Habakkuk and Mary (Ingersoll) Bowditch had seven children, all born in Salem: 1. Mary, baptized March 30, 1766, married probably David Martin, of Salem. 2. Habakkuk, baptized May 15, 1768. 3. Elizabeth, baptized May 19, 1771. 4. Nathaniel, born March 26, 1773 (see post). 5. Samuel Ingersoll, baptized September 12, 1779. 6. William, baptized September 12, 1779. 7. Lois, baptized April 1, 1781.

(VI) Nathaniel Bowditch, LL. D., F. R. S., son of Captain Habakkuk and Mary (Ingersoll) Bowditch, was born in Salem, Massachusetts, March 26, 1773, died in Boston, March

16, 1838. At the age of ten years he left school to work for his father, who was a cooper by trade, but soon afterward became clerk in the store of a ship chandler. He early began to manifest those remarkable faculties which afterward distinguished him above every other man of his profession, and although he had been compelled to forego school privileges when quite young, yet he seems only to have begun to learn. He acquired the Latin and French languages for the purpose of translating Newton's "Principia" and LaPlace's "Mecanique Céleste," and soon attained a height of mathematical greatness far above all of his contemporaries. His work on practical navigation was the very best ever published up to that time and afterward sustained its high standard for many years, being used almost universally among sailors and mariners both in this country and in Europe. Difficult problems and the abstruse windings of mathematics were his pastime and those calculations which were inscrutable to others were as play to him. But while particularly devoted to mathematics he did not neglect other subjects and was a constant student of the Bible, of Shakespeare, and became proficient in Spanish, Italian and German, as well as in Latin and French; and although a constant student he always made it a rule never to permit his studies to interfere with his business occupations. In 1795 he sailed from Salem as clerk for Captain Prince in the ship "Henry" and before 1804 he had made five long voyages to the East Indies, Portugal and also to various Mediterranean ports, serving first as supercargo and afterward as master of a vessel. It is related of him that while out on his third voyage the ship was chased by a French privateer, and when young Bowditch had been directed to assist in passing ammunition up to the deck he was seen quietly sitting on a powder keg working out some problem with slate and pencil. So proficient was he in navigation that on his last voyage he distinguished himself by bringing his ship into Salem harbor during a heavy blinding snow storm with no other guide than his own reckoning and a single glimpse of Baker's island light. In attempting to make corrections to a certain standard work on navigation he encountered so many errors from the beginning that he determined to publish a work of his own on that subject, and in 1802 brought out his "New American Practical Navigator." After quitting the sea he became president of the Essex Fire and Marine Insurance Company, of Salem. He declined several offers of professorships in Harvard in 1808, the University of Virginia in 1818, and a like tempting offer of a desirable position in the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1820. While at Salem he made an excellent chart of the harbor there and also of the harbors at Beverly, Marblehead and Manchester. He contributed twenty-three papers, chiefly on astronomy, to transactions of the American Academy of Sciences and also wrote many articles for the American edition of Rhees' "Cyclopedia." He undertook the translation of LaPlace's "Mecanique Celeste" in 1814 and finished the greater part of that arduous task in 1817. In 1823 he was appointed actuary of the Massachusetts Hospital Life Insurance Company, with a liberal salary, which provided him with the means to publish his very valuable work of the translation to which allusion has been made. The first volume appeared in 1820, the second in 1832, the third in 1834, and the fourth volume soon after his death; the fifth volume was added many years after he had passed from life's stage. During the later years of his life Dr. Bowditch was a member of the board of trustees of Boston Athenaeum, member and at one time president of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and also member of the corporation of Harvard College, whose honorary degree of Doctor of Laws he had received in 1816. At the time of his death and for several years previously he was a member of the Royal Society of London, the Royal Academy of Palermo, the Royal Academy of Berlin, the Royal Irish Society, the Royal Astronomical Society of London and of the British Association.

He married twice, his second wife, whom he married October 28, 1800, being his cousin, Mary Ingersoll, daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Hodges) Ingersoll, of Salem, and a descendant of the seventh generation of Richard Ingersoll, of Salem. Among Dr. Bowditch's children were sons Nathaniel Ingersoll, author, of whom mention is made in the succeeding paragraph; Henry Ingersoll, M. D., born Salem, August 9, 1808, graduated from Harvard College in 1828, Harvard Medical School in 1832, and afterward became professor of clinical medicine in his alma mater; and Jonathan Ingersoll, LL. D., capitalist, trustee of large estates and patron of the sciences.

(VII) Nathaniel Ingersoll, son of Nathaniel and Mary (Ingersoll) Bowditch, was born in Salem, Massachusetts, January 17, 1805, and died in Brookline, Massachusetts, April 16, 1861. He graduated from Harvard College in 1822, studied law and was admitted to practice in 1825, but soon afterward left the profession and devoted his principal to business as a conveyancer. "He became noted for his accuracy and industry, and it is said that scarcely a transfer of real estate was made in Boston without his examination and approval of the title." He wrote altogether fifty-five volumes of land titles, besides making many plans and maps. He also gave much attention to public institutions in Boston, particularly the Massachusetts General Hospital, of which he published at his own expense a comprehensive history, in 1857. He had previously issued a memoir of his father, in 1839. In 1857 he published his "Suffolk Surnames," (enlarged editions, 1858 and 1861). This work contains curious surnames met with by the author in his business as conveyancer, and its chief peculiarity is in his system of classification by the derivation of the names. Mr. Bowditch bestowed much of his large fortune upon charitable objects, including a gift of $70,000 to Harvard for founding scholarships, and a bequest of $2,000 for the purchase of books." He married Elizabeth Brown, and by her had children: Elizabeth Francis, Mary Ingersoll, Ebenezer Francis and Alice Francis, wife of James Murray Forbes (see Forbes).

One of the many notable characters in early New England history was the founder of the American family, bearing the surname of Wilbur, but which in the time of the ancestor himself was spelled Wildbore. This rendition is said to have been continued through one or two generations of some branches of the family after that of Samuel, and in various early records in towns where some of his descendants became settled the name appears in different forms, and Savage gives account of Wilbore, Wildboare, Wilbur, Wildbore and the name Wilbur now represents a majority of the descendants of Samuel of Boston and Portsmouth, Rhode Island, and Taunton, Massachusetts, where the scene of his life was chiefly laid, and thus is distinguished from the more numerous families of Wilbur and Wilber. It may be said, however that so good an authority as Austin in his genealogical dictionary gives the family name of Samuel as Wilbur. In the present work, the name will be

(I) Samuel Wildbore was born in England and is believed to have come to this country before 1633, with his wife and several children. The christian name of his first wife was Ann, and reliable accounts mention her as a daughter of Thomas Bradford, of Lancaster, Yorkshire, England, from which part of the dominion Samuel himself is said to have come. His second wife was Elizabeth, widow of Thomas Lechford. The year of Samuel's birth is not known, but he died September 29, 1656. He was made freeman in Boston in 1633, and with his wife Ann, was admitted to the church in December of the same year. In 1634 he was assessor of taxes, and on November 20, 1637, was one of the several disarmed "in consequence of having been seduced and led into dangerous error by the opinions and revelations of Mr. Wheelwright and Mrs. Hutchinson," and therefore being given license to depart the colony, he took up his place of abode in the colony of Rhode Island. He is next recorded in Portsmouth, Rhode Island, where on March 7, 1638, he was one of eighteen who entered into the following compact: "We, whose names are underwritten do here solemnly in the presence of Jehovah incorporate ourselves into a Bodie Politick, and as he shall help, will submit our persons, lives and estates, unto our Lord Jesus Christ, the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, and to all those perfect and most absolute laws of his given us in his holy word of truth, to be guided and judged thereby." It is evident that Samuel Wildbore was a person of some consequence in the plantation at Portsmouth, for in 1638 he was present at a public meeting, upon notice, and in the same year was chosen clerk of the train band. In 1639 he was made constable and given an allotment of a neck of land lying in the great cove, containing about two acres. In 1640 he and Ralph Earle, who seems to have been in some way associated with him, were ordered to furnish the town of Newport with new sawed boards at eight shillings per hundred feet, and half-inch boards at seven shillings, to be delivered at the "pit," by the water-side. On March 16, 1641, he was made a freeman in Portsmouth, became sergeant of militia in 1644, and in 1645 returned with his wife to Boston. On November 29, 1645, Samuel Wildbore and his wife were received unto the church in Boston, and in a deposition made May 2, 1648, he made oath that when he married the widow of Thomas Lechford he received no part of her former husband's estate. In 1655 he was again in Portsmouth, but at the time of making his will he lived in Taunton and at the same time had a house in Boston. His will was recorded in both Massachusetts and the Plymouth Colony. That instrument bore date April 30, 1656, and was admitted to probate November 1 following, which fact determines the year in which he died. His property was inventoried at two hundred and eighty-two pounds, nineteen shillings, six pence. His children, all by his first marriage, were: Samuel, Joseph, William and Shadrach.

(II) William, third son of Samuel and Ann (Bradford) Wildbore, was born in 1630, and died in 1710. He spelled his name Wilbor. About 1654 he settled at Little Compton, Rhode Island, but died at Tiverton. His wife, whom he married in 1653, was Martha. Their children were: Mary, Joseph, John, Thomas, William, Martha, Samuel, Daniel, Joan and Benjamin.

(III) Samuel (2), fifth son of William and Martha Wilbor, was born in 1664, died in 1740. He married Mary, daughter of Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Stapes) Potter, and they had: Martha, Samuel, William, Mary, Joanna, Thankful, Elizabeth, Thomas, Abial, Hannah and Isaac.

(IV) William (2), second son of Samuel (2) and Mary (Potter) Wilbor, was born January 6, 1695, died September, 1774. He married, June 20, 1717, Esther, daughter of Thomas and Esther Burgess. She was born in 1696 and died in 1760. Their children were: Thomas, Mary, Esther (died young), Lydia (died young), Samuel, William, Daniel, Charles, Esther, Lydia, Deborah and Clarke.

(V) Thomas, eldest child of William (2) and Esther (Burgess) Wilbor, was born May 1, 1718, died March 5, 1787. He resided in Hopkinton, Rhode Island. He married (first) March 9, 1739, Edith Woodman, born December 20, 1719, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Briggs) Woodman. He married (second) July 27, 1761, Mary Hoxie, born September 9, 1736, died July 4, 1827, daughter of Solomon and Mary (Davis) Hoxie. She survived him and married (second) January 30, 1799, Jabez Wing. The children by the second wife Mary were: William, Isaac, Mary, John, next mentioned.

(VI) John, youngest child of Thomas and Mary Wilbur, was born in Hopkinton, Rhode Island, July 17, 1774, died in Hopkinton, May

1, 1856, and was buried in the Friends' graveyard in that town. He was religiously inclined, and was brought up by his parents in the old and orthodox school. He was a useful citizen, often taught school and was a land surveyor through life. At twenty-eight years of age he was appointed an elder and was officially acknowledged as such in 1812. In 1824-25 he conceived the idea of knowing more of the country and of the Quakers, traveled through various parts of New England and in 1827 visited the state of New York. His increased experience and growing zeal led him in 1831 to visit England, where he preached to the Friends very acceptably for two years. For nearly twenty years he remained at home attending to his duties and writing. In 1852-53 he traveled and preached in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York. In 1853 he made a second visit to England, where he was again engaged in religious labor. He was a conservative in opposing innovations made by Elias Hicks and Joseph J. Gurney. On account of this opposition he was denounced in 1838, his monthly meeting, that of South Kingston, was dissolved and its members were added to the Greenwich meeting, by which in 1843 he was disowned. A division in the society ensued, an independent yearly meeting being established by the Wilburites, as they were called, of Rhode Island and other parts of New England. His private writings were very extensive. In 1845, after the Gurney schism, he published a duodecimo of three hundred and fifty-five pages, entitled "A Narrative and Exposition." His "Journal and Correspondence," an octavo of five hundred and ninety-six pages, published by his friends, appeared in 1859, three years after his death. He was a citizen who was held in highest esteem by those who knew him and his differences with those of his own sect were on religious matters only. Among other denominations, he was honored for his high character and ability, and often preached in their sanctuaries. He married, October 17, 1793, Lydia Collins (see Collins VI), who was born April 29, 1778, daughter of Amos and Thankful Collins. She died December 19, 1852. They had children: Thomas, Amos C., Lydia, Phebe, Susan C., Sarah S., Mary, John, Hannah C., Ruth, William H., Anna A. and Elizabeth W.

(VII) Dr. William Hale, son of John and Lydia (Collins) Wilbur, was born in Hopkinton, Rhode Island, March 10, 1816, died in Westerly, Rhode Island, October 12, 1879.

During his early years he made good use of such educational advantages as were then enjoyed in the region of his birth, and afterwards he attended for a while the Friends' school in Providence. He also taught to some extent. As a mathematician he had few equals and as a Latin scholar he was singularly adept. When about twenty-seven years of age, he commenced the study of medicine with his brother, Dr. Thomas Wilbur, of Fall River, Massachusetts, and while continuing his studies there he attended the lectures in the medical department of the University of New York. Before completing his course he became much interested in the hydropathic treatment of disease, as taught and practiced by Priessnitz at Graefenburg, in Germany; and after concluding his course, with a view to making himself perfectly familiar with that system, he went to Europe and spent nearly a year there, taking treatment under Priessnitz, and visiting the principal hydropathic institutions on the continent and in Great Britain. Returning to this country, he established a hydropathic institution at Pawtucket, Rhode Island, where some wonderful cures of chronic disease were performed. After two years of practice in connection with that institution, finding that comparatively few individuals could take advantage of institutions of the kind, while those taking treatment at home lacked the necessary facilities for its success, he gave up the institution, then practiced successfully for nearly a year at Warwick; and finally, in order to be near his father's family, went to Westerly, about 1851, where he continued to practice ever afterward, with the exception of two years and three months spent as a surgeon in the army during the civil war.

In the fall of 1862, when the Union army stood in need of every loyal arm, Dr. Wilbur gave up a large and lucrative private practice, and entered the army as surgeon of the First Rhode Island Cavalry. He joined the regiment December 16, the day after the Army of the Potomac re-crossed the Rappahannock from the battle of Fredericksburg. The regiment immediately went into winter quarters, but from the active part taken by it in the summer campaign as a part of the Army of Virginia and later in the season as a part of the Army of the Potomac, the sick and wounded needed and received constant attention. When hospital accommodations were so limited that many of the boys were obliged to remain in their tents, his visits to them were regular and prompt; and through all that cold and unusually rigorous winter, his presence and his sympathy gave hope and courage when most needed. With no pompous austerity, which some army surgeons seemed to regard as so befitting their rank, he performed his duties with fidelity, and won the confidence of all, as being wise and skillful in his profession. Early in the spring of 1863 the First Rhode Island became a part of the First Brigade of the Second Division Cavalry Corps, Army of the Potomac, and on March 17 took part in that terrific hand-to-hand fight, which was the first instance in the war where any considerable number of cavalry met sabre to sabre in the open field, and which is known as the battle of Kelly's Ford. During this engagement Dr. Wilbur remained upon the field, performing surgical operations under fire of the enemy, and won from all the recognition that he was not only skillful in his profession, but intrepid as a soldier. The troops again returned to their winter quarters. Hospitals were improvised, and the surgeon's hands were full. At the time he assumed the duties of brigade surgeon, and none was oftener called upon in consultation, and to no one were more difficult cases submitted. He entered the army for no holiday purpose, but gave his best service to the duties in hand; and being decided in his convictions, he pursued the course he deemed to be right, with the most exact fidelity. The winter camp was broken in April and the regiment entered upon the spring campaign of 1863. On the 4th of May it participated in the great battle of Chancellorsville, and performed constant picket and scout duty, when the Army of the Potomac commanded its northward movement to overtake Lee. On the 17th of June the regiment, by a special order, was detached from the brigade, sent on special service, and met the enemy at Middleburgh. This was also a hand-to-hand cavalry fight in which the regiment suffered fearfully in killed, wounded and missing. Through all this Dr. Wilbur, having resumed his duties with the regiment, remained at his post and rank and file affectionately regarded him as their helper in every time of need. He was constantly in the saddle, and although his horse was hit by a shell yet no danger drove him from the spot where duty called. The regiment was then ordered to Alexandria to recruit, but such was the pressing need of men to pursue Lee that a detachment of it, accompanied by Surgeon Wilbur, was ordered to the front. Although the regiment was not engaged at Gettysburg, yet it was represented in the hottest of the fire, and poured out some of its heroic blood in that most desperate battle of the war. August 17 the different detachments of the regiment came together near Warrentown, and again began service at the front. The cavalry experienced severe and trying service during the remaining days of 1863. The surgeon was constantly with the men, and was ever solicitous for their welfare. His skill was in frequent requisition and no personal weariness made him forget the wants of others. In March, 1864, the most of the men of the First Rhode Island Cavalry re-enlisted and went home on furloughs. Dr. Wilbur went home at this time, reaching Providence March 26, and returning April 8. The regiment was assigned to that part of the Army of the Potomac which was sent to unite with the Army of the James in laying siege to Richmond and Pittsburg, and cutting off Lee's communications with the South. In June the regiment, after repeated skirmishes, and participating in the battle at White House Landing, and many exhausting scout duties performed by different detachments, at length crossed the James river, July 27, and advanced near to Malvern Hill. The next day it took part in the battle of Deep Bottom, and on the 31st was ordered to City Point. In all these marches and counter-marches, the surgeon accompanied his command, faithful to his professional duties, and from his cheerful and hopeful disposition he encouraged the weak and inspired the strong. Although suffering himself from a mild form of typhoid fever during those hot summer months, and many days being quite unable to remain in the saddle, yet his strong desire to be always found in the path of duty, and the sense of professional responsibility which always weighed upon him, nerved him to remain constant at his post. The confederate forces dashing down the Shenandoah Valley and crossing the Potomac, the regiment became part of that force which was ordered back, and on the 12th of August became a part of Sheridan's command. Day and night the men were in their saddles hunting confederate scouts and raiders. The brigade train was attacked near Winchester by Mosby's guerillas, who plundered some of the wagons and burned others. Here the regiment suffered a serious loss in the destruction of the regimental and company books and papers, while many of the officers, including the surgeon, lost all their clothing save what they were wearing. The regiment was part of the force that was detailed to destroy as a military necessity the corps in the Shendoah Valley and was later the body-guard to the chief of cavalry, and while serving in this capacity both officers and men were constantly in positions of danger, being called to act as aids, couriers and bearers of dispatches. In this exhausting work, although participating in several battles, the regiment was constantly engaged until the close of the year. In December the regiment was consolidated into a batallion. The new organization being entitled only to an assistant surgeon, Dr. Wilbur, with other officers and men, was mustered out of the service on the 21st, leaving behind him written in the hearts of all, the record of a patriotic, kind and efficient medical officer, whose skill and devotion to his responsible duties had saved many sick and wounded.

At the close of his service in the war, Dr. Wilbur returned to Westerly and resumed his practice; and there after all it must be said his life-work was done. Deeply absorbed in his profession, and having a just estimate of its high mission, he gave to it the full wealth of his knowledge, his experience and his life. He was exact in his habits of thought, methodical in his investigations, studious in keeping pace with the progress made in the science of medicine, holding his opinions tenaciously when matured and being thus critical and thorough in his own culture, he was intolerant of pretense and sham in others. He was too human to be faultless, yet where sickness and sorrow dwelt there could his ministering hand be found. Such was his sympathy and his tenderness of nature, that he allowed no pecuniary considerations to swerve him from the performance of what he deemed to be his professional duty. Holding high rank as a surgeon as well as a physician, he spent his life in the community of his residence, responding to the call for help, without regard to the source whence it came, and by his skill restoring life and light to many a stricken home. He made many personal sacrifices and did much to increase the sum of human happiness, and his memory will be treasured with affection and gratitude by a host of loving friends. He was the senior physician of Westerly at the time of his death; his practice was very extensive and he was recognized as one of the most able physicians and surgeons, not at his home only but throughout Rhode Island and Connecticut. He died suddenly from the last of a series of attacks covering several years, and brought on by poison with which he was inoculated in performing a surgical operation. His funeral held at the Baptist church was conducted by the Friends, and the attendance was so large that many were unable to gain admission.

Dr. William H. Wilbur was married at Smithfield, Rhode Island, April 23, 1849, to Eliza S. Mann, who was born in Franklin, Massachusetts, September 6, 1824, died in Springfield, Massachusetts, January 2, 1906, daughter of Thomas S. and Eliza (Scott) Mann, of Franklin, Massachusetts. They had three children: John, born September 20, 1850, died September 10, 1895; Sarah M., whose sketch follows, and Caroline E., who died young.

(VIII) Dr. Sarah M., daughter of Dr. William H. and Eliza S. (Mann) Wilbur, was born in Westerly, July 9, 1853. She attended private school and William Woodbridge's academy at Westerly until she was seventeen years of age, when she entered Rutgers Female College in New York City and graduated from that institution with the degree of A. B. in 1872, receiving the honorary degree of A. M. in 1879, and that of P.H. D. in 1887. After leaving Rutgers she matriculated in the Woman's Medical College of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, from which she received the degree of M. D. in 1885. Soon after graduating she became an interne in the New England Hospital for Women and Children at Boston, Massachusetts, where she spent her first year in the practice of her chosen profession. In 1886 she was appointed resident physician at the State Primary School at Monson, Massachusetts, where she had over four hundred children under her care for two years. From there she went to Staten Island and was resident physician to the Nursery and Children's Hospital for five months. Resigning that position she came to Springfield, Massachusetts, in 1886, and began practice May 6. Her natural skill, thorough training, and conscientious attention to her duties have made her one of the leading women physicians in Massachusetts. She is a member of Springfield Academy of Medicine, the Hampden County Medical Society, the Massachusetts Medical Society and was a member of the New England Hospital Medical Society.

(The Collins Line).

The Collins family of New England, whose progenitor was Henry Collins, came from England and settled in Massachusetts, in the pioneer days, as documentary evidence clearly shows.

(I) Henry Collins, as recent research has developed, resided on Tatcliff Highway in the parish of Stepney in the eastern part of the city of London, and worshipped at the old parish church of St. Dunstan, in that place. The church records show that several of his children were baptized in this church, among them being his son John, at the age of eight days, January 22, 1631. Henry Collins, born in England in 1606, died in Lynn, Massachusetts, February 20, 1687, aged eighty-one years. The passenger list of the ship "Abigail" of London contains the following record of June 30, 1635:

Henry Collins settled in Essex street, Lynn, Massachusetts, where he remained until his death. In 1637 a town meeting was held in which Daniel Howe, Richard Walker and Henry Collins were chosen a committee to divide the lands, or as it was expressed in the records, "To lay out ffarmes." The land was laid out in those parts of the town best adapted to cultivation, and the woodlands were reserved as common property, called the "Town Common," and was not divided until sixty-nine years afterwards. In a list of names, about one hundred in number, recorded in the town records in the year 1638, which follows the above extract, appears the following: "Henry Collins upland and meadow 80 acres and ten." The ten acres were a separate allotment, and undoubtedly his village or town lot where he lived. In 1639 Henry Collins was a member of the Salem court. The facts of Henry Collins bringing servants, and the references to him in the public records of Lynn, show that he was a man of importance in the community. He was frequently called upon to perform duties of public trust and confidence, and sometimes acted as an advocate in court trials. His wife, Ann, died at Lynn, probably in 1690, as her will dated in 1690 was probated in that year.

(II) John, second son of Henry and Ann Collins, was born in London, England, January 14, 1631 (O. S.) and was lost by shipwreck with his son John in 1679. In a list of names returned of Quakers in Lynn for the year 1703 appear the names of Samuel Collins, Samuel Collins Jr. and John Collins. The estate of John Collins was valued at £365 1s. 6d. and letters of administration were granted to the widow, June, 1680. John Collins married, at Lynn, Massachusetts, Abigail Johnson, daughter of Richard Johnson. "Richard Johnson came over in 1630 and lived with Sir Richard Saltonstall at Watertown. He was admitted freeman in 1637. He came to Lynn the same year and settled as a farmer on the eastern end of the commons. He died in 1660, aged 54." Abigail Collins married (second) March 3, 1681, Thomas Farrar. The children of John and Abigail Collins were sixteen, twelve of whom survived him. Mary (died young), John (died young), Samuel, Abigail, John, Joseph, Elizabeth, Benjamin, Mary, Daniel, Nathaniel, Hannah, Sarah, Lois, Alice and William (John), next mentioned.

(III) John (2), youngest child of John (1) and Abigail (Johnson) Collins, was born June 28, 1679, and named William. After the death of his father John and brother John in the same year, his mother renamed him John, by which name he was ever afterward known. John Collins was one of six persons who bought, May 22, 1710, three thousand acres of wild land in what is now the northeastern part of the town of Hopkinton, Rhode Island. In religious faith he was a Quaker. He died in Charlestown, Rhode Island, "20th day, 10th Month, 1755." He married, in Lynn, Massachusetts, January 13, 1704, Susannah Daggett, daughter of William and Rebecca Daggett. She was born in Saco, Maine, 1685, and died at Charlestown, Rhode Island, "14th day, 1st month, 1753." The history of Richmond, Rhode Island, contains the following account of her: "When a small child she was taken to the wigwam of an Indian chief by his squaw who found her lost in the woods. Late at night the chief returned home and told the squaw of a plan adopted to exterminate the whites. She cautioned him, saying there was a little paleface sleeping in a bed of skins in the wigwam. The chief then told her the child must die, to which she remonstrated, saying that she had promised to take her home in the morning. The chief passed a firebrand over the face of Susannah, and observing signs of consciousness, spared her life, and she was able to afterwards give her friends timely warning and thwart the plans of the Indians." The children of John (William) and Susannah were: Rebecca, Hezekiah, Sarah, Jedediah, Lydia, John, Ebenezer, Benjamin, Samuel and Abigail.

(IV) Rev. John (3), third son of John (2) (William) and Susannah (Daggett) Collins, was born in Charlestown, Rhode Island, March 21, 1716, and died in Stonington, October 1, 1778. This John Collins was a Quaker preacher of great power and influence and ministered to the Friends' church of Richmond, Rhode Island, of which he was one of the first trustees, and afterwards of the church of the same sect situate one mile west of the village of Hopkinton. Frederick Denison says of him in "Westerly and Its Witnesses," "One of the most distinguished speakers in the Hopkinton Meeting was John Collins. Concerning him a testimony was issued by the Monthly Meeting in 1780, from which we present an extract: 'He was born in the town then called Westerly (now Charlestown) December 12, 1716, of believing parents, and when almost twenty-four years of age was convinced of the blessed truth and became zealous and circumspect in life and conversation and for truth's sake took up the cross and denied himself of his former pleasures and delights. It was not long after his conviction before his mouth was opened to a public testimony, wherein although for some years he had but few words in meeting, yet his appearance was both acceptable and edifying to Friends, and as he proved himself faithful and diligent in the gift bestowed upon him the Lord was pleased to enlarge it so that he became an able minister of the Gospel.' He was an eminent minister and for many years sat at the head of New England Yearly Meeting. 'He was much engaged and took much pains in endeavoring to have the Africans or negroes freed from slavery, and often testified against that wicked practice.' His name is a precious legacy to Friends." John Collins married, March 15, 1744, Mehitable Bowen, born at Rehoboth, Massachusetts, August 22, 1725, daughter of Daniel and Mehitable (Chaffee) Bowen. Their children were: John, Susanna, Amos, Benjamin, Samuel, Sarah, Abigail, Stephen and Ruth.

(V) Amos, second son of Rev. John (3)

and Mehitable (Bowen) Collins, was born in Charlestown, Rhode Island, July 10, 1749, died in Stonington, Connecticut, May 22, 1796. He married, August 10, 1767, at Hopkinton, Rhode Island, Thankful Clarke, born November 9, 1748, died July 30, 1831. Both husband and wife were buried in the Friends' yard at Hopkinton. Their children, all born at Stonington except Abel and Ruth, who were born in Hopkinton, were: Timothy, Abel, Isaac, Amos, Susanna, Lydia, William, John, Ruth, Hannah and Nancy.

(VI) Lydia, daughter of Amos and Thankful (Clarke) Collins, was born April 20, 1778; married, October 17, 1793, John Wilbur. (See Wilbur VI).

The Dutch element in America
MILLS has never completely received its full measure of praise. They fought bravely in all our wars. The Keystone state of Pennsylvania owes its position as much to the thrifty Dutch population as to any other race. The Dutch have had their share in filling up the great west, where mighty states have been carved out of the prairies. In estimating what we owe to the old Dutch traders, we must include the influence of Manhattan Island on America as a whole; for Manhattan was principally Dutch. The Dutch have two presidents on their roll, Van Buren and a recent occupant of the chair. The Vanderbilts and Van Rensselaers were Dutch people. Mills is not necessarily and exclusively a Dutch name. John Stuart Mills, who is perhaps the greatest man to bear the name, was so little of a Dutchman that he was born of Scotch parentage from the Kirriemuir district of Scotland. The great Mills in America have been: Clark Mills, the sculptor, whose commissions included the equestrian statue of General Jackson; Hon. Roger Q. Mills, United States senator from Texas and author of the Mills bill; Darius O. Mills, the philanthropist, who was from Long Island English stock. The story of the Mills family which we have now in hand is a legible one and writ with a free hand.

(I) Pieter Wanterse Vander Meulen, when Anglicized was Peter Walbert of the Mills, which finally became shortened to Peter Mills, was born in Holland and came to this country, settling at Windsor, Connecticut, June 9, 1668, Edward Messenger gave to Peter twenty acres to build a house on. The same year Peter sold to Samuel Filley twenty acres lying in Greenfield. In 1683 Edward Messenger gave to Peter a dwelling house in Windsor. Peter's name is signed to a petition from the men of the new church at Windsor to the general court. He married Dorcas, daughter of Edward Messenger, in 1666. He died in 1710 and she in 1720. Her will was made November 21, 1714, and probated in 1720.

(II) Captain Peter (2), son of Pieter (1) and Dorcas Mills, was born in Windsor in 1668 and died there in 1756. He was a tailor by trade. He served as captain in the Ellington parish trainbands that marched to the relief of Boston on the alarm in April, 1775. He also served in 1779.

"East Windsor, 31st Aug. 1779.

R. G."

He married Joanna Porter in July, 1692. Children: Ebenezer, Return, Eleazer, Mary and Sarah.

(III) Rev. Ebenezer, eldest son of Captain Peter (2) and Joanna (Porter) Mills, was born in Windsor, died in Sandisfield, Massachusetts, in 1792. He graduated from Yale College in the class of 1738, locating as a preacher at Haddam and then Simsbury, Connecticut, and in 1760 he went to Sandisfield, where he was a pioneer settler. He was noted for his wit and extempore rhyming. He married Mary, daughter of John Drake, of Simsbury. Children: Pelatiah, a lawyer known as Mills-pro-Rege; Rev. Gideon, Rev. Jedediah, Peter, John, Daniel, Ann and Drake.

(IV) Drake, the last of the eight children of Rev. Ebenezer and Mary (Drake) Mills, was born in Sandisfield in 1756 and died there in 1821. He was a soldier in the revolutionary war. He married Sarah Saga. Children: Peter, John, Otis, a merchant of Charleston, South Carolina; Drake, a merchant of New York City; Sedgwick, Edward, Samuel, Mary, Theodosia and Sarah, married Hon. Erastus O. Beach, of Sandisfield; Hannah, married Colonel Jared Ingersoll, of Pittsfield; Celestia A.

(V) Hon. John, second of the twelve children of Drake and Sarah (Saga) Mills, was born in Sandisfield, December 29, 1787, died in Springfield, September 8, 1861. He studied law in the office of Hon. John Phelps, of Granville, and was admitted to practice in 1812. He resided in Southwick and was a leader at the bar. As a Democrat he was elected to the Massachusetts senate in 1823-24-25-26-27, and the last two years was president, a position which he discharged with dignity and impartiality. He introduced and carried through a bill to abolish capital punishment in Massachusetts. In 1826 he was appointed a commissioner to settle the boundary line between Massachusetts and Connecticut. He was the candidate of the Democracy to run against Daniel Webster in 1827 for United States senator. In 1835 he was postmaster of Southwick under the appointment of President Jackson, and held the office of United States district attorney for Massachusetts from 1835 to 1840 under Van Buren, when the Whigs came into power. In 1836 he moved to Springfield, Massachusetts, and lived on Howard street. He was state treasurer in 1843. He presided at the ratification meetings in Springfield in 1844 over the nomination of James K. Polk. He was one of the commissioners appointed by President Tyler on the part of the United States to settle the international boundary dispute between Maine and Canada, in which position he showed marked ability. By 1848 the slavery question was arousing the political conscience of the country and Mr. Mills forsook his old party affiliations and joined the Free Soil party. He presided at the convention of the new party held in Boston and was nominated for lieutenant-governor. As a Free Soiler he was a member of the house of representatives in 1851. He was president of the Hampden Agricultural Society and the Hampden Mutual Fire Insurance Company. Williams College conferred upon him the honorary degree of A. M. in 1823. Mr. Mills was an able lawyer, a forceful speaker and commanded the respect of both the bench and bar and was highly esteemed as a citizen. He married Emily Foote, daughter of Colonel Enos Foote. Children: Enos, John, Isaac and Sarah.

(VI) Isaac, third son of Hon. John and Emily (Foote) Mills, was born in Southwick, January 29, 1826, died in Springfield in 1892. When he was ten years old his father removed to this city and first had his home on Howard street. The boy attended the private schools of Mr. Lawton and Mr. Lombard, where many leading citizens received their early training. For a time Mr. Mills also attended Monson Academy, but he did not graduate from that school, leaving to enter business as a clerk in a railroad office at Bridgeport, Connecticut. Thence he went to Scranton, Pennsylvania, for a time, but during his early manhood returned to Springfield to live, becoming junior partner in the firm of Deane, Packard & Mills, car builders, who had their shops on the river bank near the foot of Bridge street, where the brick tenement block of Eliphalet Trask used to stand. Mr. Mills entered the employment of his father-in-law, who was a coal merchant. It had been started in 1833 by James Rabb and had always been located at the junction of Court and Water streets, where Mr. Rabb sold flour, feed and grain. In 1866 Mr. Mills bought out the entire business which he conducted alone until April 1, 1891. Later it was sold to Richard W. Rice, who had been his clerk for many years. He was a director in the "Old Stone Wall Fire Insurance Company," the Mutual Fire Assurance Company of Springfield. While Mr. Mills kept out of politics he always had that interest in affairs which a good citizen owes to the state. He was one of those who looked on President Cleveland as the best public servant of the time, and in general Mr. Mills of late years took his choice of candidates. Mr. Mills and the late Governor Trask, who were always intimate, seemed like spared oaks in that quarter of the town where they had for so many years done business, and which was once more lively than it is now. He married Anne L., daughter of Edmund Palmer, of Springfield, a prominent man of his day. Children: A son, who died in infancy; Emily and Elizabeth H., who are unmarried and live in the residence built by their father on Crescent Hill, a pleasant suburb of Springfield.

There has been a certain WHITTIER advancement in genealogical study in the last few decades. It is a wholesome fact to note the interest being taken by so many families in the study of ancestry. To record the history of preceding generations is a duty each owes to each. Ripe scholarship and men of able minds have devoted their time to the elucidation of its problems and they were thought not beneath the dignity of men of the mental caliber of Rev. Dr. A. H. Quint and Judge Holmes. We come now to an old Quaker family who settled at the mouth of the Merrimac. Barred from the glory of war, the Quaker has been uppermost in the triumphs of peace, in the contemplative life and in literature. Bayard Taylor was out of a Pennsylvania Quaker family and the Hon. Joseph G. Cannon, speaker of the National house of representatives, was of Quaker parentage from North Carolina.

(I) Thomas Whittier was born in England in 1620 and came to this country from Southampton in the ship "Confidence" of London, John Jobson, master. In 1647 he came to Haverhill, Massachusetts, from Newbury, that state, and brought a swarm of bees, the first in the place. They were willed to him by Henry Rolfe, brother to John, who was a fellow passenger with Thomas from England. At that time it was no mean legacy. Bees were not native to America, and the Indians knew nothing of them. In 1648 the valuation of Thomas' property was eighty pounds. On May 30, 1651, he was appointed by the general court to run out the bounds of the plantation. In 1652, in the division of plough-land, he was granted lot thirteen of seven and one-half acres. He was on the petition to the general court to revoke Pike's sentence. Pike had been fined and disfranchised for giving vent to incendiary remarks about the authority of the governor. Pike was a Quaker exhorter and the court forbid him to exhort in public his favorite religion, upon which he made the remarks attributed to him. Thomas was admitted a freeman, May 23, 1666. Thomas signed the agreement with John Johnson, the blacksmith of Charlestown, to come to Haverhill and pursue his calling. The inhabitants were in sore need of one and Johnson was given a gratuity in consideration that he come and to this Thomas contributed. In 1669 he asked to be excused from serving as a constable, and was excused on condition that he find some other suitable person satisfactory to the authorities to take his place. Offices were forced upon people in those days. In 1680 he was one of the committee to select a coadjutor to Rev. Mr. Ward, the minister. In 1683 he voted to place the new meeting house on the old site. In 1686 he was lot-layer, an important office. It was customary for the nearest neighbors to sleep in the garrisons at night, but Thomas, whose Quaker faith brooked no resistance, always refused to shelter himself and family beneath its roof. Relying upon the weapons of his faith, he left his own house unguarded and unprotected with palisades and carried with him no weapons of war. The Indians frequently visited him and the family often heard them, in the stillness of the evening, whispering beneath the windows and saw them peep in upon the little group of defenseless beings. Friend Whittier always treated them civilly and hospitably and they never molested him or his. Thomas was one of the snow-shoe men of 1711. In 1719 the people of the west end of Haverhill, now Methuen, petitioned to be laid out as a distinct parish and on this Thomas appears as a signer. In the fifth division of land in 1721 he drew lot nine. Thomas was an excellent penman and specimens of his writing exist today. He married Ruth Green. Children: Mary, born August 9, 1647; John (see later); Ruth, August 1, 1651; Thomas, June 12, 1653; Susanna, March 27, 1656; Nathaniel, August 11, 1658; Hannah, September 10, 1660; Richard, June 27, 1663; Elizabeth, November 21, 1666; Joseph, from whom John Greenleaf Whittier descends.

(II) Colonel John, the second of the ten children of Thomas and Ruth (Green) Whittier, was born in Haverhill, November 24, 1648, died there October 1, 1756. He built a house in 1660. In 1686 he was accused of trespassing on the town's land, and in 1699 he was on a committee appointed by the town to see about accepting the new meeting house and seeing that it was done according to contract. In 1711 he signed a petition for a school house to be located near John's house so "that they might have the benefit of having their children brought up in learning as well as the children of those who lived in the center of the town." In 1774 he was town clerk and rechosen until 1778 when he declined to serve further. He was a private in Captain Cogswell's company, Colonel Gerrish's regiment. Whether he was of the same faith of his father it does not appear but he seems to have had no scruples about entering the war. He was afterward promoted to be colonel.

"To the Honorable James Warren Esq. Speaker.—To be communicated to the Honorable House of Representatives at Watertown. Gentlemen: I have very lately heard that I am appointed to the command of a Regiment for the Canada Expedition. I most sincerely and heartily thank the Honorable Court, for their repeated Honors done me—and should gladly have accepted the appointment—were it not, that my Health of late, has so far failed me, that at present, I find myself unable to perform a Journey of Twenty Miles without much difficulty and delay,—notwithstanding my willingness to assist in this (as I apprehend) just and righteous Cause—yet the great and constant care of a Regiment and the Fatigues of such a long Journey, render it impossible for me to accept the invitation, with honor to myself, and any advantage to the Province,—therefore I trust, that the Honorable Court will justify me, in declining to accept, at present, of such an appointment.

Gentlemen, That you may have all that wisdom which is profitable to direct,—and that the American Arms may be crowned with Victory and Success, is the Ardent Prayer of Your most humble and obedient Servant

JOHN WHITTIER.

Haverhill, July 1st, 1776."

In 1779 Colonel Whittier was on the committee of correspondence and safety. In the valuation of the property of householders in Haverhill in 1798, the colonel was credited with one thousand dollars. He married Mary Hoyt. Children: John, born November 24, 1686; William (sketch below); Thomas, September 4, 1693; Abner, September 2, 1695; David, May 5, 1698; Nathaniel, December 8, 1709; Mary, March 18, 1703.

(III) William, the second of the seven children of John and Mary (Hoyt) Whittier, was born in Haverhill. He was allowed to build a pew in "the hind seat of the meeting house in the west gallery if he promised not to build so high as to damnify the light of the windows." In 1719 he signed a petition for a parsonage house. He was one of the petitioners of the new town of Penacook, now Concord, New Hampshire, in 1725, but he seems never to have gone there. He served in Captain James Sawyer's company and Colonel James Frye's regiment, and was at the battle of Bunker Hill, encountering some hard service. He married Rachel Mitchell. Children: Abigail, born February 16, 1717; Richard (sketch below); Abiah, July 16, 1722; Mary, May 1, 1727; Rachel, November 7, 1729.

(IV) Richard, the second of the five children of William and Rachel (Mitchell) Whittier, was born in Methuen. He was one of the snow-shoe men, who were a large company of soldiers under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Saltonstall, who kept constantly armed and equipped for every emergency, and that they might be more in readiness they were ordered to have snow shoes in winter. He married Elizabeth Bodwell. Children: Ruth, born January 23, 1742; Elizabeth, October 7, 1743; Abiah, February 22, 1746; Persis, April 23, 1748; Elizabeth, February 6, 1750; William, September 26, 1752; Richard (sketch below); Daniel Bodwell; Nathaniel, November 4, 1759; Persis, March 30, 1761; Nathaniel, May 18, 1764.

(V) Richard (2), the seventh child of Richard (1) and Elizabeth (Bodwell) Whittier, was born in Methuen. He married Betsey Chase. Their children were: Daniel Bodwell, Simeon Chase, Dorothy, Richard, Moses, Asa, Abiah, Moses, Leonard and Rufus.

(VI) Rufus, the tenth child of Richard (2) and Betsey (Chase) Whittier, was born in Methuen, in 1800, died in Chicopee in 1852. He was agent of the old Perkins Cotton Mill of Chicopee. He was a Unitarian. He married Emiline Currier, of Methuen, Massachusetts. Children: Lucien and Lucius (twins), born September 6, 1835; Nelson (sketch below); Emeline Abie, June 16, 1838; Helen, November 1, 1841; Frank and Fannie (twins), June 5, 1843.

(VII) Nelson, son of Rufus and Emeline (Currier) Whittier, was born in Methuen in 1836, died in Chicopee, August 14, 1903. He moved to Chicopee when ten years of age. He later accepted a position as paymaster with the Dwight Manufacturing Company. In 1888 he went to Lowell as agent of the Whittier Cotton Mills and was made treasurer of the company later. When the plant, which at one time was owned by Miss Helen Whittier, was made into a stock company in which Paul Butler, of Lowell, was interested, and was removed to Georgia, Mr. Whittier retained his interest in the company and was continued as treasurer. About this time he removed to Chicopee. He was a Republican and selectman of Chicopee in 1886. He was a Master Mason and a Unitarian. Always charitable, he was respected by all who knew him. By his death a personality was removed that was always identified with whatever was good and upright. He married Gertrude Mary Boyden (see Boyden VII). Mrs. Whittier belongs to the Molly Varnum Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution of Lowell, afterwards transferred to the Mercy Warren Chapter of Springfield, Massachusetts, also of the Womans Middlesex Club of Lowell, obtaining her admission thereto through General Josiah Whitney. They have one child, Walter Rufus Boyden, who married Miriam, daughter of Richmond Fletcher, of Lowell, and they have four children: Paul Fletcher, Sydney Boyden, Roger Knapp and Gertrude Whittier. Mr. Walter R. B. Whittier is at present treasurer of the Whittier Cotton Mills near Atlanta, Georgia. He takes a deep interest in education and is president of the board of education of Fulton county, Georgia.

(The Boyden Line).

Among those piloted across the broad Atlantic in the early half of the seventeenth century and to firmly plant the standard of civil and religious liberty on these shores, was one whose name subjoins this memoir. Not so early a comer as the "Mayflower" contingent, not so pronounced a Separatist as they, but more of a formalist in religion, nor yet so stationary in his habitation inasmuch he did not acquire the influence he otherwise would; for he was a man of parts and likelihood, and had such crude learning as the times afforded. The principle of heredity obtains in mental traits somewhat after the manner of physical characteristics, and as we go back and study the ancestral stock of the Boydens we find warrant therein for much that is in us today. The Boyden disposition is ever the same, and kindly note it is the right sort to have. The patriarch of the race had the Boyden way of doing things which obtains among his remote issue. The name is a combination of boyd from buidhe, yellow-haired, and den, a valley. It is the name of a river in England. Boyden would mean a vale on the river Boyd. It would be used as a surname by some one who lived in the town of Boyden, or in the valley of the Boyd.

(1) Thomas Boyden, who planted the race on American soil, embarked in the good ship "Francis," from Ipswich, Suffolk, England, in April, 1634. He located in Scituate, Massachusetts, and was admitted to the church there May 17, 1635. His next place of residence was Watertown, Massachusetts, where he was made a freeman, May 21, 1647. After this he is recorded as of Boston, and in 1659 was elected highway surveyor of that peninsula plantation. That year he conveyed to Joshua Scottow seven acres of upland on Muddy river, now Brookline. The records show that Thomas removed to Medford some time previous to September, 1662, and his home there was on Pound street. He followed the transit of civilization toward the going-down sun, and in 1666 was living in Groton, Massachusetts, where he was an original proprietor in the right of seventy acres. He was in Watertown again by 1670. In 1678 he subscribed "one bushel of wheat to the new brick college," Harvard. In 1682 he was a tithingman in Medford. The forename of his wife was Frances, and she died in Boston, March 17, 1658. On November 3, of the same year, he was united in marriage by Governor Bellingham, to Hannah (Phillips) Morse, widow of Joseph Morse. She died October 3, 1670. Children by Frances: Thomas, the subject of the next paragraph; Mary, born October 15, 1641; Rebecca, November 1, 1643; Nathaniel, 1651; Jonathan, February 20, 1652, and Sarah, October 12, 1654.

(II) Thomas (2), eldest son of Thomas (1) and Frances Boyden, was born in Watertown, September 26, 1639, died in Groton, November 15, 1719. He was in the Indian wars. He married Martha, eldest daughter of Richard and Martha Holden, who was born January 15, 1646, died in Charlestown, Massachusetts, March 18, 1687. Children: Martha, born July 14, 1667; Elizabeth, May 24, 1670; John, December 6, 1672; Jonathan, 1675; Joseph (see next paragraph); Benjamin, March 29, 1683.

(III) Joseph, third son of Thomas (2) and Martha (Holden) Boyden, was born April 24, 1678, in Groton, died in Worcester, Massachusetts, April 17, 1748. He moved to Dedham, now Needham, Massachusetts, where he was selectman in 1721, and one of the custodians of a fund received by act of the general court for the use of the town and the schools. In August, 1735, he kept a public house in Sutton, Massachusetts, and removed to Worcester in 1738, where he bought one hundred acres in Bogachoge. He married Rebecca, surname unknown. Their children: Joseph, born October 6, 1705; Daniel, see next paragraph; John, August 16, 1710 (died young); Nathaniel, June 3, 1714; Rebecca, March 6, 1716; John, August 7, 1719.

(IV) Daniel, second son of Joseph and Rebecca Boyden, was born in Dedham, March 1, 1708, died in Auburn, Massachusetts, January 29, 1782. He settled on a farm in the south part of Worcester, later removed to Dedham. His name appears on the tax and jury list of Worcester in 1741. He was a man of affairs, selectman for several years, and a pillar of the first parish church. In 1776, when a new church was erected in the south precinct, he was active in promoting the new society from the first, and remained one of its most loyal supporters. The south parish became later Auburn. He was one of the original proprietors of Dummerston, Vermont, near the Massachusetts line. He married Mehitable, daughter of William and Bethiah Man. She was born September 1, 1713, died June 7, 1789, in Auburn. Children: Daniel, born August 31, 1735 (died young); Mehitable, October 25, 1736; Hezekiah, November 28, 1739; Daniel, see next paragraph; Darius, December 6, 1743; William, January 12, 1746; Esther, December 23, 1747; Mary, May 17, 1751; Tryphena, March 12, 1753; James, November 3, 1758.

(V) Daniel (2), third son of Daniel (1) and Mehitable (Man) Boyden, was born in Worcester, October 29, 1741, died in Guildford, Windsor county, Vermont, August 29, 1813. He went to the latter place on Green river in about 1758 and was a pioneer settler there. He was a farmer, and active in public affairs. He served in the revolution in Captain Moses Draper's company, Lieutenant Colonel William Bond's regiment. He enlisted in April, 1778, and was in the service at Cambridge. He married, June 7, 1764, Rebecca Barber, of Worcester. Children: Daniel, born March 22, 1765; Levi, see next paragraph; Rebecca, June 11, 1768; Ebenezer, August 17, 1770; Lydia, Tryphena, Mary Mehitable and Azuba.

(VI) Levi, second son of Daniel (2) and Rebecca (Barber) Boyden, was born in Worcester, October 16, 1766, died April 20, 1859. He married Dolly Smith, of Guildford, in 1790. She died July 29, 1821. He married (second) May 1, 1822, Olive Cutter, who died March 21, 1857. Levi Boyden was the parent of Asa, born December 21, 1792; Hollis, August 25, 1794, died March 7, 1833; married, 1820, Hannah Burnett; Nabby, May 11, 1797; William, see next paragraph; Levi, April 29, 1803; Rectina, January 2, 1809.

(VII) William, third son of Levi and Dolly (Smith) Boyden, was born August 26, 1798, in Guildford, died in Lowell, Massachusetts, September 12, 1889, at the home of his daughter, Gertrude M. He was a likely man in his home community, and exceedingly well thought of. He married, February 13, 1825, Susan Adams, born August 29, 1804, in Ashby, Massachusetts, died in Chicopee, April 18, 1884.

Children: Frances Jane, born March 19, 1826, married Hiram Pierce; William Smith, December 22, 1827; Cora Miranda, March 20, 1830, married Jesse Tyler; Anna Isabella, April 20, 1832, married Charles Spaulding, of Keene, New Hampshire; Gertrude Mary, March 5, 1839, married Nelson Whittier. (See Whittier VII).

While some of this family have ASHLEY ever remained within a few miles of the sacred spot where the remote ancestor of them all set up the Ashley standard in very early times and they have married and reared up children who have gone to the making of good citizenry, others of the blood have wandered to other parts of the country, to the nearby Housatonic Valley, to the granite hills of New Hampshire, to the green fields of Vermont, to the great plains of the central west, to the golden shores of the Pacific slope, and there is not a state in the Union but has some member of the brotherhood. In the crises of war they have ever been ready to support the government; in peace they have been actively identified in the civil, ecclesiastical and educational movements of their respective communities. The escutcheon of the family in England was: Argent, a lion rampant, sable, crown. Or. The name originated from ash, a tree, and leigh, a pasture. The first Mr. Ashley was he who lived in a pasture where grew the ash trees. Included among the great men of this line have been Hon. Chester Ashley, United States senator from Arkansas, the Hon. James M. Ashley, congressman from the Toledo district, General John Ashley, of Sheffield, Massachusetts, of the revolutionary service, and O. D. Ashley, formerly president of the Wabash railroad. It is of the Massachusetts and more particularly the Springfield branch, the ones who breathed the native air on their own soil, that this narrative treats.

(1) Robert Ashley, the founder of the American family, dwelt in Springfield, Massachusetts, then called Nayasett, three years later than William Pynchon appeared on the scene. In an allotment of land January 5th, 1640, Robert had home lot No. 3 of four acres and was on what is now the northwest corner of Main and State streets and extended back as far as Spring street. The lot was situated between the Widow Searle and John Dibble. His planting lot was on the west bank of the Connecticut river and was No. 12 with seventy acres and but four others had as large an acreage, one of these being Major Pynchon. His

"meddow" ground was on the Agawam river, lot No. 19, with four and one half acres. He had lot No. 4 of two and one half acres on the west side of the Connecticut. March 15, 1653, by purchase from John Leonard he acquired a parcel of "meddow" in the woods near Swans pond, on the left hand of the Bay path, and from the same grantor another "meddow" lot on the "Greate" river. He bought of Widow Johns in Long "meddow" a planting lot of six acres. January 2, 1655, there was granted him by the town a lot on Round hill. This was granted upon condition that he would not leave the town for five years. The town granted him nine acres lying on the brook that empties into the Connecticut below the Agawam. September 27, 1656, he purchased of Rice Bedortha five acres of wet "meddow" on the Mill river. February 1, 1657, the town granted him a house lot of four acres extending from the street to the "Greate" river, also two acres of wet "meddow," and a wood lot of four acres. February 2 of that year he bought of Samuel Marshfield three acres of wet "meddow" adjoining his own, one acre of wet "meddow" under Round hill and a home lot formerly belonging to Samuel Ferry. September 18 of that year he bought of Samuel Ferry three acres of wet "meddow" and at the same date was granted by the town four acres of wet "meddow" by the highway that goes under Round hill. January 20, 1659, he bought of Richard Fellows three acres on the side of Round hill in "ye" plain adjoining his own. February 12, 1660, the town granted him three acres in common with two others on the north branch of the brook that empties into "Greate" river below Agawam. October 18 of that year he bought of John Riley land in "Chickupee" plain on "ye west side of ye Greate" river containing forty-three acres. January 1, 1661, he bought of John Dumbleton twenty-four acres of land on "ye west side of the 'Greate' river in Chickupee Plain." February 10th of that year the town granted him five acres between the two brooks below "Chickupee plain on ye west side of the Greate river," provided he build and dwell thereon or that he would dispose of it only to such as would build or dwell thereon. March 16 of the same year he was granted six acres of "meddow" on the back side of "Chickupee playne," and on same date the town granted to Captain Pynchon, Robert Ashley and George Colton a share each of upland at Woronoco "Meddow," with the proviso that they buy out the Indian rights in said land. February 6, 1664, the town granted him four acres of wood lot next beyond Samuel Ferry's February 1, 1665, this was extended to eight acres. It will thus be seen he was quite a landed proprietor and a farmer. The ear mark of his cattle was "in the off ear, a slit cut in the under side of the ear (not at ye top of ye ear) but toward ye root of ye ear, the slit is but a little slanting outward toward ye root of ye ear." In 1646 he was granted land on the Mill river on condition that he should keep an ordinary. The following order was issued thereon: To Robert Ashley and his wife, keepers of the ordinary in Springfield: "Whereas it is famously known how Indians abuse themselves by excessive drinking of strong liquors whereby God is grievously dishonored and the peace of this Plantation in great danger to be broken. And whereas you have noe License formerly and according to law to sell eyther wine or strong waters to English or Indians. These are therefore to will and require you upon yo perill that you henceforth forbear to sell eyther wine or strong waters to any Indian though for selling to the English wee would not restrayne you but doe allow yr of." This order was signed by the commissioners of the town and was perhaps the first prohibitory law in America. The best men were selected for tavern keepers. Robert resigned in 1660. We have seen he was granted a home lot on the west side of the river with the proviso that he dwell thereon. Accordingly he built on the hillside in that part of West Springfield known as Riverdale, which was the first part of that village to be settled. He was a juryman in 1639-54-61-62-64-67-70. He was a litigant in these causes. December, 1640, he sold his canoe to some outside parties against the law of the plantation and was ordered to return it or be liable forfeiture. In February, 1641, he entered a complaint against John Woodcock for not delivering him a gun he had paid for. The jury found for him in the sum of twenty-two shillings. He petitioned the commissioner for damage for a horse killed by a Nepanett Indian. The commissioners ordered the sachem to pay twenty pounds or deliver up the Indian that killed the horse. In September, 1650, he entered complaint against Richard Fellows for detaining a sword from him. This action he withdrew, promising to pay costs of action. In September, 1660, Miles Morgan sued Robert Ashley for wrongfully impounding his swine. In 1665 he was fined for absenting himself from town meeting. He was a fence viewer in 1646-50 and highway surveyor in 1651-67. He was selectman in 1653

and for twelve successive years thereafter, being chairman of the board in 1651. Refusing to serve longer he was fined twenty shillings. He was a constable in 1659 and sealer of weights and measures. He took the oath of allegiance and fidelity March 23, 1655. Mr. Ashley took a deep interest in church affairs and this was not a perfunctory interest. He dearly loved the church and was strong in the faith of the ever living God. He sat in pew No. one and served on the seating committee and was rate collector. From all this we gather that Robert was a man of solid parts, trustworthy, which his townspeople were quick to recognize. He was just the man for a town builder and to be the corner stone of a great family. His shoulders were broad. He did not sign his name but this was nothing to his disparagement considering the state of education then. He died November 25, 1682, and his will was executed October 9, 1679. Major John Pynchon and John Holyoke were the witnesses and his son Joseph administered. His appraisement was four hundred and ninety-two pounds, which was quite an estate in those days. He married, in 1641, Mary, widow of Thomas Horton, of Springfield. She died September 19, 1683. When he married her she had two sons by her former husband, the record declares, "one sucking, the other three years old." Children of Robert Ashley: David, and a girl (twins), Mary, Jonathan, Sarah, and Joseph, sketched below.

(II) Joseph, youngest son of Robert and Mary Ashley, was born in Springfield, July 6, 1652, died there May 18, 1698. He settled in West Springfield in the Riverdale district. He inherited all his father's land and besides owned plots in the Farm Meadow in the Chickupee field and on the Agawam river, in Springfield proper on the east side of the Connecticut. He was surveyor in 1675-77 and took the oath of allegiance in 1678. In 1682 he was constable and the same year "prizer for the Town stock for making the Towne's Rates." In 1683 he was fence viewer. He was a litigant in these causes. On July 31, 1679, he was brought before the court for taking the horse of Isaac Morgan out of the pasture and riding it, for which he was fined ten shillings. In 1680, in September, he was fined five shillings for working his horses two hours after sun down the night before the Lord's day, and in December of the same year he got an attachment against Thomas Hancock. In March, 1682, he was presented to the court for taking the marking of another man's horse and fined ten shillings. In September, 1684, he was fined forty shillings for not collecting the county rates, he being then constable. In May, 1685, he was presented for ten rods of defective fence and fined fifteen shillings. In 1686 he was fined nine shillings for want of a stake, and in February, 1691, was fined six shillings for absenting himself from town meeting. In January, 1693, he was fined five shillings for refusing to perform his duties as fence viewer. This all goes to show for what trivial offences the colonists were made to smart in fines and the obnoxious character of the blue laws. Everything tends to prove that Joseph was an estimable neighbor, a kind friend, and deserving townsman. He married Mary, daughter of Cornet Joseph and Mary (Bliss) Parsons, who was born in Northampton, Massachusetts, June 27, 1661. After Joseph's death she married Joseph Williston, of Springfield, and died August 23, 1711. The accurate historian is compelled to record an unfortunate affair in Joseph's life, a domestic difficulty, in consequence of which, his wife in 1687 applied for a divorce. This was perhaps the first divorce case ever entered in the old Bay Colony. The affair was amicably adjusted through the exertion of friends to the mutual satisfaction of both and they lived together ever afterwards. Children: Joseph (sketched below), Ebenezer, Mary, Abigail and Benjamin.

(III) Joseph (2), eldest son of Joseph (1) and Mary (Parsons) Ashley, was born in Springfield, April 16, 1686, died there April 2, 1780. He lived in Springfield proper on the east side of the Connecticut and in the south part of the town. He was a joiner and farmer. In November, 1717, he was paid five shillings for work on the pound and for work at "ye schoole" house six shillings, for a "Greate Chaire for ye school" and five shillings for repairing meeting house. He was a fence viewer in 1710, a tythingman in 1723 and constable in 1729. He was a member of the church and was one of the principals in the famous Breck controversy disputing that preacher's orthodoxy. He married Mary Bidwell, December 15, 1720, and she died July 14, 1733. Children: Joseph, John, who lost his life at Louisburg; Mary, Ruth, David (sketched below) and Stephen.

(IV) David, third son of Joseph (2) and Mary (Bidwell) Ashley, was born in Springfield, May 8, 1731, and died there July 15, 1800. He settled on the patrimonial estate in Springfield where he always lived. He was a private in Colonel Gideon Burt's Hampshire county regiment which marched to retake Samuel Ely who was rescued from Springfield jail, June 12, 1782, and also opposed the rioters at Northampton on the 16th. He married Vashti Brooks, January 1, 1756. After David's death she married John Charter and removed with her son to Vershire, Vermont, where she lived to be one hundred and four years old. Children of David: David, died in infancy; Ruth, David, Lucy, Daniel (sketched below), Olive (died young), Luke, Olive, Timothy and Polly.

(V) Daniel, third son of David and Vashti (Brooks) Ashley, was born in Springfield, September 22, 1764, died there August 8, 1812. He lived in the south part of Springfield proper and was a farmer. His farm was a large one and extended along Mill river, towards Longmeadow. He was a member of Colonel Burt's Hampshire county regiment that marched to retake Samuel Ely, June 12, 1782, also opposed the rioters at Northampton the 16th. He married Sally Hunt, of Springfield, September 17, 1784, who died June 11, 1818. Children: Elizabeth, David (sketched below), James, Sally Brewer, Daniel and Olive.

(VI) David (2), eldest son of David (1) and Sally (Hunt) Ashley, was born in Springfield in 1787, died there June 30, 1816. He continued the line of activity followed by the members of the family since the first Robert and was a farmer. He was in addition a wheelwright and employed at the armory. He married Sophia, daughter of Henry and Mercy (Sackett) Brass, who was born in Wilbraham, Massachusetts. After David died she married a Sanderson and then John Charter. She died November 3, 1855. Children: Harriet, Sophia, and David Franklin (sketched below.)

(VII) David Franklin, youngest son of David (2) and Sophia (Brass) Ashley, was born at Water Shops, Springfield, June 4, 1815. When a mere lad he went to live with an uncle in Westfield, Massachusetts. There he remained until sixteen years of age, going to school winters and working on the farm in summer. At seventeen he entered the office of Hampden Whig as an apprentice and there served three years. The paper fell under a new management and David took charge of the mechanical side of it. In a year's time he had saved money enough from his earnings to become half owner and the name of the paper was changed to the Hampden Post and the politics shifted from Whig to pure democracy. Later Mr. Ashley assumed full control, buying out his partner. The paper was changed to a tri-weekly and later to a daily. He also conducted the Northampton Democrat. The Daily Post was run until 1853. In the Know Nothing times from 1854 to 1860 he published the American. About this time he turned his attention to the wholesale yankee notion trade, selling by teams on the road. He was the first of the Ashleys to break away from an agricultural and mechanical life. In politics he was first a Jacksonian Democrat and subsequently joined the Know Nothings. He never cared for political office. He was an independent religious thinker. Mr. Ashley's memory carries him back to the early days of Springfield when it was a small village of three thousand inhabitants. He bought the lot on Worthington street where the school house now stands for four hundred dollars, and in a few years was offered ten times that sum. He married Elvira A., daughter of Hiram and Adeline (Patton) Hendrick, of South Wilbraham, now Hampden. She was educated in the public schools and at Wilbraham Academy. She is a woman of the most estimable and amiable qualities, and in religious preferences a Second Adventist. Children: 1. Frank E., of Troy, New York. 2. Isabel E., wife of John J. Kelly, of Springfield. 3. Winona Adeline, wife of Frank W. Tower, of Springfield. 4. Hendrick Patton, a commercial traveler. 5. Herbert Horton, also on the road.

This name is spelled by those who bear it, as well as by others, Abbee, Abbie, Abbe, Abbey. It was perhaps originally given to some menial attached to a monastery as "John of the Abbey;" more probably, however, from Abbé, the ecclesiastical title, since we find it written in ancient rolls as le Abbe. The scottish form is Abbay. The Abbés were originally settlers in Enfield, Connecticut, where they have ever since been found. They have been among the good citizens of the town and have been patriotic and brave, and the records show that they were soldiers in the French wars and the revolution.

(1) Thomas Abbe is supposed to have been a brother of Obadiah Abbe, a first settler (1682) of Enfield, who died without children in 1732. Thomas settled in Enfield in 1683 on the eleventh lot, east side, north of the south corner, and was also one of the original proprietors. In the record of land grants is the following: "Thomas Abbe, sen<sup>r</sup> is poss<sup>d</sup> of A Farm or tract of land lying In the Mountains Near the North East Corner of the Township of Enfield Lying 160 rods in length, and 150 rods in Wedth Easterly and westerly and is butted and bounded South East Corner on A Chestnut Tree near a mountain with A Heep of Stones at ye foot of sd tree, Northeast Corner with A rock and A Heep of Stones upon it with A bush marked by it, North West Corner with A Chestnut and A Heep of Stones. The aforesd Land as it is butted and Bounded is 150 acres be it more or less. Laid out by Tom Jones Town Measurer. June 22d, 1723." He also had two pieces of land in the second division, one tract of twelve acres near the old saw mill, and the other in the East precinct near a saw mill called Hampshire, and containing twenty acres. These lots were granted to him in addition to various smaller pieces, which he had received from time to time from the town. His home lot of eleven acres was bounded on the north by the minister's lot. Thomas Abbe was a man of much activity and good judgment, and was an efficient public servant for many years. He was early chosen to assist in transacting the town's business and was selectman 1686-89-1706-07-09-10. In 1705 he was assessor and frequently filled the offices of road surveyor and fence viewer. In 1701 he was one of a committee to lay out a road to Warehouse Point, and for years he was one of the committee annually appointed to settle the dispute as to the location of the dividing line between Enfield and Windsor. In 1708 he was a petit juror. In 1705, a committee consisting of five citizens, Captain Pease, Thomas Abbe, Sergeant Randall, Sergeant Morgan and Goodman Colton, was appointed to bargain with Ensign Terry and Zachariah Booth for the building of a meeting house, the cost of which was not to exceed three hundred pounds. When the town voted to be a part of Connecticut he dissented, evidently preferring to be a citizen of Massachusetts. Sergeant Thomas Abbe is referred to in the records of 1711 and 1715; and Lieutenant Thomas Abbe in 1713. Thomas Abbe died in Enfield in 1728, and left two sons, Thomas, born 1686, and John. Thomas Abbe made his will October 12, 1720, and in that he mentions the two sons and also two daughters, Sarah Geer and Tabitha Warner.

(11) John, youngest son of Thomas Abbe, was born in 1692 and was one of the first settlers of the upper part of "King's street." He held various minor offices and was an active and somewhat influential man. He had four sons: John, Thomas, Daniel and Richard, the subject of the next paragraph. Lieutenant John Abbe is mentioned in 1786 and 1791.

(III) Richard, fourth son of John Abbe, was born in Enfield, in 1735, and died there "September 20, 1807, aged seventy-two years," as stated in the ancient family Bible still in possession of his descendants. He was a farmer, and held minor civil offices in the town. In the Connecticut records of the revolutionary war, Lieutenant Richard Abbe, of Enfield, appears as serving six days. Richard Abbe, commissioned ensign January 1, 1777, resigned February 6, 1778. Richard Abbe was an ensign in Captain Abner Robinson's company, Colonel McLellan's regiment, which was raised for one year's service, from March, 1778, and which appears to have served in Tyler's brigade under Sullivan in Rhode Island, August and September, 1778. Sergeant Richard Abbe joined, May 29, 1781, Captain James Dana's company. This command served at post at Horseneck and places adjacent. In July it joined Washington while he was encamped at Phillipsburg. Captain Richard Abbe married, January 9, 1755, Mary Bement, daughter of Captain Dennis Bement, who was born 1711, and married Mary Abbe, daughter of Thomas Abbe, 1737. Captain Dennis Bement died 1789 and left two sons. The Abbe family Bible states: "Mary, relict of above Captain Richard Abbey, died August 14, 1821, aged eighty-three years."

(IV) Captain Richard (2), a son of Captain Richard (1) and Mary (Bement) Abbe, was born March 2, 1760, died August 9, 1831, aged seventy-one. He married, January 16, 1782, Lydia Stevenson, born October 20, 1764, died June 1, 1844, aged eighty. Their children were: 1. Charles, born December 1, 1785, married Harriet Strong, March 2, 1809. 2. Richard, December 30, 1787, married Charlotte Bement, November 29, 1810. 3. Roswell, December 30, 1787, married Sally Olmsted, November 30, 1809. 4. Betsey, February 15, 1790. 5. Joshua, August 17, 1791, married Phila Pease. 6. George, mentioned below. 7. Harriet, February 10, 1798, died August 19, 1825, aged twenty-seven. 8. Lucinda, February 2, 1805, married Charles Chase, September 17, 1821, and died September 25, 1827, aged twenty-two. He died March 16, 1833, aged thirty-three. 9. Lo-rinda, February 2, 1805, died September 24, 1825, aged twenty.

(V) George, fifth son of Captain Richard (2) and Lydia (Stevenson) Abbe, was born in Enfield, Connecticut, December 24, 1794, died in Springfield, Massachusetts, May 22, 1858, aged sixty-four. For many years he resided in Enfield and was a well-known river boatman in the days before the inauguration of railroads. He was later agent for the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad at Thompsonville. His last years were spent in Springfield, where he died. He married (first) Sally Chapman, of Tolland, September 30, 1819; and (second) Anna Harper, of Scitico. The children, all by the first wife, were: George Chapman, James, Maria S. and Warren Clifford.

(VI) James, second son of Captain George and Sally (Chapman) Abbe, was born in Enfield, Connecticut, June 1, 1822, died at his home, 79 Spring street, Springfield, Massachusetts, May 7, 1889. He was educated in the public schools of Thompsonville, Connecticut. As a young man he assisted his father in the steamboat business. Before James Abbe was twenty-one years old, however, he had learned the tinner's trade in Thompsonville, and for a few years managed a small tin business in that village and in Haydenville. He went to Springfield in 1843 and worked a while for his cousin, Joshua Abbe, a tinner, who had a stand where now the postoffice building is, corner of Maine and Fort streets. He then started a tinware and stove store in a wooden building standing on the present site of Wilkinson's block, Main street. He next started stores at Chicopee, Massachusetts, and East Greenwich, Rhode Island, about 1854, but they were continued only one year. Returning to Springfield with a little capital he bought out his cousin Joshua. During the period of fifteen years that followed, he was fortunate in having all the tin work of the Wason Car Company, and the Boston and Allany Railroad Company, and thereby is said to have laid the foundation of his ample wealth. In 1869 he erected Abbe's block at 309 Main street, and in company with his only son carried on the stove and tinware business, the firm name being James Abbe & Son. In 1880 the firm disposed of the business to Shepard & Wilson, and the son James T., went to Holyoke to engage in the envelope business. After the death of Mr. Shepard, a year later, he again had possession of the business and soon closed it up. Mr. Abbe did not again engage in business but devoted himself to the management of his real estate and had an office in his own block for that purpose. Mr. Abbe was a man of exceptional business ability and his judgment in financial matters was regarded as sound. He was a director of the Pyncheon National Bank, a trustee of the Springfield Cemetery Association and one of the original corporators of the Holyoke Envelope Company. He succeeded Homer Foot as president of the Hampden Watch Company, and was one of its heaviest stockholders, but sold his interest at the time of the decision to remove the works to Canton, Ohio. Mr. Abbe was greatly esteemed and loved in the community in which he lived, where his social virtues and accomplishments, and his sterling integrity were best known. He was prominently identified with Springfield during his entire residence there, and was a willing subscriber to the cause of charity and benevolence. He attended Trinity Church and was one of its liberal supporters. He helped many young men, both in business and private life. Mr. Abbe was a member of the legislature in 1876-77. He was more than once urged to become a candidate for the mayoralty, but always refused. James Abbe married, April, 1848, Caroline E. Terry, of Thompsonville, Connecticut, who survives him. She was born December 6, 1826, daughter of Harmon and Emeline (Ellis) Terry. Harmon was a son of Salmon Terry, and the family is one of the old ones of Enfield, Connecticut. Two children were born of this marriage: 1. James T., mentioned below. 2. Caroline L., December 3, 1851, wife of Charles D. Rood, president of the Lancaster Watch Company, of Lancaster, Pennsylvania. They were married October 20, 1880, and resided at 93 Bowdoin street, Springfield. They have three children: Madeline A., born in Springfield, September 22, 1881; Gladys, February 25, 1884, and Charles Dexter, October 6, 1889.

(VII) James T., only son of James and Caroline E. (Terry) Abbe, was born in East Windsor, Connecticut, March 16, 1849, died December 15, 1907, at his home, 160 Maple street. He attended the Springfield high school and later for one year the Wilbraham Academy, entering Amherst College in the class of 1870 and remaining until the close of his sophomore year. He then entered into business with his father in Springfield and continued until 1881, when he became one of the Holyoke Envelope Company, of which he was made president. This was organized in 1880 by James Abbe, George N. Tyner and James T. Abbe. The senior Abbe sold his interest in the company to James D. Whitmore, of New York City, who subsequently sold his interest to George U. Tyner and James T. Abbe. Mr. Tyner was the practical man in the concern and Mr. Abbe had charge of its business affairs. The company began business on Cabot street in the water power company's building, which was destroyed by fire in January, 1888. The factory on Jackson and Main streets was then erected, where an enormous business was built up and conducted—no single factory in the United States having so large an output of staple envelopes, three and a half millions being the daily product. Three hundred hands were employed. The machinery used was built by the company on its own patents. In August, 1898, Mr. Abbe retired from the company, the plant being at that time absorbed by the United States Envelope Company. Mr. Abbe was the owner of the splendid Phoenix store and office building at 307 Main street, subsequent to the fire of November, 1893, which destroyed the new block built by him in 1889. The Phoenix building has been regarded as one of the best of its kind in western Massachusetts, containing two exceptionally fine stores, thirty-five offices and two apartments under the sidewalk. It has an imposing entrance, and a very attractive interior finish, with marble wainscoting and mosaic hall floors. Its equipment in elevators, lighting, heating, fire escapes, hot and cold water, etc., also is exceptionally modern and complete, and there are few handsomer and more convenient office buildings in the city. Mr. Abbe took great pride in the care of the Phoenix building, and it is no exaggeration to state that it was kept in the best condition inside and out of any office block in the city. Mr. Abbe was a director in the Home National and Park National banks, of Holyoke, having been one of the original subscribers of the stock of the latter. He was also at one time a director of the Pyncheon National Bank and of the Hampden Trust Company of Springfield. Mr. Abbe was one of the four original movers in the organization of the Springfield Daily Union, his associates being Oscar Greenleaf, H. K. Baker and W. E. Whipple. He was chosen as the first president of the Union Publishing Company, and continued in the presidency up to the time of his death, although his stock holding in his later years was not among the largest. The company was organized in 1895. He was a very public-spirited man, as well as most keen and energetic in business, and it is not strange that he should have taken a great interest in the board of trade and been one of the most active of its early members. He served as the fourth president of the board in 1894. He was instrumental also in the reorganization of the Springfield Cemetery Association, and had been its president. He was one of the promoters of the McKinley monument fund, and was appointed a member of the committee to choose a suitable memorial. He was much interested in the Springfield public library, and for a long time was closely identified with the association. In addition to being one of the city's most sagacious men, Mr. Abbe was a man of highly cultivated tastes, and became widely known as an art connoisseur and critic. He was the owner of a fine collection of paintings, including numerous productions of the best native and European artists. For a good many years he occupied an apartment at the Massasoit House in the winter, and the rooms were adorned with many valuable paintings, representing the best foreign schools as well as the work of leading American artists, and including not a few master pieces. His fine residence at 160 Maple street, the James Rumrill property, which was purchased by him some ten years before his death, is a veritable museum of art treasures, being literally filled with rare and beautiful paintings. This is undoubtedly one of the largest and finest (if not the largest and best) collection of paintings in the city. Mr. Abbe was a great lover of animals, especially of dogs and horses, and always owned some of the best of those animals in the city. He aimed to have and usually had the handsomest dog in town among his several high bred animals. His stable was always filled with spirited family horses of high pedigree, with cob tails and great knee action. Peculiar as it seems, however, he seldom drove any of his horses or was driven after them.

Ever a staunch Republican, Mr. Abbe took great interest in politics, and often a decidedly active part, having been a powerful factor at times in the making and unmaking of candidates. He never sought public office for himself, however, preferring to use his influence from his position as a private individual. His most conspicuous public service in recent years was as chairman of McKinley memorial committee, which selected the design of the monument erected on Peconic hill and carried through all details of the testimonial by public subscription to the martyred president. Mr.

Abbe's make-up was decidedly out of the ordinary, a combination of qualities some of which usually are considered antagonistic. He was very suave and genial in the company of other gentlemen, and full of the spirit of jocoseness, and to even a critical observer appeared to treat friends and those not so considered with perfect impartiality. Yet, withal, he was very aggressive and a fighter to the finish, and there was a vein of Indian vindictiveness in his disposition that led him to pursue one whom he considered an enemy with eager relish and unrelenting zeal. He was not a club man in the sense of being a devotee of club life, although a member of the Nyasset club, where he was seldom seen, his tastes being domestic in the extreme. He made a special feature of having the best of everything; whether in paintings, horses, dogs, or cigars, and he never allowed expense to stand in the way of attainments of that end. Another peculiarity was his love for his father, the two almost always being together during the father's lifetime, and his death bringing to the son much more than ordinary bitterness. An interesting and rather amusing incident in Mr. Abbe's career and that of two other determined men, A. N. Mayo and Frank Worthy, occurred subsequently to the fire of 1893 that swept the corner of Worthington and Main streets, when each of them tried to obtain the entire property, covered by their present blocks, for the erection of one large building. There was no giving in on any side, however, and each built his own block on his own site, but all of the buildings were erected on different levels so that by no possibility could they ever after be joined.

James T. Abbe was married at Springfield, Massachusetts, March 17, 1892, to Mrs. Mary H. Fuller, widow of Milton Fuller, and daughter of John and Lydia (Bridges) Mulligan (see Mulligan), the latter being at one time president of the Connecticut River Railroad Company. Milton Fuller accumulated a large fortune in the Pennsylvania oil regions. Mrs. Abbe was born at Springfield, Massachusetts, and survives her husband. They were in the habit of spending their summers on the White Mountains for years, but latterly preferred the coast of Maine. They had no children.

Captain Joseph Weld, immigrant ancestor, was born in England about 1600. He came to New England with his wife Elizabeth, daughter Elizabeth, aged ten; Mary, aged eight, Hannah, aged six, and Thomas, leaving in England an elder son John, who came later. He was admitted a freeman March 3, 1636. He settled in Roxbury, Massachusetts, and became a house-holder, proprietor of the town, and captain of the military company. He was selectman for a number of years and deputy to the general court in 1637 and afterward. He was of good estate and high repute, we are told. His wife Elizabeth died October 16, 1638, and he married (second) April 30, 1639, Barbara, daughter of Nicholas Clap or Clapp, of Venn Ottery, England. (See Clapp family in this work). She married (second) Anthony Stoddard, of Boston. He died September 7, 1640. His will was dated at Ipswich, June 2, 1646, and proved October 10, 1646. He bequeathed to wife Barbara and her children Daniel, Sarah and Marah Weld; to children of his first wife: John, Thomas, Edmund, Elizabeth, Mary, Hannah; to the college at Cambridge (Harvard); to Mr. Cudington an annuity; to the poor of the church. Children of first wife: 1. John, mentioned below. 2. Elizabeth married, March 20, 1641, Edward Danson. 3. Mary, married Daniel Harris, of Middletown. 4. Hannah. 5. Thomas, died aged seventeen. 6. Edmund, born at Roxbury, July 14, 1636. Children of second wife: 7. Sarah, baptized December 31, 1640, married, July 23, 1663, John Franks. 8. Daniel, born September 18, 1642. 9. Joseph, born February 6, 1645, died aged ten months. 10. Marah, baptized August 2, 1646, married Comfort Starr.

(I) Rev. Thomas Weld, brother of Captain Joseph Weld, was vicar at Terling, county Essex, England, from 1624 to 1632; was noted by Archbishop Laud as "unconformable" November 25, 1630, and fined November 16, 1631. He came to Roxbury, Massachusetts, with his family, arriving June 5, 1632, and was minister of that town for several months alone and then was ordained pastor in company with Mr. John Eliot, teacher, in November, 1632. He was in full sympathy with the course of Governor Winthrop and his party against Mrs. Hutchinson and Mr. Wheelwright in 1637 and wrote a preface to the second edition of Winthrop's book "Antinomians and Familists Condemned" (1643). He compiled the famous Bay State Psalm Book, jointly with Richard Mather and John Eliot in 1639. He wrote other books. He was sent by the colonial government to England with Mr. Hugh Peter and Mr. William Hibbens in 1641, and accomplished much in advancing the interests of the colony during the period of the revolution in England. After much public service, he became vicar of Gateshead parish at Newcastle, England, about 1649. He died in London, March 23, 1660. His widow Margaret left a will dated March 20, proved November 16, 1671; bequeathing to her brother William Doggett and her sister Anna, his wife; to children of sister Elizabeth Wade, deceased, to kinsman John Jefferson. Children, baptized at Terling: 1. John, June 6, 1625. 2. Thomas, July 26, 1626. 3. Samuel, October 8, 1629. 4. Edmund, July 8, 1631.

(II) John, son of Captain Joseph Weld, was born in England, according to family records, October 28, 1623, died September 20, 1691. He came to Massachusetts after his father and joined the family at Roxbury, where he lived the remainder of his life. He was admitted a freeman in 1650 and was a soldier in King Philip's war, 1675. He married Margaret Bowen, of Roxbury, daughter of Griffin Bowen, of Boston, who came from Kangenith, Glamorganshire, Wales. Children, born at Roxbury: 1. Joseph, June 6, 1649, died young. 2. Joseph, September 13, 1650, mentioned below. 3. John, May 25, 1653. 4. Ephraim, November 14, 1655, married, August 28, 1672, Samuel Gore. 5. Margaret, September 29, 1657, died aged seventeen. 6. Mary, April 3, 1660, married Joshua Gardner. 7. Abigail, August 27, 1663, died young. 8. Esther, December 28, 1664, died young. 9. Hannah, September 5, 1666, married, November 11, 1685, William Heath.

(III) Lieutenant Joseph (2), son of John Weld, was born at Roxbury, September 13, 1650, died February 14, 1711-12. He lived at Roxbury also. His will was dated December 6, 1692. He married (first), in 1674, Elizabeth Devotion, who died in 1678, and (second) November 27, 1678, Sarah Faxon, born August 28, 1650, at Braintree, daughter of Thomas Faxon, and granddaughter of Thomas Faxon, the immigrant. She married (second) April 29, 1719, Jacob Chamberlain. She died October 14, 1745. Her will dated February 9, 1734-35, proved November 10, 1745, mentioned her children and grandchildren. (The Folsom Line).

The surname Folsom was originally spelled Foulsham. When surnames were adopted in England the family living at Foulsham adopted the name of the place, a village in county Norfolk, England, six or eight miles north of Hingham. This family had been seated in Norfolk many centuries and owned estates in fifteen different places. The spelling and pronunciation of this surname have varied in the family itself as well as among others writing and pronouncing it. The immigrant ancestor spelt it Foullsam in 1715. In Hingham, Foulsham is the general way adopted by the town clerks; in Exeter, after 1650, Folsom was the prevailing spelling. The name of the town is derived from the words Fols and Hamc, meaning Fowl's home, or breeding place. The name of the town was gradually modified to Foulsham.

(I) Roger Foulsham, of Necton, county Norfolk, England, is the earliest ancestor of the American immigrant who can be traced. His will is dated 1534.

(II) William Foulsham was of Necton; married Agnes Smith, alias Foulsham, of Besthorpe.

(III) Adam Foulsham married Emma ———, whose will is dated 1565. He owned lands in Besthorpe, Wymondham, Bunwell, Hingham and Hackford, England. He died in 1630.

(IV) Adam (2) Folsom was father of the American immigrant; married Agnes ——; died 1627. His will names three sons: 1. John, mentioned below. 2. Adam. 3. Peter.

In 1638, with wife and two servants, he came from Hingham, England, to Hingham, Massachusetts, and in 1639 his brother, Adam Folsom, came over. The Gilmans also came to Hingham. John Folsom sailed April 26, 1638, in the ship "Diligent" from the mouth of the Thames, and landed at Boston, August 10, 1638. He received a grant of land and before winter had his house built. This house or one built later by him was taken down in 1875. He was chosen selectman in 1645. He and Captain Joshua Hubbard were granted liberty of the two rivers, Rocky Meadow and Bound Brook, so far as the town bath property, to build and maintain a saw mill or mills. John Folsom sold his lands in Hingham about 1655 and removed with his family to Exeter, New Hampshire. He lived on the west side of the river, where the first settlements were made; but three of his sons lived in the eastern part of the town. His sons and grandsons owned much land upon what was called Rocky Hill. He was engaged as surveyor in running the lines between Exeter and Dover. In advanced life he became unfortunately involved in his pecuniary affairs, but was assisted by his sons in preserving his property. He was very intelligent, earnest, enterprising; sometimes more enthusiastic than judicious; a decided Christian ready to sacrifice his property, ease and popular favor for the sake of his principles. He died December 27, 1651, at Exeter. He deeded to his son Peter, April 10, 1673, "forty or fifty acres of land in Hingham in ye county of Norfolk (England) near Norrald Comon and formerly held by ye name of Ffulsham at ye Box-bushes." We are not told whether the land has ever been sold. John Folsom was selectman of Exeter in 1659; juryman, 1662. Children: 1. The variety of spellings of this BRECK family name, as they occur in the various old records, include: Breck (the most used way), Brick (used by a few living descendants only), Breeke, Bruck, Brucke, Breche and Bricke (obsolete so far as the present generations of the family are concerned). Two branches of the family were established in America, the Dorchester branch, of which Edward Breck was the founder, in 1635-36, and the Sherborn branch, of which Thomas Breck was the founder, about 1650, and his son Thomas, the only one of his sons found in America, removed from Dorchester, the place of his original settlement, with his father about 1650, to Sherborn on the banks of the Charles river in 1658, and is thus the progenitor of the Sherborn branch.

Both Edward and Thomas Breck and their brothers, John of Medfield, Massachusetts, Henry, of Dorchester, Samuel and Robert, who came to Dorchester and soon returned to England, came from the county of Lancashire, England, and the neighborhood of Rainforth and Ashton in that county, but their father's christian name or the name of their mother has not been obtained. Living as they did in one of the most populous counties of England and one in which the Puritan spirit of freedom of religious worship had taken strong hold, these Puritan sons, desiring to better the prospects of themselves and their children, saw in New England such advantages of growth and prosperity as not even the rich soil and great manufacturing advantages of Lancashire could offer, and they joined the increasing numbers making new homes in the New World.

Edward Breck, the Puritan ancestor of the Dorchester branch of the Breck family in America, was probably the eldest of the six immigrant brothers, who made Dorchester their first dwelling place in New England. With him came his brothers, Robert and Samuel, aged twenty-eight and twenty-five years respectively. They did not remain in New England, but returned home, probably at the request of their mother, younger brothers and sisters in Lancashire, they being her youngest adult sons.

Henry, born about 1605, immigrant to Dorchester, Massachusetts Bay Colony, about 1640, and joined the church in 1641. As nothing further is known of him, he probably returned to England in 1642 and possibly with his younger brothers, Robert and Samuel, exchanged places at the English home with Thomas, born about 1600, and John, born about 1602, who thus relieved of domestic cares, came to Dorchester about 1650, Thomas becoming the progenitor of the Sherborn branch and John located in Medfield, where he died, January 3, 1660, probably leaving a son, John Breck, of Medfield, who died August 20, 1690, leaving no descendants so far as known.

(1) Edward Breck was born probably in Ashton in Rainforth, Lancashire, England, about 1595. He married probably about 1617, but neither the christian or maiden name of his wife is known. He had two daughters and one son born in Lancashire before he, with his wife and two living children, a son and a daughter, and his two brothers, joined the company of Puritan immigrants gathered at Ashton bound for the Massachusetts Bay Colony, to join their brethren already located in the neighborhood of Salem and Boston. The company evidently sailed from Bristol, England, on the ship "James," Captain Taylor, master, August 7, 1635, and the Brecks settled at Dorchester and joined the church there in 1636. Edward Breck appears to have been a man of considerable wealth and he built houses in Dorchester and acquired considerable land besides owning much property in Lancashire, Massachusetts, of which town he was the first of seven prudential managers. He built one of the first grist mills in Dorchester. He was a selectman of the town in 1642, and his church relationship is apparent by his designation as "Brother Breck," while in 1645 in naming a committee to build a new meeting house, he is recorded as "Edward Breck, one of the raters," and in 1646, when again elected a selectman, he is designated "Edward Breck," as he is in 1655 and 1656, when again elected selectman. He also, as an officer of the town, signed a deed of gift of all rents and profits from Thompson's Island for the support of a free school. His first wife died about 1645, and in 1647 he married Isabel, widow of John Rigby. Her maiden name does not appear, but she was born in England about 1610, where she married John Rigby, came with her husband to Dorchester about 1637, were early members of the church, and their son, Samuel Rigby, was baptized March 21, 1641, the church record making his name Rigbee. Mehitable Rigby in 1643 married Nathaniel Turner, of Scituate; Abigail Rigby, married Thomas.

son of John Holman, December 10, 1663. John Rigby, the father, died about 1645. Edward Breck died November 2, 1662, and his widow, Isabel, married as her third husband Anthony Fisher, senior, and there was no issue of this marriage. Mr. Fisher died in Roxbury in 1671, and his widow, Isabel, June 21, 1673.

General Samuel Breck, U. S. A., author of "Genealogy of the Breck family" says: "There are now no living representatives of the children of Edward Breck, the immigrant, by his first wife, known to the writer, but all his living descendants heard from are also descendants of Isabel, his second wife."

The four children of Edward Breck by his first wife were: 1. Daughter, born in England about 1618, died there when ten years old. 2. Robert, about 1620, married Margery ——— about 1642, and she died about 1652, leaving one son, Robert, who died young. He purchased from his father in 1654 a house and garden in Boston; he married, January 4, 1654, as his second wife, Sarah, daughter of Captain Hawkins. He became a merchant of distinction in Boston and an "admitted inhabitant" of the town. He died about 1660, leaving beside his widow, two children, Sarah, who died young, and Robert (1668-1684), who married Joanna ———, and his daughter Joanna and son Robert survived him, but both died young, and his widow married Rev. James Allen, of Boston, September 11, 1673, being his third wife. 3. Daughter, born about 1622, married, in Dorchester, about 1640, and died about 1645 as Mrs. Blake, leaving children. 4. Eleanor, born in Dorchester, married, September 12, 1650, Benjamin Crane, of Medfield. They lived in Weathersfield and had nine children. By his second wife, Mrs. Isabel (Rigby) Breck, he had four children. 5. Mary, baptized in Dorchester, August 6, 1648, married Samuel Roul, July 9, 1667, and he died November 3, 1690, leaving seven children; she married as her second husband, John Tolman, June 15, 1692, had no children by her second husband; she died August 25, 1720. 6. John (q. v.), born 1651, was a tanner in Squantum, captain in the militia, selectman of the town; died February 17, 1691. 7. Elizabeth, born about 1652, married John Minot, of Dorchester, March 11, 1670, had five children; she died April 6, 1690, and her husband, January 26, 1691. 8. Susanna, born about 1654, married John Harris, of Dorchester, March 20, 1675.

(11) John, son of Edward and Isabel Breck, was born in Dorchester, Massachusetts, 1651; was a tanner in Squantum, Dorchester, and actively engaged in business. He was known as Captain Breck by virtue of his rank in the military company of the town, was repeatedly chosen selectman of the town, carried on a mill for making cider from apples, built a vessel in the town, for which the town furnished trees for masts and yards in 1680; was reprimanded in 1681 for voting for a person to be on trial for the "work of the ministry," when he was not in full communion, he claiming that having submitted to the government of the church, he should have liberty to vote in such a case, but he afterward repented of his act and gave satisfaction therefor to the church government. In 1683 he was one of three commissioners to see to laying out one thousand acres of land granted by the general court for school land in 1695 in lieu of Thompson's Island. He was elected a selectman in 1686-88, and in 1690. March 11, he was chosen one of three members of the church to seat the people in the meeting house. An item in his will made February 4, 1691, reads: "I will that one of my sons be brought up to learning at the cost of my executor, which son thus educated shall acquit my executor of the moiety of his dividend. My children, I will to be well educated on the improvement of my estate." Captain John Breck died in Dorchester, February 17, 1691, and his widow, Susanna, born 1648, died February 8, 1711. The surname Dyer is taken from DYER the trade-name, Teinturer, its French equivalent, also used as a surname. The coat-of-arms of the Dyer family of Tottenham, county Middlesex, England, is: Or a chief indented gules. Crest: Out of a coronet a goat's head sable armed gold. The family was prominent also in county Hertford.

He was also an inn keeper in Weymouth and was one of the leading citizens of his day. He was deputy to the general court in 1646 and four years afterward. Among the earliest emigrants to New England on the Restoration of the Stuarts were a family bearing the name assigned to this article, who having become involved with the Regicides, went into the most obscure and remote parts of the colonies, settling for a time at Hadley, Massachusetts. One of these, George by name, hearing of the strange new doctrine of the Seventh-day Baptist, denying the sanctity of the Lord's day, being of an ardently religious turn himself, came to Newport, Rhode Island, to convince his erring brethren; but instead he became converted himself. The Seventh-day Baptist creed has always been peculiar to the Stillmans, handed down from father to son, and it was they who founded the town of Alfred, New York, the educational and religious center of the sect. Another trait common to the family has been ingenuity in mechanical invention which has cropped out in several generations. George Stillman, above spoken of, was born at Steeple Aspen, Wiltshire, England, in 1654 and died at Wethersfield, Connecticut, in 1728. He was a merchant of enterprise and wealth of Hally, Massachusetts, a member of the general court in 1698, and removed to Wethersfield in 1704. He married Rebecca, daughter of Lieutenant Philip Smith. She died October 7, 1750. Children: George, Rebecca, Mary, Nathaniel, John, Sarah, Martha, Ann, Elizabeth, Hannah, Lydia, Benjamin.

(I) Esaias Stillman was born in Providence, Rhode Island, and died in Warren, Massachusetts, in 1825. He removed to Petersburg, New York, and was a goldsmith, and later a machinist, serving in the war of 1812. He married Betsey Watson, daughter of James Blair, of Warren. Children: James Blair, Olive, Mary, Arminda, Elizabeth and Amos.

(II) James Blair, eldest son of Esaias and Betsey W. (Blair) Stillman, was born in Petersburg, in 1808, died in Springfield, Massachusetts, in October, 1898. He went to Pittsfield, Massachusetts, in early manhood, and learned the carpenter's trade. In 1835 he came to Springfield and entered the United States armory, remaining in the government employ for fifty-six years, enough of itself to confirm our statement that he was a faithful and efficient artisan. Upon his resignation from the armory the following general order was issued:

"National Armory,
Springfield, Mass.,
July 15th, 1891.

Post Orders, Series of
No. 27. 1891.

Mr. James Stillman formally resigned June 30th last, but was desired, during the suspension of work, to reconsider it. Persisting, however, in his desire to cease work, there thus closes an exceptionally long, faithful and honorable career at this Armory.

Mr. Stillman's name appears for the first time among Armory employes on the rolls of October, 1835; and since November, 1841, excepting for a few weeks' time, he has been a foreman, thus being an employe nearly 50 years. In all this time, this faithful and conscientious workman has not only given the time, for which he has received payment, but his brains, to the service of the Government, he having improved upon the old Blanchard stock-turning machine, and extended the principles of it into machines for bedding grooving and milling gun stocks, now used at the Armory.

By order of Colonel A. R. BUFFINGTON,
Fremont P. Peck,

Lieutenant Ordnance Department, Post Adjutant."

Mr. Stillman also invented the Springfield-Stillman gun. It was fired by a lock set in a prolongation of the tang of the breech-screw. The firing pin-screw is replaced by a stop-pin, kept in place by the breech block cap. The calibre is .50 and weight two pounds and five ounces. He also invented a hammerless breech-loading gun, which was sold to the Whitney gun works of New Haven. It consists of the combination of a solid recoil block which turns back exposing the rear end of the bore for the insertion of the cartridge with a separate locking piece or brace, having its bearing constructed as described and swinging on a separate center from any other part of the gun, these parts being combined with and operated by the springs and thumb pieces and in the manner and for the purpose herein set forth. Arranging the brace so as to half cock the gun by means of its thumb pieces, and with the same motion which allows the breech piece to swing back and expose the rear end of the bore, substantially as described. He was a Congregationalist and a Republican. He was a quiet man withal companionable, fond of a joke and a good story. He married Julia Ann, daughter of Wanton and Sarah (Starkweather) Carr, of Chesterfield, Massachusetts. She was born in 1816 and died in 1853 in Springfield. They were the parents of Clarissa Elizabeth (unmarried), Eugenia Louise, married Charles A. Call, of Springfield, and Eugene (died young). Mr. Stillman married (second) in 1857, Maria S. Brown, who died in 1871, aged fifty-four. No issue.

The name of Reed is found not only in England where it has been common from the time surnames came into use and as a clan name before that time, but in Ireland, Scotland and various countries on the continent of Europe. The name at present is spelled generally in three ways—Reed, Reid and Reade. The genealogy of the Read family of Kent, England, dates back to 1139 to Brianus de Rede, of Morpeth on the Wensback river in the north of England.

(I) Thomas Reed, progenitor, according to the genealogy, was living in Berkshire, England, in 1575, at Barton Court. He married Ann, the daughter of Thomas Hoo, of the Hoo, county Hertford.

(II) Thomas (2) Reed or Read, son of Thomas (1) Reed, also lived at Barton. He married Mary Stonehouse, of Little Peckham, county Kent, and lived at Redley. He was clerk of the Green Cloth.

(III) Thomas (3), son of Thomas (2) Reed, was knighted. He married Mary, daughter of Sir John Brocket, of Brocket Hall in Herefordshire. Children: Thomas, John, James. All three were baronets. Also two daughters.

(IV) Thomas (4), son of Thomas (3) Reed, married Mary, daughter of Thomas Cornwall, Lord of Strophshire. Children: Compton, Edward, and three sons believed to be Thomas, William and John, who came to America. Edward and Compton had families in England and their descendants have been distinguished.

(V) William, supposed to be son of Thomas (4) and Mary Reed, of Brocket Hall, Hertfordshire, was born in England in 1587 and was the oldest of the immigrants of this surname. He sailed from London in the ship "Defence" July 4, 1635, Captain Edward Fostick, and arrived in Boston October 6, same year, with his wife, who was Mabel Kendall, born 1605. They had with them children: George, born 1629, Ralph, 1630, and Justice (afterward called Abigail), 1633. Reed settled first at Dorchester, Massachusetts. He was admitted a freeman March 4, 1638. In August, 1639, he sold his real estate in Dorchester to Thomas Clark, and removed to Scituate where he was constable in 1644. His wife made the journey to Dorchester on horseback in 1644 to have her infant son Israel baptized. William Reed removed to Muddy River (Brookline), having bought of Esdras Reed, said to have been his brother, a farm granted by the town of Boston, and he lived there until 1648. He then bought a farm in Woburn of Nicholas David and removed thither. He is the ancestor of the Woburn, Lexington, Bedford and Burlington Reads, and of most of the Reeds in Maine. He returned to England finally and died at Newcastle-on-Tyne in 1650. A letter of administration was taken out by his widow under Oliver Cromwell. She returned to America and after administrating the estate, married, November 21, 1660, Henry Summers, of Woburn. She survived her second husband and lived with her son George at the time of her death, June 5, 1690, in her eighty-sixth year. Children: 1. George, born 1629, mentioned below. 2. (VI) George, son of William Reed, was born in England in 1629. He bought a farm in Woburn of Rebecca Terrace, November 7, 1651, and settled there. This farm was lately owned by Nathan Blanchard and is now within the limits of Burlington. He became a large landholder and wealthy, giving farms to his sons in what is now Woburn, Burlington and Lexington. He was for many years deacon of the church in Woburn. He died February 21, 1706, in his seventy-eighth year. He married (first) August 4, 1651, Elizabeth Jennison, daughter of Robert Jennison, of Watertown. She died February 26, 1665, and he married (second) November 9, 1665, Hannah Rockwell, of Charlestown. Children, all by first wife: 1. He married, May 24, 1686, Abigail Kendall, his father's cousin. She had an unusual number of fingers and toes (a characteristic of the whole Kendall family in America). She died October 12, 1734, and he and his wife are buried in the old Lexington graveyard and headstones mark the graves. Children: 1. Abigail, born May 29, 1687, married Deacon Jonathan Fiske. 2. The house in which he lived and died is still or was lately standing, in good condition, and is or was lately owned by his grandson, Christopher Reed. William Reed was representative to the general court twenty years in succession, and justice of the peace during the reigns of George II and III. He took an active part in public life, and in the office of justice performed the marriage ceremony for many of his descendants. He gave liberally of his means to those in need and distress, and in every way possible contributed to the welfare and well-being of those with whom he was brought in contact. (The Burgess Line).

The name Burgess is a title, civil or official. In England the inhabitant of a burgh or borough is a burgess, and the orthography of the name in England is well preserved and may be traced back four centuries. In America various spellings have been used, Burghess, Burges, Burgis, Borgis, Burge, Burg, and the most common spelling is Burgess.

(I) Thomas Burgess, immigrant ancestor, came from England about 1630, landing at Salem, and stayed for a time in Lynn. He brought his family with him, and July 3, 1637, was granted land in Duxbury. This he forfeited by his removal to Sandwich the same year, and it was assigned to Nicholas Robbins, who paid him for the improvements which had been made upon the land. Thomas Burgess was one of the first settlers of Sandwich and Savage calls him "a chief man of them." He was an original member of the church in 1638 and became a large land holder. He served the town in nearly every office, and was deputy to the general court at Plymouth for several years. The estate which he occupied remained in the family for many generations, and in 1863 the cellar of his house could still be seen. He died February 13, 1685, aged eighty-two years, and his grave was marked by a stone imported from England. "It was the only monument," says Amos Otis, "set up for any pilgrim of the first generation." His wife Dorothy died February 27, 1687. His will was dated April 4, 1684, and proved March 5, 1685. Children: Thomas, John, Elizabeth Jacob, mentioned below, Joseph.

(II) Jacob, son of Thomas Burgess, inherited his father's estate in Sandwich in behalf of his son Thomas, and was one of the executors of the will. ## (The Herrick Line)

This surname is of very ancient Scandinavian origin, from the baptismal name Eric, and the spelling is varied, some of the forms being Erik, Erick, Irek, Eyrick, Erryk, Heryk, Hireck, Hearick, Herrick. Tradition says the family was descended from Ericke, a Danish chief who invaded Britain in the time of King Alfred, and having been defeated was compelled with his followers to live in East Anglia, the government of which he held as a fief of the English crown. At the time of the Norman invasion, Eric the Forester resided in Leicestershire and had extensive domains along the sources of the Severn, and on the borders of Wales. He raised an army to fight the Normans, and bore a prominent part in the defense. Being defeated, his followers were dispossessed of their estates, but he found favor with William the Conqueror and was given important offices about his person, and in the command of the armies. In his old age he was permitted to retire to his house in Leicestershire, where he died. One coat-of-arms borne by an English family is: Argent, a fess vair or and gules. Crest: A bull's head couped or horned and eared sable, gorged with a chaplet of roses proper. Motto: Virtus omnia nobilitat.

The first of the Bliss family of BLISS whom we have any reliable information was Thomas Bliss, of Belstone parish in the county of Devonshire, England. Two of his sons, Thomas and George, and a nephew Thomas, a son of Jonathan, the eldest son of the first Thomas Bliss, came to America, and from them are descended many or perhaps most of the Blisses of New England. Those who came from England were highly educated, gentlemanly and refined in their manners, and were much superior in their respect to their immediate descendants, who had none of the advantages of the schools and society of the mother country. The name is supposed to have been originally Blois, the name of a division of France, gradually modified in America to Bliss.

(I) Thomas Bliss, the earliest known of the family of Bliss of this article, lived near Okehampton, in the village of Belstone, in Devonshire, England. He was a yeoman, a wealthy landowner and a member of the despised sect called Puritans, and suffered many persecutions on account of his religious faith. He was maltreated, impoverished and imprisoned, and finally ruined in health (as well as financially) by the many indignities and hardships forced upon him by the intolerant church party in power. He is supposed to have been born about the year 1550 or 1560. The date of his death is not certainly known, but it probably occurred about the time his sons emigrated to America or soon after. One of his sons, Jonathan, was imprisoned for non-conformity, fined heavily, ill-treated, and in long confinement contracted a fever from which he never recovered. The name of the wife of Thomas Bliss is unknown. His five children were: Jonathan, Thomas, Elizabeth, George, and Mary Elizabeth, married Sir John Calcliffe.

(II) Thomas (2), second son of Thomas (1) Bliss, was born in Belstone parish, Devonshire, about 1580 or 1585. Thomas and George Bliss embarked at Plymouth with their families and came to America in the autumn of 1635, and landed at Boston. They found they could not be comfortably located together unless they built new houses, for which undertaking the season was too far advanced, so they separated and Thomas settled in that part of Boston called the Mousit; it is across the bay, a little south of the city, and was afterwards named Braintree. The land there allotted to him being situated upon the mountain, he soon came to be called "Thomas of the Mount," and was near losing the family name altogether. The town has since been divided and the part where Thomas lived is now called Quincy. Thomas Bliss and his family and his nephew, Thomas Bliss (son of his brother Jonathan of England) who had arrived in Boston the year before, went from Braintree, perhaps with Rev. Thomas Hooker; if not soon after; and became a pioneer settler in Hartford, Connecticut, some time in 1636-37. By making a farm and selling his improvements to a newcomer, Thomas Bliss had cleared a little money, then about the only way to make money in New England. In the second year after his arrival (1640), Thomas Bliss, senior, as he was called, died. The land apportioned among the Hartford settlers was laid out in "lots" and "tiers," and the lot assigned to Thomas Bliss (senior), was "No. 58" in the "tenth tier," south of the little river. It lay on the east side of a street now discontinued, which extended north and south, a short distance to the west of the present Lafayette street, and south of the old state house. The present Trinity street was one of the original streets of Hartford and was known as Bliss street from the first settlement to about 1855. It was probably so named from this family, and was then described as extending from "George Steele's to the Mill." Thomas Bliss married, in England, about 1612 or 1615, Margaret, whose maiden name is thought to have been Margaret Lawrence, and it is believed that she was born about the year 1594. The following account of her is taken from the "Genealogy of the Bliss Family," compiled by John Homer Bliss, of Norwich, Connecticut: "She was a good looking woman, with a square oblong face that betokened great capacity and force of character. She had a broad open brow, fair hair, and blue eyes. After the death of her husband she managed the affairs of the family with great prudence and judgment." Her eldest daughter Ann married Robert Chapman, of Saybrook, Connecticut, in 1642, and removed to Saybrook, where her eldest brother Thomas, came soon after to live with them, and where he married in 1644. The other children of the Widow Margaret Bliss, of Hartford, concluded not to settle there permanently, chills and fever prevailing in some localities near the town; she and her children, therefore, in the year of 1643 removed to the settlement at Springfield, Massachusetts, thirty miles or more up the Connecticut river. Margaret sold her property in Hartford, and gathering her household goods and cattle together, prepared with her eight children to make the journey through the forest to Springfield, which she accomplished in about five days. Nathaniel and Samuel, her second and fourth sons, had been there previously, and a dwelling had been prepared for the family on their arrival. A journey like this was thought a great thing in those days. They camped out in the forest three nights with their teams so sparsely was the country settled at that time; and the forests infested with the savage beasts and scarcely less savage Indians, were broken only by the single roads to the seaboard, on the east and on the south and these were by no means of the best. Mrs. Margaret had acquaintances in Springfield, whom she had known in England, and here she settled down for the remainder of her days. It is said she purchased a tract of land in Springfield one mile square, situated in the south part of the town, on what is now Main street, and bordering on the Connecticut river. One of the streets laid out on the Manor tract has been named "Margaret" street and another "Bliss" street, on which has been built a Congregational church. She lived to see all her children brought up, married, and established in homes of their own, except Hannah, who died at about twenty-three years of age. Mrs. Margaret died in Springfield, August 28, 1684, after a residence in America of nearly fifty years, and over forty years since her husband's death. She was an energetic, efficient woman, capable of transacting most kinds of business, and and was long remembered in Springfield as a woman of great intellectual ability. A mother with these characteristics seldom fails to transmit them to posterity. Her will, dated in September, 1683, mentions some but not all of the children of Thomas, hence it has been surmised that she may have been a second wife, and that he had children by a former wife. As she survived her husband forty-four years, he must have died comparatively young, or there may have been a great disparity in their ages. She lived more than ninety years in spite of the hardships and anxieties she had passed through and her grandchildren were generally very strong of constitution and longlived, as were also her children. She was a woman of superior abilities, great resolution, and uncommon enterprise, and is entitled to the respect of her descendants, both for her vigor of mind and constitution. The children of Thomas and Margaret Bliss were: Ann, Mary, Thomas, Nathaniel, Lawrence, Samuel, Sarah, Elizabeth, Hannah and John.

(III) Samuel, fourth son of Thomas (2) and Margaret Bliss, was born in England, 1624, and removed to America with his father in 1635. He had several grants of land from Agawam, (Springfield) at Freshwater brook in the north side of the Agawam river, at what was first called Ackannuset, amounting to thirty-five acres. He was a prominent citizen of the town and was selectman there in 1685. He married, November 10, 1664, Mary, daughter of John and Sarah (Heath) Leonard, of Springfield. She was born September 14, 1647, and died in 1724. He died March 23, 1720, aged ninety-six years. Their children were: Hannah, Thomas, Mary, Jonathan, Martha, Sarah, Experience, Mercy, Ebenezer, Margaret and Esther.

(IV) Ebenezer, third son of Samuel and Mary (Leonard) Bliss, was born in Springfield, July 29, 1683, died September 7, 1717. He was a tanner by trade and lived in Springfield. In 1715 he bought sixty-three acres of land of Jeremiah Burgess, in Windsor, Connecticut. He was somewhat active in town affairs, holding at various times the minor township offices of hayward, hogreeve and fenceviewer. He married, January, 1707, Mary, daughter of John and Mary (Clark) Gaylord, who was born about 1688, in Windsor, Connecticut. Their children were: Jedediah, Ebenezer, Anne, Moses, Mary and Martha.

(V) Jedediah, eldest child of Ebenezer and Mary (Gaylord) Bliss, was born in Springfield, February 7, 1709, died November 30, 1777. He was a tanner, and a very eccentric man, and many stories are told of his odd ways. He married (first) July 2, 1733, Rachel, daughter of Joseph and Mary Sheldon, of Suffield, Connecticut. She died November 1, 1747. He married (second) August 19, 1748, Miriam, daughter of John and Abigail Hitchcock, who died November 19, 1793. Children by first wife Rachel were: Rachel, Moses, Jedediah, Mary, Lucy (died young), Lucy, Aaron and Patience. Those of second wife Miriam were: Miriam, Ebenezer, Reuben, Alexander, Zenas, Martha, Isaac, Jacob and Naomi.

(VI) General Jacob, youngest son of Jedediah and Miriam (Hitchcock) Bliss, was born March 12, 1763, died March 27, 1829. He was a soldier in the revolution, enlisting in the continental army in Captain Rowley's company, Colonel Moseley's regiment, June 5, 1780, when he was only seventeen years old. He served six months or more. He was also in the company of Captain Phineas Parker. The archives of the commonwealth describe him as five feet seven inches tall, with light complexion. He rose in rank in the militia after the revolution and was a brigadier-general in the war of 1812. He commanded a brigade of three regiments of Western Massachusetts troops stationed at or near Commercial Point, Boston, in 1814. He was a prominent citizen of Springfield. He married, in 1780, Mary Collins, daughter of Ariel Collins. She was born in Springfield, June 12, 1765, died October 14, 1854. The children of General Jacob Bliss were: Theodore, John, Mary, Jacob, William, Emily (died young), Emily, Christopher, Josiah and Henry.

(VII) Theodore, eldest child of General Jacob and Mary (Collins) Bliss, was born in Springfield, March 4, 1789, died in Springfield, December 13, 1844. He was a merchant and banker. He was married at Leominster, Massachusetts, July 3, 1814, to Juliet H. Mann, of Northampton, where she was born January 30, 1797. She died in Springfield, April 6, 1879. They had seven children—two born in Boston, and five in Springfield, as follows: Henrietta J., Mary Collins, Jacob (died young), Emily S., Martha A., Jacob and John. Martha A. married Frederick H. Harris. (See Harris IX).

(VII) William, fourth son of General Jacob and Mary (Collins) Bliss, was born in Springfield, March 29, 1797, died March 3, 1838. He was educated in the public schools, at an academy, and at Harvard College, from which he graduated in 1818. He studied law and became a prominent lawyer in Springfield for a man of his years. He was prominent in town affairs, and was chairman of county commissioners in 1834. He was a very companionable man, and was very much of a wit and many anecdotes are told of him. He married, July 1, 1828, Elizabeth Augusta Benjamin, daughter of Asher and Achsah Benjamin. She was born in Boston, January 4, 1800, and died in Springfield, June 22, 1877. Their children were: Ellen Augusta, Harriet L., and William, next mentioned. Harriet L. became the wife of Harry A. Gould.

(VIII) William (2), only son of William (1) and Elizabeth A. (Benjamin) Bliss, was born in Springfield, December 11, 1834. As a young man he worked for Cicero Simons, a merchant of Springfield. For a time he was employed in New York City, but after his marriage he returned to the city of his nativity to reside, and entered the employ of the Western railroad of which his father-in-law, Chester W. Chapin, was president. In 1865 he was made assistant to the president and in 1866 was promoted to the general freight agency. This position he held until 1872, when the Western and Boston & Worcester railroads were merged into the Boston & Albany, of which he was made general manager. In 1878, on the retirement of President Chapin, he was made vice-president and general manager, while Dr. Waldo Lincoln was made president. When Mr. Lincoln was killed, July 1, 1880, in a railroad accident, Mr. Bliss was named by the directors to succeed him. Shortly after assuming the presidency of the road his frequent presence in Boston became so necessary that he removed there and for many years previous to his death had made his home at No. 25 Exeter street. After the leasing of the Boston & Albany road to the New York Central, Mr. Bliss was freed from much business care and he gave this otherwise leisure time to out-door sports and to reading and social pleasures. He was devotedly fond of golf, and in the latter part of his life was an enthusiastic automobilist. He was a great reader and had a reputation as a wit and conversationalist. Among the strong men whom he attracted as associates in the management of the road were Judge A. L. Soule and Samuel Hoar, both of whom died before him, and who had served as general counsel for the railroad, and ex-Congressman Edward D. Hayden, vice-president of the road, deceased (1908). In appearance Mr. Bliss made a striking impression with his six feet three inches of erect physique. Dignified and courteous he impressed those whom he met with his strong character, while the men beneath him, with many manifestations of his care of them in mind, revered him in a manner seldom witnessed today. During the panic of 1893, when most corporations were paying off their help in checks, the employees of the Boston & Albany were paid in cash at great inconvenience to the company, but to the great pleasure of Mr. Bliss and his men. His relations with his directors were also uniformly pleasant and high-minded and though they several times sought permission to advance his salary beyond $12,000 he would not listen to it. He was also extremely careful that charges against his personal account should not get into the railroad accounts, and this was especially true of the provisions which went into his private car on his railroad journeys. As a railroad man he was held in high regard by his associates throughout the country. He was a director in the New York Central road and had several times refused offers connected with the management of other railroad properties. In the year or somewhat more following his accession to the presidency he made a proposition looking toward the purchase of the New Haven & Northampton railroad as a means of extending the road so as to secure an independent connection with New York City. The directors of the New Haven road, however, received word of the negotiations and they purchased the road of President Yeamens in time to checkmate Mr. Bliss's purpose.

His death was due to heart trouble which manifested itself a few months before his demise, reaching an acute stage but a week before his death. He was seventy-three years of age, and for forty years had been actively engaged in railroad work in Massachusetts. His family life was singularly happy and although Mrs. Bliss experienced a long period of invalidism before her death, her husband was especially devoted to her. His only daughter, Mrs. Hamilton Perkins, and her family made their home in Boston with Mr. Bliss after the death of Mrs. Bliss. William Bliss and Margaret C. Chapin, of Springfield, born May 23, 1834, died March 11, 1895, daughter of Chester W. and Dorcas (Chapin) Chapin, were married, September 22, 1858, at Springfield, Massachusetts, and were the parents of two children: Chester W., mentioned below; Elizabeth, born December 8, 1860, who married Hamilton Perkins, of Boston, September 18, 1884. Two children, one of whom is living, Margaret, married Charles D. Greenough (2), January 11, 1906; one child, Charles D. Greenough (3), born November 16, 1908.

(IX) Chester William, only son of William (2) and Margaret (Chapin) Bliss, was born in New York City, July 3, 1859. He was educated in the Gunnery school, Washington, Connecticut, the Noble school, Boston, and the Adams Academy at Quincy. From the latter institution he went to Harvard College, entering with the class of 1884, but did not continue. In 1881 he became rodman on a surveying corps of the Pennsylvania railroad at Paoli, Pennsylvania, and in the next three or four years was all over the state, finally leaving the company, having attained the position of assistant supervisor of track. He soon afterward entered the employ of the Boston & Albany road as assistant road master with headquarters at Springfield and by a series of promotions became assistant general superintendent of the road. In 1900 he resigned and made a tour of Europe which in the years following he has several times repeated, visiting the principal countries of the Continent and Britain. In February, 1907, he was elected president of the Chapin National Bank of Springfield, of which he had for some years been a director. In 1908 he was elected to the directorate of the Boston & Albany railroad. Mr. Bliss is a man of hard financial sense, deliberate in his movements in business, yet closely observant of what is transpiring and the financial prosperity of the bank, since he was elected its chief officer, attests to his qualifications to conduct one of the great monetary institutions of the state. He is social with his fellowmen and genial in his manner. He is a member of no secret order. In politics he is a Republican, but has never held a public office or a position in the party organization. His love for society finds expression in associations with men in many organizations for amusement. He is a member of the Somerset, Union, Tennis and Racket clubs of Boston; the Country Club in Brookline, the Eastern and New York Yacht Clubs; the Harvard Club of New York, and the Automobile Club of Springfield. He married, June 9, 1883, Isadora Leech, of Erie, Pennsylvania, who was born in Leechburg, Pennsylvania, daughter of Addison and Mary (Reynolds) Leech. They have had six children: 1. Dorcas, born August 2, 1884, died August, 1884. 2. William, July 27, 1886, died September 6, 1896. 3. Katherine, April 24, 1888, died November 19, 1888. 4. Elizabeth, June 15, 1890. 5. Addison, November 21, 1891. 6. Isadora, December 17, 1898.

(The Chapin Line).

(II) Henry, second son of Deacon Samuel (q. v.) and Cicily Chapin, does not appear to have resided in Springfield in the early part of his manhood, but took up his residence there about 1659. The town records show that he was prominent in town affairs, and was a representative in the general court in 1680.

Tradition says he was impressed on board a British man-of-war and served seven years, during which time he was in a severe engagement with the Dutch. He afterward commanded a merchant ship and made several voyages between London and Boston, but at length, tired of a seafaring life, took up his residence in Boston, and afterward in Springfield, where his father and family resided. He settled in that part of Springfield now Chicopee, built a house on the south side of Chicopee river in what is now the village of Chicopee, on Ferry street, facing south on West street near where a large elm tree now stands. This house was burned in 1762. He bought of John Pynchon, May 9, 1659, two hundred acres of land on the north side of Chicopee river, for which he was to pay in wheat the sum of twenty pounds in money by March, 1663. The greater part of these premises have been and still are in the possession of the descendants of Henry. He married Bethia, daughter of Benjamin and Sarah Cooley, at Longmeadow, December 5, 1664. She died December 11, 1711; and he died August 15, 1718. Children found on record: Henry, Sarah, Bethia, Henry (again) and Benjamin, next mentioned.

(III) Deacon Benjamin, youngest child of Henry and Bethia (Cooley) Chapin, was born in Springfield, February 2, 1682, and died March 22, 1756. He was one of the first deacons of the church in Chicopee, elected to that office in 1752. He lived on Chicopee street, near where Deacon Giles S. Chapin lived some years ago. Benjamin Chapin married (first) November 9, 1704, Hannah, daughter of Isaac and Mary Colton, of Longmeadow. She died March 5, 1739, and he married (second) Joanna, widow of Ebenezer Warriner. She died October 13, 1764. Children by first wife: Hannah, Benjamin, Isaac, Abner, Jacob, Bethia, Sarah, George, Abigail, Mary, Ephraim and Eunice.

(IV) Captain Ephraim, sixth son of Deacon Benjamin and Hannah (Colton) Chapin, was born October 29, 1729, and died October 12, 1805. He built the house where his grandson Briant Chapin lived in late years, and kept a tavern there for a long time. He was a good farmer, was one of the largest land holders of his time in the Connecticut Valley, having large tracts in Springfield, Ludlow and Chicopee, and fattened many cattle for market. He was a captain of a military company, and was out with a part or all his company during a portion of the old French war. He married,

May 1, 1755, Jemima, daughter of Abel and Hannah (Hitchcock) Chapin, and granddaughter of Thomas and Sarah (Wright) Chapin; Thomas being a son of Japhet and Abilenah (Cooley) Chapin, and grandson of Deacon Samuel the settler. She died November 1, 1804. They had: Abel, Ephraim, Jemima, Benjamin and Bezaleel (died young), (twins) Kezia, Bezaleel, and Frederick.

(V) Captain Ephraim (2), second son of Ephraim (1) and Jemima (Chapin) Chapin, was born April 3, 1759, and died December 26, 1806. He resided for several years in South Hadley and Ludlow, but removed to Chicopee, and died there, a farmer. He married, February, 1782, Mary Smith, born March 30, 1763, daughter of Phineas Smith of Granby, or South Hadley. She died January 9, 1844, aged eighty-one. Children: Erastus, Sophia, Giles Smith, Ephraim, Mary S., Betsey, and Chester William, next mentioned.

(VI) Hon. Chester William, youngest child of Ephraim (2) and Mary (Smith) Chapin, was born January 16, 1797, and died June 10, 1883. His father died before he was of age, and his elder brother Ephraim being in college, Chester was left with his mother to look after the interests of the family. He was educated in the common schools and at Westfield Academy, and after a brief service with his brother Erastus, who kept the old Williams House in Springfield, he became a partner in business with his life-long friend, Stephen C. Bemis. Believing that outdoor employment would be of benefit to his health, he bought an interest in the great stage line of the Connecticut Valley, which at that time was controlled by Jacob W. Brewster, of Sackett's Harbor, and Horatio Sargent, of Springfield. This business was carried on at a profit until the steamboats furnished a quicker, cheaper and more satisfactory mode of transportation. He then bought out the interests of Thomas Blanchard, and afterward entered into an alliance with Commodore Vanderbilt, then engaged in the transportation business at Hartford. This alliance proved of great mutual benefit, and laid the foundation of a lifelong community of interest and close personal friendships. Mr. Chapin was an early and zealous promoter of railroads. Having established a successful line of steamboats between New Haven and New York, on Long Island Sound, he with others undertook the construction of the Hartford & Springfield railroad, of which, with the extensions and additions, he was an active director during the rest of his life. One of his favorite and oft-quoted maxims to young men was: "When you can't stem the current, get in and steer," and his career showed that he made a personal application of the maxim. In 1850 he was made a director of the Western railroad, then running from Worcester to Albany, and the same year was elected president of the Connecticut River Railroad Company, which office he held until 1854. He then became president of the Western Railroad Company, and filled that position with marked ability and success for twenty-four years. He found the road in 1854 with inadequate rolling stock, wooden bridges, light rails, a single track, a depleted treasury, and poor credit; and one of his first moves was to go to London, where through his acquaintance with Mr. Sturgis, the active partner in the great banking house of Baring Brothers & Company, he obtained a loan of five hundred thousand dollars for the purpose of supplying those things which were imperatively demanded to meet the growing traffic of the road. From that time until he effected its consolidation with the Boston & Worcester road, and until it passed into the keeping of his successors, the history of the Boston & Albany railroad was a conspicuous and uninterrupted success. His practical knowledge of all the details of the business, his wise judgment and foresight, his accurate estimate of men and his skill in so placing and directing them as to utilize their respective capacities, and above all, his integrity and high notions of honor, coupled with a rare sense of justice, combined to attract the attention of the business world and distinguished him as a man. He was a man of large capacity and was connected with many large enterprises other than the transportation lines mentioned. As president of the Agawam Bank, and subsequently of the Chapin Banking & Trust Company, as director in the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, the Connecticut River Railroad Company, the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, the Springfield Fire and Marine Insurance Company, the Agawam Canal Company, the New Haven Steamboat Company, the City Library Association, and the other less conspicuous enterprises, his rare judgment and exceptional business sagacity were consulted. He was for a time president of the Hannibal & St. Joseph railroad, and was offered the presidency of the Hudson River Railroad Company, which he declined. He was a member of the constitutional convention which met at Charleston, South Carolina, in 1854, and was elected to a seat in the Forty-fourth Congress from a district largely Republican, although he was a lifelong Democrat. His public benefactions were liberal, and his purse was ever open to those in need. Amherst College received fifty thousand dollars during his life, and the church of the Unity, where he was a regular attendant, counted him among its most liberal supporters, receiving from him at one time twenty-six thousand dollars. In 1878 he retired from the presidency of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company, and from active business, and on June 10, 1883, died at his residence in Springfield, deeply mourned by the community which he had served so honorably and so faithfully. Chester W. Chapin married, June 1, 1825, Dorcas Chapin, born April 11, 1801, youngest daughter of Col. Abel and Dorcas Chapin. She was a woman of rare worth and of great usefulness in the community, her benefactions extending to most of the successful charities of Springfield. Four children were born of this marriage, who attained maturity. Abel D.; Margaret C. who married William Bliss (see Bliss VIII); Anna C., married James A. Rumrill, of Springfield; and Chester W.

(VI) Ebenezer, eldest son of Jedediah and Miriam (Hitchcock) Bliss, was born June 26, 1750, in Springfield, and died there February 26, 1826. He married (first) about 1774, Anna Nevins, who died August 3, 1788. Children: Anna, Mary, Hubbard, Parmela, David and James. He married (second) in 1790, Sarah Ferree, who died October 21, 1848, aged eighty-nine. Children: Sally, Luther, Eunice, Ebenezer, Lois Ferree, David and Anna.

(VII) Luther, eldest son of Ebenezer and Sarah (Ferree) Bliss, was born in Springfield, June 19, 1792, died at his home, 640 Main street, Springfield, May 23, 1886, being within a month of ninety-four years of age. He was brought up to his father's trade, shoemaking, but afterward conducted the tannery that the father had built for a younger son. While conducting the tannery his health failed and he was compelled to surrender the business. After trying the retail boot and shoe trade on State street for awhile he drifted into real estate transactions, from which he amassed a comfortable property. About 1836, in partnership with his cousin, Harvey Bliss, he opened William street through his home lot and laid out lots on each side. A newspaper account of Mr. Bliss says: "He was bred to the tanner's trade and had a tannery at the South end and also a shoe shop on Main street in the Center. He had a farm on South Main street that stretched to the river and through it later on opened William street. He was a shrewd, clever man in business and keen and bright in conversation. Always liberal-minded he espoused the abolition cause heartily, scorning its unpopularity; he also was ready to welcome the newly-founded Baptist and Methodist churches in the city when others were looking askance at them. By diligence and ability he amassed a comfortable property of perhaps $50,000, largely invested in real estate here-about." Another account says: "Mr. Bliss's anti-slavery convictions were of the strongest type. It is believed that he was the first to seriously suggest the organization of an independent anti-slavery political party in Massachusetts. While entertaining a party of Abolitionists who were here to address a convention, he said to them: 'Gentlemen, you can never make this movement a success until you start an independent political party, whose chief object shall be the abolition of slavery.' They exclaimed that that would ruin them. 'We are weak and our opponents would swallow us.' 'Not at all,' replied Mr. Bliss, 'Such men as Dr. Osgood of the first church and Dr. Hawes of Hartford cannot be swallowed up by any political opponents.' The more the suggestion was thought of the sounder it seemed, and the next year it was acted on, an anti-slavery ticket being put in the field, and from that day on the Abolitionist party grew in strength and numbers until its final triumph." Mr. Bliss never held public office, but took a deep interest in politics, reading the newspapers closely, and in his last days having them read to him, and so kept abreast of current events. In 1820 Mr. Bliss built the house in which he resided the remainder of his life. This was on a lot which formed a part of the land apportioned to his ancestors a few years after the settlement of the town, and here he was born. In 1827 Mr. Bliss and his wife became members of the First Church, but left with the colony which formed the South Church in 1856. Of this he was for some time the oldest member. His religious career was one of happy faith, pure and consistent. He was often urged to accept some office in the church, but always declined. At the time of his death Mr. Bliss was the oldest native-born resident of Springfield. He retained his mental faculties to a remarkable degree until about the time of his death. Living with him and keeping house for him was the widow of his son James H., who with great kindness during his declining years took the best of care of him, three of which he was in almost complete helplessness. Luther Bliss married, September 30, 1819, Rebecca, daughter of Moses and Jerusha (Easton) Ferree. She was born at Hartford, Connecticut, April 17, 1792, and died July 1, 1866. Children: Jerusha E., Luther, Ebenezer, James H., James Ferree (died young), James and Homer.

(VIII) James Henry, son of Luther and Rebecca (Ferree) Bliss, was born in Springfield, October 22, 1830, and died September 6, 1867. He was engaged in the retail grocery business in Springfield. He married, at Lyme, Connecticut, October 22, 1863, Annie Louise, daughter of John G. and Julia Ann (Bill) Hughes. She was born March 23, 1837, and since her marriage has resided at the old Bliss homestead, now a period of forty-six years. Mrs. Bliss is held in highest esteem by a large circle of friends. She is noted for her practical sense, and is the inventor of the Bliss charcoal stove, which has been widely used. The issue of his marriage was one child, Annie Rebecca, the subject of the next paragraph.

(IX) Annie Rebecca, only child of James H. and Annie Louise (Hughes) Bliss, was born in Springfield, September 25, 1864, died July 25, 1904. She was educated and always resided in Springfield. She was an active worker in Mercy Warren Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and was for three years corresponding secretary of the chapter. She was a charter member of Faith Church and was one of the most earnest workers in the days when Rev. Dr. S. G. Buckingham first started his branch chapel from the parent South Church, of which she was a member. Miss Bliss had a large circle of friends, to whom her beautiful character was an inspiration. She died of bronchitis, which developed from a severe cold she took at Easter preceding her death.

(The Bill Line).

Bill is numbered among the oldest surnames in England, being directly traceable in a single county, that of Shropshire, for a period of over five hundred years. Dr. Thomas Bill, born in Bedfordshire, about 1490, was one of the physicians of Henry VIII and Edward VI, and an attendant of the Princess Elizabeth. William Bill, LL. D., born in Hertfordshire, about 1505, held at the same time the important positions of Master of Trinity College, Provost of Eton College, and Dean of the Westminster. Charles Bill, born about 1550, believed to be a son of the preceding, was recommended in 1609 to succeed Sir Thomas Smith as Latin secretary to King James I. John Bill, baptized in 1576, was publisher to King James I, in 1613. In America several of the name have attained honorable positions. The name is claimed to have first been assumed by one of the class of soldiers who were armed with the bill, a sort of battle-ax.

(I) John Bill is assumed to be the first of the name in this country, and in the records of Boston is found this statement: "John Bill died 10 mo., 1638." A month later, January 21, 1639, Richard Tuttle became responsible to the town of Boston for "one Dorothe Bill, widdowe, a sojourner in his house," and "for anything about her." Dorothy Bill is believed to have been the widow of John Bill, deceased, and sister of the Richard Tuttle in whose house she was a "sojourner;" and the last clause of the quotation used above, means that her brother engaged to meet any expense which might arise on account of her and her children. She had at this time at least one son, James Bill, who was then twenty-three years old. There is no record of the arrival of John and Dorothy Bill in America, but it is assumed that they came over before 1635. In the latter year a boy named John Bill, aged thirteen, came in the ship "Hopewell;" and about the same time a girl, Mary Bill, aged eleven, came in the ship "Planter," both supposed to be children of John and Dorothy. The name of Mary Bill immediately follows the names of the Tuttles, who came in the "Planter," and she is thought to have come as one of their family. The relations the members of the two families sustained to each other thereafter imply relationship. From what can now be learned it seems that John and Dorothy Bill were husband and wife, and that they had children: James, Thomas, Philip, John and Mary.

(II) Philip Bill, as stated above, is believed to have been a son of John and Dorothy Bill, to have been born in England about 1620, and to have been a grandson of the King's printer, John Bill. Philip Bill is first found at Pulling Point, then forming a part of Boston, near James Bill, who had settled there some years previously. Philip appears in 1660 as debtor to the estate of William Burnell, of Pulling Point. He seems to have moved to Ipswich soon after that time. May 11, 1663, according to the court record, Philip Fowler, Sen., of Ipswich, puts into the hands of Philip Bill two young heifers for seven years. After a few years residence in Ipswich Philip Bill probably thought he could profit by removing, for his name appears among those of the arrivals in New London, Connecticut, "about 1668." Philip Bill settled on the east side of the Thames river, in that portion of the township of New London that in 1705 was incorporated as the town of Groton. Philip Bill settled near Robert Allyn and George Geer, probably at or near Allyn's Point, now in the town of Ledyard. As is shown by the part of the New London records still extant, he became possessed of considerable real estate. In 1677 he sold one hundred acres of land to Richard Lord, and in 1707 or thereabouts devised other real estate to his children. Philip Bill died July 8, 1689, of a fatal throat distemper, which prevailed that summer, and his daughter Margaret died the same day of the same disease. He left a widow Hannah, who afterward married Samuel Bucknall, of Buckland, of New London, and died in 1709. Children, the last two born in Connecticut: Philip, Mary, Margaret, Samuel, John, Elizabeth, Jonathan, and Joshua, next mentioned.

(III) Joshua, youngest child of Philip and Hannah Bill, was born in New London, Connecticut, October 16, 1675, baptized March 29, 1676, and died in 1735. He was a blacksmith and seems to have been a man of much more than ordinary education. February 11, 1707, Joshua Bill, of Groton, mortgaged eighty acres of land to Jonathan Bill, of Boston. January 17, 1721, Joshua Bill was granted three hundred acres of land by John Pelton. He appears as a party to other deeds. Through an old Bible, printed by Charles Bill, of London, about 1660, which became the property of Joshua Bill, and in which he wrote with his own hand the family record, and which Bible and record afterward fell into the hands of Ledyard Bill, the compiler of the "History of the Bill Family," the family records of Joshua and others of the Bill family were obtained. Joshua Bill was selectman for many years, and was also one of the town committee from 1719 to 1730. April 16, 1719, he was moderator of the town meeting held to consider the propriety of dividing the town commons. A committee was appointed, of which he was one, to take such action as was deemed best, and the lands were afterwards divided and disposed of by the committee. The same committee granted six hundred acres of land to the Pequot Indians for their use, March 20, 1721. Joshua Bill was also one of those who laid out in 1773 what is now the main traveled road between Groton and Preston, and divides the town of Ledyard nearly in halves. Joshua Bill married (first) November 1, 1699, Joanna Potts, daughter of William Potts, of New London. She was born in May, 1679, was admitted to the church at New London, May 9, 1701, and died November 3, 1718. He married (second) October 4, 1719, Hannah Swodel, born in December, 1697, daughter of William Swodel, of Groton. The children by wife Joanna were: A son (died young), Joshua, Edward, Benajah and Mary; by wife Hannah: Phineas, Naomi, Orpah, Hannah, Sarah, Esther, Joanna and Phebe.

(IV) Phineas, eldest son of Joshua and Hannah (Swodel) Bill, was born September 3, 1720, in what is now Ledyard. He was a cooper and resided in the southwestern part of the town, about midway between Unionville and Allyn's Point, probably in what has been known for more than a century and a half to the neighboring inhabitants as the "Phineas Bill House." He died of cancer while a member of the family of his son Phineas, February, 1780, aged sixty years. December 25, 1784, his widow was allowed £18 out of his estate. He married Mehitable Woodworth, who survived him many years, and died in Groton (Ledyard) July, 1813, aged ninety. Children: Phineas, Mehitable, Mary, Benajah, Joshua, Gurdon and a daughter.

(V) Benajah, second son of Phineas and Mehitable (Woodworth) Bill, was born in Groton, June 29, 1760, died in Lyme, May 22, 1842. In the earlier part of his life he resided on what is now known as "Meeting-House Hill," in Ledyard. Like his father and brothers, he was a cooper. Later in life he removed to Lyme and became a farmer. He married, January 17, 1782, Content Park, born February 4, 1761, died May 27, 1845. Children: Polly, Lodowick, Ennice Park, Alexander Tullius Franklin, Sarah, Elisha Satterlee, Nelson Horatius, Park Allyn, Lyman Edgcomb, and a child (died young).

(VI) Judge Lodowick, eldest son of Benajah and Content (Park) Bill, was born in what is now Ledyard, October 9, 1784, and died in advanced years. He was a farmer, but for many years dealt extensively in wool. After his marriage he resided in Lyme. He was a man of marked traits of character, being upright in business, social in his intercourse with people, and eminently practical in his affairs. He began life poor, but by frugality and industry he brought together an ample fortune. His business ability was recognized by his fellow citizens and he was called to fill various public offices. He was constable, deputy sheriff, justice of the peace, judge of probate, and member of the legislature. He held the office of judge of probate until disqualified by age. He married, October 20, 1805, Betsey Gower, of Ledyard, a descendant of Rev. John Wight, a clergyman of some distinction. He and his wife lived to see the semi-centennial of their married life, when they had more than forty grandchildren and great-grandchildren living within one-half a mile of them. Children: Eliza, Julia Ann, Polly, Hiram Geer, John Wight, Benajah Park, James Alexander, Ellen Jane, Lucy Stark, and Gilbert La Fayette.

(VII) Julia Ann, second child of Lodowick and Betsey (Geer) Bill, was born in Ledyard, October 20, 1807, died 1869. She married, January 20, 1824, John G. Hughes, of Lyme, Connecticut (see Hughes II).

(The Hughes Line).

The name Hughes is probably of Welsh origin and of comparatively recent arrival in America. The family tradition supports this theory and the fact that no record can be found preceding Captain John Hughes, of Lyme, Connecticut, further supports the idea.

(I) Captain John Hughes first appears in the records of Lyme, Connecticut, January 7, 1788, when he was there married to Jemimah, daughter of Josiah Burnham of that town. He was the commander of a vessel and made several purchases of land in Lyme. The first was in August, 1794, when he bought a house and garden in that portion of Lyme known as Mathers Neck. It is probable that the house now standing on the land is one which he then purchased. In executing the power of attorney in New York, December 19, 1797, he refers to himself of Lyme "master of the brig Prudence now lying in the port of New York but bound for New Orleans." In other documents he is referred to as John Hughes, mariner, and always "of Lyme." He had children: Joseph Higgins, born March 31, 1794; Polly, March, 1797; John Gordon, mentioned below; Betsey, February 29, 1808.

(II) John Gordon, younger son of Captain John and Jemimah (Burnham) Hughes, was born January 1, 1802, in Lyme. The family tradition states that he was born in England, and this is quite possible as his father was frequently a visitor to that country and might have been accompanied by his wife on a voyage on which occasion the birth of the son occurred. The record of the four children in Lyme was evidently made at one time and does not specify whether any of them were born in Lyme or elsewhere. He resided in Lyme, where he was a man of substance and lived to an advanced age. John G. Hughes married, January 20, 1824, in Lyme, Julia Ann, daughter of Lodowick Bill, of that town (see Bill VII). Children: Mary Seldon, Charles Gordon, Alfred Smith, Hiram Geer, John Wight, Annie Louise, Jennie Eliza, Elizabeth Maria, Fannie Emeline, Ellen Burnham and Julia Emma.

(II) Annie Louise, second daughter of John G. and Julia Ann (Bill) Hughes, married, October 22, 1803, James H. Bliss (see Bliss VIII).

John Cowing, a Scotchman COWING from Edinburgh, appeared in Scituate in Plymouth Colony in 1656. He purchased a tract of land in Cohasset, north of Sweet Swamp, and east of the Michael Pierce farm, and on it he erected a house which occupied the site on which the house of Stephen Litchfield stood in 1830. John and Rebecca (Man) Cowing lived in the house on Man Hill, occupied by Richard and Rebecca Man, up to the time Richard was drowned, and Rebecca married John Cowing. His Scottish spirits did not desert him in his new home as is evidence in the Colony records of 1670 as follows: "John Cowen appeared in court to answer for contemptible words against Royal Authority; to wit: that he scorned to be in subjection to an Englishman—and that there never was any King of England that was an Englishman, save one crooked back'd Richard—a crooked Rogue just like such an one, (naming a well known hunch back)." He was cleared of the offence, however. He married, in 1656, Rebecca, widow of Richard Man. Richard Man was a "Mayflower" passenger, 1620, a planter; came as a youth in Elder Brewster's family, was one of the partners in the Cohasset purchase in 1646, and he had children: Nathaniel, born 1646; Thomas, 1651; Richard, 1652; Josiah, 1654. We find no record of the date of death of either John Cowing or his wife Rebecca. John and Rebecca Cowing had five children born in Scituate, as follows: 1. Joseph, 1657, was killed in the Rehoboth battle, King Philip's war, 1676. 2. Mary, 1659. 3. John, 1662, married Deborah Litchfield, 1687, and his children were: i. Sarah, born 1688; ii. Joseph, 1690; iii. John, 1692, married Desire ———, who died February 8, 1723-4; iv. Joshua, 1694; v. Caleb, 1696, married and had two children: James, 1740, and Samuel, 1742; vi. Israel, 1701; vii. Mary, 1705. 4. Israel, 1664 (q. v.). 5. Rebecca, 1666, married Obadiah Holmes, of Dorchester.

(II) Israel, third son and fourth child of John and Rebecca (Man) Cowing, was born in Scituate, Massachusetts, 1664, died January 15, 1717. He married Rebecca, daughter of James Wade, in 1689. His children were: 1. Mary, born 1691. 2. Hannah, 1694. 3. Elizabeth, 1697. 4. Israel, 1699 (q. v.). 5. Jonah, 1704, died young. 6. Gethelus, 1708, married Mary Gill, of Hingham, 1735, and left sons David and John. 7. Job, 1713, was called Captain Job, and had son Job, 1742, who died in Scituate and had no sons; Gethelus and Israel, 1750, who left sons: Israel, Charles and others. 8. Joseph, 1715, removed to Bridgewater and married ——— Howland in 1736. 9. Sarah, 1717.

(III) Israel (2), eldest son of Israel (1) and Rebecca (Wade) Cowing, was born in Scituate, Plymouth county, Massachusetts, in 1699. He married ——— Howland, of Pembroke, in Plymouth county, about 1722, and they removed to Weymouth after his sons Joseph, Israel and Balch were born as follows: 1. Joseph, probably early in 1723, married Jane, daughter of Samuel Keith, in 1744, and they had: Joseph, 1745, Hannah, 1747, Word, 1755. 2. Israel, 1724. 3. Balch (q. v.).

(IV) Balch, youngest son of Israel (2) and ——— (Howland) Cowing, was born in Scituate, Plymouth county, Massachusetts, in 1728. He removed with his father and the other members of the family to Weymouth, Norfolk county, Massachusetts, which was just over the border from Plymouth county, where he married and had children: Balch, Cornelius, Howland, Rachel, Sarah, married Peleg Jordan.

(V) Balch (2), eldest son of Balch (1) Cowing, was born in Scituate, Massachusetts, about 1750. He was brought up in Weymouth and followed the sea in his younger days. He became master of the packet brig "Volasute," owned at one time by Peter Lane, and which sailed from Boston and had accommodations for passengers as well as freight. Later in life he retired and worked a small farm in Weymouth, which employment occupied his declining years. He was married, about 1775, to Cynthia Bates, of Weymouth, and by this marriage eight children were born as follows: 1. Joshua Bates (q. v.). 2. Francis. 3. Lucretia. 4. Maria, the only one now living, married Henry Willie. He died in March, 1907, leaving one son, Theodore Parker, who was named for the famous minister by that name. This son was a man of more than ordinary ability as a mechanic, doing some very fine work in this direction and was also an accomplished musician; he died at thirty-eight years of age. 5. Henry B., whose son Henry was a soldier in the Thirteenth Massachusetts Regiment in the war 1861-65. 6. Sarah H. 7. Susan H. 8. William B.

(VI) Joshua Bates, eldest child of Balch (2) and Cynthia (Bates) Cowing, was born in Weymouth, Massachusetts, about 1800. He was married in Batestown, Weymouth, Massachusetts, to Deborah Cushing, and they had eight children as follows: 1. Francis Henry, born and died in 1831. 2. Francis Henry (2) (q. v.). 3. Mary C., married Edward H. French; they reside in East Weymouth. 4. Helen M., married Ezra Wilder, of Hingham. 5. Charles G., deceased; was a soldier in the United States army, married Etta Nickerson, of East Weymouth, where she now resides. 6. George, deceased, married and had children Helen and George Cowing. 7. Elizabeth, married Charles Hayward; resides in East Weymouth. 8. Edward, married Jessie Cain, of Hingham.

(VII) Francis Henry, second son of Joshua Bates and Deborah (Cushing) Cowing, was born in Weymouth, Massachusetts, December 17, 1834. He attended the Weymouth district school, and was a clerk in a store and in business on his own account up to 1857, when he accepted a position with the Old Colony Railroad Company as station agent at East Weymouth, and remained in the service of that corporation up to 1893, when he resigned, being nearly three score years of age. He served as assessor of the town of Weymouth from 1895 till 1906, and as a trustee of the Weymouth Savings Bank, one of the board of investment, and its vice-president, which offices he still holds. He never married. In 1841 he purchased for a home the fine residence which Samuel Arnold had built in 1803, and where Mr. Cowing still resides. Mr. Cowing attends the Universalist church, is a Republican in political belief, and has always been held in high esteem by the people of Weymouth, all of whom are counted as his friends. As he approaches the seventy-fifth milestone in his journey through life's years, he treads with a light foot and unfaltering step, bidding fair to mark many more milestones to the credit of a well spent life.

He continued for five years in this business, then for about a year was associated with his father in Auburndale, Massachusetts, in the building business. He next became complaint clerk for the Boston Gaslight Company and was promoted to the office of assistant cashier in March, 1853, and had his office at the works until the September following. Mary E. (Thomas) Johnson was a musician, vocal and instrumental, catering to the high class element of Boston.

At the time of the first settlement of New England, this name was common in England, as well as in several other parts of Europe. There were very many emigrants to New England with this patronymic, from the first, and so many bearing the same christian name that it has been exceedingly difficult to trace many branches of the family. Savage says one of the first accused of the "impossible" crime of witchcraft bore this name; many graduated from New England colleges before 1700, and a number of these entered the ministry. Many of them distinguished themselves in other ways, and many held positions of prominence in England as well. When the British parliament made a law compelling the use of surnames, many simply added the suffix "son" to their christian name and gave it to their children as a surname, in this way forming such names as Peterson, Carlson, Johnson, and the like.

(I) Peter Johnson was living in Fairfield, Connecticut, in 1649, and had probably come from Massachusetts. He had sons Moses, Ebenezer and John.

(II) Colonel Ebenezer, supposed to be the son of Peter Johnson, of Fairfield, Connecticut, was born about 1649, and settled at Derby, Connecticut, about 1668. He married, in 1671, Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Wooster, and their children were: Elizabeth, born in 1672; Eunice, August 22, 1678; Hannah, December 6, 1680; Peter, October 9, 1684; Ebenezer; Timothy, December 23, 1693; and Charles, December 29, 1696.

(III) Lieutenant Ebenezer (2), son of Colonel Ebenezer (1) and Elizabeth (Wooster) Johnson, was born February 22, 1686, at Derby, Connecticut, and died in 1751. He was a man of prominence in the community. By his wife Hannah he had children as follows: Benajah, born in 1704; Timothy; Ann and Sarah.

(IV) Timothy, son of Lieutenant Ebenezer (2) and Hannah Johnson, married, February 21, 1725, Abigail Brewster, who died December 15, 1773, and had children as follows: Nathaniel, born March 6, 1726; Timothy, died April 2, 1733; Hannah, born December 4, 1727; Alexander; Timothy; Ruth; Charles, April 19, 1739; and Timothy, December 5, 1741.

(V) Alexander, son of Timothy and Abigail (Brewster) Johnson, was born June 20, 1730, and lived at Seymour, Connecticut. By his wife Hannah he had children as follows: Timothy, born January 21, 1766; David; Elijah; Nathaniel; Charles; Abigail Brewster and Ruth.

(VI) Charles, thought to be the son of Alexander and Hannah Johnson, was born about 1777, and died about 1808. He lived at Franklin, Connecticut, and married Mary Sholes. Among their children was James Huntingdon.

(VII) James Huntingdon, son of Charles and Mary (Sholes) Johnson, was born in March, 1810, and died February 2, 1878. He married, November 1, 1835, Almira, daughter of Elijah Rathbun, of Lisbon, Connecticut, born December 14, 1808, died in Springfield, Massachusetts, September 23, 1894. Her ancestor, Thomas Rathbun, born August 5, 1730, at Lisbon, Connecticut, was third lieutenant in Captain Belcher's company in the revolutionary war, 1776. They had a son, James Louis.

(VIII) James Louis, son of James Huntingdon and Almira (Rathbun) Johnson, was born December 30, 1840, at Canterbury, Connecticut, and died December 18, 1905, at Springfield, Massachusetts. In his youth he lived on his father's farm, assisting in the work to be done there, and in winter attended school, first the public and high school, and later the Normal school at New Britain. He commenced teaching school at the age of eighteen, and kept this up in the winters, while he attended the Normal school, from which he graduated in 1863. After teaching a few years, he spent some time in Ohio, as special agent for the Continental Life Insurance Company, of Hartford, Connecticut, then in 1866 became the general agent in Western Massachusetts for the same company, locating with his family in Springfield. In 1873 he accepted a similar position for the Union Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Maine, and in 1880 left this company to accept the agency in Western Massachusetts and part of Connecticut, for the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Springfield, in which business enterprise he became very successful. He took great interest in Springfield's prosperity and progress, and became well known in business, society and church circles. For several years he served as a member of the school board, was a member of the City Library Association, director of the Mutual Fire Assurance Company, and a member of the Springfield Board of Trade. He belonged to Connecticut Valley Congregational Club, Realty, Winthrop and Nayasset clubs, the Pequot Club of New Haven, Connecticut, and was a Mason, being affiliated with Roswell Lee Lodge, Morning Star Chapter and Springfield Commandery Knights Templar, being a charter member of the latter body. He belonged to several Underwriters' Associations, being the first president of the Western Massachusetts Life Association, organized in 1894, and at one time president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, having been present at its organization. He was a member of the First Church of Springfield, and much interested in all its work, working in the Sunday school and Young Men's Christian Association, being one of the board of trustees for the latter society's international training school. In politics he was a Republican. He married, June 13, 1866, Sarah Hosmer, daughter of Abel Child and Angeline Atwood (Hosmer) Chamberlain, born August 20, 1840. (See Chamberlain VII). Their children were: 1. Anna Louise, born September 25, 1869, at Springfield, graduate of Smith College, also a graduate of the Springfield Kindergarten School. 2. Grace Almira, December 22, 1874, at Springfield. 3. Helen Chamberlain, April 18, 1885, died November 14, 1892.

(The Chamberlain Line).

This family traces its history back to an ancestor who settled in the primeval forests of Massachusetts when the oldest in that colony was only twenty-one years old. The self-reliant and energetic spirit of this ancestor is still strong in the Chamberlains of the present time.

(I) Edmund Chamberlain, immigrant ancestor, settled at Woburn, Massachusetts, and removed about 1655 to Chelmsford. He drew land at New Roxbury (Woodstock, Connecticut), lot No. 56, and his son Edmund settled there. Edmund Chamberlain married, at Roxbury, Massachusetts, January 4, 1647, Mary Turner, probably sister of John Turner. She died in Roxbury, December 7, 1669, at the house of Samuel Ruggles, of Roxbury. He married (second) at Malden, June 22, 1670, Hannah Burden. The children of Edmund or Edward (the names were used interchangeably) Chamberlain by his first wife were: Mary, baptized at Roxbury, April 16, 1648; Sarah, born December 18, 1649; Edmund, May 30, 1656; Jacob, October 5, 1658. The children of Edmund Chamberlain, by second wife, born or recorded as born at Malden, were: Susanna, born June 16, 1671, died 1672; Ebenezer, 1672, died 1672; Susanna, married, November 14, 1693, John Tuckerman, of Boston; Edmund, January 31, 1676.

(II) Edmund (2), son of Edmund (1) and Hannah (Burden) Chamberlain, was born January 31, 1676, at Malden, Massachusetts, and about 1686 removed with his parents to New Roxbury, (Woodstock), Connecticut, where he was married November 21, 1699, by Rev. Josiah Dwight, to Elizabeth Bartholomew, probably daughter of William Bartholomew. After her husband's death she married Joseph Wright, of Andover, Massachusetts, December 5, 1737; she died in 1746. Their children were: Edmund, born August 23, 1700; Elizabeth, March 6, 1702; William, February 23, 1704; John, married Hannah Bowen, December 30, 1725; Peter; Mary; Hannah, January 2, 1721.

(III) Edmund (3), eldest son of Edmund (2) and Elizabeth (Bartholomew) Chamberlain, was born August 23, 1700, at Woodstock, Connecticut, where he was chosen deacon of the church in 1725, and in 1761 was still living. He married, January 5, 1734, Sarah Wright, who died December 27, 1783, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Amos Throop, of Woodstock. Their children were: William, baptized November 17, 1734; Abiel; William, baptized March 22, 1741; Edmund, baptized March 20, 1743; he served as sergeant in the revolution.

(IV) Abiel, son of Edmund (3) and Sarah (Wright) Chamberlain, was born December 20, 1736, at Woodstock, Connecticut, died January 12, 1820. He served in the revolution, in 1776, being clerk in Captain Jonathan Morris's company, Eleventh regiment, Connecticut militia, from Woodstock. About 1760 he married

Grace Ainsworth, of West Woodstock, born June 1, 1743, died January 10, 1788, and their children were: Abiel; Zevia, married Bial Allard and moved to Saratoga, New York; Eunice and Olive, twins, born in 1777, the former of whom married Mr. Walker, and the latter died unmarried March 7, 1808; Sylvia, born 1764, died unmarried March 10, 1822; Polly, married Mr. Warner; Betsey, married Mr. Hibbard; Willoughby, married ——— Foster; Huldah, married Mr. Waters; Jemima, married Mr. Coombs; Nathan Ainsworth, served in the war of 1812, married Polly Goodell about 1820; William, married Betsy Tucker, about 1810.

(V) Abiel (2), son of Abiel (1) and Grace (Ainsworth) Chamberlain, was born November 19, 1774, at Woodstock, Connecticut, died September 23, 1846. He married, September 30, 1802, Salome, daughter of Abel Child, fifth in descent from Benjamin Child, the original settler in Roxbury, Massachusetts, in 1630; she was born July 8, 1781, and died January 29, 1850. Their children were: Rensselaer, born November 19, 1804, died unmarried, August 20, 1829; Electa, October 11, 1806, died unmarried September 7, 1844; Emeline, July 12, 1808, died July 16, 1824; Abel Child; John Newton, May 26, 1812, died February 21, 1880; Rebekah, born October 4, 1813, married Hervey Plimpton, and died April 27, 1903; George, November, 1819, was living in Woodstock, Maine, in 1892; Alvan, October 2, 1821, married, March 29, 1851, Sarah Holdrich Elliott, and died January 1, 1866; Samuel, November 10, 1822, lived in New Haven, died April 4, 1894.

(VI) Abel Child, second son of Abiel (2) and Salome (Child) Chamberlain, was born January 6, 1811, at Woodstock, Connecticut, and died July 18, 1885. He married, September 10, 1835, in Woodstock, Angeline Atwood Hosmer, daughter of Ephraim and Sally (Palmer) Hosmer, born November 20, 1812, died March 3, 1880. Ephraim Hosmer (who took part in the war of 1812 from New London) was the son of Abel, he son of Ephraim, he son of James and Elizabeth Hosmer, probably original settlers, and Sally Palmer was sixth in descent from Thomas Palmer, the original settler of Rowley, Massachusetts, in 1630. Abel Child Chamberlain's children were: 1. Myron Newton, born September 6, 1836, died January 10, 1899; married, January 15, 1867, Julia Denison. 2. Sarah Hosmer. 3. Hannah Maria, February 6, 1847. 4. George Rensselaer, August 18, 1849, married, June 11, 1874, M. Anna Parsons. 5. James Henry Percival, July 11, 1854, died May 31, 1895; married Hattie Louise Riley.

(VII) Sarah Hosmer, daughter of Abel Child and Angeline Atwood (Hosmer) Chamberlain, was born August 20, 1840, married, June 13, 1866, James Louis Johnson. (See Johnson VIII). She is a daughter of the American Revolution, becoming a member in 1894.

The early immigrants to New England were mostly artisans and many of them men of little learning. That they were possessed of strong characters is evidenced in a thousand ways to the student of history. While the pen was an awkward instrument to many of them, they were industrious and conquered the wilderness, establishing the foundation of the civilization which we enjoy. Among the most useful men in the colonies were the Smiths, who made all the nails used in the construction of buildings, and nearly every implement of every sort employed in the rude life of the pioneers. A century previous the country people in England had taken surnames, and it feel out that many who were smiths by occupation took the word for a patronymic. In the midst of these, where christian names are oft repeated, it had been difficult to trace a line of descent in many cases.

The Hon. John Cotton Smith, governor of Connecticut, and his two celebrated sons, Rev. John Cotton Smith and Rev. Roland Cotton Smith, rectors in the Protestant Episcopal church, were of this line.

(I) Rev. Henry Smith was born in England and came to this country. Savage says he died in 1643 in Wethersfield, Connecticut. He was with Rev. Thomas Hooker, who led his people from Watertown, Massachusetts, to Connecticut in 1630. They traversed the wilderness, guided by a compass, to Hartford, with no covers but the heavens; no lodging but the ground. They carried their packs on their backs and their arms in their hands. Rev. Henry became the first minister of Wethersfield. The name of his wife has never been authoritatively ascertained. Children: Samuel, James, Preserved, Ichabod and Ebenezer.

(II) Ebenezer, youngest son of Rev. Henry Smith, was probably born in England and came to America with his father and brothers. The name of his wife was Sarah (surname unknown.).

(III) Ebenezer (2), son of Ebenezer (1) and Sarah Smith, was born April 2, 1699, died September 15, 1720. Children: Nathaniel, born March 3, 1701; Johanna, January 8, 1703; Jonathan, August 1, 1705; Dorcas, November 19, 1707; Mary, March 26, 1710, who died in infancy; Mary, July 24, 1713.

(IV) Nathaniel, eldest son of Ebenezer (2) Smith, was born March 3, 1701, married Mercy (surname unknown). Their children: Nathaniel, born May 22, 1729; Mercy, Christmas day, 1731; Rhoda, October 23, 1732.

(V) Nathaniel (2), eldest son of Nathaniel (1) and Mercy Smith, was born as above in Sheffield, Connecticut. He resided in Sandisfield, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, in Rupert, Vermont, and Pawlet, an adjoining town. In 1799 he removed to Orwell, that state, and in 1802 to St. Armand, Province of Quebec, Canada. He was temperate, industrious, economical, with a good common school education, and he taught school occasionally even when advanced in years. He possessed good general information, was remarkable for his conversational powers and a great lover of children. He never made any profession of religion, yet he was strict in performing family devotion and very strict in teaching his children the catechism. He married Sarah MacCartee, February 15, 1750, and she died at Rupert in 1778. The next year he married Sarah Douglas, who died in 1799. She was the daughter of Domini Douglas, who was born near Belfast, Ireland, in 1732. His parents, of Scotch descent, died when he was but six or seven years old, leaving him to the care of an adult brother, who from motives which Domini never fully understood placed him on board a merchant vessel when he was only eight years old, providing him extremely well with clothing. The captain made much of him, carried him first to Amsterdam and from there to Providence, Rhode Island. Near this place he left Domini with orders to have him kept at school until his return; providing for his support for several months but the captain never returned. The lad now nine or ten years of age was kept at school until the funds left for his support had been long exhausted, and no claim being made on him, the authorities of the place bound him as an apprentice to a farmer by the name of Wheaton, in the town of Seekonk, Massachusetts, in which family he grew up to manhood, engaged as a volunteer in the old French war and served two or three campaigns between Albany and Crown Point. He settled as a farmer at New Milford, where he resided twenty-six years, served several campaigns as minute or militia man in the revolutionary war. He raised a large family of children. In the course of the war he sold his farm for continental bills, which depreciated nearly to nothing in his hands. In 1785-86 he removed with most or all of his children to Shoreham, Vermont, where he purchased a new farm, cleared it up and where he remained (with a short exception) until his death at the age of seventy-five, 1807. By the two marriages Nathaniel had fifteen children; nine by the first and six by the second: Nathaniel, born January 31, 1751; Reuben, February 9, 1753; William, June 12, 1755; Jehiel, April 21, 1757; Eliphalet, November 16, 1759; Pliny, December 19, 1761; Oliver, May 8, 1764; Cynthia, April 16, 1766; Sarah, July 21, 1768; Orange, July 7, 1781; Homer, August 21, 1782; Lyman, March 30, 1784; Hannah, January 5, 1786; Noble, December 30, 1787; and Harvey D., November 9, 1789.

(VI) Rev. Homer, son of Nathaniel (2) and Sarah (Douglas) Smith, was born at Pawlet, August 21, 1782, died October 12, 1837. He went with his father when very young to St. Armand, Canada East, where he resided. He was very religious and was active and useful in church. He was licensed and ordained as a Baptist minister, preaching in the neighborhood on the Sabbath, mostly without recompense, and working hard on his farm the other six days, and by his unremitting toil, thrift and prudence, he acquired a competency for those days. He married Carolyn, born in Canada, daughter of Stephen Bush, of Orwell, Vermont; children: Esther, born May 10, 1802; Alta Maria, November 18, 1809; Carolyn, December 16, 1816; Harvey D., November 28, 1819; Sarah. The mother died April 28, 1832, and he contracted a second marriage with Abigail Ayers; children: Harriet Murdock, born January 20, 1834, married, July 14, 1852, Avery Jackson Smith, who was the son of Benjamin Howard and Carolyn Jackson Smith. Avery Jackson Smith was born in Gouverneur, New York, where he spent his early life. He was graduated from Union College, and for a time taught school in Central New York state. He then went into the insurance business and became early an agent for the Massachusetts Mutual Company of Springfield. He lived for a time in New York and later in Baltimore, and in 1870 was elected secretary of the Massachusetts Mutual Company and came to live in the city of Springfield. He held this office until 1881, when he was succeeded by John A. Hall, president of the company. Since that time Mr. Smith has been associated with a number of local enterprises. He was at one time treasurer of the Springfield Printing Company, and trustee of the Springfield Glue and Emery Wheel Company and of Hyde, Ayer & Co. Later he was for a short period president of the Springfield Assurance Company. He then served some seven years as manager of the Densmore Typewriter Company, resigning to take a position in the Taber-Prang Company. For some little time past he had been in the investment business, recently being associated with the Commonwealth Securities Company. He was at one time connected with the First Church. Mr. Smith was a business man of the old-fashioned school, quiet, dignified and exact in his methods, and exceedingly upright in all of his dealings. Although naturally of a reserved disposition, he had close friends among the older men of the city, and had established especially intimate relations among the members of the club, to which he had for some time belonged. He died July 28, 1903.

The father of the principal subject of the following sketch, SMITH William Smith, was a native of England, whence he removed to Closeburn, Scotland, only about twenty miles from the north boundary of England. There he was killed by a fall from his horse. He married Janet MacKenzie, daughter of John MacKenzie, of Dumfries. After the death of her husband she returned to her father's house in Dumfries, where she continued to reside. She was a woman of attractive personality and of superior intellectuality, and was interested particularly in antiquarian research. She was deeply loved by her son who made as many as sixteen or eighteen trips to Scotland to visit her, and usually passed a month at her house on each visit. She died August 31, 1891, being then eighty years old. She and her ancestors for generations are buried in the cemetery of the kirk at Closeburn.

John MacKenzie, only son of William and Janet (MacKenzie) Smith, was born in Closeburn, Dumfries, Scotland, September 25, 1841, and died in Springfield, Massachusetts, December 12, 1898. He attended school at Wallace Hall in his native place, and at the age of fourteen began an apprenticeship in the dry goods store of a Mr. Scott, provost of Dumfries. He worked there four years, and then went to a wholesale dry goods house in Glasgow, from which in 1860 he came to this country. His first four years in America were spent in the employ of George Trumbull, whose store was at the corner of Washington and Winter streets in Boston. In 1865 he settled in Springfield, and entered into partnership with A. B. Forbes, buying out John T. Rockwood. Their business occupied a small store on the corner, where Forbes & Wallace are now in business. From 1870 to 1874 Mr. Smith was interested with A. B. Wallace in the firm of Smith & Wallace, at Pittsfield. In the latter year Mr. Smith had a flattering offer of the business of Churchill & Watson, on Washington street. He gave up his interests in Springfield and Pittsfield, sold his share in the store in the latter city to A. B. Wallace, and the new venture started in Boston under the firm name of Churchill, Gilchrist, Smith & Company. Mr. Smith remained in this three years, and two years more in the firm of Smith & Watson, of Boston. In 1879 he returned to Springfield with Peter Murray, and started the firm of Smith & Murray on the corner where the business is still carried on, in a small store with a frontage of forty feet on Main street and a depth of one hundred feet. Since that time the concern has grown until it now occupies the five-story building fronting one hundred feet on Main street, and running back one hundred and fifty on Court street. The firm also conducted a store under the name of Smith, Murray & Company, at Bridgeport, and is interested in several smaller establishments in the towns and cities of Western Massachusetts. Mr. Smith was president of the Alaska Manufacturing Company, director in the First National Bank and the Taber-Prang Company, and a member of the Board of Trade. He was a thirty-second degree Mason, and a member of the Nyasset Club and the St. Andrew's Society of Boston. He attended Christ's Episcopal Church. He was an honorable and successful business man, a good citizen, and a kindly and benevolent man. From a small beginning, he has with his partner, Peter Murray, built up one of the largest mercantile enterprises in Springfield. Mr. Smith took a friendly interest in the young men who had been his employes and the firm aided many of them with its backing to start stores of their own. He also gave largely to the poor, both in Springfield and in Closeburn, leaving at his death a fund, the interest of which goes to the poor of the latter city. He was unusually devoted to his home, the old

Phelps homestead. His home life was extremely pleasant, and his well-kept place was one of the attractions of Springfield. He was a lover of good horses and in fact of animal pets of all kinds, of which he had many on his place. He took much pleasure in driving, and his stables were models. Outside his home Mr. Smith had formed some warm ties, having made friends especially among Scotchmen. He numbered among these Andrew Carnegie, whom he entertained at the time of his visit to Springfield, in 1806. John M. Smith married, in Springfield, November 13, 1867, Adelaide G. Phelps, born February 8, 1841, daughter of Charles and Frances A. (Amblairde) Phelps, of Springfield. (See Phelps VI). They had two children: 1. Josephine Amblairde, born November 18, 1868, in Springfield, resides with her mother. 2. Adelaide Phelps, January 17, 1873, married, December 5, 1900, Dr. William Henry Pomroy, of Springfield, born August 10, 1857.

There seems to be no available information on this side of the PHELPS Atlantic relative to the English ancestors of this family. Thus far no colonial record has been discovered which mentions their place of abode or their position in society, but there is some reason for believing that they were of the gentry. Three emigrants, Henry, Nicholas, and Édward Phelps, presumably brothers, came to New England from London in the ship "Hercules" (Captain John Kidder), which arrived April 16, 1634, and as each married and had posterity, three distinct families were therefore established. Several of this name in America, both men and women, have attained prominence through their intellectual superiority. Those about to be referred to are a branch of the family established by Henry.

(I) Henry Phelps, the immigrant, was born in England and died in Salem, Massachusetts. He came to Salem from London in the ship "Hercules" in 1634 and was made a freeman March 13, 1639. Savage says he "married 1652 Hannah Bassett, but as second wife in my opinion, for there is some probability that he had married a daughter of Thomas Tresler, by whom he had a son John, remembered in the will of his grandmother."

(II) John, only son of Henry and ——— (Tresler) Phelps, was born at Salem about 1640. The date and place of his death are not known. He married Widow Abigail Upton, by whom he had: Abigail, John,

Henry, Joseph, Abigail, Samuel and Hannah.

(III) Henry (2), second son of John and Abigail (Upton) Phelps, was born in Salem, April 3, 1673, and died in Reading, January 21, 1722. He married, December, 1706, Rachel Guppy, by whom he had five children or more.

(IV) Henry (3), fifth child of Henry (2) and Rachel (Guppy) Phelps, was born about 1720, at Reading, and died about 1797. In early life he lived in Beverly, where he married and where his first child was born. About 1750 he removed to Sutton, where five more children were born, and he continued to live there the greater part of his life. He married, July 11, 1745, Sarah Rounday, of Beverly, who was born January 22, 1729, in Beverly, and died about 1794. She was the daughter of Benjamin and Charity (Stone) Rounday. Their children were: Henry, Ebenezer, Azor, Mary and John.

(V) Azor, third son of Henry (3) and Sarah (Rounday) Phelps, was born in Sutton, Massachusetts, October 13, 1761, and died in Shrewsbury, April 2, 1837. He was a revolutionary soldier, and the following is his record: Azor Phelps, private, Captain Benjamin Alton's company, Colonel John Rand's regiment; enlisted July 9, 1780, three days preceding march; discharged October 10, 1780; service three months, twelve days, including travel (one hundred and ninety miles) home; regiment raised for three months service at West Point; roll sworn to at Charlton; also, order on Henry Gardner, treasurer, payable to John Harbach Jr., dated Sutton, March 3, 1782, signed by said Phelps, for wages, &c., for three months service at West Point in Captain Benjamin Alton's company, Colonel John Rand's regiment, in 1780. He was a farmer and blacksmith, and in the latter employment made scythes and other farming implements. He settled first in Millbury, removing thence to Worcester, and about 1816 to Shrewsbury. He died of hernia caused by the kick of a horse. He married (first) November 16, 1784, Mrs. Mary (Tenney) Holman, born April 4, 1761, died October 6, 1814, daughter of Daniel and Rebecca (Dickinson) Tenney. He married (second) December 4, 1815, Mrs. Dolly (Makepiece) Dresser. She was born September 18, 1799, died October 22, 1869, at Madison, Indiana. Her first husband was Harvey Dresser. After the death of Azor Phelps she married (third) December 4, 1838, John Frink, of Palmer. Azor and wife are buried in the lot of Henry Phelps, Rural cemetery, in Worcester. The children by the first marriage were: Polly (Mary), Sarah, Azor (died young), Susan, Azor Rounday, Charles, Nancy Dickinson; by second wife, born at Worcester: George Makepiece, Dolly and Henry.

(VI) Charles, third son of Azor and Mary (Tenney) (Holman) Phelps, was born August 5, 1800, in Sutton, and died at the residence of his son-in-law E. S. Alexander, in Chicago, Illinois, August 25, 1872, and was buried in Springfield. He married (first) October 27, 1824, Mary Ann Martha Amblairde, born in 1802, died October 22, 1828. He married (second) February 12, 1834, Frances Antoinette Amblairde, born October 11, 1811, in Boston, died June 2, 1894, in Springfield. She was a daughter of James and Sophia G. Amblairde, of Boston. Of the first marriage there was one child, a daughter, who died young. Of the second marriage there were three children: 1. Joseph Richard Van Zant, born January 13, 1835, died December 25, 1836. 2. Josephine Antoinette, born December 13, 1836, died August 23, 1908, at Albany, New York; she married (first) September 13, 1857, in Springfield, Elijah S. Alexander, of Chicago, Illinois, who was born 1834, and died in Chicago, February 23, 1886; (second) November, 1887, E. H. Waldron, who died in Chicago in 1896. 3. Adelaide Gabrielle, born February 8, 1841, in Springfield, married, November 13, 1867, John Mackenzie Smith, in Springfield. (See Smith).

Mention of this family is found in records of times long past one name "Bolls" is found in the Roll of the Butte Abbey as given by Hollingshead. Duchesne from a charter in that Abbey, gives a list of the conquerors in England under William of Normandy among whose names appear that "Bools." The names of Boll, Bol, Bole and Bolle occur frequently in Domesday Book. One family of Bolles, of long standing in the county of Lincoln, was resident there so early as the reign of Henry III, when Alaire, or Alaine Bolle, of Swineshead, was Lord of Swineshead and Bole Hall in the county of Lincoln. Its principal seat seems to have been Bolle Hall, in Swineshead, until the close of the reign of Edward IV (A. D. 1483) where the elder branch of the Bolleses became settled at Hough, near Alford in Lincolnshire, while a younger branch established itself at Goosberkirke, now Goosberton, in the same county, and from this younger branch descended the baronets of Scampton, Lincolnshire. The American Bolleses, of whom some account follows, are doubtless descended from this stock, though there is no record of their English descent.

(1) Joseph Bolles was the first of the name who came from England to America, but the precise time and place of his arrival have not been ascertained. He first appears of record in 1640, when he was engaged in trade at Winter Harbor, near the mouth of the Saco river, then in the Province of Maine. The records of the general court of Maine, 1640, contain this passage: "Joseph Bolles, hath presented to the Grand Inquest Thomas Heard for being drunk * * * and threatening him with many violent words, to break open his store. He (the delinquent) further declareth that he received his drink at the house of William Scadlock." Mr. Bolles afterwards removed to Wells, Maine, where he held the office of town clerk from 1654 to 1664, during which period his dwelling house and the first volume of the town records were burned by the Indians. Joseph Bolles, born 1608, died at Wells, Maine, in the fall of 1678. His will bears date of September 18, of that year, and was admitted to probate in November, 1678. "His inventory made and appraised by us the 29th of November, 1678. William Symonds—Joseph Storer," enumerates "houses, lands, and meadows belonging to the home lots appraised by us underwritten at four hundred and eighty pounds," and his whole estate was appraised at £842 1s. 6d. He was both grantor and grantee of numerous pieces of land. At his death his real estate, reduced already by divers grants to his children was appraised at £530. Various circumstances show that he was a man of high character and standing, universally respected and honored. In July, 1653, commissioners of Massachusetts held a court at Wells, and appointed him "Clerk of the Writs," with power to grant warrants, attachments, etc. In 1660, the King having restored to the Gorges family what had been usurped by Massachusetts, Archdale, Gorges' agent, went to Maine with commissioners for various persons and among others, Mr. Bolles, as counsellors and magistrates. In 1664 Sir Ferdinand Gorges, grandson of the original patentee, commissioned "sundry of his loving friends, including Mr. Bolles, as deputies and commissioners for the government of the Province of Maine." In all cases where the name is found written by his own hand, it is spelled Bolles; but copyists, recording officers, and others out of the family spell it capriciously and in many different ways, as Bauls, Bowls, Bowels, Boals, Bolles, Bools, Boolls, Booles, Bowalls. John A. Bolles, genealogist of the Bolles family, from whom the history of the early generations of this family is taken conjectures that Joseph Bolles married a daughter of Morgan Howell, who owned land at Cape Porpoise, and who devised and bequeathed to Mrs. Bolles and her children all his estate and property, and appointed her executrix of his will November 12, 1666. Mr. Bolles' whole family survived him, and his widow was living in 1684, after which time nothing is known of her. The following family record is written in Mr. Bolles' own hand-writing in the Wells town records: "The ages of Mr. Joseph Bolles, born February, 1608, and Mary Bolles, his wife, in March, 1624; 1. Mary Bolles, their daughter, born August 7, 1641; 2. Thomas Bolles, his oldest son, December 1, 1644; 3. Samuel Bolles, born March 12, 1646; 4. Hannah Bolles, November 25, 1649; 5. Eliza Bolles, January 15, 1652; 6. Joseph Bolles, March 15, 1654; 7. Sarah Bolles, January 20, 1657; 8. Mercy Bolles, August 11, 1661."

(II) Samuel, son of Joseph and Mary Bolles, was born in Wells, March 12, 1646. In 1668, as appears by the town records, the inhabitants of Wells granted him three hundred acres of land, on condition that he should "improve the same within a year." He afterward removed to Rochester, Massachusetts. "One of his descendants informs me," writes the family genealogist, "that after being three times burnt out in Maine, by the Indians, he moved first to Clark's Island in Boston Harbor, and next to Rochester, Massachusetts, where he changed lands with Samuel Hammond, and that his house was about two miles north of Mattapoisette Village." He and his wife were living in 1713. In June, 1712, they conveyed to Henry Flint, of Cambridge, six hundred acres of land, situated in New Dartmouth, alias Sheepscot, commonly known by the name of Dyer's Neck, or Nassaemac, which said neck of land, says the deed, was formerly granted by Robin Hood Sagamore of the said Nassaemac, unto William Dyer, father of said Mary. In 1713, they conveyed to Samuel Hammond, of Rochester, three hundred and ten acres of land, lying in the township of Wells. Dyer and his son, Christopher, were killed and scalped by Indians at Dyer's Neck. Neither record nor tradition gives the date of death of Samuel Bolles, or that of his wife. He married Mary, daughter of William Dyer, of Sheepscot, Maine, and they had three children: Joseph, Samuel and Jonathan.

(III) Samuel (2), son of Samuel (1) and Mary Bolles, has left us no record of the dates of his birth or death. His will was dated October 3, 1764. He married Lydia Balch, and they had eight children: Lydia, Samuel, Benjamin, David, Ruth, Deliverance, Deborah and Joanna.

(IV) David, son of Samuel (2) and Lydia (Balch) Bolles, removed from Rochester, Massachusetts, about 1782, to Richmond, New Hampshire. He married Lydia Kirby and they were the parents of eleven children: John, Nathaniel, Catherine, David, Obed, Elijah, Jonathan, Abigail, Mary, Jesse and Hannah.

(V) Jesse, son of David and Lydia (Kirby) Bolles, or Bowles, as the name began to be spelled, was born in 1779, died May 10, 1855. He owned a farm in the town of Bethlehem, New Hampshire, where the Maplewood Casino now stands. He married Polly Gale, born 1775, died October 21, 1841. Their children were: Caleb W., and Mary, who died young.

(VI) Caleb W., only son of Jesse and Polly (Gale) Bowles, was born 1809, died at Littleton, February 8, 1882. He was buried at Sugar Hill. He owned a farm and resided in Bethlehem, where the Maplewood Casino now stands. Later he removed to Sugar Hill. He married (first) September 28, 1831, Martha Goodnow, of Lisbon, born 1806, died 1858. Their children were: Henry, Mary, Lyman E., Martha and Augusta. He married (second) Sally Barrett.

(VII) Lyman Eliot, son of Caleb W. and Martha (Goodnow) Bowles, was born in Franconia, New Hampshire, October 8, 1838, died at Newtown, Pennsylvania, September 14, 1871. In his boyhood he lived at Bethlehem and there attended the primary schools. He was a steady, studious boy and fond of his books. As soon as he was able he attended an academy and learned mathematics, Latin and Greek, which he liked better. When he had made sufficient preparation he taught in the district schools in Lyman and Lisbon, New Hampshire, and Rockingham and Athens, Vermont. He was well qualified for his duties: a sympathetic and thorough teacher; possessed the confidence and respect of his pupils. For two or three years he was employed in the ice business in New York City, and then went to New Orleans, Louisiana. This was in the time of the civil war. While on his way there by boat he was attacked by a rheumatic fever, and his fellow travelers did not expect him to survive; but he recovered, though slowly, and after spending a year in the Crescent City, returned to Athens, Vermont, where he worked on the farm of his father-in-law about three years. From Vermont he went to Newtown, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, where he was engaged in the business of life insurance. Mr. Bowles was from a child a person whose personality and character were such as to make those he met his friends. He was a clean, moral man, always temperate, and for years a good Templar. He was an honored member of the Masonic fraternity, and was buried by that Order in Sunset Hill cemetery in Lisbon, New Hampshire. He married, March 8, 1865, at Athens, Vermont, Julia Louise Leland (see Leland VII), who was born in Lowell, Vermont, September 14, 1840, daughter of Otis and Nancy (Spalding) Leland, who survives him. She resides with her son in Longmeadow, Massachusetts. The children of Lyman E. and Julia L. (Leland) Bowles are: Henry L., Angie S., Caleb W. and Martha.

(VIII) Henry Leland, eldest child of Lyman E. and Julia L. (Leland) Bowles, was born in Athens, Vermont, January 6, 1866, and was educated in the common schools and Vermont Academy at Saxtons River. After leaving school at the age of seventeen years, he went to Iowa and lived on a farm near Osage in Mitchell county, nearly two years. From there he went to California and worked at whatever was most accessible about Los Angeles, and later was employed in the lumber business at Santa Ana. Returning to the east he worked six months in the United States watch factory in Waltham, Massachusetts, and was next night clerk at the old Essex House at Salem, three years, and then a solicitor in the employ of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in South Boston. He then made another change and entered the service of J. A. Whitcomb, proprietor of the Baltimore Dairy Lunch business in Boston, and at Lawrence, Massachusetts, where his next three years were passed. He then engaged on his own account in feeding the public and opened a place in Springfield, Massachusetts, and conducted a successful business. Soon he added another and another until now (1909) he has twenty-three places where meals are served, employs three hundred and fifty persons and conducts a business of eleven hundred thousand dollars annually. Between Hartford, Connecticut, and Buffalo, New York, he has nine restaurants, of which he is sole proprietor. In Providence the Bowles Baltimore Lunch Company has four restaurants. Bowles & Company, Charles C. Gilbert being the company, has ten restaurants in the west. His enterprises have all proved profitable and Mr. Bowles has invested his surplus largely in Springfield real estate. He is a Mason, a member of Hampden Lodge, Royal Arch Chapter, Council and Commandery, Knights Templar, also of Melha Shrine. He is a member of Hartford Lodge of Elks, the Nayasset Club, the Springfield Automobile and several fish and game clubs. In politics he is independent. Since 1904 he has resided in Longmeadow, where he has quite a large farm. His mother is the mistress of his home, which is one of good cheer and refinement.

(The Leland Line).

This name, the preponderance of authority indicates, comes from lee, leigh, lea, ley, or lye, all of which, though orthographically different, have the same signification and denote a pasture. Leland, therefore, denoting pasture land, suggests that in early times this family may have been generally shepherds and tillers of the soil. Distinguished men in England and America have borne the name Leyland. The Leland attaining the greatest distinction was John, chaplain to King Henry VIII, the only person ever holding the office of "King's Antiquary," one of the most accomplished scholars and voluminous writers of his own or any other age. The Lelands of America have numbered among them many men prominent in their lines of labor. The Leland coat-of-arms is: Gules a saltier argent—charged with three Pallets azure, on chief or crest, with a crow, rising transfixed with an arrow. Cui deveso, fidus.

(I) Henry Leland, the progenitor of almost all without exception who bear the name in this country, according to the most accurate information available, was born in England about the year 1625. It is supposed that he came to America in 1652, as the church records of Dorchester show that he united with the church in that town in 1653. After a short residence in Dorchester he settled on land in what was afterward the town of Sherburne, where he resided until his death April 4, 1680. Henry Leland made his will March 27, 1680 (O. S.) and it was probated June 8 following. He wrote his name Layland. There is good reason for believing that Henry Leland was a man in character like his comrades in those days, distinguished for firmness, courage, patient endurance, and invincible moral and religious integrity. He married Margaret Badcock, by whom he had five children, all born in America: Hopedill (died young), Experience, Hopedill, Ebenezer and Eleazer.

(II) Ebenezer, son of Henry and Margaret (Badcock) Leland, was born in Old Medfield, January 25, 1657, died in Sherburne, Massachusetts, 1742. He was a farmer like most men in the colony those days. Timothy Leland administered on the estate of Ebenezer Leland, which amounted to £198 10s. 6d. Administration granted October 18, 1742. Ebenezer married (first) Deborah, whose surname does not appear; (second) Mary Hunt. His children were: Deborah, Ebenezer, Timothy, James, Susannah, Patience, Martha, Isaac, Sibella and Amariah.

(III) Captain James, son of Ebenezer and Deborah Leland, was born in Sherburne in 1687, died in Grafton, 1768. He was a farmer and was a military man, serving as captain. The commissioners' return of his father's estate January 12, 1753, recites: Captain James Leland received in the year 1708, £17-10-0. James spent his early life in Sherburne, but after marriage he took his wife and young family and in 1723 removed to the county of Worcester, and settled on a township of land called Hassanamisco, which afterward took the corporate name of Grafton. James Leland married Hannah Learned, by whom he had: Jerusha, Thankful, (died young), Benjamin, Moses, James, Hannah, Thankful, Thomas, Deliverance, Phineas and Prudence.

(IV) Phineas, son of James and Hannah (Learned) Leland, was born in Grafton in 1730, died there in 1773. Like all his brothers and sisters who attained majority he settled near his father in Grafton and had a part of his father's estate for a farm. This was situated on the Blackstone river. Phineas Leland married (first) Lydia Fletcher, and (second) Sarah Warren. His children, all born in the homestead estate, were: Lydia, Phineas, Eleazer, Joseph, David W., Thomas, Sarah, Caleb, Joshua, Lydia and Deliverance.

(V) Caleb, son of Phineas Leland, was born in 1765, died in Baltimore, Vermont, in 1843. He was a farmer and resided in Grafton until about the year 1800, when he removed to Chester, Vermont, and soon after to the adjoining town of Baltimore, where he continued to live until his death. He married Lakin Willard; children: Nancy, Otis, Joshua, Maria, Caleb, Lakin, Joseph W., Hannah R., Charles and James A.

(VI) Otis, son of Caleb and Lakin (Willard) Leland, was born in Grafton, Massachusetts, in 1791, died in Weathersfield, Vermont, 1871. He owned a farm and resided for a time in Athens, Vermont. He was well educated and well versed in Latin and mathematics and taught school for several years. He married, January 4, 1820, Nancy Spalding, born November 30, 1800, daughter of Jesse and Winifred (Swift) Spalding (See Spalding VII). Their children were Octavius A., Ellen R., Josephine M., Granville, Joseph W., Levi P., Mary, Julia L., Henry S. and John.

(VII) Julia Louise, daughter of Otis and Nancy (Spalding) Leland, was born in Lowell, September 14, 1840, married, March 8, 1865, Lyman Eliot Bowles (see Bowles VII).

(The Spalding Line).

The family of Spalding claim and rightfully too it seems to be descended from one of the earliest families that settled in Virginia, 1619, though there had been a colony of men at Jamestown for a dozen years before that. The name seems to be derived from Spalding, a market town in Lincolnshire, England. The Spaldings have been distinguished in civil and military life for many generations, both in Europe and America. In law, medicine, theology, and in commerce and manufactures, as well as in the minor employments, Spaldings have held prominent places. It has been computed that eighteen of this name participated in the battle of Bunker Hill, where one had a horse shot under him.

(I) Edward Spalding and Edmund Spalding are supposed to have emigrated from England together with Sir George Yeardley in 1619, and settled at Jamestown, Virginia. In the "Virginia Colonial Record" is given "Lists of the Living and the Dead in Virginia, Feb. 16, 1623." In this list, under the head "Att James Citie and within the Corporation thereof," is to be found in "List of the Living," Edward Spalding, Uxox Spalding, Puer Spalding, Puella Spalding, indicating that Edward Spalding with his wife and son and a daughter lived at Jamestown at the time of the making of the list. Edward Spalding is supposed to have been one of those respectable settlers who for one hundred and twenty pounds of tobacco secured wives from among the "ninety agreeable persons, young and in-corrapt," who went to Virginia in 1619. Having seen the massacre of the English by the Indians in March, 1622, and not being satisfied with the conditions in Virginia, Edward Spalding probably left the colony and went to Massachusetts. He is found of record at Braintree, Massachusetts, where he was made a freeman May 13, 1640. On October 1, 1645, he and nineteen others petitioned for a grant of ten thousand acres of land and the general court complied with their request. In 1652 he was one of twenty to petition for the establishment of the town of Chelmsford, and this petition was granted on May 10 following, and the settlement immediately began. He was one of the selectmen chosen at the first town meeting there in 1654, again in 1656, and in 1660-61. On the first division of lands, February 4, 1661, he was granted twenty-eight acres. In 1663 he was surveyor of highways and in 1665 one of a committee to lay out the meadow lands. In 1666 he was one of the surveyors of Newfield, of which he was an original proprietor, and afterwards he was one of the surveyors of North Chelmsford. He is of record in 1664 as possessing an orchard of apple trees, orchards being much desired in the colony at that time. Edward Spalding died February 26, 1670. His will was made "the 13th day of Feb. 1666" and in it he makes "Rachel Spalding my wife my sole executor." This was probated April 5, 1670. The inventory of his estate amounted to one hundred and forty pounds, eight shillings, ten pence. Edward Spalding's first wife, Margaret, died at Braintree, in August, 1640, and his daughter Grace the following year. His second wife, Rachel, died before April 5, 1670. The children of first wife were: John, Edward and Grace; of second wife: Benjamin, Joseph, Dinah and Andrew, who is next mentioned.

(II) Andrew, youngest child of Edward and Rachel Spalding, was born November 19, 1652, died May 5, 1713. He succeeded by the terms of his father's will to the paternal estate, and was a deacon of the church at the time of his death, and in that position he was succeeded by his son Andrew and grandson Ephraim. His will was executed June 6, 1712, and he signed it with his mark. He married, April 30, 1674, Hannah Jefes, a daughter of Henry Jefes, of Billerica. She died January 21, 1730. Their children were: Hannah, Andrew, Henry, John, Rachel, William, Joanna, Benoni and Mary.

(III) Andrew (2), eldest son of Andrew (1) and Hannah (Jefes) Spalding, was born March 25, 1678, in Chelmsford, where he passed his life and died November 7, 1753. He was a deacon in the church there. He received, as his brothers did, a portion of real estate before his father's death, and an equal share of that portion in which his mother had a life estate after her death. On September 2, 1726, he deeded land in Londonderry, New Hampshire, to John Goffe, of that town. The deed was dated Dunstable, September 2, 1726. He married, February 5, 1701, Abigail Warren, who died May 12, 1768. Their children were: Andrew, Jacob and Henry (twins), Josiah, Ephraim, Isaac, Abigail and Joanna (twins), James, David, Benjamin and Sally.

(IV) James, son of Andrew (2) and Abigail (Warren) Spalding, was born October 27, 1714, in Chelmsford, Massachusetts, and died about 1790. He removed to New Ipswich, New Hampshire, but after a few years returned to Westford, where he died. He married (first) Anna, whose surname is unknown. She was admitted to the church of Westford, Massachusetts, September 4, 1737, and died May 24, 1770. He married (second) Widow Eunice Fassett, of Westford, January 15, 1771, published December 25, 1770. She died in New Ipswich, New Hampshire, March, 1812, aged ninety-five or ninety-six. She was born in Lincoln, Massachusetts. The children of James Spalding, all by first wife and all born in Westford, were: Benjamin, James, Susanna (died young), Silas (died young), Caleb, James and Susanna (died young) (twins), Amos, (died young), Susanna, Anna, Silas and Phinehas.

(V) Benjamin, eldest child of James and Anna Spalding, was born in Westford, Massachusetts, March 15, 1738, and was baptized March 26, 1738. William, his son, stated that his father went from Westford, Massachusetts, to Ashburnham, Massachusetts, then called Dorchester-Canada, as the town was granted to the soldiers of Dorchester, in consideration of their services in an expedition against Canada, in 1690; from Ashburnham he went to Jaffrey, New Hampshire. When he married his second wife, he removed to Marlboro, New Hampshire, where he died in 1810. Benjamin Spalding, of Ashburnham, serving in the war of the revolution as a lieutenant and was in service at Dobb's Ferry, Tarrytown, and North Castle, New Jersey, in 1776. He appeared to have served in various regiments during the war. He married (first) Sarah Chandler, of Westford, Massachusetts; published February 3, 1759. She was born March 18, 1739, died October 3, 1796. He married (second) Mrs. Betty Flood, of Marlboro, New Hampshire. The children, all by first wife and born in Jaffrey, were: Susanna, Willard, Benjamin, Sarah (died young), William (died young), Reuben, Moses, Jesse, Peter, Sarah and William.

(VI) Jesse, son of Benjamin and Sarah (Chandler) Spalding, was born in Jaffrey, New Hampshire, September 20, 1772, died May 22, 1858. He married, May 31, 1798, Winifred Swift, of Boston; she died September 18, 1868, in Cavendish, Vermont, in the eighty-seventh year of her age. The oldest and the six youngest children of this family were born in Cavendish, Vermont. The children were: Betsey, Nancy, Jesse, Horace, Addison, Luther, Roxanna, Benjamin, Otis and Elzina.

(VII) Nancy, second child of Jesse and Winifred (Swift) Spalding, was born November 30, 1800, and died at Weathersfield, Vermont, 1873. She married, January 4, 1820, Otis Leland, of Baltimore, Vermont (see Leland VI), and resided in Lowell and Chester, Vermont.

The surname Pratt occurs among PRATT the earliest English family records, before the year 1200, and indicates that the family came with the Normans to England. John Pratt ordc Pratellis or de Pratis, as then generally spelled, held the Manor of Patrickborne (Merton Bridge and Pelham Hundred) in 1200. Four brothers, John, William, Engebraw and Peter de Pratellis, figured prominently in the reign of Richard I and John, all living in 1201. John was a favorite minister. In 1191 William and Peter both made a gallant record in the Crusade. John Pratt was in parliament from Beverly in 1298 and 1305. Before the year 1300 the family was well known and widely scattered through England, and the shortened form of the name Prat was the common spelling. The other forms, Pratte, Pradt, Praed, Prete, Prate, Praer, and Prayers are also found. The surname means meadow and was a place name before it became a surname.

(I) William Pratt, immigrant ancestor, was admitted a freeman in 1651. He probably lived in Weymouth and we know practically nothing of his history.

(II) William (2), believed to be the son of William (1) Pratt, lived in Weymouth and was admitted a freeman in 1680. He settled in Norton, Massachusetts, formerly part of Taunton. He married (first) Elizabeth Baker, daughter of Richard Baker; (second) Experience ———, who was admitted to the church at Norton, November 1, 1714. Her father was born at West Dummerston, Vermont, May 14, 1795; married Mary Burnet, of West Dummerston, born May 1, 1801. Matthew Pratt was born in England about 1600. He probably came to New England with the Gorges company in 1623, though the author of the genealogy fails to find positive evidence. Joshua and Phinehas Pratt, brothers, came in the ship "Anne" to Plymouth in 1623. Phinehas went to Weymouth later and our first record of Matthew was at Weymouth. The family tradition of descendants of Matthew says they were related. He may have been a younger brother or nephew. Matthew's name appears on the list of "old residents" about 1643. His name was spelled Macute and in similar ways, but the weight of evidence proves that Matthew was the correct form. He received a grant from the general court, December 7, 1636, of twenty acres. He became one of the prominent citizens of Weymouth and was often townsman or selectman. He had other grants of land from time to time and became a large landed proprietor. Philippi Hall, widow, was born in HALL 1684 and died at the age of ninety in 1774. She was mother or step-mother of Jonathan Hall and settled with him in Walpole, New Hampshire. Her husband was undoubtedly of old New England stock. The family may have come from Walpole, Massachusetts. Jonathan Hall, of Taunton, Massachusetts, perhaps the Jonathan mentioned below, married, at Dedham, Massachusetts, adjoining Walpole, April 11, 1726-27, Sarah Smith. His eldest daughter was named Sarah and his son Elisha married Philippi Smith, pointing without doubt to the fact that Philippi, a very unusual name, was of the Smith family, which came to Walpole, New Hampshire, from Walpole, Massachusetts. This Jonathan Hall, of Taunton, was son of John Hall and grandson of George Hall.

(II) Jonathan, son of Philippi Hall, was an early settler at Walpole, New Hampshire, on land north of the William Hooper place, and the remains of the old cellar are still to be seen on the old farm, which descended to his son John and was lately owned by Henry Foster. He came to Walpole with his family soon after 1760. Pelatiah, probably a brother, came also; died January 11, 1784, aged eighty-two years, at Walpole. Children: 1. Sarah, born 1741, married, 1770, Captain Levi Hooper. 2. Elisha, 1746, married, 1770, Philippi Smith who died without issue May 24, 1818; lived on the George Joslin place. 3. Elizabeth, married ——— Gould, of Westminster.

(III) David, son of Jonathan Hall, was born in 1750 and when about ten years came with his parents to Walpole, New Hampshire. More than one David Hall was a soldier in the revolution, but the following record appears to belong to this David: Soldier in Captain Ellis's company, Lieutenant Colonel Henry Dearborn's regiment, 1777-80. He married, in 1778, Lydia Graves, daughter of John Graves Jr., of Walpole. The Graves family came to Walpole from Saybrook, Connecticut, David Hall's homestead was opposite the Preston Titus house. (V) David (3), son of David (2) Hall, was born at Walpole, New Hampshire, October 1, 1815, died at Lexington, Massachusetts, January 19, 1885. He attended the district schools of his native town and worked for his father on the farm during his boyhood. When he was eighteen years old he was employed as stage driver on the route between Walpole and Keene and continued for many years, becoming well known to that section of the state and to the traveling public. He became proprietor of the stage line under the firm name of Hall & Morrill. This firm had the contract for carrying the mails and transacted much baggage, freight and passenger business. He finally sold his interest in the business to his partner and engaged in the hotel business at Henniker, New Hampshire, for a year. From there he went to Boston and became a partner in the firm of Shedd & Hall, auctioneers and appraisers, with offices at Haymarket square. After three years he retired from the firm and continued in business alone with offices in Faneuil Hall square. In addition to auctioneering he carried on a jewelry business. At the end of three years he sold his business and opened a general store at Fall River, Massachusetts, under the firm name of Hall & Wilbur. The firm dealt in clothing, jewelry, boots and shoes, fancy goods, etc. and enjoyed a large and profitable trade. He sold out after ten years in this firm at Fall River and bought the old Jonathan Harrington farm of forty acres in Lexington, Massachusetts, April, 1858, including the home of Jonathan Harrington, who was the last survivor of the revolutionary war in that town and section. Mr. Hall engaged in farming and market gardening and for a time had an excellent dairy and he became one of the most enterprising and successful market gardeners of his day in Lexington. When the town of Arlington installed its water works, about twenty acres of his farm were taken for this purpose. He built a fine residence just west of the old Harrington house and lived in it many years afterward. The new house, the old house and remainder of the farm were sold by Mrs. Hall, September, 1907, to the present owner, Albert Parsons, of Lexington. Mr. Hall was a Republican in politics and attended faithfully to the duties of citizenship. He attended the Unitarian church. In his younger days he served in the state of New Hampshire militia in the Walpole company. He was of sterling character, upright and honorable in all his dealings and of jovial and cheerful disposition. He was interested in the temperance movement and other reforms. He married (first) Jane Turner, of Alstead, New Hampshire. She died in 1845. He married (second) October 7, 1846, Mary Robbins Smith, born August 7, 1821, at Lexington, Massachusetts, died there June 25, 1876, daughter of Elias and Harriet (Hastings) Smith, of Lexington. Her father was a farmer. He married (third) August 8, 1876, Mrs. Susan Rebecca (Richards) Ensworth, widow of Thomas Ensworth, of Windsor, Vermont, and daughter of Chester and Fidelia (Whitcomb) Richards, of Hartford, Vermont. They settled in Hartford, Connecticut, where Thomas was a property holder in 1645. He was exempted from training in the militia on account of his age, he being over sixty years old. In September, 1661, he removed to Hatfield, Massachusetts. He died in November, 1662, and his son Isaac was appointed administrator of his estate in Massachusetts, and Nathaniel in Connecticut. Children, all born in England: Isaac, John, Samuel, Nathaniel, Elizabeth.

(II) John, second son of Thomas and Sarah Graves, was born in England; about 1645, came to Hartford with his parents, settling in Wethersfield, where May 18, 1654, he became a freeman; he was several times afterward selected to run the boundary line between Wethersfield and adjoining towns. He, with his wife and five children, accompanied his father and brother Isaac to Hatfield, and with his brother was killed September 19, 1677, when they were building a house for John Graves Junior, the Indians surprising them and giving them no time to protect themselves. He married (first) Mary, daughter of Lieutenant Samuel Smith, of Wethersfield, and (second) Mary, daughter of John Bronson, and widow of John Wyatt, of Hadam, Connecticut, who after his death married for her third husband, Lieutenant William Allis, June 25, 1678, and she married (fourth) Captain Samuel Gaylord. Mr. Graves has opened a studio at his home in Chicopee, where he makes a specialty of landscape and portrait painting. He married, December 20, 1882, Lillian Emma, daughter of William A. and Letitia (Graves) Pratt, born May 21, 1861. They have no children.

Abraham Bryant, immigrant ancestor of this branch of the family, was born in England in 1647, where the name Bryant is traced back to Sir Guy de Briant, who lived in the reign of Edward III and whose descendants had a seat in Castle Hereford, Wales. The arms of the English family are: Three piles meeting near the base of the escutcheon, azure. Abraham Bryant's home was in Reading, now Wakefield, Massachusetts, on the south side of Elm street, west of the place of Joseph Hartshorn. He married (first) in 1664, Mary Kendall, died March 8, 1688, aged forty, daughter of Thomas Kendall, of Woburn. He married (second) Ruth (Dodge) Frothingham, widow of Samuel Frothingham, of Charlestown. She died in 1693, childless. Children, all by first wife, born in Reading: 1. Mary, 1666, married John Weston. 2. Rebecca, 1668, died 1670. 3. Abraham, 1671. 4. Thomas, 1674. 5. Anna, 1676. 6. William, 1678. 7. Kendall, 1680, married, 1704, Elizabeth Swaine. 8. Abigail, 1683. 9. Tabitha, 1685.

(I) John Bryant was a descendant of Abraham Bryant, for all the Bryants that settled in Lynn in his time were of the Reading family. Reading was an adjoining town and formerly part of Lynn. The records are lacking, but it is possible that John was son or grandson of Thomas Bryant, son of Abraham Bryant. John Bryant was born in 1722, died according to his gravestone at Lynnfield, October 5, 1795. He married (first) (intentions dated October 13, 1743, at Lynn) Margaret Smith, of Beverly, Massachusetts. She died at Lynn, June 4, 1757, "of something supposed to breed in her brain"—very likely a tumor. The cause of death is found not infrequently on the Lynn records. He married (second) August 4, 1761, Anna Larcom, of Beverly. He gave his residence then as Lynnfield. She was born in 1732, died August 24, 1812, at Lynnfield. Children: 1. Lynnfield Centre opposite the old town hall, and a part of the property is now owned by John H. Hewes, whose wife is a descendant. He was in the revolution in Captain Ezra Newhall's company, Colonel John Mansfield's regiment, and answered the alarm at Lexington, April 19, 1775, and served through the summer; also in the same company, Colonel Israel Hutchinson's regiment, in the fall of that year, and receiving a bounty coat for services. He married, at Lynn, December 4, 1770, Sarah Norwood, born April 14, 1752, died June 30, 1829. She married (second) ——— Derby. Children: 1. John, born April 14, 1772, mentioned below. 2. Anna, 1773, died at Lynnfield, March 17, 1797. 3. Sarah, died young. All three children were baptized August 13, 1775.

(III) John (2), son of Jonathan Bryant, was born at Lynn, April 14, 1772, died September 11, 1827. The Lynn records give the date of his birth as April 14, 1771. He was executor of the will of his grandfather, John Bryant, and one of the heirs, his father having died when John was six years old. He was a prosperous farmer at Lynnfield and owned the Hart farm, which he bought in 1793. He added to it at various times by purchase and at his death his property was valued at four thousand dollars. In his will he divided the property equally between his eight children, making specific bequests to each. He married, April 28, 1807, Sarah Brown, born January 21, 1781, at Lynnfield, daughter of James and Lydia (Nichols) Brown. Children: 1. John Jr., born May 3, 1810, died March 13, 1895; married, December 29, 1835, Rebecca Richardson, of Townsend; children: i. (IV) Jonathan (2), son of John (2) Bryant, was born at Lynnfield, January 11, 1815, died there September 20, 1906. He had a common school education and at the age of fourteen was apprenticed to learn the trade of blacksmith of Joseph Spokesfield, of Reading. At the close of his apprenticeship he returned to his native town and started in business, his blacksmith shop being on the main road near the common. He did a good business, but in 1853 was induced to go to California. He went by steamer by way of the Isthmus, thence to Yreka, California. Here he worked at his trade and in three years had accumulated a handsome property. He returned to Lynnfield and resumed business. About this time he purchased forty acres of the old homestead, which he carried on in connection with his trade the remainder of his life. He built a more modern shop near the old one, and conducted it until about 1890, when he leased it. In 1896 he retired from active work. He owned about two hundred and fifty acres of fine farming land in Lynnfield and sold much of it at a large profit. His shrewd judgment and business sagacity made his opinions and advice valuable, and he was often consulted by his neighbors and friends. He was devoted to his home and family and was respected and honored by all who knew him. He and his wife were members of the Universalist church, and he served on the parish committee and in other church offices. He was a Democrat in politics until the civil war, and then became a strong Lincoln man, and afterward a Republican. He served his party as delegate to various conventions, and was town treasurer and collector nine years, also road commissioner and postmaster. He married, October 3, 1839, Sarah Parker Spokesfield, born November 5, 1816, died January 20, 1873, daughter of Joseph and Sally (Parker) Spokesfield, of Reading. Her father was the blacksmith under whom Jonathan Bryant served his apprenticeship. He married (second) February 1, 1874, Hannah (Wiley) Pringle, born July 4, 1830, died February 25, 1884; and (third) November 1, 1885, Susan E. (Thompson) Green, born August 17, 1834, died May 29, 1908. Children: 1. Parker, born June 3, 1842, mentioned below. 2. Sidney, September 27, 1857, died March 22, 1865.

(V) Parker, son of Jonathan (2) Bryant, was born at Lynnfield, June 3, 1842. He attended the public schools and a private academy at Topsfield under Master Dutton, and at the age of fifteen was apprenticed to a cabinetmaker, Augustus Parker, of Reading. He remained with him until 1861, and in June of that year entered the employ of the E. & A. Mudge Company, shoe manufacturers of Danvers. The following September he entered Bryant & Stratton's Commercial College in Boston, afterwards accepting a position as salesman for the Mudge Company at their salesrooms at 39 Pearl street, Boston. For seven years he traveled for the company. With George B. Martin he formed a partnership for the sale of boots and shoes, under the firm name of George B. Martin & Bryant at 15 Pearl street. The firm handled the product of the factory at Tapleyville, Danvers. At the end of four years the partnership was dissolved and the firm of Parker Bryant & Company formed, continuing the business until the great fire of 1872, when the place of business in Boston was destroyed, entailing a great loss. Mr. Bryant paid his creditors in full, however, and continued in business another year. He then sold out to D. H. Darling & Company of Wakefield and entered the employ of that firm. In November, 1874, he established the Warren stables on Warren street, Roxbury, and was in the livery stable business for the next eighteen years. He also owned and conducted the Highland stables at the corner of Warren and Dudley streets, and another stable at Ocean Spray, Winthrop. In 1893 he took charge of the Beaconfield stable and a year later bought it. In 1896 he sold his stable interests and retired. He was the pioneer in fitting out four-horse drags for touring parties and his stables had an enviable reputation for style and handsome turnouts. In 1899 he again engaged in business, taking the extensive undertaking establishment founded in 1894 by his son at 1354 Beacon street. He removed afterward to his present location, 1337 Beacon street, Coolidge's Corner. He has a large patronage in that section of Boston and in Brookline. He established the firm of Bryant & Graham at 331 Central street, Newton Corner, and sold it October, 1905, to William Short. He and his family attended the Harvard Congregational Church at Coolidge's Corner, and he is a member of the Harvard Brotherhood of that church. In politics he is a Republican and has at various times served his party as delegate to senatorial and state conventions and on the ward committee. He is a member of Brookline Lodge, No. 886, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and is chairman of the finance committee. He is a member of the Massachusetts Undertakers' Club, the Norfolk Republican Club, the Brookline Republican Club and also of the Massachusetts Undertakers' Association.

He married, October 2, 1868, Alice Augusta Hardy, of Salem, Massachusetts, born September 21, 1845, daughter of Augustus and Ann (Edwards) Hardy, of Salem. Her father was a manufacturer of sash, doors, and blinds at Salem. Children: 1. Parker Hardy, born November 3, 1869, died December 14, 1893. 2. Charles Augustus, August 4, 1870, married (first) April 14, 1897, Martha Ann Flint, of Roxbury, born March 18, 1868, died July 9, 1898; (second) June 25, 1906, Mrs. Helen Cobb (Holmes) Chase, of Pembroke, Massachusetts, born October 9, 1883, daughter of Lester Franklin and Helen Pierpont (Cobb) Holmes; child of first wife: Martha Flint, born July 9, 1898. 3. Hattie Hamilton, February 27, 1873. 4. Fred Smith, October 29, 1878, married November 19, 1902, Elizabeth Sellars, of Danvers, Massachusetts. 5. Fannie Edson, January 9, 1880, married, September 10, 1902, Arthur E. Adams, of Brookline; children: Dorris Webber Adams, born June 2, 1905; Muriel, September 23, 1908.

(For first generation see William Richards 1).

(II) Joseph, second son of RICHARDS William the immigrant, and Grace Richards, was born in Plymouth or Scituate, Plymouth Colony, became with his brother John a proprietor of Worcester, Massachusetts Bay Colony, in 1074, but the venture proving unsuccessful he settled in Weymouth where he took the oath of freeman in 1681; was a fence viewer for the town in 1692-93, and made his will February 24, 1695-96. His estate was inventoried at £156, 3s on March 9, 1695-96. His first wife was Susan ———, by whom he had two sons and two daughters, and his second wife was Sarah ———, by whom he had three sons and two daughters. His second wife became the executrix of his will, and she in the distribution of the common lands of Weymouth on eight shares, one for each of the eight children of her late husband, drew one hundred and thirty-five acres. The children of Joseph and Susan Richards were born as follows: 1. Joseph (q. v.) 2. Susanna, who probably married John Burrell in 1720. 3. Sarah, mentioned in her father's will, and who married in 1730 William Davenport, of Bridgewater, Massachusetts. 4. James, born September 28, 1680. It was probably shortly after the birth of James that the mother died. The children of Joseph and Sarah Richards were: 5. Deborah, born October 19, 1684. 6. Benjamin, April 7, 1686, married Mehitable, daughter of Isaac Alden, in 1711. She was a descendant of John and Priscilla Alden, of the "Mayflower," 1620. She died after giving birth to five children: Mehitable, 1712; Joseph, 1714; Daniel, 1716; James, 1718; and Sarah, 1720; he married as his second wife Lydia Faxon, November 20, 1722, and she died in West Bridgewater, Massachusetts, in 1788, aged ninety-two years. She was the mother by Benjamin Richards of six children, four sons and two daughters: John, 1723; Josiah, 1724; Seth, 1726; Ezra, 1728; Lydia, 1732; and Hannah, 1736. 7. William, April 12, 1688, was known as William, senior of Killingly, 1781. 8. Mary, March 6, 1689-90.

(III) Joseph (2), eldest child of Joseph (1) and Susan Richards, was born probably in Worcester, Massachusetts, May 7, 1675. He was brought up in Weymouth and married, before 1700, Anna ———, of Bridgewater, and they had two children: Joseph (q. v.), and James, who removed south or west. They resided in Bridgewater, but we can find no record of their death.

(IV) Joseph (3), eldest child of Joseph (2) and Anna Richards, was born in Bridgewater, Plymouth county, Massachusetts, about 1700. He carried on a farm in Bridgewater, and was a respected citizen. He married Mercy, by whom he had several children, of whom two sons, Joseph (q. v.), and Daniel, arrived to maturity and married. Daniel died in middle life and left two children, who presumably left no descendants.

(V) Joseph (4), eldest son of Joseph (3) and Mercy Richards, was born December 27, 1727, in that part of Bridgewater set off as the town of Abington, June 10 1732. He was brought up on his father's farm, and as the eldest son inherited the homestead. He was married in 1750 to Sarah Whitmarsh, born February 14, 1729. They lived on the homestead where seven children were born to them, as follows: 1. Sarah, April 21, 1751, married ——— Read, resided and died in the town of Abington, Plymouth county. 2. Susannah, December 23, 1752, married Daniel Nash, and resided and died in Cummington, Massachusetts. 3. Joseph, December 29, 1754, married Hannah Snow, in 1783. She was born May 16, 1708, and died about 1837-38, at Columbus, Ohio. They resided at Cummington, Massachusetts, 1803-13, and at Harrisburg, New York, where they raised a family of energetic children who became teachers. 4. James, May 31, 1757, married Lydia Shaw, of Abington, born July 3, 1757, died August 20, 1828. James Richards was a soldier in the American revolution, and was a pensioner under the United States law governing pensions to soldiers. He was a farmer in Plainfield, Hampshire county, Massachusetts, and filled all the town offices; was justice of the peace for forty years; a representative to the general court 1793-98, 1801-03-05-11-12 and 16; delegate to the state constitutional convention in 1820, and deacon of the Congregational church in Plainfield from November 15, 1793, to within ten years of the date of his death, when he became blind. He died at the age of eighty-five years in 1842. James and Lydia (Shaw) Richards had ten children, three of whom became ministers of the gospel, and one a physician. 5. Nehemiah (q. v.). 6. Mary, August 1, 1771, married Amariah Robbins, and resided in Cummington and Plainfield, Massachusetts, and in the state of Pennsylvania. 7. David, February 24, 1774, married Charity Whitmarsh, at Cummington; removed in 1804 to Harrisburg, Lewis county, New York; was deacon in the Congregational church, and left a large family.

(VI) Nehemiah, son of Joseph (4) and Sarah (Whitmarsh) Richards, was born in Abington, Plymouth county, Massachusetts, January 14, 1760. He was a farmer in the town of Abington, Plymouth county, Massachusetts, where he was highly respected and was chosen to various local town offices and was also justice of the peace for a long period of his active business life. He was married soon after reaching his majority to Hannah Shaw, of Abington, and through this marriage became the father of seven children, born in Abington, on the homestead farm between 1781 and 1800, in the order as follows: Orestes, Evetus, Nehemiah, Dares (q. v.), Lysander, Venila, Hannah. He died in Abington, Plymouth county, Massachusetts, full of years and honors, and with the esteem of his neighbors and the community generally.

(VII) Dares, son of Nehemiah and Hannah (Shaw) Richards, was born in Abington, Plymouth county, Massachusetts, about 1790, and died about 1842, at Cummington, Hampshire county, Massachusetts, when fifty-two years of age. He removed in early manhood to Milford, Otsego county, New York, where he carried on a farm of one hundred and twenty-five acres. He inherited the instinct of trade and commerce, exercised by his progenitors, as well as their disposition to remove to new places, and try their fortune among new surroundings. This trait had not been manifested in the last three generations. The surroundings of the homestead at Abington, and the fact that the mothers of their children were also to the manner born, kept down the spirit of change in his father, grandfather and great-grandfather, but was strong in Dares, who broke away from home surrounding before marriage. He was not satisfied with the profits derived from his one hundred and twenty-five acres, and to add to his income he peddled the product of the place in the neighboring towns and bought up in his travels eggs, butter, poultry and farm produce and sold it at the best market prices. His business kept him on the road, and he found no time to give to local politics or town affairs and thus kept out of public office. He was a Whig in political faith, and was a member of the Methodist church. He married Dorcas, daughter of Benjamin Wescott, of Milford. Her father was a very successful farmer, who had accumulated a considerable fortune, and was a man of large local influence. The children of Dares and Dorcas (Wescott) Richards were born in Milford, Otsego county, New York, in the order as follows: Harriet, Rodolphus P. (q. v.), Venila, Loomis, James, Emma, Amy, an infant who died very soon after birth. The mother of these children lived to be seventy-six years of age. The family removed from Milford, New York, to Cummington, Massachusetts, where the father died at the age of fifty-two years. His early death left the care of the children largely to the mother, and the loss also made the boys earnest and willing helpers in bearing the burden of support of so large a family.

(VIII) Rodolphus Palford, son of Dares and Dorcas (Wescott) Richards, was born in Milford, Otsego county, New York, September 5, 1826. He was brought up on his father's farm and was his father's chief dependence in carrying it on while he engaged in the business of merchandising farm produce. He attended district school in the winter season, and when twenty-one years of age went to Springfield, where he kept the books and delivered goods for Adams & Rowland, butchers and dealers in meats and vegetables. He held this position 1847-52, and found similar employment with other merchants 1852-59. He then ventured with a partner named Aldrich in business, and the firm of Aldrich & Richards dealt in meat and groceries in Springfield, 1859-61, when the firm dissolved and Mr. Richards worked for other business concerns in a like trade for several years. His business life in Springfield extended over a period of forty years, and he retired with a competence in April, 1906, having attained the age of eighty years. He had in addition to this handsome estate on which he lived in Springfield, a farm of one hundred and twenty-six acres at East Longmeadow, Hampden county, where his children spent the summer months, and to which he frequently repaired for recreation and change of employment. He married, October 26, 1853, Sarah Eliza, daughter of Colonel Loren and Polly (Porter) Burt, of East Longmeadow. She was a member of the Congregational church, and had a large circle of friends among the best families of her native town and in the city of Springfield where her permanent residence and city home was located. The children of Rodolphus Palford and Sarah Eliza (Burt) Richards were born in East Longmeadow, Hampden county, Massachusetts, as follows: 1. Ella, February 23, 1855, died September 20, 1861. 2. James Loren (q. v.), January 8, 1858. 3. Clara E., August 5, 1861, married, February 14, 1884, Frederick G. Howe, of Springfield, dealer in musical instruments in that city, and their two children are Walter Howe, born April 28, 1885, and Fred G. Howe, September 29, 1888. 4. Raymond W., May 8, 1866, a manufacturer of cigars in Westfield, Massachusetts, where he employs over one hundred men in his manufactory. He married Grace, daughter of Wesley and Caroline (Loomis) Lewis, of Westfield, and they had three children: Donald, Dorothy and James Richards. 5. Marion Louise, February 4, 1875, in 1909 was home-keeper for her father, her mother having died January 14, 1879, when she was only four years of age.

(IX) James Loren, son of Rodolphus Palford and Sarah Eliza (Burt) Richards, was born in East Longmeadow, Massachusetts, January 8, 1858. He was brought up in the city of Springfield, spending many of his boyhood days on his father's farm, where he acquired the habit of industry, accompanied by much hard work, and was a sturdy boy accustomed to all the sports and athletic exercise at the public and high school in Springfield, where he was graduated at the age of sixteen years. After leaving school he went into a bank as clerk. In 1876 he went to Boston to take a clerkship in the tobacco trade, his first year being employed in the retail trade. Later he engaged in the wholesale tobacco trade, although only eighteen years of age. He became associated with Austin R. Mitchell, who besides conducting an extensive tobacco business on his own account was the eastern agent for the well known New York tobacco and snuff manufacturing concern of P. Lorillard & Company. Mr. Richards was admitted a partner in the concern in Boston, which thus became on the retirement of Mr. Mitchell in 1895, J. L. Richards & Company. He extended his connection with the tobacco trade by accepting a directorship in the Harry Weissenger Tobacco Company of Louisville, Kentucky, and a directorship and the vice-presidency of the Universal Tobacco Company of New York. He was one of the promoters of the Wellesley & Boston Street Railway Company, held a large share of its capital stock and served as the first treasurer of the corporation. This led to his affiliation with six distinct street railway corporations of one of which he became president. He also became interested in the Boston gas situation and was made president of the Boston Gas Light Company; of the South Boston Gas Light Company, of the Roxbury Gas Light Company, and of the Bay State Gas Light Company of Massachusetts, and when these interests were consolidated he was chosen president of the Consolidated Gas Light Company of Boston, the title under which the merged companies became reincorporated. He is president and director of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, Chelsea Gas Light Company, East Boston Gas Company, Citizens' Gas Light Company of Quincy, Federal Coal & Coke Company, Waltham Gas Light Company, Lexington & Boston Street Railway Company, Newton Street Railway Company, Newton & Boston Street Railway Company, Newtonville & Watertown Street Railway Company, Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Company, Norumbega Park Company; vice-president and director of the Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Company; president and trustee of the New England Gas & Coke Company and of the New England Coal & Coke Company; director of the Commonwealth Trust Company and Newton Trust Company, and Newton Real Estate Association of Newton; trustee of the Boston Suburban Electric Companies. These multiplied interests he continued to manage and develop to an extraordinary degree, and in all the contests for cheaper service he met the public with clear, frank and businesslike statements of expense and earnings, and arranged a gradual scale of reduction in prices and increase in service which satisfied all the consumers. Mr. Richards married, February 7, 1882, Cora Eveline, daughter of Edward E. and Emily M. (Merritt) Towne, of Springfield, Massachusetts, and their two children were born in Newtonville, Massachusetts, as follows: 1. Edwin M., August 11, 1883, a graduate of the Newton high school, class of 1902, and Harvard, 1906, and now an officer in the Newton Street Railway Company. He married, October 3, 1908, Helen, daughter of George R. and Helen M. Wallace, of Fitchburg, Massachusetts, and resides in Newtonville. 2. Ruth S., April 25, 1885, also a graduate of the Newton high school, who married, January 23, 1907, Robert J., second son of Charles W. and Emma Thatcher (Welch) Leonard, of Forest avenue, West Newton, Massachusetts. These children are the tenth generation from William Richards, the immigrant. Mr. Richards erected a beautifully situated residence on the heights of Kirkstall Road in Newtonville, and the estate was converted from a rough piece of woodland into grounds of surpassing beauty and attractiveness with the advantages of rural surroundings coupled with all the conveniences of access and good neighborhood so prominent in the Newtons, the most beautiful of the far-famed suburban retreats surrounding the city of Boston. The family attend the West Newton Unitarian Church, and Mr. Richards is a member of the Newton Club, of which he is president.

John Eaton, immigrant ancestor, EATON came to New England and settled in Salisbury, Massachusetts, where he was a proprietor in 1639. He had a grant of land there and remained until the close of the year 1646. He was grand juror in 1646 and one of the prudential men. His house was near "great neck bridge on the beach road," nearly south of the present town office. This farm has always been owned by the family and is now known as Brookside Farm. He was a cooper and a farmer, and in the latter part of 1646 removed to Haverhill. He married (first) probably in England, Anne ———, who died February 5, 1660. He married (second) November 20, 1661, Phebe Dow, widow of Thomas Dow, of Newbury. She died in 1662, and he died October 29, 1668, aged about seventy-three years. Children: 1. John, born 1619, married Martha Rowlandson, of Ipswich. 2. Ann, about 1622, married Lieutenant George Brown; died December 16, 1683. 3. Esther, about 1634, died young, unmarried.

(II) Ensign Thomas, son of John Eaton, was born about 1631 in England, and removed with his father from Salisbury to Haverhill in 1646. He was one of the thirty-seven signers of a petition to the general court to revoke the sentence of disfranchisement against Robert Pike for freedom of speech. In 1675 he was selectman and also in 1692. He was one of a committee on the location of the meeting house. He was a well-to-do farmer, prominent in church and town affairs. He married (first) August 14, 1656, Martha Kent, who died March 9, 1657. At the time of his death he was building a new house, and the cellar of that house may still be seen. He married (first) March 17, 1695, Sarah Sanders, of Haverhill. She had a son born on the same day with Mrs. Dustin's child, whose brains were dashed out six days afterwards against an apple tree that stood on Jonathan Eaton's land. Mrs. Eaton was hidden in a swamp and escaped the Indians, but she never recovered from the effects of the cold and exposure, and died April 23, 1698. (IV) James, son of Jonathan Eaton, was born in Haverhill, March 9, 1697. He married, June 13, 1728, Rachel (Kimball) Ayer, widow of Samuel Ayer. He occupied the new house which was unfinished at the time his father died. He died March 18, 1773, and his grave, marked by a headstone, is in a yard a little north of the residence in the west parish. Children: 1. David, born April 1, 1729, mentioned below. 2. (IX) William Thomas, son of Thomas Woodworth Eaton, was born September 10, 1843, at Granville, Annapolis county, Nova Scotia. He was educated there in the public schools. At the age of twenty-two years he left home and came to South Boston, where he worked at the carpenter's trade. He began in business on his own account as a contractor and builder in 1868 and has been very successful. Among the larger contracts he has are those for the state bath houses at Revere Beach; the grammar school building at Reading; the pumping station at Medford, Massachusetts; Hotel Eaton in South Boston, built in 1887; three fire engine houses in the city of Boston; the Gilmore Electrical Plant, South Boston; the machine shops and storage building of the Lawley Corporation; the Baptist Dorchester Temple. Mr. Eaton has been a prominent Republican for many years. He served six years on the Boston school board, retiring in 1900. He was chairman of the committee on schoolhouses and chairman of the committee on legislative matters. He was instrumental in securing the passage of two laws of the utmost importance to the educational interests of Boston; one permitting the expenditure of $2,225,000 for grammar school buildings, and the other permitting the expenditure of $2,500,000 for high school buildings. He has often served his party on committees and as delegate to various nominating conventions. In religion Mr. Eaton is a Baptist. For twenty-five years he was treasurer of the Fourth Baptist Church, now the First Baptist Church of South Boston. He is one of the best known and highly esteemed citizens of South Boston. (The Williams Line).

William Williams was born in Wales in the United Kingdom, and came to Boston. He married Ann Power. Children: 1. Ann, 2. Albert Miles, born March 10, 1857, mentioned below.

(II) Albert Miles, son of William Williams, was born in South Boston, Massachusetts, March 10, 1857. He received his education in the public and high schools of Boston. He began his business career as clerk for the firm of Albert A. Pope & Company, later for several years was clerk for the firm of Pope, Vinal & Company, and three years with Frank Howe. All these concerns deal in shoe findings. In the same line of business he worked a year as a traveling salesman for the firm of Rousmanarie, Lovejoy & Kimball, then was admitted to the firm, the name of which was changed to Rousmanarie, Kimball & Company, and later to Rousmanarie, Williams & Company. Upon the death of the senior partner, Mr. Williams became the head of the firm. The firm had a large business and for many years has ranked among the most prominent in its line. Mr. Williams was generous with his wealth, giving to various schools, churches and charities. In religion he was a Methodist, and in politics a Republican. “The baptismal name Philip, PHILIPS like other scripture designations, was introduced at the Norman conquest of England. In succeeding centuries it became the parent of several others such as Philips, Phillips, Phillipps, Philipson, Philp, Philips, Phelp, Phelps, Phipp, Phipps, Phipson, Phippen, Phillot, Philpott, Philpotts, Phileox, Phillippo, Phillopoon, Filkin, Philippe, etc. It is probable, however, that some of these forms, though derived from Philip, originally have come to us in later times from continental nations," says Lower. In America the name of Phelps is one of distinction. Almira Hart Lincoln Phelps, born in Connecticut, in 1793, was a noted teacher and educational writer. Austin Phelps, D. D., born 1821, attained distinction as a writer and teacher. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, born in Massachusetts, 1815, was a writer of prominence. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, daughter of the foregoing, born in 1844, has written for the English-speaking people of all countries. John S. Phelps, born in Massachusetts in 1814, was a congressman from Missouri, and governor of Arkansas. John W. Phelps, born in Vermont, in 1813, was a general in the civil war. Walter W. Phelps, born 1839, was a well-known congressman.

(I) Jeremiah Phelps was born in New Jersey, but the precise time and locality of his birth are not known to his descendants. He enlisted in Washington's army, when it was retreating through New Jersey, in the darkest period of the revolution, and was assigned to General Putnam's division, and served through the remainder of the war. He was of a courageous and daring nature and had a great admiration for "Old Put," as he affectionately called General Putnam, and some time after the war was over he made a trip on horseback through what was then almost a wilderness to see his old commander, who was living in what is now Pomfret, Connecticut. Pleased to be near the general and liking the country, he settled there and became a farmer. In the early part of the last century, he had a contract to build a turnpike from Worcester, Massachusetts, to Boston. Worcester was then a small village. He had gangs of men a few miles apart at work all along the line. One day he set out to pay off his men. In those days the means of locomotion were not what they are now, and riding on horseback was the best and quickest way of getting about. He went to Worcester and paid off the men there, and started towards Boston for the next gang; but he never reached it, and disappeared completely from the sight and knowledge of all who knew him, and has never been seen or heard of from that day to this. He was in no financial trouble that was known to anyone. His payment of a large part of his money before disappearing negatives the idea of his having absconded with the remainder. Many believed that he was murdered for his money, as it was known that he had a large sum about him. Shortly after his disappearance, his wife, by the death of her brother, came into possession of about $5,000, which enabled her to bring up her family of four children. Jeremiah Phelps married Mehitable Holt, of Hampton, Connecticut, and they had three sons and a daughter. One of the sons, Ziba, the eldest, died at the age of eighty-four. Josiah became a doctor and settled in Rochester, Vermont, where he practiced medicine over forty years, when on account of his wife's health, he removed to Manhattan, then on the extreme frontier of Kansas. There he died at the age of eighty-six. John, the youngest son, is next mentioned.

(II) John, youngest child of Jeremiah and Mehitable (Holt) Phelps, was born in Pomfret, Connecticut. Dr. Josiah Phelps settled in the almost unbroken wilderness of Vermont and thither John Phelps followed him with the intention of clearing a farm and making a home for his family. Trees had to be felled and land broken up, and he had to do most of the work himself. He was not as robust as either of his brothers, the task he had undertaken was too much for his strength, his health gave way, his wife became consumptive, and after some years of hard struggle, he had to give up the attempt to live in the new country, and returned to Connecticut. He opened a country store in the village of Willington, which he conducted until his death. His health would not permit him to do laborious work, but that kind of work was not required in his business, and he made a good living as a merchant. After the death of John Phelps, his family broke up. The wife and daughter went to live with some relatives in Hartford. The two older sons married and settled in Willington. John Phelps had by his first wife (name not known) three sons: Lucerne, Josiah and William. After her death he married (second) Amoretta Andrews, by whom he had one child, Mary J.

(III) William, son of John Phelps, was born in Tolland, Connecticut, September 4, 1831, and was educated in the public schools. He was engaged in various kinds of business at different times. At the time of his marriage he was the proprietor of a shoe store at Greenpoint, Long Island. Later he was in the grocery business in Hartford, Connecticut, two or three years, and then engaged in deeorative painting in Springfield, Massachusetts, continuing up to 1872. He enlisted, August 30, 1862, at Hartford, and became a member of Company E, Twenty-second Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and served a nine months term, being discharged on account of expiration of time for which enlistment was made September 19, 1862; he was appointed a corporal. His military service was rendered in the vicinity of Washington where his regiment was one of the force guarding that city. He was married June 21, 1854, by Rev. Hervey Smith, to Ellen Tuttle Bangs (see Bangs VIII), born in Springfield, Massachusetts, March 26, 1828. Three children were born of this marriage: 1. Willis B., born in Boston, July 24, 1858, died February 20, 1882. 2. John B., mentioned below. 3. Genevieve B., September 27, 1866, at Hanover (now Meriden), Connecticut, attended the Springfield public school, then attended the New England Conservatory of Music three years and studied music in Berlin, Germany, two years.

(IV) John Bangs, second son of William and Ellen T. (Bangs) Phelps, was born in Hartford, Connecticut, March 15, 1861. He attended the public schools at Greenfield, Massachusetts, and then studied at the academy at West Brattleboro, Vermont, three years. In 1877 he went to Springfield, Massachusetts, where he was a clerk in a clothing store. From that employ he went to the Chapin Paper and Pulp Company and was employed there two or three years. At the age of twenty-one he went into the service of the Agawam National Bank. He next entered the employ of the Hampden Savings Bank, where he was made teller February 17, 1884; assistant treasurer February 13, 1903; and treasurer August 14, 1906, and has since filled the last named position. He is a director in the Chapin National Bank. In politics he is a Republican; he attends the Unitarian church. He is a member of the Savings Bank, Treasurer's Club, the Economic and the Winthrop clubs. Mr. Phelps is a man whose judgment is much respected in banking circles. He has a handsome home on Maplewood Terrace, where he resides with his mother and sister.

(The Bangs Line).

The origin of the name Bangs is doubtful, one authority claiming that it is a corruption of Banks, and that that name is from Banc, near Honfleur, in France. Another suggests that it is from bains, the French for bath. Captain Jonathan, the son of the immigrant, used in 1686 the same crest as that used by Sir John Banks, of London, in the time of the Stuarts, viz: A boor's head, full faced, couped at the shoulders proper, on the head a cap of maintenance gules turned up ermine adorned with a crescent, issuant therefrom a fleur-de-lis or. History states that many Norman-English families settled in the Isle of Man when it came under English dominion at the beginning of the fourteenth century. The tradition has been preserved in more than one of the branches of the Bangs family in America that the immigrant ancestor of them all came from the Isle of Man.

(1) Edward Bangs, immigrant, was born in England in 1592, and died in Eastham, Massachusetts, in 1678, aged eighty-six years. Tradition in the Bangs family has it that he was a native or inhabitant of Chichester, a city in the county of Sussex, England; but there are those in the family that contend that he was either born in the Isle of Man or his immediate family was located there. He came to Plymouth, Massachusetts, in the "Anne," which arrived there in July, 1623. From the "History and Genealogy of the Bangs Family in America" by Dean Dudley, we obtain much that follows. Edward Bangs had four acres of land for a garden plot on the other side of Eel river in 1623. In the year 1627, in the division of the cows and goats, he drew the big line-back cow brought over in the "Anne." The same year he received a second allotment of land consisting of twenty acres. He was one of the surveyors appointed to lay out the lots, and in this business he was associated with William Bradford, Edward Winslow, John Howland, Francis Cook and Joshua Pratt. He was made freeman in 1633 and his taxes that year were twelve shillings. In 1634-35-36, he was one of the assessors. October, 1636, he was one of the jury to try "actions and abuses." In 1637 he was one of the grand inquest or grand jury, sworn to inquire of all the abuses of the colony. In 1637 he was appointed with the governor and assistants and Mr. Stephen Hopkins, as a committee to divide the meadow lands. In 1638 he was again a member of the grand inquest, as he was in 1641 and 1646. In 1639 he was appointed by the court as an arbitrator between Samuel Gorton and Thomas Clark. He was sometimes overseer of the guard against the Indians. In 1641-42 he contributed one-sixteenth part of the money to build a bark of forty or fifty tons burden, to cost two hundred pounds; and in consideration he was granted by the Plymouth court eighty acres of land. He was a shipwright by trade and is said to have had charge of the construction of the vessel. In 1645 he was a "Freeman of Mawsett," or Eastham, the oldest town on Cape Cod. His name is on the list of those able to bear arms in 1643. About 1650 he was deputy to the Old Colony court. In 1652 he was one of the jurors to lay out a convenient way from Sandwich into Plymouth, and the same year was one of the deputies of Eastham for Plymouth Colony court. He was the town treasurer of Eastham from 1646 to 1665, and a selectman two years, about 1665. In 1657 he was licensed as a merchant at Eastham, and was for many years quite extensively engaged in trade. In 1659, the military being required to arm and equip for service, and three "troop horse" being the proportion of Eastham, Governor Thomas Prentice and Edward Bangs each agreed to furnish a man and horse, at his own expense, for two years. His son Jonathan, then nineteen years of age, was ensign of the foot company. Edward Bangs married Lydia, a daughter of Robert Hicks, of Southwark, who with his wife and children came over in the "Anne." Lydia Hicks must have died before 1651. He married (second) Rebecca, surname unknown. By the first wife he had one child, John. The children of the second wife were: Joshua, Rebecca, Sarah, Jonathan, Lydia, Hannah, Bethia, Applia and Mercy.

(II) Captain Jonathan, second son of Edward and Rebecca Bangs, was born at Plymouth, Massachusetts, in 1640, and died at Harwich, now Brewster, November 9, 1728. In dividing his lands by will, Edward Bangs gave Captain Jonathan his portion principally in Sattucket, now the town of Brewster, and there he settled probably about 1694. He was a selectman of Eastham three years, and in 1674-76-82-83-87-88 he was deputy to the Old Colony court and in 1692 was representative to the general court at Boston. He was also sometimes town treasurer of Eastham. He was a military man and captain in the militia. He was always called "Captain," while a ship master was not often so designated. For him many other appellations were preferred to that of captain, such as "Mr." or "Deacon" or "Squire". In 1680, in an agreement between Mr. John Freeman Sr., of the one part and various others of the other part, about boundaries of their lands lying at "Sattucket" and places adjacent, and the titles to those lands, there are the signatures and seals of all the parties. Jonathan Bangs used the same seal described at the beginning of this article. He married (first) July 16, 1664, Mary Mayo, daughter of Captain Samuel and Thomasine (Lumpkin) Mayo. Captain Mayo, mariner, was born about 1625, and settled in Boston about 1658, and died in 1663-64. His wife Thomasine was born 1626, died June 16, 1709. Captain Samuel Mayo was a son of Rev. John, of Boston and Barnstable, and at last of Yarmouth. Mary Mayo was born at Barnstable, February 3, 1650, died January 26, 1711, at Brewster. Jonathan Bangs married (second) Sarah ———, who died June, 1719, aged seventy-eight; (third) 1720, Mrs. Ruth Young, of Eastham, daughter of Daniel Cole, of Eastham. The twelve children of Jonathan Bangs, all by wife Mary Mayo, were: Edward, Rebecca, Jonathan (died young); Jonathan, Mary, Hannah, Tamson or Thomasine, Samuel, Mercie, Elizabeth, Sarah and Lydia.

(III) Captain Edward (2), eldest son of Captain Jonathan and Mary (Mayo) Bangs, was born at Eastham, September 30, 1665, died at Eastham, May 22, 1746. He was a resident of Sattucket until after 1739, when he removed to Eastham, where he spent the remainder of his life. He inherited a double portion of his father's estate—a common thing for the eldest son in those days—and lived on the homestead in Brewster. He was an active business man, was a merchant, innholder and a tanner. His will was dated April 14, 1746, and the inventory of his estate amounted to ninety-seven pounds, ten shillings, and his debts to six pounds, ten shillings, six pence. He married (first) Ruth Allen, who died June 22, 1738, aged sixty-eight years. He married (second) January 16, 1739, Mrs. Ruth Mayo, of Eastham, who died August 17, 1747. The children, all by wife Ruth Allen were: Joshua, Mary, Edward, Ruth, Jonathan, Ebenezer and Rebecca.

(IV) Dr. Jonathan (2), third son of Captain Edward (2) and Ruth (Allen) Bangs, was baptized May 23, 1707, died December 7, 1745. His inventory dated March 7, 1745, mentions the amount of his estate as five hundred and thirty-six pounds, fifteen shillings, seven pence; debts forty pounds. His doctor's bill was five pounds, ten shillings; funeral charges eight pounds, six shillings. His widow was administratrix of his estate, and Samuel Howes, of Yarmouth, guardian of his only child. His gravestone is yet preserved at Brewster with its inscription. Dr. Bangs married, January 4, 1733, Phebe, daughter of Stephen Hopkins, and widow of Samuel Bangs Jr. Her father, Stephen, was a son of Stephen, a grandson of Giles, and a great-grandson of Deacon Stephen Hopkins, a "Mayflower" Pilgrim. The only child of Dr. Jonathan and Phebe was a son Allen, next mentioned.

(V) Alien, son of Dr. Jonathan (2) and Phebe (Hopkins) (Bangs) Bangs, was born at Satucket, now Brewster, March 23, 1734. He appears to have been the only child of his father. He was a farmer and was drowned while boating hay from Brewster Marshes, September 14, 1793. His homestead at South Dennis is still occupied by his descendants. He was a private in Captain Jonathan Crowell's company at the Lexington alarm of the revolution. He was also in Captain John Nickerson's company, Colonel Nathaniel Freeman's regiment, and marched on an alarm to Dartmouth and Falmouth, September, 1778, and did other service. Allen Bangs married Rebecca Howes, of Yarmouth, born there April 17, 1732, died at South Dennis, September 9, 1793. Both husband and wife seem to have been buried near their homestead the same month and year. She was the daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Paddock) Howes. Joseph Howes was a son of Samuel, son of Jeremiah and Sarah (Preuce) Howes the latter a daughter of Governor Thomas Preuce. Jeremiah was a son of the Pilgrim, Thomas Howes. The children of Allen and Rebecca were: Jonathan (died young), Joseph, Phebe, Jonathan, Zenas, Allen (died young), and Allen.

(VI) Deacon Joseph, second son of Allen and Rebecca (Howes) Bangs, was born at Yarmouth, July 5, 1757, died at Hawley, June 30, 1809. He was a private in Captain Jonathan Crowell's company from Yarmouth, marching at the Lexington alarm, April 19, 1775. He was also on the roll of Captain Joshua Gray's company, July 8, 1775, three months, twenty-three days; also two months and five days, to December 31, 1775, are credited to him. He married, at Yarmouth, December 17, 1778, Desire Sears, born there August 24, 1760. Her Sears ancestors were: Captain Nathaniel (father), Samuel, Josiah, Silas, and Richard (the immigrant). She drew a pension on account of the service of her husband, Joseph Bangs, in the revolutionary war. Children: Phebe, Rebecca, Joseph, Desire, Sarah, Mary, Jonathan, Sabra, Olive, Washington and Freeman.

(VII) Joseph (2), eldest son of Joseph

(1) and Desire (Sears) Bangs, was born at Hawley, December 10, 1783, died at Springfield, September 27, 1830. "He was sent to Springfield when a boy of sixteen, full of energy, which helps to make a successful business man. He remembered the struggle at the home of his youth, among the rough hills where his father's large family of children were reared. The day he became twenty-one years of age, he cleared his father's farm from incumbrance and carried the deed to his father, and prepared a way for his three brothers to go to Springfield and engage in a good business. His energy and uprightness in various kinds of mercantile affairs gave him, for those days, a handsome estate, although his heart and hand were ever open to the poor and needy. He was a perfectly honest man, of noble sentiments and warm feelings and deserved much gratitude and praise." He married (first) March 23, 1809, Mary Warner, of Springfield, born January 11, 1786, died May 24, 1819; (second) September 13, 1820, Julia Tuttle, born May 2, 1797, died August 17, 1884, at Springfield. She was a daughter of Caleb Tuttle, of Hartford, Connecticut. Children by wife Mary Warner: Josiah Dennis, George, Joseph, Mary and Frederick; by wife Julia Tuttle: Julia Howard, Ella Louise, Ellen Tuttle, Maria Sears, Hannah Lincoln and Amelia Dillingham.

(VIII) Ellen Tuttle, third daughter of Joseph (2) and Julia (Tuttle) Bangs, was born in Springfield, March 26, 1828, and married, at Chicopee, June 21, 1854, William Phelps, of Tolland, Connecticut (see Phelps III), and resides in Springfield.

Joseph Davis, born in Londonderry, Ireland, about 1760, came of respectable Scotch ancestry. The Davis family came to the north of Ireland with the early Scotch and English Protestants early in the seventeenth century and took part in the defense of Londonderry during the siege in 1680. The name has been well known in Londonderry from that time to the present. He married Betty McCauley, who died at an advanced age in Londonderry; he died there at the age of sixty-eight years.

(II) William, son of Joseph Davis, was born in Londonderry, Ireland, in 1800. He learned his father's trade, blacksmith. In 1826 he married Jenny Mallory, born in Londonderry in 1804, of Scotch ancestry like her husband. Her ancestors also came to the north of Ireland early in the seventeenth century. They were good old Covenanters. In 1836 William Davis with his wife and children left his native land and took passage for America on a sailing vessel. After a tedious voyage, lasting many weeks, he settled in Middle Simonds, Carleton county, New Brunswick, and followed his trade for many years in that town, becoming a well known and prosperous citizen. He and his wife were brought up in the Presbyterian church, but upon moving to New Brunswick, they joined the Advent church, then the prevailing religion of that section, and they continued loyal members of the Advent church to the end of their lives. He died in 1887. His wife, Jenny, was born in Ireland, September 27, 1804, and died in Middle Simonds in March, 1892. Children: 1. William, born July 1, 1827. 2. Mary, 1830, died of cholera during the epidemic of 1851. 3. Betsey, December 24, 1833. 4. Joseph, July 27, 1835. 5. Jane, born in Middle Simonds, 1837, married Stephen G. Shaw, a descendent of Wendell Phillips; they reside on a farm in Carleton county, New Brunswick. 6. Hannah, July 4, 1839, married David Treecartin, a carpenter, residing in Melrose, Massachusetts. 7. George H., May 4, 1841, mentioned below. 8. Emily, November 4, 1843, married James Christian, of Carleton county, of Welsh ancestry; they are living on a farm in this section of the province. 9. Nancy, March, 1845, married Alvah Dobel, a soldier in the Union army during the civil war, settled in Carleton county after the war and his wife died there. 10. Stuart, March, 1847, married and now a resident of East Cambridge.

(III) George H., son of William Davis, was born in Middle Simonds, May 4, 1841. He attended school in his native place, and worked on his father's farm during his youth. He also learned the trade of carpenter. He was skillful with tools of all kinds, however, and though he came to Boston to follow his trade, he soon afterward entered the employ of the Whittier Machine Company, of Boston. He held a responsible position with this concern for fifteen years, then he engaged in business on his own account, manufacturing automatic gates for passenger elevators in a factory at 100 Utica street, Boston. His business was prosperous and he continued it until the time of his death with much success. He died at his home in Roslindale, West Roxbury, May 21, 1899. He was a thoroughly capable business man as well as an exceptionally skillful craftsman. He was an active and devout member of the Advent church. He was kindly and charitable to the extent of his means. He married Anna (Campbell) Woodburn, widow of William Woodburn. She comes of an ancient and distinguished Scotch family. When she was a very young child, her father went to Australia on business and was never heard from. Her mother, Elizabeth (Limerick) Campbell, went to live with her parents in Londonderry, Ireland, and in 1841 came to America, making her home in Middle Simonds on the river St. John. She married (first) in Christ Church, Salem street, Boston, December 8, 1854, William Woodburn, who was born in Londonderry county, Ireland, came with his parents to Carleton county, New Brunswick, learned the trade of baker, removed to Boston, Massachusetts, after his marriage, and followed the business of teamster until his death, August 15, 1859. Mrs. Davis resides at Roslindale and has preserved her health and faculties to a wonderful degree. Children of William and Anna (Campbell) Woodburn: 1. Robert John Woodburn, died October 6, 1859, aged two years. 2. Mary Elizabeth Woodburn, born February 25, 1859, married John L. S. Roberts, a successful patent attorney of Boston. Children of George H. and Anna (Campbell) (Woodburn) Davis: 1. Isabella Stuart, born in Boston, September 19, 1865, married J. Hollister Currie, who after the death of his father-in-law, George H. Davis, succeeded to the management of the business at 100 Utica street, Boston, and has conducted it very successfully; they reside in Roslindale and have one child, Inez May Currie, born February 2, 1892, student in the Boston Latin school. 2. William Wallace, mentioned below. 3. George H., December 30, 1869, an employee in Metropolitan Coal Company; married Ann Isabel Johnson; child, Elizabeth Johnson; resides in Roslindale. 4. (IV) William Wallace, son of George H. Davis, was born May 17, 1867. He was educated in the public schools, and is a successful and prosperous dealer in stationery, magazines, newspapers, etc., at Roslindale. He is active, energetic and prosperous. In politics he is a Republican. He married, February 22, 1898, Evelyn Davis, born in Middle Simonds, February 24, 1866, daughter of Joseph Davis (3) and granddaughter of William Davis (2).

Joseph Davis, son of William Davis (2), and father of Mrs. W. W. Davis, was born in Londonderry, Ireland, July 25, 1835. He came to New Brunswick, Canada, with his parents in 1836 and settled in Carleton county. He married there in 1858 Lucy Crouse, born at St. Mary's New Brunswick, July, 1838, died at Middle Simonds in 1875. He died at Middle Simonds, December 9, 1906. The name, whether spelled BARRUS
BARRUS rrus, Barrows, Barrowe or Barrow, from Barrow, a mound, or borough, a town, is of the family that lived in Yarmouth, England, before 1637. Out of the family was sent to New England in 1637 the immigrant ancestor of the name of Barrus or Barrows in America, in the person of John Barrows.

(I) John Barrows was born in England in 1609 and he left Yarmouth, England, at the age of twenty-eight with his wife Anne, and settled in Salem, Massachusetts Bay Colony. John and Anne Barrows received grants of land in Salem in 1637, and were inhabitants of that town for twenty-eight years, and all their children were born there. They removed to Plymouth before 1665, and John, the immigrant, died there in 1692. His will shows that he left a second wife younger than himself and four sons: Robert (q. v.), Joshua, Benjamin, who lived in Attleboro, and Ebenezer, who lived in Cumberland, Rhode Island, and two daughters, Mary and Deborah.

(II) Robert, eldest son of John and Anne Barrows, was born in Salem, Massachusetts Bay Colony, removed with his father to Plymouth and had by his first wife, Ruth, four children: 1. John, 1667, died in Plymouth, 1720. 2. George (q. v.), 1670. 3. Samuel, 1672, died in Middleboro, 1755. 4. Melitable, married Adam Wright. He married (second) Lydia Dunham, and had children. 5. Robert, 1689, died in Mansfield, Connecticut, 1779. 6. Thankful, 1692, married Isaac King. 7. Elisha, 1695, died in Rochester, Massachusetts, 1767. 8. Thomas, 1697, died in Mansfield. 9. Lydia, 1699, married Thomas Branch.

(III) George, second son of Robert and Ruth Barrows, was born in Plymouth, Massachusetts, 1670. He was a successful commissioner in treating with the Indians and by his skill he kept their good will and secured peace to the early settlers. This service secured to him the title of "Captain George." He was a large land holder and had a large family. His eldest son Peleg received the homestead now located in the town of Carver, and which was still in the possession of the family in 1880. Peleg's son Joseph removed to Maine and was the ancestor of Judge W. C. Barrus and Hon. George B. Barrows, president of the Maine senate, and of Rev. C. D. Barrows, of Lowell. Samuel (q. v.), the second son of Captain George, was called Samuel Jr. to distinguish him from his uncle, Deacon Samuel (1672-1755).

(IV) Samuel, second son of Captain George Barrows, was born in Plymouth, Massachusetts, in 1700. He removed to Middleboro. He married, November 21, 1723, Susannah Tobey, of Sandwich, and removed to Killingly, Connecticut. They had eight children: Noah, born August 20, 1727, was the grandfather of Rev. William Barrows, D. D., secretary of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, and George (q. v.), was probably the fifth or sixth.

(V) George (2), son of Samuel and Susannah (Tobey) Barrows, was born in Killingly, Connecticut, March 21, 1733. He was married and resided in Tolland, Connecticut, where he and all children except one son Lazarus (q. v.) and one daughter, Keziah, died of malignant fever in 1777.

(VI) Lazarus, only son of George (2) Barrows to reach maturity, was born in Tolland, Connecticut, in 1763. Left an orphan in 1777, he was incorrectly told that his name was Barrus and not Barrows, and he changed the spelling of the name to Barrus. He married Ruth, daughter of Joseph Cressey, and soon after the birth of their first child they removed from Tolland, Connecticut, to Rowe, Massachusetts. They had nine children born as follows: 1. Julia Ann, in Tolland, Connecticut, November 11, 1785, married Elijah Warren. 2. Susannah, January 26, 1788, married Bani Parker about 1812. 3. Patience, July 22, 1790, married (first) Elisha Phillips, (second) Jonathan Lilly, (third) a Mr. Clark. 4. George, April 2, 1793, married (first) Rhoda Keyes, (second) Rhoda T. Graves; he died in 1869. 5. Levi (q. v.), March 10, 1795. 6. Freelove, April 21, 1798. 7. Perus, April 1, 1801, married Huldah Rogers. 8. Ruth, December 18, 1803, married Elijah Howes, November 24, 1831. 9. Anna, March 29, 1808, married Madison Knowlton, November 11, 1830.

(VII) Levi, second son and fifth child of Lazarus and Ruth (Cressey) Barrus, was born in Charlemont, Massachusetts, March 10, 1795, died March 18, 1878. He married (first) Almada, daughter of Cyrus and Sarah (Weeks) Stearns, of Goshen, Massachusetts. David Stearns, father of Cyrus, was the first settler of Goshen, Hampshire county, Massachusetts. The first American ancestor of David Stearns was Isaac, who came from England in 1630, in the same ship, it is thought, with Governor Winthrop. He settled in Watertown with his kinsman, Charles Stearns, another immigrant who came on the same ship and he was made a freeman by the general court in 1646. Isaac Stearns sold his lands in Watertown in 1680, and with his son Shubael removed to Lynn and took up wild lands at Reading. Shubael was a soldier in the Narragansett expedition and his son Ebenezer married Martha Burnap, of Reading, in 1717. They removed to Sutton where, as first settlers, they received one hundred acres of land free. David was the fourth son of Ebenezer and Martha (Burnap) Stearns. He was born in Sutton in 1729, removed to Dudley where he remained a few years and in 1761, accompanied by Abijah Tucker, sought a new home beyond the Connecticut river. Stearns and Tucker left their families in Hampton during the summer of 1761, proceeded over the military trail towards Albany for twelve miles and there felled trees, built a log house and founded the present town of Goshen. The two families spent the winter of 1761-62 in Goshen, their only neighbors being the wild bears and wolves of the primitive forest in which they had intruded. Sarah (Weeks) Stearns was the daughter of Captain Thomas and Mercy (Hinckley) Weeks, the latter of whom was a lineal descendant of Governor Hinckley. Captain Weeks served in the revolutionary war, being with the colonial troops at the surrender of Ticonderoga, losing his camp equipage and clothing. He had served as paymaster in the army and had attained the rank of captain. He also served in the French and Indian war. In 1761 he went to Chesterfield "Gore" or "no man's land," having been sent there by the general court as an engineer to lay out the town of Goshen. His surveyor's instruments are in the possession of Alvan Barrus, whose house is on the site of the house of Captain Weeks. Captain Weeks became an important man in the community, holding the office of town clerk several years, and being a delegate to the state convention in 1779-80. Captain Weeks died April 20, 1817, in the eighty-second year of his age, and his wife died at Whately, February 5, 1822, aged eighty-four years; both were buried in Goshen. Levi Barrus married (second) Elvira W. Allis. The children of Levi and Almada (Stearns) Barrus, as taken from the records of Charlemont, were: 1. Hiram, July 15, 1822, married Augusta Stone; he died in 1883. 2. Lorin, May 21, 1825, married Lucinda S. Naramore; he died in 1899. 3. Laura Ann, July 26, 1827, married Jacob Lovell, and was still living in 1908. 4. Theron Levi, September 1, 1829, married Czarina Robinson, was deacon, school teacher and member of school committee; he died in 1906. 5. Alvan Stone (q. v.), October 14, 1831. 6. Charles, May 25, 1834, married Clarissa Hill; he died in 1904. 7. Louisa Jane, July 20, 1838, died September 4, 1850. Levi Barrus was a prosperous farmer and removed from Salem to Goshen, Hampshire county, Massachusetts, where he purchased a farm of four hundred acres, which he cultivated with great success and considerable profit. He was originally a Whig in political faith and left that party when it departed from the principles of its founders to make compromises with the slaveholders of the South and joined the Free Soil party of Massachusetts, and in 1856 he was one of the founders and early supporters of the Republican party. He was first a Baptist and then a Congregationalist.

(VIII) Alvan Stone, (he evidently dropped the name Stone), son of Levi and Almada (Stearns) Barrus, was born on the old farm in Goshen, Massachusetts, October 14, 1831. He attended the district school and remained on the farm with his father until he had attained his majority, when he began the business of selling milk in Holyoke at the time it had a population of about five thousand. He built up a large and profitable milk route, sold out in 1854, and engaged with his brother Hiram in the manufacture of carpenters tools and planes at Goshen. He continued this business for about three years when he engaged in teaching a winter school in New York state, 1857-58, in a place called Bleecker, Fulton county. He returned to Goshen in 1858 where he bought out the business of a small general store, in partnership with A. W. Crafts. In 1861, upon the outbreak of the war for the Union of the United States, he volunteered for the service in the Northern army, in the Tenth Massachusetts Regiment, but sickness prevented him from serving. In 1862 Mr. Barrus re-enlisted in the First Massachusetts Cavalry, for three years, and during this time was for two years acting steward in the hospital service, his health not permitting active service in the field. The hospital was full of contagious cases. Mustered out November 27, 1864. He was appointed a justice of the peace in 1867, and being the only justice in a circuit of eight miles his duties called him in various parts of the county. He also served as town clerk, 1861-62, selectman for twenty-six years, a representative from his town in the general court of Massachusetts, 1879, and in the house he served on the committees on military affairs and agricultural education. He was also chairman of the committee on county estimates. While serving on the committee of education, a bill was reported to the house providing a tax on all dogs of the commonwealth for the benefit of the agricultural schools, which bill was opposed by Representative Barrus, and he induced the committee to substitute a bill providing that the money for the support of the Agricultural College be taken from the treasury of the commonwealth as the original bill was calculated to degrade the cause of education by making it depend on the income from a single source. His substitute was accepted in full and Massachusetts therefore stood pledged to support agricultural schools by resource to the treasury.

He was elected state senator in 1882, re-elected in 1883 and served in 1883-84. In 1882 the subject of agricultural education came up in the shape of a bill which he introduced to grant a charter to an agricultural society at Cummington, Massachusetts, which, when it failed of passage, he caused to be referred to the next session of the general court in 1883, and he was there to further depend and advance his bill. He caused it to be taken from the files of the previous year and placed on the regular order of the day. It was therefore reported and referred to the regular committee on agriculture. Here he was ably sustained by Judge John E. Russell and the Agricultural Society of Cummington was granted a charter. Senator Barrus was elected its first president and held the office for thirteen consecutive years. The first capital stock of the concern was provided by him in the shape of his personal note for $3,000, which increased to $5,000, and in 1908 the society had a capital of $10,000, with a fine class of fair buildings and no debts. He was a member of the State Board of Agriculture for six years and in 1889 was secretary of the board of control of the Agricultural College. At the time of the railroad troubles in Massachusetts, 1894-95, he was a member of the governor's council, serving during the administration of Governor Greenhalge and Lieutenant-Governor Wolcott. During 1896-97 he was one of a commission of five members appointed by Governor Wolcott to revise the tax laws of Massachusetts, and they gave a very interesting and truthful report of the farming towns of the state. He was made a trustee of the State Insane Asylum at Northampton, Massachusetts, served as chairman of the board and is still serving. He was a promoter and charter member, trustee and vice-president of the Haydenville Savings Bank. He bought out the heirs of the old homestead farm at Lillia, Massachusetts, where he has a fine residence, and the care of the farm is in the hands of his son, George Levi Barrus, who is a practical farmer, as well as a scientific agriculturist, a graduate of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, 1903; he was appointed captain of Company A of the college. His military service was acknowledged by the Grand Army of the Republic, which organization has in him a valued comrade and enthusiastic member of the organization. The long and earnest battle made by Senator Barrus in behalf of state roads for use in the Berkshire hills rather than ornament in the suburbs of large cities and towns for the use of pleasure seekers, began in 1801 when he secured the first appropriation for the building of a state road through the town of Goshen and a second appropriation in 1806, making a total of $37,000 expended for the benefit of the farmers in transporting their produce over the hill to market. In 1908 the road was completed by a third appropriation and Senator Barrus saw his good work finished in that direction to the evident satisfaction of the long-suffering agricultural population. But Senator Barrus is not resting the state road matter with this single accomplishment. His views of the benefit of highways built and sustained by the commonwealth for the benefit of the product, of the hill dwellers of Western Massachusetts, rather than for the railroad and automobile interests of the more favored section, are being largely exploited in the newspapers of Massachusetts and will surely bear equally rich fruit. His first presidential vote was cast for the Scott and Graham electors in 1852, in 1856 for Fremont and Dayton, following in 1860 by a ballot for the electors of the new Republican party headed by Lincoln and Hamlin and every Republican ticket from that time. He is from choice as well as inheritance a Congregationalist, and in his early manhood was a teacher and superintendent in the Sabbath school.

He married, June 29, 1869, Emeline Parker, daughter of John and Sarah (Parker) Wakefield. Her father was a farmer in Reading, Massachusetts, and she was born August 2, 1846. The children of Alvan and Emeline Parker (Wakefield) Barrus was born in Goshen, Massachusetts, as follows: 1. Lena Wakefield, November 2, 1875, a graduate of the Reading high school and from the State Normal school, Bridgewater, Massachusetts, studied domestic science in Boston and is a teacher of domestic science in the Holyoke high school. 2. George Levi, December 15, 1880, graduated at the Agricultural College and now in charge of the home farm at Lithia, Hampshire county, Massachusetts.

This name, borne by various distinguished men in America, HOWARD is found among the early colonists of New England, two of whom were the brothers John and George Howard. John always wrote his name Haward, and so did all his descendants till after 1700, and the early town records conform to this spelling; but for nearly two hundred years the name has invariably been written Howard. It is worthy of remark that the two names Hayward and Helward, which have always been known as distinct families, were uniformly pronounced alike, Howard. They were perhaps the same originally, and both Hayward.

(1) John Howard, or Haward, came from England when about fifteen years of age and settled in Duxbury. He lived in the family of Captain Myles Standish, and in 1643 was among those who were able to bear arms. In 1645 he is named as one of the fifty-four original proprietors of the grant of land afterwards known as Bridgewater, each settler having at first a grant of a house-lot of six acres on the town river. From the Howard Genealogy by Herman Howard, the following is learned of John Howard: "In 1656 he was one of the two surveyors of highways for his town, and in 1657 he had taken the freeman's oath. He was one of the fourteen men whose allotment of land was in the easterly part of the grant. He was one of the first military officers, and was appointed ensign September 27, 1664. In May, 1676, during King Philip's War, Ensign John Howard, with twenty others, fought with some Indians and took seventeen of them alive with much plunder, and all returned without serious injury. June 5, 1678, he was deputy to the general court of Massachusetts; also on the same date he was appointed a selectman of his town. In 1683 he, with Thomas Hayward, was a representative to the General Court. October 2, 1680, he was promoted and received his commission as a lieutenant. Mr. Howard was a carpenter by trade. He lived in a house which he built near the first meetinghouse. It stood directly north of the house were B. B. Howard now lives, on the corner of Howard and River streets. * * * This was the first public house in Bridgewater, as Mr. Howard was licensed to keep an ordinary or tavern, in 1670, at this place. It would probably be difficult to find in the history of all the taverns that have existed in Massachusetts, another of which it can be said, as Judge Mitchell says of the Howard House, that 'He (John Howard), was licensed to keep an ordinary or tavern, as early as 1670, and it is remarkable that a public house has been kept there by his descendants ever since, till within a few years.' This house was owned and managed by John Howard and his direct descendants for a period of one hundred and fifty-one years. John Howard opened the tavern in 1670, and kept it thirty years, until his death in 1700. His eldest son, John, then became proprietor, conducting it twenty-six years, until 1726. His son, Major Edward, was proprietor from that date to 1771, for forty-five years. His son, Colonel Edward, owned and conducted the house for thirty-eight years, from 1771 to 1809, when he died. Then his widow and his son, Captain Benjamin Beal Howard, kept the house open twelve years, until 1821. The house was taken down in 1838. A list of the distinguished guests of this tavern, could we know their names, would make exceedingly interesting reading. Without doubt, one of the early distinguished visitors was Mary (Chilton) Winslow (the first lady who came on shore from the Mayflower), who was grandmother of the wife of the second proprietor, John Howard. An occasional guest was John Reed, D. D., who was a member of Congress during Washington's administration. Oakes Angier, a young lawyer, Hon. William Baylies and Judge Howard were other prominent and frequent visitors. Lieutenant Howard died in 1700. His property was appraised in October, the next year. It consisted of about four hundred and fifty acres of land, and his estate was valued at about 840 pounds."

John Howard married Martha, a daughter of Thomas Hayward, one of the original proprietors of Bridgewater, who came on the ship "Hercules," in 1635, from Sandwich, county of Kent, England, with five children and three brothers. She died before 1703. The children of this marriage were: John, James, Jonathan, Elizabeth, Sarah, Bethiah and Ephraim.

(II) Major Jonathan, son of John and Martha (Hayward) Howard, date of birth unknown, died before 1739. When he was twenty-one years of age or more in 1685, he received one of the "Young Men's Shares," so called, a grant of land given to young men who previously owned no land. He inherited from his father forty-nine acres of land where he resided and where Frank L. Howard now lives, and also other landed property. He was active in the affairs of the church, and in 1694 he and another were appointed by the town to inspect and take notice of any disorder among the young persons in the galleries of the church on the Sabbath and to declare them by name after the exercises were over. His estate was settled and apportioned in 1739. He married (first) January 8, 1689, Susanna, daughter of Rev. James Keith, who probably died the same year. He married (second) Sarah Dean, about 1692, and they had nine children: Jonathan, Joshua, Susanna, Ebenezer, Seth, Abiel, Sarah, Henry and Keziah.

(III) Jonathan (2), eldest child of Jonathan (1) and Sarah (Dean) Howard, was born in part of old Bridgewater, now West Bridgewater, December 9, 1692, died there May 18, 1769. He married, July 30, 1719, Sarah, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Ames) Field, of Bridgewater, now West Bridgewater. She died there September 20, 1777, aged seventy-eight years. Their children were: Nathan, Charity, Susanna, Sarah, Jonathan, Amy and Betty.

(IV) Nathan, son of Jonathan (2) and Sarah (Field) Howard, was born March 17, 1720, died after October 14, 1799, the date on which he made his will. His son Jonathan was his executor. He married, June 11, 1746, Jane, daughter of Major Edward and Mary (Byram) Howard, of what is now West Bridgewater. She died June 29, 1791, aged seventy years. Their children were: Nathan, Jonathan, Gamaliel, Bezaliel, Thaddeus, Artemas, Sarah and Jane.

(V) Rev. Bezaliel, fourth son of Nathan and Jane (Howard) Howard, was born in Bridgewater, November 22, 1753, died January 20, 1837. He was a corporal in Captain Eliakim Howard's company, Colonel Edward Mitchell's regiment, which marched from Bridgewater to Braintree Neck, March 4, 1776, and was in service six days. He became a student at Harvard College and graduated from that institution in 1781, and afterward received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity, and was made fellow of the American Academy. Three years after his graduation (1784), he settled in the ministry at Springfield, where he was pastor of the First Congregational Church from 1785 to 1803, eighteen years. In 1819 he became a Unitarian. He is characterized as having had "a conservative disposition," and as being "sincere, frank, and quaint." He married (first) December 10, 1785, Lucinda, daughter of Jonathan Dwight, of Springfield, who died March 18, 1788, aged twenty. He married (second) Prudence, daughter of Ezekiel and Prudence Williams, of Wethersfield, Connecticut. He had five children, one by the first wife and four by the second: Lucinda Dwight, Margaret, John, Charles, Ezekiel.

(VI) Charles, son of Rev. Bezaliel and Prudence (Williams) Howard, was born in Springfield, March 21, 1794, died September 18, 1875. In politics he was a Democrat. He was a lifelong resident of Springfield. He married, June 21, 1824, Elizabeth Buckminster Dwight, (see Dwight VI), who was born in Springfield, February 18, 1801, died October 7, 1855, daughter of Colonel Thomas and Hannah (Worthington) Dwight. They had ten children: Lucinda Orne, Thomas Dwight, Elizabeth Bridge, Sophia Worthington, Catherine Lathrop, Mary Dwight, Sarah Bancroft, Emily Williams, Amelia Peabody, John.

(VII) Rev. Thomas Dwight, son of Charles and Elizabeth B. (Dwight) Howard, was born in Springfield, December 25, 1826. His preparatory education was obtained in the common schools and in private institutions, and in 1844 he entered Harvard College, from which he took the degree of A. B. in 1848. In the subsequent three years he pursued the study of theology in the same institution. He entered upon the work of the ministry in December, 1851, serving as pastor of the First Unitarian Church until February 1, 1862, in which year he went to Hilton Head, South Carolina, where he became general superintendent of contrabands living on plantations. He served as chaplain of the Eighty-eighth United States Colored Infantry from January 20, 1864 to August 11, 1864; chaplain of the Seventy-eighth United States Colored Infantry from August 24, 1864, to January 6, 1866; was pastor of churches successively in Berlin, Wisconsin, from March 1, 1866, to May 1, 1868; in Sheboygan, Wisconsin, July 1, 1868, to September, 1869; in Petersham from May 1, 1870, to July 1, 1874; secretary of commissioner of prisons, with office at State House, Boston, Massachusetts, from July 1, 1874, to January 1, 1879. March 5, 1880, he removed to Charlestown, New Hampshire, where he was in pastoral charge of a church for twenty-one years, retiring November 1, 1901, to pass the remainder of his life in Springfield, Massachusetts. He spent a full half century in preaching the gospel and in educational work, was an energetic, cheerful and successful worker in the Master's Vineyard, and is now enjoying a well-earned rest in the home of his boyhood, surrounded by a few of his early friends and many who have come to him in the later years. He married, in Perry, Maine, June 8, 1854, Sarah Eaton, of Eastport, Maine, born in Perry, Maine, September 26, 1830, daughter of Dan and Margaret (Bulmer) Eaton (see Eaton VIII).

(The Williams Line).

The immigrant ancestor of the principal subjects of the following sketch was the progenitor of a race unusually prolific of divines, civilians and warriors of the name who have honored the country of their birth. The number and high character and strong influence of the ministers of the gospel of this family is remarkable. Among the distinguished men of the family have been the founder of Williams College, a bishop of the diocese of Connecticut, a president of Yale College, chief justice, and many other learned and useful men.

(1) Robert Williams appears by name among the early members of the church in Roxbury,

Massachusetts, where he became a freeman, May 2, 1638. The place of his birth and early life was for a long time a matter of conjecture; but in 1893, two hundred years after his death, there was found in Norwich, England, an indenture of apprenticeship of Nicholas, son of the late Stephen Williams, of Yarmouth, cordwainer (shoemaker), to Robert Williams, and another record stating that Robert was in 1635 warden of the guild of cordwainers and sealer of leather for the city of Norwich. Later was found in the register of the church of St. Nicholas at Great Yarmouth, a record of the marriage of Stephen Williams and Margaret Cooke, September 22, 1605. Also baptisms of the following named children: Robert, December 11, 1608; Nicholas, August 11, 1616; John, February 2, 1618; Frances, June 10, 1621. There was an elder sister, Ann; Robert was born in July, 1607; was baptized when eighteen months old in December, 1608; was married to Elizabeth Stalham probably before 1630, and had four children, two sons and two daughters, born to him in England, all of whom accompanied him to America. In 1905 it was discovered that Elizabeth Stalham was baptized in 1595, which shows that she was nearly thirteen years older than her husband. "She was of a good family and had been delicately reared and when her husband desired to come to America, though a truly religious woman, she dreaded the undertaking and shrank from the hardships to be encountered. While the subject was still under consideration she had a dream forshadowing that if she went to America she would become the mother of a long line of worthy ministers of the gospel. The dream so impressed her that she cheerfully rose up and began to prepare to leave her home and kindred for the new and distant land." The dream was fulfilled, but not in the mother's day, for she died October 24, 1674, leaving no son in the christian ministry. Nine years afterward, her grandsons, John and William Williams, cousins, graduated from Harvard College, two of a class of three and the day of fulfillment began. Robert Williams was much interested in education and made liberal arrangements to assist the free schools, was a subscriber to and for many years a trustee of the funds raised for their benefit, and was one of the most influential men in the town affairs. He disposed of his property by a will, which is still extant. The children of John and Elizabeth, so far as known, were: Samuel, Mary, a daughter, John, Isaac, Stephen and Thomas.

(II) Captain Isaac, supposed to have been the third son of Robert and Elizabeth (Stalham) Williams, was born in Roxbury, September 1, 1638, died February 11, 1809. "He settled in Newtown, which then included Cambridge. He represented the town in the General Court five or six years, and it is said that he commanded a troop of horse." He is referred to by his own son, Rev. William Williams, as well as by Mrs. Pitkin and others as Captain Williams. He married (first) Martha Park, daughter of Deacon William Park, of Roxbury, and sister of the wife of his brother Samuel. Deacon Park was a man of property and note in the town and represented it in the legislature for many years. He died May 10 or 11, 1685, at the age of seventy-nine. Martha died in October, 1674, and Captain Williams married (second) Judith Cooper. The children of first wife were: Isaac, Martha, William, John, Eleazer, Thomas and Hannah. The children of second wife were: Peter, Sarah and Ephraim.

(III) Rev. William, second son of Captain Isaac and Martha (Park) Williams, was born in Newton, February 2, 1665, died August 29, 1741. He graduated from Harvard College in 1683, entered the ministry, and was settled over the church in Hatfield in 1685, before he was twenty-one years old. "There he continued laboring with great zeal and exerting a wide influence till death put a period to both his ministry and his life." Rev. Jonathan Edwards preached his funeral sermon, in which he describes him as a christian scholar and minister more fully than any writing furnished by his contemporaries is known to have done. Dr. Charles Chauncey, in a letter to President Stiles, comparing him with Rev. Solomon Stoddard, of Northampton, writes: "Mr. Williams of Hatfield, his son-in-law, I believe to have been the greater man, and I am ready to think greater than any of his own sons, though they were all men of more than common understanding." The following inscription is on the tablet erected to his memory in the cemetery in Hatfield: "The tomb of the Rev. William Williams, the evangelical pastor of Hatfield, who died 29 August, 1741, in the 76th year of his age and the 56th of his ministry" "My flesh shall rest in hope, for Jesus said I am the resurrection and the life." Mr. Williams married (first) Elizabeth, daughter of Rev. Seaborn Cotton, of Hampton, New Hampshire, son of the celebrated Rev. John Cotton, of Boston. She died May 7, 1698, and he married (second) August 9, 1699, Christian Stoddard, third daughter of Rev. Solomon Stoddard, of Northampton. She died April 23, 1764, aged eighty-seven. The children by wife Elizabeth were: William (died young), William, Martha, Elisha and John. Those by wife Christian were: Solomon, Elizabeth, Israel and Dorothy.

(IV) Rev. Dr. Solomon, son of Rev. William and Christian (Stoddard) Williams, was born January 4, 1701, at Hatfield, died February 28, 1776, in Lebanon, Connecticut. He graduated at Harvard College in 1719, and was ordained pastor of the church in Lebanon, Connecticut, December 5, 1722. Sprague says: "Dr. Williams undoubtedly held a place among the most prominent of the New England clergy. His influence was felt among the churches not only in Connecticut, but throughout New England, and his services were very often called for on important public occasions. He had an extensive correspondence in Europe and America, and among his correspondents abroad he numbered one or more of the Erskines and the celebrated Maclaurin, author of the well known sermon 'Glorying in the Cross.'" Dr. Williams was a fellow of Yale College from 1749 to 1769, and received the degree of D. D. from that institution in 1773. He was the pastor of a patriotic, spirited, self-sacrificing people. How much this may have been owing to his own influence cannot now be known with certainty. Trumbull, the only colonial governor who supported the American cause—the wise and efficient friend and counselor of Washington, on whom he depended in the most trying emergencies—had studied theology with Dr. Williams after leaving college, and was his neighbor and parishioner as long as the good pastor lived. Certain it is that they were in full accord in their spirit of resistance to British oppression, and that the voice and pen of Solomon Williams and his son William did much to inspire the people, abroad as well as at home, with ardor and courage for the strife. Dr. Williams shone in the sacred desk with peculiar lustre. His whole deportment was such as greatly recommended the ministerial character—grave, devout, solemn, affectionate and animating. In prayer he was copious, fervent, unaffected, devout, spiritual; endowed with an amiable talent of adapting himself to every varying occasion, and omitting nothing which was pertinent, yet always concise, never tedious. But the art, the talent of preaching, was all his own. He was truly a primitive apostolic Christian divine and preacher. In his family he was an example of conjugal tenderness and parental affection; remarkable for the care and pains which he took to give the best education to his children in every regard. Dr. Williams married, January 22, 1723, about the time of his settlement in Lebanon, Mary, daughter of Hon. Samuel and Joanna (Cooke) Porter, of Hadley, who was born November 4, 1703, and died September 30, 1787. The house in which he lived and in which his children were born, a good sample of an old New England colonial house, remained in the hands of his descendants for a hundred years or more, and is still standing in good preservation in old Lebanon, not far from the house in which his distinguished son William lived. The children of this marriage were: Solomon (died young), Solomon, Eliphalet, Ezekiel, William, Mary, Christian, Moses, Samuel and Eunice.

(V) Ezekiel, son of Rev. Solomon and Mary (Porter) Williams, was born in Lebanon, Connecticut, May 4, 1729, died in Wethersfield, February 12, 1818. Of the five sons of his father who lived to maturity he was the only one who did not receive a college education. He was of a very ardent, active temperament, and probably preferred business to study. December 12, 1752, land in Wethersfield was conveyed to Elisha Williams Jr., and Ezekiel Williams, both of Wethersfield. From this it is inferred that Ezekiel Williams settled at an early age in Wethersfield and engaged in active business. In 1759 he bought the land upon which he soon after built the large house now standing at the head of Broad street, in which his children were born and reared. He was appointed sheriff for the county of Hartford, then an office of more honor than now. His character and official service have been written of as follows: "During the time that tried men's souls, he was warm and active in the cause of his country. Silas Deane sneeringly calls his ardor 'boiling zeal.' During most of the time of the Revolutionary War, he was commissary of prisoners for the State of Connecticut, and his voluminous correspondence with the venerable Boudinot, commissary general, shows that the duties were arduous. In addition to this he held the office of sheriff of the county of Hartford, which he resigned in the year 1789, after twenty-two years of service." It is further stated: "He was appointed by the General Assembly captain of the first company of the Sixth Regiment of Connecticut Militia in May, 1761. The same authority also appointed him sheriff of Hartford county in 1767. He was (with

Mr. Pitkin, Thomas Seymour, and Oliver Ellsworth) on the Committee of the Pay Table from April, 1775, to the end of the Revolutionary War accounts of the colony and state. In May, 1775, he with ten others were constituted a commission to take charge of the prisoners of war of Connecticut. In May, 1777, upon the request of Congress, the General Assembly appointed him commissary of prisoners. He was thereafter called deputy commissary general and usually titled colonel." He was many years, from 1774 until his death in 1818, deacon of the Church of Christ in Wethersfield. His official duties were discharged with great promptitude and fidelity. He was uncompromising in his principles, active in the cause of Christ, and devoted to the welfare of his fellowmen. His hand was ever open to the calls of the poor and destitute, and his heart devised liberal things for the benevolent operations of the day. He was a tender and loving husband, and an affectionate, anxious father. His solicitude for his children, especially for his sons, led him to secure for them the best teachers at home, and to place them under eminent instructors abroad. Ezekiel Williams married, November 6, 1760, Prudence Stoddard, his second cousin, daughter of Colonel John Stoddard, of Northampton, Massachusetts. She was born March 28, 1734, died July 1, 1822. Her temperament was just the reverse of that of her husband, and though his profuse hospitality often interfered with her domestic arrangements, it is believed that it never disturbed her equanimity or disposed her to check his kindly impulse. Their children were: Emily, John, Harriet, Ezekiel, Prudence, Mary, Esther, Solomon Stoddard, Christian, Thomas Scott, and Samuel Porter.

(VI) Prudence, third daughter of Sheriff Ezekiel and Prudence (Stoddard) Williams, was born in Wethersfield, Connecticut, October 2, 1767, died March 24, 1853, in Springfield, Massachusetts. She married, May 12, 1790, Rev. Bezaliel Howard, D. D. (see Howard V). A sketch of her says: "She was a most gentle being, of very calm exterior and almost unfit to cope with the harsher world without." Rev. Dr. Sprague, a near neighbor and friend, said: "Mrs. Howard was a highly intellectual and benevolent lady." In her youth she was a person of great beauty.

(The Dwight Line)

The Dwight family have been very widely noted for their love of liberty, their belief in progress, and their readiness to adopt progressive ideas looking to the continued advancement of humanity and civilization. Many of the men of this family are remarkable for their natural executive ability under whatsoever conditions may confront them, whether in material concerns or matters affecting the higher interests of the community.

(1) John Dwight, who is believed to be the ancestor of nearly all of the name in New England, came with his wife Hannah and a daughter Hannah and two sons, Timothy and John, from Dedham, England, to America, in the latter part of 1634, or the beginning of the year 1635. The Dedham records, which began September 1, 1635, on the day when the first town meeting was held, show that twelve persons assembled together at that time, of whom John Dwight was one. The record of the settlement in brief is as follows: In the year 1635, the general court then sitting at Newtown, granted a tract of land south of the Charles river to twelve men. The next year, nineteen persons including the first twelve petitioned the general court then at Boston for an additional grant of all the lands south of Charles river and above the falls, not before granted, and for a tract five miles square, on the north side of Charles river, for the purpose of making a settlement. The petition was granted, and included the present towns of Dedham, Medfield, Wrentham, Needham, Billingham, Walpole, Franklin, Dover, Natick, and a part of Sherburne. The original nineteen grantees, of whom John Dwight was one, were the sole owners of these large tracts of land, until they admitted new associates, which they did, at first, without demanding any compensation. There is a tradition in the family that John Dwight was a woolcomber, or at least the son of a woolcomber. He brought with him to New England it is said a valuable estate, and was a wealthy farmer of Dedham, and eminently useful as a citizen and Christian in that town. In Winthrop's Journal it is stated that John Dwight and others conveyed the first water mill to Dedham, in September, 1635. John Dwight, besides his homestead, owned thirty acres of dividend land in Watertown, and was grantee in the great dividends, and in the Beaver Brook Plowlands, both of which he sold to David Fiske. In "the first great dividend" of land, bounded on the south by Beaver Brook Plowlands, his lot was No. 21 (among 31) and his number of acres thirty. The first free school supported by a town tax, that was ever thought of in America, was established at Dedham in 1644. Three of the forty-one persons that were assembled on February 1, 1644-45, in Dedham, in town meeting, and voted such a measure, which was far in advance of their day, were Ralph Wheelock, John Dwight and Richard Everett, ancestors respectively of three subsequent college presidents of their own names: Dr. Wheelock, of Dartmouth, President Dwight, of Yale; and Edward Everett, of Harvard. Of the committee of five feeffees (or trustees) to whom the management of the school was committed, two were John Dwight and Michael Powell. That John Dwight was the second man of wealth in Dedham is evident from his being second on the assessment roll for taxes. He was admitted freeman May 2, 1638. In 1630 he signed the constitution or covenant of Dedham. He is described in the town records as "having been publicly useful," and "a great peacemaker." He was selectman for sixteen years, 1639-55. He was one of the founders of the Church of Christ, which was formed in Dedham in 1638. His wife Hannah died September 5, 1656, and he married (second) Mrs. Elizabeth Ripley, widow of William Ripley, and previously of Thomas Thaxter, January 20, 1658. She died without issue July 17, 1660. The children of John and Hannah Dwight were: Hannah, Timothy, John, Mary and Sarah.

(11) Captain Timothy, eldest son of John and Hannah Dwight, was born in England in 1629, died in Dedham, Massachusetts, January 31, 1718. He came to this country with his father's family in 1634-35, at the age of five. He was admitted freeman 1655. He was cornet of a troop in his younger years, and afterwards a captain of foot. He went out ten times against Indians—nine of whom he killed or took prisoners—such was the constant guerilla warfare that they kept up against the town. The land granted to the first settlers of Dedham was subject to the Indian title, which they were bound by law of the colony to extinguish by equitable contract. In 1660 two agents were appointed to treat with the Sagamores who owned Wollomonopoag (now Wrentham), who were Richard Ellis and Timothy Dwight. They reported in 1662 that they had made a treaty with King Philip for lands six miles square, and exhibited his deed thereof under his hand and seal. After six days the town ratified the deed, and assumed their common rights, to the amount of twenty-four pounds, ten shillings, as the stipulated price to King Philip for his deed. In November, 1660,

Philip, (Sagamore) of Mt. Hope, offered a treaty for his lands not yet purchased. The selectmen appointed accordingly Timothy Dwight and four others to repair to him on the morrow, with authority to treat with him for his remaining right thereabouts "provided that he can show that he has any, and provided that he will secure the town against future claims of other Sachems." In 1681 it was voted that all deeds and other writings relating to the town rights should be collected for the purpose of being more carefully preserved. After the vote had been duly published, Captain Fisher and Captain Timothy Dwight brought to the selectmen seven Indian deeds. These writings were ordered to be deposited in a box kept by Deacon Aldis, but they were not recorded, and are not now to be found. Timothy Dwight was for ten years town clerk, selectman for twenty-five years (1664-89), and a representative of the town in the general court (1691-92), before the new charter, and perhaps later. It is recorded of him that "he inherited the estate and virtues of his father, and added to both." He is thus described in the church records: "Timothy Dwight, Esq., a gentleman truly serious and godly, one of an excellent spirit, peaceable, generous, charitable, and a great promoter of the true interests of the church and town." Rev. Samuel Dexter, pastor of the First Church in Dedham for thirty years, says, in "A Century Discourse," preached November 23, 1738: "I shall only add that beside those in the ministry this church and town have been favored with very valuable and worthy men in the magistracy, and others in a more private sphere. A Lusher, a Fisher, and a Dwight have been among our men of renown." Worthington says of him, in his History of Dedham: "He was admitted into the church in 1652. He was the town recorder, selectman, and an agent in much town business during the lives of Lusher and Fisher. He was also, after their decease, a deputy to the general court. He was a faithful and upright man, and greatly esteemed for his personal merit and for his public services." "John Dwight and Captain Timothy Dwight are, from their active participation in the first crystallizing processes of civil society upon our shores, historic characters in the family, and should be so remembered in it rather than in their own separate individuality," writes Benjamin W. Dwight in his "History of the Descendants of John Dwight." In 1707 Timothy Dwight conveyed by deed of gift several tracts of land to his son Michael and his other sons. On May 12, 1710, he settled his estate and gave his property to his sons. He was buried in the cemetery at Dedham. Captain Timothy Dwight married (first) November 11, 1651, Sarah Sibley, (as named in her father's will). In the town records she is called Sarah Perham. She was probably a widow, bearing the latter name, at the time of her marriage. She died in childbrith, May 29, 1652. He married (second) May 3, 1653, Sarah Powell, daughter of Michael Powell. Michael Powell was a representative from Dedham to the general court in 1641-48. He afterward removed to Boston and taught without ordination in the second church of Boston, previously to the settlement of the first minister, Increase Mather. Sarah died June 27, 1664, and Timothy married (third) January 9, 1665, Anna Flynt, daughter of Rev. Henry Flynt, of Braintree (now Quincy), and Margery (Hoar) Flynt. She was born September 11, 1643, died January 29, 1686. He married (fourth) January 7, 1687, Mary Edwind, widow, of Reading. She died without issue August 30, 1688. He married (fifth) July 31, 1690, Esther Fisher, daughter of Hon. Daniel Fisher. She died January 30, 1691. He married (sixth) February 1, 1692, Bethiah Moss. She died February 6, 1718, without issue. The tradition is repeated and positive in different family lines that he and his sixth wife were buried together on the same day in the family vault. Captain Dwight had fourteen children. Those by Sarah Powell, second wife, were: Timothy, Sarah (died young), John, Sarah (died young); by Anna Flynt, third wife: Josiah (died young), Nathaniel, Samuel (died young), Josiah, Seth, Anna (died young), Henry Michael, Daniel, and Jabez (died young).

(III) Captain Henry, son of Captain Timothy and Anna (Flynt) Dwight, was born in Dedham, December 19, 1676, died in Hatfield, March 26, 1732. Nathaniel Dwight, of Northampton, and Henry Dwight, of Hatfield, brothers, were induced to remove from their paternal home at Dedham to Western Massachusetts, in the following way: "The General Court had given to the town of Dedham eight thousand acres of land, to be located anywhere within the jurisdiction of the court, in exchange for two thousand acres granted by that town to the Natick Indians, converted under John Eliot. Lieutenant Fisher and John Fairbanks were appointed commissioners to examine the country and locate the claim. This they did, and selected Deerfield as the spot, and employed

Major John Pynchon of Springfield to purchase the lands of the Petumtuck tribe of Indians, taking him in, with some others also, as joint proprietors with them in the purchase. He paid the Indians some £94 and a half as purchase money, which had been raised for the purpose by the people of Dedham." Thus it was that the lowlands of the Connecticut in Western Massachusetts became early known as Dedham, and thus that the course of the two chief progenitors of the Dwight family in the third generation became determined thitherward. Captain Henry Dwight was active in the subsequent purchase of the territory, comprising the towns of Great Barrington, Sheffield, Egremont, Alford, etc., in what is now Berkshire county. A copy of the original deed of purchase and sale may be found in the records as given by Cankepot, Poneyote, Partarwake, Naur nauquin, and other Indians. "All of Housatonack, for four hundred and sixty pounds, three barrels of cider and thirty quarts of rum, to Colonel John Stoddard, Captain Henry Dwight, and Captain Luke Hitchcock, committee appointed by the General Court to purchase a certain tract of land lying upon Housatonack river." Henry Dwight bought one thousand two hundred acres of this land in June, 1722, for £180. In 1726 Henry Dwight and John Pynchon, of Springfield, and John Ashley, of Westfield, were appointed, by the general court, commissioners under "the Act prepared for issuing £100,000 in bills of credit" for government purposes. From records at Northampton it appears that Captain Dwight had a negro slave, Humphrey, for whom he paid £60, and a slave woman, Rose, for whom he paid a like sum. Captain Dwight was a man of wealth, and always a farmer. He was also a trader at Hatfield. At different times in his earlier history he is designated as "clothier" and "shopkeeper." None but men of means and enterprise could be traders in those days; and none but the best men in the community, "gentlemen" in the technical sense that the word then had, and deacons were licensed "to be inholders, taveners and common victuallers, and to retail strong drink." Captain Henry Dwight was thus licensed in 1728, as Colonel Samuel Partridge before him, who was one of the great men of Western Massachusetts, and chief justice of the court of common pleas for Hampshire county for thirty years. The communion service now used by the Congregational church at Hatfield is said to have been given to it by Captain Henry Dwight nearly two hundred years ago. The Dwights of that day figure largely in Western Massachusetts as jurists. Five of them, all closely related to each other, sat at different times as justices upon the bench of the same court, that of common pleas, of Hampshire county. These were Captain Henry Dwight, of Hatfield, Colonel Dwight, of Northampton, his nephew, two sons of Captain Henry Dwight, namely, Colonel Josiah Dwight, of Springfield, and General Joseph Dwight, of Great Barrington, and Major Timothy Dwight, of Northampton, son of Colonel Timothy Dwight, and father of President Dwight, of Yale. They held the judicial office successively in the order in which they are named. Captain Henry Dwight was judge for five years, 1727-31. Captain Henry Dwight married, August 27, 1702, Lydia Hawley, born July 7, 1680, died April 27, 1748, daughter of Captain Joseph and Lydia (Marshall) Hawley, of Northampton. Their children were: Joseph, Seth, Dorothy, Lydia, Anna (died young), Josiah, Edmund, Simeon, Elisha and Anna.

(IV) Colonel Josiah, son of Captain Henry and Lydia (Hawley) Dwight, was born October 23, 1715, died September 28, 1768. He had the best educational advantages, graduating from Yale in 1736, and was counted a rich man in his time. He owned five thousand acres of land, and was an enterprising, energetic, prosperous man, of high respectability and influence. His property was inventoried at his death as follows: Total of lands, goods, etc., £3,602; good notes, £3,529; mortgages, £1,047; doubtful debts, £1,127; desperate debts, £613; total £9,458. He was a merchant, was a manufacturer of potash, and had an iron foundry. He was conspicuous as a civil and military officer, and was justice of the peace, lieutenant colonel of the militia, and judge of the court of common pleas of Hampshire county. He married (first) about 1750, Sarah Pynchon, born August 14, 1721, daughter of Colonel William Pynchon, of Springfield, and Catherine Brewer, daughter of Rev. Daniel Brewer, of Springfield. She died without issue, August 4, 1755. He married (second) October 17, 1757, Elizabeth Buckminster, born in 1731, died March 10, 1798. She was a daughter of Colonel Buckminster, of Brookfield. Their children were: Thomas, Sarah (died young), Clarissa, Sarah and Josiah.

(V) Hon. Thomas, son of Colonel Josiah and Elizabeth (Buckminster) Dwight, was born October 29, 1758, died January 2, 1819. Like his father he was a college graduate,

Harvard being his alma mater, 1778. He was a lawyer at Springfield, a representative to the general court, 1794-95, twice state senator, 1796-1803, and in 1813 a member of the executive council, 1808-09, and a member of congress, 1803-05. He was a man of ample means, of polished manners, and of most generous hospitality. He was short and stout in figure, and dignified in bearing. He married, April 14, 1791, Hannah Worthington, born June 17, 1761, died July 10, 1833, daughter of John Worthington, of Springfield, and Hannah Hopkins, daughter of Rev. Samuel Hopkins, of West Springfield, and Esther Edwards, sister of President Jonathan Edwards. It has been said of Mrs. Dwight: "She was one of nature's noble women; she was also a great wit, was very fine looking, and had superior endowments of mind." The children of this marriage were: Mary Stoddard, John Worthington, and Elizabeth Buckminster, next mentioned.

(VI) Elizabeth Buckminster, youngest daughter of Colonel Thomas and Hannah (Worthington) Dwight, was born February 18, 1801, died October 7, 1855. She married, June 21, 1824, Charles Howard, of Springfield (see Howard VI).

(VI) Elisha, son of David and Deborah (White) Eaton, was born January 8, 1757, in Tolland, Connecticut, and died in Cornwallis, Nova Scotia, March 9, 1827. He was a farmer and lived and died in the old home, which with the farm has been owned and occupied by his descendants ever since. In front of the house is the river Canard, celebrated in old times for the wild ducks which frequented it, and Elisha is said to have shot partridges from his bedroom window. In the rear, to the northward of the old house is the river Habitant, famous for its shad. Elisha Eaton married, May 31, 1779, Irene Bliss, daughter of Nathaniel and Eunice (Fish) Bliss. She died June 2, 1826, in her sixty-sixth year. She was a descendant in the sixth generation from Thomas Bliss, who came from Belstone parish, Devonshire, England, and of whom an account is given elsewhere in this work. (See Bliss). The children of Elisha and Irene (Bliss) Eaton were: Dan, Enoch, Elisha, William, Lydia, George, David, John, Eunice and James.

(VII) Dan, eldest child of Elisha and Irene (Bliss) Eaton, was born in Cornwallis, Nova Scotia, March 2, 1780, died in Perry, Maine, September 2, 1864. In 1818 he built a vessel at Scots' Bay, Nova Scotia, and called her "The Martha," after his first wife. He removed from Nova Scotia to Maine in 1825, his family with the exception of his youngest daughter, Sarah, having been born in Nova Scotia. He was a merchant in both Nova Scotia and Maine. His son William Wentworth wrote of him: "He was always a cheerful, healthy, vigorous man. I never knew his seat at table vacant from indisposition. He was always a kind father, friend and neighbor, and thought so much of his children that he never saw any of their faults." He married Martha Knowles, of Newport, Hants county, who died January 10, 1806. He married (second) in the same year, Margaret Bulmer, of Amherst, Nova Scotia, born December 23, 1787, daughter of William and ——— (Forrest) Bulmer, of Amherst, who died June, 1805. The only child by wife Martha was Henry Knowles. The children of Margaret were: Martha, George, William Wentworth, Mary Ann, Irene Deborah, Clarissa Margaret, Daniel Lewis, and Sarah, next mentioned.

(VIII) Sarah, youngest child of Dan and Margaret (Bulmer) Eaton, was born in Perry, Maine, September 26, 1830, married, June 8, 1854, Rev. Thomas D. Howard, a Unitarian clergyman. (See Howard VII). Mrs. Howard is spoken of in the "Genealogical Sketch of the Nova Scotia Eatons, compiled by Rev. Arthur Wentworth Eaton," as "an accomplished and delightful woman." She died at Charlestown, New Hampshire, November 13, 1898, and was buried in its beautiful cemetery, where will be the grave of her husband.

This land was situated in Newton Centre, near the present Lyman street. He had a dispute over the ownership of certain land with Joseph Bartlett, and as early as 1673 Bartlett attempted to put up a house on this land, which was pulled down by Clark. For this he was sued and obliged to pay a fine. It has since been proved that Clark really owned the land in question. (IX) Andrew Jackson, son of Ira Clark, was born in Rutland, Massachusetts, October 9, 1835, died October 14, 1882. His education was meagre; he attended a few terms of the district school. His parents were poor and when they removed to Ware, Massachusetts, in 1842, he went to work in the cotton mill of the Otis Company, and from that time was self-supporting and independent. Three years later the mill was destroyed by fire and the Clark family removed to Grafton, Massachusetts, living in the mill village called New England Village. In the July following the father died. At the age of ten years, Andrew J. became an employee in the cotton mill of Smith & Pratt and continued there until 1849 when with his mother and sisters he removed to the adjacent village of Bramanville in the town of Millbury. After working there for two years in the cotton mill, he removed with the family to Hubbardston, where he worked in a chair factory until 1853. From 1853 to 1857 he was employed in a chair factory in East Templeton in the same county. He then engaged in the manufacture of children's carriages on his own account at Orange., an adjacent town. He admitted to partnership in the business Mr. J. Lord in 1858; in 1860 Mr. Clark sold his interests in the firm and opened a store in the Carpenter Block, Orange, and carried on a flourishing business in flour and grain. He sold out in 1863 to begin the manufacture of sewing machines in partnership with W. P. Barker, under the firm name of Clark & Barker. The business was established in the small building now occupied by the Chase Turbine Water-Wheel Company. With two machinists the firm began the making of a low-price, single thread sewing machine, known as the New England sewing machine. The business grew rapidly and in 1865, when Mr. Clark bought the interests of Mr. Barker, the firm was employing forty men. From 1865 to 1867 Mr. Clark was alone in business. Then the firm became Johnson, Clark & Company for two years, incorporating the business in 1866 as the Gold Medal Sewing Machine Company with Andrew J. Clark as president. Later this corporation's name was changed to the New Home Sewing Machine Company, Mr. Clark continuing president of the company as long as he lived. The business grew to very large proportions and the machine manufactured here is known all over the world. The New Home sewing machine for more than a generation has been one of the popular machines in American households. Mr. Clark displayed great business acumen and foresight in his methods. He mastered the art of advertising and creating a demand for his machine as well as the technical details of construction and workmanship. Mr. Clark was prominent in public life; in 1864 and 1867 he was representative to the general court from his district; served on various important committees and wielded

(II) Thomas (2) Sawyer,

SAWYER son of Thomas (1) Sawyer, was born in Lancaster, Massachusetts, July 2, 1649, the first white child born there. His capture by the Indians forms one of the most familiar stories of the colonial period in Massachusetts. He was a man of fifty-five when the event took place, and was living in the garrison. Queen Anne's war was making the lives of the colonists unsafe, especially on the frontier. Indians made frequent attacks and massacred men, women and children. On October 16, 1695, Thomas Sawyer Jr., his son Elias, and John Bigelow, of Marlborough, were at work in his saw mill, when they were surprised and captured by the Indians. The Indians took their captives to Canada and turned Bigelow and young Sawyer over to the French to ransom. They kept Thomas Sawyer to put to death by torture. Sawyer proposed to the French governor that he should build a saw mill on the Chamblay river, in consideration of saving his life from the Indians, and giving the three captives their freedom. The French needed the mill, and were glad of the opportunity. But the Indians had to be reckoned with. They insisted on burning Thomas Sawyer at the stake. They knew him and knew he was a brave man, not afraid of torture and death. The crafty French governor defeated their purpose by a resort to the church. When Sawyer was tied to the stake, a French friar appeared with a key in his hand, and so terrible did he paint the tortures of purgatory, the key of which he told them he held in his hand ready to unlock, that they gave up their victim. Indians fear the unseen more than the real dangers, and doubtless the friar took care not to specify what he would do in case the auto-de-fe was carried on. Sawyer built the mill successfully, the first in Canada, it is said. He and Bigelow came home after seven or eight months of captivity. Elias Sawyer was kept a year longer to run the mill and teach others to run it. The captives were well treated after the French found them useful to them. Thomas Sawyer married (first) Sarah ——— in 1670; (second) in 1672, Hannah ———; (third) in 1718, Mary White. He died in Lancaster, September 5, 1736, and his grave there is marked by a stone. His will dated December 15, 1735, proved November 3, 1736, mentions four sons and two daughters. He bequeathed twelve pounds to purchase a communion vessel for the Lancaster church. Children: 1. William, of Bolton. 2. Joseph, mentioned below. 3. Bazaleel. 4. Elias. 5. Mary, married Josiah Rice, of Marlborough. 6. Hannah, married Jonathan Moore, of Bolton. 7. (Perhaps) Sarah, married Rev. Nathaniel Whitman, of Deerfield.

(III) Joseph, son of Thomas (2) Sawyer, was born about 1675. He died before 1739 when his eldest son Joseph deeded to his brothers, Thomas Sawyer, of Bolton, and Abner Sawyer, of Lancaster, a quarter of his double share of the estate of his father, Joseph, but "not my right in the thirds," by deed dated March 31, 1739. Children, baptized together June 22, 1718, in the First Church of Lancaster: 1. Joseph, married Tabitha Prescott; son Joseph was born 1738, according to guardianship papers. 2. Sarah. 3. Thomas, mentioned below. 4. Abner, born 1711, married, April 8, 1736, Mary Miller and had six daughters mentioned in his will, all born at Lancaster; his wife was admitted to the church, June 10, 1737, and he died at Sterling, December 6, 1758; estate divided among five daughters and widow; daughter Keziah married Ezra Sawyer, a cousin; Joseph Sawyer is said to have built the first mills at the village called Sawyer Mills in Lancaster, now in Boylston, and Abner owned the mills later. 5. Aaron, died aged forty-three; owned part of father's grist mill and his son bought the saw mill of his uncle Abner. (Aaron's name was not given in the list of those baptized). 6. Asenath. 7. Mary.

(IV) Thomas (3) Sawyer, son of Joseph Sawyer, was born in Lancaster, 1705-10, and settled when a young man in the adjoining town of Bolton. He built a mill on Jackson pond in Winchendon in 1765; another mill on Otter river for his son Thomas in 1762-63, and other mills at Baldwinsville in 1767-68. He deeded land to his son Abner, lots 5, 6, 36, 50, etc., in Templeton, September 3, 1763; to his son Hooker, July 7, 1766. Children: 1. Thomas, lived in Bolton; was there in 1790; married Prudence Carter, 1762. 2. Hooker. 3. Abner, mentioned below.

(V) Lieutenant Abner, son of Thomas (3) Sawyer, was born in Bolton in 1742, died in Templeton, September 4, 1779 (gravestone). He was a soldier in the revolution; second lieutenant in Captain Ephraim Stockwell's company (Twelfth), Colonel Nathan Sparhawk's regiment (Seventh) of Worcester county, chosen at Rutland district (Barre), July 5, 1776, and commissioned December 10, 1776; lieutenant in Captain Josiah Wilder's company, Colonel Nathan Sparhawk's regiment in 1777, and first lieutenant also in the same company in 1778. He settled in Templeton. He married, at Bolton, May 26, 1763, Hannah Piper, as recorded at Templeton. Children, born at Templeton: 1. Silas, March 6, 1764, died November 21, 1841, at Phillips-ton; married, 1785, Mary Ross; (second) Elizabeth, who died March 9, 1840, aged seventy-seven; (third) Mrs. Grace Howe (intention April 19, 1841), of Petersham, died November 26, 1841. 2. Phineas Houghton, October 1, 1779 (posthumous).

(VI) Abner (2), son of Abner (1) Sawyer, was born in Templeton, August 26, 1766. Jonathan Jones was appointed his guardian, October 2, 1780, after the death of his father, and Paul Kendall was appointed guardian of his brother Thomas. He removed to Athol from Templeton. Abner Sawyer deeded land in Templeton, May 4, 1790, to his brother Silas. He removed from Athol to Northfield about 1796, with his brother Thomas. A deed of the heirs of his father to Hooker Lamb, dated January 8, 1834, gives the residences of his brothers and sisters, viz: Silas and wife Elizabeth Sawyer and Hannah Lamb, of Philipston, Massachusetts; Phebe Lamb, widow, of Templeton; Abner Sawyer, of Northfield; Thomas Sawyer and wife Olive Sawyer, of Brooks, Maine. The homestead conveyed by this deed was on the south side of the county road. He married Eunice ———. The elder children were probably born at Athol. Children: 1. Josiah, married, December 1, 1822, Adeline Griswold. 2. Benjamin, mentioned below. Born at Northfield; 3. Joel, born June 5, 1796, died October 15, 1796. 4. Keziah, November 1, 1803, died December 13, 1826.

(VII) Benjamin, son of Abner (2) Sawyer, was born in Northfield or Athol. He settled in Northfield and had a saw mill on the Natanis or Bennet's brook. About 1827 the dam gave way, one house was destroyed and considerable damage done to the lands below. He married Charlotte Griswold. Children, born at Northfield: 1. Rebecca, 1819. 2. Benjamin, 1820. 3. Charlotte G., 1822. 4. Lucy B., 1824, died 1825. 5. Lucy B., 1826. 6. John Flavel, 1827, mentioned below. 7. Elizabeth T., 1829.

(VIII) John Flavel, son of Benjamin Sawyer, was born in Northfield, November 12, 1827, died November 21, 1858. He was educated in the public schools, and like many of his ancestors was a miller, owning a grist mill in Shelburne Falls. He married, February 25, 1857, Susan Hunt, born April 27, 1827, died November 7, 1907, daughter of Captain Salmon and Statira (Smead) Hunt, of Halifax, Vermont. After the death of her husband she was for several years a clerk in the postoffice at Shelburne Falls and then opened a book and stationery store and news room in the hotel block in 1863. She was in business there for the next seventeen years, and then located in Wood's block, where the business has since been conducted. Six years before her death she withdrew from active management of the store, which has since been conducted by her only son, Herman J. Sawyer, but she continued to visit the store almost every day until March, 1907. She was one of the oldest merchants of Shelburne Falls and had a large circle of friends there and in the surrounding towns. Her pluck at the beginning of her career in business, her good judgment, her upright and honorable methods, her courtesy and consideration for everybody during the forty years of her business life won the respect, admiration and confidence which she enjoyed in the community. She left one son, Herman John, born February 19, 1858, mentioned below.

(IX) Herman John, son of John Flavel Sawyer, was born at Shelburne Falls, February 19, 1858, and was educated in the public schools of that village. He became associated in business with his mother as clerk in December, 1863. For fifteen years he was manager of the store and since the death of his mother has been the owner of the business. He is a member of Mountain Lodge of Free Masons. In politics he is a Republican; in religion an attendant of the Universalist church. He married, January 26, 1886, Lillie Roana Miller, born February 19, 1862, daughter of David and Sarah (Kendrick) Miller, of Williamsburg, Massachusetts.

There is no mention of this surname in any of the books on English surnames, and the origin of the name is unknown. A family of the name lived in England, however, in the sixteenth century.

(1) Bernard Capen, immigrant ancestor of the old American families of this name, was born in England in 1562 and came to New England from county Dorset about 1630 in the ship "Mary and John." He was a proprietor and one of the original grantees of Dorchester Massachusetts, August 5, 1633. He was admitted a freeman, May 25, 1636. He married "on Monday in Whitsun week, 1596," Joan Purchase, daughter of Oliver Purchase. The "Widow Purchase" whose name is first mentioned August 5, 1633, in the Dorchester town records in connection with a land grant to Barnard or Bernard Capen and three times afterwards, was quite likely the widow of Oliver Purchase, and mother to Joan and also to Oliver Purchase who with Sarah his wife joined the Dorchester church in 1639. Oliver Purchase was admitted a freeman, December

7, 1636, and removed, according to Savage, early to Taunton, thence to Lynn, where his wife Sarah died October 21, 1671. He married, September 17, 1672, Mary, daughter of Rev. William Perkins; was representative to the general court in 1660 and often after; removed to Concord about 1691 and died there November 20, 1701. His age as given at death varies from eighty-four to eighty-eight years. On the town records at Concord he is styled "Mr. Oliver Purchas yt worthy Gentleman". William Perkins, father to Rev. William, mentioned above, whose daughter Mary was the second wife to Oliver Purchase, of Dorchester, is mentioned in the will of Samuel Purchase, author of the "Pilgrims" as his brother-in-law. Bernard Capen was a shoemaker by trade. His homestead was on what is now Washington street, near Wheatland avenue. The last land granted him was at South Boston, March 18, 1637, "with the Cowes pasture and other land". The family has been prominent in Dorchester from the first settlement to the present time. Among the most influential and useful citizens of the town have been the lineal male descendants of Bernard Capen. He lived but a few years after coming to the new world, and died November 8, 1638, aged seventy-six years. The stone which marked his grave was the first tombstone in the Massachusetts Bay Colony and is now preserved by the New England Historic Genealogical Society, Boston. His will was dated October 9, 1638, and proved November 19, 1652, bequeathing to his wife and son John. He probably had a sister who married George Dyer, whom he called his "brother Dyer," and makes him an overseer of his estate in the will. The widow Joan was born 1578 and died March 26, 1653. The Widow Dorothy Upsall, widow of Nicholas Upsall, of Dorchester, names John Capen as "her brother" and Elizabeth Swift and Honour Hannam as her "sisters." Children, born in England: 1. Bernard, mentioned in his brother James' will. 2. Ruth, born August 7, 1600. 3. Susanna, April 11, 1602, died November 30, 1666; (believed by Stiles and others to have married (first) William Rockwell and (second) Matthew Grant). 4. John, January 26, 1612, mentioned below. 5. James, died in England. His nuncupative will is as follows: "The third day of September A. D. 1628 James Capen of Holborne in the county of Middlesex, scrivener, being sick in body but good of memory did by word of mouth declare his will and purpose how his estate should be disposed of after his death, as followeth: first, he did appoint that his mother Joane Capen the wife of Bernard Capen of Dorchester, in the county of Dorset, shoemaker should, out of the estate of the said James, pay unto his four sisters unmarried four pounds apiece. And all the residue of his moneys, apparell and goods whatsoever he gave to his said mother to do with it according to her mind Whereunto were witnesses Barnard Capen the younger and Jerom Wolverton." (P 1068 Gen. Gleanings in England, Waters). (See genealogy in Thayer Memorial; Pope's Pioneers of Mass. for other references).

(II) Captain John, son of Bernard Capen, was born in England, January 26, 1612. He came from Dorchester, England, with his parents in February, 1630, and settled at Dorchester, Massachusetts. He was admitted a freeman in 1634. He was ordained deacon of the Dorchester church, February 13, 1658, and served thirty-three years and two months in that office. He was selectman of Dorchester sixteen years, representative to the general court six years; town clerk thirteen years; a military officer for fifty years; the last rank he held being that of captain of the entire militia of the town. (VI) John, son of Jonathan (2) Capen, was born February 13, 1755. There were four of the name in the revolution from this section. John Capen and John Capen Jr. served in Dorchester companies. One John Capen, of Stoughton, was in Captain Peter Talbot's company, Colonel Lemuel Robinson's regiment on the Lexington alarm. At the same time another John Capen, of Stoughton, was in Captain William Briggs' company of minute-men. One of these was also in Captain Robert Swan's company, Colonel Benjamin Gill's regiment, and "marched from Stoughton to the Moon" (Squantum) in June, 1776, when Boston was evacuated; also in Nathan Randall's company, Colonel Thomas Marshall's regiment, in 1776. The records show that John (1) was in the revolution, though we cannot point out which service belongs to him. The other John Capen was son of Samuel Capen Jr. He married, October 21, 1779, Patience Drake, both of Stoughton. Children: John, Nathan, Adam, mentioned below, Peter, George.

(VII) Adam, son of John Capen, was born in Stoughton in 1791. He was a farmer, owning land in Stoughton. She is now the principal of the Capen Preparatory School, 26 Prospect street, Northampton, Massachusetts. Most of the young ladies attending this school are fitted there for Smith College. The school was established in 1877 as the Classical School for Girls by Mary A. Burnham, with whom Miss Capen was associated from 1880 until 1885 when Miss Burnham died and Miss Capen took charge of the school. Under her management it has grown from an attendance of sixty pupils to one hundred and fifty. The number of buildings has also been increased, forming the attractive group of buildings known as Miss Capen's School for Girls.

Many of the name were descended from Taillefer, the Norman baron who took part in the battle of Hastings, under William the Conqueror, in 1066, and this name gradually changed to Taylefer, Taylour, Tayleur, Tailer, Tailor, Taylor, etc. Savage gives two John Taylors who swore oath of allegiance in 1678, and in 1679 two of this name swore allegiance on the same day; many other John Taylors are found in early records.

(1) John Taylor, of Hadley, Massachusetts, was born in England about 1639, and died October 17, 1713, at Hadley, where he swore allegiance February 8, 1679. He was a member of the church, and his name is found on the list of fifteen members chosen as a committee to eject a minister who refused to accept his dismissal and continued his preaching until forcibly removed from the pulpit, which was done while he was making his opening prayer. He took part in the Indian war in 1756. His children were: Oliver, Reuben and John.

(IV) Oliver, oldest son of Moses Taylor, was born at South Hadley, Massachusetts, and died March 5, 1846, at Chicopee Falls. Member of Belcher Lodge, F. and A. M., Unity Chapter, Springfield Commandery, and now

(1900) serving as eminent commander, also member of the Shrine; member of Second Congregational Church. He married, June 27, 1895, Florence May Parsons, of Westfield, Massachusetts, and they reside in Chicopee Falls. He has been three times honored by the office of mayor of Chicopee. His children are: Marjorie Brooks, born July 15, 1898, and George Sylvester, who died in infancy.

In 1235 Thomas Gould signs a GOULD document as trustee of the church, and this is the first record found of the name in England. Of the family here described, the first to whom their ancestry can be traced is Thomas, who lived at Bovington, a village in Hertfordshire, not far from London, and who died in 1520. From him the family record is found for several generations in England, and Richard, of the fifth generation, born about 1553, had four children, two of whom, Jeremy and Zaccheus, emigrated to America.

(I) Zaccheus Gould, according to his deposition made in Topsfield, Massachusetts, was born in 1589, and lived at Hemel Hempstead, and later at Great Missenden, Bucks county, England, where he was assessed in 1629. A number of his kindred came to New England about the same time as he, and January 29, 1639-40, his name is found signed as witness to a will. In 1644 he petitioned the general court to set aside part of Ipswich in a village by itself, and this later became Topsfield, Massachusetts. Between 1639 and 1644 he lived at Lynn, Massachusetts, and in 1640 owned a mill on the Saugus river; about this time he signed a petition that husbandmen should be exempt from training in seed, hay and harvest time, and the general court so regulated the dates of training as not to interfere with the proper care of their crops. He took the oath of fidelity in 1651, but never became a freeman, which required a man be a church member. He had many friends among the Baptists and Quakers, both of whom were proscribed, and in 1659 he was fined three pounds for entertaining Quakers, one of them being his nephew. He died between April 30 and November 13, in the year 1668, being probably the largest land-holder in that region, being possessed of about three thousand acres in what was then known as Rowley Village, incorporated later as a separate town under the name of Boxford, upon land purchased from Captain Daniel Patrick (one of the two salaried captains sent by England to instruct the colonists in martial matters). He built his block house north of the Ipswich river and east of Fishing Brook, and later built his second and more comfortable house, where his son and grandchildren later lived. His wife Phebe died at Topsfield, Massachusetts, in 1663. Their children were as follows: 1. Phebe, baptized at Hemel Hempstead, England, September 27, 1620. 2. Mary, December 19, 1621. 3. Martha, June 15, 1623. 4. Priscilla, probably born at Great Missenden. 5. John.

(II) John, the only son of Zaccheus and Phebe Gould, was born June 21, 1630, probably at Great Missenden, England, and died January 26, 1710. In 1663 he was selectman at Topsfield, Massachusetts, also in fourteen subsequent years and in 1702. In 1682 Rev. Joseph Capen records him as fifth in seniority of the males of the church, and his wife second in seniority of the females. He was a prominent man in the community of Topsfield, and his name occurs frequently in the town, county and court records. When a stock company was formed to carry on the smelting of iron ore, he became one of the members, but the venture was not successful. In 1675-76 he took part in the Narragansett campaign, enlisting under Captain Hutchinson in the Three County Troop, and again under Captain Wheeler. In the years following King Philip's war the colonists were much excited over affairs in the mother country, and about 1686 when Dudley took a prominent part in ruling them, and John Gould held a lieutenant's commission he became very out-spoken in his views, for which he was imprisoned in Boston, charged with treason. He finally signed a petition for his release, in which he expressed sorrow for the idle words he had uttered. Soon after this Governor General Andros came to Massachusetts and took charge of affairs. In 1689 John Gould was re-elected selectman, and in 1690 and afterwards he was chosen deputy from Topsfield to the general court. He took great interest in the welfare of the community, was a man of literary habits, and wrote a very good hand for those times. In 1660 he married Sarah, daughter of John Baker, born March 9, 1641, died January 20, 1708-09, and they had eight children, as follows: 1. John, born December 1, 1662, married Phebe French. 2. Sarah, December 18, 1664, married Joseph Bixby. 3. Thomas, February 14, 1666, married (first) Mary Yates and (second) Widow Mary Stanley. 4. Samuel, March 9, 1669-70, married Margaret Stone. 5. Zaccheus, see forward. 6. Priscilla, November 2, 1674, married John Curtice. 7. Joseph, August 24, 1677, married Priscilla Perkins. 8. Mary, June 16, 1681.

(III) Zaccheus (2), son of John and Sarah (Baker) Gould, was born March 26, 1672, at Topsfield, Massachusetts, died April 29, 1739. For many years he was selectman. He married, January 21, 1701-02, Elizabeth, daughter of John Curtice, born December 15, 1679, died June 21, 1740. They had nine children: 1. Elizabeth, born February 13, 1702-03, married Edmund Towne. 2. Mary, March 11, 1704-05, married Jacob Robinson. 3. Priscilla, August 4, 1707, married Samuel Smith. 4. John, January 20, 1709-10, married Widow Esther Bixby. 5. Sarah, January 28, 1711-12, married Isaac Estey. 6. Abigail, August 12, 1715, married Jonathan Stanley. 7. Zaccheus, November 7, 1717, married Rebecca Symonds. 8. Eliezer, see forward. 9. Susanna.

(IV) Eliezer, son of Zaccheus (2) and Elizabeth (Curtice) Gould, was born May 29, 1720, and about 1761 moved to Douglass, Massachusetts. In 1758 he served in an expedition against Ticonderoga and Crown Point. He married (first) April 17, 1740, Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel and Rebecca (Curtis) Smith, born July 8, 1718, died March 27, 1753, and (second) February 25, 1755, Phebe, daughter of John and Phebe (Towne) Gould, of Boxford. By his first wife he had seven children, and by his second wife four, as follows: 1. Eliezer, born September 23, 1741, married Sarah Bigelow. 2. Elizabeth, November 12, 1742, died young. 3. Zaccheus, February 5, 1743-44, married Anne Brown. 4. John, see forward. 5. Huldah, August 1, 1748, died young. 6. Elizabeth, September 22, 1749, married Thomas Lyon, of White Plains, New York. 7. Rebecca, December 31, 1752, married Amos Foster. 8. Bezaleel, July 4, 1756, married (first) Bathsheba Robinson and (second) Widow Dinah Hill. 9. Jedediah, April 7, 1758, died young. 10. Aholiab, June 24, 1759, was killed in 1777 by a cannon ball at capture of Burgoyne. 11. Ebenezer, 1760, married Anna Cook.

(V) John (2), third son of Eliezer and Elizabeth (Smith) Gould, was born March 5, 1745-46, at Topsfield, Massachusetts, died June 26, 1816. In 1789 he removed from Douglass, Massachusetts, to Wardsboro, Vermont, settling in the part now called Dover. He marched to Lexington, April 19, 1775, in Captain Joseph Gould's company. He married, December 3, 1772, Jane, daughter of John and Mary (Cressey) Palmer, of Rowley, born May 26, 1753, died December 10, 1825, and they had eight children, as follows: 1. Enos, born September 5, 1773, married Betsey Johnson. 2. John, July 29, 1775, married Polly Stearns. 3. Aholiab, October 10, 1777, married Jane Sears. 4. Silas, see forward. 5. Huldah, April 2, 1782, married John Emerson. 6. Timothy, February 4, 1787, married Susan Green. 7. Lois, January 31, 1789, married Sylvanus Parmelee. 8. Amos, May 15, 1792, married Polly Johnson.

(VI) Silas, son of John (2) and Jane (Palmer) Gould, was born June 8, 1780, died October 21, 1845. He married, December 11, 1803, Betsey (Johnson) Gould, widow of his brother Enos, and lived in Dover, Vermont. His children were: 1. Alvin, see forward. 2. John P., born September 27, 1806, married Harriet A. Lazelle. 3. Sally, born December 9, 1808, married Gershom Rice. 4. Lucy, October 5, 1811, married John Howard. 5. Olive, February 17, 1814, married Jonas Haven. 6. Lois, May 3, 1817, married William Bailey. 7. Esther, November 20, 1823.

(VII) Alvin, son of Silas and Betsey (Johnson-Gould) Gould, was born July 17, 1804, died April 9, 1849. He married Rebecca Northam, and settled in Manlius, New York. His children were: Henry Alvin, see forward; William U., a resident of New York City.

(VIII) Henry Alvin, son of Alvin and Rebecca (Northam) Gould, was born May, 1828, in Manlius, New York, and died March 10, 1908, in Springfield, Massachusetts. His early years were spent in Manlius and Syracuse, New York, where he attended a common school and also an academy, and at the age of sixteen he began his business career as clerk in a dry goods store at Syracuse, where he remained for four years, then removed to New York City, where for a short time he was employed as clerk in one of the large stores. Later he entered the employ of Doubleday & Seymour, then wholesale and retail stationers, and in 1854 removed to Russell, Massachusetts, where he became clerk for John R. Smith & Company, Cyrus W. Field being a member of the firm. After the death of Mr. Smith the business was bought by Mr. Gould and Charles O. Chapin, of Springfield, Massachusetts, and the name became The Crescent Mills. This firm did business for nearly twenty-five years, with good success, and shortly before the death of Mr. Gould was made a stock company, of which he was president, and associated with him were Charles L. and

Henry G. Chapin, sons of his former partner. Mr. Gould had a long and honorable career in business, and for more than fifty years his energies were devoted to the paper trade; he was director of the Third National Bank of Springfield, and in this capacity was associated with many prominent men. He was of retiring disposition, dearly loved his home, and sought no public office, though he served in 1878-79 in the common council from ward four, under Mayors' Wright and Powers. In his unostentatious way Mr. Gould was a help to many good causes; for twenty years he was one of the trustees of the Springfield Hospital, for a short time acting as president of the board, and was also always much interested in the welfare of the Home for Aged Women, having been very active in its building. Though not a member, for years he attended the Church of the Unity. After his strenuous business career, Mr. Gould spent the last part of his life in comparative leisure, enjoying travel and social contact, joined the Nayasset Club, and also grew fond of the pleasant relations afforded by the advent of the Country Club in Springfield, opening up to many of its members a vista of out-of-door pleasures. By his death Springfield lost a man of agreeable and attractive personality and fine character, one of the small group of older men, and his presence was sadly missed. He had a large circle of friends and acquaintances made through his long identification with the paper business; he was a man of friendly manner, attractive in appearance, and a familiar figure in local life. He lived in Russell until 1871, and in that year built a fine residence on the corner of Maple and Union streets, Springfield, which he occupied until his death. His first wife died in 1883, and a few years later he married Harriet L., daughter of William and Elizabeth Augusta (Benjamin) Bliss, born August 2, 1833, who survives him. He left no children.

MANGEL Christopher Mangel was born in the village of Frankenhien, province of Grandenz, West Prussia, February 23, 1819, and he died February 18, 1882, in his native town. He belonged to a race of German farmers, industrious, prudent, devout, he was a good citizen. He married Carolina Jablonski, born 1820 in Frankenhien, died October, 1879. Children: 1. (11) Rudolph Otto, son of Christopher Mangel, was born in Frankenhien, Prussia, March 19, 1865. He worked on his father's farm, and attended the best schools of his native place until he was fourteen years old. He worked for a year as coachman for a lieutenant in the German army, but when seventeen years of age eagerly seized the opportunity to go to America with his brother Edward. They left home November 14, 1882, going first to Bremen, Germany, thence to Hamburg. Here the German military officers decided that Edward must serve the Fatherland in the army, as every young German had to do, and he was taken from the ship and placed in the army. The younger brother, Rudolph O., was allowed to depart, sailing for Liverpool, where he took passage for New York, arriving on the steamship, "City of Berlin," December 4, 1882. He continued his journey across the continent and joined his relatives at Salt Lake City. After a few weeks he went to Alta City where he worked in the mines until 1887 when he decided to come east. In February, 1887, he began to learn the provision and grocery business in company with his brother under the firm name of Mangel Brothers, and continued until 1894, when he embarked in business on his own account at 56 Dorchester street, South Boston. He has built up a very large and flourishing business in groceries and provisions. He has been active, energetic and enterprising, keeping his stock and place of business up to date, accomodating to his customers, shrewd in buying and upright in all his dealings. He has resided since 1902 in a substantial house that he built at 132 Beech street, on a spacious lot commanding an excellent view of the surrounding country. He is an active member of the Zion German Lutheran church of Boston. In politics he is a Republican. He married (first) in South Boston, July 25, 1895, Mary Lange, born in Schomaken, Pennsylvania, of German parentage, June 7, 1874. Her father, John Lange, was a farmer, immigrating soon after his marriage from Germany to Pennsylvania. John and Carolina (Hedwig) Lange came to Boston when Mary was a young child and her mother died there in 1880 in the prime of life. Mr. Lange has lived since then in Medford, Massachusetts. Mrs. Mangel was educated in the public schools of Boston. She died July 24, 1901. Mr. Mangel married (second) in Boston, September 30, 1902, Wilhelmine C. Flöther, born in Hanover, Germany, near the city of Bremen, April 30, 1878, daughter of Detrich and Caroline Anna (Ratjen) Flöther. Her father died in Hanover, and her mother with two children and a sister came to the United States in 1892 and settled in Jamaica Plain, Boston, where the mother died March 9, 1905, at the home of Mrs. Mangel. She was then sixty-seven years old. Mrs. Mangel has living two sisters and one brother: Helen Flöther Klingbeil, who resides on Davis avenue, Norwood, and has three children, Madeline, Anna and Helmuth; Augusta Flöther, who married Henry Alsterlund, resides on Eustus street, North Cambridge, and has two children, Florence and Edith A. DALTON      The Daltons in some branches are an old New England family of both English and Irish descent. Some of those who came over just previous to the revolutionary war were of Irish stock and at least one family of the surname won honorable distinction in that great struggle. The particular family here under consideration comes of the English branch and has been known in New England history hardly more than two score years, but its record, like those of the same name of earlier immigration, has been one of honorable achievement.

(I) John Dalton, head of the family here treated, never came to this country. He was an assistant paymaster in the British navy and was killed in one of the mutinous uprisings of Great Britain's colonial possessions in India, in 1873, three years after his wife and other members of the family had come to America. She came over in 1869 in company with her brother and they took up their residence in Bridgton, Maine, where another brother, Daniel Dickens, had previously settled. The wife of John Dalton was Ann Dickens, and by her he had three children: 1. Lizzie, born Leicester, England, May, 1864, married Mansur E. Russell, of Old Town, Maine, and had one child, Bessie Russell. 2. Ada, born Leicester, England, April, 1866, married Jerome Moynihan, of Bridgton, Maine, and had five children: Charles Leroy, Ray, Ernest, Lurine and one other child. 3. Ernest (see post).

(II) Ernest, youngest child and only son of John and Ann (Dickens) Dalton, was born in Leicester, England, January 7, 1868, and was a child of about fifteen months old when he came to America with his mother and settled in Bridgton, Maine. He attended the public schools in that village and graduated from the high school in 1887, then became a student at Kent's Hill Academy, with the intention at that time of ultimately entering the profession of medicine; but about that time he saw a promising opportunity to enter mercantile pursuits and therefore took a clerkship in a clothing store in Bridgton, where he remained two years. In 1891 he went to Portland, Maine, and during the next two years worked as clerk in the drug store of which C. B. Greenleaf was then proprietor. In 1893 he came to Chicopee, Massachusetts, and continued working as drug clerk in Warren Smith's drug store in that city until 1897, when in April of that year he purchased the drug store and business formerly carried on by C. S. Sexton and became himself its proprietor. Thus for more than fifteen years Mr. Dalton has been identified with the business life of Chicopee and during that time has also taken a somewhat active interest in public affairs in that city. He served three years as member of the board of health being chairman of the board during one year and in 1897-98 he represented the city in the general court, being the first Republican representative elected to the legislature from his district for twelve years. He is a Mason and also a Red Man. Mr. Dalton married Agnes, daughter of James Campbell, and has two children: 1. Helen Alice Campbell, born Chicopee, July 28, 1900. 2. Ernest Theodore, born Chicopee, December 27, 1903.

RAYMOND John Raymond, the immigrant ancestor of this branch of the family, came from county Essex, England, and settled on Bass river. He lived in Salem and Beverly. He was a brother of Captain William Raymond, and son probably of William, "the Steward," while Richard Raymond, who settled here in 1634, was his uncle. He married (first) Rachel Scruggs, died May 2, 1666, daughter of Thomas Scruggs. He married (second) Judith Woodbury, widow of William Woodbury, who died October 31, 1702, aged seventy-five. He died January 18, 1703, aged about eighty-seven years. Children of first wife: 1. John, mentioned below. 2. Thomas. 3. Bethia, born June 14, 1655, died December 10, 1662. 4. Abigail, died December 10, 1662. 5. Rachel, born February 14, 1659. 6. Eliza, died December 25, 1662. 7. Abigail, baptized November 13, 1670. 8. Jonathan, born April 25, 1666. He was probably the John Raymond mentioned in history as the first soldier to enter the fort in the Narraganset fight, although he did not then live there. He married Martha Woodin, and died at Middleborough, June 5, 1725, aged seventy-four. Children, born at Beverly: 1. John, November 24, 1677. 2. Samuel, May 18, 1679. 3. Martha, May 24, 1681. 4. Samuel, married, May 21, 1798, Silvia Dunham. 3. Lucy. 4. Joshua, married Phebe ———. 5. Levi, married, March 28, 1794, Anna Raymond: (second) February 23, 1804, Hannah Bump. 6. He was educated in the common schools, and at the age of sixteen enlisted in the army and went to the defense of Plymouth in the war of 1812, for which he received a United States pension and after his death his widow received it till her death. In 1818 he went to Weymouth and learned the trade of boot and shoe maker at Porter and later engaged in the boot and shoe business. He was a prominent man in the town, a member of the state legislature and selectman of the town eighteen years. He also served as overseer of the poor, and as justice of the peace up to his death. He was active in the building of the old church, driving the first stake in its construction, and for many years was a trustee and deacon. His picture still hangs in the church. Henry Blake, January 11, 1841, mentioned below. 9. Abby Augusta, 1842, died 1845. 10. Abby Augusta, 1849, married William F. Rice. 11. Benjamin Taft, 1852, married Leona Cushing.

(VII) Henry Blake, son of Deacon Alvah Raymond, was born at East Weymouth, January 11, 1841, died there June 29, 1908. He was educated in the common schools of his native town and learned the trade of stitcher and fitter in the shoe factory there. He then worked with his father, and was a manufacturer on a modest scale, and when his father retired he succeeded to the business and conducted it successfully. He retired some years before his death. He was a member and for a period of forty years was tyler of Orphans Hope Lodge of Free Masons, declining reelection in 1905 on account of ill health. He possessed the gift of music, and for many years often sang with his wife at church and at many other gatherings. He was an attendant of the Congregational church, and a member of the Temple of Honor for twenty-five years. He married, May 12 1865, Cemira A., born August 25, 1845, at South Weymouth, daughter of Daniel Lawton. Mrs. Raymond is an active church and temperance worker, and has contributed much by her activity and labors to promote the increase of total abstinence in the community. She has been a member of some temperance movement all her life, from the age of nine years when she sang in Tremont Temple, Boston, with the Band of Hope. She has been a member of the Women's Christian Temperance Union for twenty years, and was county president of Norfolk county eight years, superintendent of the Loyal Legion work for fifteen years, and declined that office longer, although urged to accept it. She has been especially zealous in teaching temperance to the children. She has also taught singing to children, has taught the primary class in the Sunday school, given concerts with the children for over twenty years, and in fact for nearly four decades has taken an active part in everything pertaining to the welfare of the children. Probably no one in this section has accomplished so much good along temperance lines as has Mrs. Raymond.

Thomas Lawton, or Laughton, grandfather of Mrs. Raymond, was born in Hallowell, Maine, and settled in Patten, Maine, where he took up various grants of land. He married Mary Adams, a native of Groton, Massachusetts, who died at Patten, aged ninety-five years. They had eleven children.

Daniel, son of Thomas Lawton or Laughton, was born in Hallowell, Maine, 1820, died at East Weymouth, Massachusetts, 1861. He removed to Patten thence to Weymouth, where he was a shoemaker during his active life. He was a member of the Congregational church at Hallowell, Maine, also Methodist church of East Weymouth, and sang in the choir of both. He married Ann Maria Burrell, born at East Weymouth, died August 20, 1890, in her native town. Children: 1. Cemira A., born August 25, 1845, married Henry Blake Raymond mentioned above. 2. Maria A., born at Boston, 1850, married Henry H. Burrell, of Whitman Massachusetts. 3. Emma F., born Boston, 1855, married S. E. Burrell, of Broekton, Massachusetts.

More than a hundred years ago the Ganter family came from the Black Forest section of Baden and settled in the little town of Kenzingen on the banks of the Eltz river, some fifteen miles north-northwest of Freiburg; and here they lived and have led the lives of good citizens ever since, being by occupation farmers. The Ganter family comes of a long line of representative Germans whose self-sustaining qualifications made them worthy citizens in every community where they resided. They were affiliated for a great many years with the Lutheran church.

(I) Jacob Ganter, the eldest of five children, two sons and three daughters, was born in Kenzingen, Baden, Germany, about 1810, his father having come there from the Black Forest regions, and the two generations were successful tillers of the soil for many years. His father died at the age of sixty-five, and his mother at the age of sixty. In early life he gave his attention to farming, but was cut short in the prime of life dying in 1850, at the age of forty. He married, in his native town, Amelia Lieneman, born in Kenzingen, Baden, August 27, 1821. She survived her husband, and conducted the farm until her death in December, 1895. Children: 1. Child, died young. 2. Frank, born February 21, 1845, mentioned below. 3. Elizabeth October 21, 1849, married, in Kenzingen, Carl Gulat, a native of the town, who became proprietor of the leading hotel, noted as a resort called "Rebstock" for more than a hundred years; Mr. Gulat was known as a famous landlord and died there in March, 1899, and his widow survives him; children: Frank Gulat, came to the United States and resides on Danforth street, Jamaica Plain, Massachusetts, and has twice married and has three children; one other son and three daughters.

(II) Frank, son of Jacob Ganter, was born in Kenzingen, Baden, Germany, February 21, 1845. He received a good education in the schools of his native town and some instruction in the trade schools. He was a butcher by occupation, and ambitious to make the most of life. Learning of the opportunities for the young man in America, he decided to try his fortunes in a new land. He went to Boston, Massachusetts, and established himself in Roxbury. Being without other employment at first, he found work as a fresco painter and succeeded in a remarkable degree. He had never learned the trade, but was naturally of an artistic temperament, and his employer informed him that any lack of experience he had was made up by his natural ability. He worked for two months as a painter. At last he saw an opportunity to start in business, and September 28, 1872, opened a meat store on Boylston street, near Boylston station, Jamaica Plain. He succeeded so well that after three years he purchased a place at 187 Lamartine street, near the location of his first store. By attending strictly to business and by using honest methods he increased his trade and accumulated enough to build. In 1886 he built a fine substantial brick block upon his property, which is a credit to the business section. His business steadily prospered and at last he placed it in the hands of his son and retired from active work. He purchased a beautiful home at 39 Burroughs street, not far from Jamaica pond, and here he enjoys a well-earned rest. In 1891 Mr. Ganter visited his old home in Germany, making a visit of three months. He went again in 1898 and took his family, traveling for three months through Switzerland, France and Germany. Mr. Ganter is a man who has the respect of all his townsmen, and one who has taken an interest in the advancement of the community and of all that tends to better it. He is greatly interested in charities, and has always contributed liberally to all worthy objects and religious work. He married, May 4, 1875, Margaretha Dorothea Theresa Carstensen (see Carstensen III). Her mother, who was born September 26, 1823, makes her home with her daughter, and is still active, despite her years. Children: 1. Child, died young. 2. Frank William, born October 28, 1876, succeeded to his father's business as a meat and produce dealer; married Elizabeth Downing, of Maine. 3. Katherine, February 14, 1878, married Jacob Helt, a successful commercial traveler in Boston, and had Dorothea Helt, born September 1, 1907. 4. Carl Emil, December 7, 1886, graduate of high school; unmarried, lives at home.

(The Carstensen Line).

The Carstensen family is of ancient German origin, tracing their ancestry back to the fourteenth century, to ancestors of noble birth. The family has always been prominent and held important positions under the government.

(I) Hans Carstensen lived in the northern part of Schleswig Holstein, province of Prussia, Germany, and was the owner of one of the largest and finest estates in the province. He married Margaretha Dorothea Petersen, who died in 1866, aged eighty-two. They had an only son, Claus Peter, mentioned below.

(II) Claus Peter, son of Hans Carstensen, was born in Schleswig Holstein in 1819. He received a good education and in 1838, at the early age of nineteen, married Katherine Margaretha Detlefsen, the handsome daughter of a neighboring land owner. The wedding was celebrated with much ceremony, the festivities lasting three days. He inherited his father's fine estate. He was a volunteer in the war with Denmark in 1848, and not being willing to accept the Danish rule was forced with others to flee, going to Panama. He lost his life the next year, at the age of thirty, from exposure, and his estate was confiscated with the exception of a small portion sufficient to provide a home for his widow and children and his old mother until 1864, when Schleswig Holstein again reverted to Germany. The Danish language had been used in the church and schools, and his mother, not willing to have her son's children learn the Danish tongue, had private tutors for them, and they were confirmed in the German Lutheran church. The children were: 1. Hans Ludwig, now a prominent coal dealer in Cambridge, Massachusetts. 2. Ferdinand, deceased. 3. Theodore, deceased. 4. William Lawrence, now lives in Boston. 5. Margaretha Dorothea Theresa, mentioned below.

(III) Margaretha Dorothea Theresa, only daughter of Claus Peter Carstensen was born in Schleswig Holstein, Germany, October 21, 1848. She received her education in private schools and under private tutors. During the Franco-Prussian war in 1870, she lost her betrothed. The following year she and her mother went to Boston to visit her brothers, who were in business there. The visit was prolonged and May 4, 1875, she married Frank Ganter, of Boston (see Ganter II).

The revocation of the Edict of VINTON Nantes was a pernicious measure for France, but it gave to America a valuable addition to its citizenry, the Bayards of Delaware, Chief Justice John Jay, the Bowdoins, the Dannas and Peter Faneuil, of Massachusetts, and Harry Laurens, of North Carolina. The part these played in the development of our political and judicial history is a no inconsiderable one. The Vintons were another of the Huguenot stock who came over to America from sunny France to escape persecution for religion's sake. Vinton is a name rooted deeply in the geography of Britain. There is a Venton in Cornwall, a Winton in Suffolk and Allwinton in Northumberland. Vinton, Venton and Winton were convertible terms. Vinton Latinized was Wintonia as the Latins have no W and that was the Roman name of Winchester or Winchester. The monks changed it to Wintan. Wint or vint comes from went, Celtic for river. There was a Peter de Wintonia in England in 1275 and a Johanas de Wintonia in 1306. In France the name was Vintonne and there was a Petrius de Vintonne in Rheims in 1326. In view of finding this as a geographical and family name in England some authorities assert that the family were originally attached to the soil of Britain as Celts, that they crossed the channel to France at some indefinite period and recrossed to England again. The family anyway are of great antiquity, being traceable in its elements back to the time of Christ. John Vinton, of Lynn, was undoubtedly a Frenchman who did not speak English very well, and a Huguenot refugee. He named his son Blaise and no true Englishman would so name his son with the bitterness then existing between the two countries. If his ancestors way back came from England, as no doubt they did, the name had become Gallicized and the family in habits and thoughts were decidedly French.

(I) John Vinton was in Lynn, Massachusetts, in 1648, when he had a child born. The next mention of him was in 1649 when he was fined five shillings in court for scolding a neighbor. This is nothing to his disparagement. Men were often arbitrarily punished for no offence at all in those old "blue law" times. Trivial matters that would be passed over as of no account were subject to severe penalty. John was quick natured, due to his warm Huguenot blood, and was probably glib of tongue. He could not speak the English language, nor could he understand readily what was said to him and was in consequence imposed upon in some trade or he fancied that some of his rights were being infringed upon. This may have caused the eruption between him and his neighbors. There is an elevation in Lynn called Vinton hill and it was likely named after our ancestor. It is by some thought that John moved to Malden later in life. The forename of his wife was Ann. Their children: Eleanor, born in 1648; John, mentioned in this sketch; William, April, 1652; Blaise, April 22, 1654; Ann, April 4, 1656; Elizabeth, January, 1657; Sarah, September 16, 1662.

(II) John (2), son of John (1) and Ann Vinton, was born in Lynn, March 2, 1650, died in Woburn, Massachusetts, November 13, 1727. He went to Malden in 1677. He was a "forgeman," a worker in iron. He was a man of capacity and energy and acquired quite a little property, holding a good position in society. In 1695 he bought land in Woburn consisting of orchard, arable and pasture. Also meadow lands and upland lying on both sides of the Mystic river, also twenty acres of woodland, also a mansion house and garden, also one-eighth of a saw-mill, also another parcel at Charlestown End, now Stoneham. This indicates that he was a heavy land holder. He lived on the Mystic river, near Stoneham line and was near where Deacon Stephen Richardson's saw-mill and residence afterwards were. John is supposed to have lived in Braintree for a while. His name appears in real estate transactions as follows: April 9, 1709, he bought land in Woburn of Isaac Richardson in consideration of six shillings. July 19, 1709, he bought of Nathaniel Richardson for fifteen pounds meadow and upland in Woburn. Same date is a quitclaim deed between Nathaniel and Benjamin Richardson and John Vinton, "having had differences and contests and contentions concerning some certain parcels of lands now in their possessions and improvement and the said Nathaniel Richardson and John Vinton claim by virtue of a purchase from Jonathan Richardson et als, and while the said Benjamin Richardson by virtue of the last will of his honored father. Now to put an end to their differences the aforesaid parties severally release and quitclaim to each other the lands severally in each others possession." John's will was dated January 15, 1721, and his son John administered. The inventory was one hundred and fourteen pounds. He married, August 26, 1677, Hannah, daughter of Thomas and Rebecca Green, of Malden. She was born February 24, 1659, died in 1741. Her will was dated April 21, 1729, and proved November 23, 1741, her son Thomas administering. Their children were: John, mentioned in this sketch; Hannah, born January 26, 1681; Rebecca, March 26, 1683; Thomas, July 31, 1686; Mary, August 20, 1689, died young; Mary, January 2, 1692; Samuel, May 3, 1695; Abiathar, May 10, 1700.

(III) Captain John (3), eldest son of John (2) and Hannah (Green) Vinton, was born in Woburn in 1680, died in Dudley, Massachusetts, 1760. He was an active trader in real estate, there are over thirty real estate transactions in which he was interested on the Middlesex records. He resided within the present limits of Stoneham, then called Charlestown End, and his house was situated on the old road to Boston, near the outlet of Spot pond, and near the present village of Wyoming. When Stoneham was incorporated the usual order from the general court was addressed to John Vinton as the principal inhabitant directing him to issue a warrant for the first town meeting. He advanced more money and did more than any other man for the chartering of the borough. He was on the first board of selectmen and held the office for the years 1726-27-31-34-35. He was moderator for a long time and was very often employed on public business and placed by his townsmen on all important committees. He was on the committee to build a meeting house, to select a site, also to procure a minister. He represented the town in the general court of 1734. He was the highest taxpayer in town and lieutenant of the trainband in 1720 and made captain in 1723. He was commissioned a justice of the peace in 1734, and in March of that year was received into full communion in the church, November 20, 1738, he sold for two thousand five hundred and fifty pounds his farm of two hundred and seventy acres in Stoneham, where he had lived so long, where his children were born and some of them buried and also the mother of his children. He turned his back on all these associations, penetrating into the wilderness in search of a new home, locating in what is now Dudley in Worcester county. It required a good deal of courage the sundering of so many ties and the loosening of the "silver chords of affection," to thus break away; for he was getting old. The object of this move was to give his children a better chance in the world where land was cheaper. He bought of James Allen, of Boston, nine hundred acres in the new settlement. His abilities were soon recognized in his new abode, and in 1745 he was made moderator and again in 1749. In 1740 he was sent to Boston to address the general court to see if the province tax and fine could be abated. He continued to deal in land and we find his name in the Worcester records several times. In 1741 he seems to have mortgaged a portion of his Dudley possessions to James Bowdoin, of Boston. Whether reverses had overtaken the captain in his old age we do not know. Captain Vinton was a man of great ability and energy, a leader of men and affairs wherever his lot was cast. He was one of the town builders and founder of an enterprising race who inherited many of his manly qualities. He wrote a fair legible hand and this was quite an accomplishment in an age when few could write their name. He died intestate and the appraisal of his personalty was ninety-one pounds. He was thrice married. First to Abigail, daughter of Stephen and Abigail (Wyman) Richardson, and granddaughter of Samuel, one of the original settlers of Woburn. She died at Charlestown End and was the mother of nine children. Second to Abigail, daughter of Major James Converse, an officer of distinguished merit and reputation in the Indian wars. She was but fifteen when Captain Vinton married her and he was forty. She died in Dudley. Third to Hannah, daughter of Nathaniel and Mary Richardson, of Woburn, and relict of Timothy Baldwin, who was the ancestor of that Baldwin who grew the famous apple of the name. Children: Abigail, born December 28, 1704; John, June 26, 1706; Hannah, March 9, 1707; Mary, August 15, 1709; Melatiah, October 29, 1711; Joseph, July 24, 1714; Rebecca, March 15, 1716; Thomas, 1717; and Benoni, June 12, 1720. Children by Abigail Converse: Joshua, mentioned in this sketch, and Phebe, May 24, 1724.

(IV) Joshua, son of Captain John (3) and Abigail (Converse) Vinton, was born in Stoneham, January 5, 1722, died in Dudley in 1772. He accompanied his father to Dudley in 1738, then a lad of sixteen. He died intestate, and the appraisal amounted to one thousand nine hundred and seventeen pounds, his widow Mehitable administering. He married Mary (Polly) ———, of Dudley, in 1751, and (second) Mehitable Edmunds, of Dudley, April 23, 1762. Children: Mary, born December 29, 1751; Joshua, September 5, 1753; Abigail, October 13, 1755. His children by the second union were: Jabez, January 3, 1763; Susanna, August 23, 1764; Ebenezer, mentioned in this sketch; Patience, September 27, 1767; and Lucretia.

(V) Ebenezer, son of Joshua Vinton, born January 3, 1766, at Dudley, Massachusetts, removed to Wardsboro from Dudley; he married and had a son Joshua Bliss, mentioned in this sketch.

(VI) Joshua Bliss, son of Ebenezer Vinton, was born in Wardsboro, Windham county, Vermont, March 16, 1798, died in Northampton, Massachusetts, May 21, 1869. He worked on a farm at fifteen years of age for $5.50 a month. He came to Springfield in 1824 and entered the employ of Moses Chapman who then kept the Exchange Hotel. In 1826 he conducted the hotel in Brimfield built in 1808, and afterwards went to Northampton as clerk in Warner's Coffee House, which property he purchased in 1831 and was its proprietor until 1840. That year he came to Springfield and bought the Hampden House. In the spring of 1842 he went to Brooklyn, New York, and was engaged as a broker in Wall street. He later returned to Springfield and retired from business with a handsome fortune. He was one of the first directors of the Agawam Bank. Mr. Vinton gave $4,000 to the building fund of the Church of Unity. The course of his long life of untiring industry was regulated and controlled by manly uprightness and staunch integrity. Mr. Vinton was universally respected and his death widely and deeply regretted. He married Mary Ewell, of Chesterfield, Massachusetts. They had two sons: 1. Edward Bliss, born August 21, 1833. 2. Charles Ewell, born December 9, 1838, died January 28, 1883. He married Phebe Adams, and they had two daughters: Mrs. Frank R. Mackenzie, who resides on a beautiful estate on Franklin street, and Mary Alice, died at twenty-one years of age.

Patrick Broderick was BRODERICK was born in the town of Athlone, county Roscommon, Ireland, of an ancient and respectable Irish family. He received a limited education, and learned the trade of mason in his native parish. In the forties, when famine-struck Ireland poured a great host to the shores of America, he came with his wife Bridget and young children. He located in Jamaica Plain, now part of Boston, and followed his trade. He soon engaged in business on his own account as a mason and contractor. Morton was originally an English surname, derived from the name of a locality.

There are parishes and places of this name in Oxford, Bucks, Chester, Dorset, Essex, Nottingham, Salop, Stafford, Gloucester, Devon and Berks counties. In Scotland the family was well established in Edinburghshire and Dumfriesshire before the year 1300. The Irish family was doubtless a branch of the Scotch family. In Ireland the name is most numerous in Antrim county, but is diffused throughout the country.

(1) John Morton was born in Roscommon county, Ireland, and grew up in his native parish under the conditions common to the people of the middle class. He married Bridget Byron, also a native of Roscommon. He came to America in 1847, with his wife, settling soon afterward in Dorchester, Massachusetts, where he lived for several years. He removed to West Roxbury, where in 1856 he with his brother James bought land on Lawn street, recorded in Norfolk register of deeds. This is the first record of the family in America. He built a little home in which he and his wife spent a peaceful and happy life together until separated by death. He died in 1888 at the age of seventy-six. He was a Democrat in politics and numbered among his friends some of the best people of that section. He and his wife were active and faithful members of the Catholic church. She was born in 1810, and is still living, hardy and happy, making her home with her daughter. Children: 1. James H., born December 25, 1846, was for forty-one years employed in various positions in Mount Hope cemetery, a landscape gardener there for twenty-three years and afterward superintendent of nineteen cemeteries of the city of Boston, a position for which he was well fitted by natural qualifications and long training, and in which he demonstrated his ability and knowledge; he was also president of the National Superintendents' Association of Cemeteries. He married Ellen Manning, of West Roxbury, and had eight children. 2. Michael S., born September 12, 1850, mentioned below. 3. Katherine, born June 3, 1862, was educated in the Convent of St. Johns, at Baltimore, and became a sister of that order; was appointed principal of a convent school at Baltimore, Maryland, in charge of four hundred pupils; afterwards principal and Mother Superior of the School for Sisters of Charity in Chicago, having a thousand pupils; owing to failing health she was assigned to her present position in charge of the Catholic school at Petersburg, Virginia, where her duties are less arduous. 4. Sarah, born January 1, 1864, lives with her mother and sister Ellen at Mount Hope, West Roxbury, and has charge of the household. 5. Ellen, is an invalid. One child died in infancy.

(11) Michael S., son of John Morton, was born in East street, Dorchester, Massachusetts, now Boston, September 12, 1850. He was educated in the public schools and French's Commercial College, and learned the trade of cabinet-maker in the factory of the Smith American Organ Company, which was at that time doing a flourishing business. In 1876 he formed a partnership as a general merchant at Afton, Virginia. The year following he bought out his partner and continued three years with excellent success when owing to home ties he sold the store and returned to Boston. He embarked in business at Forest Hills in Boston as a dealer in groceries and provisions. He was active and energetic, accommodating and enterprising, and his business grew rapidly. From time to time he invested in real estate in the vicinity and is now one of the largest taxpayers of that section. In 1886 he erected the large building in which his store is now located. The departments for meats and provisions and for groceries are each a model, attractive, and a well ordered and wisely selected stock to meet the tastes and demands of his trade. The business occupies floor space to the extent of five thousand square feet. Few merchants in Forest Hills are better known or more popular. In 1906 he was appointed to the board of trustees of the Boston Insane Hospital, and served with credit until the hospital was taken over by the state. His home on Morton street is in a picturesque location overlooking an attractive section of the city and a stretch of beautiful country over the arbor-way connecting the Arboretum and Franklin Park.

He married, July 12, 1881, at St. Thomas' Church, Jamaica Plain, Mary E. Driscoll, born in Newton, Massachusetts, April 2, 1857, daughter of John and Hannah (Foley) Driscoll. She was educated in the public schools, graduating from West Roxbury high school and the Boston Normal College and became a teacher in the public schools of Boston, continuing until the time of her marriage. Mr. Morton ascribes much of his success in business to the good influences of his wife, whose sweet and gentle disposition has done so much to make a happy home and family. Her father was born in county Cork, Ireland, and came to this country in 1850; died at Jamaica Plain, September 29, 1905, aged seventy-three. Her mother was also a native of county Cork; came to America in 1851; was married at St. Joseph Circuit Street Catholic Church, Roxbury, and died at Jamaica Plain in 1887, aged sixty-two. Mr. and Mrs. Driscoll lived first at Newton, then at Jamaica Plain; they reared a family of three children: i. Mary E. Driscoll, married Mr. Morton, mentioned above. ii. John William Driscoll, born March 27, 1862, died aged thirty; married Mary Davis. iii. Helen J. Driscoll, born January 22, 1864, lives at the homestead in Jamaica Plain, unmarried. Mr. and Mrs. Morton are Catholics and liberal supporters of the church of their parish. Children of Michael S. and Mary E. (Driscoll) Morton: 1. Grace Mary, born June 23, 1882, was carefully educated and became proficient in music; resides with her parents. 2. Robert Michael, August 15, 1883, is associated in business with his father. 3. Thomas Matthew, July 11, 1884, educated in the public schools; now a clerk in his father's store. 4. John Raymond, February 7, 1888, a student in the Textile School, Lowell, Massachusetts. 5. Arthur James, May 31, 1889, now serving his apprenticeship at the leather trade. 6. Gertrude Elizabeth, May 14, 1890, student in the Boston Latin School. 7. Katherine Helen, May 24, 1891, student in the Boston high school. 8. Walter Joseph, June 3, 1892, student in the Boston Latin School. 9. Frances Lincoln, December 25, 1893, student in the Boston Latin School. 10. Louise Leonide, May 17, 1896, student in the Boston grammar school. 11. Vincent De Paul, May 25, 1899, student in the Boston grammar school. Great honor and credit is due Mrs. Morton for raising this large family, who by her care and attention was able, through God, to bring them to maturity without the loss of one.

The Sanderson family is of SANDERSON ancient English origin, the greater number of those in America bearing this name tracing their descent from two brothers, Robert and Edward.

Robert Sanderson and his first wife Lydia, were among the first settlers of Hampton, New Hampshire, in 1638, and his eldest child was born there. Soon afterward he removed to Watertown, Massachusetts, of which he was a proprietor in 1642, remaining there until about 1653, removing then to Boston where he held the office of deacon. He sold his house and ten acres of land in Hampton, July 20, 1650, to Richard Swaine, he then residing in Watertown, and October 17, 1653, bought land of William Godfrey. By trade he was a goldsmith and silversmith. John Hull, a selectman and many years town treasurer of Boston, the first mint master of New England, and the coiner of the pine-tree shillings, in his diary under date of 1652-53, relates how he was chosen to make coin, and adds: "I chose my friend Robert Sanderson to be my partner, to which the court consented." September 1, 1658, he says: "My boy, John Sanderson, complained of his head aching, and took his bed; a strong fever set in and after 17 days sore sickness, he departed this life." Under date of November 8, 1658, he says: "The Lord exercised with sickness my partner, Robert Sanderson, and his son Joseph, but yet was pleased to recover them both. Joseph kept the house about a month, and my partner 18 days." Robert Sanderson died October 7, 1693, and his will was proved October 20, of the same year. He bequeathed to his wife Elizabeth; son Robert Sanderson and daughter Anne West; grandchildren Robert Darby, Mary Caswell and Joseph Jones; children of Robert and Anna, and of James Fenniman; great-granddaughter of Abia Beard; son-in-law Richard West; brother Edward Sanderson; Joseph, son of William Sanderson; refers to house and land at Watertown, had by former wife; mentions kinsman William Shattuck, of Watertown. He married (second) in Watertown, about 1642, Mary, widow of John Cross, and she died June 21, 1691. He married (third) Elizabeth ———, who was born in 1617, died October 15, 1695, leaving a will. The children of Robert Sanderson were: Mary, baptized October 29, 1639, married James Fenniman; William, born 1640; Joseph, born January 1, 1641-42; Benjamin, baptized July 29, 1649; Sarah, baptized January 18, 1651; Robert, baptized October 22, 1652; John, died September 18, 1658.

(I) Edward, brother of Robert Sanderson, was the immigrant ancestor of the branch of the family of which this sketch treats. He was born in England and came to Watertown about the same time as his brother. He sold his house and land in Watertown to William Shattuck Sr., and probably removed to Cambridge. The name is frequently spelled Sanders and Saunders on the early records. He married, October 15, 1645, Mary, believed to be the eldest daughter of Bagot and Bridget Eggleston, of Dorchester, later of Windsor, Connecticut. Their children were: Jonathan, see forward, and Hester, baptized March 20, 1686-87.

(II) Jonathan, son of Edward and Mary (Eggleston) Sanderson, was born in Watertown, September 15, 1646, and died September 3, 1735. His will was dated April 2, 1728, and his grave and that of his wife are in the old or lower graveyard at Waltham, formerly Watertown. He settled at Piety Corner, Watertown, about 1689, was constable in 1695, and selectman from 1703 to 1719. in that office many years; he was also president and a director of the Franklin County National Bank. He was an honorary member and life trustee of the Franklin County Agricultural Society; for nearly ten years president of Powers Institute and that institute owes much to his interest and labors in its behalf; trustee of the Cushman Library, and it is owing to his liberality that the hall over the library was built. He also contributed liberally to the support of both Unitarian and Baptist societies in Bernardston; was a member of the building committee of the Baptist church, and for nearly thirty years was parish clerk and treasurer of the Unitarian church. In politics he was originally a Whig, but upon the formation of the Republican party joined its ranks, held various positions of trust and honor and in 1861 was state senator from his district. He married, October 29, 1840, Mary, born in 1816, died January 27, 1890, daughter of Elihu and Ruth (King) Osgood. His early education was acquired in the public schools of his native town, which he left at the age of fourteen years to accept a position as office boy in the Franklin County Bank at Greenfield. At the expiration of two years he became a student at the Powers Institute, and at the end of another two years became teller of the Franklin County Bank, where he remained until the fall, of 1862 when he accepted the position of teller in the Springfield Bank of Springfield, which later became the Second National Bank. He held this position until January, 1866, when he went to Savannah, Georgia, and engaged in mercantile business, at the end of two years removing to Chicago, Illinois, and continuing in the same line of business there until 1869. He returned to Franklin county in 1873 and became associated with Henry W. Warner at Nash's Mills, Greenfield, in the manufacture of hardware and baby-carriage trimmings. Since then the manufacture of cutlery has been added to the interests of the company. The Byam family is of ancient BYAM Welsh origin. Like most Welsh names that have been anglicized, Byam is very unlike the original from which it is derived. Evan is a personal and baptismal name common in Wales. The prefix Ap in Welsh is equivalent to Mac and De and Fitz, and means "son of." John Ap Adam, for instance, means John, son of Adam, and William Ap Evan, William, son of Evan. Thus Ap-Evan is of the same class of surnames as Richardson, Johnson, Jackson, etc., in English. Ap-Evan was spelled Ap-yevan for a time, then Abyevan, Abyan and Abyam. In fact we find in one single document, the will of Will-jam Byam, of Bath, in 1570, the three spellings: Abyan, Abyam and Byam. The surname Abyam is found in the Subsidy Rolls for 1545, and the spelling Byam came into use about this time. In fact the testator in the will mentioned spelled his name Byam as early as 1535, as witness to the will of Isabella Chancellor, of Bath.

The armorial bearings of the Byam family are as follows: 1. Argent three dragons' or wiverns' heads erased vert, each holding in his mouth a dexter hand, coupéd at the wrist, dropping blood, originally derived from Tegau's Euron, the daughter and heir of King Pelinor, and wife of Caradoc Craich-Vras; and, in an after age, exclusively borne by their descendant Rhys Goch, living in the eleventh century. 2. Sable, a chevron between three spear heads argent, their points embued, for Caradoc himself. 3. Gules a lion rampant or, for Elistam Glodrydd, founder of one of the royal tribes of Wales. 4. Gules, three towers triple turreted argent for Gowel, Prince of Caerlon, and living in the twelfth century. 5. Vert a chevron between three wolves' heads for Joanett, daughter and heir of Grono ap Traharné ap Blaeth ap Elvareh, Lord of Penrhos. 6. Argent a cross gules for Burgh—De-Burgh, the same as the Marquis of Clanricarde—the late Viscounts and present Earls of Mayo, etc. The Byams, of Selworthy, Somersetshire, bear: Vert two branches of laurel between four pheons argent. Crest: A wolf passant or collared and lined ermine.

From the relative size of the family in the old country and the peculiar derivation of the surname, it is fair to presume that all the Byams are descended from Ievan ap Jenkin, whose sons were called Ap Ievan, and descendants of his sons John and Thomas took the surname Byam. The ancestry of this Ievan is traced to the first century, according to the College of Arms, certified in 1841, and is a remarkable pedigree, originating with the princes of Wales: 1. Llyr Llediaith. 2. Bran, a hostage at Rome. 3. Caradoc or Carac-tacus. 4. Eudaf. 5. Cynan. 6. Cadvan, King of North Wales. 7. Stradwell, daughter and heir, married Coel Godebog, to whom she carried her inheritance, and who, acquiring other possessions, was entitled King of Britain (Harleian mss. 1974). 8. Gwal, their daughter, sister of Hleu, who married Constantine Chlorus, Emperor of Rome, (died 306), married Edeyrn ap Padarn, whose father was surnamed Peisrwydd. 9. Cunmeda Wledig, King of North Wales. 10. Eincon Yrch of the town and district, from him called Caereineon, in Merioneth; married Brauste. 11. Llyr, surnamed Molynog, married Gwenllian, daughter of Brychan ap Aulach. 12. Caradoc Vraich-Vras, Earl of Hereford, Lord of Radnor, A. D. 520, founder of a dynasty of Princes who ruled for some centuries over the territory between the Wye and Severn, and over Brecknock, till after the Norman invasion, in fact, till Bleddin was slain in 1090. He married Tegan'r Eur-vron, daughter of Pelinor, King of Gwent. 13. Mainarch, Lord of Brecknock, paternally descended from Caradoc, Earl of Hereford and inheriting the lands and titles, married Ellen, daughter of Eincon, Lord of Cwmwd. 14. Rhys Goch, Lord of Ystradwy, married Joan, daughter of Cadwgan ap Athelstan Glodrydd. 15. Cynwillin ap Rhys Goch married Jonnett, daughter of Howell, Prince of Caerleon. 16. Cynfrin ap Cynwillin married Ggladys, daughter of Sitsyllt ap Dyffenwell, Lord of Upper Gwent. 17. Arthur ap Cynfim married Ellen, daughter of Meuric ap Cradoc. 18. Howell ap Arthur married Joan, daughter of Grono, Lord of Kybor. 19. Griffith ap Howell married Jonnett, daughter and sole heir of Grono Vychan, of Penrhos. 20. David ap Griffith married Maud, daughter of Llewellyn ap Kenfrig. 21. Howell Gam ap Davil married Joan, daughter of Adam ap Rhys ap Eincon. 22. Howell Vychan, ap Howell Gam. 23. Meuric ap Howell Vychan married Gwellian, daughter of Gwilliam ap Jenkin of Gwernddu, and ancestor of the Herberts, Earls of Pembroke. 24. Ievan ap Meuric, of Penrose, married Joan, daughter of Llewelyn ap Vychan ap Llewelyn ap Madoc ap Hoel. 25. Jenkin ap Ievan, by Heralds called, but in anticipation of that surname Jenkyn Byam, of Maerdy, county Monmouth, living June 20, 1456, married daughter of Llewelyn ap Qwillim ap Rhys Lloyd ap Adam, of Brecknockshire. 26. Ievan ap Jenkyn, in book entitled "Descendants of Caradoc Vraich-Cras, penes Heralds College." Children: 1. Thomas ap Ievan, mentioned in Bath Subsidy Rolls, 1523; married Joan, daughter of Llewelyn ap Gwillim. 2. John ap Ievan, of Bath, county Somerset, mentioned in Subsidy Roll, 1523, died about 1541; his son, William ap Ievan, spelled the name Byam as early as 1535. From the elder brother descends the present family of county Pembroke.

This pedigree is copied from a Chronological Memoir of the Reverends Henry, John and Edward Byam, sons of Lawrence Byam, rector of Luckham, in Somersetshire, during the reigns of Elizabeth and James I., 1574 to 1614, by

The American family of Byam is undoubtedly descended from this Welsh family, though the immediate ancestry is unknown. All the American Byams are descended from George, mentioned below.

(VI) Otis, son of Solomon Byam, was born on the homestead, February 27, 1799, and died November 5, 1857. He married Lavinia Bonner, of Hancock, New Hampshire, and lived at Chelmsford. She died September 21, 1868, aged sixty-five years, ten months. He settled near Robbins Hill, but removed to Boston, where he was a merchant, and also kept a hotel called the Hanover House. In July, 1861, he enlisted in Company G, Sixteenth Massachusetts Regiment, and served in the civil war until the fall of 1864, taking part in thirty or more engagements. This command was known as Butler's Rifles, in honor of General Benjamin F. Butler, of Lowell. He attained the rank of corporal in the color guard. the Second Battle of Bull Run, Petersburg and Chancellorsville. In the latter battle he was slightly wounded.

After he was mustered out in 1864, he found employment as a driver of an express plying between Boston and Roxbury. In 1866 he removed to Canton, Massachusetts, and was a messenger for two years for the Crummett Express Company of that town. In 1868 he engaged in the express business in partnership with his brother, Samuel L. Byam, under the firm name of Byam Brothers, and continued in this business until his brother's death. He was also a prominent dealer in coal, wood, ice, lime, cement, drain pipe, hay, etc. After his brother's death he continued the business alone. The surname Canterbury is also spelled Cantebury, Cantilbury, etc. There were two immigrants of the family in Massachusetts among the first settlers, Cornelius and William, mentioned below.

Cornelius Canterbury came to Hingham, Massachusetts, as early as 1639. He lived on Town (now North) street, near Thaxter bridge. He sold a house and two acres of land May 3, 1649, to Samuel Lincoln. He was constable in 1672. He was a cooper by trade. His widow Anna died December 20, 1710. He died October 21, 1683. His daughters, Ann Barnes, Mary, Elizabeth, Sarah, Hannah and Esther, petitioned January 29, 1683, for the division of his estate, as he was unable to make a will in his last sickness, and agreed that their mother should have one-seventh of the estate and twenty shillings a year from each of them. But the estate was not divided until September 14, 1711, when five daughters and one grandson, John Barnes, each received a sixth, the mother having died in the meantime, showing that no heirs bearing the Canterbury name survived. Children: 1. John, born July 17, 1652, died January 13, 1678-79. 2. Anna, May 8, 1653, married, July, 1679, Peter Barnes. 3. Mary, October 8, 1654, married Francis Horswell. 4. Cornelius, January 4, 1656-57, died January 15, 1678-79. 5. Elizabeth, 1660, died unmarried April 22, 1738. 6. Martha, October 7, 1665, died December 10, 1672. 9. Hannah, June 29, 1669, married, April 1, 1700, Stephen Stodder. 9. Esther, November 19, 1671, married, January 15, 1695-96, John Tower. 10. Sarah, married Samuel Mayo.

(I) William Canterbury, believed to be brother of Cornelius Canterbury, was born in England and settled as early as 1638 in Salem, of which he was a proprietor at that time. He was in Lynn in 1641. He died June 1, 1663. He appears to have been a fisherman and owned a "fishing lot." His will was proved July 3, 1663, bequeathing to wife Beatrice, son John, daughters Ruth and Rebecca, and the latter's children, Joseph and Mary. The estate was divided July 29, 1684, after the death of the widow. The widow Beatrice married (second) Francis Plummer, of Newbury, Massachusetts. Children: 1. Rebecca, born 1638, married Benjamin Woodrow. 2. Ruth, married (first) Thomas Small, and (second) William Sibley. 3. John, mentioned below.

(II) John, son of William Canterbury, was born about 1640-45 in Salem or Lynn. He was living in 1684 and was probably the John Canterbury who was of Moseley's camp in King Philip's war, December, 1675. As far as can be ascertained he was the only male representative of the name living in 1684.

(III) John (2), doubtless son of John (1) Canterbury, was born 1680-90. He settled in Weymouth a few miles from the former home of the pioneer, Cornelius Canterbury. He married, October 3, 1721, Hannah Vinson, daughter of John Vinson or Vincent, of Weymouth. He was son or grandson of William Vinson, of Saugus and Salem, Plymouth and Gloucester; died September 17, 1690, at Gloucester, aged eighty years; had an original grant on Five Pound Island; admitted freeman May 10, 1643; was selectman, keeper of the ordinary; wife Sarah died February 4, 1660; married (second) June 10, 1661, Rachel Cook, widow, who died February 15, 1707; children: Elizabeth, John (born May 15, 1648, and probably the father of John and grandfather of Hannah (Vinson) Canterbury), William, Richard, Jacob (for whom their son was named), Richard, Thomas, Abigail, Hannah, Sarah; in his will March 19, 1707, he bequeathed to his wife Rachel, children John, Abigail, Sarah Parsons, and grandchildren, Gardner, Ellery and Cooke. Both Vinson and Canterbury moved from Salem to Weymouth, evidently. John Canterbury was a farmer. Children of John and Hannah (Vinson) Canterbury: 1. Ann, married, at Weymouth, March 7, 1749, Abigail Beal. 2. Hannah, born April 22, 1722, married, October 9, 1740, Jeremiah White. 3. Sarah, October 29, 1724, married, April 14, 1745, (intention dated) Thomas Webb. 4. John, soldier at Lake George; died there in 1756. 5. Jacob, mentioned below. 6. Martha, married Thomas Colson. All were married at Weymouth. His will, mentioning the children as given here, was dated November 11, 1774, and proved October 23, 1781; he left half his real and personal property to his son Jacob and made him sole executor. The widow Hannah's will was dated April 7, 1783, and proved February 10, 1784, bequeathing to her grandchildren, Sarah Webb, Ann Beals, Hannah White, and making her son Jacob sole executor.

(IV) Jacob, son of John (2) Canterbury, was born about 1740. He seems to be the only male survivor of the family of Canterbury. He was executor of the wills of both father and mother. He was a soldier in the revolution in Captain Thomas Nash's company, Colonel Solomon Lovell's regiment in 1776; was an ensign in Captain Jacob Gould's company, Colonel Benjamin Lincoln's regiment, April 19, 1775, on the Lexington alarm. He married ——— and lived in Weymouth. Children: 1. Jacob, a soldier in the revolution in the summer and fall of 1780 in the Rhode Island campaign in Captain Theophilus Wilder's company, Colonel Ebenezer Thayer's regiment; also, according to the revolutionary rolls, in Captain Thomas Cushing's company at the castle on Governor's Island from September 27, 1784, to January 25, 1787. 2. John, soldier in the revolution in Captain Daniel Fisher's company, Major Job Cushing's regiment in 1782, and in the same company as his brother in 1786-87 at the castle on Governor's Island; he married, April 11, 1790, Nancy Pratt. 3. Silas, mentioned below. 4. Asa, married, July 1, 1805, Susanna Ayer, who died July 25, 1831, aged forty-eight.

(V) Silas, son of Jacob Canterbury, was born in 1777, died at Norfolk, in October, 1813. He was master of a coaster which was held in southern waters during the yellow fever epidemic, and he died on board from this malady. He married, at Weymouth, June, 1801, Hannah Peaks, who died there in January, 1888. Children, born in Weymouth: 1. Silas, March 24, 1804, was a livery stable keeper at East Weymouth. 2. Nathan Peaks, see forward. 3. Lucy, married Ira Noyes.

(VI) Nathan Peaks, son of Silas Canterbury, was born in Weymouth, August 1, 1809. At nine years of age he was bound out, remaining until he was sixteen, when he went in a fishing boat sailing out of Hingham, and was so engaged for six years, meantime saving his money and studying as far as he had opportunity. He then entered the academy at Bolton, where he remained for a time, and then entered Amherst College, where he was a student some months. He then taught school in Weymouth for two years, when he received a call to become cashier of the Union Bank of Weymouth at Braintree, but declined it and engaged in the manufacture of boots and shoes in Weymouth, and continued that business with marked success until his death. He was one of the founders of the Five Cent Savings Bank of Weymouth, was its first treasurer, and held that position many years. He aided in the building of many houses in Weymouth. He was active in town affairs, and held various positions of honor and trust. He was selectman many years, also town treasurer and tax collector. He served as representative in the general court, being elected in 1836, when only twenty-eight years of age. He became a Republican at the formation of that party. He was an active worker in the Congregational church, serving as trustee, and also as a member of the building committee when the present edifice was erected. He married (first) November 23, 1836, at Weymouth, Elizabeth A. Bates, born 1817, died November 10, 1838. He married (second) December 29, 1839, Cylena Bates, sister of his first wife; she was born in 1822, and died October 2, 1896.

(VII) Nathan Dexter, only child and son of Nathan Peaks and Elizabeth A. (Bates) Canterbury, was born at East Weymouth, September 15, 1837. He was educated in the common schools of his native town and of Braintree. He became associated with his father in boot and shoe manufacture in East Weymouth, and the two were thus associated until 1869, when the father withdrew. Nathan D. continued the business alone until 1875, when he formed a partnership with Richard G. Haskell. In 1883 the firm dissolved, and Mr. Canterbury continued the business alone until 1887. In that year he opened a real estate office in Boston with his son, Charles D., and this association was continued until the death of the latter named in 1900, since which time Mr. Canterbury has given his attention to banking. In 1872 his father and himself organized the Weymouth Savings Bank, and he was one of the first directors. About five years later he was made a member of the board of investment, and is yet serving in that capacity. After some years service as vice-president he was elected president in 1892. In politics he is a Republican. He represented his district in the general court in 1880-81-82, and in those years served on the railroad committee. He has also held various official town positions. He is an active member and liberal supporter of the Congregational church, and for twenty-eight years has been chairman of the church society committee. He is an earnest supporter of temperance and other reforms. He married (first) November 15, 1859, Adeline W., daughter of Bela Pratt; she was the first child born in Broad street, the principal street in the village of Weymouth, and she died May 1, 1870. Children: 1. Charles D., born April 1, 1861, died January 2, 1900. He was educated at the Adams Academy, Quincy, and Harvard College, from which he graduated with the class of 1883. Until his death he was engaged with his father in the real estate business. He married Mary Jane Page, of Orland, Maine; children: Edith, Donald and Malcolm. 2. Elizabeth W., born in Weymouth,

October 10, 1865. She was educated there and at the Lasell School, and at Miss Symond's school. At the last named she was fitted for kindergarten work, and began teaching in Lee, Massachusetts, where for some years she has held the position of principal. 3. Addie M., born February 20, 1869. She was educated in the Weymouth public and high schools, and since graduation has been teaching in the public schools of East Weymouth.

Nathan Dexter Canterbury married (second) June 5, 1872, Mary S. Bodman, of Williamsburg, Massachusetts, daughter of Lewis and Emily Caroline (Nash) Bodman (see Bodman family). Children of Nathan D. and Mary S. (Bodman) Canterbury: 1. Lewis B., born March 25, 1875. He graduated from the high school, studied one year at Amherst College, entered Harvard College, class of 1900, leaving at the end of the first year. He was a student one year in the Boston Law School, then took up music, and has since followed singing and vocal teaching. He married Laura Morecine, of Boston; children: Sylvia, born May 24, 1901, and John Bodman, born June 5, 1906. 2. Mary Louise, born July 1, 1880, died December 27, same year.

John Bodman, immigrant ancestor, was born in England.

The earliest mention of him in Massachusetts is in the church records, when his wife Sarah joined the Boston church March 23, 1644. He was a shoemaker by trade. The Boston Book of Possessions does not show that he had any land grants, neither does the Suffolk Registry of Deeds reveal that he bought or sold real estate, yet he owned land in Boston at the north end, on Mill creek, adjoining land of Hugh Drury in 1660, and in 1662 owned land at the mill pond adjoining land of Thomas Marshall. In 1673 he had land on Mill creek adjoining land sold at that time by Henry Ashton to John Saffin. Apparently the same land was occupied by John Bodman "stone-layer" in 1682. This must have been the son of John (1) who was a cordwainer by trade. Elizabeth, wife of John (1) was described as a widow several years before this date. Children: 1. John, born August, 1645. 2. Benjamin, baptized September 7, 1645. 3. Manoah, born March 6, 1647; soldier in King Philip's war. 4. Samuel, born March 23, 1651. 5. Joseph, born October 17, 1653; mentioned below. 6. Lydia, born April 26, 1756. All were born in Boston.

(II) Joseph, son of John Bodman, was born in Boston, October 17, 1653. He settled in Westfield, Massachusetts, as early as 1685, and died there July 8, 1711, aged fifty-six years. His first wife Hepzibah died January 15, 1686-7, and he removed to Hatfield, where on May 4, 1687, he married (second) Naomi Church. He was a soldier in King Philip's war in 1675-6, first in Captain Savage's company, and later in Captain Turner's company, at Brookfield. His name does not appear among those who fought at Turner's Falls, and it is supposed that he was at that time in the service in Northampton or Hadley. He probably lived first in Hadley after going to western Massachusetts, for he was one of the first proprietors of the town of Hatfield, when it was set off from Hadley. He had lands at Hatfield in the earliest division, October, 1684, and afterward. He is said to have been in Westfield, however, in 1681 and 1685. The only child known of the first wife was: 1. Lydia, born January 15, 1685-6, at Westfield. Children of second wife: 2. Manoah, born March 29, 1692; married Anna ———, died without issue. 3. William, born January 5, 1698; died May or July 27, 1723, aged twenty-five. 4. Sarah, born April 10, 1701; married Thomas Kent. 5. Mary, born February 12, 1704; married John Billings. 6. Lydia, born July 30, 1707; married Samuel Harvey. 7. Samuel, mentioned below.

(III) Samuel, son of Joseph Bodman, was born in 1712, and is said to have been the only son to leave issue. He died February 11, 1761. He was deacon of the church at Hatfield, and is buried there in the old Hill burying ground. He married Martha Manns, born 1715, died 1806. Of his seven children, three were sons, who settled in Williamsburg, Massachusetts, between 1770 and 1775: 1. Joseph, born 1730; mentioned below. 2. Samuel, born 1739, died June 26, 1827, aged ninety-eight years; soldier in the revolution, from Hatfield, in Captain Percy Graves's company in 1775. 3. William, born 1741; died January 15, 1835, aged ninety-four years; soldier in the revolution, from Williamsburg, on the Lexington alarm, first lieutenant in Captain Abel Thayer's company, service is also credited to him as of Hatfield.

(IV) Joseph (2), son of Samuel Bodman, was born at Hatfield, in 1730, and died at Williamsburg, September 3, 1818, at the advanced age of eighty-eight years. Williamsburg was part of Hatfield until 1771 and perhaps the family remained on the same farms. Among the children of Joseph was Luther, mentioned below.

(V) Luther, son of Joseph (2) Bodman, was born in Williamsburg, in 1781, and died in 1866. He married Clarissa Day, born January 16, 1787, died in 1864, daughter of Samuel and Ruth (Booth) Day. Children: 1. Luther Jr., born December 11, 1814; mentioned below. 2. Lewis, see forward.

(VI) Lewis, son of Luther Bodman, was born at Williamsburg, Massachusetts, and died in Bement, Illinois. He was educated in the public schools of his native town, then worked in the grocery store of Luman Pease, then of Hatfield, and later of Deerfield, Massachusetts. He then went to Williamsburg, where he engaged in the manufacture of woolen goods, and became one of the leaders among the business men and citizens of that town. He was active in town affairs, prominent in public life, and represented his district in the general court and state senate. Late in life he removed to Bement, Illinois, where he passed his remaining days. He was a Congregationalist in religion. He married Emily Caroline Nash, born in Williamsburg, Massachusetts, died in Knoxville, Tennessee, daughter of Elisha Nash. Children: 1. Lewis Henry, M. D., born in Williamsburg; resides in Toledo, Ohio; has three sons and two daughters. 2. Mary S., died young. 3. Alvin N., died young. 4. Warren, deceased. 5. Joseph G., deceased. 6. Mary S., born in Williamsburg; married Nathan D. Canterbury. 7. Joseph, died in Kansas City, Missouri, aged forty years. 8. Frank H., a traveling salesman; resides in Stamford, Connecticut. 9. Emily A., married Henry W. Littlefield, of Philadelphia; children: Rose, married Joseph Potter, and Paul, a lawyer. 10. Minnie E., married Henry Kemp. 11. Joseph D., deceased.

His will was dated April 13, 1713, and proved March 17, 1717, and mentions all the children except Edward. He married Mary Whitmarsh, who died December 21, 1715, daughter of John Whitmarsh. He invested largely in real estate, building a number of valuable houses, and was considered an authority on real estate values. He was a director of the Weymouth Savings Bank over twenty years, and served on the loan and investment committees. He was a member of the Knights of Pythias, and attended the Universalist church. He was keenly interested in genealogy and local history, and did much research in the town records while holding town office. Few men of his generation were more popular or beloved in the community. He married, January 7, 1866, Mary Lincoln Whiton, born November 12, 1837, at Quincy, Massachusetts. They had no children. Mrs. Bates resides in Braintree.

(The Whiton Line).

The surname Whiton is of English origin, and has many different spellings, among the most common of which are Whiton, Whiting, Witon, Wyton, Whitin. Nearly all of the descendants of the Hingham, Massachusetts, family, spell the name Whiton. The family mentioned below were undoubtedly among the settlers who came from Hingham, England, to Hingham, Massachusetts.

(1) James Whiton, immigrant ancestor, was an inhabitant of Hingham, Massachusetts, as early as 1647, as October 6 that year he gave a letter of attorney to Richard Betscomb, of Hingham, England, to collect a legacy due him from Thomas Wyton, yeoman, deceased, of Hooke Norton, Oxfordshire, England. This Thomas was probably his father. James Whiton was admitted a freeman May 30, 1660.

The surname of this family was MILLER originally Möller, with the umlaut over the first vowel, and was of ancient German origin. It has been anglicized to Miller since coming to the United States. It is known that the family was of some prominence in Germany and Scandinavia in the earlier generations, and there have been many distinguished men of this surname.

(I) Gustaf Adolf Miller (Möller) was born in Sweden in 1803 and died there in 1869. He was well educated and came of a well-to-do family. His grandson, Professor Herbert Adolphus Miller, of Olivet College, Michigan, has in his possession a silver-mounted pipe, an heirloom that has descended from the father of Gustaf A., if not from an earlier ancestor. Gustaf A. was appointed in 1823 Kronolansmanned or landsman, an office held for life, the appointment being vested in the governor of the province of state of Skone. The duties of this office combine those of sheriff and judge of probate and some other functions. He owned several large farms, but the land which is now very valuable was then worth but little. He was, however, a man of substance and influence in the community. He moved several times, but always lived not many miles from the village of Astorp, where he died. He married, in 1825, Anna Beata Ahlstrom, born 1805, died 1880. Her father was a farmer. Children, born at or near Astorp, Sweden: 1. Magnus, changed to William, born June 3, 1826, mentioned below. 2. Mary, June 30, 1827, died in 1869. 3. Frichoff, August 24, 1828, still living (1909) at Horby, Sweden, where he has made his home for more than half a century; he was a merchant there until 1899 when he retired to devote himself to the care of his invalid wife who died shortly afterward; in 1908 the whole village joined in celebrating his eightieth birthday; he enjoys excellent health, having never been sick a day in his life; his only son died at the age of ten years. 4. Matilda, April 22, 1832, married Johan Nilson, a Lutheran minister; daughter Anna Nilson resides at Grebbestad, a fishing village near Norway. 5. Stephanie, February 1, 1836, resides at Astorp. 6. John, February 8, 1838, died in 1877, in the army. 7. Axel, September 11, 1840, came to America and died here. 8. Nelson, February 23, 1843, came to America and died here. 9. Child unnamed, born and died in 1843. 10. Gustave, February 10, 1848, resides with sister Stephanie in Astorp; unmarried.

(II) William, whose baptismal name was Magnus Möller, legally changed after he came to America, was the son of Gustaf Adolf Möller, and was born in Gotenbourg, near Astorp, Sweden, June 3, 1826, died at his home on Commercial street, East Braintree, Massachusetts, July 10, 1883. He was well educated in his native land. His was a varied and eventful life. He left home when a young man and fought in the English army in the Crimean war, but after the battle of Constantinople he left his regiment and made his way to Gibraltar, where he shipped as a sailor. He followed the sea four years and was thrice shipwrecked, once near Barcelona, Spain, once off the coast of England and again off Key West, saving nothing but the clothing he was wearing. In 1857 he visited his old home and spent some time with his relatives in Sweden. He went to London and shipped on an English steamship bound for the United States. During the passage he fell sick and upon arriving in port was placed in the hospital at Chelsea, Massachusetts, and he did not recover in season to join his vessel before sailing. He was employed as a nurse in the hospital after he recovered and made himself exceedingly useful, being able to speak four languages. Many sailors of various nationalities were treated at this institution and his knowledge of their language was greatly appreciated by the authorities. He was skillful and within two years was head nurse of the hospital. He decided to make his home in this country and two brothers, Axel and Nelson, settled in this country. He removed to Lowell, Massachusetts, where he followed his trade as an iron founder until he enlisted in the civil war. He served four years in a Lowell company in the Second Regiment, Massachusetts Heavy Artillery. At the battle of Gettysburg he was wounded in the foot by a musket ball. He took part in many battles and engagements. At the close of the war he followed his trade of iron founder and molder and various other occupations. In 1880 he came to Braintree, where he resided the remainder of his life. He was buried in Mount Hope cemetery, Boston, but in 1909 his body was moved by his son, Charles Oscar, to Weymouth cemetery. During his life in Braintree he occupied the old homestead of the late Rev. Jonas Perkins at the corner of Commercial and Liberty streets, where the Jonas Perkins school now stands. He was fond of travel and during his seafaring life visited the principal cities and places of interest in Asia and Africa, as well as Europe and America. He was a strong swimmer and saved three persons on different occasions from death by drowning. He was a prominent member of General Sylvanus Thayer Post, No. 87, Grand Army of the Republic, of Braintree. He was converted in London when a young man and was an earnest and devout Christian throughout the remainder of his life. He was one of the organizers of the Methodist Episcopal church at East Braintree, and continued active in the work of that society until he died. He was a conscientious, upright and kindly man, well beloved by his family and friends. In politics he was a Republican. Then his mother died and he went to live on a farm in New Hampshire, and there he resided four years and continued his schooling winters for two years. He then returned to his father's home, and worked in the Jenkins shoestring factory in Braintree, where he continued until eighteen years of age, when he left the shoestring shop and began to learn the trade of carpenter, entering the employ of William Wood, of Boston. After three years his employer made him foreman, and during the following two years he had charge of a number of large and very important contracts on the large buildings in Boston, having at times sixty men. At the age of twenty-four he embarked in business as a builder on his own account. His first place of business was on Beverly street, Boston. In 1888 he removed to better quarters on Union Park street and had a well-appointed office and shop there. He built the old Fore River Ship and Engine Company's plant at Quincy; this was later torn down and he erected in its place the great Fore River ship building plant, covering fifty-two acres, and one of the largest and best-equipped plants in the United States, having a capacity for the construction of all sized vessels. Here have been built a number of the largest United States battleships, including the "Vermont," "Dakota" and others, also a large number of submarine vessels. Mr. Miller drove the first stake and completed all the buildings of the entire plant, having a force of over three hundred men. He also assisted in the construction of the Fore River railroad. He built the artificial ice plant for the Birmingham & Atlanta railroad. He remodeled the hotel "Oglethorpe," operated by the Atlantic railroad, and also managed this hotel while it was undergoing repairs. Mr. Miller has his residence and office at 38 Liberty street, Braintree, Massachusetts, in which town he has built many residences and other buildings. He has built and sold some fifty houses on land he bought for development on Liberty street and locality, and few men have done more to benefit the town and promote its welfare. Besides his building and real estate interests he has conducted an extensive insurance business. He has been a justice of the peace since 1891. He is a director of the local board of fire underwriters and of the New England Cement and Products Company. He is manager of the Commonwealth Real Estate Trust. He is a member of the finance committee, Republican town committee, and one of the committee on the abolition of grade crossings. He married, December 21, 1886, Carrie Lizzie Loring, born at East Bridgewater, December 3, 1866, daughter of Benjamin Joseph and Caroline French (Ludden) Loring. Their only child is Bessie Loring, born April 26, 1891, at East Braintree, graduate of the Braintree high school, 1908.

According to the best McKENNEY authority on English surnames, McKenna, as the name of the immigrant ancestor of this family was spelled at first, is a corruption of MacKinnon in Ulster province, Ireland. The spellings McKimney, McKenny and many others are found. The McKinnons or MacKinnons are closely connected with the MacDonalds of the Isles and have no independent history of their own. Burke derives them from Fingon, youngest son of Alpin, King of Scotland, stating that the spelling of the name was first Macfingon, then Macfinden and finally Mackinnon. Burke gives as coat-of-arms of the Mackenay family: Sable three pairs of keys each pair having their handles downwards lozenged, interlaced and endorsed or two and one. Crest: An arm in armour embowed holding a spear top broken and pendent proper.

McKenny is an old Irish surname. The McKenny family of Dublin and Ullard and Ballyshonbay, county Kilkenny, baronet, bears: Or a fleur de lis between three crescents azure on a chief vert a stag pursued by a greyhound argent. Crest: A hand in armour, couped at the wrist holding a roll of parchment. Motto: Vincet Veritas. The tradition of the family is that the ancestry is Scotch. The immigrant may have been one of the Scotch soldiers taken by Cromwell and sent by Cromwell to New England with thousands of others after the battles of Dunbar and Worcester. He had a son Robert, mentioned below.

In April, 1779, he was transferred to Major Lithgow's company in the same regiment. From January to April, 1777, he was a sergeant in Captain Clark's company. He was commissioned lieutenant in Colonel Benjamin Tupper's company, July 4, 1780, and from October to December 1, 1780, was in Captain Stephen Abbott's company of light infantry, under Colonel Tupper. The Newton family, which is one of the most numerous in New England, is of English origin, and was founded in America early in the Colonial period. It is still very numerous represented throughout New England and is identified with the best interests of that section, contributing its proportionate share to its development and progress. Representatives are now scattered over distant states.

(I) Richard Newton, whose birthplace and ancestry has been the subject of many years study by well equipped genealogists, arrived in Massachusetts prior to 1645, in which year he was admitted a freeman of the colony and resided for several years in Sudbury. In company with John Howe and others he petitioned for the settlement of Marlborough, whose incorporation as a town they secured in 1666 and removing thither he located in that part of the town which was afterwards set off as Southborough. He lived to be nearly one hundred years old and died about August 24, 1701. The christian name of his wife was either Anna or Hannah, and she died December 5, 1697. Their children were: 1. John, born 1641. 2. Moses, 1646. 3. Ezekiel. 4. Joseph. 5. Hannah, April 13, 1654, died unmarried. 6. Daniel, December 21, 1655. These are shown by the records of Marlborough. There may have been others.

(II) Moses, son of Richard and Anna or Hannah Newton, was born in 1646, probably in Sudbury, and distinguished himself in defending the town of Marlborough against the savages during King Philip's war. In relation to this incident the Rev. Asa Packard wrote the following account: "The Sabbath when Mr. Brimsmead was in sermon (March 20, 1676), the worshipping was suddenly dispersed by the outcry of 'Indians at the door.' The confusion of the first moment was instantly increased by a fire from the enemy; but the God whom they were worshipping shielded their lives and limbs, excepting the arm of one Moses Newton, who was carrying an elderly and infirm woman to a place of safety. In a few moments they were sheltered in their fort, with the mutual feelings peculiar to such a scene. Their meetinghouse and many dwelling houses left without protection were burnt. Fruit-trees pilled and hacked, and other valuable effects rendered useless perpetuated the barbarity of the savages many years after the inhabitants returned. The enemy retired soon after their first onset declining to risk the enterprise and martial prowess of the young pantation." He married (first) October 27, 1667, Joanna Larkin, who died December 25, 1713. She was the mother of all his children. He married (second) April 14, 1714, Sarah Joslyn, daughter of Nathaniel (1) and Sarah (King) Joslyn, of Marlborough. She was born about 1650 and died November 4, 1723. His children were: 1. Moses, born February 28, 1669. 2. David, 1672. 3. Hannah, December 20, 1673, married William Orcutt. 4. Edward, March 23, 1676. 5. Jonathan, September 30, 1679. 6. Jacob, January 24, 1681. 7. (III) James, sixth son of Moses and Johanna (Larkin) Newton, was born January 15, 1683, in Marlborough, and resided in that part of the town which was included in Southborough at the division in 1727. He died there November 29, 1762. He married (first) October 5, 1709, Mary Joslyn, who died May 27, of the following year. She was born April 14, 1685, daughter of Nathaniel (2) and Hester (Morse) Joslyn, of Marlborough. He married (second) September 8, 1712, Rachel Greeley. Her children were: 1. Andrew, born August 27, 1713. 2. Judith, August 13, 1715. 3. James, August 9, 1719.

4. Rachel, March 31, 1721. 5. Jacob, March 6, 1723. 6. Joseph, who is mentioned hereinafter.

(IV) Joseph, youngest son of James and Rachel (Greeley) Newton, was born July 15, 1728, in Southborough, recorded in Marlborough, and lived there until after 1759. He probably lived for a short time in Templeton, as the records show his removal thence in 1777 to Hubbardstown, Massachusetts, where he died in 1795. He married, December 29, 1756, in Southborough, Experience Drury, who was probably a native of some other town, as no record of her appears in Southborough. Their children recorded in Southborough were: 1. Joseph, born March 4, 1759. 2. Rhoda, April 2, 1761, married Israel Underwood. 3. Mercy, April 3, 1764, died December 11, 1848. 4. John, April 15, 1768. 5. Ebenezer, mentioned below. 6. Keziah, August 8, 1773.

(V) Ebenezer, third son of Joseph and Experience (Drury) Newton, was born December 8, 1770, in Southborough, settled in Hubbardstown and died in Greenfield, Massachusetts, February 16, 1844. He married Mary Howe, born about 1775, died October 15, 1804. Children: 1. Keziah, born July 3, 1799, married Henry Williams. 2. James, subject of the next paragraph. 3. Susan, January 25, 1803, married Sylvanus Dunton. 4. Mary, October 2, 1804, married Stephen Heald, of Barre, Massachusetts.

(VI) James (2), only son of Ebenezer and Mary (Howe) Newton, was born July 21, 1801, in Templeton, Massachusetts, and carried on a farm in Hubbardstown, Massachusetts, several years until he moved to Greenfield in 1835. In that year he purchased of Zebina Knight a farm, including what has been known as the Coates and Woodward places. He lived on the latter place until 1840, when he built the "Newton house," near Green river. In 1848 he built the saw mill which was the foundation of the Newton fortune. One writer says: "The idea of building a sawmill on the little stream where it is located was scoffed at by his neighbors, but it proved that the Newtons knew best." He was a man of tireless industry and remarkable energy, and though quiet and gentle in manner, of strong will and decided opinions. In speaking of him another writer said: "James Newton was a farmer of remarkable ability. He lived on the old Newton place near the Green river, reared a large family of sons and daughters, and through his lumbering business acquired a fortune of good size for those days.

With all the attention he gave to business, he was a close student of the Bible. I have often heard him speak in prayer meetings, and heard him take texts of scripture and speak on them with as much beauty of language and diction and appreciation of the text as any minister. He learned to repeat the entire gospel of St. John." Mr. Newton died in Greenfield, August 19, 1891, aged ninety years. He married, February 10, 1824, Esther Hale, born 1799, died June 7, 1885, and by her had eleven children: 1. Laura, born February 15, 1825, died November 26, 1865; married, June 19, 1855, Israel B. Cross, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin. 2. Sarah, April 2, 1826, died April 26, 1826. 3. Daniel Howe, June 22, 1827, married, September 24, 1862, Mary A. Cogswell, of Essex, Massachusetts; lived in Greenfield and Holyoke. 4. Joseph Drury, December 9, 1828, married, November 23, 1853, Prudence H. Alvord, of Shelburne; lived in Greenfield and later in Holyoke. 5. Susan, May 27, 1830, died July 4, 1863. 6. James Hale, January 13, 1832. 7. Moses, October 27, 1833, married, November 3, 1859, Maria B. Arms, of South Deerfield. 8. Ebenezer, April 6, 1835, died March 4, 1851. 9. Esther, October 4, 1836, married, March 25, 1863, Elias B. McClellan, of Greenfield; lived in Greenfield and Whately. 10. John Carter, April 21, 1838, married, November 28, 1865, Lela F. Vulte, of New York; lived in Holyoke. 11. Solon, March 9, 1841, lived in Greenfield, deceased.

(VII) James Hale, son of James (2) and Esther (Hale) Newton, was born January 13, 1832. He studied at Williston Seminary, entered Amherst College, 1855, then after a year and a half transferred his connection to Dartmouth, where he was graduated in 1859. During his college course he taught school each winter and thus in part earned the means to pay the expenses of his education. Immediately after leaving college he was elected principal of the Thomas grammar school in Worcester, the largest school in the city, and filled that position for the following five years. In 1864 he went to Holyoke and in company with his elder brother, Daniel H., and his younger brother, John C., and others, incorporated and organized the Hampden Paper Company, the third industry of its kind in the town at that time. The company's mill had a capacity of two tons of paper per day. Mr. Newton's connection with the concern was that of business manager and treasurer, which duties he performed until 1866. He then sold his interest in the enterprise and in company with Calvin Taft, his father-in-law, secured the incorporation of the Franklin Paper Company, building a mill having a daily capacity of three tons of envelope and cardboard papers. In 1879 he organized the Weuregan Paper Company, capital, $100,000, and built the Wauregan mill, having a daily capacity of six tons of writing and envelope papers; this mill was owned and operated by members of the Newton family; in 1891-92 the Norman Paper Company, capital, $300,000, was organized by Mr. Newton and other parties and a mill was built having a capacity of twelve tons of writing and envelope papers, and was operated by members of the Newton family. Both of the above mills were sold to the American Writing Paper Company in July, 1899. In 1880 he joined with his brothers, Moses, Daniel H. and John C., in organizing the Chemical Paper Company, and became president of the company on the death of John C., in 1899. The present capacity of the mill is about thirty tons of card and box board papers and twenty tons of writing and envelope paper per day. In 1875 he joined Moses Newton, James Ramage and George A. Clark in organizing the Newton Paper Company. Thus for forty-five years has James Hale Newton been actively identified with the industrial growth of Holyoke, and he is to be counted with the men who were pioneers in the work of industrial development in that now famous manufacturing city. Nor have his energies and means been directed in manufacturing channels alone, for in 1872 he aided in organizing the Mechanics' Savings Bank of Holyoke, serving as its president for twelve years; was a member of the board of directors of the Third National Bank of Springfield from 1873 to 1882; with others he organized the City Bank of Holyoke, in which he was a director until 1884, when he with others organized the Home National Bank of Holyoke, of which he has been president ever since; in 1885 he, with others, organized the People's Savings Bank, of which he was a trustee for several years. He was chairman of the school committee from 1865 to 1868; represented his district in the state legislature for the year 1877; served on the board of public works for the year 1897; has been a director in the Holyoke City Hospital since its organization; has been connected with the Holyoke City Library as trustee since its incorporation. He has been active in church work; was chairman of the parish committee of the Second Congregational church for six years, and superintendent of its Sunday school for one year. He has always taken a keen interest in college affairs, and was president of the Dartmouth Western Massachusetts Alumni Association for two years. He was a member of the Connecticut Valley Congregational Club from its organization and president of the club one year.

Mr. Newton married (first) November 23, 1863, Susan Wadsworth, daughter of Calvin Taft, of Worcester. She was born in 1841 and died in 1900. Children: 1. Edward Taft, born December 15, 1864. 2. Frederick Hale, February 23, 1866. 3. Elias Taft, January 22, 1868. 4. James Bertram, August 11, 1876. He married (second) June 29, 1904, Emily Norcross, born in Winchester, Massachusetts, daughter of Warren Fisher and Emily (Colburn) Norcross. Mrs. Newton was reared in Wellesley Hills; graduated at Wellesley College A. B., 1880, A. M., 1884; studied later at the Harvard Annex and the American Schools of Archaeology at Athens and Rome. She taught Latin in Smith College from 1889 to 1904, holding the position of associate professor when she resigned. Mrs. Newton takes an active part in social, literary and charitable work in the city.

Dwight Ripley Smith, president of the Springfield Fire & Marine Insurance Company, of Springfield, Massachusetts, is descended from Solomon Smith, who was born in Ipswich, Massachusetts, a son of an English emigrant. He removed in the early half of the eighteenth century to Hampton, Connecticut.

(I) Solomon (2), son of Solomon (1) Smith, was born in Hampton, Connecticut, August 31, 1761. He married, January 16, 1787, Sarah Durgee, born September 13, 1766.

(II) Harvey, son of Solomon (2) Smith, was born March 29, 1792, in Hampton. He was a farmer and blacksmith. He married the Widow Achsah Burnham Ashley, born October 19, 1795. Children: Harriett, born in January, 1821, married I. E. Harvey, April 8, 1846. Cornelia, September 6, 1822, died young. Cornelia, June 7, 1824, married John R. Tweedy. Dwight Ripley, mentioned below. John N., August 11, 1830, died January 19, 1897.

(IV) Dwight Ripley, fourth child of Harvey and Achsah Smith, was born in Hampton, Connecticut, May 30, 1826. He was educated in Bacon Academy, in Colechester, Connecticut, and moved to Springfield, Massachusetts, in 1868, where he died April 15, 1880. Mr. Smith's earlier business life was spent in mercantile pursuits in Colchester and Hartford, Connecticut, where he was also general agent of the Hartford City Fire Insurance Company. He came to Springfield to reside in 1868, when he became vice-president and general manager of the Springfield Fire and Marine Insurance Company, and in April, 1874, he was elected president of the same, holding that position until his death. He was also one of the directors of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company and the Agawam National Bank. The estimation in which Mr. Smith was held among insurance men has been shown by the prominent and responsible positions he has held in connection with the National Board of Underwriters, and it is only justice to say that he was one of the best and safest insurance managers in the country. The best possible evidence of his skill and tact as an insurance manager was afforded in the fact that notwithstanding the very severe losses in the great fires at Chicago and Boston in 1871-72 and the critical period of business depression from 1873 to 1877, when many insurance companies failed and withdrew from business, the Springfield Fire and Marine Insurance Company continuously prospered under his direction and its stock steadily appreciated in value. During Mr. Smith's administration, from 1874 to 1880, this company not only paid to its stockholders its regular cash dividends but the capital stock was increased from $500,000 to $1,000,000 by stock dividends from the company's earnings. He had the rare ability of knowing almost instinctively what not to insure, and his good judgment in that direction has been worth a great deal to his company, and his judgment of men and wise selection of the best class of agents to represent the company was of even greater value than his knowledge of risks. He was a warm and constant friend, and few men made friends easier or retained them longer. In all matters pertaining to the interest and permanent welfare of the community he took a quick and lively interest, and the death of such a man, who so well sustained himself in all the relations of business, social and religious life, is a public bereavement, and makes the community the poorer in its very best wealth—good men. The directors of the Fire and Marine Insurance Company adopted the following resolutions on the death of its late president:

"Resolved, That the death of Dwight R.

Smith, our late president, is a great loss to the company and to the community; that to his large experience, he added good judgment, prudence, a wise zeal and strict integrity in the discharge of his responsible duties as the president of this corporation; that he was courteous in manner, amiable and sincere in all the relations of life; a good citizen, and a devout Christian, whose life was a success worthy to be envied, and an example worthy to be followed."

The Agawam National Bank also adopted the following resolutions:

"The board of directors wish to place upon record their deep sense of the loss sustained by the business community, and particularly this bank, by the death of Dwight R. Smith, for many years a faithful and conscientious member of this board.

"They wish to assure his family that they sympathize with them in their personal loss, which is shared with them by all who were connected with him in business or society.

"And we do hereby vote that we attend the funeral in a body.

"Resolved, That this board tenders to the family of the deceased, its sincere sympathy in their great and irreparable loss.

"Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the records of this company, and that a copy be sent to the family of our departed friend."

In religious belief Mr. Smith was a Congregationalist, being a member of the South Congregational Church of Springfield. He married Mary Louise Avery, (see Avery). Children: Cornelia Achsah, born in Colchester, November 17, 1854, married, October 17, 1877, Samuel A. Bangs, of Springfield. Charles Dwight, mentioned below. Mary Louise, born June 25, 1866, died January 17, 1876. George Freeman, born July 17, 1870, was drowned at Block Island, August 1, 1897. He was a graduate of Amherst College in 1894.

(V) Charles Dwight, eldest son of Dwight Ripley and Mary Louise (Avery) Smith, was born in Hampton, November 26, 1861, and resides in Springfield. He received a high school education and was for fifteen years connected with the insurance company of which his father was president, acting as special agent for New England states. He is a member of the Winthrop Club. Mr. Smith married Jennie A. Bunnell, of Blairstown, New Jersey. Her father was a prominent man in this town and one of the founders of Blair Academy.

Avery is a good name to conjure with. The line contains such names as John D. Rockefeller, whose grandfather, Godfrey Rockefeller, married Lucy Avery; and the Hon. Schuyler Colfax, vice-president of the United States. The record of the achievements of its scions is a noble one and its ramifications extend into every state in the Union.

(I) Christopher Avery, emigrant ancestor, was born in England about 1590. The family is said to have been native to Cornwall. It is not known where he made his landfall or when, but he was selectman of Gloucester, Massachusetts, in 1646-52-54, and he took the oath of allegiance and fidelity, June 29, 1653. Also he was constable and clerk of the market. He was fined twenty pounds at Ipswich court for living apart from his wife. Upon his petition to the court, being aged and poor and having no means to procure his wife hither, his fine was remitted. He left her in England. In 1658 he sold land in Gloucester and removed to Boston, buying real estate in what is now the center of the city. The deed was acknowledged before Governor Endicott. For this he paid forty pounds and its location was where the present post office building stands and near what was afterwards the birthplace of Benjamin Franklin. He removed to New London, Connecticut, with his son James, and died there March 12, 1679.

(II) James, only son of Christopher Avery, was born in England in 1620, died in New London, April 18, 1700. He was granted land October 19, 1650, a town lot on Cape Ann Lane and in addition "Little Owle Meadow." In 1652 he was granted land in South Groton, Connecticut, and in 1653 secured a farm on the "Pocketannock Grants" on the river Thames. In 1684 he bought the "Unadorned church and watchtower of the wilderness" out of the timber of which he constructed a dwelling and it was standing until about 1902, when it was destroyed by fire. He was active in military affairs. This part of Connecticut was the seat of the Pequot war and in this strife he took a prominent part. In 1665 he was made lieutenant of "ye train band." He was one of the commission to lay out a reservation for the Coassotuck Indians, and for this service he was allowed five pounds. In 1668 he was chosen one of a committee to settle the boundary line with the Uncas. When danger was apprehended from the Dutch along the Connecticut coast, Captain Avery was ordered to prepare for the defense. During the King Philip war, he had charge of the three towns of New London, Stonington and Lyme, and also the friendly Pequots. In the stubborn fight at South Kingston, Rhode Island, on Sunday, December 19, 1675, against the desperate Narragansetts, Captain Avery commanded the Pequot contingent. At a later engagement the chief sachem Canonchet was captured and the power of the mighty tribe which had long terrorized the community was humbled and permanently broken. In these culminating events of a great war drama, Captain Avery acted a foremost part. No enemy ever saw his back; he faced the foe in every emergency. As a civilian, he was equally prominent, being selectman twenty years. One of the acts of his official life deserves especial mention, inasmuch as he ordered "that for the good of after posterity, the town book be kept with an Alphabet where all acts passed shall hereafter be recorded, and we agree that all old books be searched into what is material concerning the public good to be drawn." In 1663 he was appointed by the general court a commissioner of the peace to try petty offences, an office corresponding to a justice of the peace. He was twelve times elected a member of the general court. His tax rate was two hundred and thirty-six pounds. Likewise he was very active in ecclesiastical affairs. In 1677 he was one of the building committee for erecting a new church in place of the outgrown Blimman church, and in 1683 he was on a committee to send a letter to Rev. Mr. Mather for advice in regard to a successor to Rev. Mr. Bradford. Captain James Avery was a very remarkable man. Living as he did in stirring times, he was a leader among strong men, enjoying their confidence and respect because he deserved them. Especially is it to be noted that, although the state then took cognizance of affairs which we now call private and interfered in the details of family life and personal relations in a way that would not be tolerated now, he was never censured or "presented" for any shortcoming or alleged dereliction of duty or propriety. Eminent in all the relations of life, his descendants look upon him with pride and affection." He married, November 10, 1643, Joanna Greenshade, of Boston, who died in 1714. Children: Hannah, James, Mary, Thomas, John, Rebecca, Jonathan, Christopher and Samuel.

(III) James (2), eldest son of James (1) and Joanna (Greenshade) Avery, was born December 16, 1648, in Gloucester, died in Groton, Connecticut, August 22, 1748. He was a man of affairs in his township, being deputy for the general court at Hartford for New London six times, commissioner of the peace, captain of the train band and advisor and counsellor of the Pequot Indians. Also he was a committee on boundary disputes between his town and the adjoining one, and on the location of public lands. He and his wife joined the Church of Christ in 1672. He appeared before the general court in 1696 in behalf of the inhabitants on the east side of New London river to establish a church. This was the beginning of the church at Groton. The tombstone of himself and wife in a very good state of preservation stands near the center of the west burying ground at Poquonnoc. He married Deborah, daughter of Edward Stallyon, February 18, 1669. She died March 27, 1729. Children: Margaret, Edward, Ebenezer, Christopher, Jonathan, Mary, Hannah, Sarah, Joseph, Benjamin and Mary.

(IV) Christopher (2), fourth son of Captain James (2) and Deborah (Stallyon) Avery, was born in Groton, January 23, 1679, died January 20, 1753. He married Abigail, daughter of Captain John Parke, and she died February 12, 1713. Children: John, Abigail, Christopher and Nathan.

(V) John, eldest son of Christopher (2) and Abigail (Parke) Avery, was born October 26, 1708, died August 29, 1790. He married, February 19, 1732, Annie, born August 6, 1708, daughter of Joseph Stanton. Children: John, Abigail, Amos, Annie, Margaret, Isaac, James and Hannah.

(VI) John (2), eldest son of John (1) and Annie (Stanton) Avery, was born December 6, 1732, died July 23, 1794. He married, January 22, 1752, Mary, daughter of Robert Parke. She died January 14, 1769. Children: Elizabeth, Ziporrah, John, Anna, Samuel, Robert, William, Hannah. He married (second) his cousin, Experience, daughter of Robert Stanton. Children: Robert S., Nathaniel, Amos, Jonas, Mary and Christopher.

(VII) Samuel, second son of John (2) and Mary (Parke) Avery, was born January 3, 1760, died February 13, 1836. He married, in 1782, at Groton, Sarah Eldridge, born in 1761, died in 1811. Children: Samuel, Sarah Eldridge, Betsey, Lucy, Maria, Harriet and Austin.

(VIII) Austin, youngest child of Samuel and Sarah (Eldridge) Avery, was born in June, 1804. He was a carriage builder and resided at Franklin, Connecticut. He married,

May 19, 1826, Mary Peters, of Stonington, Connecticut. Children: Harriet E.; Mary Louise, born August 29, 1828, in Franklin, Connecticut, married, January 17, 1854, Dwight R. Smith, q. v., in preceding sketch.

(For first generation see Edward Sprague 1).

(III) Sergeant Samuel Sprague, SPRAGUE son of William Sprague, was born in Hingham, Massachusetts, May 24, 1640, died in 1710. He moved from his native town of Marshfield in 1663 and was town treasurer there in 1665. He may have gone there to live with his uncle, Anthony Eames, who settled in Marshfield as early as 1652. Sprague became a leading citizen; was highway surveyor in 1663; was deputy to the general court nearly every year between 1680 and 1704; was selectman in 1677-81-86-87-94-95-97 to 1706 and 1709-10. He held one or more public offices every year except four after he came to Marshfield. He was sergeant in 1686 and afterward. In June, 1686, he was elected secretary of the general court and recorder of the court of assistants and served until the union of the Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay colonies in 1692, except during the Andros regime. He was the last secretary of the Plymouth colony. Part of his duties was to act as register of deeds and wills. He was elected to office sixty-three times. He married, 1665-66, Sarah Chillingworth and went to live on the Chillingworth estate on the north side of the South river. His widow's will was dated May 14, 1725, when she calls herself "very aged." Children: 1. Samuel, eldest, removed to Duxbury before 1710; grandfather of Hon. Seth Sprague. 2. John, removed to Duxbury; resided on Sprague's Neck. 3. Nathan, resided at Marshfield; married Margaret ———; his son James was the father of Captain Jonathan Sprague, of Marshfield, born 1744. 4. James, mentioned below. 5. Sarah, married Joseph Holmes; their son John lived at Plymouth. 6. Mary, married Nathaniel Williamson. 7. Joanna, married, May 1, 1710, John Holmes, of Marshfield. 8. Hannah, married John Ruggles Jr., December 11, 1700.

(IV) James, son of Samuel Sprague, was born at Marshfield about 1690. He had a share of the homestead with his mother, after his father died. He married, November 19, 1717, Hannah Black, at Marshfield. Children: 1. James, mentioned below. 2. Hannah, married Barnabas Ford. Perhaps other children.

(V) James (2), son of James (1) Sprague, was born in Marshfield, 1720-30. He married Sarah Jackson and settled in his native town. Children: 1. James Jr. 2. Ezekiel (?), was living in Marshfield in 1790. 3. Melzar, mentioned below. In 1790 James had three males over sixteen and two females in his family; James Jr., his cousin or son, had two sons under sixteen and one female in his family. Jonathan and Ezekiel were also heads of families in Marshfield.

(VI) Melzar, son or nephew of James (2) Sprague, was born in Marshfield in 1770, died there May 2, 1844. He married Eleanor Keen, who died April 1, 1855, at Marshfield. Child, Jairus, mentioned below.

(VII) Jairus, son of Melzar Sprague, was born in Marshfield, March 14, 1807. The homestead was in the south part of the town. He attended school in his native town, and learned the trade of nailer in his youth. He followed it for a few years, and then engaged in business as a contractor and builder. He came from Marshfield to South Bridgewater, and in 1841 removed to East Weymouth where he built the nail factory, also a number of houses, and when the church was rebuilt he built the steeple. During the last years of his life he bought and sold houses and dealt extensively in real estate. He was a very capable and successful business man, energetic, industrious and upright. He was a prominent member of the Congregational church and a deacon for many years. A portrait of Deacon Sprague may be seen in the vestry of the church. He was a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, and of Crescent Lodge, No. 82, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He married Deborah Barker, born September 1, 1802, at Pembroke, Massachusetts, died August 24, 1864, at East Weymouth. He married (second) Mary Bates, born 1818, died 1901, at East Weymouth. He received his education in the public schools of East Weymouth, whither his parents moved when he was very young. He learned his father's trades of nailer and carpenter, and as a young man became associated with him in his business as a builder. He went to Towanda, Pennsylvania, in 1871, built a nail factory and set up all the machinery, later returning to East Weymouth. He then went to Canada and spent some time experimenting on nails for Mr. Stacey, after which he again returned to East Weymouth and was for a time engaged in the plumbing business, being also, at intervals, employed in the nail factory. In 1880 he built the house adjoining the one where his widow now lives. He was a skillful mechanic in various trades and was for some years engaged in the manufacture of cartons (paper boxes) in Weymouth, and was also an active dealer in real estate. He was a keen and successful business man, highly respected and esteemed by his townsmen, thoroughly fair and straightforward in his dealings, of sterling character. He was a liberal supporter and an active member of the Congregational church. In politics he was a Democrat, but he sought no public offices. He was domestic in his tastes and devoted to his family. He married, November 28, 1854, Susan Jordan Lovell, born August 22, 1832, at East Weymouth. She survives her husband and resides at East Weymouth. She is the daughter of George Goodnow Lovell. Children: 1. Mary D., born October 19, 1864, mentioned below. 2. Arthur B., born October 24, 1869, died June 14, 1871, at East Weymouth.

Robert Clark, probably of Scotch CLARK ancestry, was an early settler at Buckland, Massachusetts. According to the census of 1790 he was living at Buckland and had three males over sixteen, two under sixteen and four females in his family—four sons probably and three daughters. He was probably born in Ireland of Scotch-Irish parents and Scotch ancestry. It is not known to the writer whether his parents came to this country. According to family tradition he lived for a time in Plymouth and Bristol counties before coming to Buckland. He was a farmer at Buckland.

(II) James, son of Robert Clark, was born in Buckland about 1780, and died there. He was a farmer in Buckland all his active life. He married Almeda Davis. Children: James, Daniel, Chandler, mentioned below; Almeda.

(III) Chandler, son of James Clark, was born February 24, 1807, died December 30, 1877, in Holyoke. He married, December 17, 1835, Joanna Woodward, daughter of Spencer Woodward, of Buckland. He settled in 1859 in Holyoke, where he was an active member of the Methodist church. He was a shoe merchant. His wife died May 28, 1885. Children: 1. Eliza Townsley, born November 14, 1836, died at Charlemont, Massachusetts, November 12, 1853. 2. Francis Asbury, December 29, 1840, died April 15, 1843. 3. Embury Philip, mentioned below.

(IV) Colonel Embury Philip, son of Chandler Clark, was born in Buckland, March 31, 1845. He was educated in the public schools and began work as clerk in a grocery store. When but seventeen years old, he enlisted in Company B, Forty-sixth Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, for the civil war, in July, 1862. He was appointed corporal and served nine months. The regiment was sent to North Carolina and immediately began campaign work on an expedition to Kinston, White Hall and Goldsboro, under General J. G. Foster. The following summer it was ordered to Fortress Monroe to join the Army of the James, but instead was dispatched to Baltimore, then to Harper's Ferry, finally joining the army of the Potomac at Funkstown, Maryland. After his service he returned to Holyoke and was successively a druggist, paymaster of a large manufacturing concern, and registrar of the Holyoke Water Works, an office which he held from July 1, 1876, until January 1, 1893, when he resigned to take up the duties of sheriff. Colonel Clark was prominently identified with educational work and was fifteen years a member of the school board. He was elected sheriff of Hampden county in 1892, and has held the office ever since. In politics he is a Republican. In 1868 he enlisted in the state militia, Second Regiment, and was appointed sergeant of Company K. He was elected captain, June 4, 1869; major, August 14, 1871; colonel, August 31, 1875; and discharged April 28, 1876. He is a member of Massachusetts Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States; of the Naval and Military Order of Spanish-American War, of which he was commander-in-chief in 1904; of the Society Army of Santiago de Cuba; Order of Foreign Wars, and of the League of Spanish War Veterans. Mr. Clark is a member of the Springfield Board of Trade; Nayasset Club; Winthrop Club; Holyoke Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows; Knights of Pythias of Holyoke; Belcher Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons. He married, August 21, 1866, Eliza Ann Seaver, born February 13, 1846, daughter of Perley and Julia (Field) Seaver. Children: 1. Kate Elizabeth, born at Chicopee, December 3, 1869; married Edwin L. The surname Snell has been known since about the last half of the seventeenth century, although the immigrant ancestor of the family sought to be treated in this place did not come into the country until about the time of the first war with the mother country.

(I) John Snell, the immediate ancestor of the immigrant, was of English birth and ancestry, and lived on what was known as the West North Farm, in Doubwalls, near Liskard, England. He had two brothers, Samuel and Edward, both of whom came to America about the time of the revolution and are supposed to have settled somewhere in the New England colonies. The Snells of New Bedford, Massachusetts, are of this same family, although it is not known from which of the brothers they are descended. John Snell married twice, the name of his first wife being (it is believed) Mary Stevens, but the name of his second wife does not appear. His children, born of his first marriage, were: John (see post), Richard, Elizabeth, Mary, Samuel, Ann, Eliza, who married in England, Thomas Mayne, of Cornwall, and on coming to America settled in Montreal, Canada.

(II) John (2), son of John (1) and Mary (Stevens) Snell, was born on the homestead at the West North Farms, in Doubwalls, England, and was about nineteen years old when his father died. After that on account of a misunderstanding with his brothers he resolved to leave England and come to America. He sailed for this country and took up his home in Wayne county, Pennsylvania, where he died and is buried. Five of his children were born in England. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Jonathan and Alma Werry. She was baptized December 1, 1794, and by her John Snell had eight children: 1. Mary, born March 15, 1822, died April 4, 1904; married Thomas Stevens. 2. John, January 30, 1824, died about 1854; never married. 3. Richard, April 12, 1826, went to sea and never was heard of afterward. 4. Samuel (see post). 5. Elizabeth, December 29, 1829, died in 1866; married Jacob Fox, who is still living in Ohio. 6. Jane Phillips, December 31, 1833; married Charles Bode, and has three children: Richard, Joseph and Mary Bode. 7. Ann Maria, January 3, 1836; married William Gregory. 8. Ellen, April 29, 1838, died young.

(III) Samuel, son of John (2) and Elizabeth (Werry) Snell, was born May 4, 1828, and when a boy was sent to the common schools of the township in Wayne county, Pennsylvania, in which his parents then lived. At the age of sixteen he began working out at farming, and when about nineteen years old he began an apprenticeship to the trade of a carpenter, worked with Nettleton, Bartlett & Ferry, in Springfield, Massachusetts, in which city he lived about two and one half years. He then removed to Holyoke and followed his trade of journeyman carpenter, and in the course of his work in that city he assisted in the erection of the Lyman mills and other large structures built by the Holyoke Water Power Company. About 1878 he became interested in the manufacture of pottery drainer bottoms for use in the paper mills of Holyoke, and the business then started in a small way gradually developed into one of the most extensive enterprises of its kind in the region. In 1862 Mr. Snell was one of the owners and operated the Holyoke Swing Ferry. He was the first man who built the first tar walk in Holyoke and was the owner of the business. He also helped to build the first Quaker church in Brooklyn, New York. And besides his interest in business concerns Mr. Snell during his long residence in Holyoke has been somewhat active in public affairs and has served in various capacities, such as member of the city government, in the fire department for four years and as member of the board of engineers about the same length of time. He is a communicant in the Protestant Episcopal church, a Republican in politics, a Master Mason and an Odd Fellow. He married, October 15, 1866, Phebe Ann, daughter of Benjamin Arnold and Mary (Green) Streeter, of Vernon, Vermont (see Streeter).

The Streeter family in New England in early times appears to have been a part of the agricultural class of the community during the long period in which farm owners were leaders in the affairs of the several communities in which they lived; but in more recent years the tendency of the family has been to draw away from the farm and incline in the direction of business and professional pursuits.

(I) Stephen Streeter, the immigrant ancestor of the branch of the family here proposed to be treated, is supposed to have been born in Gourdhurst, Kent, England, about the year 1600, and was living there until the time of his departure for America, about 1639 or 1640. He appears first in the old town of Gloucester on Cape Ann, Massachusetts Bay Colony, where he took the freeman's oath, May 20, 1644. He and his wife Ursula united with the church there on March 21, 1652, and it is quite probable that he died soon after the date last mentioned. As shown by his will he was a cordwainer (shoemaker) by trade. Stephen and Ursula Streeter had seven children: 1. Stephen (see post). 2. Sarah. 3. Samuel. 4. John, a soldier of King Philip's war. 5. Hannah. 6. Rebecca. 7. Mary, who was born after her father's death, about 1652.

(II) Stephen (2), eldest son and child of Stephen (1) and Ursula Streeter, died in 1689. He lived in Charlestown, Watertown, Muddy River (Brookline) and Cambridge. He inherited from his father one half of his homestead in Charlestown, which he and his wife Deborah, then living at Muddy River, sold in 1679. In 1681 they also sold lands in Charlestown, formerly the property of his father, to Richmond Russell. Further than this nothing is known of Stephen Streeter, and he appears not to have made a will, nor is there any record of administration of his estate. He died in Cambridge in 1689, and his widow was admitted to church communion there in 1701. They had eight children: 1. Stephen, born Watertown, June 20, 1667. 2. Sarah, Watertown, October 2, 1669. 3. Samuel, born probably at Muddy River. 4. John (see post). 5. Rebecca, September 3, 1683, at Cambridge. 6. Deborah, Cambridge, September 25, 1685, died April 7, 1689. 7. Joseph, September 18, 1687, died October 22, 1736. 8. Benjamin, November 25, 1689, died 1690.

(III) John, son of Stephen (2) and Deborah Streeter, was born probably at Muddy River (Brookline), and afterward lived at Cambridge, from whence he removed about 1706 to Attleboro and settled in that part of the town known as Cumberland, where he died April 5, 1729. The record shows that he bought lands there in 1705 and at various times afterward. He owned the covenant in Cambridge in 1700, and evidently was a man of piety and industry. He married (first) April 9, 1700, at Cambridge, Mary Whitcomb, who died at Attleboro, February 5, 1715-16, and married (second) August 1, 1716, in Rehoboth, Judith Shores (or Shares), of Wrentham, who survived him and afterward married Edward Day, of Attleboro. John Streeter had in all fifteen children, nine by his first and six by his second wife. The first three were born in Cambridge and the others in Attleboro: 1. Hannah, December 26, 1700. 2. Mary, March 29, 1702. 3. John, April 6, 1704, died 1757. 4. Elizabeth, March 27, 1706, died June 7, 1706. 5. James, March 26, 1707 (see post). 6. Jonathan, March 2, 1708-09, died before 1728. 7. Elizabeth, October 13, 1711, died April 7, 1712. 8. Josiah, March 3, 1712-13. 9. Jeremiah, February 3, 1715-16. 10. Abigail, September 17, 1717. 11. Rachel, February 24, 1719. 12. Sarah, February 9, 1721. 13. Isaiah, July 29, 1724. 14. Amy, July 15, 1726. 15. Hannah, April 30, 1729.

(IV) James, son of John and Mary (Whitcomb) Streeter, was born in Attleboro, March 26, 1707, and was baptized at Rehoboth, May 4 following. He died in Cumberland, probably before 1760, for his son Jonathan, who made his will on May 23 of that year, mentions his mother, brothers and sisters, but not his father. He married, at Rehoboth, August 8, 1734, Jemima Staples, who survived him and afterward married, December 11, 1764, Samuel Tingley, of Attleboro. James and Jemima (Staples) Streeter had nine children: 1. Esther, born Attleboro, September 2, 1735, married Enoch Streeter. 2. Jonathan, Wrentham, January 19, 1736-37, died December 1, 1760; was a soldier of the French and Indian war. 3. Jemima, April 25, 1739, died Chesterfield, New Hampshire, 1776; married Ebenezer Streeter. 4. James, January 16, 1741 (see post). 5. Amos, September 24, 1744. 6. David. 7. Mary, married, 1779, John Brayler, of Cumberland. 8. Rachel, November 5, 1749. 9. John, August 16, 1751.

(V) James (2), son of James (1) and Jemima (Staples) Streeter, was born in Cumberland, January 16, 1741. He was a grantee of lands in Cumberland in 1771, but later removed to Vernon, Vermont, where, February 14, 1804, he and his wife Hannah deeded to their son James lands in Hillsdale, New Hampshire, and he takes in return to himself a lease to improve the same during the lifetime of himself and his wife Hannah. Mrs. Hannah Sweetland, youngest child of James and Hannah Streeter, said that she was nine years old when her parents moved to Vermont, which was in 1791, and she was born in 1782. James Streeter married, October 21, 1764, Hannah Tower, born August 5, 1744, daughter of John and Hannah (Hancock) Tower, and by whom he had nine children: 1. Jonathan, born about 1766-67, died 1791. 2. John, died unmarried. 3. James, May 4, 1771. 4. Lydia. 5. Asa. 6. Paul, November 9, 1778 (see post). 7. Lucretia, married ——— Johnson. 8. Hannah, March 5, 1782, died February 21, 1884, aged one hundred and one years, eleven months, eighteen days; married, 1798, Thomas Sweetland.

(VI) Paul, son of James (2) and Hannah (Tower) Streeter, was born in Cumberland, November 9, 1778, died in Vernon, Vermont, November 6, 1857. He was a farmer (called yeoman) and spent the greater part of his life in Vermont. He married, January 1, 1800, Anna Dresser, born Goshen, Connecticut, December 13, 1784, died March 7, 1859, having borne her husband twelve children: 1. Lucretia, December 31, 1801, married Stephen Johnson. 2. Luther, March 27, 1803, died in Chicopee, Massachusetts; married, December 23, 1824, Celinda Stearns, born November 8, 1805. 3. Noyes, March 10, 1806, died in Vernon, Vermont; married (first) Mary Gould, (second) January 10, 1860, Widow Laura Evans. 4. Philander H., May 9, 1808, died February 28, 1861; married, July 21, 1830, Polly Butterfield, born July 21, 1810, died May 17, 1866. 5. Benjamin Arnold, July 14, 1810 (see post). 6. Lucinda, April 17, 1813, died November 14, 1847; married Charles Stoddard. 7. Julia Ann, September 23, 1814, died December 25, 1862; married Jonathan B. Greene. 8. William Beering was born in BEERING Hanover, Germany, of an ancient and influential German family. From the same stock were descended the founders of the famous banking house of Baring Brothers, London, England. He was a man of means and for many years was a banker and broker in his native city. He died in Hanover at the age of seventy-eight years. He married Mary ———. Children: 1. William Jr., served for three years in the German army, now a prominent business man of Hanover. 2. Frederick William, born December 21, 1842; mentioned below. 3. Henry, settled in Brazil.

(II) Frederick William, son of William Beering, was born in Hanover, December 21, 1842, and received a thorough education at the Hanover Gymnasium. He went to Brazil, South America, where his brother Henry owned what has since proved to be one of the richest and most profitable mines on the Continent, but while Henry Beering was in Germany on a visit he fell sick and died before the title could be properly protected and secured, the property reverted to the government and the heirs lost great wealth. Frederick W. returned to Germany, after the death of his brother, and not long afterward embarked for the United States, landing in New York and soon afterward coming to Boston, where he followed the art of wood-engraving, carving and designing. He attained much skill in this difficult craft and made wood-carving his occupation through his active life. In recent years he has been virtually retired from active labor, residing with his son, Dr. Beering, at Jamaica Plain. He married, in Boston, June 20, 1771, Elizabeth Radway, born at Astilbrach, some twenty miles from Hanover, Germany, in 1846. She came to this country when six years old with her parents and settled in New York City. Her father, Brigadier General Henry Radway, was for many years a prominent officer of the German army, who became a wealthy dealer in rag and paper stock. His place of business was at the corner of Fifth avenue and Twelfth street, New York City. In later years he suffered large financial losses. He died at the age of seventy-six years; his wife died several years afterward. Mrs. Beering has one sister, Anne, wife of Florentine Schentzer, a watch-case maker, Bromfield street, Boston. Children of Mr. and Mrs. Beering, born in Boston: 1. Frederick William Jr., October 1, 1875, mentioned below. 2. Cecilia, September 21, 1877; educated in the public schools of Boston; lives at home with her parents. 3. Josephine, April 5, 1879; educated in the Boston public schools; resides with parents.

(III) Dr. Frederick William (2), son of Frederick William (1) Beering, was born in Boston, October 1, 1875. He attended the public and high schools of Boston and the Harvard Medical School. He left Harvard before graduating to complete his medical studies in Vienna. Having graduated and having had valuable hospital experience, he returned to Boston and began to practice in Jamaica Plain, December 10, 1899. He and his father bought the home on South street where he has his offices. He has enjoyed a large practice, especially in surgery, which he has made a specialty, and he has performed many notable capital operations. Dr. Beering stands well in the medical fraternity and is often called in consultation with other practitioners. He has given his undivided attention to study and practice from the outset. In politics he is a Republican, and in religion a Roman Catholic. He is a member of various medical societies.

The Fotch family is of ancient FOTCH Saxon stock, intermingled with Hungarian, and many of the men of this surname have been prominent and influential in Germany.

(1) Joseph Fotch was born in Saxony, Germany, in 1818, and died in Tokay, Hungary, in 1884. He was educated in the German schools and learned the trade of upholsterer. He went to Tokay where he followed his trade in connection with other business all his active life. In 1847-48 he served in the army and fought in many engagements during the war, but escaped with slight wounds. He married, in Tokay, Theresa Bély, who was born in or near Tokay in 1828, of an ancient Hungarian family. She was liberally educated in the modern and ancient languages, several of which she spoke fluently. She died in 1870 from the shock of the great fire that destroyed most of the city, including all the houses, stock and household goods of Mr. Fotch and the large holdings in real estate and vineyards of the Bély family. Stephen Bély, her father, was a prominent grape grower and wine merchant. He also served in the army in the rebellion of 1847-48. The Bély family was prominent in Tokay and Zemplin county for many generations. Stephen's brother, Alexander Bély, was for thirty years county judge; his brother Julius was a priest of the Roman Catholic church to which the family adhered. Another brother was city treasurer of Tokay. Of the twelve children of Joseph Fotch, all sons, six grew to maturity, viz: 1. Alexander E., learned the trade of furrier; served in the army; came to New York; removed to Cleveland, Ohio, where he established himself as a furrier and is one of the leading merchants in his line in that city; married Mary Stulman, a native of Hungary, niece of a Hungarian bishop and sister of a prominent priest of Tokay; their only child Elizabeth is a nun. 2. Rudolph, lived on the homestead in Tokay and cultivated his vineyard; served in the Hungarian army; had two sons. 3. Stephen, lives in Nagyvarad, a successful shoe dealer; married, but childless. 4. He began an apprenticeship at the furrier's trade when fifteen years old at Kassa. His term of apprenticeship was four years, but he was so apt at the business that he received his certificate at the end of three years and a half. He entered the Hungarian army and a month later was appointed a corporal, promoted to the rank of sergeant a year later, serving for four years in all. He then returned to Kassa and followed his trade there for four years. In 1882 he determined to seek a better opportunity in the United States and came to Boston. Here he found employment at his trade and was able in 1888 to establish himself in business. He opened a fur store on Winter street, Boston, and from the outset enjoyed a prosperous trade. His industry, enterprise and skill in his trade brought him success in business. After ten years in his first location he removed to better quarters in 1898 at 128a Tremont street, where his success has continued. He has many of the best families of the city among his customers. Mr. Fotch is one of those well-bred, educated German gentlemen, whose artistic taste and high ideals command the respect and wins the friendship of all with whom he comes in contact. He is an active member of the Boston School Verein and prominent in the various German orders at Jamaica Plain, where he makes his home. He worked at his trade in this country and kept pace with the progress in methods when hand-work was being displaced by machinery. He soon engaged in business on his own account in Boston and in 1875 was manufacturing hand-made boots and shoes, having also a retail store at 1142 Tremont street, Boston. His business grew year by year and in 1890 he moved to larger quarters in the Institute Building on Tremont street. In 1902 he sold his business and retired with a competence. WASON set into the colony of New Hampshire from Ireland about two centuries ago came the ancestors of the Wasons. Like the great majority of settlers from that island, the immigrant Wason came to the wilderness of a new country to bear the hardships and privations and enjoy the freedom and advantages of a land in a state of almost primitive nature. He proved his good qualities as a pioneer, was an enterprising and respected citizen, and became the ancestor of men who today are among the leading citizens of the state.

(I) James Wason, a native of the parish of Ballymena, county Antrim, Ireland, was born in 1711. When a young man he removed to Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and subsequently to Nottingham, now Hudson, where he lived until his death, August 22, 1799, aged eighty-eight. He married at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, November 30, 1736, Hannah Caldwell, also a native of Ballymena. She died April 6, 1786, at the age of eighty years.

(II) Lieutenant Thomas, son of James and Hannah (Caldwell) Wason, born in Hudson, December 26, 1748, died November 18, 1832. He married, at Londonderry, December 1, 1772, Mary Boyd, born May 27, 1749, died October 20, 1832, daughter of Robert Boyd, of Londonderry. She was a granddaughter of Robert Boyd Sr., who with his wife whose maiden name was Morrison, emigrated from Ireland to New England about the year 1720, and settled in Londonderry.

(III) Robert, son of Lieutenant Thomas and Mary (Boyd) Wason, was born in Nottingham West, now Hudson, June 14, 1781. He went to New Boston, April, 1803, to live with Robert Boyd, his uncle, who settled on lot No. 30, near Joe English hill, "being advanced in years." Robert Wason inherited his uncle's farm and resided upon it for the remainder of his life. He took an active part in public affairs and served in various offices. He united with the Presbyterian church in 1815, and a few years afterwards was elected elder, which office he held until his death. Deacon Wason was a man of great energy, and entered with zeal upon every enterprise adopted to benefit the church or the community, so that he was a "doer of the word" as well as a hearer, and his death, August 7, 1844, aged sixty-three, was greatly lamented and the loss of his influence seriously felt. He was married, December 2, 1808, by Rev. Mr. Bruce, to Nancy, daughter of John Batchelder, of Mount Vernon. She was born October 13, 1789, died July 28, 1863, having survived her husband nineteen years. She was a faithful mother and a woman of many christian virtues. Children of Robert and Nancy Wason were: 1. Elbridge, see forward. 2. Louisa. 3. Hiram W., born December 18, 1814; graduated at Amherst, 1838, and later from Andover Theological Seminary, and then settled at Vevay, Indiana. 4. Nancy. 5. Mary. 6. Robert Boyd, see forward. 7. Adeline. 8. Caroline. 9. George Austin, see forward.

(IV) Elbridge, eldest son of Deacon Robert and Nancy (Batchelder) Wason, was born in New Boston, September 26, 1809, reared in that village and educated in New Boston and at Pinkerton Academy, Derry, New Hampshire. He came to Boston, Massachusetts, March 5, 1832, and entered the employ of Pierce & Gardner, where he remained in the position of clerk until September 1, 1837, when he formed a partnership with Henry Pierce, which continued uninterruptedly until his death, August 19, 1887, a period of fifty years. He was one of the oldest and best known business men of Boston, upright and honorable in all his dealings, respected by all who knew him. He was a member of the Masons, in which organization he held office at different times. He married (first) April 24, 1851, Mary Stickney, born June 30, 1809, died August 15, 1863. Married (second) May 17, 1865, Mary Isabella Chase, born March 30, 1835, daughter of the Hon. Leonard Chase, of Milford, New Hampshire. Two children were born of this marriage: 1. Mary Isabella, born January 11, 1867, married, June 4, 1890, Jesse S. Wiley, of Brookline, Massachusetts. 2. Leonard Chase, August 5, 1868; married, October 8, 1896, Harriet C. Willis, of Boston.

(V) Robert Boyd, sixth child and third son of Deacon Robert and Nancy (Batchelder) Wason, was born in New Boston, New Hampshire, July 13, 1820. He was educated in the common schools and fitted for college in the New Ipswich and Pembroke academies, and taught school two winter terms, 1840-41, in Amherst and Merrimack, New Hampshire. In June, 1841, he went to Boston and entered the employ of Wason, Pierce & Company, wholesale grocers and West India importers, a firm which his brother, Elbridge Wason, one of the partners, had organized in September, 1837. After a term of service of about seven years as an employee, Robert B. Wason was admitted as a member of the firm, which on the death of Mr. Pierce became Wason & Company. The business has been prosperous, and now Mr. Wason, at the age of eighty-eight, after sixty-seven years of mercantile life, sixty of which he has been an active member of the firm, finds himself senior member of the concern, and in the enjoyment of good health, vigorous and vivacious for one of his age, and still able to look after business affairs with an alertness not possessed by many of his juniors by a quarter of a century. He is a Republican, and a member of the General Theological Library for many years.

(IV) George Austin, youngest of the nine children of Deacon Robert and Nancy (Batchelder) Wason, was born in New Boston, September 17, 1831. His education was obtained in the common schools. He inherited the ancestral estate which now contains four hundred and seventy-five acres, and devoted his life to the pursuit of agriculture. He was engaged in general farming, but made a specialty of raising thoroughbred Devon cattle, in which he attained gratifying success. He lived on the farm until 1885, when he removed to Nashua and resided there until his death, June 21, 1906, aged seventy-one. He kept the farm and managed it until 1903. He was a member of that class of New England farmers who have elevated agriculture to the dignity of a science. His interest in this industry was of more than ordinary depth, and his efforts for the improvement of stock resulted in much gain, not only for himself but to farmers all over New England. He was a member of all the leading agricultural societies of his vicinity and of the state. He became interested in the grange during the early years of the organization in this state, and was a charter member of Joe English Grange of New Boston, and served for years as its master. For four years he was master of the state grange, and at the time of his death was the oldest living past master of that institution. To his work the present standing of the order in this state is due to a considerable extent. He filled the office of president of the Hillsborough Agricultural Society, and president of the Piscataqua Valley Fair Association. For over twenty years he was trustee of the New Hampshire College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts at Hanover and Durham, and served as president of the board for over seven years, being forced to resign owing to ill health in 1904. He was the first Republican moderator in the town of New Boston, in which town he maintained his legal residence and voted up to the time of his death. Few men were better known than he throughout the county and state. He was county commissioner of Hillsborough county six years, was representative from New Boston in 1883-95, and state senator in 1891-93. He was instrumental in securing the charter of the New Boston railroad, and was its first president, serving until his death. He was a man of upright character, honest in all his dealings, prompt to keep his word, kind and sympathetic by nature, a member of the best class of manhood this or any other state may produce. His interest in public affairs was such that he was many times placed by his fellow citizens in position of trust and honor, and always sustained with credit the duties they entailed, however great their magnitude. George A. Wason married, September 17, 1863, Clara Louisa Hills, born in New Boston, October 15, 1843, daughter of Sidney and Louisa (Trull) Hills. Three children were born to them: Edward Hills, see forward; George B., see forward; Robert S., see forward.

(V) Edward Hills, eldest son of George A. and Clara Louisa (Hills) Wason, was born in New Boston, September 2, 1865. He acquired his education in the public schools, at Franconia Academy, and at the New Hampshire College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, from which he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Science in the class of 1886. He subsequently read law in the office of George B. French, of Nashua, and while reading his course taught as principal several terms in the Main street evening school. He attended lectures at the Boston University School of Law, from which he graduated in the class of 1890, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. In March of the same year he was admitted to the New Hampshire bar, and at once opened an office in Nashua and began a successful practice. Later he became associated professionally with George F. Jackson under the firm name of Wason & Jackson. Mr. Wason has shown a decided aptitude for politics ever since he attained his majority, and has already filled various offices in the city of Nashua and in the state. In 1887 he was elected sergeant at arms of the New Hampshire senate, and in 1889 was re-elected to the same position. In 1891 he was chosen assistant clerk of the senate and returned to the same position in 1893. Two years later he was elected clerk of the same body, a high testimonial of his fidelity and ability as a public officer. In 1891 he was elected a member of the Nashua board of education, and in January, 1895, in recognition of his services, his associates elected him president of that body. In 1904 he was elected solicitor, and re-elected the following year. In 1807 he was elected to the common council, and served as president of that body two years; in 1898 was member of the legislature; in 1902 member of constitutional convention; in September, 1902, was elected county solicitor, and in 1904 was renominated and re-elected. In 1906 he was elected president of the Citizens' Institution for Savings, and trustee of the New Hampshire College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. He is an admirer of horses, and for some years has been treasurer of the Nashua Driving Park Association. Mr. Wason is a leading citizen and business man of Nashua, and has made an enviable record in the discharge of the duties of the various positions he has filled. He is a member of Rising Sun Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of which he is a past master; Meridian Sun Royal Chapter; Israel Hunt Council; Saint George Commandery, Knights Templar; Edward A. Raymond Consistory; Aleppo Temple, Mystic Shrine, of Boston; Nashua Lodge, Knights of Pythias; Nashua Lodge, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, of which he was elected exalted ruler in 1903.

(V) George Butler, son of George A. and Clara Louisa Wason, was born in New Boston, April 20, 1869. After graduating from the Nashua high school, he went to Boston, 1888, and entered the employ of the firm of Wason & Company, of which his uncle, Robert B. Wason, is senior member. After serving five years as a clerk, he became a member of the company in 1894. He is vice-president of the Boston Wholesale Grocers' Association, a director of the New England Wholesale Grocers' Association, from 1903 to 1906 was a director of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, is president of the Liberty Trust Company, of Boston, and member of Mount Olivet Lodge of Free Masons. In politics he affiliates with the Republicans. He married, April 20, 1895, Lillian Maude Fletcher, born 1869, daughter of Joseph and Bertha Fletcher, of South Orange, New Jersey. Their children are: George Fletcher and Richard Austin.

(V) Robert S., son of George A. and Clara Louisa Wason, was born in New Boston, December 10, 1871. He attended the Nashua high school, Berkley School of Boston, and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, graduating from the latter institution June 9, 1906. He began his business career as clerk in the firm of Wason & Company, and continued in that capacity until admitted to membership in 1898, the firm then consisted of Robert Boyd Wason, his uncle, George Butler Wason, his brother, and himself. Mr. Wason is a Republican in politics, member of various college fraternities, and was president of national conventions of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, held at Washington, D. C., 1895. He married, January 28, 1903, Estelle Sperling, daughter of Ellis Joseph, of New York City.

The records of several of HAMILTON the various Hamilton families in New England begins with tradition and this is true of the record in this instance.

(I) Michael Hamilton is probably the immigrant ancestor of the family below written. He was a native of Scotland, emigrated to America, landed in Boston, settled in Worcester, where his eldest son remained, but with four other sons and a daughter removed to and settled in Brookfield, Massachusetts, where he died. Michael's wife was Rebecca.

(II) Josiah, son of the immigrant, came with his father and family to America, and settled in Brookfield, where he lived and died.

(III) Lieutenant Josiah (2), son of Josiah (1) and Huldah (Barnes) Hamilton, was born, lived and died in South Parish, South Brookfield, Massachusetts. He died about 1704. He married Huldah Barnes, who lived to be about one hundred years old. She was blind for some years, and then her sight returned and she could read small print.

(IV) Dr. Asa, son of Lieutenant Josiah (2) Hamilton, was born in Brookfield, May 1, 1758, and died in Somers, Connecticut, April 16, 1801. He had lived in Somers after May 18, 1779. He practiced medicine and surgery very successfully over a large territory until his death. He was honored by many civil and military offices. He was surgeon of a regiment in the revolution, afterwards major of the Thirty-first regiment, and was also a Master Mason. He married, in 1777, Rebecca Hamilton, a distant relative, born in Brookfield, June 18, 1758, daughter of John Hamilton, who removed from Brookfield and died in Palmer. Fifteen years after the death of her husband, Rebecca married Captain William Cook, of Somers, Connecticut. She died at the home of her eldest son in Enfield, Connecticut, April 5, 1840. Children: Horatio Arnold; Charlotte; Theodore; Joshua Erving; Rebecca; and an infant (died young).

(V) Dr. Horatio Arnold Hamilton, eldest child of Dr. Asa and Rebecca (Hamilton)

Hamilton, was born in Brookfield, March 24, 1778, and died in Enfield, Connecticut, March 21, 1850. At the age of fourteen months he was taken to Somers, Connecticut, by his parents, and there studied medicine and surgery with his father. At the age of nineteen he entered upon the practice of his profession in Sandisfield, Massachusetts, and carried it on with much success. About 1800 he returned to Somers to render assistance to his father who was enfeebled in health and could not attend to all the professional calls that were made upon him. During his residence in Somers he spent a very active life in his profession, and held many important offices in town and county and the ecclesiastical society. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and was master of Lafayette Lodge at its organization. He built a number of dwelling houses and other buildings, and after accumulating a very handsome estate moved, April, 1831, to Enfield, Connecticut, where his activities in his profession continued till his death. He married (first) May 31, 1798, Elizabeth Bement, born August 18, 1775, in Enfield, Connecticut, died there December 28, 1839, daughter of Dennis and Lydia Bement, who lived at Enfield. Dennis Bement was grandson of one of the first settlers of Enfield, an emigrant from England. Children: Horatio Asa; Miranda Elizabeth; a daughter (died young); Erasmus Erskine; Aurelia Charlotte; a son (died young). He married (second) December 10, 1840, Hannah Watson, who died September 26, 1877. Children: Hannah Atla (died young), and Hannah Alice.

(VI) Dr. Erasmus Erskine Hamilton, second son of Dr. Horatio Arnold and Elizabeth (Bement) Hamilton, was born March 28, 1807, and died October 6, 1885. He read medicine with his father and graduated from the Pittsfield Medical College. He engaged in practice, which he continued for over fifty years at Somers, Connecticut. He married, May 12, 1831, Ursula Emeline Kibbe, born May 2, 1809, in North Somers, Connecticut, died December 22, 1888, aged eighty years, daughter of General Amariah and Charlotte (McKinny) Kibbe. Children: A daughter (died young); Theodore Erskine; Egbert Erwin (died young); Josephine Annette; Horatio Asa.

(VII) Dr. Theodore Erskine Hamilton, eldest son of Dr. Erasmus E. and Ursula E. (Kibbe) Hamilton, was born in Somers, Tolland county, Connecticut, December 22, 1833. He received his early education in the Suffield Literary Institution, Somers, Connecticut, and at Wilbraham Academy, Wilbraham, Massachusetts. In the summer season when not at school, he rolled pills and otherwise assisted his father in his drug store, and also did hard work on his father's farm. He began to read medicine with his father when a young man, and in 1858-59 was a student in the medical department of Harvard University, and in 1860 entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which he graduated in 1861 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Locating in Somers, Connecticut, he continued to practice until October 3, 1871. In the years 1864-65 he held the rank of surgeon in the Eighth Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, Army of the James. He served in the hospital at Bermuda Hundred, Virginia, in the flying hospital of the Twenty-fourth Army Corps, in Chimborazo and Camp Lee hospitals, Richmond, Virginia, and in Camp Davis Hospital, Lynchburg, Virginia. On his return to professional life, Dr. Hamilton resumed practice in Somers, and in 1871 removed to Springfield, where he has since been engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery, serving for some time on the surgical staff of the Springfield Hospital. It is a remarkable fact, and one which has no doubt contributed largely to Dr. Hamilton's professional success, that since the age of ten years he has been in the enjoyment of uninterrupted health. He was a member of De Soto Lodge, Independent Order of Old Fellows for many years, and is a member of the Winthrop Club of Springfield.

Dr. Hamilton married, December 24, 1863, Susan Louisa Chapin, born in New York City, August 31, 1837, daughter of Dr. John R. and Eliza A. (Abbott) Chapin (see below). Children: 1. Horatio Arnold, born in Springfield, December 14, 1876; joint owner of the Hartford Mill Supply Company; married Alice Warner, of Wethersfield; one child, Erskine E., born September 14, 1908.

(The Chapin Line).

Susan Louisa (Chapin) Hamilton, wife of Dr. Theodore E. Hamilton, is a descendant of

Samuel Chapin (I), written of on another page, through Joseph (II), Ebenezer (III), Seth (IV), Samuel (V), and

(VI) Rev. Reuben, third son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Spencer) Chapin, was born in Somers, September 5, 1778, and died July 17, 1834. "He was a licentiate among the Congregationalists, but never became a settled pastor, owing to a sudden injury to his lungs which deprived him of good health for the remainder of his life." He married, March 3, 1806, Louisa Russell, of Somers, and they had: Alonzo Bowen; Infant (died young); John Russell; Louisa Cooley (died young); Reuben Spencer; Seth Smith and Louisa Cooley.

(VII) Dr. John Russell, second son of Rev. Reuben and Louisa (Russell) Chapin, was born April 27, 1811, and died June 25, 1852. He married (first) October 10, 1836, Eliza A. Abbott, died March 3, 1840; (second) April 16, 1841, Amelia A. Cowperthwaite, of New York City. Children by wife Eliza: Susan Louisa and John Russell; by wife Amelia: Ann Elizabeth, Amelia C., Emily Collins and Willard Parker.

(VIII) Susan Louisa, eldest child of Dr. John R. and Eliza A. (Abbott) Chapin, was born in New York City, August 31, 1837. She married, December 24, 1863, Dr. Theodore E. Hamilton, and resides in Springfield, Massachusetts.

In the early part of the seventeenth century there was a great migration from Argyleshire, Ayrshire, and other counties in the south of Scotland to the north of Ireland. About 1718 a large immigration came from Londonderry in the north of Ireland to New England, and those Scotch-Irish, as they were called, settled principally in Londonderry, New Hampshire, and in parts of Massachusetts, not far distant. Among those who made their home in Massachusetts was the ancestor of the family, a branch of which is traced below.

(I) James Hamilton, one of the Scotch-Irish immigrants of 1718, settled in Worcester, Massachusetts, and was the first person by the name of Hamilton in that region. That he was a Scotch-Irishman and came from Londonderry there is no doubt, and it is equally certain that he came about 1718, but just where or when he was born no one knows. James Hamilton's name is on the list of town officers of Worcester in 1723. That he died in Worcester is proved by his will which was probated May 16, 1735. This will was executed April 25, 1735, and attested by Humphrey Taylor, James Forbus, Nixle (Michael) Hamilton. By it the testator disposed of land (amount not given), house, cattle and household goods. He mentions his wife Rebekah Hamilton, to whom he bequeathes "three cows, with all the movables within my dwelling house to be for her use and behoof so long as she shall live, and to be at her disposal at her death." There is no record of the death of Rebekah the widow. In the Registry of Deeds at Worcester, Book H, page 497, is found the deed given by Thomas, Michael and John Hamilton, dated October 5, 1739, conveying "the estate of their late honoured father James Hamilton to Robert Temple of Boston for £660 in bills of credit." This deed was signed by Thomas and his wife Margery, Michael and his wife Rebecca, and John and his wife Mary. The children of James and Rebekah Hamilton were: Thomas, Mickel, (or Michael), John and Frances.

(II) Thomas, eldest child of James and Rebekah Hamilton, settled in Pelham. The name of his wife is not known. His children were: James, Joseph, John, Thomas, Robert, Rebecca and Frances.

(III) Joseph, second son of Thomas Hamilton, married Ann Oliver, of Pelham, where he resided, November 11, 1773. Their children were: Reuben, Betsy, Isaac, Joel, Polly, Oliver, Ann, Joseph and Jacob.

(IV) Joseph (2), son of Joseph (1) and Ann (Oliver) Hamilton, was born March 15, 1781, died in Pelham, May 1, 1864. He was a resident of Pelham all the years of his life. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religion a Congregationalist. He married, May 1, 1818, Sylvia Cowan, born March 29, 1797, daughter of James and Molly Cowan. She died August 9, 1885, at Chicopee Falls, aged eighty-eight, and was buried by the side of her husband in Chicopee Falls. Their children were: Homer, Augustus, Harriet, Augusta, George Judson, Hannah Emeline, Rosetta Ann, Maryetta, Henry Clay and Francese Janett.

(V) Henry Clay, fourth son of Joseph (2) and Sylvia (Cowan) Hamilton, was born in Pelham, April 9, 1834, and resides in Springfield. He was educated in the common schools. At the age of nineteen he entered the employ of the Western railroad as freight brakeman; later was appointed freight conductor and subsequently promoted to first baggage and freight agent for the above road, and upon the consolidation of the Western and Boston & Albany railroads he was made local freight agent at Springfield, remaining in that capacity until January, 1903, and since that time has been soliciting agent for the New York Central lines. He was raised in Hampden Lodge; he is also a member of the chapter, the Knights Templar, Mehla Temple A. A. O. N. M. S., and the Knights of Malta, in which he is past commander and member of the grand lodge. He is a Congregationalist in religion, and a Democrat in politics. He married, September 16, 1860, Mary Jane Fuller, born in Chicopee, May 10, 1838, daughter of Orrin and Mary (Cooley) Fuller, of Chicopee. Children: 1. Gertrude, born in Springfield, May 27, 1865, died June, 1865. 2. Mabel Francese, born in Springfield, June 23, 1867, married Louis J. Chandler, December 25, 1888.

The Long family is of ancient English ancestry. A branch of the family located in county Donegal, Ulster Province, Ireland, intermarried with the Scotch Presbyterian settlers, and from them is descended without doubt the Long family of this sketch.

(I) John Long, immigrant ancestor, probably came from Donegal to Marblehead, Massachusetts, and thence to Hopkinton, Massachusetts, with other Scotch-Irish. But little is known of him. The McFarlands, with whom the Longs were closely associated also lived first at Marblehead, then in Worcester, Rutland, Upton, Oakham and other Worcester county towns. John Long married (intentions dated September 21, 1745) Mary Taft, of Upton. Alexander Long, of Marblehead, a relative, perhaps a nephew, married, August 21, 1766, Elizabeth Bateman; was a soldier in the revolution; children: i. Marianna, baptized December 6, 1767; ii. Alexander, baptized September 17, 1769; iii. Morana, baptized June 9, 1771; iv. Sibell, baptized September 19, 1773. Some of this family located in Vermont. Children of John Long: 1. John, mentioned below. 2. James, (perhaps by first wife of John), lived at Upton, and in the adjacent town of Douglas; married, at Douglas, February 8, 1757, Elizabeth Cook; children: i. Joseph, born at Upton, September 15, 1758, baptized at Douglas, 1759; soldier in the revolution; settled at Cheshire, Massachusetts; married (intention dated May 22, 1777) Phebe Hall; ii. Anne, born at Upton, November 30, 1760; iii. Levi, born at Douglas, April 18, 1766, died December 8, 1768; iv. Elizabeth, born January 8, —; died December, 1768; v. Elizabeth, born May 12, 1769; vi. David, born July 4, 1771, died young; vii. Eunice, born May 31, 1772; viii. Eunice, born 1774, baptized October 19, 1774; ix. David, born August 4, 1776, lived at Milford, Massachusetts; the father, James, died May 11, 1789, at Douglas, and his will dated May 7, 1789, proved May 25 following, bequeaths to wife Elizabeth; children: Joseph, Anna, Elizabeth, Eunice, David; James was a soldier in the revolution, and from his enlistment record in the Continental army we find that he was born in 1727.

(II) John (2), son of John (1) Long, was born about 1730, in Scotland. He married Katharine McFarland, of Glasgow, Scotland, and settled in Oakham, Massachusetts. According to family tradition she was born in Glasgow, Scotland, but the records indicate that she was of the Oakham family. In 1790, Reuben McFarland was the only head of family of this name in Oakham, and he had two males over sixteen, two under that age, and one female, in his family, according to the first federal census. Reuben and Margaret McFarland, of Oakham, sold their home and lands at Oakham, November 11, 1805, to Daniel Clapp and Levi Lincoln, of Worcester, and removed to Vermont. Reuben was the only son of Alexander McFarland, of Oakham. Alexander's will was dated June 3, 1775, bequeathing to son Reuben, daughters Rachel Henderson; Sarah Harper, wife of Robert Harper; Susannah Young; Rebecca, wife of John Bothwell; grandchildren Jean and Christian (daughters of William and Christian (McFarland) Bell); Alexander Henderson and Alexander Harper. Alexander McFarland was a soldier in the revolution, in Captain Seth Washburn's company, Colonel Jonathan Ward's regiment, in 1775.

Alexander McFarland was son of the immigrant Duncan McFarland, who came with his brother Daniel from Ulster province, Ireland. They were of Scotch ancestry. The MacFarlands were settled in Dumfriesshire before the year 1300. In Ireland the family lived in counties Armagh and Tyrone. A genealogy of the descendants of Daniel McFarland has been published. It is stated that he or his ancestors came to Ireland from Argyleshire. In 1619 Walter MacFarland was among the first Scotch settlers in Ulster. He was a tenant in 1693 of James Hamilton, Earl of Abercorn, in the precinct or town of Strabane, county Tyrone, and from him most if not all the Scotch-Irish MacFarlands descended. Children of Duncan and Christian McFarland: i. Elizabeth, born November 4, 1719; ii. Janet,

January 5, 1722; iii. Daniel, February 13, 1723-4; iv. Nancy; v. Alexander, mentioned above; vi. Christian. The children of Alexander McFarland were all recorded as born at Oakham: i. Rachel, September 4, 1739; ii. Sarah, August 26, 1750; iii. Hannah, or Susannah, February 25, 1753; iv. Rebecca, August 25, 1756; v. Reuben, December 4, 1759, mentioned above.

John Long bought land at Oakham, April 17, 1783, of Jonathan Richardson, and a place on the road from Brookfield to Rutland, in Oakham, October 6, 1792, of Isaac Hunter. He deeded twelve acres of land at Oakham (bought of John Crawford, June 18, 1782) to the town of Oakham, perhaps for the church or graveyard, May 29, 1786. According to the family records he removed to Vermont in 1797, but the deeds indicate that he or his sons were in Oakham as late as 1812. John Long, of Oakham, deeded to James Long, of Oakham, land adjoining the places of Nehemiah Packard, Samuel Crawford, Ichabod Parker and William Parmenter, July 2, 1810. John quitclaimed to James lands at Oakham July 2, 1810. He was not called Jr. in the deed, but may have been the son. John quitclaimed the farm on the road from John Crawford's to the Oakham meeting house and land on the road from Brookfield to Rutland to James Long in 1812. Both were then called of Oakham. John Long was a soldier from Coleraine or Shelburne in the revolution, in Captain Hugh McClellan's company, Colonel Samuel Williams's regiment; also September 22, 1777, in Captain John Wells's company at Stillwater; also lieutenant in Captain Lawrence Kent's company, Colonel David Field's regiment, in 1780. The Coleraine families were closely connected with the Scotch-Irish of Worcester county, and this appears to show that John Long lived for a time in Coleraine and vicinity before settling in Oakham. In 1790 none of the name appear in Coleraine. John Long was the only one of the family in Oakham in 1790, having then in his family two sons (John and James) and three females. Children: 1. John. 2. James, mentioned below. 3. Catherine. 4. Daughter, married George Bothell.

John Long settled in Guildhall, Vermont. He helped build the wall around the meeting house on the hill and his farm was located near. It has been known as the Amory place.

(II) James, son of John (2) Long, was born as early as 1790, in Oakham, Massachusetts. He lived at Guildhall, Vermont, whither he removed about 1812. He was a farmer. He married Docia Blanchard, who was born in Massachusetts, and died in Guildhall. Children: 1. John, mentioned below. 2. Roxanna. 3. William. 4. Docia. 5. Catherine. 6. Elizabeth. 7. James. 8. Cynthia. 9. Orilla, married Caleb Rogers. 10. Douglas, only one living.

(IV) John (3), son of James Long, was born January 2, 1814, in Guildhall, Vermont, and died at Randolph, Massachusetts, January 9, 1884. He received his education in the district schools of his native town. He left home when but a boy, and worked four years in Providence, Rhode Island. Thence he went to New Bedford, where he found employment as stage-driver between New Bedford and Bridgewater, and later between Bridgewater and Boston. He finally settled in Randolph, Massachusetts, where he bought a hotel and livery business, which he conducted for many years with marked success. He invested his savings in real estate, and the increase in its value added greatly to his fortune. He was active in town affairs, and possessed a large influence. He was a Republican in politics, and was a delegate to various nominating conventions. For nine years he was a deputy sheriff of Norfolk county. He was a Congregationalist in religion. He was on the investment committee of the Randolph Savings Bank for some years. Though a popular man, with many friends, he never joined secret societies. He married Susan C. Rounsevell, born November 3, 1823, at East Freetown, daughter of Gilbert and Salome (Booth) Rounsevell. Her father was a well-to-do farmer and mill owner at Freetown. Her only brother lived and died on the homestead. Mr. and Mrs. Long had no children of their own. Miss Mary Long, who resides in the family home at Randolph, was an adopted daughter.

This name, whatever its orthography, is rare in American genealogical records, and the family treated of below is probably the only Birnie family in New England, though a somewhat widely scattered but not numerous family spelling the name Birney is found in various states.

(1) George Birnie was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and became a stone mason and contractor. He married Ann Iniry, by whom he had a family of twelve children, seven of whom attained maturity, namely:

Mr Birnie

George, Alexander, Euphemia, Joseph, Catharine, Anna and William. After living for some years in Porto Bello, in Midlothian, a suburb of Edinburgh, he removed to America and settled in Morristown, New Jersey, having been preceded to this country by his son George. The Morris and Essex canal was then under construction, and Mr. Birnie contracted to build the mason work along its course; but died a year later, in 1828, leaving his son Alexander, then twenty-five years of age, to go on with the work. Ann Birnie, the mother, died in New York City, where the family removed after the father's decease.

(11) William, son of George and Ann (Amiry) Birnie, was born in Porto Bello, Scotland, November 11, 1818, died in Springfield, Massachusetts, December 2, 1889. When he was nine years of age he came with his parents to America, and after the death of his father went with the family to New York, where he attended school, and also learned the family trade of stone cutting. In this he made great proficiency and did work for some of the finest buildings in the city. After he had attained prominence in business, when passing the sub-treasury building in Wall street, New York, in company with a friend or kinsman, he would point with pride to certain cap-stones in that structure which he had cut. After Alexander Birnie finished the Morris canal contract, he made another for the Paterson & Hudson River railroad, and still later was engaged in the construction of the Boston, Providence & Stonington line. When the Western railroad, now the Boston & Albany, was constructed, Alexander Birnie, who was then living in North Becket, took a contract for building a section between Chester and Washington, with headquarters at Middlefield, Massachusetts. At that time his brother William, who had been associated with him for several years, became general outside manager, and the late John B. Adams, of Springfield, whose sister had married Alexander Birnie, was in charge of the finances. While William was a sub-contractor, working under Alexander, he took his first independent contract for work near Chester, Massachusetts, and on this he cleared a thousand dollars. When at work on this western road, according to the account found in the "Biographical Review of Hampden County," from which much of this article is taken, he met Azariah Boody, Daniel L. Harris and Amasa Stone, with whom he subsequently formed a business connection. In 1842, when Alexander Birnie moved to Hastings, New York, William joined these gentlemen who were already interested in the Howes Truss Bridge patent. They took joint contracts for railroad bridges, Mr. Birnie building the masonry, and they thus built nearly all the bridges on the Richmond & Danville road, Virginia, for the Providence & Stonington railroad, and for the Harlem railroad. Mr. Birnie constructed the water shops and raceway, and laid the foundation for the Springfield Armory fence. D. D. Warren and Willis Phelps, associated with Mr. Birnie, took the contract for building the Springfield & New London railroad, eight miles to the Connecticut border. Mr. Birnie was assisted by Daniel L. Harris in the bridge-work at Northfield and at other places on the Vermont Central and the Vermont & Massachusetts line; and he was at various times associated with Sidney Dillon, of New York City, with D. D. Warren, with Willis Phelps and with Joseph Stone. After Amasa Stone went west, Joseph Stone, father of Harlon B. Stone, was associated with Mr. Birnie, as was also Major Whistler; and the part those gentlemen took, both in railway construction and development, has been notable. With the early operation of the Western railroad they were all more or less connected. The late John Delaney, of Holyoke, father of Ex-Mayor Delaney, a well known contractor, did his first work on this road under Alexander Birnie. William Birnie and Daniel L. Harris, in partnership, built the Belle Isle bridge across the James river at Richmond, and in fact all the bridges on the Richmond & Danville road. Mr. Birnie superintended the work, and William S. Marsh, of Springfield, was the clerk and bookkeeper for the firm at Richmond. To Harris & Birnie, in competition with many others, was awarded a contract for the masonry and bridge at Havre de Grace; but the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore Railroad Company, becoming alarmed at the magnitude of the undertaking, paid the contractors five thousand dollars and all expenses to stop work. During the latter part of Mr. Birnie's business connection with Mr. Harris, Richard F. Hawkins was their clerk and accountant, and for many years after they dissolved the partnership he served them both as confidential bookkeeper. Harris & Birnie built the Agawam foundry on Liberty street, Springfield, which they subsequently sold to Wright & Emerson, and which is now owned and occupied by the Springfield Foundry Company. They also built the stone arch and canal at the Water Slope. With Dr. Josiah B.

Weston, of Dalton. Mr. Birnie bought the government property now owned by the Springfield Waste Company on Mill river. For a time Birnie & Weston, under the name of the Nayasset Paper Company, made fine writing paper at Mill River, but that enterprise not proving a pecuniary success the stock and machinery were sold to the Hampshire Paper Company. After his practical retirement from business as a contractor, Mr. Birnie invested in the shoe trade with John R. Hixon, but soon closed out his interest. From 1855 to 1865 Mr. Birnie, having already acquired a fortune, spent much of his time in stock raising on the North Chestnut Street Farm. He was then a member of the State Board of Agriculture, and was considered one of the leading breeders of New England, his Ayrshires having a national reputation. As an expert on that breed of cattle he was appointed judge at the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia in 1876. Being actively identified with the Hampden County Agricultural Society, he served as judge of cattle at the Bay State Fair. Having experienced heavy reverses, Mr. Birnie in 1873, at the age of fifty-five, began business anew by becoming the financial manager of the firm of Goodhue & Birnie, which was very successful in the construction of water-works in all parts of the country. His first contract with C. L. Goodhue involved signing a bond for a hundred thousand dollars that a contract with St. Albans, Vermont, should be fulfilled. Another bond was made for a contract at Leominster, Massachusetts, and out of this grew a more definite partnership. One of Mr. Birnie's sons, Thomas N., was associated with them, and few firms can point to a larger or more important list of contracts completed. Waterworks were built entirely by them in sixty cities and towns and they partially did the work in twenty more. Among the contracts undertaken at a distance were the waterworks at Ann Arbor, Michigan; Malone, New York; Jacksonville, Florida; Streator, Illinois; Xenia, Ohio. In Vermont they contracted for waterworks at St. Albans, St. Johnsbury, and Barre; in Massachusetts for Leominster, Spencer, Plymouth, Wakefield, Amherst, Hingham, Northboro, Lee, Revere, West Springfield, Swampscott, at Stafford Springs, and Thompsonville; and in New Hampshire, at Bristol and Hillsboro. The Ludlow Main in Springfield was also constructed by them, and extensive additions, sometimes greater than the originals, were made in Concord, New Hampshire, and in Palmer and Haverhill, Massachusetts. During the summer of 1889 water mains were extended in Massachusetts from Saugus to Cliftondale, and in Connecticut from Thompsonville to Warehouse Point, and at the time of Mr. Birnie's death pipes were being laid in Bradford, Massachusetts. Mr. Birnie, with Daniel D. Warren, was interested in the building of the Longmeadow railroad, and he also built eighteen or more houses on his land at Brightwood, a suburb of Springfield. The latest years of his business life were very pleasant and successful, yielding good returns, and his career was unusually varied and extensive. He owned two farms and a Main street block, besides considerable city real estate on Spring, Byers and Liberty streets.

Mr. Birnie had neither the leisure nor the inclination to take a conspicuous part in public affairs, but he was naturalized in time to vote for William Henry Harrison in 1840. Afterward he served the Republican party, and his last vote was cast for Benjamin Harrison. In 1857 and again in 1860 he was a member of the common council. In 1875 he was vice-president of the Springfield & New London railroad. He gave generously to the Public Library, and during the war was active in his efforts for soldiers. When the Tenth and Thirty-seventh regiments at the front in November, 1862, were suffering for food and clothing, he made a memorable journey to the south, overcoming many obstacles in order to supply the men with a genuine Thanksgiving dinner, and they always held him in grateful remembrance for what he did at that time. Mr. Birnie had many interesting reminiscences of early days to relate, and always took pleasure in joking with Sidney Dillon about once giving security for a bag of meal, when they were building the Stonington road. Mr. Birnie was an attendant of the First Congregational Church for many years, but latterly went to the South Church, which he also attended during the early part of his residence in Springfield. Although a man of strong religious convictions, he never united with any church. His late home in Springfield adjoins the property of his father-in-law, Marvin Chapin. For years the families were practically one, and many a happy reunion has been held on the lawn between the two residence.

William Birnie married (first) February 4, 1841, Sarah L. Perkins, born in Becket, September 8, 1822, daughter of Origen Augustus Perkins, of Becket. She died January 12, 1850. The first house owned by Mr. Birnie was in Becket, where his two sons, Charles

Augustus and William Perkins, were born. February 11, 1852. Mr. Birnie married (second) Martha Noyes Perkins, born in Salem, Connecticut, December 22, 1825, daughter of Henry Perkins, of Lyme, Connecticut. She died October 15, 1871. A few months after this marriage he removed to Springfield, having previously bought of Daniel L. Harris a lot of land on the southwest corner of Chestnut and Pearl streets. November 28, 1872, Mr. Birnie married (third) Harriet Stowe Chapin, born February 8, 1838, daughter of Marvin and Rebecca (Stowe) Chapin (see Chapin VIII), who survived him. William Birnie had fourteen children—four by wife Sarah L.; seven by wife Martha N.; and by third wife, Harriet S., three; children were as follows: 1. George Augustus, born October 5, 1841, died young. 2. Henry Champlin, March 19, 1843, died young. 3. Charles Alexander, March 13, 1844, married Susan G. Wright, of Newburg, New York, December 25, 1872, and lives in Virginia. 4. William Perkins, December 24, 1849, married Mary W. Matthews, of New Bedford, August, 1875, and resides in Springfield, Massachusetts. 5. Henry Perkins, November 8, 1852, died young. 6. Thomas Noyes (twin), September 19, 1854, died at Orlando, Florida, February 26, 1906. 7. Sarah Perkins (twin), September 19, 1854, resides in Springfield, Massachusetts. 8. Douglas Putnam, September 3, 1856, married, January 22, 1890, Lucia L. Meigs, of New York, and resides in Rye, New York. 9. Alfred, March 13, 1858; see forward. 10. Donald, October 24, 1860, married, June 2, 1892, Minnie I. Jobson, of Springfield; resides in Springfield. 11. Walter, October 5, 1871, married, April 18, 1900, Loraine F. Harte, of Albion, New York, and resides in Springfield. 12. Grace Chapin, September 12, 1873, married, April 16, 1901, Carl L. Stebbins, and lives in Tacoma, Washington. 13. Rebecca, July 4, 1878, resides at home. 14. Marvin Chapin, January 10, 1881, married, April 15, 1903, Mabel F. Galacar, of Springfield, and resides in Springfield.

(11) Alfred, son of William and Martha (Noyes) (Perkins) Birnie, was born in Springfield, March 13, 1858, and died January 26, 1909. He lived all his life in the city of his birth, attended its public schools, and graduated from its high school. A short time after graduating he entered the Massasoit Paper Company of Holyoke, where he worked several years and learned manufacturing in all its branches. He then organized the Springfield

City Paper Company, with a plant on Main street, in the old Birnie block. After several years he sold his interest in the company, and in 1882 associated with his brother, William P. Birnie, in the Birnie Paper Company. This concern continued in business in the Birnie block for several years until the block was burned, about 1892. At that time the present plant of the Birnie Paper Company was built in Brightwood. About 1905 the concern was made a stock company, in which Alfred Birnie was treasurer and general manager. Mr. Birnie maintained a summer home at Bonnyrigg farm in Becket until about two years ago, when he sold the place. There he farmed for diversion, raised blooded cattle and Angora goats, and had a private fish pond and also a sugar orchard. In the social life of the town he filled a place as important as he did in business, for his companionship was eagerly sought and willingly given. At Bonnyrigg he was at his best, and as host to many a gay house party he was the center of the merrymaking and the spirit of hospitality. Mr. Birnie had a slight attack of heart trouble about two months before his death, followed by several more slight attacks, but had not been confined to his house at all. January 25, he seemed to have his usual strength of the last two months, and was attending to business until nearly six o'clock. In the evening, however, he had a serious attack from which he did not rally, and death came very unexpectedly. He was a member of the South Congregational Church, the Nayasset Club, and the Springfield Country Club. He was a well known Mason, being a member of Springfield Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons; Morning Star Royal Arch Chapter; Springfield Council, Royal and Select Masters; Springfield Commandery, Knights Templars; Massachusetts Consistory, Sublime Princes of the Royal Secret; and Melha Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He married, January 16, 1907, Louise E. Burke, of Springfield, daughter of Patrick E. and Dora (McGoff) Burke, of Springfield, Massachusetts.

In speaking of Mr. Birnie, the Springfield Republican said: "His loss will be sadly felt, not only by his family but by those who have known him and respected this jovial and whole-souled, kindly hearted man who passed his life in Springfield and added no little dole of happiness to many of her citizens. Alfred Birnie was fifty in years, but a boy in heart and enthusiasm—an optimist, genial, hearty, and wholesome, a man who inspired confidence and gave back even more than he received. If he was a faithful friend, he was also a faithful workman, a business man of ability and integrity. As a youth he mastered his calling with a genuine ardor, learning paper making in the Massasoit Mills under the instruction of the late Calvin Whiting, when he was superintendent, and was valued by that master of the craft in his apprenticeship."

"In speaking of Mr. Birnie editorially the Daily News said: "In the death of Alfred Birnie it seems to us Springfield has lost a man who comes, perhaps, nearest to representing what is best in the type of time honored Springfield representative citizenship. He was honorable to the core, virtuous beyond suspicion, conservative, trustworthy, genial to all, yet showing his very best to those nearest. His traditions were the safe and honorable ones of the pioneers of Springfield. His standards of conduct, of principle, of manner, were those of the men who laid the foundations of this community. Mr. Birnie was a young man as years are counted nowadays, not quite fifty, but he was one of the last of the genuine type of our old citizenship. One can count on the fingers of a hand those who are left in the category. Yet there was nothing old fashioned about him. Few of the new era could compare with him in heartiness of manner, cheeriness of greeting, quickness of interest in all that concerned the community, impulsive response to merit wherever he saw it. Such men as he have been standards for the wavering to measure themselves by. Unambitious of political distinction, modest and retiring by nature, he and men like him have ever been more potent in Springfield than those who have held office. Springfield is what she is today, through the fact that such men as Alfred Birnie have lived among us to some purpose. Not the least in the service which Alfred Birnie gave this community was that of his warm and genial manners. Few men have died here leaving so many acquaintances as he has done, and perhaps none the remembrances of whom will be without exception pleasant and heart warming. His unflinching smile of good cheer, his hearty greeting, will continue to brighten the memory of thousands of us who have been helped so often by even the most casual meeting with the man."

(The Chapin Line).

Harriet Stowe (Chapin) Birnie, wife of William Birnie (see above), was a descendant of Samuel Chapin (I), written of on another page, through Japhet (II), Ebenezer (III), Seth (IV), Samuel (V), Samuel (VI), and

(VII) Marvin Chapin, son of Samuel and Mary (Pease) Chapin, was born in Somers, Connecticut, July 5, 1806. He worked on his father's farm until he had attained the age of seventeen, when he left home to begin his business life. Having but a few cents in his pockets, but endowed with a goodly amount of self reliance and ambition he went to Westfield, Massachusetts, where the next three years were spent with his uncle, Samuel Smith, who conducted a tanning business. Here young Chapin applied himself diligently until he became familiar with the tanning of leather and the making of shoes and other footwear. The compensation received by our apprentice was twenty-five dollars a year, board and clothing, and he was also allowed four days vacation each year, which was generally spent in the harvest field. The proceeds derived from such labor were added to his own bank account. At the end of three years he had managed to save about fifty dollars. He later went to Roxbury, Massachusetts, where he found employment in a tannery. He remained there about six months when he went to Randolph and still later returned to Westfield and entered the employ of his uncle, where he remained about three years, receiving about fifty cents a day for his labor. He later was employed in a hotel receiving about the same pay, and continued until 1835, when he went to Worcester, Massachusetts, and joined a party of surveyors who were going to Florida to survey a line of railroad from Jacksonville to St. Marks. Here Mr. Chapin served as "rod man," receiving as pay twenty dollars a month and board. Previous to this Mr. Chapin had not enjoyed the best of health, but the sea voyage and the out-of-door life and coarse food completely restored his health. Returning to his home in 1836, he soon found employment as clerk in the Cabot House, Chicopee (then Cabotville). Soon after Mr. Chapin purchased the property and he became proprietor of that well known hostelry, remaining as such about one year when he placed it in the hands of his brothers, Ethan S. and Albert P. Chapin, while he went to Westfield and engaged in the manufacture of paper. This was not to his liking and about a year later he returned to Chicopee and again assumed management of the Cabot House. Five years later he moved to Springfield and there for the next forty years he was one of the best known hotel men in New England, as one of the owners and proprietors of the Massasoit House, with his brother, Ethan S. Chapin. He continued this business until about 1886 when the property was leased to a nephew, W. H. Chapin. Mr. Chapin was not only successful as a hotel man but also in other business ventures. He was one of the original promoters of the Springfield Fire & Marine Insurance Company, was one of the original stockholders and directors of the company and remained so until his death, and was the last of the original board of directors to pass away. He was a stockholder of the Springfield Gas Light Company and a director from 1861 to 1870 and from 1884 to 1889. He was one of the directors of the Agawam Bank and its president from 1862 to 1870. In 1858 he was a representative to the general court of Massachusetts, but was in no way interested in political affairs. He was a liberal contributor to religious and educational institutions and was much interested in the growth and development of Springfield. No man was ever held in higher esteem than was Marvin Chapin. He died in 1899. He married, October 12, 1836, Rebecca Stowe, of Westfield, who died in 1874. Children: Harriet S., Mary D., John M. and Gratia R.

(VIII) Harriet Stowe, eldest child of Marvin and Rebecca (Stowe) Chapin, was born in Springfield, February 8, 1838, and married, November 28, 1872, William Birnie (see Birnie II).

The principal subject of this sketch was one of those men of intelligence energy and integrity who have come from foreign lands and used their power to build up his country. Edmund, son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Spices) Jobson, was born in Shuckburgh, Warwickshire, England, April 5, 1822, and died in Springfield, Massachusetts, January 8, 1908, in the eighty-seventh year of his age. He was one of a family of fourteen children. He came to the United States at the age of twenty-two, and settled in Springfield, where the remainder of his life was passed. Two months after settling in Springfield he engaged in the sash, door and blind business, being one of the founders of the firm of Day & Jobson, one of the largest lumber firms in the city. This firm later bought out the lumber business of Decret, Boynton & Company, and the business was continued with success. The lumber yard had the same location during all the years, at the corner of Liberty and Chestnut streets. After the firm of Day & Jobson had been in business many years it was made a stock company, and E. A. Blodgett was admitted as one of its members. Besides dealing in lumber this firm also did a large business as builders, and was interested in the construction of many of Springfield's blocks and buildings. For thirty-six years preceding his death Mr. Jobson lived with his family in the house at 329 Chestnut street, which was built under his direction. About ten years before his death he retired from active work and busied himself with the control of his property. There was probably not another man in Springfield who was better informed on the lumber and building business than was Mr. Jobson, and his opinion with regard to real estate was often asked on account of his extensive knowledge of all details concerning city property. In the death of Mr. Jobson, Springfield lost one of its most prominent and respected citizens. He was a very retiring and diffident man, and was interested in absolutely nothing outside his own family and business, with the exception of a few close friends. His acquaintance was large, and because of his many years in business his name was one of the most prominent in business circles up to the time of his retirement, and he had a wide reputation for honesty and fair dealing. He read much, and was never happier than when occupied with his books. He attributed his good health and long life to regular habits and out-of-door exercise. He was survived by one sister, Miss Emma Jobson, in England, of whom he was very fond, and to see whom he crossed the ocean many times. His last voyage across the Atlantic was made in July, 1898, which was his twenty-second voyage between the two continents.

Edmund Jobson married, in Springfield, August 19, 1852, Harriet Lavinia Lay, who was born in Agawam, September 15, 1829, daughter of William and Juliette (Hubbard) Lay. She taught school in 1846 at the "old brick school house" in Feeding Hills, where she is still particularly remembered as a good teacher, greatly beloved by her pupils, and always held in the highest esteem. Mrs. Jobson died November 29, 1907, but six weeks before her husband. All of his wedded life he had depended on her aid and counsel in all his affairs, both business and personal, and the sudden deprivation of this aid caused the impairment of his general health and made him easily susceptible to an attack of grippe, which resulted in his death in nine days from its inception. They lived together far beyond the usual period allotted to mankind, and celebrated the fifty-fifth anniversary of their wedding. Children: Infant, not named; Harry E., died aged four years; Janet Mabel, died at the age of ten years; and Minnie Isabel, born in Springfield, October 22, 1868, married, June 2, 1892, Donald Birnie, son of William and Martha (Perkins) Birnie of Springfield. (See Birnie).

Among the pioneer settlers of New England were a disproportionately large number of Wests, the men of that name seeming to be of an unusually bold and energetic spirit. Edward is mentioned as of Lynn, 1637; Francis of Duxbury, 1643; John of Saybrook, 1635; John of Saco, 1640; Nathaniel of Newport, 1644; Robert of Providence, 1641; Thomas of Salem, 1634; and Twyford of Boston, 1635.

(I) Francis West, ancestor of this family, came from Salisbury, England, and settled in Duxbury, Massachusetts. He was in Marshfield in 1641, but returned to Duxbury, where he was admitted freeman in 1655. He was a carpenter by occupation. He bought land at Millbrook in 1642, also in 1661, and in 1670 received a grant. He died January 2, 1692, leaving a small estate. He married Margery Reeves, February 27, 1639. She died November 1, 1701. They had four sons: Samuel, Peter, Pelatiah and Richard.

(II) Samuel, eldest son of Francis and Margery (Reeves) West, was born in 1643, and died May 8, 1689, aged forty-six. September 26, 1668, he married Triphosa Partridge, who died November 1, 1701. She was the daughter of George and Sarah (Tracy) Partridge, first settlers of Duxbury. The children of this marriage were: Francis, Jeven, Samuel, Pelatiah, Ebenezer, John and Abigail.

(III) John, sixth son of Samuel and Triphosa (Partridge) West, was born March 6, 1679, and settled in Lebanon, Connecticut. He married Deborah (surname unknown), who died November 17, 1741.

(IV) Solomon, evidently a son of John and Deborah West, was born in Lebanon, March 15, 1723, and died August 21, 1790, aged forty-eight. He lived for some years in Lebanon, whence he removed to Tolland. He married Abigail Strong, of West Lebanon, October 10, 1743. Their children were: Solomon, Ruby, Abigail, Lydia, Esther, Chloe, Stephen and Jerusha.

(V) Deacon Stephen, second son of Solomon and Abigail (Strong) West, was born August 19, 1769, and died April 17, 1814. He settled in Hampden (now Wilbraham), Massachusetts, and started one of the earliest tanneries in the vicinity. He became an extensive land-owner, and erected the first brick house in the town. He was treasurer of the parish in 1793, and succeeded John Hitchcock as deacon of the Congregational church. He married, in Wilbraham, Bathsheba, daughter of Comfort Chaffee, November 27, 1783. She died at Tolland, Connecticut, April 22, 1851, aged eighty-nine. Their children were: Stephen Strong, Bathsheba, Solomon (died young), Solomon (died young), John, Ralph (died young), Solomon Ralph (died young), and a son.

(VI) Stephen Strong, eldest child of Deacon Stephen and Bathsheba (Chaffee) West, was born in Hampden, September 22, 1784, and died March 25, 1844. He was a tanner, like his father, but also made boots, shoes and harness, and dealt in leather as long as he lived. He married Lucinda Humiston, born November 4, 1790, at Litchfield, Connecticut, daughter of Joel Humiston. She died August 4, 1870, aged eighty. They had ten children, nine of whom reached mature years: 1. Lucinda Humiston, married David F. Pease, of Monson. 2. Strong, succeeded to his father's business. 3. Solomon, died in Hampden. 4. Anna Humiston, died 1889, aged seventy-four. 5. Stephen Otis, died in Springfield. 6. George Spencer, resided in Rushmore, Minnesota. 7. John, receives extended mention below. 8. Nancy Flynt, married Reuben Whittemore, of Sherwood, Tennessee. 9. Joel, became master railway mechanic at Burlington, Iowa.

(VII) John, sixth son of Stephen S. and Lucinda (Humiston) West, was born at Hampden, September 6, 1828, and died August 30, 1908, aged eighty years. After attending the common schools at Hampden he went to Springfield, where he studied with Rev. Sandford Lawton, who kept a good private school. He entered Samuel Frizzell's store as a clerk at the age of twelve, and remained two years. He was next employed by F. M. Carew & Company, and their successors, Bowdoin & Bond, until 1847. Then he went to Mount Savage, Maryland, in the employ of the Maryland & New York Iron and Coal Company. After he had served there a year the company suspended, and he returned to his old position, which he retained until 1850. His next move was to Columbus, Georgia, where he worked in a variety store; but unfavorable climatic conditions caused his return to Springfield. With Levi J. Holt he now bought out Mr. Bond, of the old firm, and they began business under the title of Holt & West. This firm continued till 1854, when Mr. West sold out; and in 1858 he entered the grocery firm of James W. Hale & Company, on the corner of Main and Court streets. Mr. Hale died in 1863, and the new firm of Bemis & Company was formed, and continued for two years, Mr. Bemis then retiring. After this time, under West, Stone & Company, the traffic was exclusively wholesale, but in 1867 the store was moved to Hampden street. Mr. West was one of the earliest wholesale dealers in the city, and among the first to employ traveling agents. The success of the firm enabled it to build a fine warehouse on Fort street, and a branch store at Holyoke, which they managed ten years. Mr. West also owned at one time the store at the corner of Main and East Court streets, and the building on Market street, afterward occupied by T. M. Walker, was erected by the firm. In 1890, on account of the death of his son, Mr. West retired from the firm, and was no longer active in business, but the firm name was not given up. He was a director in the First National Bank, and the Springfield Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He was a Republican in politics, and was of a quiet retiring disposition and never sought office. The only public position he filled was that of member of the city council from Ward Two, in which he served in 1862. Mr. West traveled extensively in this country, but never went abroad. He was the oldest member of Hampden Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons.

Mr. West married, November 12, 1851, Jane, daughter of Colonel John McCray, a prominent militia officer, farmer and hotel proprietor. They had one child, John McCray, who was born April 6, 1853, and died January 18, 1890. He became one of the leading men of the firm, and was an extensive traveler in both America and Europe. Mr. West was a member of the North Congregational Church, as is Mrs. West, who survives him. In speaking of Mr. West after his death, his partner, H. P. Stone, said: "During my thirty years of business and social association with John West, I never heard him speak an unkind or hasty word, or saw him in a fretful mood; uniformly kind and courteous to all, whether of low or high degree, he stood for the epitome of a thorough Christian gentleman in the highest sense of the word."

William Green lived and died in GREEN the parish of Kings Court, County Meath, Ireland. His son, James Green, was born in the same parish, and during the early exodus of Irish to America, came to the United States, leaving his family, with the expectation of bringing them later. He was a farmer. It is thought that he died of yellow fever, as he became lost to his family, and when his son came ten years later, he could find no trace of him. He was at New Orleans, Louisiana, when last heard from. He married Mary Pepper, a native of the same parish with himself. Children, all born in Ireland: 1. Mary, died in Ireland. 2. Mathew, died in Newark, New Jersey. 3. Charles, mentioned below.

(II) Charles, son of James Green, was born in County Meath, Ireland, August 30, 1838. He had some schooling in his youth in his native parish. He came to this country in 1854, landing in New York City. During the first summer he worked there for a Mr. Joyce. During the fall he worked in Brooklyn, and the following spring removed to Westfield, Massachusetts, where for the next seven years he was in the employ of Mr. Bliss, as a driver on his milk route. He then learned the contracting business in the employ of H. Phelps, and worked for him and other contractors many years. In 1885 Mr. Green engaged in the contracting business on his own account, and was very successful. Owing to ill health he retired in 1906, and devoted his attention to the care of his property up to the time of his death, October 23, 1908. He was one of the selfmade men of Westfield, well known, and universally respected by his fellow townsmen. Upright, industrious and energetic, he fought his way in the business world, in spite of want of early advantages. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religion a Roman Catholic. He was a strong and helpful advocate of temperance, a charter member of the Father Mathew Total Abstinence Society of his parish, served as its treasurer many years, and assisted liberally in the financial support of that worthy organization; he was the last survivor of its charter members. He lived for many years in a home on Mechanic street. He married, July 5, 1858, Mary Tierney, born in 1830, at Meath Hill, County Meath, Ireland, daughter of Thomas Tierney. Children, born in Westfield: 1. James, born May 30, 1862; married Maria O'Brien; children: Charles, born September 3, 1894; Maria, August 18, 1898; Frances, May 15, 1902. 2. Thomas, born May 31, 1864; a mail carrier in Westfield. 3. Mary, born November 20, 1865; graduate from the Westfield high school and State normal school, and taught school for a period of twelve years. She married, July 26, 1899, Dr. James S. McLaughlin; see below.

Dr. James S. McLaughlin was born in Clinton, Massachusetts, September 3, 1865. His father, Patrick McLaughlin, son of Patrick, was born in County Mayo, Ireland, came to America when a young man, and was a gardener by trade; he died in October, 1904, at the home of his son, Rev. Thomas H. McLaughlin, in Adams, Massachusetts; he married Honora Kittridge; children: Mary Ann, Bridget, Nellie, Rev. Thomas H. McLaughlin, Michael, James, John, Nora, Patrick, and one who died in infancy.

Dr. James S. McLaughlin received his early schooling in his native town, attending Holy Cross College, Worcester; Ottawa College, Canada; the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York City, and Dartmouth Medical College, from which he received his degree of Doctor of Medicine. He began to practice medicine in Westfield soon after graduation, and has continued with marked success to the present time, taking a leading position among the physicians of the city. In religion he is a Roman Catholic, and in politics a Democrat. He was elected a member of the board of health of Westfield, serving three years. He is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society; the Dartmouth College Alumni Association; the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks; the Ancient Order of Hibernians; the Royal Arcanum; the Fraternal Order of Eagles; and the Foresters of America. Children of Dr. and Mrs. McLaughlin: James McLaughlin, born June 15, 1902; Charles McLaughlin, October 6, 1904.

Powderly is a modified spelling of an ancient French surname. The branch of the family in Ireland and America has produced a number of successful and distinguished men, including the late Terence V. Powderly, a prominent organizer and leader of the labor movement in the United States, afterward immigration commissioner of the federal government.

(1) Patrick Powderly, the first of the family in Ireland, was born in France, 1780-85, according to the family, and came to County Meath, Ireland, where he followed his trade as a weaver for the remainder of his life. He married, in Ireland, Alice Dillon, a native of Scotland, of Irish ancestry. Children: 1. James, came to the United States. 2. Luke. 3. Lewis. 4. Thomas, born March 15, 1815, mentioned below. 5. Mark. 6. John. 7. Patrick. 8. Mary.

(II) Thomas, son of Patrick Powderly, was born in the parish of Still Mullen, County Meath, Ireland, March 15, 1815, and died at Randolph, Massachusetts, April 10, 1903. He received a common school education in his native parish. When about fourteen years old he entered upon an apprenticeship of seven years in a flour mill. He worked there two years as a journeyman after coming of age, when his dislike for night work and a desire to better himself caused him to join his brother who had already located in the United States. He landed in New York City on Easter Sunday morning in 1840. He made the passage in the ship "Susanna Commons" on the maiden voyage of that vessel. He found work first at North Bridgewater, Massachusetts, where for six months he was a farm hand. He then learned the trade of shoemaker and followed it for ten years in that vicinity. In 1850 he bought a farm in Randolph and engaged in market gardening with much success. He was skillful in agriculture, enterprising and very industrious. He was popular among his friends and neighbors and loved society and good-fellowship. He was very fond of out-door sports, especially hunting and fishing, and his was a familiar figure in the woods of the Blue Hills during the hunting season. He was always a faithful communicant of the Catholic church and was a liberal supporter of St. Mary's parish in Randolph. He sang for many years in the choir of this church, and was prominent in other musical organizations. He was a member of the Crispins, a labor organization. He married, December 25, 1845, Mary Ann McMahon, born 1830, died at Randolph, 1869, daughter of Patrick and Mary (Dunn) McMahon, of Randolph. Her father was born in 1804 at West Meath, Ireland, and died in 1880 in Randolph; children: Cornelius, Mary, James, Edward, Margaret, Alice, Peter, William, Jane, all born in Randolph except the eldest who was born in Boston. Mr. McMahon with his wife came from Ireland, beginning life in Randolph as a laborer, saving money carefully and investing it shrewdly in real estate which increased constantly in value. Mr. McMahon left a substantial estate. He was one of the first and most faithful Catholics in this section, and having a quarry he got out the stone for the foundation of the new church, first Catholic church here: in a new church built later he had a window placed with his name on it; he was held in the highest esteem by his townsmen. Mrs. Powderly was a devout churchwoman and one of the first teachers in the Sunday school of St. Mary's Church. Children: 1. Charles Thomas, born in Brockton, January 15, 1848, died May, 1890; married Mary Kerrigan; children: i. Mary, was a stenographer with Miss Frances Willard and went with her all over the world; she died in 1906; ii. James, married Catherine McDonald; children: Leo, Adeline, Harold, Mildred, died aged one year; iii. Charles, married Margaret Kennedy; iv. Gertrude, unmarried; v. Albert, died at two years of age. 2. James Henry, born November 11, 1849, died aged twenty-two months. 3. Alice A., born April 9, 1852, lives in Randolph. 4. Mary E., born June 7, 1854, married William M. McGaughey, who was for a number of years an instructor in state prisons in Trenton, New Jersey, and Columbus, South Carolina; children: i. Alice A., married Walter J. McEnaney and had Jane E. and Mary D. McEnaney; ii. William F., went around the world in the gunboat "Georgia;" iii. Moses H., engaged in the navy. 5. Annie D., born June 14, 1856, married J. J. Lynch. 6. Charlotte Augusta, born June 1, 1858, died December 9, 1891. 7. Henry F., born March 28, 1860, mentioned below. 8. Edward Allen, born March 7, 1862, married Sarah Allen McGaughey, sister of William M. McGaughey, mentioned above; children: Albert G., Herbert, Cyril. 9. Jane E., born April 25, 1864, lives on the old homestead, unmarried. 10. Frances, born August 15, 1866, married John P. Brady; children: Mary, John, Francis. 11. Margaret, born August, 1868, died aged one month.

(III) Henry F., son of Thomas Powderly, was born March 28, 1860, at Randolph, Massachusetts. He was educated in the public schools of his native town. He began work in a shoe factory and became a skillful workman, following this trade until his health failed in 1908. He is fond of travel and has indulged a desire to visit not only the home of his forefathers, but the chief places of interest in Europe and America. He is a Democrat in politics, and a communicant of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church. During the past year he has been confined to the house by ill health, but is now planning to resume business.

He makes his home with his sisters on the homestead in Randolph. He is unmarried.

The Sept of the O'Murchudha, MURPHY pronounced O'Murraghoo, at first anglicised O'Murchoe, and finally Murphy, were designated in Celtic history, Ily-Feliny, or descendants of Felim, from their progenitor, a son of the celebrated Enna Kinsellagh, King of Leinster, contemporary of Saint Patrick, in the fifth century. The territory of the Sept was originally in Wexford. To be a Murphy at home or abroad is to be proverbially associated with old Irish or Milesian extraction, and readers of history will recall that the steward of the Duke of Wellington's estates in Spain was Don Patricio O'Murphy. From Wexford the Clan Moroghoe Sept came to Muskerry, county Cork, during the early part of the thirteenth century, and they possessed all that territory, as O'Hart says, between Cork and Macroom, on the northern side of the river Lee. A very large tract of land near Upton, county Cork, is yet called Bally-Murphy, for as early as 1641, the senior branch of the family settled there, and Irish genealogists agree that there were as many as thirty-seven families of them, and all of them had Gaelic affixes by which they were known. (See O'Hart's Irish Pedigree, vol. 1, chap. 4, p. 703, No. 6).

It is a family that for many generations supplied the church, bar, and medical professions of their native land with representatives, and undoubtedly would have furnished the army as well, were it not an unwritten law that no self-respecting patriotic son of Ireland should ever lend or give himself to the service of his country's enemy; a family that traced its honorable pedigree back through all the troublous times of that devoted land to the first landing of the English; that like many another old family sustained confiscation of property and holdings as a price of the ancient creed.

(I) Patrick Denis Murphy, the progenitor of this line of the family, was born in county Cork, Ireland, and married Anna Wall. Children: 1. Ellen. 2. Jane. 3. Denis, died young. 4. Daniel Walter, born October 21, 1833, mentioned below. 5. Denis. 6. William. 7. Margaret. 8. Mary. 9. Michael. 10. George, chief truant officer of Boston, Massachusetts.

(II) Daniel Walter, son of Patrick Denis Murphy, was born in county Cork, Ireland, near the city of Cork, October 21, 1833, and was educated as a civil engineer, being apprenticed at the age of nineteen under Patrick Leahy, of Tivoli, near Cork. Subsequently he engaged in business and built the military road from Ballincollig to the Ovens, in county Cork. He came to America on the ship "Daniel Webster" in 1854, and settled first in Milford, New Hampshire, where he was a road builder and where his wife taught school. Soon, however, he removed to Boston, Massachusetts, and engaged in the sand contracting business. He supplied the sand for the building of the Carney Hospital, the Little Wanderers' Home, and other public buildings in Boston. Later he was foreman in the paving department of the city. For twenty years he had charge of the estate of the Bent heirs, being all the territory to the east of what is to-day P street, South Boston, about five hundred acres. This estate included the old "Battery," built by General Washington as a defense against the British. He was exceedingly fond of reading, and accumulated a library of choice books, including many works on mathematics, of which he was especially fond. This library is among the most cherished possessions of his son, mentioned below. Daniel W. Murphy was a man of splendid physique, six feet four inches tall, and very straight. He died October 21, 1904. He married, in Cork, Ireland, Marianne Bowen, who was a descendant of the Bowens of Passage, county Cork, Ireland, famous boat builders of that time, and who died in 1901. Children: 1. Patrick Bowen, mentioned below. 2. William Bowen, writer for magazines and contributor to many New York and Boston papers; was under General Miles in the Geronimo uprising and was an observer when this chief was brought in a prisoner, and when he fired a pistol which he had concealed under his blanket, but which did not injure the general; was orderly sergeant in Battery I, Fourth Regiment of Artillery, under General George W. Getty, and honorably discharged as a "most excellent soldier" after eight years' service. He was given charge of the Metropolitan police of Boston and visited England to investigate the methods of caring for the parks. He saved three boys from drowning in the Back Bay fens, May 29, 1892, for which he was awarded a medal by the Massachusetts Humane Society; was life member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society; never married; he died in 1903. 3. Edward John, born in Ireland, died there, buried in the Botanic Gardens, Cork, in the grave adjoining that of the famous Father Matthew. 4. Walter Daniel, who while a pupil and before his graduation from the Lincoln School, South Boston, was taken ill and died. 5. Annie Louise, teacher in the public schools; graduate of New England Conservatory of Music, Boston; teacher of organ and piano; married John Henry McCarthy of Cambridge; he died February 9, 1909.

(III) Rev. Patrick Bowen, son of Daniel Walter Murphy, was born in Ireland and came to New England with his parents. In 1867 he graduated from the Lincoln School, South Boston, and a warm affection has existed since that time for all his schoolmates, as is attested by his presence at each yearly gathering. At an early age he became a member of the Ninth Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, under General P. R. Guiney, Colonel B. F. Finan, and was appointed sergeant-major by Colonel B. F. Finan. In 1872 Governor Washburn commissioned him second lieutenant in Company F, Ninth Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia. In 1869, through the influence of the pioneer Irish patriot of South Boston, Mr. Andrew R. Strain, Father Murphy became a member of the Patrick Henry Circle, Fenian Brotherhood, which held on its membership rolls some of the most prominent men of Irish blood in Boston. In 1870, when the second invasion of Canada took place, Sergeant Major Murphy went to the front in the capacity of secretary to Major Maginess. This determined and hopeful party of men left Boston in May, 1870. In the party were General John O'Neill, Colonel W. J. Barry, Major Maginess, John Boyle O'Reilly, Thomas Wentworth Higginson (then a reporter), and others. But this invasion failed for lack of men, as had the first for lack of means. The story of their trip is told by Father Murphy in the Pilot of September, 1878. He was present when John Boyle O'Reilly, General O'Neill and Major Maginess were formally placed under arrest by the federal government, and housed in the old jail at St. Albans, Vermont. In 1873 Mr. Murphy decided to study for the priesthood, and entered Saint Charles College, Maryland, later attending the Nicholet College, Canada, and in 1882 Father Murphy (now a Soggarth Aroon) celebrated his first mass, in St. Vincent Church, South Boston. The services were attended by many relatives and friends, and in his honor a battalion of the Ninth Regiment was present in full uniform and under arms.

One of the first duties undertaken by Father

Rev. Patrick Bowen Murphy

Murphy was the removal of Dr. Cahill's remains to Ireland. He succeeded so well that on Washington's birthday, 1885, the remains of the patriot priest, scientist and scholar, Dr. Cahill, were exhumed from Hollywood, Brookline, where they had rested over twenty-one years, and transferred to Glasrevin, Dublin, Ireland's national cemetery. The Irish societies of Boston, through the aid of Patrick Ford, editor of the Irish World, and New York societies, jointly bore the burden of the great display in both cities, the Dr. Cahill memorial committee of Ireland taking charge of the remains and of the delegates accompanying them at Cove (Queenstown). All Ireland turned out. The lord bishop of Cloyne, Dr. McCarthy, officiated at Cove Cathedral; the lord bishop of Cork, Dr. Delaney, officiated in his city. His grace, Archbishop Croke, of Cashel, met the remains at Cashel steam road station, and the people of Tipperary filled a car with their floral tributes. The See of Dublin was vacant, but the administrator, then of Maynooth, now the patriotic archbishop of Dublin, showed every courtesy to the remains and to the visitors. Before Father Murphy left on this mission he was presented with a beautiful chalice by Rev. Denis Murphy, of Cork. This chalice he has used daily ever since, in the celebration of mass. While in Ireland he was presented with an Irish jaunting car by his many friends there, and this he still has.

Father Murphy was stationed as curate of the Portland Cathedral, Portland, Maine; in St. Mary's Church, Cambridgeport, with Father Scully, the war chaplain of the Ninth Regiment; in the Sacred Heart Church of East Boston; in Saint Patrick's Church, Natick, with Father Walsh. While in Natick he organized four hundred boys as the John Boyle O'Reilly Cadets, and he also organized the John Boyle O'Reilly Band, a musical organization which attracted much attention, and played all over the country. He also organized all the children of the public schools into Bands of Mercy, in connection with the work of the Society of Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. This action was gratefully acknowledged in Dumb Animals, the official organ of the society. No priest was ever more popular in Natick than Father Murphy. He was respected and admired by all the people, no matter of what creed. He was elected a member of the school committee of the town, and served faithfully several years.

When the Spanish war broke out, he was commissioned May 14, 1898, chaplain of the Ninth Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteers, under Colonel Bogan, appointed at his request by the late Archbishop Williams, of Boston, "with good wishes and happy return" for himself and regiment. He was then rector of Saint George's Church at Saxonville, the third oldest church in the archdiocese of Boston. His military rank was equivalent to that of mounted captain, entitling him to the use of a horse, so necessary to the performance of his duties. But only five horses went to Cuba with his brigade, and his saddle horse was sent home when General Shafter's order forbidding horses was issued. It was alleged that only mules could live in Cuba. Of course, without his horse, he shared all the hardships of the regimental marches, for which he was so unprepared by his profession. His services were not confined to the Ninth Regiment but, with those of Fathers Hart and Fitzgerald, owing to his vows as a priest, were given to the whole of the third division of the Fifth Army Corps, comprising thirty thousand men. His first call was to the first man killed, which was an accident, a man being struck by a pole as his head was out the car window. This man died at Camp Alger and was buried at Fort Meyer.

Among his acquaintances made in Cuba was the celebrated traveller and lecturer, Rev. Peter MacQueen, who was a correspondent there for certain Boston papers. This acquaintance ripened into friendship which has continued to the present time. Another friendship made at that time was that of James A. King, president of the Michigan American Patriotic Association, serving in Cuba as surgeon of the Thirty-third Michigan Regiment. He having learned that some strictures had been passed upon Father Murphy's performance of his duties, in a letter dated October 19, 1898, after expressing his surprise and indignation, refers to the fact in this way: "It seems to be the lot of all energetic men ambitious to do their full duty, to suffer from unjust and ignorant criticism." And again: "You are the only chaplain I saw who was always ready for duty and always looking for duty to perform." Of the many stories about Father Murphy sent from the seat of war, a correspondent of the Chicago Journal thus wrote about him: "Father Murphy was as fine a type of the American chaplain of volunteers as I saw in Cuba. He had the faculty of winning both respect and the affection of soldiers, and that was largely due to his adaptability." Further illustrating his estimate of Father Murphy, the same writer relates this incident: "Once several civilians and a slightly wounded soldier marched with him from the firing line to Siboney. That is nine miles, and we crossed two mountains and encountered two rain-storms. But the parson never whimpered, though we marched at a killing pace, for we wanted to get under cover before night fell. * * * * And in spite of his years, he (Father Murphy) offered on that very trip to carry the wounded soldier's gun, and every mile or so he would call back to the man 'You know, my boy, what to do with that rifle if it gets too heavy for you, give it to me.'"

At the request of the Archbishop of Santiago, Father Murphy performed two of the very few marriages contracted in Santiago Province during the campaign. Stalwart and energetic, he was occasionally called on for services not usually looked for from one of his cloth. At Siboney, with the hospital staff and engineer corps, he was active in executing the order of General Nelson A. Miles, designed to check the spread of yellow fever, to burn hundreds of buildings condemned as unsanitary. Another of his extra services was the distribution of the mails for the Ninth Regiment, the necessary pass in and out of Santiago having been given to him by command of Major General Bates, July 28, 1898. Distinguished among the other friends made by Chaplain Murphy during the Cuban campaign was Commodore Cotton, who was later assigned to the command of the United States squadron in Europe; he died February, 1909. Father Murphy is a member of the Arundel Art Society of London; of the Cork Historical and Archaeological Society; honorary member of the Grattan Literary Association; member for life of the Congregation of Laval (affiliated), Quebec, Canada. For four years he was state chaplain of the Massachusetts Knights of Columbus, and an active member of Division 1, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Boston. He was a member of Simpson Assembly, No. 169, Royal Society of Good Fellows; he is the ex-chaplain-in-chief of the Legion of Spanish War Veterans. Father Murphy is at present the rector of the Church of the Holy Rosary, South Boston. He is a graceful speaker and is much in demand on public occasions.

Dr. Lampenhof, father of Gabriel BOOS (Lampenhof) Boos, who for many years was medical examiner for the town of Bruel, near Cologne, Rhenish

Prussia, came from an old and respected German family. He was thrown from his horse, and the accident resulted in his death in the prime of life. He married Marie Just, whose father was an officer in Napoleon's army. She married (second) Francis Boos, a merchant in the Rhinelands of Germany; they both died in Bonn. Dr. Lampenhof had an only son, Gabriel, mentioned below.

(11) Gabriel Lampenhof, son of Dr. Lampenhof, was born October 25, 1831. He assumed the name of his stepfather, Mr. Boos, and was known afterwards as Gabriel Boos. He received a liberal education and when about fourteen years of age began to learn the manufacture of gilt mouldings. At the age of seventeen he was a skilled workman, and although the youngest, he was considered the best workman in his employer's service. His employer, Mr. William Gram, decided to go to America and establish a business in the United States. This he did, and, bringing young Gabriel with him as his best employee, he settled in New York City. Gabriel was ambitious, and anxious to engage in business on his own account. When he was twenty-one years old he had accumulated sufficient capital to make a beginning. He started in New York City, and was rapidly building up a good trade; but, not willing to become a serious competitor of his friend and former employer, he decided to sell his business there, and came to Boston. He established himself in Kingston street. The business was a comparatively new one in this country, and since his factory was the first of its kind in New England, he at once found a good market for all he could produce, success crowning his efforts from the beginning. He built up a large and constantly increasing trade and accumulated a fortune. In 1894 he retired. His partners, Alexander Ceppi and James Bauer, who had been with him for many years, succeeded him.

In 1871 Mr. Boos bought a beautiful estate near Metz, the capital of Lorraine, which was formerly the country home of Bishop Quellin. Here he lived until 1880, for the purpose of educating his children. In 1887 he purchased an estate in Jamaica Plain, Massachusetts, and there spent the remaining years of his life. He died September 10, 1908. He was a man of much influence, especially among the Germans in Boston. He was a member of the New York Liederkrantz, a charter member of the German Orpheus Society, and a member of the Boston Art Club. He was particularly fond of outdoor sports, especially of fishing.

In politics he was an independent Republican, but he never took an active interest in political affairs.

In October, 1847, Mr. Boos married, in New York City, Theresa Carola Schraubstaedter, born in Dresden, Germany, in 1834. She came of an old and prominent German family, her great-grandfather being Dr. Von Kolditz, a well known physician in charge of the state hospital for the insane in the city of Dresden. Mrs. Boos was educated in Dresden. She came to America when a young woman, with her family, and settled in New York City. She is living, and is still strong both physically and mentally, although of an advanced age. Children: 1. Arthur, born September 26, 1858; is a prominent sketch artist, and is head artist of the Forbes Lithographing Company of Boston; married Marie Jacobeit, who was born in Düsseldorf, and has a daughter Alice, a student in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. 2. Agnes H., born August 1, 1865; married Curt Sahr, formerly an officer in the German army, who is now in the insurance business in Boston; children: i. Josephine Sahr, Radcliffe graduate with degree of M. A., and now a teacher; ii. Curt Sahr, in charge of a sugar plantation near Honolulu; iii. Gabriel Sahr, pupil in the High School of Commerce. 3. Gabriella M., born March 3, 1862; went in 1871 with her parents to Metz; here she met Colonel Ernst Dorsch, whom she later married; they reside in Coblenz, on the Rhine, where her husband is an officer of artillery in the German army; children: i. On their return to America in 1880 he attended the public schools of Boston, and graduated at Harvard College in 1894. Later he entered the University of Heidelberg, Germany, where he received the degree of Ph. D. in chemistry in 1896. He returned to Boston, and was instructor in chemistry at Harvard University in 1896-97. The following year he entered the Harvard Medical School and became

He took his medical degree in 1901, and was appointed house physician at the Massachusetts General Hospital, serving eighteen months. In October, 1902, he went to Europe, and was for four years research student and instructor in the Pharmacological Institute at Strasburg, Germany. At this period he was engaged largely in research in biological chemistry and in post-graduate study of internal medicine. In 1906 he returned to Boston and became a member of the staff of the Massachusetts General Hospital. Any reliable information concerning this family in its earlier generations appears to be wanting, and all attempts to connect Joseph Rider with generations of the family anterior to his time have been quite unsuccessful. Indeed, little appears to be known of this Joseph Rider, who figures as the earliest ancestor of the family of whom there is any information whatever.

(1) Joseph Rider had a son.

(11) Talmund, son of Joseph Rider, is said to have lived at Mansfield, Connecticut, although the somewhat meagre records of that town give no account of him, and we only know that he was a farmer. He married

Marcia Dexter, and by her had children: 1. Joseph G., born about 1815. 2. Wallace, who now lives in Albany, New York. 3. Warham. 4. Jane, married R. O. Fenton. 5. Eunice, married Alfred Curtis. 6. Mariette, married Solymán Taylor.

(III) Joseph G., son of Talmund and Marcia (Dexter) Rider, was born about 1815, probably in Mansfield, Connecticut, and it is said that while he had little opportunity to attend school during the days of his youth he nevertheless applied himself to study by himself and thus succeeded in gaining a good education for his time. He owned a small farm and also was a shoemaker and was in all respects an industrious and thrifty man. In 1860 he removed to New York state and followed farming until 1877; about thirty years previous to his death he gave up his trade. His death occurred in 1902. By reason of falling from a ladder he suffered serious injuries and on three different occasions was compelled to undergo an operation, but he possessed a very strong constitution and lived to good old age. In politics he originally was a strong Whig and once stood as the candidate of that party for the legislature; later a Republican, but the district in which he lived was strongly Democratic and his personal popularity was not sufficient to overcome the majority against his party. In religious preference he was a Baptist. He married, about 1837, Lovina, daughter of Joseph Merrick, and by her had two children. 1. Claudius W., born 1843. 2. Jane E., March 10, 1852, in Orwell, New York; married J. R. Potter, of Orwell, and had three children: Claudia, Paul M. and Madeline Potter.

(IV) Claudius W., son of Joseph G. and Lovina (Merrick) Rider, was born in Willington, Connecticut, August 14, 1843, and received a good early public school education. At the age of eighteen years he enlisted for three years as a private in Company C of the One Hundred and Tenth New York Volunteer Infantry, and served principally in the far south, in the Department of the Gulf, and his regiment took part in the famous siege of Port Hudson. After the close of the war he returned home and resumed his studies, devoting attention chiefly to review work. In 1866 he entered the employ of the Merrick Thread Company, at Mansfield, Connecticut, the place of business of which company was removed to Holyoke, Massachusetts, in 1867. Mr. Rider was then bookkeeper and paymaster for the company, and subsequently was advanced to the more responsible position of secretary of the company. Still later, upon the death of Mr. Merrick, he became treasurer and general manager, and he is still associated with the management of the Holyoke branch. In 1899 the Merrick Thread Company was absorbed by the American Thread Company, and he is associated with the Holyoke branch. Mr. Rider is a Republican, and cast his first vote for Mr. Lincoln, in 1864. For four years he was clerk of the common council of Holyoke, and now is treasurer of the Holyoke City Library and member of the library committee. He also is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and member and treasurer of the Baptist church of Holyoke. He married, June 12, 1872, Josephine A., daughter of Roswell T. Lee, of Cape Vincent, Jefferson county, New York.

This name of Scotch origin is AITKEN seldom found in the United States, and in only one other place in New England besides Springfield, Massachusetts, and there it is spelled Atikin. Both families came to America in the last century.

At the death of his father he became sole proprietor of the enterprise which is the largest of its kind in New England outside of Boston, and has a national reputation. Mr. Aitken originated the practice of placing flowers under glass as winter decorations. He is a Republican in politics. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias; Springfield Lodge, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks; the Nayasset and the Springfield Automobile clubs, of which last he is now (1908) president. The Newhall family in England had estates at Wiltshire as early as the eleventh century. At one time Oliver Cromwell owned the manor of Newhall, which he sold. The coat-of-arms of Thomas Newhall was: Azure three plates or on each an ermine spot sable. Crest: A cross crosslet fitchee azure. Motto: Diligentia ditat.

(1) Thomas Newhall, immigrant ancestor, born in England, came with his brother Anthony Newhall to Lynn, about 1630. He was a farmer, and owned all the land on the eastern side of Federal street, as far north as Marion. His house stood on the east side of Federal street, south of where the brook crosses. In the division of lands in 1630 he received thirty acres in Lynn. He died at Lynn, May 25, 1674. His will, dated April 1, 1668, filed in court June 3, 1674, bequeathed various parcels of real estate to his children. He had land at Rumney Marsh, Gaines Neck and Lynn. His son Thomas was executor. The estate was appraised at one hundred and seventy-three

He was buried April 1, 1687. His executor, John Newhall, filed an inventory, but the will has not been found. (V) John, son of Isaac Davenport, was born at Dorchester, April 19, 1771. He married Lucy ——. Children, born at Dorchester: 1. Nancy, January 24, 1798. 2. Elijah Lewis, April, 1801. 3. John, October 3, 1802; mentioned below. 4. Calvin, January 11, 1805. 5. Hannah, September, 1807.

(VI) John (2), son of John (1) Davenport, was born in Dorchester, October 3, 1802; died at Allston, Boston, at the great age of ninety-five years. He was educated in the public schools of his native town, and learned the trade of carpenter and housewright there. He engaged in business in Boston as a builder, and became one of the leading contractors of his day. He built the largest buildings in Boston under one roof at that time in Boston, and many fine residences on Purchase street and at Fort Hill. He built the first house in Chelsea, and had to transport his lumber thither from Boston in rafts. He was one of the first passengers on the train from Boston to Worcester over the then Boston & Worcester railroad, he and his wife riding to Worcester on a flat car. He once traveled to Washington, then a journey of some length and difficulty, taking the stage to Providence, Rhode Island, sailing in a sloop to New York, and thence proceeding by stage to Washington through Philadelphia. He had the honor of shaking hands with President Jefferson. The trip occupied three weeks. He married, May 3, 1827, Mary Jane Slater, born at Salem, July 20, 1807, died in Allston. Children, born in Boston: 1. Hannah. 2. Hannah E., lives in Brighton; unmarried. 3. Mary Jane, died young. 4. John, Jr., mentioned below. 5. Josephine, died unmarried. 6. (VII) John (3), son of John (2) Davenport, was born at Fort Hill, Boston, August 25, 1834. He was educated in the public schools of Boston. When a young man he went west. He had an excellent opportunity to make his fortune by buying land in Chicago, then in its infancy, but went farther west. He prospected through Iowa, and after walking from one end of that state to the other settled there. But he had an attack of fever and ague, and had to return east. He entered the employ of Robert Wiggins, dealer in leaf tobacco. A few years later, when his employer died, he and another salesman, Charles Legg, bought the business. This partnership continued for a period of twenty-five years. After the partnership was dissolved, Mr. Davenport and his son continued in the same line of business. In politics he was a Democrat until Mr. Bryan's presidential candidacy, when he acted with the Republicans. He married Maria C. Rice, born in Brighton, died in 1872, at Allston, daughter of William Rice, who was for many years a school teacher. He died March 30, 1900. Children: 1. Florence, born 1862; married Benjamin Thomas Loudon, in Boston; have no children. 2. John Franklin, born March 6, 1865; mentioned below. 3. Nellie, born 1868, died 1876.

(VIII) John Franklin, son of John (3) Davenport, was born in the twenty-fifth ward of Boston, March 6, 1865. He was educated in the public schools of Brighton, now part of Boston. At the age of nineteen he became associated in business with his father. The store was on Batterymarch street, and the firm enjoyed a thriving trade. Since his father's death he has continued the business under his own name. He is well and favorably known in the tobacco trade, importing leaf tobacco extensively. He was formerly a Democrat, but has been a Republican since the advent of Bryan. In religion he is a Unitarian. He married (first) 1886, Mary Ella Smith, born in Boston, died 1903. He married (second) February, 1904, Mary E., daughter of George Kendall. Children of first wife: 1. Ruth, born February 8, 1887, died August 20, 1906. 2. John, born February 25, 1888. 3. Norman, born November 16, 1889; now in Harvard College. Child of second wife: 4. George, born October 23, 1905.

The surname Gilbert is of great GILBERT antiquity in England. Sir Humphrey Gilbert, the famous navigator and explorer, lived in Devonshire, England, and died in 1583. He had a son Raleigh Gilbert, whose son Humphrey was about the same age as Humphrey Gilbert, the immigrant mentioned below, but it has not been proved that they were related. The similarity of names, however, seems to show that the immigrant was a grandson of Sir Humphrey.

(I) Humphrey Gilbert, immigrant ancestor, was born in England in 1615, died February 13, 1658. He settled in Ipswich, Massachusetts, where he was a husbandman and commoner as early as 1648. He bought a house and land there February 5, 1650, near the Wenham line, and contributed to the fund to support the Indian war in 1643. He was taxed in Wenham in 1655. He deposed in 1654 that he was aged about thirty-eight years. His will was dated February 14, 1657-58, and proved March 30, 1657-58. He bequeathed to his wife Elizabeth, son John and daughter Elizabeth; to daughter Abigail and four other daughters under age; to Peter Harvey, Richard Palmer, Richard Comer, Moses Aborn (Eberne). The four minor daughters petitioned that their husbands be appointed administrators January, 1657-58. Evidence was given June 27, 1666, that the daughter Hannah had received her portion. His widow Elizabeth married (second) September 24, 1658, William Remer, who died October 26, 1672, and she married (third) June 10, 1676, Henry Kimball. Children: 1. Martha, married, October 23, 1663, Richard Comer. 2. Hannah, married, January, 1670, Peter Harvey. 3. Mary, married, November 24, 1672, Richard Palmer. 4. Abigail, married Moses Aborn. 5. John, mentioned below. Also other children named in will.

(II) Deacon John, son of Humphrey Gilbert, was born about 1656-57, and lived on the homestead in Ipswich. He was a member of the church at Wenham until the formation of the church at the Hamlet (now Hamilton) of which he was chosen one of the first deacons, November 9, 1714. He died March 17, 1722-23, aged sixty-seven years (gravestone). He married, September 27, 1677, Elizabeth Kilham, of Ipswich. Children: 1. John, born July 14, 1678; married Martha Dodge and removed to Kettle Cove. 2. Daniel, 1680; married Elizabeth Porter. 3. Mary, baptized before 1682, died young. 4. Mary, born January 10, 1682, died young. 5. Elizabeth, married, December 23, 1714, John Davis. 6. Mary, married, 1706, John Hull. 7. Martha, baptized 1688-89. 8. Joseph (twin), February 1, 1691; mentioned below. 9. Benjamin (twin), February 1, 1691; married, August, 1716, Esther Perkins; died June 24, 1760. 10. Lydia, baptized 1702. 11. Noah, baptized November 21, 1703; married, February 12, 1727-28, Sarah Allen. 12. Sarah, married Nathaniel Gott.

(III) Joseph, son of Deacon John Gilbert, was born February 1, 1691. He married (first) in 1718, Mary Cogswell, born at Chebacco, daughter of Adam Cogswell (3), William (2), John (1). He removed to Littleton, Massachusetts, and married (second) in 1739, Elizabeth Whipple. Children: 1. John, married Sarah Cummings. 2. Samuel, captain in Colonel Prescott's regiment. 3. May. 4. Elizabeth, married Aaron Stratton. 5. Daniel. 6. Joseph, mentioned below. 7. Abigail Hains.

(IV) Joseph (2), son of Joseph (1) Gilbert, was born in Littleton, Massachusetts, about 1751. He was probably a soldier in the French and Indian war, as he was an officer at the breaking out of the revolution. He was sergeant in Captain Samuel Reed's company, Colonel William Prescott's regiment, and answered the Lexington alarm, April 19, 1775. In the same year he was lieutenant in the same regiment, Captain Eliphalet Densmore's company, his name being on the list of officers May 20, of that year; also lieutenant in Captain Samuel Gilbert's company, same regiment, in August, 1775. A certificate by Captain Joseph Moore, on file in the Massachusetts state archives, states that Lieutenant Joseph Gilbert had command of his company in the battle of Bunker Hill. He married Sarah Robbins, born in 1751, died in Hillsborough, New Hampshire, November 25, 1828. He had a son John, mentioned below.

(V) John (2), son of Joseph (2) Gilbert, was born in Littleton, August 21, 1773, and died March 30, 1857, in Hillsborough, New Hampshire. He was a farmer in Hillsborough. He married, October 8, 1783, Susan Pollard, daughter of Benjamin Pollard. He had a son Joseph, mentioned below.

(VI) Joseph (3), son of John (2) Gilbert, was born January 10, 1799, died September 27, 1838, in Boston. He married, August 3, 1825, Elvira Moore, of Marlborough, Massachusetts, born 1800, died March 11, 1872. Children: 1. Almira, born February 18, 1828, died August 8, 1833, from an accident. 2. Susan Page, January 20, 1831, died January 7, 1852; married, October 11, 1846, Rodney S. Lakin and had three children. 3. John Clark, November 2, 1832; mentioned below. 4. Hammond Barnes, September, 1834; married, in Colorado, October 28, 1860, Julia E. Beverly, of Paris, Illinois.

(VII) John Clark, son of Joseph (3) Gilbert, was born November 2, 1832, at Hillsborough, died October 31, 1903. His parents removed to Boston when he was a boy, and after the death of his father they returned to Hillsborough, where he received his education in the public schools. He became a clerk in a general store at Nashua, New Hampshire, and before he was eighteen years old went to Boston, in 1850, as clerk in the grocery store of his uncle, John Gilbert, Jr. The business had been established by his uncle in 1830 and Mr. Gilbert soon made himself indispensable to his uncle in the store. He was promoted from time to time, and became a partner when he was twenty-one years of age, and in 1865 became proprietor of the business, which he carried on under the firm name of John Gilbert, Jr., & Company. At one time he conducted stores on Essex and West streets, in addition to his store on Tremont Row. His was the oldest grocery store in Boston, having been established in 1830. When the gold fever of 1849 attracted large numbers of young men from this section, the firm had an extensive business in providing the necessary outfits and supplies. During the civil war he fitted out nearly every vessel sailing from the port of Boston and his old store was a rendezvous for the naval line and staff, from midshipman to admiral. He had many friends in the navy and treasured a large fund of reminiscences and stories, especially of the eventful period of the rebellion. Upon the old ledger of the store may be found the names of such men as Ralph Waldo Emerson, Governor William E. Russell, Joseph Jefferson, the great actor, Admiral George Dewey, William Warren, the actor, and many others of national reputation. The most substantial citizens of Boston were among his customers, and he numbered many of them

among his personal friends. The little back room of his store was a favorite resort for many congenial spirits. It was a favorite resort for Ole Bull, the celebrated violinist, for Warren, Jefferson and Emerson, and in later days for Admiral Schley, Admiral Sampson and other distinguished naval officers. He was conceded the peer of any man in mercantile life in Boston in his day, in sagacity, foresight and general business ability. He was a good financier and while carrying on an annual business of a quarter of a million dollars he took pride in the fact that he never asked for credit or gave a promissory note. His close application doubtless explains his success in large measure, and he remained in active business until his death. He was interested in public affairs and in the history of this country. He was elected a member of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society in 1885. In politics he was a life-long Republican and on several occasions was urged to take the nomination for alderman in his ward, but he refused, having no taste for public life. He was a member of the Free Masons. He married (first) August 23, 1853, Abbie Jane Keay, born January 1, 1832, died January 3, 1861, daughter of Otis and Dorcas (Woodsum) Keay. Her father was a harness maker and manufacturer of leather goods in China Village, Maine. Her grandfather, Otis Keay, was born in Scotland and married, in England, Betsey Appleby; came to America when a young man and settled in Lebanon, Maine; was a farmer there; he and his wife died at an advanced age. He married (second) September 1, 1861, Lizzie Lake Keay, born August 15, 1834, sister of his first wife. Her mother having died, she was taken at the age of three by an aunt, who brought her up and gave her a good education. Children of first wife: 1. Susie Alice, born January 16, 1858, died July 23, 1903; unmarried. 2. John Clark, November 5, 1860, died June 8, 1861. Children of second wife: 3. Mary Abby, unmarried, lives at home. 4. James Porter, January 24, 1867; mentioned below. 5. Caroline Louise, married Harry W. Butts. 6. Elizabeth H., married William Hatch Smiley, who died suddenly May 3, 1907; child Gilbert Smiley, born June 10, 1904.

(VIII) James Porter, son of John Clark Gilbert, was born January 24, 1867. Graduate of Institute of Technology, 1889, expert chemist and manufacturer of electrical supplies in Warren, Ohio. He married Annis Spencer, daughter of Albert H. Spencer. Children: 1. Helen Elizabeth, born April 8, 1894.

2. Dorothy, October 3, 1895. 3. Genevieve, June 13, 1899. 4. John Clark, born February 22, 1904.

The surname Kelso, and Kelsey, KELSEY seem to have the same origin, though Kelso is the common spelling of the Scotch families, and Kelsey of the English. Other spellings such as Calsey, Kelse, Kelsea, Kelsa, Kelsy, are also found in both families in America and in the old country. There is a parish of North and South Kelsey in Lincolnshire, England. A Kelsey family had its seat in Chelmsford and Thorp, county Essex, in 1634, and had a coat-of-arms. The founder of the Scotch family of Kelso lived at Kelso-land, county Ayr, Scotland, Hugo de Kelso by name, as early as 1296. John Kelso, a descendant, alienated the property in 1670, and his second son William acquired lands in Dankerth, Ayrshire, near the family estate. Arms: Sable a fesse engrailed between three garbs or. Crest: A garb or. Motto: Otium cum dignitate. Another seat of the Kelso family is in Roxburghshire. One of the Scotch Kelso family was the Presbyterian minister of Enniskillen, Ireland, at the time of the revolution of 1688, when William took the throne of the United Kingdom from James. Enniskillen was an unwallled village of eighty houses, situated on an island in the river which joins the two sheets of water known as Lough Erne. The Rev. Robert Kelso urged resistance to the Roman Catholic soldiers which were to be placed there for a garrison, and labored both in public and private "to animate his hearers to take up arms and stand upon their own defence; showing example himself by wearing arms, and marching in the head of them when together." They had at first but eighty men poorly armed, but were soon augmented by friends of the same race and religion who fled from the murderous attacks of the Irish Roman Catholics in the south and west. From that time to the end of the war, the men of Enniskillen waged a vigorous and successful campaign. The family in Ireland settled in Antrim and Ulster Province, and was doubtless descended from the redoubtable minister. Among the early settlers of Londonderry, New Hampshire, was a branch of this Scotch-Irish family of Kelso. From Londonderry they removed to New Boston, and the "History of Nottingham, New Hampshire," claims relationship with them, but the evidence of the Connecticut origin of the Nottingham family is too strong.

(I) William Kelsey, immigrant ancestor, was born doubtless in England, but may have been of the Scotch family of Kelso, as the name was frequently spelled in early records. He settled in Cambridge, Massachusetts, as early as 1632, and was a proprietor in 1633. He was admitted a freeman March 4, 1634-5, and sold a meadow there April 19, 1636. He removed to Hartford, where he lived until 1663, and then settled in the adjacent town of Killingworth, Connecticut. He was deputy to the general court in 1671. Children: 1. Abigail, born April 1, 1645. 2. Stephen, born November 7, 1647; mentioned below. 3. Daniel, born 1650. 4. Mark, married Rebecca Hoskins; (second) Abigail Atwood; resided in Wethersfield and Windsor, Connecticut; children: Rebecca, Thomas, John. 5. Lieutenant John, resided in Hartford; admitted freeman 1678; removed to Killingworth; married Phebe Disbrow, daughter of Nicholas; children: John, Joseph, Josiah, and three daughters.

(II) Stephen, son of William Kelsey, was born November 7, 1647, and died November 30, 1710. He married, November 15, 1672, Hannah, daughter of John Ingersoll. Children: 1. Hannah, born 1675. 2. Stephen, September 20, 1677; mentioned below. 3. John, January 20, 1680; married, November 23, 1704, Mary Buck. 4. Daniel, September 14, 1682. 5. William, February 19, 1685. 6. James, August 21, 1687. 7. Charles, June 15, 1692.

(III) Stephen (2), son of Stephen (1) Kelsey, was born September 20, 1677. He married, January 11, 1699, Dorothy Brownson. He lived at Windsor, and perhaps also at Waterbury where two of his sons settled. Children: 1. Stephen, mentioned below. 2. Jonathan, married Ruth, daughter of David Scott, November 7, 1728; settled at Waterbury, Connecticut; children: i. Nathan, born October 29, 1729; ii. Lois, July 20, 1731; iii. Martha, August 13, 1733; iv. Esaias, September 8, 1735. The Seymour family lived at Waterbury, and several of that family married into the Brownsons, as did also the Kelseys. 3. Levi (?).

(IV) Stephen (3), son of Stephen (2) Kelsey, was born in Windsor, about 1710; married, August 23, 1733, Esther, daughter of Ebenezer Hiccox. Children, born at Waterbury: 1. Daniel, September 3, 1734. 2. Stephen, December 2, 1736. 3. Esther, August 9, 1739. 4. Hannah, September 7, 1741. 5. David, born April 23, 1744. 6. Reuben, born June 7, 1746.

(V) Seymour Kelsey, son or nephew of Stephen Kelsey (said to be a son of Levi), was born in 1755, lived in Connecticut and western Massachusetts. He was a soldier in the revolution, private in Captain William Scott's company, Colonel Henley's regiment, November, 1778, in Massachusetts; also from Hadley, Massachusetts, in Captain Cook's company, Colonel Porter's regiment, 1779. His enlistment record shows his age as twenty-four, his height five feet ten inches, complexion light. He was also in the colonel's company of Colonel Greaton's regiment (Third), 1779-80. Early in the revolution Seymour Kelsey was in Captain Uriah Wilcox's company, Colonel Benjamin Bellevs's regiment, from New Hampshire, in 1777, same section as Hadley, however. He was also in Captain Christopher Webber's company, Colonel David Hobart's regiment, under General Stark, from Walpole, New Hampshire, 1777, and in Colonel Bellevs's regiment, 1776. A Matthew Kelsey resided in Hadley, married Sarah ———, and had a son Elijah, born February 28, 1792, the only Kelsey mentioned as a resident of the town by Judd; was doubtless related to Seymour Kelsey. Seymour Kelsey lived at Marlborough, Vermont, in later life, and died there in 1816. He married there, March, 1787, Sarah Auger, born at Haddam, November 4, 1764; died December 13, 1852. Children: 1. James. 2. Sally. 3. Lois. 4. Prudence. 5. Eunice. 6. Hubbard. 7. Levi Davey, mentioned below. 8. Polly. All but James were mentioned in the division of the estate.

(VI) Levi Davey, son of Seymour Kelsey, was born in Marlborough, Vermont, in 1809, and died in January, 1891. He married Abigail Bellows, who died at Marlborough in 1865. He was a farmer in his native town all his life. Children, born at Marlborough: 1. George P., 1840; married Selina Prouty, of Marlborough; children: Cyrus, Addie, Huldah, Mary, Dwight. 2. Emily, 1843; unmarried. 3. Charles H., January 27, 1847. 4. Henry James, mentioned below.

(VII) Henry James, son of Levi Davey Kelsey, was born in Marlborough, Vermont, August 1, 1850, and was educated there in the district schools. He began at the early age of twelve years to do a man's share of the farm work. He worked in the woods in winter, lumbering for his father, and in summer burned charcoal, until he was about twenty-seven years old. He then left home and went to South Charlestown for a year, and thence to Claremont, New Hampshire, where he learned the business of soap making. He left Claremont after about two years, and engaged in business in Westfield, Massachusetts, on his own account, buying a rendering plant and continuing the manufacture of soap there. After fifteen years he had to give up the rendering business on account of legislation restricting the business in cities and towns. In addition to the manufacture of soap, Mr. Kelsey is engaged in farming on an extensive scale, and has a large dairy. He had the misfortune in October, 1901, to lose by fire his house, barns, farm implements and some of his stock. The loss was total, as his insurance had expired shortly before the fire. He rebuilt his house and barns immediately, however. In politics Mr. Kelsey is a Republican, and in religion a Baptist. He married, March 28, 1882, Azella Whitman, born May 31, 1853, at North Adams, Massachusetts (see Whitman VI.). Children, all born at Westfield: 1. Frank H., September 17, 1883; associated with his father on the farm. 2. Walter R., September 22, 1885; lives with his father, and associated in the management of the farm. 3. Harland P., October 9, 1890. 4. Hugh D., September 8, 1892. 5. Harold W., June 9, 1895.

This surname was more often WHITMAN written Wightman in England, but most of the families at the present time spell it Whitman. Tradition says that the American family is descended from Edward Wightman, who was burned for heresy at Litchfield, England, April 11, 1612. He was said to have been the last to suffer death for religious liberty. Valentine Whitman was an immigrant, and settled at Providence. George Whitman, mentioned below, may have been a brother, and was undoubtedly a relative of Valentine.

(I) George Whitman, immigrant ancestor, was born in June, 1632, and died in January, 1722. He settled in Kingstown, Rhode Island, and in 1669 he with others was arrested and kept in jail at Hartford for some time because they owned allegiance to Rhode Island. He took the oath of allegiance May 20, 1671, and was admitted a freeman May 6, 1673. He was one of the petitioners to the King, July 29, 1679, praying that he "would put a stop to these differences about the government thereof, which hath been so fatal to the prosperity of the place; animosities still arising in people's mind as they stand affected to this or that government." He was constable in 1686, on the grand jury in 1687, and for some years a member of the town council. In 1687 he was on the tax list. On February 19, 1712, he and seventeen others bought seven thousand acres of vacant lands in Narragansett ordered sold by the assembly. He and his wife Elizabeth sold to William Gardner twenty-seven and a half acres in Boston Neck, for one hundred and three pounds. His will was proved February 12, 1722, his sons Daniel and Valentine being executors, and his friend John Jones, overseer. He bequeaths to son Valentine lands bought of Joseph Dolover; to son Daniel part of land on Great Plain; to son George the farm on which the son dwelt; to son John the three hundred acres on which he dwelt; to son Samuel, money; to daughters Elizabeth Huling, Alice Wait, Sarah Peterson, twenty pounds each; to grandson George, son of Daniel, ten pounds, gun, wearing clothes, linen, chest brought from England and great Bible; to two children of his son Daniel fifty shillings a year; also twenty shillings to the congregation to buy wine to celebrate the Lord's Supper. In a codicil he gives other property to his son Daniel. He married Elizabeth Updike, born 1644, daughter of Gilbert and Katherine (Smith) Updike. Children: 1. Elizabeth, born July 26, 1664, died 1756; married Alexander Huling. 2. Alice, born December 29, 1666; married Samuel Wait. 3. Rev. Daniel, born January 2, 1668, died August 31, 1750; married (first) Catherine Holmes; (second) Mary ———; (third) Catherine, widow of Joseph Gardiner. 4. Sarah, born February 25, 1671; married (first) 1697, William Collins; (second) ——— Peterson. 5. George, born January 8, 1673; mentioned below. 6. John, born April 16, 1674; married (first) January 6, 1700, Jane Bentley; (second) Virtue ———. 7. Samuel, born January 9, 1676. 8. Rev. Valentine, born April 16, 1681, died June 9, 1747; married, February 17, 1703, Susannah Holmes.

(II) George (2), son of George (1) Whitman, was born in Kingstown, January 8, 1673, and died in 1761. He settled in Warwick, Rhode Island. He was admitted a freeman in 1716, and in 1724 was deputy to the assembly. He bought one hundred acres of land in East Greenwich, December 22, 1719. His will, dated September 1, 1759, with codicil March 1, 1760, proved January 15, 1761, bequeathed to wife, children and grandchildren. Besides land and other more valuable parts of his estate he made some smaller bequests of interest. He gave to son John, iron kettle and coat with "plate buttons;" to son George, iron pot and andirons; to grandson Elisha Wightman, jacket and "plate buttons;" to grandson Philip Wightman, a pair of plush breeches; to grandson Reuben Wightman, a duray coat; to Barbara Colvin, a cupboard. He married (first) Elizabeth ———; (second) August 13, 1738, Sarah Ladd, who survived him. Children: 1. George, married, December 21, 1746, Elizabeth Wait. 2. John, born 1701; married Phebe Havens. 3. Samuel, mentioned below. 4. Elizabeth, married ——— Havens. 4. Phebe, married, November 10, 1724, Jonathan Weaver. 6. Deborah, married, May 27, 1713, Malachi Rhodes.

(III) Samuel, son of George (2) Whitman, was born in Rhode Island, about 1700; married, November 11, 1724, Margaret Gorton. He died before 1759. Children, born probably at Warwick: 1. Samuel. 2. Benjamin, settled in Foster, Rhode Island. 3. George, mentioned below. 4. Asa.

(IV) George (3), son of Samuel Whitman, was born about 1740-50, at Warwick, Rhode Island. He married (first) ——— Coombs; (second) ——— Kingsley. He removed to North Adams, Massachusetts. Children: 1. George, appears to have settled in Exeter, Rhode Island. 2. Caleb, went to North Adams. 3. Stephen, mentioned below. Probably others. [According to the census of 1790, George Whitman, probably the father, was living at North Kingston, and had in his family three sons under sixteen and four females. Another George, probably the son, was living at Exeter, Rhode Island, having a wife but no children. George Whitman married, October 3, 1790, at Exeter, Hannah Huling Abbie Chase (sic). A daughter Elizabeth was born to George and Bridget Whitman at Exeter, September 23, 1752; possibly this record belongs to this family also. The lack of both town and family records makes it impossible to give the complete list of children for these two generations last mentioned]. Children of second wife: Reuben, lives at North Adams; Mrs. Frank Robinson, of North Adams.

(V) Stephen, son of George (3) Whitman, was born in Rhode Island, about 1780-90. He was a son of the first wife. He removed to North Adams with the family, and later in life went west. He died in Lake county, Illinois. He married Susan Ray, who died at North Adams. Children, born at North Adams: 1. Ira, February 4, 1820; mentioned below. 2. Maria. 3. George. 4. Amy Ann. 5. Simeon. 6. Hannah. 7. Melissa. 8. Huldah Ann. 9. Harriet Amelia. 10-11. Children died in infancy, unnamed. Most of the children settled in the west.

(VI) Ira, son of Stephen Whitman, was born February 4, 1820, at North Adams, and is living at Bernardston, Massachusetts, notwithstanding his advanced age, he enjoys good health and all his faculties. He was educated in his native town and learned the trade of shoemaker, which he followed for many years. In his later years he returned to farming, locating at his present home in Bernardston. He married, March 28, 1851, at North Adams, Hannah Underwood, born at Marlborough, Vermont, June 1, 1831, died at North Adams, 1864. Children, born at North Adams: 1. William, born in 1852, died young. 2. Azella, born May 31, 1853; married Henry James Kelsey (see Kelsey VII.). 3. Melissa, died young. 4. Hattie A., born January 10, 1858; married F. C. Kelsey, of Claremont, New Hampshire. 5. Grace C., born August 16, 1860; married Dexter Whitecomb; lives in Charlestown, New Hampshire. 6. Ira, Jr., died young.

The surname Hewes is identical with Hughes, which is from a personal name—Hugh, meaning a guest, a stranger. It signifies affability, and in A. D. 900 King Alfred used it in the sense of comfort. Various other surnames are derived from Hugh—Huget, Hewit, FitzHugh, meaning, as does Hughes or Hewes, simply son of Hugh; Huggin, Hicks, Hiccock, Huggins, Huggett and Hutchins also derived from Hugh; Huse is another spelling of Hughes. The Hughes family is of great antiquity in Scotland, Wales and England, and traces its ancestry to several Welsh princes, among whom is Gwarthbold Mawr, Prince of Cardigan. The principal coat-of-arms: Azure a lion rampant or. Crest: A lion couchant or.

(I) Nathaniel Hews, or Hewes (also spelled Hughes), was probably the immigrant ancestor. He was born in or about 1720, and is thought to be of Scotch ancestry, from the north of Ireland. Where he settled is something of a mystery. One good authority places him in Brookfield, Massachusetts, before he settled in Lyme, New Hampshire, but there is no trace of a family of Hewes at that time in Brookfield, nor, in fact, in Worcester county. Another equally good authority states that he came from Mansfield, Connecticut. As Lyme was settled by Connecticut families, this seems more likely. But he must have made a short stay at Mansfield, for no trace of him appears in the vital or church records. It seems likely to the writer that Hewes lived at both places. There was a prominent family of this name at East Haven, Connecticut, but no known relation with Nathaniel exists. He came to Lyme after his son had settled there. He was a taxpayer in 1773. Children: Nathaniel, Jr., mentioned below; Reuben, settled in Lyme; perhaps others.

(II) Lieutenant Nathaniel (2), son of Nathaniel (1) Hewes, was born in 1747. The "History of Grafton County, New Hampshire," relates that he was the first settler in the extreme part of the township. He came there in 1766, at the age of nineteen, from Brookfield, Massachusetts, made a clearing, and built a log house on the farm lately occupied by D. A. Warren. There were not more than seven families then in the town of Lyme. In 1773 Hewes suffered a severe loss. He had accumulated a fortune of seven silver dollars, and from the prominence given to these coins we infer that they were valued more than the dwelling-house, which was destroyed by fire while the owner and sister were at meeting (church). "Diligent search was made," but he found no silver in the ashes. It was supposed that three strangers seen in the vicinity had pillaged the house and then set fire to it. He married, 1774, Sarah Freeman, of Mansfield, Connecticut, and had ten children. A writer (in vol. xv., p. 62, New Eng. Gen. Reg.) states that she came "with her husband" from Mansfield about 1767. That is misleading, since they were not married in 1767. The same writer states that her (Sarah's) mother lies near her, buried in 1815, aged ninety-five years. Sarah Freeman died March 26, 1851, aged one hundred one years four months ten days. Her gravestone is to be seen in the old burial ground at Lyme. She lived seventy-five years on the same farm. Nathaniel was a soldier in the revolution, sergeant in 1777, in Colonel Jonathan Chase's regiment, and marched to Stillwater, New York; also in Captain John Sloame's company, of Lyme, and on alarm list, 1776. He became lieutenant of his company, probably after the war, though possibly before. Children: 1. John Freeman, born March 15, 1784, died June 20, 1853; a man of enterprise, built several saw mills; father of John R. Hewes, a well known citizen. 2. Cyrus, born January 20, 1775; mentioned below. 3. Sylvanus, born May 8, 1789; merchant, partner of Asa Shaw, Abel Kent and others in mills; justice of the peace, state senator, county treasurer; died August 28, 1880; had three daughters, and a son, Nathan Wright, of Lyme.

(III) Cyrus, son of Lieutenant Nathaniel (2) Hewes, was born in Lyme, New Hampshire, January 20, 1775, and died there September 5, 1865, aged ninety years. He was a carpenter by trade. He married (first) ———;

(second) October 21, 1826, Margaret, daughter of Sewell Pelton, of Lyme. Children, born at Lyme, all by second wife: 1. Elizabeth G., June 24, 1827. 2. Sarah D., June 25, 1828, died aged sixty years. 3. David D., September 17, 1830; mentioned below. 4. Sewell, July 28, 1834; resides in Lyme, New Hampshire.

(IV) Daniel Demnick, son of Cyrus Hewes, was born in Lyme, New Hampshire, September 17, 1830. He was educated in the public schools of his native town, and followed farming and carpentering in early life. In 1860 he came to Westfield, Massachusetts, and established himself in business as a painter and contractor in 1862 in that town. He was successful in his venture and built up a large business, continuing for a period of forty years. He retired in 1902, and has been occupied since then in the care of his property. He continued also to deal in doors, blinds and sash. He is a member of Mt. Moriah Lodge of Free Masons, and Mount Royal Chapter, Royal Arch Masons of Westfield. He is independent in politics, and a Congregationalist in religion. He married, in 1874, Margaret Jane Ingraham, born 1846, at South Hadley Falls, died January 12, 1908, at Westfield, daughter of Obadiah Ingraham (see Ingraham VI.). Children: 1. Jennie May, living with her father, in home at Westfield; educated in Westfield public schools and State Normal School. 2. Robert L., born 1876; educated in Westfield schools; associated with his father in the house painting business, and succeeded him. 3. Norman M., born 1884; educated in Westfield schools; clerk in a grocery store in his native town.

Genealogists begin the record of the Ingraham family with Randolph son of Ingel'ram or Ing'ram, who was sheriff of Nottingham and Derby, in the reign of Henry II. (1133-1189), as were his sons Robert and William. Robert Ingram, knight, whose arms are painted at Temple Newsam, or Newsham, England, was of such eminence in the reign of Henry III. that the priory and convent of Lenton granted to him a yearly rent out of their lands in Sheynton and Nottingham in recognition of his military services in their defense. Temple Newsam, an immense estate six miles in length and four in width, situated about four and a half miles east of Leeds, England, now called the Ingraham estate, was first a settlement of Knights Templar in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. After their dispersion it was granted by Edward III. to Sir John Darcy, and descended to Lord Thomas Darcy, who was beheaded by Henry VIII. The estate was then forfeited to the crown. It was afterwards granted by the same monarch in 1554 to Mathew, Earl of Lennox, and here was born his son, Henry Darnley, who later became the husband of Mary, Queen of Scots. The estate descended to their son, James I. of England, and from him to his kinsman, Esme Stuart, Duke of Lennox, from whom it passed to Sir Arthur Ingram, the first of the Lords Viscount Irwin, one of the conditions being that the room in which Lord Darnley was born should remain unaltered. This room is still called the King's Chamber.

Sir Arthur, who is supposed to have been born about 1570, was celebrated for his valor as a cavalier. He was a near relative of Wentworth, the celebrated Earl of Stafford. He married (first) Eleanor, daughter of Sir Henry Slingsby, of the "Red House;" (second) Lady Katherine, daughter of Thomas, Lord Viscount Fairfax of Gilling. Sir Arthur died in 1655. His sons were Henry and Arthur. (The portraits of Sir Arthur in cavalier costume, of the first Viscount Irwin in full armor, and of Henry, the second Viscount Irwin in half armor, all nearly full length, were in the collection of the Bishop of California, William Ingraham Kip, D. D., LL. D., who died in 1894). Henry, eldest son of Sir Arthur Ingram, born between 1695 and 1700, was at the time of the Restoration, six years after the death of his father, created a peer of Scotland by Charles II. with the title of Viscount Irwin, by letters patent dated May 23, 1661, as a recompense to the family for their loyalty. He married Anne, daughter of Montacute, Earl of Manchester, a leader in parliament. The male branch in England as descended from Sir Henry, the second Viscount Irwin, became extinct with Charles Ingram, ninth Viscount Irwin, who died in 1778. (Burke's "Extinct Peerage"). His daughter, the Marchioness of Hertford, and Lady William Gordon, successively inherited the Temple Newsam, and from them it passed to their sister, Mrs. Hugo Maynell, whose son took the name of Ingram, and his descendants are the present owners of the family estate. Arthur Ingram, of Barrowby, second son of Sir Arthur, was born between 1595 and 1600. He married a daughter of Sir John Mallory, about 1615, and genealogists agree that from him is descended the Ingraham family of America.

Edward Ingraham, the first of the name to come to America, was born in 1617. At the age of eighteen in July, 1635, he sailed in the ship "Blessing," and settled in Salem, where he was a proprietor as early as 1638. He was a farmer. Richard Ingram came to America between 1638 and 1642, and settled in Rehoboth, where he was a proprietor in 1645. Some years later he removed to Northampton, where in 1668, late in life, he married (probably not his first wife) Joan, daughter of William Rockwell, widow of Jeffrey Baker, of Windsor, Connecticut. He contributed a sum at the time of the general subscription for the support of Harvard College in 1672-3. He died in August, 1683, and his widow died September 16, 1683, both at Northampton. Since genealogists agree that the Ingraham family in America is descended from Arthur Ingram, of Barrowby, second son of Arthur Ingram, it is quite probable that Edward Ingraham, who came to America in 1635, and Richard Ingram, who came between 1638 and 1642, were brothers, and sons of Arthur of Barrowby. Also, that Jared Ingram, of Boston, Rehoboth and Swansea, mentioned below, and John Ingram, of Boston and Hadley, were sons of Richard, as they spelled the name the same and were located at various times near Richard. The name at the present time is spelled Ingraham in America.

(1) Jared Ingram (or Jarrett, as the name was sometimes spelled) was the immigrant ancestor of this branch of the Ingraham family, and was presumably the son of Richard Ingram. He was born in England, about 1635, and died January 11, 1717-18. He settled at Boston, Massachusetts. He removed to Rehoboth, where Richard lived, and had several children born in Swansea, near Rehoboth, between 1665 and 1671. Robert Goodell, immigrant ancestor, was of English birth.

The name is spelled Goodhall and Goodale, as well as Goodell, in England and this country. Robert Goodell sailed from

Ipswich, England, in the ship "Elizabeth," in April, 1634, with his wife Katherine, aged twenty-eight; daughter Mary, aged four; sons Abraham, aged two, and Isaac, aged six months. He was thirty years old, making the year of his birth 1604. He settled at Salem, in New England, and is called variously in the early records "farmer" and "planter." He was a proprietor of the town in 1636. He deeded land there to his daughter, Hannah Killum, in 1668. He must have married (second) Margaret ———, for with wife of that name he sold land adjoining his homestead in Salem. He died in 1683. In his will dated October 12, 1682, proved June 27, 1683, he called himself "aged;" he bequeathed to wife Margaret, daughter Elizabeth Bennett and grandchild John Smith. Children: 1. He married, January 25, 1768-9, Patience Cook, who married (second) before 1693. ——— Stimpson. Goodell died in 1679, and his widow and John Pease were administrators. His inventory, dated October 23, 1679, taken by Nathaniel Felton and Job Swinnerton, amounted to one hundred and ninety-two pounds seventeen shillings. In settlement of the estate Zachariah Goodell gave a receipt to Patience Stimpson and Isaac Goodell for his share, and John Goodell did likewise October 22, 1705. Children, born at Salem or Salem Village: 1. Isaac, March 29, 1670, died 1739. 2. Hester, March 17, 1671-2. 3. Zachariah, May 15, 1675; removed to Wells, Maine. 4. He learned the trade of carpenter, and followed the same for five years. In 1870 he went to Millers Falls and was employed by the Millers Falls Company as inspector, superintendent and master mechanic of their factory. He invented many useful and valuable tools used in their manufacture. In 1888 he went to Shelburne Falls, Massachusetts, and formed a company known as Goodell Brothers, manufacturers of mechanics' tools, the firm consisting of A. D. and H. E. Goodell. This connection continued for a period of four years, when A. D. sold his interest to his brother, Henry E., who removed the business to Greenfield where it still continues under the firm name of Goodell-Pratt Company. In 1892 Albert D. Goodell moved to Worcester, Massachusetts, accompanied by his family, and there established the Goodell Tool Company in partnership with his son, Frederick A. Goodell. In 1893 they removed their business to Shelburne Falls, and rented the shop and power of H. H. Mayhew Company, remaining until 1904, when they purchased the peg shop of J. R. Mr. Goodell is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and a Republican in politics. He married (first) at Millers Falls, June 1, 1870, Emily J. John Hussey lived in Dorking, HUSSEY county Surrey, England. He married, December 5, 1593, Mary Wood, or Woodin. He died in England. Children: John, died young; Christopher, mentioned below; one or more daughters.

(II) Christopher, son of John Hussey, was born in England, in 1595-6, and baptized February 18, 1599. He was among the parishioners of Rev. Stephen Bachilor who went to Holland, as it was only upon his promise to go to America that Rev. Mr. Bachilor consented to his marriage with his daughter. Christopher Hussey and his wife Theodate, daughter of Rev. Stephen Bachilor, sailed in the ship "William and Francis" from Southampton, in May, 1630, and arrived at Charlestown, Massachusetts, about July 23. They settled in Saugus (Lynn), Massachusetts. It is thought that his mother, Mary Hussey, accompanied him to New England, but she may have come later. He removed to Newbury, where he was a proprietor in 1637. He was one of the original grantees of Hampton, New Hampshire, September 6, 1638. He and his mother lived on opposite sides of the meeting house green, the five-acre lot of the widow, being about the present site of the town house. She died June 16, 1660. Christopher Hussey was the first deacon of the church in Hampton, and an influential man. He was captain in the militia, town clerk, selectman and representative. When New Hampshire was made a royal province he was one of the commissioners named in the charter. In 1650 he sold his property and removed to Hampton Falls. He was one of the purchasers of Nantucket in 1659, and subsequently commanded an ocean vessel. His wife Theodate died October 20, 1649, and he married (second) December 9, 1658, Ann Mingay, who died June 24, 1680, widow of Jeffrey Mingay. (III) Bachelor, son of Stephen Hussey, was born February 18, 1685, in Nantucket, where he lived many years. He settled later in Biddeford, Maine. He was probably engaged in coasting, or the West India trade. He married, October 11, 1704, in Hampton, Abigail Halle. Children, born in Hampton: Christopher, Mary, Jedidah (daughter), John (mentioned below), others born in Biddeford or Nantucket.

(VI) Benjamin (2), son of Benjamin (1) Hussey, was born in Palermo, Maine, in 1814, and died at Lincolnville, Maine, in 1866. He was educated in the district schools. For many years he was a successful trader, but owing to ill health he gave up mercantile life and settled on a farm. For several years he and his wife were invalids, but they were fortunate in having a son to care for them. He married Elizabeth Eugenia Thomas, born at Searsmont, Maine, daughter of John and ——— (Davis) Thomas, died at Lincolnville, 1873. Children: 1. Albert O., born at Albion, Maine, died in California. 2. George F., mentioned below. 3. Carrie W., born at Albion, Maine; residence Lincolnville, Maine. 4. Theodore F., born at South Montville, Maine, died at Jacksonville, Florida. 7. Emma J., born at Lincolnville, Maine.

(VII) George F., son of Benjamin (2) Hussey, was born at Albion, Maine, June 19, 1846. He attended the public schools of Albion, Montville and Lincolnville, until he was sixteen years old, when he enlisted in the civil war in Company G, Twenty-sixth Maine Infantry, for a term of nine months. Upon the expiration of his term of enlistment he again entered the service, serving as sergeant of Company H, Second Maine Cavalry. He was on duty around Port Hudson, Louisiana, in General Banks's Red River campaign, and fighting in the siege of Port Hudson, at Irish Bend, and in several other engagements and cavalry raids in Louisiana and Florida. After the close of the war he returned to Maine, and for a short time attended the academy at Freedom, but owing to the illness of his parents he felt it his duty to leave school and return home and care for them. He afterward learned the trade of machinist, and worked for several years as a journeyman. In 1880 he went to East Braintree, Massachusetts, for the purpose of building some special machinery for the plant of which he became assistant superintendent. This position he held until May 1, 1880, when he was appointed superintendent. This firm, the Jenkins Manufacturing Company, manufactured boot and shoe laces, welted cords and braids. Mr. Hussey designed and made many improvements in their machinery, and the firm's business increased more than threefold while he was superintendent. He remained with the company until he retired, August 5, 1907. Upon the occasion of his retirement he was presented with a solid gold watch and chain by the company, in appreciation of long and efficient service. Mr. Hussey has done much towards building up and beautifying the section of the town in which he lives.

He is a selfmade man, and enjoys the universal confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens. In politics he is a Republican, and favors every movement for the public good. He is a member of General Sylvanus Thayer Post, No. 87, G. A. R.; Neponset Lodge, No. 84, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and a trustee of the Weymouth Savings Bank.

October 7, 1872, he married Mary Moore Dike, of Sebago, Maine, daughter of Kimbal Jonathan and Asenath (Stevens) Dike, of Sebago, Maine. Mr. Dike was a farmer, and a prominent man of Sebago, and was son of Edward and Susan (Wood) Dike, of Athol, Massachusetts.

This surname appears to be another spelling of the ancient English Chilton. Chilton is a place name, the final syllable being town, and a number of towns and parishes in England still bear this name. The coat-of-arms of the Chilton family of Wye, county Kent, and Cadiz, Spain, is: Argent a chevron gules with a bordure gobonated or and azure. Crest: A griffin passant sable bezantée. The occurrence of the surname Walsingham as a personal name in the Chilson family indicates close relationship with the Walsingham family, which has its seat also in county Kent.

(I) Walsingham Chilson, immigrant ancestor of all of this surname in this country, came doubtless from Kent, England, and settled before 1647 in Marblehead. The records show that he was witness in a case in court in 1647, and that he owned a swamp lot in 1649. He and his wife, Mary Chilson, sold land in Marblehead to Francis Johnson, July 13, 1655.

(II) John, only known child of Walsingham Chilson, was born probably in England, possibly in Marblehead or Lynn, about 1645. He married, at Lynn, July 28, 1667, Sarah, daughter of Joseph Jenks. He lived at Lynn. Children: 1. John, married (intention dated April 27, 1706, at Lynn) Elizabeth Jencks. 2. Walsingham; mentioned below. 3. Joseph, born latter end of August, 1670. 4. Sarah, born August 4, 1673; married, February 2, 1693-4. 5. William, married (intention dated May 23, 1696) Jane Rhodes.

(III) Walsingham (2), son of John Chilson, was born in 1681, and died at Bellingham, Massachusetts, January 15, 1760. He settled at South Bellingham about 1738, and lived in the vicinity of Scott or Chilson Hill. He was a housewright and farmer, and his homestead is now owned by a lineal descendant, James A.

Chilson. Before his death he deeded to his son Joseph all his property, including about four hundred acres of land near Hoag Lake. He was a tythingman in 1742, and in 1744 on the school committee. The same year he was employed by the town to repair the meeting house, also in 1747. In 1738 he with others appeared in court to protest against the interference by the town in church affairs. He married, October 20, 1709, Susanna Edmunds, at Lynn. Children: 1. Joseph, mentioned below. 2. Dorcas, died November 18, 1743. 3. John, died October 7, 1741. 4. Mary, died July 14, 1736. 5. Sarah, died July 19, 1747. 6. Susanna, married, May 9, 1744, Jonathan Bozworth.

(IV) Joseph, son of Walsingham (2) Chilson, was born at Lynn, and died at Bellingham, February 8, 1778 (?). He removed with his parents to South Bellingham, and was a blacksmith by trade. His shop was on the road from Bellingham to Woonsocket, about a quarter of a mile beyond his father's house. It was customary for the town to post the town warrants on the front of his shop, as it was a much frequented place. He was employed by the town to enlarge the pound. He served as town clerk from 1745 to 1764. His name as well as his father's often appears on the record of the town. He married (first) November 23, 1744, Mercy Shuttleworth, born at Wrentham, February 8, 1716, died August 8, 1747; (second) November 15, 1747, Lydia Pratt, who died March 29, 1789. Child of first wife: 1. Martha, born April 13, 1746. Children of second wife: 2. Joseph, born July 17, 1751. 3. John, born February 3, 1754; mentioned below. 4. Joshua, born July 8, 1756. 5. Jedediah, born April 18, 1758, died October 26, 1759. 6. Mary, born June 23, 1761.

(V) John (2), son of Joseph Chilson, was born at South Bellingham, February 3, 1754, and died there December 5, 1830. He was brought up on his father's farm, and attended the common schools. He was a prosperous farmer, keeping forty head of cattle. At one time he was engaged in the manufacture of cotton goods in the old stone mill near his house. In the early part of 1800 this mill was burned, and later a saw mill was erected near Hoag Lake. This he pulled down in 1816, and replaced by a new one, which was but recently demolished. He served in the revolution, in Captain Jesse Holbrook's company, which marched on the Lexington alarm, April 19, 1775; also in Captain Amos Ellis' company, Major Seth Bullard's regiment (Fourth Suffolk), in 1780, and marched to Tiverton, Rhode Island, on the alarm in 1780; also in Captain Jesse Holbrook's company, Colonel Wheelock's regiment, in 1776, in Warwick, Rhode Island. His death was caused by his falling backward over a pair of bars, breaking his neck. He is buried in the old cemetery at South Bellingham. He was very kind hearted and generous, giving largely to all worthy public enterprises and private needs. He was one of ten who contributed the necessary funds to complete the town house, March 15, 1800. He married, January 3, 1782, Mrs. Abigail Draper, born 1756, died June 29, 1834. Children: 1. Anna, born October 3, 1783; married February 12, 1804, Colonel Joseph Rockwood; children: i. Lucena Rockwood, born October 18, 1806; ii. Preston Rockwood, August 2, 1808; iii. In politics he was a Whig, and in religion a Baptist. His ideals were high, and his conduct of life without reproach. Richard Lounsbury, immi-LOUNSBURY grant ancestor, was an early settler at Rye, New York.

The surname seems to be an English local name, though the writer has found no locality now bearing the name. The surname is not given in "Patronymica Britannica" or any other commonly used works on British surnames, and books of heraldry do not mention the name. The adjoining town, New Rochelle, was settled by Huguenots from La Rochelle, France. Lounsbury may be an anglicized spelling of a French surname, though there are no facts to support such a theory except the nearness of the French settlers. Rye was an English settlement, and Lounsbury was probably English. He was a proprietor of Peningo Neck as early as 1672, many years before the Huguenots came. He sold lands and rights on the Neck in 1673 and 1682, but retained land on Budd's Neck in Rye. His will was dated January 2, 1690. He married Elizabeth ———. Children: 1. Dickerman, in 1868, with a foundry and machine shop on North Elm street, Westfield. In 1874 Mr. Lounsbury bought out his partner and moved to the present location of the business on Birge street, where he manufactured steam engines, boilers, steam fittings, shafting, gearing, mill supplies and castings of every description. He built up a flourishing business and took a prominent position among the manufacturers of the county. Owing to ill health he retired a few years before his death, leaving the business in charge of his son and partner, Charles J. Lounsbury, who has continued it since his father's death and is now operating the same as left by his father. During the three years before his death Mr. Lounsbury was treasurer of the Stimer & Moore Whip Company. He owned large tracts of land on Birch avenue, Westfield, and in other sections of the town and vicinity had extensive real estate interests. He was a prominent member of the Baptist church of Westfield, held various positions of trust and honor in the church, and contributed generously to its benevolences. In politics he was a Republican. He was a member of the local lodge of Odd Fellows. Mr. Lounsbury was highly respected for his sterling character and great industry. He was himself a mechanic of unusual skill, and he knew iron-working thoroughly in all his branches. During his active years he took much pleasure and satisfaction in his business. He was quiet and domestic in his tastes and preferred his home in his leisure hours. The name Matthews is of

MATTHEWS English origin, and is spelled variously Matthes, Mathes, Mathis, Matthews, etc. At least eight immigrants of the name were in Massachusetts before 1650. One of them, John Matthews, was a tailor living in Boston, who sold a house and land there October 10, 1649. His will was proved April 11, 1670, bequeathing his dwelling house to wife Elizabeth; to son John (perhaps the John mentioned below), and to daughter Wigeer, living in Dartmouth, England.

(I) Dr. John Matthews, perhaps son of John Matthews, of Boston, resided in Marlborough, Massachusetts, and died some time after 1729. His home was in the south part of the town, which was later set off as the town of Southborough, on what is known as the Gilmore place, near Southville. (III) Ebenezer, fourth son BRIDGMAN and ninth child of John and Mary Bridgman, was born in Northampton, Massachusetts, February 4, 1686, and died in Cold Spring, Massachusetts, April 16, 1760. He lived on the "Plain," in the northern part of the village of Northampton, and the family at the time they removed to Cold Spring on the "Old Bay Road" in 1732 consisted of three generations: Ebenezer, the patriarch; his son Joseph, and grandsons Oliver and Joseph, all citizens of the commonwealth of Massachusetts by right of birth and age.

Their first home at Cold Spring was a log cabin, which in 1773 was replaced by the substantial dwelling house which was occupied by his descendants until 1862, when his great-great-grandson, Elisha B. Bridgman, sold it into the hands of strangers and removed to Boston. Tradition in the family says that Ebenezer charged his son, Joseph, "to bury him in the land which he had purchased for a possession." Ebenezer Bridgman married, June 14, 1709-10, Mary, daughter of John and Sarah Parsons, of Northampton, born July 5, 1681. Children, born in Northampton: 1. Elizabeth, 1711, died May 27, 1746. 2. He was brought up and received his school training in Northampton, working on his father's farm and with his father and grandfather, aided in locating their future home on the "Equivalent Lands," noted hunting grounds on the highway leading from Northampton to Boston, near a copious spring made the camping place of the hunters and known as Cold Spring. The settlement, which took the name of Cold Spring, was commenced in 1731 by his grandfather, father and others, and had increased in 1736 to twenty families, and in 1752 to more than fifty families. June 23, 1761, it was incorporated as the town of Belchertown, given in honor of Jonathan Belcher, one of the original proprietors. The farm of Joseph Bridgman, Sr., and which descended to his son Oliver, who built the homestead dwelling in 1773, was located in the northwestern part of the future town of Belchertown, about three miles from the church and town house at the foot of the eastern spur of the Holyoke mountain range, a place beautiful for location and desirable for healthfulness. Joseph Bridgman married, five years after settling at Cold Spring, Elizabeth, daughter of Mark and Lydia (Phelps) Warner, of Northampton, born April 9, 1706, and married, November 17, 1737. The fruit of this marriage was two sons and two daughters, and the mother lived to see her children all married and settled in life, and she died in Belchertown, November 18, 1789. William Davis, immigrant ancestor, was born in England or Wales, in 1617. The tradition in the family that he came from Wales is corroborated by the coat-of-arms used by his son Ichabod in sealing his will, and is the same as that of the Davis family of Caermarthen, South Wales. Moreover, a William Davis of that family resided there in 1623, possibly the father of William mentioned above, who settled in Roxbury in 1635, coming in the ship "Ann." The arms: Gules a griffin segreant or. It is said that William was brother of Tobias Davis, who also settled in Roxbury, whose wife Sarah died in February, 1648, and who married (second) December 13, 1649,

Bridget Kinman, who died April 25, 1690, leaving a son John and daughters Sarah Stephens, and Abigail. William Davis was admitted a freeman in 1673. In 1750 he sold to his son Benjamin half of one hundred and seven acres in Dudley, the place where his son dwelt. (VII) Benjamin Franklin, son of Benjamin (3) Davis, was born November 9, 1837, at Three Rivers, a part of Palmer, Massachusetts. He was educated in the district schools of his native town and at Williston Seminary of Easthampton. He began to work in his father's factory, and later was clerk in the Protective Union Store, No. 151, of which his father had charge. He began farming on the old homestead at Ware when he was eighteen years old. He removed to Enfield, where he followed farming and lumbering for about sixteen years, and was very successful. He became a prominent citizen there, being an overseer of the poor; in 1875 representative to the general court, and in 1880 selectman; also assessor and chairman of the board. He has always been a Republican in politics. Since his return to Ware he has been and is still a member of the board of assessors there. For about twenty-five years he conducted the farm in Ware, having a large and profitable milk business. He retired from active labor in 1908. For a number of years he has been an auctioneer, and his services have been in frequent demand. He is one of the best known and most popular citizens of Ware. In religion he is a Methodist.

He married, July 26, 1856, Mary Jane Phillips, born August 9, 1837, at Chicopee, Massachusetts, died March 4, 1882, at Enfield. (VII) Henry Charles, son of Benjamin (3) Davis, was born October 22, 1843, at Palmer. He attended the public schools of his native town and the Williston Seminary at Easthampton. He studied his profession in the Harvard Law School, graduating in 1868. He was admitted to the bar that year and began to practice in his native town. He has an extensive practice, and ranks among the foremost lawyers of that section of the state. He was appointed judge of the district of Eastern Hampshire court in 1903.

Mr. Davis is a Republican in politics. He has represented his district in the general court and the town as member of the school committee. He is a member of Eden Lodge of Free Masons. In religion he is a Congregationalist. He married, May 4, 1876, Jane Almira Demond, born September 20, 1847, at Ware, daughter of Lorenzo and Jane Chapman (Maslen) Demond, (see Demond VII). Children, born in Ware: 1. Henry Charles, born February 19, 1877; married October, 1907, Dell Marden. 2. John Andrew, born February 23, 1879; married Izadie A. DEMOND This surname lends itself to a great variety of spellings. We find Damon, Damond, Dammon, Dimond, Dammund and even Deming and Denning. It was probably De Mond originally, and of French origin. The two principal branches of the family in New England trace their ancestry to immigrants at Reading and at Scituate, Massachusetts.

(I) Thomas Demond, or Damon, the immigrant ancestor, was doubtless a brother of John Damon, of Reading, Massachusetts. He also settled in Reading. His farm was on Cowdrey Hill. Very little is known of him and his only child known was Thomas, mentioned below.

(II) Thomas (2), son of Thomas (1) Demond, was born January 31, 1659, at Reading, and died there October 20, 1723. He resided on Cowdrey Hill, Reading. He married, May 15, 1683, Lucy Ann Emerson, born at Milton, October 2, 1667, died at Reading, 1740, daughter of Rev. Joseph and Elizabeth (Woodmasy) Emerson, of Mendon. His widow married (second) Captain John Brown of Reading. Children: 1. Lucy Ann, born May 20, 1684; married, 1706, ——— Kendall Boutwell. 2. Joseph, born September 28, 1686; mentioned below. 3. Ebenezer, born March 12, 1688. 4. Thomas, February 9, 1690. 5. Elizabeth, June 26, 1693; married Benjamin Gerry. 6. Hannah, February 16, 1695; married Samuel Leman. 7. Susanna, 1697; married Nathaniel Townsend. 8. Mehitable, November 20, 1699; married Nathaniel Cowdrey. 9. Mary, August 31, 1701; married John Holden. 10. Thomas, December 25, 1703; died 1797; married Abigail Price. 11. Edward. 12. John, born May 10, 1709. 13. Abigail, November 29, 1713; married Robert Thompson.

(III) Joseph, son of Thomas (2) Demond, was born in Reading, September 28, 1686, and died in 1777. He was one of the early settlers of Mendon, Worcester county, where his grandfather Rev. Joseph Emerson was minister. He bought rights of Josiah Thayer and shared in the seventh division of common lands there June 10, 1726; shared in eighth division July 1, 1729, in ninth division May 10, 1733, and again December 3, 1736, in tenth division, and 1745-6 in eleventh division of land in Uxbridge, set off from Mendon. John Emerson, his cousin, deeded land of the tenth division to him at Mendon and Uxbridge in 1736. But he must have returned to Reading to live, for he was described as Joseph Damon, Sr., of Reading, in a deed of gift May 12, 1744, to his son Joseph Damon, of Uxbridge, blacksmith, part of his homestead of sixty-five acres on the country road adjoining James Emerson's farm, also other lands. He lived in Mendon, perhaps in that part incorporated as Uxbridge. He married, 1707, at Reading, Mary Batchelder; (second) 1735, at Reading, Lydia (Emery) Bancroft. Children: 1. Joseph Jr., born about 1708; died 1762, at Uxbridge, leaving children: Joseph; Mary, married Solomon Biglo; Eunice, Thomas and Ebenezer. 2. Jabez, was witness of deeds in family, guardian of Joseph Jr.'s children, 1762. 3. Daniel, mentioned below.

(IV) Daniel Demond was probably of the Scituate family. The first known of him definitely, however, was in Mendon, Worcester county, whence he removed to Leicester, in the same county. He was not in Mendon long; he was not a proprietor, and none of the name was there in 1711 or earlier. But he was of Mendon when his intentions of marriage were published at Leicester, November 3, 1733, to Deliverance Reed, a widow. That may have been his second marriage also. He settled in the north part of Leicester, on the estate lately owned by Amasa Southwick, and owned land on Tea Lane. He died 1739-40, and his widow Deliverance married, January 20, 1742-43, Robert Woodard. Nathaniel Patten was appointed guardian of some of his children, August 1, 1752, and his estate was divided June 28, 1753. He was a weaver by trade as shown by deed of John Lynd to him, dated November 3, 1733, of land in Leicester. He bought land of Joseph Potter in 1734-5, March 7. Children: 1. Daniel, born at Leicester, June 9, 1734, in the section set off as Paxton; died at Rutland, December 21, 1848, aged eighty-three years eight months; John Lynd was his guardian in 1753; he was a felt-maker, removed to Providence, Rhode Island; deeded his share of the homestead to John Lynd, July 5, 1753. 2. Mary, married John Converse Jr. 3. Elijah, mentioned below.

(V) Elijah, son of Daniel Demond, was born at Leicester, now Paxton, July 31, 1738. He died at Rutland, Massachusetts, August 14 or 18, 1825, aged eighty-six years. He moved to Rutland about 1765. He bought land there June 3, 1765, of Eleazer Davis, of Templeton. He married Lucy ——. They deeded land to their son Daniel of Rutland, April 2, 1796. She died at Rutland August 6, 1819, aged seventy-six. His will, dated July 13, 1824, proved December 7, 1824, bequeathed to son Israel, of Barre, son Daniel, of Rutland, son Alpheus of Ware, daughter Betsey Clark of Spencer, daughter Dilla Haven, of Sangerfield, New York, wife Polly of his son Asa and their children, Mary, Martin, Loring and Sullivan; granddaughter Lucy Prouty of Spencer and granddaughter Mary Demond, daughter of his son Asa. Children, recorded at Rutland: 1. Israel How, born February 8, 1764, at Paxton. 2. Daniel Jr., April 6, 1765; married, November 26, 1789, at Rutland, Hannah Mills; bought land of Calvin Glazier, at Rutland, April 7, 1791, was a joiner by trade. 3. Dilla, December 1, 1768. 4. Elizabeth, February 17, 1771. 5. Elijah, November 25, 1772. 6. Asa, August 29, 1775, at Spencer; died January 14, 1828, at Ware. 7. Lucy, died November 25, 1776. 8. Alpheus, see forward.

(VI) Alpheus, son of Elijah Demond, was born in Rutland, August 15, 1779. He was educated in the public schools of Rutland. Early in life he was a successful general merchant in Spencer, and was selectman of that town for a time. He removed to Ware, Massachusetts, April 1, 1813, with Colonel Thomas Denny, of Leicester, and bought of the heirs of Isaac Magoon four hundred acres of land including the mills privilege where Captain Jabez Olmstead built mills as early as 1730. Demond and Denny built a new dam at the middle falls, repaired the saw mill and grist mill, and started two carding machines and also began to manufacture machinery. In 1814 the cotton mill was erected at the middle falls, where the new mill now stands. It was the intention to make yarn with power and weave by hand, power looms not having come into use. On account of lack of capital the enterprise languished from 1814 to 1821, when the property was sold at a loss to Holbrook & Dexter. It passed to the Ware Company, incorporated in 1823 for $600,000, and the woolen and cotton mills that have since been the nucleus of a thriving manufacturing town were erected. The water power is valuable, the fall being seventy feet in seventy rods, and when Mr. Demond began operations there were no mills nearer than Worcester and Monson. Mr. Demond laid out the streets, built the church and virtually founded the town. He was one of the pioneers of textile manufacturing of central Massachusetts. Colonel Denny died in 1814 when the enterprise was hardly on its feet, and Mr. Demond lacked the capital to carry out his plans alone. At the same time the close of the war with Great Britain was disastrous to manufacturing. Demond, however, was superintendent of much of the later work and was identified with the interests of the town as long as he lived. When age compelled him to retire from active business he was the patriarch of the village, and held in the greatest reverence and respect. He filled various offices of trust and honor with fidelity and ability; he was representative to the general court in 1826 and 1833. He joined the Congregational Church at Ware by profession of faith, and was an active and efficient worker. He died at Ware, August 27, 1859, aged eighty years. He married, September, 1806, Mary Stone, of Oakham; (second) Priscilla McCletock; (third) Clarissa Dean. Children of first wife: 1. Albert Augustine, born at Spencer, August 10, 1807. 2. Augusta, June 27, 1810. 3. Lorenzo, July 31, 1812; mentioned below. 4. Alice F., born at Ware. 5. Mary Stone, born at Ware. Children of second wife, born at Ware: 6. Thomas. 7. Edwin. 8. Charles.

(VII) Lorenzo, son of Alpheus Demond, was born at Spencer, July 31, 1812, and died at Ware, November 13, 1872. He was educated in the public schools, and became a prominent citizen of that town. He was a manufacturer of straw goods. In religion he was Congregationalist; in politics a Whig, and later a Republican. He married Jane Chapman Maslen, born at North Bradley, England,

May 10, 1815, died at Ware, December 12, 1904. She came to America with her family when she was fourteen years old. Children, born at Ware: 1. Alpheus, 1843; married (first) Emma Kress; (second) Lizzie ———; had daughter by first wife, and son and daughter by the second. 2. Jane Almira, September 20, 1847; married Henry Charles Davis, (see Davis VII). 3. Arthur Lorenzo, 1855; married Georgia F. H. Davis; child, Arthur L.

The surname Sterry in England STERY is derived, we are informed by the author of Patronimica Britannica, from the place-name, Sturry or Sterry, a parish in Kent. But Stari, an old personal name, is found in the Domesday Book (1086) and from this personal name some branches of the family may have adopted their surname. The name is variously spelled. The Stery family of Western Massachusetts formerly spelled the name Steree, which appears to be a French form. The New England families that have been traced, however, are all from Roger Sterry, of Stonington, Connecticut. Some of his descendants lived in Rhode Island, many in Norwich, but the family is relatively small in this country.

(I) Roger Sterry, immigrant, came probably from England, when a young man, and settled at Stonington, Connecticut. He married, in 1670, Hannah (Palmer) Huet (or Hewett, as now spelled). She was baptized in 1634, daughter of Walter and Rebecca (Short) Palmer, widow of Captain Thomas Huet or Hewett. The only child known was Samuel, mentioned below.

(II) Samuel, son of Roger Sterry, was born about 1680; married (first) 1703, Hannah Rose. Children, born at Stonington or Norwich, Connecticut: 1. Hannah, 1704-05. 2. Samuel, 1706. 3. Cyprian, 1707, died 1772; married Elizabeth Brown. 4. Robert, 1711, died 1789; married Rosabilah ———, born 1711, died 1738; married (second) Lydia Olney; ancestor of the Rhode Island branch. 5. Zerviah. Children of second wife: 6. Sarah, 1727, died 1729. 7. Roger, 1730, married, 1748, Abigail Holmes, of Stonington; children lived in Norwich.

(III) Samuel (2), son of Samuel (1) Sterry, was born in 1706. Of him we know little.

(IV) Silas, son or nephew of Samuel (2) Sterry, was a soldier in the revolution from Groton, Connecticut, and probably lived in Preston, Connecticut.

J. E. Story

(V) John Stery, as he spelled his name, was son or nephew of Silas Sterry, of Connecticut. The lack of records prevents a complete proof of this lineage. It is known that he went to West Springfield when a young man. He may have removed to New York in his youth with others of the family, though the drift of population after the revolution was also from Connecticut to Massachusetts. The federal census of 1790, however, shows none of the name in Massachusetts, and but a few heads of families except those mentioned and their children in Norwich, Connecticut, and in Rhode Island. There were none in New York. John Sterry, of Worcester, Massachusetts, was a partner in the land bank of that state in 1740. John Stery married Susanna Carew, of West Springfield. She died May 24, 1849. Child, Harvey, mentioned below.

(VI) Harvey, son of John Stery (Sterce), was born in 1805. He died, according to his gravestone, July 13, 1848, aged forty-three years, according to the town records, January 9, 1849. The family thinks the town record the incorrect one. He was a farmer and owned a milk route. He married Lura Osborne, born 1805, died September 5, 1871, at West Springfield, aged sixty-six years. Children: 1. Joseph H., born 1837, died November 27, 1857. 2. Mary E., died 1907; married William Watts; parents of W. E. Watts, of 521 State street, Springfield. 3. Judson Enos, born May 26, 1839, mentioned below. 4. Chauncey E., living at last accounts in Colorado.

(VII) Judson Enos, son of Harvey Stery, was born at West Springfield, formerly called Amostown, Massachusetts, May 26, 1839, died at Westfield, Massachusetts, January 28, 1900. He was educated in the public schools, and worked on the farm of his father during his boyhood and youth. When he was sixteen years old he went to Grand Rapids, Michigan, for a few years, returning in 1861. He followed farming at Bush Hill until 1870, when he made his home in Westfield and started in business as dealer in meats and provisions at Cowles Court and later with a market at the corner of Elm and Orange streets. He was successful in business and some years later removed to a larger store that he erected for his own use. He sold out in 1895, but for a short time continued a cash market in Westfield. He built a house and market and dealt in real estate to advantage. He was a conscientious, prudent, and thorough business man. He belonged to no lodges, but was popular and well known in the community. He attended the Congregational church. In politics he was a Democrat. He married Martha Pease Dewey, born November 5, 1842, at Clatham, Massachusetts, daughter of Andrew Addison and Betsey Clara (Moore) Dewey. (See Dewey, VII). Children: 1. Minnie Eliza, born June, 1864, died 1902; married L. Brown; child, Fay V. Brown, born July 27, 1889. 2. Mary R., born December 21, 1865, married William H. Angell, of Westfield; children: Raymond, born 1887, and Thelma, who is deceased, aged four. 3. Carrie E., born April 7, 1868, married Clarence M. Walker, of North Adams, Massachusetts. 4. Clara L., born August 23, 1871, married Peter Jensen; child, Harold S., born June, 1903. 5. Mattie N., born July 1, 1874, married Dennison H. Loomis. 6. Judson E., born May 20, 1878, unmarried.

Thomas Dewey, immigrant DEWEY ancestor, came from Sandwich, county Kent, England, and was one of the original grantees of Dorchester in 1636. He was here as early as 1633, when he was witness to the nuncupative will of John Russell, of Dorchester. He was admitted a freeman May 14, 1634. On August 12, 1635, he sold his lands at Dorchester and removed to Windsor, Connecticut, and was one of the first settlers there. He was granted land in 1640 and his home lot was the first one north of the palisade and extended from the main street east to the Connecticut river. He was juryman in 1642-43-44-45. He died intestate and the inventory of his estate was filed May 19, 1648, amounting to two hundred and thirteen pounds. He married, March 22, 1639, at Windsor, Frances Clark, widow of Joseph Clark. She married (third) George Phelps, as his second wife, and died September 27, 1690. Children: 1. Thomas, born February 16, 1640. 2. Josiah, baptized
October 10, 1641. 3. Anna, baptized October 15, 1643. 4. Israel, born September 25, 1645.
5. Jedediah, mentioned below.

(II) Ensign Jedediah, son of Thomas
Dewey, was born at Windsor, Connecticut, December 15, 1647, died in May, 1718, at Westfield, Massachusetts. He owned land in Windsor, which he sold when he became of age. He lived in Farmington, Connecticut, for a short time after his marriage, and removed to Westfield, where he made his home. He was an early settler there, and August 27, 1668, received a grant of land.
Two years later he was granted a "home lot of six acres on the fort side." In 1672 Thomas, Josiah and Jedediah Dewey erected a saw and corn mill on Two-Mile Brook, and were granted forty acres of land for the use of the mills. He received other grants later. He was selectman in 1678-86-95-97-99, and was ensign in 1686. He was admitted a freeman January 1, 1680, and joined the church September 28 the same year. He was a wheelwright by trade and lived on the east corner of what is now Silver and South streets. His will was dated April 4, 1715, and proved May 25, 1718. He married, about 1670, Sarah Orton, baptized at Windsor, August 22, 1652, daughter of Thomas and Margaret (Pell) Orton, of Farmington. She died November 20, 1711, and a red sandstone slab marks her grave in the old burying ground on Mechanic street. Children, born at Westfield: 1. Sarah, March 28, 1672. 2. He was a selectman in 1726. He joined the church, April 30, 1727. On July 4, 1715, he received by deed from his father thirty acres of land in "Squawfield" at Westfield. He married, in 1713, Sarah (Warner) Root, born 1688 at Springfield, buried February 19, 1769, daughter of John and Sarah (Ferry) Warner, and widow of Samuel Root. Children, born at Westfield: 1. Sackett. He married (second) November 25, 1773, Hannah Phelps, born May 12, 1734, died November 2, 1815, daughter of Aaron and Rachel (Bagg) Phelps. A large red sandstone slab in the old Mechanics street burying ground marks the resting place of him and his first wife, with this sentiment inscribed:

"Our glass has run
Our work is done
Our bodies mouldering lie.
When time shall end
We hope to Ascend,

Palmer's house (1871) on the old Ashbel Fowler place, J. J. Fowler place, Southwick, also at Fox District, near the old Archibald Ely place. He and his wife owned the covenant February 17, 1771. Abraham Pietersen Van DEUSEN Deusen (originally Deursen), of Haerlem, in the Netherlands, came to New Amsterdam at a very early date, and like the majority of early Dutch settlers was not in the habit of using his surname, which, unlike many Dutch surnames, was the surname of his family in Netherlands and not assumed after settlement in this country. It was derived from the village of Deursen, in North Brabant. The earliest New York colonial records state that Abraham Pietersen, of Haerlem, Netherlands, took possession in 1636, for the Dutch East India Company, of the island of Quentensis, in front of Sloops Bay. Elsewhere it is described as the island of Quetenis, in front of Sloop Bay and Pequator's River. In 1664 the records show that he was still living, and that in addition to the island mentioned he owned another near Pequot River called by the English the Dutchman's Island. In 1638 he was called the first miller of New Amsterdam, and the miller was then an important and lucrative position. He is called Molenaer (the miller) sometimes in the records. He was one of the twelve men chosen to consult with the director-general and council August 29, 1641, and of the eight men who sent a memorial to the States General, November 23, 1643, setting forth the distressed condition of the colony and begging for assistance. These twelve men and eight men were the first assemblies in Manhattan island. He was one of the contributors to the fund to strengthen the defences of the island, October 12, 1655. He lived on the east side of Heeren street, April 19, 1665, when he was assessed to support soldiers. This street is now Broadway, and his house was the third place south of Wall street, opposite Trinity Church. He was granted burgher rights April 14, 1657, and was land corporal of the burgher corps. He and his son Isaac took the oath of allegiance to William III., the Dutch King of England, in October, 1664. He was a man of prominence and some wealth and education. He and his wife were prominent members of the old Dutch church in the fort at New Amsterdam. He married in the old country, and his older children were born there. The patronymics Pietersen and Abrahamson were used until 1667, when the English influence caused the family to resume the surname Van Deusen, or Deursen. Descendants have divided in the spelling of the name, some using Van Deursen, others Van Deusen and Van Dusen. There are reasons to think that Abraham had two brothers in New Amsterdam—Cornelius, a cadet in the Second Burgher Corps, married Tryntje Hendricks, and Pietersen, master of masters in 1638, who married Geertje Everts. But the descendants of the brothers did not resume the surname Van Deusen, and their descendants are lost sight of in the multitude of Cornelisens and Hendricksens. William Pietersen and Adrian Pietersen may have been brothers of Abraham also. The Van Deursens were among the leading families, and became connected by marriage with the most prominent Dutch families of New York. Of Abraham's sons, Isaac and Peter lived in New York; Mattheus, Jacob and Melchior settled in Albany county, New York. Abraham was born in 1605; married Tryntje Melchior, about 1628. Children: 1. Mattheus, born 1629; mentioned below. 2. Isaac, born 1632; married, April 5, 1650, Jannetje Jans. 3. Since 1887 he has been a whip manufacturer on his own account in Westfield, Massachusetts, and has been very successful. In addition to his manufacturing business he has an excellent farm at Westfield, and is especially interested in the raising of Hereford cattle. The name Milliken is of Saxon origin, and was first written Millingas, as early as the thirteenth century; also by the Normans, as Millinges, meaning "a thousand angels," and came from Norman origin. The name is Milliken or Mulliken in Scotland, from where the family is traced. The coat-of-arms embrace the shield with two eagles, one on each side, with closed wings.

(I) Hugh Milliken, immigrant ancestor of Lemuel Milliken, late of Franklin, was of Scotch parentage, and came to Boston in the early settlement of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. He was a member of the Scots Charitable Society of Boston in 1684, and without doubt he had a brother Robert, as shown by the records. He and his wife Eleanor were the parents of several children, among whom was John, mentioned below, and Robert, born August 9, 1681.

(II) John, son of Hugh Milliken, was born doubtless in Scotland, in 1664-65, died 1749. He resided many years in Boston, and was a housewright by trade and a farmer of a high order. After the death of John Alger, father of his wife, they possessed his lands at Dunstan, in Scarborough, Maine, and John Milliken's name appears there in 1719. He carried on farming on a scale of considerable magnitude, raising large quantities of corn, peas, oats and barley. In 1720 he and his son John were in the reorganization of Scarborough government, and John, Sr., was chosen selectman. He was in Boston between times as late as 1732. He married Elizabeth Alger, born 1669, baptized 1687, at First Church at Charlestown, died February 9, 1754, daughter of John and Mary (Wilmot) Alger, of Boston. Children: 1. He and his wife were admitted to the First Church at Scarborough, October 31, 1736. He was "Justice Milliken" of the "inferior court," 1760-71. He was widely known as a man of sound judgment and sterling integrity, a useful townsman of public spirit, who was consulted as a wise counsellor. He was a grantee of Trenton, and acted an important part in the settlement of that place. He was a soldier at Fort Pownal during the French and Indian wars, and later settled at "Nogehaggadence," on the east side of the Penobscot, in 1762. He was appointed by the general court to receive the bonds of the grantees. He was moderator of meeting held by the proprietors of the townships on Union River, August 1, 1764, at Falmouth. He was a grantee and settler at Union River before 1770, and after his marriage removed to Scarborough, where he became a prosperous farmer. He was strong in all political questions in those days, and occupied positions of trust in the new settlement. He served in the revolution with his brother Lemuel, in Captain John Rice's company, Colonel Edmund Phinney's regiment, enlisted May 8, 1775, from Scarborough, Maine. (V) Captain Rufus, son of Jeremiah Milliken, was born at Scarborough, Maine, March 9, 1778, died at Parsonfield, Maine, December 10, 1863. He was brought up on his father's farm, acquiring the usual education common to a farmer's son at that period, and also made occasional sea voyages. After his marriage he became master of a vessel and was known as "Captain Rufus." On March 9, 1818, he removed to Parsonfield and settled on the hill overlooking Keezar Falls village, where he owned one of the best farms in the region. He was of the faith of the Friends, and notwithstanding his peaceful faith he did not allow men to abuse him without decided protest, and it is said that he often threatened those who had in his estimation intruded upon his rights. He was a good, quiet, harmless man and respected by all. He and his wife are buried in a field corner on the farm, where their grave-stones, storm-beaten and moss-covered, may now be seen. He married, November 15, 1803, Jane Coolbroth, died November 12, 1841. Children: 1. Lemuel, born August 12, 1804. 2. born November 22, 1806. 4. Edward C., born March 11, 1808; married Eliza Nutter; children: Emma, Josiah, George E., Frederick W. 5. William, born July 3, 1811; married Mercy Sweat. 6. (VI) Charles, son of Captain Rufus Milliken, was born at Parsonsfield, Maine, March 10, 1821, died at Sandwich, Massachusetts, November 14, 1891. His schooling was gained at the district school near the homestead, and he assisted with the work on the farm. During his minority he was apprenticed to a shoemaker and thoroughly learned the trade, and at his marriage he engaged in this business for himself, following it for a number of years, finally giving it up to engage in wood work, becoming an expert in the manufacture of sleighs. He also did considerable stone work and built stone walls as boundaries to farm divisions. About 1859 he moved his family and settled at Manchester, Maine, where he bought a farm on the Pond road (so called) between Augusta and Gardiner, Maine, on the shore of Cobasee Center Lake. Here he raised general crops and worked at his sleigh trade. September 4, 1860, he moved his family to Sandwich, Massachusetts, arriving September 6, the date of the big September gale which swept Cape Cod, and the family had just time to get across Wareham bridge, which was immediately swept away, and he was unable to get his goods across or transported except by ox team six weeks after the gale. He settled on the celebrated Henry Wing farm at the east end of Sandwich, called "Scraton," which he leased three years. It was a farm well stocked with cows and young stock, from forty to sixty head, two pair of oxen and sixty sheep. He raised general crops. In September, 1872, he bought the Isaac Hoxie place in the shadow of the old Friends' meeting house on Spring Hill, the society to which he had belonged since his marriage and where he was a valued member. In those days there were large gatherings at the monthly and quarterly meetings, and his home was always open to the minister and visiting Friends. He was always ready to extend help in time of need socially or financially. He was a strong Republican, as most Friends, and would not bear arms against any man or men. He married, 1844, Anna Cartland, born December 2, 1815, daughter of

Charles and Meriam (Robinson) Cartland, the former of whom was a farmer. Children: 1. Charles Henry, born October 29, 1847, died January 27, 1884; married Mary Francis Bray. 2. Lemuel, born August 6, 1849; mentioned below. 3. Benjamin Dalton, born April 6, 1851, married Sarah F. Stuart. 4. Joseph John, born January 16, 1862, married (first) September, 1886, Laura Butts, of Danielson, Connecticut; (second) March 20, 1892, Cora L. Chadbourne, of Sandwich, Massachusetts. Children: Joseph John, Jr., born November 11, 1892; Everett Brooks, February 27, 1894; Charles F., April 8, 1895.

(VII) Lemuel, son of Charles Milliken, was born at Parsonsfield, Maine, August 6, 1849, died at Franklin, Massachusetts, August 23, 1902. He attended the little district school near his father's farm up to fourteen years of age, assisting his father with the farm duties. At an early age he learned the trade of oil cloth printer, serving his time at Readfield, Maine. He later came to Norwood, Massachusetts, where he worked at his trade in a large concern there about four years. Subsequently, owing to poor health, he left this trade and found employment on what was then the Boston, Hartford and Fishkill railroad (now New York, New Haven & Hartford). He served as baggage master on the train running from Boston to Walpole two years, but owing to an injury to his hand left the road for a time and later was married to Eleanor Arilla Johnson, and they settled at Walpole, where he shortly returned to his position as baggage master on the road, remaining three years. He subsequently learned the manufacture of null leather supplies, working for A. E. Stetson at Walpole for four years. About 1879 he came to Franklin, Massachusetts, and set up in this business for himself, in Wait's block, on Depot street, remaining in these quarters a year, subsequently removing his goods to quarters in Main street, in the Retigues building, where is now Peck's store. There he manufactured a year, and later removed to Dean avenue, where the printing office of the Weekly Sentinel is now located. His final quarters were in Central street, where he conducted business until his death, and where his sons, William B. and Wallace, still continue. It was the only business of its kind in Franklin, in the manufacture of loom straps, lug straps, belt lacings and accessories used by various fabric machines, and is the oldest business in the town which has been conducted under one name (L. W. Milliken) or with so slight change in name.

Mr. Milliken was successful in his enterprises, and stood high as a manufacturer and business man. He purchased his residence at 41 Cottage street, where he died, August 23, 1902, and where his widow still resides. He was owner of considerable real estate in Franklin. He was of a retiring nature, reticent and yet sociable, of strong principles, having many friends, and always retaining them. He was reared a Friend, and attended their meetings when opportunity presented. In later years he became identified with the Universalist faith. In politics he was a Republican. He was a member of Excelsior Lodge of Masons, Franklin; was exalted there in Miller Chapter, Royal Arch Chapter; was a member of Milford Commandery, Knights Templar, Milford; of Massachusetts Consistory, Scottish Rite, thirty-second degree, Boston; of Meppo Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, Boston. As a Mason he traveled extensively, attending many fraternal gatherings. His widow has a frame containing nearly one hundred different badges, from various Masonic assemblages, representing nearly every state in the Union.

Mr. Milliken married, at Walpole, Massachusetts, in 1872, Eleanor Arilla Johnson, born in Walpole, August 4, 1853, daughter of Benjamin Franklin and Eleanor Brooks (Hall) Johnson, of Walpole; her father was a farmer, and served as school committeeman. Children: 1. William B., born January 16, 1874; married, December 25, 1901, Myrtie S. Fields, of Franklin, daughter of Edwin H. and Pauline K. (Small) Fields. 2. Wallace C., twin with William B.; died aged nine months. 3. Wallace C., born January 12, 1875; married, January 8, 1906, Myrtie Mabel Morse, daughter of Edwin A. and Frances J. V. (Pratt) Morse.

The Ferris family was originally FERRIS from Leicestershire, England, and descended from the house of Feriers (Ferrerr, Feris or Ferris), the progenitor of which in England was Henry de Deriers, son of Guillaume (William) de Feriers, master of the house of the Duke of Normandy, who received from the Conqueror large grants of land in Staffordshire, Derbyshire and Leicestershire. It is said that he took a prominent part in the battle of Hastings. William Feriers, Earl of Derby, was a descendant, and his descendants, the Ferrers of Groby, bear these arms: Gules seven mascles or a canton ermine. The American family bears: Gules a fleur de lis or a canton ermine with a crescent for difference.

(1) Jeffrey Ferris, or Ferris, immigrant ancestor, came from England to Watertown, Massachusetts, where he was admitted a free-man May 6, 1635. He went with the Watertown pioneers to Wethersfield, Connecticut. He was there but a few years, selling his farm to John Denning and removing with the first colony to Stamford, Connecticut, and receiving ten acres in the first division of land in 1640. In 1656 he was one of the eleven men of Greenwich, Connecticut, who petitioned to be accepted under the jurisdiction of the New Haven colony. Tradition tells us that his first wife was of noble birth, marrying against the wishes of her family. He married (second) shortly before her death, Susannah, widow of Robert Lockwood. She died December 23, 1660. His third wife was Judy Burns, who thus signed her name in receiving for her portion of the estate, March 6, 1667. His will was proved at Fairfield, Connecticut, January 6, 1664, bequeathing to wife Judy, son James, stepchildren Jonathan Lockwood and Mary Lockwood, son Peter's three children and son Joseph's two children; also giving ten pounds each to four boys that he brought up. Children: 1. John, mentioned below. 2. Peter, born July 5, 1654; died September 28, 1706; married Elizabeth Reynolds. 3. Joseph, born September 20, 1657; married Ruth Knapp, daughter of Nicholas. 4. James; lived in Greenwich.

(11) John, son of Jeffrey Ferris, was born in Connecticut, about 1630, it is thought. At any rate he moved to Westchester, New York, on Long Island Sound, in 1654, and was one of the original patentees. He was doubtless a child of the first wife, but not born in England in 1649 as stated in the New England Historical Register, vol. 42, p. 311. Doubtless the family came from Leicestershire, however, as there stated. Bolton's history states that he came from Fairfield, Connecticut, and was one of the ten proprietors of Throckmorton's Neck (now Throgs Neck) purchased of Thomas Pell, in 1667. He received for his share of his father's estate July 16, 1705; his father and brothers lived at Greenwich, Fairfield county, Connecticut, according to this document. Their names are spelled Feris, while his is spelled Ferris. He married Mary ———, died in 1704; (second) Grace ———, died in Flushing, Long Island, December 31, 1715. He was a member of the Society of Friends in later years. His will, dated May 9, 1715, proved February 25, 1715-16, bequeathed to son Peter houses and lands at Westchester, the home lots being on the highway leading to Thomas Hadden's mills; to sons John, Samuel, James and Jonathan; daughters Phebe Burling, Hannah Mott, Martha and Sarah Ferris. Children: 1. Peter, married Susannah ———; lived in West Chester; ancestor of Ferris families of East Chester, now part of New York city. 2. Mary, married, March 12, 1685, Nathaniel Underhill, mayor of the borough of Westchester. 3. Samuel, one of the first assistants and common council of the borough; married, 1699, Sarah Pinckney, daughter of John. 4. James, mentioned below. 5. Jonathan, of Cortlandt Manor; died 1753, at Throgs Neck, bequeathing to children of his brothers. 6. John of West Chester; died 1729. 7. Phebe, born April 11, 1700; married Edward Burling. 8. Martha, married ——— Cook. 9. Sarah, married (first) Solomon Palmer; (second) October 8, 1719, Samuel Harrison. 10. Hannah, born February 12, 1705; died April 25, 1760; married William Mott, born January 20, 1674; died June 30, 1730.

(III) James, son of John Ferris, was born at Throgs Neck, about 1690; married Anna Sands, of Sands Point, Long Island, who survived him. His will, dated August 16, 1746, proved April 14, 1747, bequeathed to eldest son James; son Benjamin; daughters Martha, Mercy, Elizabeth, Jane and Mary, wife of Caleb Pell. The children given in a recent genealogy probably include some grandchildren and omit some of those named in the will. The list is: 1. James, born July 3, 1734; died February 25, 1780; married Charity Thomas; both buried in old Ferris burial ground at Westchester, now removed to the Hicks lot in Woodlawn. 2. John, mentioned below, had the homestead in 1776 when the British landed there and made a short stay, under Lord Howe. 3. Jonathan. 4. Anna, married Dr. Valentine Seaman. 5. Elizabeth, married Dr. Thomas Cook. 6. Sands, married Susan Potter. 7. Sarah, married John White. 8. Elmira. 9. Mary. The son Benjamin died in 1777, leaving wife and daughter.

(IV) John (2), son of James Ferris, was born at Throgs Neck, June, 1733; died January, 1814; married Marianna, daughter of Thomas Hunt. Children, born at Westchester: 1. Jonathan, December 15, 1705; mentioned below. 2. Elijah, January 24, 1768; died May, 1842; married Amelia, daughter of Philip Livingston; bought land with his brother in Vermont; children: Lindley M., John H., William Livingston (unmarried), Charlton, married Anna Seaman. 3. Elvin, lost at sea; child Rufus, married ——— Leggett.

(V) Jonathan, son of John (2) Ferris, was born at Westchester, New York, December 15, 1765, and died in Swanton, Vermont, October 1, 1829. He and his brother, Elijah Ferris, both of New York, bought from Silas Hathaway a tract of land at Swanton, Vermont, as appears from indenture dated May 3, 1803, which in brief was bounded as follows: Commenced where the then Highgate line intersected Maquam Creek thence following the creek to Maquam Bay; thence southerly following the shore of the Lake one and a half miles; thence southeasterly parallel with Highgate line, three miles; thence northeasterly until it meets the Highgate line; thence on Highgate line to place of beginning. So running as to include 5000 acres of land, no more and no less, exclusive of such lands as have heretofore been conveyed by said Hathaway. This tract, as may readily be seen, includes all the Falls, with all the land on which the village now stands, and all the land included within the bend of the river, from where the Highgate line intersects the river eastwardly from the Falls to where the river intersects the said Highgate line northwardly from the Falls, together with a large amount not embraced within the bend of the river. The consideration set up in the deed was $40,000, but only $22,000 was actually paid for the land. Jonathan Ferris came here to reside in 1807, and for the first few years occupied a house then standing near the house where Colonel Jewett lately resided. In 1810 he removed to the large brick house standing at the northerly end of the village square, and occupied it until his death. He contributed much in various ways to the prosperity of the town. He laid out the village with straight broad streets and ample building lots, making a beautiful town. He was a Quaker.

He married Ursula Catlin, born in Litchfield, Connecticut, May 27, 1780. She was admitted to the Congregational church April 8, 1832, and died March 31, 1858, surviving her husband nearly thirty years. Children: 1. Helen, married March 23, 1831, Dr. H. H. Brayton; removed to California. 2. J. Alexander, resided in California. 3. Dr. Lynde C., practiced several years in New York, and died in 1874, at the home of his brother, near Boston; married Mary Drake, daughter of Jacob, mentioned below. 4. Valentine S., married (first) Cornelia, daughter of Judge William Brayton; (second) Emma Everest, widow of

Dr. Horatio Gates; resided in Swanton. 5. Maria A., married R. F. Fletcher, and died in Paris, France, a widow. 6. Edwin M., married Catherine Everset; died about 1858. 7. Almira E., married P. T. Washburn, who became adjutant general and governor of Vermont. 8. Mortimer C., resided in Boston. 9. Charles J., died at sea, on his way to California. 10. Martha. 11. John.

(VI) Hon. Valentine S., son of Jonathan Ferris, was born in Swanton, Vermont, in 1809-10, and died there December 21, 1879. He was educated in the public schools of his native town. In company with his two brothers, in early life he engaged in business and took measures to develop the water power at Swanton. They were then the owners of nearly all the water-power in the town on the easterly side of the river. They erected the large brick grist mill in 1833, also large marble and lumber mills, and for a time were engaged extensively in the marble business. They finally disposed of their interests in mills and water-power and engaged in other pursuits. Mr. Ferris from this time gave his attention largely to the management of real estate in which he was interested. It is said that his name appears more times as the conveyor of real estate on the records of the town than that of any other man. From his early manhood he took a lively interest in all matters pertaining to town affairs, and was honored with nearly every office in the gift of the town, as well as other offices of honor and trust. For many years he was a member of the Episcopal church, but he was exceedingly liberal in his religious belief. He married (first) Cornelia, died 1855, daughter of Judge William Brayton; (second) Emma Everest Gates, widow of Dr. Horatio Gates. She died in February, 1878.

(VII) Mortimer Catlin, son of Jonathan Ferris, was born at Swanton, Vermont, March 29, 1818, and died April 6, 1889, in Brookline, Massachusetts. He attended the public schools of his native town. He came to Boston when a boy, and began work as clerk for Dana, Dana & Company, importers and dealers in teas. He was promoted from time to time, and finally admitted to partnership. His connection with this firm lasted fifty years. He was a capable and successful business man, well known in the trade and highly respected wherever he was known. He made his home in Brookline, and was warden of the Protestant Episcopal church of that town. In politics he was a Republican. He married, June 22, 1852,

Mary E. Raymond, born June 20, 1832, daughter of Edward A. and Eliza T. (Pollard) (Blackman) Raymond (see Raymond). Children: 1. Edward Mortimer, born December 20, 1853; died September 15, 1890; graduated at Harvard College 1874, studied medicine, but never practiced; succeeded his father in the firm of Dana, Dana & Company. Captain William Raymond, immigrant ancestor, came to New England, according to his own testimony given in the Essex court, December 28, 1697, "about the year 1652." He was of Essex county, England, and his father, William Raymond, the "Steward," was brother of Richard Raymond, a prominent pioneer, of Salem, Massachusetts. Captain William Raymond was born, according to his testimony on the same occasion, about 1637. He made his home at Beverly. He was in the Narragansett fight in King Philip's war in 1675, and was appointed by the general court in 1683 lieutenant-commander of the Beverly and Wenham troops. He also commanded a company in the ill-starred Phipps expedition against Canada in 1690. He was deputy to the general court from Beverly in 1685-6. He died January 29, 1709. He married (first) Hannah Bishop, born April 12, 1646, daughter of Edward Bishop; (second) Ruth, daughter of Isaac Hull, of Beverly. Children of first wife: 1. William, mentioned below. 2. He married Mary, daughter of John Kettle, of Gloucester. Children, all born in Beverly: 1. Mary, May 16, 1688; died January 20, 1689. 2. William, February 11, 1690. 3. Daniel, November 25, 1691. 4. (V) Asa, son of William (3) Raymond, was born at Holden, January 1, 1766, and died January 5, 1863, at Shutesbury, aged ninety-seven. (Shutesbury records say December 5, 1862). He was a farmer at Holden, and removed to Shutesbury in 1800. He was a farmer, a respected and useful citizen, active, industrious and public-spirited. In religion he was a Congregationalist. He married, at Holden, April 17, 1787, Huldah, daughter of Elijah and Huldah (Keyes) Rice (see Rice). This couple lived to celebrate their diamond wedding, the seventy-fifth anniversary of their marriage, said by a writer at the time to have been the first instance of the kind in the state, if not in New England. Mr. Raymond was then ninety-six years old, and his wife ninety-five. During their wedded life they were never separated for a longer time than two weeks at a time. At the time of the celebration, Mr. Raymond was infirm, and both hearing and memory were impaired, but he could read without glasses, while Mrs. Raymond had her hearing and an excellent memory, though her sight had failed. The family gathering on this occasion was remarkable. Among those present were: Edward A. Raymond and daughter, Mrs. Benton, and her daughter, of Boston; Hon. Z. L. Raymond, wife and daughter, of Cambridge; Mr. and Mrs. Emmons and daughter, and Mrs. Willard Raymond and five children, of Westborough; Mr. and Mrs. Ferris, of Brookline; Rev. Lucius R. Paige and wife; Rev. Asa Bullard, of Cambridge, and Horace Hunt, of New Salem; Mrs. Huldah Spear and daughters, and many neighbors and friends of the vicinity. Photographs of the aged couple were taken, and gifts made. The speakers were Hon. Z. L. Raymond and Edward A. Raymond, sons; Rev. Dr. Paige, Rev. Mr. Bullard and Mr. Hunt. "A prayer was offered by Mr. Bullard, when the aged patriarch, amid emotions that almost prevented utterance, acknowledged the unceasing kindness and love of his children and grandchildren that had never allowed him to want, but had ever made his cup of happiness to overflow. All then united in singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," in which grandmother fervently joined." The longevity of this family is remarkable on both sides. The mother of Mr. Raymond died at the age of ninety; and of her thirteen children, mentioned above, six lived to the age of ninety or more. Her father lived to the age of ninety-seven, and the average age of her brothers and sisters was over ninety-two years. Mrs. Raymond died at Shutesbury, May 17, 1862, a month after the cele-

Edward Southworth, progenitor of the family in England, was born there about 1590, and died about 1621. He married, May 28, 1613, Alice Carpenter, of Wington, Somersetshire, England. He was a silk worker in Leyden; one of the Pilgrim exiles who formed Rev. John Robinson's church. He was descended from the Southworths of Samlesbury Hall, Lancashire, where the family was established in the thirteenth century. His widow married Governor William Bradford, of Plymouth. Tradition has it that Alice Carpenter and Bradford were lovers before either married, and that her parents selected Edward Southworth because of his higher social rank. After Bradford's wife Dorothy was drowned in Provincetown harbor, Governor Bradford wrote to the widow in England, and she came over in the ship "Ann," in 1623, to marry him. Her two sons, Thomas and Constant, came with her, or soon followed. She died March 27, 1670, aged eighty years. Children of Edward and Alice Southworth: 1. Constant, mentioned below. 2. Massachusetts Central railroad. He was interested in public education, and served five years on the school committee. He was representative from his district in the general court in 1847 and 1857. Except for a few years when he lived at Milford and Gilbertville, he spent his active life in Hardwick. He was a farmer and lumber dealer. He then entered the employ of his father in the lumber business. Later he entered partnership with his father and brother, and conducted an extensive business manufacturing lumber at Hardwick, Massachusetts. In 1891 Mr. Southworth came to Ware and built a large mill for the manufacture of doors and sash. He also manufactured boxes. His brother, Frank K., was in business with him in Hardwick and in Ware. He bought large tracts of land in Ware and vicinity. From the wood lots that he owned he cut the timber and sawed it with portable saw-mills located on the property. He built a handsome home on Church street, and built and rented a large shoe factory, both in Ware. He was very active, enterprising and industrious, keenly interested in the affairs of the town and lending his aid to every plan for the improve-

John Searle, immigrant ancestor, was born in England. This surname is identical with Surles and Searles, and was also spelled Sale. He was among the first settlers of Springfield, Massachusetts, and the records of that town show that he was a lot-measurer for the proprietors as early as 1637, a proprietor and taxpayer in 1638. He married, March 19, 1639, Sarah Baldwin; he died September, 1641, buried September 6. His widow married (second) Alexander Edwards. When he was twenty-eight years old he returned to Northampton (in 1722) to get his share of his father's estate. He could not speak English and was not recognized at first.

It is said that he found a pair of stilts that he used to walk on and that fact served as a means of identification. He was determined to return to Canada, but finally yielded to the inducements offered him, and he was commissioned sergeant by the general court, granted ten pounds, and served at Deerfield in the war of 1724 and at Fort Dummer next year). 4. Nathaniel Searle was the richest settler of Southampton and the only one boasting of a house of two rooms. Before the meeting house was built his house was used as a place of worship. His homestead was a number of rods north of the house now or lately owned by George W. Foley and on the same side of the street. The cellar hole is still discernible. He entertained the council when Rev. Mr. Judd was ordained. He drew his first lot in 1730 and built about 1732-35. He had nine sons, of whom Nathaniel is mentioned below. He had also James and Eliphaz.

He was educated in the public schools of his native town and at Williston Seminary at Easthampton. He afterward taught school for a time. He established a business college at London, Canada, but after a few years returned to Westfield in 1861 to become station agent on the Canal railroad (now the New York, New Haven & Hartford) in that town. He embarked in the retail coal and wood business at Westfield in partnership with L. B. Blood, his father-in-law; this continued for several years when Mr. Blood retired and later L. Gladwin was admitted to the firm; Mr. Searle retired in 1900. There were four immigrants of FLINT this surname who came to New England before 1650—Thomas and William, of Salem, brothers, who arrived here about 1640; Henry, of Braintree; and Thomas, of Concord. William is mentioned in the Salem records in 1642, at which time there is some evidence to show that he had a mother living in this country. Flint street, in Salem, is said to be on land once owned by him and near where his house stood. He died February 2, 1673, aged seventy years, and his widow Alice died October 5, 1700. He left six children, but his posterity is not numerous. None of them are to be found in Salem or vicinity.

(I) Thomas, brother of William Flint, mentioned above, came, so says tradition, from Wales, Great Britain. He was among the first settlers of Salem village, now Danvers, and was mentioned in the town records of Salem as early as 1650, although there is reason to believe he was there much earlier. In 1654 he bought of John Pickering land on the Salem and North Reading road, about six miles from the present court house in Salem. The farm remained in the possession of the family as late as 1860, being occupied then by the heirs of Elijah Flint. He married Ann ———. He died April 15, 1663. Children: 1. Thomas. 2. He married (first) May 5, 1709, Christian Reed, died September 27, 1721; (second) March 14, 1722, Lydia Gennings, born April 30, 1695, daughter of Jonathan and Susannah Gennings. (V) Jonathan, son of Rufus Flynt, was born November 13, 1747, in Windham, Connecticut. He was a clothier by trade. He removed to Western, now Warren, Worcester county, Massachusetts. He married (first) a daughter of Ezra Leonard, of Hardwick, Massachusetts. Ezra Leonard was born 1711, an ensign in Captain Warner's company that marched to the relief of Fort William Henry in 1757. Flynt was a soldier in the revolution, from Western, private in Captain Josiah Putnam's company, Colonel Jedediah Foster's regiment, on the Lexington alarm, April 21, 1775, at Roxbury; also corporal in Captain Joseph Cutler's company of volunteers, in northern department of the Continental army, a company from Western and Oakham, marching September 24, 1777, to join the army under General Gates.

(VI) Captain Rufus, son of Jonathan Flynt, was born in Western, Massachusetts, June 22, 1775, and died January 15, 1836. He removed to Monson, Massachusetts, in 1792, and became a clerk in the store of William Norcross. When he came of age he was admitted to partnership with his employer, and continued in trade at Monson all his active life. He was an enterprising and successful merchant, a useful and prominent citizen. He was postmaster of Monson in 1826, the first incumbent of that office. He was active in the state militia, and became captain of the Monson company. He was for many years foremost in business and zealous in promoting the public schools of the town. He did considerable banking business. He was one of the incorporators and trustees of Monson Academy, and was treasurer for twenty-three years. He held the office of postmaster from his first appointment by President Madison until his death, June 15, 1836. He married, November 30, 1800, Sarah Norcross, born 1780, died 1863, aged eighty-three years, daughter of William Norcross (see Norcross). Children, born at Monson: 1. Maria, December 28, 1801; married Rev. Lyman Coleman, professor in Lafayette College, writer of theological books; died at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, leaving two daughters. 2. Rufus, entered Yale College in 1823, and died in 1825, while a student, aged eighteen years. 3. Olivia, March 29, 1809; educated at Monson and New Haven; died 1837. 4. William Norcross, mentioned below.

(VII) William Norcross, son of Captain Rufus Flynt, was born in Monson, March 14, 1818, died in Monson, September 28, 1895. He received his education in the public schools and at Monson Academy in his native town. At the age of seventeen he began work in his father's store as clerk, was associated with his father in managing the general store, and when his father died succeeded to the ownership of the business. Before his father's death he turned his attention to the quarry which had been opened and worked as early as 1825. He began on a small scale to take out stone, and in 1840 placed the first specimens of the stone on exhibition at Springfield and from that time the business increased rapidly. The quarry is situated one mile north of the village of Monson, covering an area of five hundred acres. The stone is dark-blue and white granite, in apparently inexhaustible quantity, used for dams, buildings, monuments, etc. In 1875 Mr. Flynt built a private railroad two miles in length, with a grade of 158 feet to the mile, at a cost of about forty thousand dollars, connecting the quarry directly with the New London & Northern railroad. The stone is loaded at the quarry and shipped direct to all parts of the country. Mr. Flynt also owned a large quarry at West Dummerston, Vermont. In 1886 he, with his sons, incorporated the Flynt Building & Construction Company, main office at Palmer, and a very large and prosperous business was conducted from the start. W. N. Flynt, president; W. K. Flynt, treasurer and general manager. Immense contracts were executed in all parts of the United States, and a business of a million dollars a year was not uncommon. The company is still in a flourishing condition. Mr. Flynt kept pace with the great strides in business and business methods. He and his father used to drive together to Boston in the one-horse chaise, and Mr. Flynt preserved a tax-bill of his father's showing that a tax of four dollars was paid on this vehicle in 1812. The coming of the steam railroads when he was a young man made possible the vast business in stone, and he had the foresight to take advantage of the opportunity. Within his lifetime have come the building of the steam and electric railroads and the consequent industrial development of the whole country. Mr. Flynt retired from active business in 1875, owing to ill health, and since then his business has been conducted by his sons.

Mr. Flynt was active in political and public life, and had held many offices of trust and honor. He had the badge he wore during the Harrison campaign in 1840, when the party slogan was "Tippecanoe and Tyler too," and again in 1888, when he attended the inauguration of Benjamin Harrison, grandson of the first President Harrison. He was town treasurer of Monson in 1848, and afterward for a period of thirty-one years; represented his district in the general court in 1848, and again in 1861, and was an active and influential member of the house. He was elected to the council under Governor Andrew in 1865, and Governor Bullock in 1866. He was an alternate to the Republican national convention at Chicago in 1884. Mr. Flynt was a member of the board of trustees of Monson Academy from 1850 to the time of his death, and for many years was the oldest member of the board. He was one of the original incorporators and stockholders of the Monson State Bank in 1852, and its first president, continuing after it received its national charter as the Monson National Bank. He had been president of the Palmer Savings Bank; director and vice-president of the New England Granite Manufacturers Association, and held various other offices in corporations and organizations to which he belonged. He was a zealous and prominent worker in the Congregational church, and set a noble example of charity and benevolence, giving freely but never seeking publicity for his benefactions. In the town of Monson he opened a park of two hundred acres on the west side, including a menagerie, museum, and an observation tower. Mr. Flynt was known throughout the country in the granite trade as a business man of the highest character. He stood among the foremost men of affairs in western Massachusetts, and was a powerful factor in the upbuilding and development of the community. He was firm and aggressive in fighting for what he believed right, socially, politically and morally, and no man in his generation exerted a stronger or better influence among his neighbors. He had the respect and confidence of his workmen, the esteem and love of his friends, to an unusual degree.

He married (first) June 4, 1846, Joanna King, born 1820, died September 21, 1850, daughter of Colonel Isaac King, of Palmer. He married (second) November 23, 1852, Eudocia Carter, born January 21, 1822, died November 8, 1906, daughter of Marquis and Sophia (Lyon) Converse. Children, born in Monson: By first wife: 1. (VIII) Lyman Coleman, son of William Norcross Flynt, was born in Monson, October 20, 1856. He was educated in the public schools and at Monson Academy. He became associated in business with his father, and with his brothers continued the general store and quarry after the father retired from business in 1875. The store in Monson is now one of the largest and most flourishing general stores in that section. The store now has a frontage of one hundred and twenty feet and several thousand feet of floor space, having all up-to-date contrivances for doing business to advantage, yet part of the store is the original building in which William Norcross, great-grandfather of the present proprietor, as well as his grandfather, Rufus Flynt, and his father, William Norcross Flynt, were in business as general merchants. Lyman Coleman is in charge of the mercantile business in which his brother is also interested. He is also president of the Flynt Building & Construction Company; president of the W. N. Flynt Granite Company; vice-president of the Monson National Bank; trustee of the Monson Savings Bank, and of the Monson Academy. He is a member of Royal Arcanum. In politics he is a Republican, and he is an attendant of the Congregational church. He married, June 24, 1886, Harriet C. Hussey, born at Cornwall, New York, March 5, 1862, daughter of William Allen Hussey, of New Bedford, and Harriet R. Coe, of Little Compton, Rhode Island. Children: 1. Robert Hussey, born April 2, 1887. 2. Ruth Burleigh, September 29, 1888. 3. Olivia Coleman, October 27, 1890. 4. Esther Holmes, February 12, 1894.

(VII) George Converse, son of William Norcross Flynt, was born in Monson, June 27, 1863. He was educated in the public schools of his native town and Monson Academy. He is interested with his brothers in the enterprises which his father formerly owned and developed. He is treasurer of the W. N. Flynt Granite Company, of which he has immediate charge; secretary and director of the Flynt Building & Construction Company; and trustee of the Monson Savings Bank. He was a prime mover in organizing the electric light company, and in getting the electric railroad built to Monson, was a large stockholder in both companies, and president of the Electric Light Company. He is a member of Quaboag Council, Royal Arcanum, of Palmer. In politics he is a Republican, and he is a constant attendant of the Congregational church. He married, June 21, 1892, Helen Pratt Needham, born in Brooklyn, New York, daughter of Henry Miles Needham, born in Wales, Massachusetts. They have one child, Henry Needham, born July 2, 1893.

The Cloughs or Cluffs of New England have as progenitors several immigrants of the name in its various spellings, each of whom became the forbear of a numerous tribe of descendants.

John Clough, tailor, born about 1613, who died July 26, 1691, was a passenger in the ship "Elizabeth," in 1635, was in Watertown, Massachusetts Bay Colony, was made a freeman of the colony May 18, 1642, and with his wife Susanna removed to Salisbury, and the Cloughs of Maine and New Hampshire own him as their progenitor, through one of three sons, John, Thomas or Samuel. William Clough, bricklayer, settled in Charlestown, and married, about 1656, Mary, daughter of Richard Adams, of Molden. He was admitted to the church in Charlestown in 1661, and was clerk of the second military company of Charlestown. He had sons Joseph, William, Benjamin, Samuel, Nathaniel and John. Then we find John, the Boston immigrant, and one of the name in Plymouth Colony. But from none of these can we trace the Cloughs of the Connecticut Valley, both in Massachusetts and Connecticut. We therefore look to another John Clough, who appeared in Hartford and was made a freeman of Connecticut in 1654, as probable ancestor of the Connecticut Valley Cloughs.

(III) Jonathan, probably grandson of John Clough, the immigrant, was born before the opening of the eighteenth century, and was one of the proprietors of the town of Thompson, colony of Hartford, where a church government was formed January 28, 1730, of which he was a corporate member, being number eight in the published list of incorporators of the church and town. The name of his wife does not appear. He had at least four children: 1. Jonathan; see forward. 2. Ephriam, joined the church in 1741. 3. John, joined the church in 1742. 4. Obediah, joined the church 1746. 5. Ruth, joined the church in 1750. These children were probably about twenty years of age when they united with the church.

(IV) Jonathan (2), eldest son of Jonathan (1) Clough, was born about 1715, and joined the church in Thompson, Connecticut, of which his father was a founder in 1738. He married and removed to Belchertown, Massachusetts, where he carried on a farm, and where he died at the age of ninety-four years, about 1810. Children, all born in Belchertown: 1. Dan, married, and had children: Desire, born 1800; Jonathan (3d) 1802-3; Almer 1805. 2. Timothy, see forward. 3. John, married (first) Sarah ———, (second) Louisa ———; children: Sarah, born 1796; Keziah, 1798; Charlotte, 1800; Clarissa, 1802; Tovisa, 1804; Sophronia, 1805; Nancy, 1811; Ann Jane, 1814; John, 1816; Mary, 1818.

(V) Timothy, second son of Jonathan (2) Clough, was born in Thompson, Connecticut, about 1770. He removed to Ludlow, Hampden county, Massachusetts, and thence to Belchertown. He married Lucy ———; children: 1. Abigail, born 1792. 2. Susa, 1794. 3. Hannah, 1797. 4. Olive, 1801. 5. Candice (twin), 1801. 6. Timothy, 1804. 7. Jonathan, see forward. 8. Daniel, 1808. 9. Daniel, 1811.

(VI) Jonathan (3), second son and seventh child of Timothy and Lucy Clough, was born in Ludlow, Massachusetts, May 22, 1806, and died in Belchertown, Massachusetts, in August, 1855. He married, in 1828, Almira Leavens, of Thompson, Connecticut, who was born November 1, 1806, and died in Belchertown, Massachusetts, April 23, 1899. In the Congregational church at Thompson, Connecticut, Elizabeth, Hannah, James, Mary and Noah Leavens are named among its prominent members, Elizabeth joining the church in 1741. They lived first in Perry, New York, and then in Belchertown. Their first two children were born in Perry. Children: 1. James W., May 10, 1826. 2. Jefferson Moody; see forward. 3. Almira C., October 21, 1831. 4. Timothy L., December 6, 1833. 5. Guernsey A., April 25, 1835. 6. Merv, October 17, 1838. 7. Henry S., July 9, 1842. 8. Emily M., March 28, 1846. 9. George R., December 27, 1849. 10. Mary A., December 25, 1800.

(VII) Jefferson Moody, eldest son of Jonathan and Almira (Leavens) Clough, was born in Perry, New York, November 26, 1829, and died in Belchertown, Massachusetts, January 16, 1908. He was general manager of the Winchester Manufacturing Company, and he perfected the first typewriter that was ever made, later known as the Remington typewriter. He married Ellen E. Debit, born September 22, 1820, died in Belchertown, Massachusetts, October 28, 1904. They lived in Palmer, Massachusetts. Children: 1. Adella A. 2. Jefferson Moody; see forward.

(VIII) Jefferson Moody, eldest son and second child of Jefferson Moody and Ellen E. (Debit) Clough, was born in Palmer, Hampden county, Massachusetts, April 2, 1846. He was sent to school up to the age of eight years, when an accident to one eye deprived him of the sight of both, and his future education was in private schools for the blind, in which he made rapid progress, and his acquirements were remarkable considering his affliction. He married, October 5, 1881, Jennie Eva, daughter of William and Martha (Hutchinson) Cooper, granddaughter of Erastus (1806-84), and Sara Slate (1808-87) Cooper, and great-granddaughter of Justin (1789-1849) and Harriet (1787-1853) Cooper, of Winchester, New Hampshire. Justin and Harriet Cooper had six children: Erastus, Emily, William, Charles, Edwin, and an infant unnamed. The children of Erastus and Sara (Slate) Cooper were born in Winchester, New Hampshire, as follows: 1. Harriet, April 1, 1826; married G. Crosby, and died January 22, 1888. 2. Mary, January 3, 1829; married James May, and died March 9, 1906. 3. Sarah, April 29, 1832; married Cleveland Goff. 4. William, January 12, 1836. 5. George, May 15, 1834, died May 20, 1857. 6. Henry, April 1, 1842, died September 9, 1842. 7. Emily, January 10, 1844, died July 20, 1844. Children of William and Martha Cooper: Jennie Eva, (1st); Jennie Eva (2d), married Jefferson Clough; Addie Louise.

Jefferson Budd, son of Jefferson Moody and Jennie Eva (Cooper) Clough, was born September 6, 1886, and died February 3, 1897.

(For preceding generations see Jeremiah Norcross 1).

(III) Nathaniel Norcross, NORCROSS born in Watertown, December 18, 1665, was a shoemaker, and resided in Watertown and Sudbury.

He married (first) Mehitable Hagar, died April 5, 1691; (second) Susanna, daughter of Dr. Philip Shattuck, of Watertown. She died in Sudbury, February 15, 1711-12. He died in 1717, leaving four children.

(IV) Philip Norcross, born March 5, 1698; married, in 1721, Sarah, daughter of Edward Jackson, of Newton, and settled in that town, their home being on the site of the present Flot meeting house. He died in 1748, leaving nine children.

(V) Jonathan Norcross, born February 7, 1734-35, fifth child of Philip Norcross; was a soldier in the French and Indian war, and at Lake George in 1758. Two years later he removed to Georgetown, Maine, where he married Martha, daughter of James Springer. In 1775 he was a resident of Readville, Maine, but we have no record of his death. His wife died in 1809, and was buried at Hallowell, Maine.

(VI) Jonathan Norcross, Jr., born 1767; married Jane Atkinson, of Lancaster, England, and resided during the greater portion of his life in Wayne, Maine, where he owned a farm. It is believed at his death he was buried in Winthrop, Maine. His widow died and was buried in Salem, Massachusetts.

(VII) Jesse Springer Norcross, son of Jonathan Norcross, Jr., was born in Wayne, Maine, in 1806. He was a carpenter and builder, also proprietor of the "Norcross Mills," at Winslow, Maine. He married, in 1826, Margaret Ann Whitney, of Westboro, Massachusetts. They resided in various places in the state of Maine, among them the town of Clinton and Winslow. In 1843 he removed to Salem, Massachusetts, where he continued to ply his occupation as carpenter and builder. In the year 1849 he joined the great concourse of seekers for gold in California. He died the following year and was buried at Benicia in that state. His widow, Margaret Ann (Whitney) Norcross, was the daughter of Jonah and Anna (Rider) Whitney. The father of Jonah was Thomas Whitney, a revolutionary soldier from the town of Shrewsbury, Thomas being in the fifth generation from the emigrant ancestor, John Whitney, who settled in Watertown, Massachusetts, and was admitted freeman there in 1635-36. The children of Jesse Springer and Margaret Ann (Whitney) Norcross were: Rosina C., Julia and James A., twins; Elizabeth, Orlando W.; William, died at sea, when nineteen years of age; Leander, who died an infant, and Charles Henry, died when four years of age.

(VIII) Orlando Whitney Norcross, son of Jesse and Margaret (Whitney) Norcross, was born in Clinton, Maine, October 25, 1830, and was a child in his father's family when they removed to Salem, Massachusetts. As he grew to youth and manhood he acquired his early education in the Salem public schools, and after a few years experience in the leather business, doubtless prompted by a mechanical genius inherited from his father, turned his attention to the carpenter's trade, which he mastered and in which occupation he found employment until the year 1861, when he enlisted in the Fourteenth Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry Regiment, afterwards known as the First Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, and served well his country for three years.

In 1864 the copartnership with his brother James A. Norcross was formed, as before mentioned, under the name of Norcross Brothers, and it is safe to say that no firm engaged in the building industry ever made more rapid strides towards success and popularity than did the Norcross Brothers. The thirty thousand dollars contract for the Congregational church at Leicester, in 1866, placed the firm fairly in line for further like engagements, and soon was followed by one at North Adams. The firm at this time having located in Worcester, began here with a contract for the Crompton block. Then the First Universalist church, and Classical and English high schools were built during the years 1870 and 1871. Later, they built the State Mutual Life Assurance building, the Art Museum, and the new City Hall. Prior to the climax reached in the erection of their massive buildings, they had erected about eighty others in various parts of the United States, all remarkable for their size, beauty and cost of construction, including those designed both for public and private use. A complete list of these great structures cannot here be given, but a few of the more important are mentioned: South Congregational church; Hampden County court house, Springfield, Massachusetts; Union League club house, New York; Boston & Albany station and granite bridge over Main street, Springfield, Massachusetts; Trinity Church, Boston; South Terminal Station, Boston; Norwich Congregational Church, Norwich, Connecticut; Latin and English high schools, Boston; buildings for Harvard College, including Perkins Hall, Conant Hall, Fogg Art Museum, Gymnasium building, Sever Hall, and Law School buildings, at Cambridge; the group of Medical School buildings on Longwood avenue, Boston; New York Central Railroad Station, Albany, New York; Allegheny court house and jail, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, built of granite from Worcester county, Massachusetts; Exchange building, Boston; Chamber of Commerce, Cincinnati, Ohio; granite work of Pennsylvania & Long Island railroad at New York; Bi-centennial and Woolsey Hall buildings at Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut; New York Life Insurance Company, buildings at Omaha and Kansas City; Howard Memorial Library, New Orleans; Marshall Field building, Chicago; Equitable building, Baltimore; Corcoran Gallery of Art, Washington, D. C.; new Massachusetts State Capitol, Boston; Rhode Island State Capitol, Providence, Rhode Island; Columbia University buildings, including Science Hall, University Hall Library, Acherneron Hall, Physic building, S. E. Porch; and at Brown University, at Providence, Rhode Island; and John Carter Brown Library and Rockefeller Hall. They also constructed the Soldiers' Monument at West Point, New York, the largest polished monolith in the United States; and the Ames Memorial at Sherman, Wyoming, on the highest elevation of the Rocky Mountains crossed by the Union Pacific Railroad.

After the retirement of his brother from the firm in 1897, the business was continued under the direction of Orlando, who possesses unusual zeal and business capacity, is an untiring worker, with a remarkable knowledge of the science of mechanics, and has thus successfully mastered all obstacles met in the pathway of his various undertakings, many of which have been considered by some contractors to seem almost if not impossible of execution. No man takes deeper interest in his occupation, and his constant aim has been to become a complete master in the building trade. In 1875 he served on a committee of experts appointed to examine the condition of Chicago's great federal building, and the report of that body was found correct. Among his latest works are the following notable edifices: The New York Public Library, the largest marble building in America; and the marble tower of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Building in New York, now nearly completed, the loftiest building in the world; and he also rebuilt a large portion of the White House, in Washington City, at the beginning of President's Roosevelt's administration. Mr. Norcross is an earnest advocate of temperance.

He married, May, 1870, Miss Ellen Phebe Sibley, of Salem, Massachusetts, daughter of

George O. Sibley, a descendant from Richard Sibley, of that place. Of their five children three are living: 1. Alice Whitney, born March 22, 1872; married, October 19, 1897, Henry J. Gross, of Worcester; they have two children—Phebe, born April 18, 1900, and Phillip Norcross, born July 1, 1901. 2. Mabel Ellen, born July 20, 1874; married, April 10, 1898, William J. Denholm, of Worcester; their children were: Margaret, born April 17, 1900, and Alexander Norcross, born February 12, 1902, died October 14, 1902. 3. Edith Janet, born October 8, 1878; married, October 5, 1904, Charles F. Morgan, of Worcester. 4. James O., born March 5, 1882; died July 28, 1882.

The name Barker is of English origin and is derived from the occupation of tanner or "bark-cr." Ephraim Barker, immigrant ancestor of this branch of the family, came to New England with his brother Richard before 1752. Richard went west and disappeared. Ephraim married, February 27, 1752, Hannah Grove, and settled in Pomfret, Connecticut. Children: 1. (II) John, son of Ephraim Barker, was born in Pomfret, Connecticut, December 18, 1756, died in Stoddard, New Hampshire, March 15, 1834. He was in the revolution in the Continental army and served as orderly sergeant. He was in the battles of Lexington and Bunker Hill and at Saratoga when Burgoyne surrendered. He accompanied Benedict Arnold on the trip to Quebec, was with General Sullivan in his Indian campaign and with Colonel Alden at Cherry Valley, when the colonel was killed. He married (first) July 9, 1786, Esther Richardson, born at Leominster, died July 17, 1806, at Stoddard, New Hampshire, where they settled. He married (second) December 2, 1806, Mrs. Sally (Guild) Warren. Children of first wife: 1. (III) Albermarle, son of John Barker, was born in Stoddard, New Hampshire, June 13, 1797; died at Newton Upper Falls, Massachusetts, April 18, 1848. He was a blacksmith by trade and when a comparatively young man met with an injury through a fall, which resulted in the complete paralysis of his lower limbs, so that he was obliged to spend the remainder of his life as an invalid. He married Abigail A. Francis, of Marblehead, Massachusetts, born July 17, 1800. Children: 1. Albermarle, born in Lexington, Massachusetts, March 13, 1825; went in 1849 in the ship "Edward Everett," to California, to join his brother William; was a successful miner and cattle owner. 2. William Frederick, June 19, 1827; went to California in 1848 in the ship "Leonore" among the first company of about three hundred men; at the end of two years he was one of only six survivors, and lay ill of the fever alone; he was found and brought back to health by a stranger; was taken once by a party of Indians and escaped after a terrible struggle with his three captors, escaped, having killed them all; his left arm was disabled and he was cut in many places; returned in 1879 to Springfield, Massachusetts, and later settled in Washington state, as a farmer; he married Kittie Chambers and had William, George, Ida and John. 3. Horace Rice, June 27, 1829, in Lexington; died in Lowell, September 1886; married Martha M. Merritt and had Louise Ardelle and Bertha Estelle; learned the machinist's trade with his brothers in Otis Pettee's shop in Newton, Upper Falls, Massachusetts; was owner of the H. R. Barker Machine Shop in Lowell; prominent citizen; alderman of Lowell. 4. Abigail Ann, June 12, 1831. 5. Sarah Adelia, February 12, 1834. 6. Ellen Amanda, born in Needham, May 13, 1836. 7. John Francis, December 16, 1839; mentioned below. 8. Louise Maria, January 12, 1841.

(IV) John Francis, son of Albermarle Barker, was born in Needham, Massachusetts, December 16, 1839. His education was limited to the district school, and at the age of nine, a year after his father's death, he went to work on a farm. After he was twelve years old he was obliged to give up studying altogether. At the age of thirteen he was employed by Brown & Company, of West Newton, to drive a two-horse express between West Newton and Boston, and remained with them a year. Soon after he went to Lowell to work for his brother Horace R. in the machine shop, and at the age of fifteen he owned a complete set of tools and had a force of men working under him. He remained in Lowell about four years, and then worked in Philadelphia until 1862. At that time he went to Springfield, Massachusetts, to take charge of the pipe-works in the water-shops of the National armory, holding that position for four years. About this time he became superintendent of the newly organized New England Portable Gas Works Company of Springfield, for the manufacture of portable gas machines. A year later, finding their machinery impracticable, they re-organized as the Springfield Gas Machine Company, in July, 1867, under patents planned by Mr. Barker, for machines of a different style. He was fortunate in getting his patents granted without delay, and the company was organized with a capital of $125,000, Mr. Barker's patents being valued at $110,000. This company continued in active business until two years later, when the firm of Gilbert, Barker & Company bought out the business of the Springfield Gas Machine Company. In 1869 Mr. Barker left the company and went to New York, where in partnership with C. N. Gilbert he opened a store, chiefly for the sale of the Springfield Gas Company's goods. In September of that year Gilbert, Barker & Company bought the plant at Springfield, Horace R. Barker, of Lowell, and W. S. Gilbert, of Cohoes, being added to the firm. In 1870 the firm was incorporated as the Gilbert & Barker

Manufacturing Company, Mr. Barker being treasurer and manager. In 1884 Mr. Gilbert retired from the business and Mr. Barker became president. He has held between fifty and sixty patents, all marking important eras in the development of the business, which has led to an enormous trade, amounting to half a million dollars yearly. The company manufactures machinery which converts crude petroleum, as well as distillants, into gaseous form, extensively used for heating and lighting. The business has done so much towards revolutionizing the fuel and lighting industries of New England that many enterprises remain in the east which would otherwise have removed west where cheaper fuel could be obtained. Mr. Barker is a Republican in politics. He is a member of Hampden Lodge of Free Masons of Springfield; of the Royal Arch Chapter; of Springfield Council; of Springfield Commandery, Knights Templar, and up to and including the thirty-third degree; member of Melha Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles Mystic Shrine, and of the Hampden Lodge of Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He was one of the charter members of the Rod and Gun Club, now merged into the Winthrop Club. He at one time belonged to the Amabelish Fish and Game Club, limited to thirty-five members, which leased from the Canadian government a tract of land on the Amabelish river and lake where the club house was built on an island. He is also a member of the Masonic Club and the Westminster Club on Bay street, Home Market Club of Boston, and is one of its vice-presidents; this club was incorporated August 7, 1888. He and his family attend Hope Church. He married (first) in Lowell, March, 1858, Laura B. Pierce, born April, 1840, died May, 1884, daughter of George Pierce, a jeweler, of Lowell. He married (second) November 26, 1888, her sister, Jennie F. Pierce. Children of first wife: 1. Frederick Francis, born June 17, 1859; accidentally drowned at the age of seven. 2. Amelia Maria, April 27, 1865; married Wheeler H. Hall (see Hall family). 3. John Francis, October 18, 1879. Children of second wife: 4. Horace Richard, March 9, 1890. 5. Laura Francis, September 29, 1896.

SPELMAN The Spelman family is one of the oldest in England. It was doubtless a descriptive or nickname originally, meaning a man of learning or one who worked spells or charms. The lineage is traced to Sir William Spelman, knight, of Brokenhurst, Hants, whose lands were granted for knightly service in 1156. He died in 1231. The coat-of-arms of the Essex county family is described: Sable two bars argent in chief as many mullets or. The Spelman of county Kent bear: Sable a plate between two flanches argent. Henry Spelman, whose father was Sir Henry Spelman, a direct descendant of this Sir William, wrote "Relation of Virginia," in 1609, edited and published in 1872, by J. F. Hummewell. The Spelman pedigree is published in Blondfield's "Norfolk," second edition, vol. v., pp. 50-55. It is also to be found in a manuscript chart in the New England Historic Genealogical Library. Henry Spelman may have been brother of Thomas Spelman, who died in Virginia, in 1627, leaving a son Francis, "lately of County Cornwall, England." Thomas Spelman came in 1616, aged sixteen, to Virginia, and lived in Kecoughton, in Elizabeth City, now Hampton, and another of the same name came in 1623, aged twenty-eight, and located at James City.

(I) Richard Spelman, immigrant ancestor of the Connecticut family, may have been related closely to the Virginia families. He was born in Danbury, county Essex, England, in 1665, and came from Chelmsford, England, in 1700. He settled at Middletown, Connecticut, where he died April 21, 1750, aged eighty-five years. His tombstone stands in the Farm Hill burying ground, Middletown. The Middletown records give the name of the children of Richard and wife Alice, and state that they were born between 1701 and 1716-17. He was accompanied to this country by Alice (or Alley) French, his betrothed, born in Wales, in 1674. They were married about 1701, and lived in Durham, Connecticut. He was one of the founders of the Book Company, supposed to be the first circulating library of the colony, October 30, 1733, continued to 1856. Children: 1. Mary, married William Lucas; children: Richard and William. 2. Daniel, died 1733; children: Thomson and Daniel. 3. Richard, married Margery Gillett; children: Amy, Phineas, Amy and Huldah. 4. With his family and widow mother, Alley, he moved to Granville, Massachusetts, about 1745, and his mother died there in 1767, nearly a hundred years old, the earliest born of those buried in the old burying ground at Granville. He and his wife joined the church in Granville in 1756. Many of the settlers there were from Durham, which was incorporated in 1756. He married, March 28, 1733, Sarah Hickox, born in Durham, April 14, 1710. of this branch. He was educated in the public schools, and worked at farming in his boyhood. At the age of twenty-one he removed to South Wilbraham, Massachusetts, where he embarked in business as a general merchant and continued with marked success for fifty years. He was honored with many offices of trust and responsibility by his fellow-citizens. D. Beach, of Springfield, Massachusetts, and was admitted to the Hampden county bar in 1868. He began to practice in Springfield with Hon. Charles A. Winchester. He was appointed the first clerk of the police court of Springfield, and filled that office for thirteen years. In the meantime he entered partnership with Hon. Elisha B. Maynard, and continued in this relation until his partner was appointed to the bench. Since then he has practiced alone. His office is in the theatre building, Elm street. He was elected to the general court in 1887 on the Democratic ticket, from a strong Republican district, and served on the judiciary committee of the house. Malley. 2. Bessie, born October 6, 1880; married Edward M. West, a real estate dealer, of White Plains, New York.

The surname Carleton is derived, according to some authorities in England, from the place name. Carleton is from the Saxon word ceorl (husbandman), and ton or town. The English family traces the pedigree to Baldwin de Carleton, of Carleton, near Penrith, Cumberland, in 1066. The Carleton coat-of-arms: Argent a bend sable three mascles of the field. Crest: Out of a ducal coronet or a unicorn's head sable, the horn twisted of the first and second. Motto: "Non ad perniciem." Following is the pedigree:

He was given that title of "Mr.," reserved for ministers and persons of high social or official standing. (VI) Edward, son of Dudley Carleton, was born in Bradford, July 2, 1762. He and his brother Moses and perhaps others of this family went to Maine about the time of the close of the revolution. The federal census of 1790 shows that Edward and Moses were living at Bluehill, Hancock county. Edward had three females in his family; Moses had three sons under sixteen and two females. Edward and Woodman Carleton were living at Fryeburg, Maine.

(VII) Deacon Edward (2), doubtless son of Edward (1) Carleton, was born in 1799. He settled about 1823 in Waterford, Maine, and the history of that town states that he came thither from Portland. But the records of Portland indicate that none of the name settled there. He may have lived there for a time. He married, in 1824, Achsah Mumroe. He was a cabinet maker by trade, a citizen of influence and standing, and for a time was postmaster. His home was on the flats at first, afterward west of the pond. Children, born at Waterford: 1. At the beginning of the civil war he was appointed surgeon of the Eighteenth Connecticut Regiment, and served for three years. He then went abroad, partly for study and partly for his health. He

Burke speaks of "the ancient and illustrious family of Stedmans known in England since 1191." A Scotch family of Stedmans is descended from Patricius Stedman, 1369. A once strong Welsh family of this name is said now to have no male representative. Of the Scotch family are several distinguished writers and soldiers. The first Stedman in New England was Isaac, who came in the "Elizabeth," in 1636, and settled in Scituate. From him is descended Edmund C. Stedman, the poet. John and Robert Stedman came over in 1638. Robert's descendants married into the Quincy and Ellery families, and William Stedman was a member of congress. The names of Robert and Thomas Stedman are found on Windsor (Connecticut) records, in 1647, and that of Thomas in New London, in 1649. From Thomas and Isaac are descended most of the Stedmans of New England.

(1) John Stedman was born in West Hartford, Connecticut, about 1739, and died at Hudson, New York, May 19, 1816. Nothing is known as to his parentage, though his grandson, Dr. J. H. Stedman, was quite positive that his father's name was John; but there is nothing in the church or town records to verify the statement. From facts gathered by Dr. Stedman and a narrative written by his son, Daniel B. Stedman (of this sketch) the following account of John Stedman is taken, the incidents having been in most cases handed down by Salmon, son of John Stedman, to his descendants.

In 1755, when about fifteen years of age, John Stedman was sent by his parents to some place near by on an errand, and was kidnapped with others by a press gang and taken abroad a British warship in New York. Nothing is known of his experiences nor of the lands he visited in the two years he was in the navy. One day the vessel again dropped anchor in the port of New York. Young John was no doubt heartily tired of sea service, and with the connivance of the ship's surgeon escaped in the following manner: An errand was invented upon which the boy was sent ashore one day toward evening, with a small jug to be filled with a specified brand of liquor. Once ashore he made no efforts to find the liquor, but soon found a sloop prepared to weigh anchor the next morning on her way up the Hudson. Secreting himself in this craft he left New York and was taken to the town of Hudson, where he went ashore and made his way to the house of his uncle, John Beecraft, who conducted a tavern there. From Hudson he later found his way (probably on foot) to the home of his parents in West Hartford. About a year later he enlisted as a soldier and went with the British army to Canada, where he took part in the campaigning which culminated the following year in the capture of Quebec and the capitulation of Montreal. Soon after the close of this war, John married and settled in Connecticut, on a place a little west of the present city of New Britain. In 1776 he enlisted as a private in the Continental army and was present at the battle of Long Island. In leaping a fence in that engagement a bullet cut the shoulder strap which held his knapsack, so that as he fell on one side of the fence it fell on the other. The battle of Trenton, the same season, was also one in which he took part. How many terms of enlistment John Stedman served is not known, but he was present at the battle of Saratoga in October, 1777, which resulted in the surrender of the British army under General Burgoyne; and during the following winter he endured the sufferings which fell to all those who passed that frightful season at Valley Forge. He was with the gallant force which under the lead of "Mad Anthony Wayne" stormed and captured Stony Point, July 16, 1779; he witnessed the execution of Major Andre, October 2, 1780; and was in the last important battle of the war, October 19, 1781, when Washington received the surrender of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown, Virginia. It was not till two years later that the British forces were withdrawn; and during that time John Stedman remained in the army. Thus it may be seen that he served through nearly the entire period of the struggle for independence. While John Stedman was in the army, his wife and little ones of necessity endured many hardships and privations. Evidence of this is found in the fact that in 1782 the town of Farmington voted pensions to three of her soldiers, of whom John Stedman was one, presumably by way of giving kindly assistance to the families of these absent soldiers without pauperizing them. It was not till 1818, two years after his death, that pensions were granted to revolutionary soldiers by the general government. After the close of hostilities John returned to his family and resumed his old occupation of weaving, which he had learned from his father. His wife was industrious and frugal, and together they managed to acquire and enjoy as many of the comforts of life as the average of their neighbors. In the early part of the nineteenth century some of their children and other relatives having "gone west" into New York state, they followed and settled in Durham, Green county, a few miles west of the Hudson river, on the northeastern slope of the Catskill mountains, where their son Salmon had already taken up his abode. Here the remaining years of their lives were spent in peace and quietness. It was a green old age, too, on John's part. He retained till late in life that vigor and suppleness which characterized his youth, as he showed on one occasion, the memory of which still remains. In the heat of a political argument his opponent called him an "old Hessian," in response to which John laid him sprawling with a blow of his fist. After the death of his wife, loneliness prompted John to revisit his old home in Farmington and see the children and friends he had left behind. To cover the one hundred miles of distance on foot, crossing the Hudson on the ice, and thence following substantially the road which he had taken some sixty years before, when a boy returning from his service in the navy, was no great feat for a man in those days, not even for a veteran of his years; and he went and made his visit (one of considerable length, no doubt), but on his return his physical powers failed. Arrived at the public house in Hudson, still kept by a descendant of his Uncle Beecraft, who in his youth had given him refuge, he was taken sick and died, May 19, 1816, at the age of seventy-six. John Stedman married, December 17, 1763, his cousin, Molly Hotchkiss, born July 21, 1747, daughter of Lodowick Hotchkiss, of Farmington. She died February 18, 1813, aged sixty-six. They were the parents of eight children: Trial, William, Polly, Timothy, John, Salmon, Amzi and Hannah.

(II) Salmon, fourth or fifth son of John and Mary (Hotchkiss) Stedman, was born in Farmington, Connecticut, March 21, 1779, and died March 21, 1861, on the eighty-second anniversary of his birth. He learned the trade of blacksmith of Josiah Hotchkiss, his uncle, and soon after his marriage he moved to Durham, New York. About 1840 he abandoned his trade and thenceforth resided with his son till his death. He married (first) December 22, 1803, his cousin, Lucina, daughter of Josiah Hotchkiss, of Plainville, Connecticut. She died May 16, 1823, aged thirty-eight. He married (second) July 19, 1824, Polly Finch, who died March 16, 1847.

(III) Dr. Josiah Hotchkiss, only child of Salmon and Lucina (Hotchkiss) Stedman, was born in Windham, New York, April 7, 1809, and died in Brattleboro, Vermont, August 29, 1894, aged eighty-five years. Graduating from Berkshire Medical College, Pittsfield, Massachusetts, in 1831, he began practice in his native town of Durham. He removed to Richford, New York, 1840; to Cortland, 1846; to Peruville, 1848; to Richford, 1850; to Woodbury, New Jersey, March, 1851; to Ashland, New York, September, 1851; to Cumington, Massachusetts, 1855; and to West Brattleboro, Vermont, in 1859. Over fifty years of his life were spent in relieving the ills of humanity.

He was one of the pioneer Abolitionists, and was associated with Gerritt Smith, Frederick Douglass, and other noted anti-slavery leaders in the work in New York state. From 1846 to 1848 he edited at Cortland, New York, the True American, an anti-slavery paper. He was a pioneer in temperance work, joining what was known as the Washingtonian movement when he was a young man. He often spoke at public meetings against slavery and intemperance, and in favor of health reform. After the enactment of the fugitive slave law he took an active part in the work of the "underground railroad," and assisted many a black man on his way to Canada and liberty. After the slaves were freed he delivered many courses of lectures in New York, Massachusetts, and elsewhere, on physiology and hygiene, enlightening the common people upon the laws of life and health. He had a distinctive personality which was wholesome and helpful, and commanded both respect and love. Unlike too many reformers, he never became a pessimist and a prophet of evil when his own views did not prevail, and he never impugned the motives of those who opposed his views. He had a cheerful courage, born of an inward principle, which never forsook him. His four-score years were filled with high aims and good deeds, and in a ripe old age the end came as quickly and painlessly as one might wish.

Josiah H. Stedman married, April 9, 1833, Elvira Strong, born in Windham, New York, February 10, 1810, died in West Brattleboro, Vermont, December 19, 1895, aged eighty-five. Her father, Jairus Strong, born May 4, 1774, died June 12, 1838. He resided in Ashland, then a part of Windham, New York. His wife, Doshia Bissel, was born April 26, 1777, and died June 1, 1865, aged eighty-eight. They had ten children: Austin, Olivia, Clarinda, Aurelia, Minerva and Maria (twins), Elvira, Daniel Bissel, Louisa and Elisha Pineo. Mrs. Stedman was in a gradual decline for some time preceding her death, due to weakness attendant upon her advanced years. In September, 1893, she sustained a fracture of the hip, and from that time she was an invalid and confined closely to her home. Some five or six years before her death she inherited from the estate of her nephew, Loring Robertson, of New York, a handsome sum of money which she used unselfishly for the benefit of her children. She also gave various sums for purposes of public beneficence. She left no will, but it was known to be her purpose to give sums of money to certain institutions, and these wishes her children carried out. They included two thousand dollars each to the Congregational Home Missionary Society, the American Board, the American Missionary Association, and the Brattleboro Home for the Aged and Disabled. It can be truly said that no woman ever came into the enjoyment of a fortune who showed more surely than did Mrs. Stedman by her use of her money that she counted herself a steward bidden to use her estate wisely for the happiness of her children and for the comfort of persons and institutions needing such help. Many gifts were made by her to deserving causes which never came to public attention and of which none but her own family and the recipients knew.

This name is of great antiquity and is Danish, signifying a home or dwelling. It belongs to the class called Hero Worshipers. The name is found in the Scot and bard songs, the first ballads on records, where it says "Bacca ruled the Bannings." This "Bacca" was no doubt the hero or ruler of the Banning Clan of Vikings. It is supposed that about the fourth or fifth century some of the Bannings migrated from their native place, now called Denmark, to what is now known as Holland. Here they must have lived for nearly a thousand years, before coming into prominence; at least no traces of the name have been found in history until about 1386, when "Gerrit Banning," a cloth merchant of Nienwendyk, who came from a hamlet named "Banningh" by the Stadt of De Venter, and finally located in Amsterdam, is mentioned as being the progenitor of the Banning families in Holland, who governed that country to a greater or less extent for nearly three hundred years. Rembrandt's famous painting, the "Night Watch," shows, as the central figure, Captain Franz Banning-Coq. Another famous painting by Van de Helst, entitled "Celebrating the Peace of Munster, or Conclusion of the 30 Years War," which hangs alongside of the "Night Watch," in the Royal Museum at Amsterdam, has for its central figure, Jacob Banning, the Standard Bearer. The Banning families in Holland were of the greatest prominence from 1386 until about 1655, when their influence began to decline. The Banning coat-of-arms may be seen on the ceiling of the throne room in the King's palace in Amsterdam to this day, as well as in church windows, on grave stones, and in many other places. In Belgium there have been a few Bannings. Among those was Emile Banning, for many years confidential legal adviser of the King, and originator of the organization of the Congo States. Kaiser Wilhelm decorated him with the cross of the "Order of the Red Eagle." At some unknown date, probably about 1500, some Bannings went to England and settled at what is now called Banningham in Norfolk. In England they became prominent in military and social life during the sixteenth century, taking an active part in the crusades to the Holy Land, for which a coat-of-arms was granted in London in 1588. Two Peerages also were created. There are certain characteristics of traits that have remained with the greater part of the Banning families throughout the many generations. Among these traits might be mentioned the following, determination and will power almost to the point of stubbornness; firm mouths; faithfulness to their friends and families, to the last, with the greatest opposition to their enemies but fair; clannish; with strong feeling for those of their friends in need; big hearted, and thoroughly dependable; hard workers, sticking to the finish; and in many cases the facial characteristics show a wonderful resemblance. In many cases the Bannings are dark complexioned. As a family they are healthy—probably from the hard active lives so many of them lived. The first of the name in this country was Jan Banning who was at New Amsterdam, Manhattan Island, now New York City, in 1662, and from documents relating to colonial history of New York it is concluded that Jan was one of Stuyvesant's forces of Dutchmen that overpowered the Swedes at New Amstel on the Delaware river which was that portion of Maryland now Delaware which is occupied by the present site of Wilmington and Newcastle. The Bannings of this country may be from Jan and of Dutch origin though they are generally supposed to have been English. There was an Edward Banning settled in Talbot county, Maryland, in 1678.

Among the distinguished Americans of this name we might mention Major General Henry B. Banning, of Ohio, who served through the Atlanta campaign with Sherman and was in command at Port Alexandria, Virginia. He served several years in congress and defeated both President Hayes and Judge Stanley Matthews. Others that might be named are Hon. Arba H. Banning, judge of probate of Deep River, Connecticut, for many years, who was succeeded by his son, Joseph B. The Bannings were active in making Kansas a free territory and were in the thick of the border troubles. It is said the first white child born in Kansas after it was organized as free territory was a Banning.

(I) John Banning came to America about 1695 and settled at New Shoreham, now Block Island, on the coast of Rhode Island, and finally made his permanent abode at Lyme, Connecticut. He was made a freeman of Providence plantations, May 5, 1696. An old wine cellar and other relics have been lately located. He married, June 11, 1701, in Lyme, Connecticut, Abigail Niles. (IV) Joseph, third son of John (3) Banning, was born in Lyme, Connecticut; died in Haddam, Connecticut. He married Susanna, daughter of Jabez and Hannah (Brainard) Warner, of East Haddam. Her ancestor on her mother's side was Daniel Brainard, who was brought to this country when eight years old and lived in Hartford, Connecticut. He became a very prosperous, influential and respectable man, a justice of the peace and deacon in the church. He was a large landholder and owned what is now the present village of Higganum. He is interred in the ancient burying ground a few rods east of the court house in Haddam. Susanna (Warner) Banning was born April 9, 1753, died April 3, 1859. Joseph Banning was a large property owner, and tilled the largest and best farms in his vicinity. He was probably buried in the church cemetery there. Children: Marvin, Bondo D., Brainard, Philemon Fuller, Lucinda, Captain Joseph, who run an ocean steamer and was engaged in the shipment of flour to England during the

He settled at East Hampton, Connecticut, and worked in the Bell factory; he was a contractor for several years, a lumberman, owning and operating a saw mill, and also cultivated a large farm. He was a Whig in politics and cast his first vote for Zachary Taylor. When the Republican party came into existence he joined it. He was a strong and consistent advocate of temperance, and an active member of the East Hampton Methodist church. (VII) William Samuel, eldest son of William Warner and Mary Annette Hayden (Flood) Banning, was born in East Hampton, Connecticut, February 13, 1851. He obtained his educational advantages in the schools of his native town, in Middle Haddam and at Worcester Academy. In 1872 he went to Meriden, Connecticut, and entered the employ of Lyon & Billard, contractors, with which firm he remained three months. In 1872 he came to Springfield, Massachusetts, and engaged with L. O. Eaton, and after a few years embarked in business on his own account, beginning small, but his business has grown until he is one of the largest builders and contractors in Springfield, employing many men. In politics he is an ardent Republican, believing thoroughly in its principles and traditions. He belongs to the Hampden Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. His club affiliations has been with the St. James. He attends the Hope Congregational church. Mr. Banning is fond of a good horse and has owned and driven some fine steppers. He is one of the most genial men to meet, affable and courteous. He is a close and enthusiastic student of genealogy and has dug out a large amount of data concerning the Banning and allied families. He lives in a fine house in the select quarter of Springfield. He married Ella Evelyn, daughter of William Andrus and Sarah (Ferry) King. Mr. Buxton is a graduate of the International Training School, of Springfield, and is now athletic instructor in the Young Men's Christian Association, of Lynn.

The name Tuttle is derived from Tothill, a place name common in England. The Devon branch of the family in England has been prominent for many generations. The first of this family known is William Totyl, who lived in 1591, in Devonshire, and was bailiff, 1528, 1548; high sheriff in 1549; lord mayor of Exeter, 1552. His arms were: A lion passant, sable. Branches of the Tuttle family in other parts of England, Ireland and Wales, bore coats-of-arms which were somewhat varied, but all bore a lion on the shield, indicating their common origin. There are many circumstances which point to the Devon family as the ancestors of the American immigrants, John, of Ipswich; Richard, of Boston; William, of New Haven, and John, of Dover, New Hampshire.

(I) William Tuttle, immigrant ancestor of this branch of the family in America, came to New England in the ship "Planter," in April, 1635. He was called a husbandman and merchant on the records, and with him came his wife Elizabeth, aged twenty-three, and children John, aged three and one half; Ann, aged two and one half, and Thomas, aged three months. He was twenty-six years old at the time. His wife Elizabeth was admitted to the church in Boston, July 14, 1636. In 1635 he was given permission to build a windmill at Charlestown. He became a proprietor of Boston in 1636. His wife was dismissed to the Ipswich church September 8, 1639, and in 1641 he owned a home lot in New Haven, Connecticut, which he bought of Edward Hopkins. This lot was on the square bounded by Grove, State, Elm and Church streets, and was one of eight allotments into which the square was divided. In 1656 he bought of Joshua Atwater his mansion house and barn and certain other lands, afterward the property of Mrs. Hester Coster, who bequeathed it to the church. The church sold it in 1717 to Yale College, and it is now a part of the college grounds, formerly enclosed by the historic "fence." Mr. Tuttle was one of the first owners of East Haven, and surveyed the road from the ferry at Red Rock to Stony river. In 1659 he bought land at North Haven, and in 1661 a dwelling house and home lot of John Punderson, which he gave to his son, John Tuttle. He was assigned one of the best seats in the meeting house, which showed his high standing in the community. He was one of the petitioners for permission to continue their settlement in Delaware unmolested. This project failed, however, and he remained in New Haven, where he was a farmer. He served as fence viewer, and in 1646 did garrison duty. He was often on committees to settle boundary lines, and on the jury. In 1667 he was constable. Something of his character is shown that in court, when a young girl was found guilty of lying and stealing, Mr. Tuttle, being given liberty to speak, "with great affection," said that the young girl's sin was very great, "yet he did much pity her, and he hoped the court would deal leniently with her and out her in some pious family where she could enjoy the means of Grace for her soul's good." The court, in consideration of his appeal, said that her punishment should be as light as comportment with a proper sense of the heinousness of her sin, and for her soul's good she was sentenced "to be publicly and severely whipped, tomorrow after lecture." William Tuttle died in June, 1673, and his widow died December 30, 1684, aged seventy-two years, at the home of her son Nathaniel. Children: 1. John, born 1631. 2. Hannah, 1632-3. 3. Thomas, 1634-5. Born in Charlestown, Massachusetts: 4. Jonathan, baptized July 8, 1637; mentioned below. 5. David, baptized April 7, 1639; settled in Wallingford, Connecticut. 6. Joseph, baptized in New Haven, November 22, 1640. 7. Sarah, baptized April, 1642. 8. Elizabeth, baptized November 9, 1645. 9. Simon, baptized March 28, 1647. 10. Benjamin, baptized October 29, 1648; died unmarried, June 13, 1677. 11. Mercy, born April 27, 1650. 12. Nathaniel, baptized February 29, 1652.

(II) Jonathan, son of William Tuttle, was baptized at Charlestown, Massachusetts, July 8, 1637, and died in 1705. He settled in North Haven, Connecticut, about 1670. He built a bridge over the Quinnepiac river which was long known as Tuttle's bridge, and was allowed by the court to collect toll and to entertain travellers at a moderate compensation. He married Rebecca Bell, born August, 1643, died May 2, 1670, daughter of Lieutenant Francis and Rebecca Bell, of Stamford. Children: 1. Rebecca, born September 10, 1664. 2. Mary, February 7, 1666. 3. Jonathan, April 6, 1669. 4. Simon, March 11, 1671. 5. William, May 25, 1673; mentioned below. 6. Nathaniel, February 25, 1676.

(III) William, son of Jonathan Tuttle, was born May 25, 1673, and died in 1727. About 1695 he received from his father forty acres of land. His will was proved November 6, 1727. He married Mary Abernatha, born March 27, 1679-80, sister of his brother Simon's wife. Children: 1. Aaron, born November 25, 1698. 2. Moses. 3. Mary, August, 1702. 4. Ezekiel, married, April 21, 1729, Susanna Merriman. 5. Abel, mentioned below. 6. Susanna, November 10, 1708. 7. Lydia, February 22, 1710-11. 8. Jemima, February 13, 1712-3. 9. Hannah, November 10, 1715. 10. William, August 1, 1718. 11. Daniel, April 30, 1722.

(IV) Abel, son of William Tuttle, was born about 1705. He lived at New Haven, Connecticut, or vicinity.

(V) Abel (2), son or nephew of Abel (1) Tuttle, was a soldier in the revolution, from New Haven, Connecticut, enlisting for three years from August 1, 1777. After the revolution he removed to the town of Westfield, Massachusetts, the part which is now the village of Russell, becoming one of the first settlers. Tertius Tuttle, a relative, lived at West Springfield. In 1790, Abel Tuttle, of Westfield, had three sons under sixteen and one female in his family. Caleb Tuttle, a relative, also lived in West Springfield; supposed to have married a Miss Bishop.

(VI) Abel (3), son of Abel (2) Tuttle, lived at Westfield. He married Hannah Gowdy.

(VII) Roderick Crosby, son of Abel (3) Tuttle, was born in 1818, and died in 1864. He married Nancy Cole Underwood, born 1822, died 1886, daughter of William Givens Underwood, of Pomfret. They resided at Chicopee, Massachusetts. Children: 1. Frank E., see forward. 2. Harry L., died in infancy. 3. Alice C., died in infancy.

(VIII) Frank Emmet, son of Roderick Crosby Tuttle, was born in Chicopee, November 18, 1845. He attended the public schools of that town. He removed with the family in Springfield in 1859. In 1860 he became book-keeper for the firm of E. B. Haskell & Son, and in the following year, during the summer of 1861, resigned to accept the position of book-keeper for Howard & Brothers, dealers in railroad supplies, in the office at Springfield, continuing with this concern for the next eleven years. He then engaged in business in partnership with John Olmstead, dealing in cotton waste, with their headquarters in Springfield. In 1887 he moved his business to Chicopee, where he has manufactured cotton waste into felt mattresses, carpet linings, floor mops, cotton-down comforters, Chicopee hanging cots, and a great variety of useful articles. The manufacturing branch of the business has been under the supervision of Mr. Tuttle. He installed the plant, invented various devices, and adapted cotton waste to a number of uses. The firm bought a tract of twenty acres of land in Chicopee, and this property has been developed as the business of the firm extended. Mr. Tuttle originated the idea of the Home Club in Chicopee, known as the Veranus Club, erected the club house, and organized the club, which was very successful for a time. The present Veranus Casino is the building. He is a member of the Winthrop Club, of Springfield, and of the Springfield Country Club. In politics he is a Republican, but he has never sought public office. In religion he is a Unitarian. In company with James L. Humphrey he purchased fifty acres on Springfield street, and laid out the beautiful suburb of Veranus, where they have erected a large number of comfortable and modern houses, most of which they hold for rental. Having a natural bent toward architecture, Mr. Tuttle designed most of the buildings they have had erected in this suburb, as well as the Casino.

He married, October 1, 1876, Mary Caroline Stearns, born December, 1856, daughter of George M. Stearns. She died in 1883, and he married (second) November 25, 1885, Sarah Florence Knapp, born March 18, 1860, daughter of George H. and Mary B. (Cooley) Knapp. Children of first wife: Emily Stearns, born July 19, 1878; George Stearns, died in infancy.

This surname is a very ancient BALLARD one in England, and it took root in America with the colonization of New England. Numerically speaking, it has long been a prominent name in Worcestershire, and although the records state that the immigrant ancestor of those of its bearers about to be mentioned came from Wales, it is impossible to determine whether, or not, he belonged to a family of Welsh origin.

(1) William Ballard, born in 1603, and said to have come from Wales, arrived from England in the "James," in 1635. He was one of the earliest settlers in Andover, Massachusetts, where he was admitted a freeman May 2, 1638, and was a member of the quarterly court at Salem the same year. He died in Andover, July 10, 1689. The christian name of his first wife, who was born in England, in 1609, and accompanied him to America, was Elizabeth, and that of his second wife was Grace. The latter died in Andover, April 27, 1694. He had sons Joseph, John and William; a daughter Sarah, who married, February 24, 1670, Henry Holt; perhaps other children. (N. B. That part of Andover known as Ballardvale, was named for this family).

(II) Joseph, son of William Ballard, resided in Andover, and died there in 1721. On February 28, 1666, he married Elizabeth Phillips, who died July 27, 1692, and November 15 of the same year he married (second) Mrs. Rebecca Horne. She died in 1740. The only one of his children mentioned in the record at hand is Joseph, but he doubtless had others.

(III) Joseph (2), son of Joseph (1) Ballard, was born in Andover, in 1697, and died there in 1732. In 1698 he married Rebecca Johnson.

(IV) Josiah, son of Joseph (2) Ballard, was born in Andover, in 1702, and died there in 1780. He married Mary Chandler, in 1721; they had William, Josiah and probably others.

(V) Josiah (2), son of Josiah (1) Ballard, was born in Andover, in 1721. He married Sarah Carter, in 1744, and in 1746 he removed to Lancaster, Massachusetts. His death occurred about the year 1780. He was active in religious work, and a deacon.

(VI) Captain William (2), son of Josiah (2) Ballard, was born in Lancaster, March 23, 1764. He settled at Charlemont, Massachusetts, where he followed the occupation of a builder, and he died in that town May 25, 1842. He was a captain in the state militia. March 9, 1787, he married Elizabeth Whitney, born February 14, 1760, daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Wyman) Whitney. She died December 7, 1857.

(VII) John, son of Captain William (2) Ballard, was born in Charlemont, October 1, 1790. In 1830 he settled in Athens, Ohio, where he became a successful merchant and manufacturer; was a leading spirit in all of the important local enterprises, and for several years was president of the Athens branch of the State Bank. He died August 23, 1880. He married (first) in 1816, Pamela Bennett, born April 15, 1793, died in October, 1858, daughter of Joseph Bennett, of Lexington, and died at the age of sixty-four years, in 1816.

(VIII) Rev. Addison Ballard, D. D., son of John Ballard, was born in Framington, Massachusetts, October 18, 1822. He took his bachelor's degree in 1842 at Williams College, which subsequently made him a Master of Arts and a Doctor of Divinity, and entering the Congregational ministry he held pastorates in Williamstown, Massachusetts, and Detroit, Michigan. He is far more widely known, however, as an educator and author. He held the professorship of Latin at the Ohio University, and that of rhetoric at Williams College; occupied the chair of astronomy, mathematics and natural philosophy at Marietta College; was a professor of Greek and Latin at Lafayette College, Easton, Pennsylvania, from 1874 to 1877, and in the latter year was made professor of moral philosophy and rhetoric at that seat of learning, and taught there until 1893. On January 1, 1894, he entered upon a professorship of logic in the New York University, which he held until June, 1904. One of the principal products of his pen is "Arrows; or The True Aim in Study and Teaching."

August 7, 1851, he married Julia Perkins Pratt, born in Athens, March 27, 1828, daughter of Captain David Pratt. She was a descendant in the seventh generation of John Pratt, first of the name in America, who immigrated from England in 1633, locating first in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and subsequently removing to Hartford, Connecticut, where he became a very prominent man, serving as a deputy to the general court and as a magistrate. From John (1) the line of descent is through John (2), who died in Hartford, 1687; Sergeant Joseph (3), born 1671; Lieutenant Daniel (4), born 1710, died 1795; John (5), born 1740, died 1817; Captain David Pratt (6), was born in Colchester, Connecticut, March 1, 1780, and died in Athens, Ohio, July 6, 1861. Julia Perkins (Pratt) Ballard was also a direct descendant of Governor William Bradford, of the Plymouth Colony, and of John Perkins, who was born in Newent, England, in 1590, and arrived at Boston in the ship "Lion," in 1631. Mrs. Ballard is widely and favorably known as the author of "Building Stones," "Seven Years from To-night," "Grandmother's Story," "Hole in the Bag" and "Among the Moths and Butterflies." Professor and Mrs. Ballard were the parents of three children.

(IX) Harlan Hoge Ballard, A. M., son of Rev. Addison Ballard, was born in Athens, Ohio, May 26, 1853. He was graduated from Williams College with the class of 1874, receiving the degree of Master of Arts in course, and shortly after leaving college he engaged in educational work. For six years he was principal of the high school in Lenox, Massachusetts, was principal of the Lenox Academy for the same length of time, and while residing in that town he founded the Agassiz Association. In 1887 he was chosen librarian of the Berkshire Athenaeum, and the following year became secretary of the Berkshire Historical and Scientific Society of Pittsfield, in which capacity he is still serving. In addition to the above he is curator of the New Museum of Natural History and Art, presented to the city of Pittsfield by Zenas Crane, Esq., of Dalton, the brother of United States Senator Hon. Winthrop Murray Crane. He was for several years the editor of "Swiss Cross," and has devoted considerable time to other important literary work. He is author of a translation of Virgil's "Aeneid," into English hexameter; "The World of Matter;" "Open Sesame;" "Three Kingdoms," and joint author of Barnes's Readers. In Masonry he is well advanced, being a member of Berkshire Commandery, Knights Templar, and a thirty-second degree Mason, Massachusetts Consistory. He is a member of the Park Club, Pittsfield. As chairman of the school board and as curator of the Museum of National History and Art he has labored diligently and effectively in forwarding the interests of public education, and his efforts are heartily appreciated. Politically he acts with the Republican party.

On August 30, 1879, Mr. Ballard married Lucy Bishop Pike, of Lenox, daughter of John and Lucy (Bishop) Pike. Her father was born in Newburyport, Massachusetts, son of Nicholas Pike, and a descendant of an early settler in this state. Nicholas Pike was for many years master of the Newburyport grammar school, served as town clerk for some time, as surveyor from 1776 to 1802, and was the author of an arithmetic which was in general use in the public schools of his day. His work as a mathematician was highly commended by General Washington in a personal letter. He died in Newburyport, December 9, 1819, aged seventy-six years. On the maternal side she was a granddaughter of Judge Henry Walker Bishop, of Lenox, and great-granddaughter of Hon. Nathaniel Bishop, of Richmond, Massachusetts. Mr. and Mrs. Ballard have three children: 1. Harlan Hoge, Jr. 2. Elizabeth Bishop. 3. Lucy Bishop.

Talbot is an ancient English surname. Walter Talbot and Hugh Colme, of Devonshire, England, were among the original settlers in Ulster province, Ireland, before 1630. They had fifteen hundred acres of land in the precinct of Tullaghah, county Cavan. According to the official survey by Nicholas Pynnar, in 1619, Captain Hugh Colme and Walter Talbott had built a strong "bawn" surrounding a stone castle on this grant of land. Some of the American families doubtless descend from this Walter, who seems to be progenitor of the Scotch-Irish (so-called), though his ancestry was undoubtedly English. About a third of the Ulster Protestant settlers were from England. Three of this surname came to Massachusetts before 1650. Moses Talbot, of Plymouth, was one of the crew of John Howland, at Kennebec river, in April, 1634, and was shot by Hocking. Peter Talbot also settled at Plymouth. By some genealogists he is believed to be identical with Peter Talbot, mentioned below. He was more likely the father, though the tradition does not harmonize with this theory. Peter, of Plymouth, was in the employ of Edward Doty, and had a claim on land for his service. The records show a deed of his claim August 22, 1636, and nothing more is known of him. Ralph Talbot was in Salem in 1643, probably a temporary resident. William Talbot, a sailmaker, settled in Boston about 1650, and had daughters Judith and Mary, and son Joseph, born between 1652 and 1657. James Talbot, who lived for a time in Boston, may have been brother of William. A Jared Talbot married, April 1, 1664, at Taunton, Sarah Andrews.

(1) Peter Talbot, immigrant ancestor, according to the family history preserved by Joel Talbot, son of Ebenezer, who was born in 1723, grandson of Peter, and related in the New England Genealogical Register of 1855. He was born in Lancashire, England, and was sent to a boarding school in Edinburgh, Scotland, where he was impressed with some fellow students by a press-gang and taken on a British man-of-war bound for the American coast. When the vessel was off Rhode Island he deserted alone, against the advice of his companions, and swam ashore. He passed so near the ship's watch in a rowboat that the bundle of clothes that he carried on his head was observed, and he narrowly avoided capture. When he reached the shore he hid under a haystack, and helped himself next morning to cow's milk, setting out at night to the northward, in the hope of reaching Dorchester, where he doubtless had friends. Hiding by day and nearly without food, he walked at night for the next three days. At nightfall on the third day he came upon a log house in which an aged woman lived alone, and she sheltered and fed him, and directed him on his way to Dorchester, whither he arrived two days later. He worked hard and saved from wages in order to return to his home in England. Finally he engaged his passage on a vessel and went abroad, but strong head winds delayed the sailing and he went ashore for the night. At daybreak he found that the vessel sailed in the night, taking his belongings with her and leaving him penniless again. He set out again to save his passage money, but before carrying out his purpose he married. He intended to take his wife with him to England, engaged their passage, and again the vessel sailed while he was ashore in the night. But this vessel was lost at sea and he accepted his good fortune in escaping death as providential, and settled permanently in this country. He removed from Dorchester to Chelmsford, where his children were probably born. During the absence of himself and eldest son from home, the Indians killed an infant child and carried away his wife, but the Indians were pursued and she was restored to her home. The children Sarah and George and probably Elizabeth were out doors, and when the Indians came escaped capture or death by hiding in a ledge. The eldest son was killed by the Indians afterward. Talbot returned to his old home in Dorchester and died there about 1704. His widow lived with her son George in that part of Dorchester now Stoughton, probably the original homestead of Peter Talbot, the immigrant. He married, at Dorchester, January 23, 1677-8, Mary Waddell, of Dorchester, Worshipful Daniel Guggins officiating. Children: 1. George, mentioned below. 2. Elizabeth, married, November 27, 1713, Eleazer Puffer. 3. Sarah.

(II) George, son of Peter Talbot, was born about 1680, and died about 1760. He was the only surviving son. He was a Puritan of "consistent piety and goodness." At the age of twelve he began to ask the blessing for the family when his father was absent. He was an earnest and useful citizen. His mother spent her last years in his family and he doubtless had the homestead at Dorchester. Children, born at Dorchester: 1. Mary, March 24, 1708. 2. Daniel, March 7, 1709-10. 3. Hannah, May 1, 1712. 4. Captain George, October 24, 1714; married, July 27, 1737, Elizabeth Withington. 5. Peter, February 27, 1717-8; mentioned below. 6. Sarah, August 23, 1719. 7. chester, and was a leading figure in the military affairs of the town. When the Lexington alarm came he marched at the head of his company, April 19, 1775, in the regiment of Colonel Lemuel Robinson. He married (first) December 5, 1744, Abigail Wheeler, of Stoughton. She died November 3, 1750, and he married (second) January 8, 1752, Mary Bailey, at Stoughton. (V) Joel, son of Captain Samuel Talbot, was born at Stoughton, March 4, 1790, and died there in 1859. He was educated in the public schools of his native town, and in his boyhood worked at farming. He learned the trade of carpenter, and was a contractor and builder for many years. He acquired a knowledge of land surveying and conveyancing. He was also an architect of considerable reputation. He held many places of public and private trust, and was much employed in settling estates and other probate business. He was for many years a member of the school committee of Stoughton. In religion he was a

Universalist. He was a member of Rising Star Lodge of Free Masons. He married Millie Gay Capen, born about 1797, died at Stoughton in 1876. Children: 1. Lucy, married Alanson Luther Porter. 2. (VI) George, son of Joel Talbot, was born at Stoughton, January 14, 1824, and died there July 8, 1878. He received his education in the public schools of Stoughton, and learned civil engineering and surveying of his father. He became a general contractor, and had many large and important contracts for the construction of railroads, bridges, etc. Among the contracts he carried out were a section of the Old Colony Railroad and a large number of highway bridges in different parts of Massachusetts. He was prominent in public life. For a long time he was a member of the school committee of Stoughton, and for several terms an active and efficient county commissioner of Norfolk county. He also held the office of selectman of Stoughton, and other positions of trust and responsibility. He led an extremely useful and busy life. He administered many important estates in his later years. He was a Universalist in his younger days, but later a Spiritualist. Isaac Hart, immigrant ancestor,

HART was probably born in Scratby, England, about 1614. He embarked at Yarmouth, England, April 11, 1636, in the ship "Rose," Captain Anderson, master. He came as tutor in the family of Richard Carver, of Scratby, county Norfolk. He settled in Watertown, and about 1642 bought an acre of land and built a house. He sold this February 3, 1656, and October 4 following bought a farm of two hundred and seventy acres in Reading, in what is now North Lynnfield. In 1673 he bought five hundred acres in what is now Lynnfield, near North Reading, on which he resided until his death, February 10, 1699. He was in King Philip's war, in Captain Gardner's company, February 29 to November, 1675-6. His will was dated February 6, 1699, and proved February 19, 1699-1700. He married, about 1650, Elizabeth, daughter of Mrs. Anne Hutchins. Elizabeth was charged with witchcraft, and sent to Boston, May 18, 1692, where she was imprisoned until December, nearly seven months. Her son Thomas petitioned for her release, which was finally granted. The testimony against her was as follows: "The deposition of Mary Wolcott, who testified and saith that on the 13th of May, 1692, I saw the apparition of Goody Hart, who hurt me much by pinching and choking of me and urged me grievously to set my hand to her book, and several times she has tormented me, ready to tear body to pieces." Samuel, born February 9, 1656; mentioned below. 6. Adam, born April 4, 1666.

(II) Captain Samuel, son of Isaac Hart, was born February 9, 1656, and resided on the homestead. From the age of sixteen to sixty he followed the sea, and became a captain. After 1716 he remained on his farm at Lynnfield. On one of his voyages he received from the Grand Turk a silver cup and other trinkets. The following traditional story of him is handed down in the family: He said, as he was lying awake one night in his cabin, a woman entered, having in one hand a lighted candle and in the other an hour-glass. He looked at the hour-glass and saw that the sands were almost run, and thought it meant he should die with the running of the last sands. But as the last sands were run, the woman turned the hour-glass and vanished. He then concluded that his life was half spent, and voted to himself the time, but would never tell his family when this occurred. He died December 30, 1730. He married Sarah Endicott, said to be a niece of Governor John Endicott. Children, born in Lynn, now Lynnfield, Massachusetts: 1. Elizabeth, November 16, 1686. 2. Thomas.

(VI) Daniel (2), son of Daniel (1) Hart, was born at Lynnfield, October 23, 1794, and died of consumption, May 31, 1855. He resided at North Reading, where he was a farmer. He received a common school education in his native town, and left home at the age of thirteen to begin his career in Boston. Since 1842 he has been a resident of that city. He was first a clerk in the store of Wheelock, Pratt & Company, dry goods dealers. After one and a half years with this firm he returned home and attended the Reading Academy for about six months, then entered the employ of C. B. Grinnell, in Hanover street, Boston, dealer in hats and furs, where he remained with Grinnell and other owners until January, 1850, when he became a clerk in the store of Philip A. Locke, dealer in hats and furs, and his diligence and ability won promotion from time to time. In 1855 he was admitted to partnership by his employers. The firm was Philip A. Locke & Co. Mr. Locke retired, and the firm was dissolved in 1861, when Mr. Hart organized the firm of Hart, Taylor & Company, dealers in hats, caps and furs. His partner was Frederick B. Taylor.

Thomas N. Wash

The business grew to large proportions and was eminently successful. In the course of time the firm became the largest in this line of business in New England. In 1878 Mr. Hart retired from the mercantile business with a substantial fortune. In 1880 he was elected president of the Mount Vernon National Bank of Boston.

Successful as he was in business and banking, Mr. Hart is best known to the public by his brilliant career in political life. He was elected to the common council of the city of Boston in 1879, and served in that body for three years with distinction. He was promoted to the board of aldermen in 1882 and served also as an alderman in 1885 and 1886. He was an active and influential Republican, though always inclined to independence in municipal affairs, eliminating politics as far as possible from public business. He was nominated by the Republican party for mayor on a non-partisan platform in 1886, but was defeated by Hugh O'Brien. Boston was then a very strong Democratic city. Mr. Hart ran against Mayor O'Brien in 1887, and materially reduced the majority of the Democratic candidate. In 1888 he was successful, defeating his former opponent at the polls and received the largest vote ever cast for a Republican for mayor of Boston. He was again elected in 1899 for two years, receiving the largest vote ever cast up to that time for mayor of Boston. His third election as mayor was a striking evidence of the public approval. He was an able and conscientious executive, and fairly and consistently carried out the policies of his platform, "to administer its affairs faithfully, honestly, according to law, without discrimination on account of creed or color, nativity or party." Mayor Hart receiving many convincing proofs of the esteem and confidence of his fellow-citizens, especially from those who respected the old-fashioned virtues of honesty and public economy and favored his policy of "pay-as-you-go" for cities as well as persons. He taught the policy of non-partisanship in municipal affairs effectively. He was appointed in 1891 postmaster of the city of Boston by President Harrison, and he filled the office with ability and efficiency until his successor was appointed by President Cleveland, June 30, 1893. He was well liked by Democrats as well as Republicans in the postmastership as well as the mayoralty. Since his retirement from public life, he has not ceased to take an interest in politics and to use his influence effectively in matters pertaining to the municipal welfare and progress. Few men have secured and held so fully and unreservedly the sincere regard of their fellow-citizens in commercial, financial, civil and religious life.

Mr. Hart is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, and for three years was a member of the Clearing House committee. He was for many years trustee of the Penny Savings Bank of Boston. He is a member of the Merchants and Algonquin Clubs of Boston. In religion he is a Unitarian. During the pastorate of Rev. Minot J. Savage, he was a member of the Church of the Unity and an officer of the society. For many years he has been a member of the Arlington Street Church. He is a life member of the American Unitarian Association, and was the treasurer. He is fond of out-door sports, and has been for many years a member of the Hull Yacht Club. He is interested in art and belongs to the Boston Art Club. His home is on Commonwealth avenue, Boston. He has a summer cottage at Swampscott, Massachusetts.

He married, April 30, 1850, Elizabeth Snow, born at Bowdoin, Maine, May 26, 1822, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Ridley) Snow. Mrs. Hart died November 16, 1906. Their only child, Abbie Snow, born September 22, 1851, married, June 4, 1885, Carl Wilhelm Ernst, A. M., born April 21, 1845, in Eddesse, Germany, son of Rev. Carl Ernst. Mr. Ernst is a writer and newspaper man of Boston.

(For first generation see Rowland Stebbins 1).

(11) John, son of Rowland STEBBINS. Stebbins, was born in England, in 1626, and died March 7, 1678, at Northampton, Massachusetts. He resided in Springfield, and in 1649 was granted a house lot next his father's land. In 1651 he is mentioned as being of Roxbury, Massachusetts, and the same year he bought a house in Springfield. He received other grants of land. He was selectman in 1655, and in 1656 settled in Northampton, and lived at the lower end of Pudding Lane, now Hawley street. He owned a saw mill, which was situated in Easthampton. He served as measurer of land, and was on committees to lay out highways; was on the jury in 1661. He signed the church covenant June 18, 1661, and was on the committee to build the meeting house. He contributed toward the support of Harvard College, and in 1675-78 served as selectman of Northampton. The manner of his death was unusual, and it was commonly supposed that he was killed by witches. He probably met his death in some accident in the saw mill of which he was part owner. It is said that "while sawing at his mill, the logs would roll over him, set in motion by witches, by which he was severely bruised." The inquest was held, and showed that more than half of the jurymen believed that his death was due to supernatural means. The first report said that there was a "warmth and heate in his Body yt dead persons are not usual to have;" and that there were "fower places upon his breast yt seemed to have been Pintched, though the doctor informed ym that in his life time there was a swelling between the Pintches." His neck was as flexible as that of a living person; upon his body were found "several hundred of spots," that looked as if they "had been shott with small shott," and when they were scraped there were holes under them. On the second examination, made soon after the first one, they found, "the body somewhat more cold yn before, his joynts more limber," and several bruises not previously discovered. A large number of women were summoned by Joseph Hawley to examine and touch him, to see if the witch could be found. Blood flowed when a certain woman touched him, but only one could see it, so nothing was done.

He married (first) March 14, 1646, at Springfield, Ann (Munson) Munden, died in 1656, widow of Abraham Munden; (second) December 17, 1657, at Northampton, Abigail, daughter of Robert and Anne Bartlett. The surname Handy is of ancient English origin, but the family has been comparatively small both in England and America. Richard Handy, immigrant ancestor of the American family, was doubtless born in England and was a seafaring man. Little is known of him, however. His descendents were numerous in Sandwich and other Cape Cod towns. Children, born in Sandwich: 1. Richard, May 21, 1672; mentioned below. 2. Jonathan, November 3, 1675. No other records of birth have been found, but the following were heads of families in Sandwich in 1730 and were probably his children: 3. Hannibal. 4. Isaac. 5. John. 6. Cornelius. 7. Zacheus. A prolific branch of the family settled in Rhode Island. James and Mary Handy, of Newport, Rhode Island, had a large family, 1746-66. Anthony, James, John, Samuel and Captain Charles Handy were soldiers in the revolution from Rhode Island. John Handy, Jr., of Sandwich, married, March 6, 1745, Kezia Eldred, of Falmonth.

(II) Richard (2), son of Richard (1) Handy, was born at Sandwich, May 21, 1672.

(III) John, son or nephew of Richard (2) Handy, was born about 1700.

(IV) John (2), son of John (1) Handy, married, March 6, 1745, Keziah Eldred, of Falmouth. Children: 1. John, mentioned below. 2. Levi. And others.

(V) Job, son or nephew of John (2) Handy, was born in Sandwich about 1750. He married Elizabeth ———, who died September 10, 1846, aged eighty-eight years, seven days. Her gravestone is standing near those of the family of her son Hatsel K., in the burial ground at Hyannis. He was a soldier in the revolution in Captain Ward Swift's company, Colonel Freeman's regiment, in 1778; also in Captain Elihu Gifford's company, of Sandwich, Colonel Turner's regiment in the Rhode Island campaign in 1781. He was also in the navy in 1776 on the brigantine "Rising Sun," commanded by Captain Richard Wheeler. He was a ship-builder and sea captain for many years. Among his children was Hatsel K., born 1789, mentioned below.

(VI) Hatsel K., son of Job Handy, was born in Sandwich in 1789, died at Hyannis, October 12, 1851. His gravestone in the family lot in Hyannis burial ground gives his age at death as sixty-two years, one month and seven days. Like his ancestors he followed the sea, and became a master mariner. He was also a ship-builder. He lived at Sandwich until about 1820, when he moved to Hyannis in the town of Barnstable, Massachusetts. He married (intention dated November 3, 1810) Sally Holmes. His widow Sally died February 1, 1860, aged sixty-eight years, five months. She is buried at his side in Hyannis. Her epitaph reads:

"Not for me should tears be given
Child of God and heir of Heaven;
For to give the sweet release Thine the Christian's death of peace."

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the Death of the Righteous."

Upon his gravestone is the inscription: "The memory of the Just is blessed. Their works do follow them."

Children, born at Sandwich: 1. Rhoda Meriah, August 30, 1811. 2. Sally Holmes, October 9, 1813. 3. Gustena, October 3, 1815. 4. Hatsel, January 6, 1817, died January 9, 1817. Children, born at Hyannis (Barnstable): 5. Hatsel, September 20, 1821, mentioned below. 6. Job W., November 30, 1823. 7.

Floretta, September 13, 1825. 8. Ellen A., January 25, 1828. 9. Benjamin F., October 31, 1829. 10. Isabella G., February 5, 1834.

(VII) Hatsel, son of Hatsel K. Handy, was born in Hyannis, September 20, 1821, died April 3, 1897. He was educated in the public schools and also followed the sea, after the custom of his neighbors and family. He was a master mariner for twenty-five years and one of the best known sea captains on Cape Cod. In later years he engaged in the retail grocery business at Springfield, Massachusetts, settling here in 1873. He married (intention dated December 7, 1844) Desire Bacon Lewis, born January 9, 1820, died June 14, 1899, daughter of Benjamin Franklin Lewis. Her father was school master at Centerville, Cape Cod. Children: 1. Hatsel K., born September 21, 1846, lost at sea October 14, 1865. 2. Howard B., August 3, 1848. 3. Benjamin F. 4. Herbert Lewis, January 13, 1856, mentioned below. 5. Milton. 6. Frederick, January 23, 1862, died October 15, 1862. 7. Floretta, September 15, 1863. 8. Winthrop, June 18, 1865, died October 7, 1865.

(VIII) Herbert Lewis, son of Hatsel Handy, was born in Hyannis, January 13, 1856. He attended school until he was sixteen years of age, when he went to Hartford, Connecticut, and worked for some time in a meat market. He went to Springfield and was employed by his brother in the same business. In the autumn of 1875 he followed his brother to California and when he reached San Francisco he found himself penniless. He obtained employment in a hotel sufficient to pay for his board and lodging, but the hotel keeper presented a bill, which neither of the brothers could pay, and at last their persuasions prevailed upon the proprietor and the bill was remitted. By this time the young man was very homesick, and anxious to return home, but he had no money. He sent a message to his father and received money enough for a first class ticket home. He bought, however, the cheapest ticket possible, and gave the surplus money to his brother. Upon arriving in Springfield he went to work for his father who was in the grocery business in Springfield and remained with him four years, then working a few months in a meat market. Borrowing the necessary money, he went into partnership with Mr. Cleland in the meat business, buying out his former employer, George W. Hollister. The business was a success and at the end of two years he sold out his interest to his partner for five hundred dollars.

He invested next in the sausage business, manufacturing Bologna sausages and selling them to jobbers. One day he made the acquaintance of Mr. Skilton, of the firm of Charles H. North & Company, who inquired if he could sell his provisions in that part of the country, which his former agents had failed to do. Mr. Skilton further asked Mr. Handy how much money he had. "I have none at all," he replied. "I like your frank way," said Mr. Skilton, and at once offered to sell Mr. Handy goods on credit. This was the beginning of a business connection which has been of equal benefit to both men, and has grown into one of the largest meat trades in the country. From 1884 to 1893 he dealt exclusively with North & Company. The place of business which in 1884 was at 15 Hampden street, was changed to a larger one before long; he moved to No. 27 on the same street. Again the business outgrew the quarters, and for a time he had to sell his meat from a car. In the spring of 1893 he purchased the block at 41, 43 and 45 Hampden street, which he remodeled into a beef and provision house and sausage factory. He has been unusually successful. Besides this establishment, he also conducts a beef house at Northampton, also one at Hartford, Massachusetts, and did have one at New Haven, which latter he has sold.

The business of Mr. Handy was incorporated in June, 1904, but he remains at the head of it, as president and manager. The concern has an extensive trade throughout New England and the eastern states as far south as Virginia. Mr. Handy is a member of the Nayasset Club. In politics he is a Republican. He is fond of fine horses and spends much of his leisure driving. His stables contain a number of fast horses of his own breeding, and he is accounted an excellent judge of horses.

He married, in Springfield, January 20, 1881, Henrietta Huck, born at Feeding Hills, daughter of Herman and Margaret Huck, of Springfield. Her father was a cigar manufacturer in Springfield. Children: 1. Meda Huck, born at Springfield, October 28, 1881, married Elisha Gage Scudder, Jr., of St. Louis, Missouri. 2. Herman, born at Springfield, January 10, 1888, educated in the public schools of his native city and at various private schools; now associated with his father. 3. Herbert Lewis, Jr., born June 2, 1889, educated in private and public schools in Springfield; now with the H. L. Handy Company, Springfield.

Alexander Hutchinson, HUTCHINSON immigrant ancestor of this branch of the family, was born in England, probably son of Alexander Hutchinson, who lived in the West Riding of Yorkshire. He attended the Episcopal schools of the parish and taught for a time. In early manhood he enlisted in the army, and held the rank of sergeant. His regiment was sent to Ireland to protect the King's judges there, and was stationed in Carrickfergus. While here he met Dorcas Pye, sister of the landlord of Pye Inn (called the "Head Inn"), situated at the corner of Purity row and High street, near the court house. She was daughter of William and Dorcas Pye, the former owners of the inn. Being a non-commissioned officer, he was not allowed to take a wife to military quarters, and he waited until his return home, when he soon found opportunity to claim his bride. About a year after their marriage, William Pye died, and Mrs. Hutchinson went to Ireland to look after her property at Carrickfergus. While there her first child was born. She returned to England later. Alexander Hutchinson fought in the battle of Waterloo, and after his discharge from the army was sent back to the quarters in Carrickfergus at his request, and he received a pension for the rest of his life, and died at the age of seventy-five. While in the service he learned the trade of shoemaker, and followed it afterwards until his death. His shop was near that of his son in later years. He was a quiet man of fine physique and military bearing, and was honorable in all his dealings. His faith was that of the Church of England, and he gave his allegiance always to the Crown. Children: 1. William, born April 16, 1805; mentioned below. 2. Mary Ann, died May, 1849; married Robert McMannus, a gardener at Carrickfergus; had James, William, George and Robert McMannus, born in May, 1849. 3. Elizabeth, died May, 1849; married Edward Hamilton, a shoemaker, and had Edward and Elizabeth Hamilton, and a son who died young.

(II) William, son of Alexander Hutchinson, was born in Carrickfergus, Ireland, April 16, 1805. He received the privileges offered in the English army while his father was serving the Crown, and later removed to Carrickfergus and attended the private school kept by William M. Larmour, a celebrated master of his day, and a strict disciplinarian. He studied navigation and later started to learn the trade of fine engraving on steel. This work not being congenial, he apprenticed himself to a Henry Bowen to learn to make shoes of a fine grade, the time of apprenticeship being seven years. He settled in Belfast, where he remained a year or two with his brother-in-law, Edward Hamilton, working at his trade. Returning to Carrickfergus about 1845, he established himself as a custom shoemaker, employing a cobbler and two journeymen. Much of the work from the Belfast factories was sent to him to finish. He was popular among his townsmen, and his shop was the meeting place for many of his friends. He exerted a large influence in the community. He continued in business until the time of his death, having a generous patronage and enjoying a fair degree of prosperity. He died April 16, 1849, after a very brief illness caused by exposure at a fire in the neighborhood. He was confined in the Episcopal church, and occupied a pew in the parish church with the Pys and McKies of his mother's family. He was a member and officer of the order of Loyal Orangemen. He was a good citizen, a sincere Christian, an able, conscientious upright man. He married, in 1841, Jane Robinson, born December, 1822, daughter of William and Annie (McLeod) Robinson, granddaughter of Roger and Jennie (White) Robinson. Her mother was daughter of John McLeod, and descended from the Harris clan of Scotch McLoeds of Harris Island. Children: 1. Annie Kezia, born April 13, 1842; married, February 2, 1878, Thomas Sheridan, of Lansingburg, New York, who was born June 11, 1838, died January 11, 1902, son of Philip and Mary (Seavy) Sheridan; child: Anna Kezia Sheridan, born February 13, 1884. 2. Joseph Thompson, born August 31, 1843; mentioned below. 3. Dorcas Pye, died aged seventeen. 4. Alexander. 5. John Robinson, killed at sea when one day out from China, by the falling of a block from the rigging.

(III) Joseph Thompson, son of William Hutchinson, was born August 31, 1843, in Carrickfergus, county Antrim, Ireland. Six years later his father died. From 1849 to 1853 he attended the common schools of his native town. He then entered a linen mill, where he worked for three years, earning two shillings a week during the first year. At the age of thirteen he ran away to sea and began the perilous life of a sailor, which lasted for about thirteen years. In those days the seafaring man suffered many hardships unknown to the sailor of to-day. The following brief sketch will give some idea of the voyages and experiences of his life at sea. He first bound himself out as an apprentice on the "Maria," of Dublin, Captain Armstrong, of Maryport, Cumberland, England. On the first night at sea, the "Maria" was wrecked off the coast of Ayr Harbor, Scotland. He was saved by some fishermen who found him on the rocks. After the vessel was repaired he sailed with her again, remaining in the "Maria" eleven months. He ran away from her and sailed about home for a while. He next shipped in the schooner "May," of Liverpool, and made a voyage to Montevideo and Buenos Ayres, South America, sailing up the Plata and Uruguay rivers as far as the port of Paysandu. At Paysandu he ran away from the schooner, but was caught and taken back to Liverpool in irons. After this voyage he shipped in the "Ranee," of Liverpool, for Singapore, Straits Settlements, back to London, and home again for a short visit. He later joined the "Digby," of Liverpool, bound to New Orleans, but she was lost on Coraledda reef, ninety miles south of Havana. The crew was transferred by a Spanish schooner to Havana. Here he joined the "Athens," of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, went to the Cuban ports of Cardenas Matanzas, taking on a cargo of sugar, and set out for London. The "Athens" was sunk in the harbor of Fayal, Azores Islands, but was raised and went on to London. He then joined the "Assay," of London, bound to the Persian gulf, with six hundred miles of telegraph cable aboard. After laying the first cable up the Persian gulf and into the Euphrates river, the return trip was made; a cargo was loaded at Bombay, and the "Assay" set out for Liverpool, but was lost on the Irish coast, in Rosca-berry Bay, inside Gally Head. All were saved by the breeches buoy except the captain, who tried to swim to the rocks but was dashed against them and killed. Joseph T. Hutchinson then went home, but soon sailed again on the "George Bell," of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, bound for Havana; a cargo of sugar was brought back to Bristol. The next voyage was to Quebec and back to Liverpool in the "Margaret." On July 27, 1865, he married Mary Davey, of Carrickfergus. For a short time after his marriage he sailed about home in the coasting trade. He then went to Miramichi, gulf of St. Lawrence, in the ship "Disraeli," and back to Belfast. A second voyage was then made to Quebec in the "Jean Lithgow." He returned to his home, and while in the coasting trade his son was born, December 12, 1866. Later he shipped in the "Andes" from Glasgow around Cape Horn to Valparaiso, South America, and from there to Iquique and Piscagua, northern coast of Chile, and back to New York. On November 28, 1868, he left Belfast in the "Cornwallis," of Windsor, Nova Scotia, and arrived in Boston, March 6, 1869, after a voyage of ninety-six days.

He then went to Franklin, Massachusetts, where an uncle lived, and there settled down for life. His wife reached Franklin, June 28, 1869, and together they began their first home. After four years, during which time he worked as a painter for Woodman Blake, he went into the painting business for himself. For thirty-five years he carried on the business successfully. At the end of that time he retired, and the business was taken up by his sons. Mr. Hutchinson invested largely in real estate, and has built many houses for investment, some of which formed the nucleus of the village known as Hutchinsonville. In politics he is a Republican, and for a time served on the police force of the town. He is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. In religion he is an earnest Methodist, having been a member of the church in Franklin for thirty-five years, and he has served in various offices of the church. He enjoys the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens.

He married, as aforesaid, July 27, 1865, Mary Davey, born at Carrickfergus, Ireland, March 15, 1844, daughter of John and Jane (Lindy) Davey, of that place; her father was a seafaring man. Children: 1. John Davey, born December 12, 1866, married (first) February 28, 1887, Jennie Everett Hood, who died March 17, 1890; married (second) February 3, 1892, Jessie Ann Ewen; children: i. This surname dates back to the first use of surnames, and is of ancient origin. It is of the same class as Thompson and Johnson, denoting relationship. Most of the Sampsons (or Samsons), as the name often appears in America, are descended from Henry and Abram Sampson, of Duxbury, who are supposed to have been brothers. Henry came in the "Mayflower," with the family of his uncle, Edward Tilley. He was made freeman January 5, 1835-36, and was a volunteer for the Pequot war, 1637. He resided in Duxbury. He married Ann Plummer, and he died December 24, 1684.

(I) Abram, probably brother of Henry Sampson, came some time after him, probably in 1629 or 1630. He settled in Duxbury, and was on the list of those able to bear arms in 1643. He was one of the original grantees of the town of Bridgewater, 1645, all of whom resided in Duxbury, but he did not remove there. He was surveyor of highways, 1648; constable, 1653; was admitted freeman, 1654. He died after 1686. He married a daughter of Lieutenant Samuel Nash, of Duxbury. Children: 1. Samuel, born about 1646; see forward. 2. George, about 1655; married Elizabeth ———. 3. Abraham, about 1655; married Sarah Standish. 4. Isaac, born 1660; settled in Plympton; married Lydia Standish. Probably other children.

(II) Samuel, son of Abram Sampson, was born in Duxbury, in 1640. He resided in Duxbury, and was killed in King Philip's war. His inventory was dated June 28, 1678. As "the children were small and the estate little," the court assigned the property, valued at a little more than twenty-seven pounds, to the widow, except one acre to be reserved for the sons. He married Esther ———, who married (second) John Soule, son of George Soule, who came in the "Mayflower." She died September 12, 1733, aged ninety-five years. Children of Samuel and Esther Sampson: 1. Samuel, born 1670; see forward. 2. Ichabod, about 1675; lived in Duxbury, 1710.

(III) Samuel (2), son of Samuel (1) Sampson, was born in 1670, and died in September, 1744. He settled in Middleborough, and was a member of the First Church. He was one of the first fifty purchasers, March, 1717, of the first parish burying ground. His will, dated August 31, 1744, proved September 20, 1744, bequeathed to children mentioned below, and to Ruth, daughter of his son Obadiah. He married Mercy, daughter of Obadiah Eddy, of Middleborough, granddaughter of Samuel Eddy. Children: 1. Obadiah, married Mary Soule. 2. Gershom, married Bethiah Clark. 3. Ichabod; see forward. 4. Esther, married Abraham Borden, of Middleborough, removed to Strafford, Connecticut. 5. Mary, married Isacher Fuller.

(V) Ichabod (2), son of Ichabod (1) Sampson, was born about 1750 in or near Plymouth. He was a soldier in the revolution, sergeant in Second Duxbury company, Lieutenant Nathan Sampson, Colonel Thomas Lothrop's regiment, in Rhode Island; also sergeant in Captain David Nye's company, Fourth Plymouth county regiment; also in Captain David Nye's company (second Wareham), Colonel Sprout's regiment, in Rhode Island alarms, 1776-77-89; in 1778 was sergeant for a time in Captain Calvin Partridge's company, Colonel Abinijah Stearns's regiment. In some cases he is called "Jr." but there is no evidence that there were two of that name in service.

(VI) Joseph, son of Ichabod (2) Sampson, was born in 1785, at Wareham, and died at Middleborough, aged eighty-two. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and late in life a pensioner, and drew one hundred and fifty acres of land in the west. He married Leonice Magoun, born in Pembroke, died in Middleborough, aged ninety-four (both buried in Middleborough), daughter of Aaron and Mary (Church) Magoun, granddaughter of David and Rachel (Soule) Magoun, and through her grandmother a descendant of "Mayflower" stock. Children: 1. Luther, born July 26, 1797. He was a clothier; removed to Wayne, Maine, where he resided until 1862; resided in Corinna, Maine, until 1871, when he returned to Corinna; in 1874 he removed to Burlington, Vermont, where he died November 7, 1886. He married, April

30, 1830, Mary Church Thomas, of Marshfield; she died at Corinna, June 25, aged sixty-nine years; she and her husband are both buried at Marshfield, Massachusetts. Their only child, Mary C., married, March 16, 1871, Jerome W. Goodell; they reside in Burlington, Vermont, where he is a granite and stone worker; no children. 2. (VII) Ichabod (3), son of Joseph Sampson, was born in Middleborough, June 15, 1812. He was a farmer and trader on the paternal farm, carrying produce to Plymouth; later he was a teamster, having charge of the handling of brick for the Bridgewater Iron Company, known as Lazelle, Perkins & Company. He later returned to the old homestead and took care of his father until the father's death, March 11, 1856, during which time he was engaged in buying and selling cattle, farming, etc. He married, in Middleborough, September 21, 1834, Hannah Morse, born in Carver, Massachusetts, February 1, 1807, died at Braintree, September 26, 1885. Husband and wife are both buried in Middleborough. Children: 1. Ruth S., born August 17, 1835, died at Rockland, June 18, 1908; married Frank N. Lawrence, of Rockland; child, Hattie. 2. Josephus, mentioned below. 3. Thomas, born May 7, 1840; remained on the homestead until 1870, when he came to Braintree; married (first) Melinda Shaw, of Carver; (second) Martha Jane Hobart; children of first wife: i. Ichabod Thomas, born March 31, 1861, died November 1, 1867; ii. Samuel Breck, born August 1, 1865, letter carrier, Brockton; iii. George F., born December 20, 1877, real estate agent, Braintree, married, June 20, 1908, Mabel Mellen.

(VIII) Josephus, son of Ichabod (3) Sampson, was born at Middleborough, April 29, 1837. He attended the public schools of his native town, and Pierce Academy for one term of eleven weeks. From his boyhood he worked with his father on the farm, and when the father died he and his brother Thomas managed the farm for two years. He came to Braintree July 26, 1858, learned the trade of butcher in the employ of Elisha Morse, and later was with Samuel Strong French nearly four years. He engaged in the meat and provision business on his own account July 15, 1862. He bought and slaughtered the cattle, having a well equipped slaughter house. He also sold meat and provisions from wagons until 1903, when he relinquished this branch of the business, still continuing to the present time his slaughter house. He is also interested in the cultivation of cranberries. He is a prominent Methodist. He joined the Methodist church at South Braintree, June 4, 1882, and at the same time was interested in a small society at East Braintree, organized by people from Carver. He was elected superintendent of the Sunday school at East Braintree, June 18, 1882, and served in that capacity for twenty years, and also filled a vacancy for nine months. The Methodist church at South Braintree, formerly the Baptist church, was destroyed by fire November 17, 1883. Mr. Sampson was active in raising the fund for rebuilding, and was the largest contributor. The new church on the old site was dedicated October 12, 1884. In 1891, under Presiding Elder S. O. Benton, the society at East Braintree was formed, and a church built and dedicated, and Mr. Sampson was again the largest contributor to the building fund. He has been a member of Delta Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, of Weymouth, (now removed to Braintree), for thirty-nine years, and was formerly a member of Pantalpha Royal Arch Chapter, but has withdrawn from it. He is a member of Puritan Lodge of Odd Fellows, Braintree, and of Braintree Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, of which he has been master. He has supported the Republican party from the time of its organization. He is keenly interested in town affairs; was one of the committee of five to erect the Braintree grammar and high school building; also one of building committee to erect the Perkins school at East Braintree, and of the committees to remodel the Union school building and the Pond school building of Braintree.

Mr. Sampson married (first) January 25, 1868, Ruth Ann French, born in South Braintree, died at Braintree, May 7, 1869, aged twenty-nine years eight months, daughter of Waldo French. He married (second) February 3, 1875, Mary E. French, sister of his first wife. Child of first wife: Everett F., born 1869, died September 4, 1869, aged four months twenty-six days. Child of second wife: Ruth Gladys, born September 15, 1879, married James Miller; children: Delma M. and Douris Miller.

This family, indigenous to the soil of Massachusetts, has been content to dwell in the land of its birth, where it has maintained its supremacy for mercantile honor and probity. The lure of the broad prairies did not appeal to it. What was good enough for the sire was good enough for the son. The Calls were ever militant, and in those war-wrung years of the country's grim birth, the Calls were on the firing line. They are a people who have been sacredly mindful of their obligations, and the word of a Call was always considered "as good as a bond." They are a truth-loving, truth-telling race, "whereof the memory of man runneth not the contrary." They were Sabbath-revering, who walked humbly with their God. It is from fair-minded stock like this that the old Bay State has drawn its good citizenry, and obtained a prestige as an exultant and triumphant commonwealth; a citizenry jealous of its vested rights, and inalienable liberties, and obedient to the laws. In its original elements, the Calls were Welsh, who flocked into England at some remote period of history, and there grew to be quite influential. A court armor with a crest is one of the honors it is said to have gained. The crest is the highest part of the ornaments of a shield of arms. Its origin is probably more ancient than that of other heraldic bearings, since even the heroes of the Iliad are described as wearing "crested helms." They were honorable distinctions conferred upon the officers only, and not upon the men. The right to wear them was esteemed a very high honor in the early days of heraldry, because they could be only acquired by those who had as knights seen actual service in the field. Court armor became hereditary in the reign of Henry III., and it was about this time that crests began to be worn by knights. They are thus of purely military origin. Women can neither bear, inherit nor transmit them.

(1) Thomas Call, tilemaker, embarked for America in 1636, being from Feversham, Kent. He was admitted as an inhabitant of Charlestown in 1637, and lived near the ferry at Mystic side. He petitioned for leave to sell refreshments. He had a house in Southfield, a garden plot in Middle Row, four acres in Linefield, a cow common, and five acres of woodland in Mystic field. The surname of his wife was Bennett, and he married (second) Joanne Shepherdson, who died January 30, 1660. Children: Thomas, John, Mary and Elizabeth.

(1) Amos Call was born in 1759, and one of the men raised to reinforce the Continental army, and was from the Charlestown Thomas, though line is unrun. His age was twenty-one, stature five feet nine inches, complexion light. He arrived at Springfield, Massachusetts, July 9, 1780, and marched to camp under command of Captain Daniel Shay. It was said he was afterward concerned in Shay's rebellion, but a soldier who follows his captain is in some sense justified. Shay was captain of his company in the revolution. Before we finally condemn the men who participated in this unfortunate affair, we must consider fully the state of society then, the evils of which they complained, the burden of debts and taxes under which they staggered, the methods by which justice was administered, and the dilatoriness of the courts. Inflammable leaders were more to blame than the populace.

(II) Isaiah, son of Amos Call, was born in Springfield, May 6, 1786, and died there May 8, 1860. He married, August 8, 1810, Cynthia Bliss.

(III) Amos (2), son of Isaiah and Cynthia (Bliss) Call, born in Springfield, January 4, 1814, died there August 30, 1888. He was bred to merchandise, and became a member of the hardware firm of Bemis & Call. During the war of the revolution the Bemis & Call Hardware and Tool Company did a large business in the manufacture of harness traces for the United States Government. In 1856-57-58-59-60 Mr. Call was assistant engineer of the fire department, and was alderman from the sixth ward in 1861-67-68-75, and he was a member of the First Baptist Church, of Springfield, and was very active in church work and served as a deacon for several years. He was a Mason of Knight Templar grade. He married Ruhema Chapin Skeele, born June 23, 1815, and died May 14, 1892. They celebrated their golden wedding May 16, 1888. Children: 1. Charles Amos, see forward. 2. Edmund Skeele, born March 17, 1841; died August 16, 1843. 3. Margaret Pease, born June 15, 1846; died young. 4. George Norton, born August 7, 1844; married Ella E. Clark, and died March 13, 1885. 5. Ruhema Chapin, born August 6, 1851; married Addison Howard Watson.

(IV) Charles Amos, eldest son of Amos and Ruhema (Skeele) Call, was born in Springfield, June 3, 1839, and died there November 6, 1898. He was taught the rudiments in the public schools, and became superintendent of Bemis & Call's Hardware and Tool Company. In 1864 he started a small retail grocery, and in 1888 his business had so increased that he purchased a large granite block on State street, now occupied by his son. He was elected a member of the common council in 1866, and was on the committee to meet President Johnson and Secretary Seward when they officially visited the city. In 1882 he was made alderman from his ward, to which he was thrice re-elected, officiating as president of the board in 1885. In 1888 he was elected to the house of representatives, and again in 1889, serving on the committee on banks and banking, of which he was made chairman. When in the legislature he cast his vote for George F. Hoar, at his first election to the senate. This was a move on the part of some who were anxious to overthrow the influence of General Butler in Massachusetts politics, and Senator Boutwell owed his defeat for re-election as much to the fact of his friendship for General Butler as anything else. Mr. Call belonged to Roswell Lee Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Morning Star Chapter, and Springfield Commandery. He belonged to the Winthrop, Nayasset, and the Masonic clubs. He married Eugenia Louise Stillman; (see Stillman).

(V) Arthur Amos, son of Charles Amos and Eugenia (Stillman) Call, was born in Springfield, June 1, 1868. He attended the public schools in Springfield, and at an early age went into his father's store as a clerk, working himself up through the various grades, and upon the death of his father he succeeded to the business, that of a retail grocer. Mr. Call is one of the foremost grocery merchants in Springfield, and commands a large city trade. He is masonically related, and a member of the Springfield Cammandery. He attends the First Congregational church, is a Republican in politics, and a member of the Nayasset, Winthrop and Masonic clubs. He married, in 1891, Helen Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Ryder. Children: Charles Stillman, born May 27, 1896; Eugenia Louise, December 15, 1903.

Albert Perkins Langtry, editor and publisher of the Springfield Union, was born in Wakefield, Massachusetts, July 27, 1860, and was educated there in the public schools. He began his career as a commercial traveler, representing the firm of C. L. Jones & Company, of Boston, soap manufacturers. He had been in this business six years when he was induced by newspaper friends, with whom he was visiting in New York City, to accept a position as reporter on the Brooklyn Union-Argus, afterwards the Brooklyn Union. He found the work congenial and demonstrated his ability as a reporter. After he left the Union he was a reporter on the staff of the Brooklyn Times for three years and manager and Long Island editor of the Times for the ensuing five years. In 1890 he came to Springfield, Massachusetts, as business manager of the Springfield Union. A few years later he came into control of the Union which has become a valuable property under his management. The newspaper has been enlarged from time to time and the plant greatly improved. Few newspapers outside of the metropolitan districts have so large a plant. The Union has recently installed a Goss sextuple perfecting press, and has a battery of ten linotype machines. In a field in which competition is exceedingly able and strong, Mr. Langtry has built up the circulation and standing of the Union until it ranks second to none in western and central Massachusetts. Mr. Langtry is a prominent and influential Republican, and his newspaper has been one of the bulwarks of the Republican party for the past fifteen years. He has been a member of the Republican state committee for a number of years, has been secretary for two years. He has been delegate to various nominating conventions of his party. He is a member of Roswell Lee Lodge of Free Masons; of the Nayasset, Winthrop and Reality clubs, of Springfield.

He married, August 3, 1886, Sarah Cowing Spear, born January 16, 1862, daughter of George A. and Annretta (Harper) Spear, of West Roxbury, Massachusetts (see Spear sketch). Mr. and Mrs. Langtry have no children.

The late Samuel Cordis Norcross, of Cambridge, was a descendant in the eighth generation from Jeremiah Norcross, who came from England in 1638 and settled in Watertown, Massachusetts. One of the descendants of the immigrant ancestor was Elijah Norcross, who married Catherine Marrow and they were the parents of Leonard Norcross, father of Samuel C. Norcross, of whom see forward.

Leonard Norcross was born in Readfield, Maine, June 18, 1798, on the second farm from the Winthrop line, on the west side of Maranocook lake or pond, died at Dixfield, Maine, March 10, 1865. His father died when he was three years old, and he lived with his mother until he was nine, when he was apprenticed to a farmer by the name of Randall, who was a hard master and the boy suffered greatly from lack of proper food and clothing and in other ways, and at the end of three years, not being able to bear it any longer, he left his oppressor and went to live with Colonel Sprague, of Greene, whose wife was a sister of Mrs. Norcross, and he made his home there for the following four years. In this family he received kind treatment, had a congenial and happy home, an opportunity to attend school some, and learned the trade of a millwright, developing the mechanical genius for which he became conspicuous in after life. He then went to Brunswick and worked awhile in the lumber mills there, and during his spare time improved himself along educational lines by reading and study. The winter after he was seventeen he lived with his mother at East Winthrop, and attended school in what was called the Fairbank's school district. The following winter he taught school, an occupation which he continued to follow during the winter season for many years. From Winthrop he moved to Livermore, and was there engaged in milling and farming business, building a saw mill on the river about half a mile above Livermore Falls. During this time he also took out his two first patents; one a stone-dressing machine, the other a machine for making wrought nails. After his removal to Dixfield he gave considerable time to inventions of different kinds and took out several patents. Among these were a spinning wheel, a stump machine, and he invented the threshing machine and separator which was patented in the name of Hiram A. Pitts, of Winthrop, and which was so extensively used for many years. He was wrongfully defrauded of his rights in this patent. In 1829 he began to study on the greatest of all his inventions, the Submarine Diving Dress, which he finally got patented in 1834. The patent deed bears the signature of Andrew Jackson, then president of the United States, and B. F. Butler, secretary of state. With this dress after it was patented Mr. Norcross visited Boston, New York, Philadelphia and several other cities, going as far south as Norfolk, Virginia, and giving exhibitions of it in the rivers and harbors by going under the water, in some instances walking on the bottom a distance of two miles and remaining for two hours. A few men with small capital were ready to take hold of it, and a company was formed in Boston to operate with it in raising sunken vessels and in recovering property from wrecks and in various other ways, but they either lacked the means or the enterprise to make a success of it, and but very little was done. Mr. Norcross was at great expense of time and money in perfecting and exhibiting this invention, but he never realized more than a few hundred dollars from it. The dress was later used extensively throughout the world. The United States government made great use of it during the war of the rebellion, and it saved the country many millions of dollars. During the last part of his life Mr. Norcross devoted more attention to the building of mills than to patents. He was a deacon of the Congregational church in Dixfield, which office he was filling at the time of his decease. In politics he was first a Whig and later a Republican. Mr. Norcross married Deborah Nelson, born in Winthrop, March 30, 1798, died November 14, 1870, daughter of the Rev. Elias Nelson, a Calvinist Baptist preacher of considerable ability, who was afterward pastor of the Baptist church on Jay Hill for many years. Children: 1. Sarah Elizabeth, born in Livermore, May 26, 1821. 2. Elias Nelson, Livermore, July 1, 1822. 3. Mary Matilda, Livermore, November 13, 1823. 4. Leonard Marcellus, Livermore, October 21, 1825. 5. Aurora Deborah, Jay, July 31, 1827. 6. Flavinus Vespasian, Livermore, April 25, 1829. 7. Samuel Cordis, Dixfield, November 1, 1831; see forward. 8. Submarinus Girard, Dixfield, January 21, 1834. 9. Edward Jent, Dixfield, June 16, 1837.

Samuel Cordis Norcross, the fourth son and seventh child of Leonard and Deborah (Nelson) Norcross, was born in Dixfield, November 1, 1831. He spent his early years on the farm, attending school during the winter months. He was a bright, apt scholar, and made rapid advancement in all that he undertook, but was inclined to devote more time to manual labor than to study. He engaged with his father in millwright work in various places. He built a large saw mill and turning lathe on the Newton brook, which has since been called Wells' mill. Here he was very dangerously injured by a cart hub which he was turning. It flew from the lathe, and striking him broke the bridge of his nose and slightly fractured the skull over one eye. He resided in Canton, Woodfords, Somerville and Cambridge, residing in the latter place until his death, which occurred November 28, 1901. He was extensively engaged in building and repairing mills, and his labors were rewarded with a large degree of success. Mr. Norcross married, January 30, 1859, Zilpha H. Leonard, of Canton. One child, Eva H., now a resident of Cambridge.

The Hills family of England has HILLS been known in the mother country several centuries, and in New England for nearly three centuries. Mr. Thomas Hills, of South Boston, president of the Hills Family Association, says in the third annual report of the directors of the Hills Family Genealogical and Historical Association:

"Some ten years since, the investigations of your president led him to the conclusion that our name originated in Kent county, southeastern England, the birthplace of his father, in 1765. * * * Edward Hasted, one of the historians of Kent, whose large and valuable work was published in 1778, gives an origin of the name which accounts for its being localized in the middle ages and furnishes a reason for the fact that it is still common in this country, when it is rarely found in other parts of England. I quote his exact language: 'About a mile southeasterly from Darent Church, is the hamlet of Helles Saint Margaret, commonly called Saint Margaret Hills. * * * The manor afterwards came into the possession of a family named

Y. C. Norcross

Hells, who had much land at Danford and Ash, near Sandwich, and from them this place acquired the additional name of Hells, or more vulgarly, Hills.' There is much more going on to say that Henry de Helles was one of the Knights of Kent during the reign of Edward III. He retained the name of Helles; others used it as Hells. It settled into the form in which it is now used as early as 1400. In the peculiar orthography of the old times, the name was variously spelled, the records disclosing no less than twenty-three various spellings, only two of which were without the final s. In our day the name only appears as Hills or Hillis." It is in no way connected with the name of Hill, except in a few cases where it has been found that the "s" was dropped through carelessness.

(1) Joseph Hills, the immigrant, was born in the parish of Great Burstead, Essex county, England, and was baptized there in March, 1602. His father was son of George Hills, who married Mary Simonds, of Billericay, Essex, England, widow of William Simonds, of Billericay, tanner. Their marriage license bears date October 13, 1596, at which time George Hills did not use the final "s" in his surname. It first appears as Hills in the records in February, 1608, and perhaps was so written by some new vicar who had charge of the parish books.

Joseph Hills married Rose Clark, at Great Burstead, July 22, 1624. They removed with several children to Maldon, Essex, where John, Steven and Sarah were born. In 1638 he became a stockholder or "undertaker" in the ship "Susan and Ellen," in which he sailed with his family for Boston, arriving there July 17, 1638. He settled at Charlestown, Massachusetts, and in 1644 he was made a selectman there, in 1646 was in the general court and in the next year was elected speaker. He lived on the Mystic side of Charlestown, in the part that became Malden, which was named from Mr. Hills' old home in England. He served as captain of the trainband, represented Malden first in the general court, and served continuously in that position until 1664, when he removed to Newbury. It is of interest to note that John Waite, who succeeded him, was representative for nineteen years and that he was his son-in-law. In 1645 he was of a committee to set out lots to the settlers of the Nashaway plantation. In 1650 he was on the committee headed by the governor to draw up instructions for the Massachusetts delegates to a gathering where commissioners of all the colonies were to meet. In 1654, with Captains Hawthorne and Johnson and the treasurer of the colony, he served on a committee to frame a reply to the home government which had demanded an explanation for certain acts. He was an auditor of treasury accounts in 1650, 1653 and 1661. One of his most important public services was on the committee to codify the laws of the colony in 1648 and later. He made this first code in his own handwriting and supervised the printing. In part payment for this work he received a grant of five hundred acres of land on the Nashua river in New Hampshire and remission of taxes in his old age.

His wife Rose, whom he married in England before he came to America, died in Malden March 24, 1650. He married second, June 24, 1651, Hannah Smith, widow of Edward Mellows, and who died about 1655. His third marriage, in January, 1656, to Helen (Ellina or Eleanor) Atkinson, daughter of Hugh Atkinson, of Kendall, Westmoreland, England, was attended with some unusual circumstances. In those days clergymen were not allowed to solemnize marriages, the ceremony always being performed by magistrates. In 1641 Governor Bellingham raised a storm of controversy in the colony by acting as magistrate at his own marriage. He married himself to pretty Penelope Pelham. Public opinion was divided. Some sided with the governor in his curious interpretation of the law, but more did not. When the governor was called upon to come down from the bench and plead to a complaint against him for what his opponents charged as an illegal act, he refused, and it was left for Joseph Hills some years later to put the law to a real test. He married himself to Miss Atkinson, acting both as magistrate and bridegroom, and was called to account by the authorities. He "was admonished for marrying himself contrary to the law of this colony, page 38 in the old Booke," and, in the language of the general court, "he freely acknowledged his offence therein and his misunderstanding the grounds whereon he went which he now confesseth to be unwarrantable—and was admonished by the Court." His third wife died January 6, 1663, and he married, March 8, 1665, at Newbury, Massachusetts, Anne Lunt, widow of Henry Lunt, and lived at her house in Newbury during the remainder of his life. She was born about 1621, probably in England. His note book containing business memoranda from 1627 to nearly the end of his life, is in the possession of the New England Historic-Genealogic Society. He became totally blind in 1678. He died at Newbury, February 5, 1688, aged about eighty-six years. He was the father of fifteen children: 1. Mary, baptized at Great Burstead, England, November 13, 1625; died in Malden, Massachusetts, November 25, 1674. 2. Elizabeth, baptized at Great Burstead, October 21, 1627. 3. Joseph, baptized at Great Burstead, August 2, 1629; died young. 4. James, baptized at Great Burstead, March 6, 1631; died young. 5. John, baptized Great Burstead, March 21, 1632; died in Malden, July 28, 1652. 6. Rebecca, baptized at Maldon, England, April 20, 1634; died at Malden, Massachusetts, June 16, 1674. 7. Steven, baptized, Maldon, May 1, 1630; died there before 1638. 8. Sarah, baptized at Maldon, August 14, 1637; died there same day. 9. Gershom, born at Charlestown, Massachusetts, July 27, 1639; died at Malden between 1710 and 1720. 10. Mehitable, born at Malden, January 1, 1641; died there in July, 1652. 11. Samuel, born at Malden, July, 1652. 12. Nathaniel, born Malden, December 10, 1653; died there 1664. 13. Hannah, born at Malden. 14. Deborah, born Malden, March, 1657; died there October 1, 1662. 15. Abigail, born Malden, October 6, 1658; died there October 9, 1662.

(II) Samuel Hills, son of Joseph Hills, the immigrant, was born in Malden, Massachusetts, in July, 1652, and died at Newbury, Massachusetts, August 18, 1732. He was a sergeant in the Indian wars, and was in the battles at Bloody Brook, September 18, 1675, and Narragansett, December 19, 1675. He married, at Newbury, Massachusetts, Abigail, daughter of David and Sarah (Wise) Wheeler, of Newbury. David was a son of John Wheeler, who was born in Salisbury, Wiltshire, England, in 1625, and came to New England in the "Confidence" in 1638. He married Sarah Wise, May 11, 1650. In 1861 he enlisted in Company I, Twenty-third Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and served three years. In 1864 he was mustered out at the end of the term of his enlistment, returned to Ipswich, and again engaged in mercantile business, in which he continued until succeeded by his son. He was affiliated with John T. Heard Lodge, F. and A. M. Several years before his death he was made an honorary member of John T. Heard Lodge, and was also a member of Agawam Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Ipswich. He married Eunice Ann Hardin Perkins. Children: Harriet A., born 1842, died 1889; Albert Perkins, of whom further.

of his native town, leaving school to enter the army. After his return home in 1864 he became clerk in his father's store, and in 1866 learned the barber's trade, at which he worked for six years. In 1888 he purchased his father's business, and has been the sole proprietor to the present time. During his ownership he has enlarged the store building three different times in order to provide for his increasing business, and now has a floor space of fifty feet front and forty-five feet in depth. Mr. Hills is affiliated with John T. Heard Lodge, A. F. and A. M., of Ipswich, of which he was junior warden one year, and steward three years; Amity Charter, R. A. M., of Beverly; and Winslow Lewis Commandery, K. T., of Salem. He is a Republican in politics, but has never aspired to official positions. He and his family are attendants of the Methodist church. He married, June 13, 1870, Mary E., daughter of Alfred P. and Mary A. (Dale) Clark. Mr. and Mrs. Hills have one child, Ethel Dale, born September 30, 1877; graduate of Manning high school, class of 1894, holding the highest rank during her entire high school class, and being valedictorian of her class; public-reader and teacher of elocution; she married, October 3, 1896, Walter F. Poole, and resides in Ipswich.

Albert Smith Hills and his son, Albert Perkins Hills, afford a notable illustration of the patriotic devotion and unflinching courage of the men of their day. In 1861, the first year of the civil war, the son, then just beginning his fifteenth year, enlisted as a drummer in Company I, Twenty-third Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, Captain John Hobbs. His parents were much opposed to this step, on account of his youth, but he was not to be dissuaded. The elder Hills at once enlisted in the same company and regiment, and father and son completed a three years' term of service side by side—comrades in battle, and partakers of the weary march and the long night watches—the mother meantime conducting the business which her husband had laid aside. With their regiment the two, father and son, bore a soldierly part in all the operations of General Burnside's army in North Carolina, including the battle and capture of Roanoke Island, February 8, 1862; and the battles of Newberne, March 14, 1862, Kinston, Whitehall and Goldsboro. Albert P. Hills participated in the following battles: Roanoke Island, February 8, 1862; Newberne, March 14, 1862; Rawle's Mills, November 2, 1862; Kinston, December 14, 1862;

Whitehall, December 15, 1862; Goldsboro, December 16, 1862; Wilcox Bridge, July 6, 1863; Wren's Mills, April 14, 1864; Heckman's Farm, May 6, 1864; Walthall Junction, May 7, 1864; Arrowfield Church, May 9, 1864; Drury's Bluff, May 12, 1864; Cold Harbor, June 2 and 3, 1864; Petersburg (siege) June 20 to August 25, 1864. At the end of their three years' term of service the two Hills, father and son, were honorably discharged. After the war they were comrades in General James Appleton Post, No. 128, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Massachusetts, in which the elder Hills held membership until his death, and of which the son is yet a member.

Patrick Carey came of an old CAREY and respected family of county Cavan, Ireland. He and his ancestors were farmers for generations. Patrick removed to British Hill in county Meath, where he died. He married, in county Cavan, Elizabeth Henry, whose mother was of the Fox family of county Cavan. Children: 1. Edward, mentioned below. 2. Molly, came to America, married ——— Rielley, died at West Quincy, Massachusetts. 3. Thomas, died at West Quincy. 4. James, came to America and located at West Quincy, Massachusetts, where he died. 5. John, went to California and was never heard from afterward. 6. Nicholas, lived and died on the homestead on British Hill.

(II) Edward, son of Patrick Carey, was born in Ireland. Like all the family he was a pious Roman Catholic, and in politics an earnest supporter of every movement in his day to relieve his country from oppression and to promote its welfare. He was a member of the Land League. He married Margaret Durham, daughter of Michael and Katherine (Flynn) Durham, of Scotch ancestry. After his marriage he lived at the native place of his wife, Rochestown, county Meath, and there he died August 2, 1872. His wife died in 1868. Children: Elizabeth, Michael, Maria and Katherine, all of whom are mentioned below. These children, through the kindness of Mrs. A. D. McNulty, sister of Mrs. Carey, were brought to the United States, coming in the ship "Germanic," sailing from Liverpool, March 25, 1880, and arriving in New York City, April 5, 1880. Mrs. McNulty lived in Jersey City, New Jersey, where she died in 1906, leaving two children: Katherine McNulty, a teacher in the normal school in Jersey City, and Joseph M. McNulty, president of the American Tobacco Trust Company, a resident of Jersey City Heights, having an office in New York City. Patrick, John and Thomas Durham, brothers of Mrs. McNulty, located also in Jersey City and died there.

(III) Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Carey, was born at Rochestown, county Meath, Ireland, and was educated there in the national schools. She went to live with her cousin in Quincy, Massachusetts, after coming to this country. She married, November 26, 1886, Patrick H. Sheehan, of Stafford Springs, Connecticut, born in that town, August 8, 1854, son of John and Ellen (Horgan) Sheehan. He was appointed to the police force of Boston in 1881 and was a capable and efficient officer. He died September 8, 1901. Captain Walker and the patrolmen of Station 12, Boston, escorted the body to the grave. Children, born at South Boston: 1. (III) Michael, son of Edward Carey, was born in Rochestown, Ireland. He was educated in the national schools, and upon coming to America went to live in West Quincy, Massachusetts, where he learned his trade as a granite cutter in the works of his cousin, Carey Brothers. He became a skillful craftsman and is at present working as a journeyman in a quarry in Pennsylvania.

(III) Maria, daughter of Edward Carey, was born in Rochestown, and after coming to this country lived for a year with her aunt in Jersey City, removing later to South Boston. At the age of seventeen she married, December 22, 1881, Alfred Willey, a native of Lowell, Massachusetts. He was employed formerly in the railroad business, now in the Lamson Company factory, manufacturers of patented cash carriers. They reside in Roxbury, Boston. Mrs. Willey is a member of the Women's Auxiliary of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and of the Knights and Ladies of Tara, Roxbury. Their daughter, Mabel Willey, born May 30, 1884, is a telephone operator in the Roxbury Exchange.

(III) Katherine, daughter of Edward Carey, was born in Rochestown, November 11, 1866, and was eighteen years old when she came to this country. She spent two years with her aunt in Jersey City, then came to Boston, where she has since lived. She was educated in her native parish in the national schools and is intelligent and well-informed. She is a charter member of the Knights and Ladies of Tara, and is interested in every patriotic movement for the welfare of her native land, proud of the fact that the home of her girlhood was but a few miles from Dowth Castle in which the late John Boyle O'Reilly was born in the royal province of Meath. She is one of those who keenly appreciates the reforms instituted by the government of the United Kingdom in Ireland and is a firm believer in the ultimate success of the Home Rule movement. She has been an industrious and faithful worker all her life and has saved a modest competence. In 1901 Miss Carey visited her native home, also making an extensive tour of the country, including a visit to Cook, Killarney, Dublin, the ancient hill of Tara, Blarney Castle, also the hill of Slane.

George Brann settled in West BRANN Gardiner, Maine, where he became an extensive owner of land and a prosperous lumberman. He married —— Earl. Children: 1. George H., mentioned below. 2. John. 3. Rhoda, married
Mr. McCausland. 4. Hannah, married Job
Sampson.

(II) George H., son of George Brann, was born January 30, 1808. He married Abbie C. Brann, no relation. He lived at West Gardiner, Maine. He was an industrious farmer, and early in life was engaged in the shoe and leather business. Children, born at Gardiner: 1. Sylvanus. 2. Henry. 3. John. 4. Solon. 5. Arrington. 6. Lawson. 7. Abbie C., born December 5, 1847; married (first) George W. Davis; one child, Alice M. Davis, married, March 8, 1891, Sewall Collins, of Gardiner, Maine, and has one child, Eugene Sewall Collins, born August 28, 1893; married (second) May 28, 1879, George M. Blanchard, born December 5, 1849. 8. Eugene H., mentioned below.

(III) Eugene H., son of George H. Brann, was born May 18, 1856, at Gardiner, Maine. He attended the public schools of his native town and was graduated from the Gardiner high school in the class of 1874. He started life in the furniture and cabinet-making business in his native town, working there eight years, then for a time in Lynn, Massachusetts, and two years in Saugus, Massachusetts. In 1892 he engaged in the hotel business as proprietor of the Relay House in Nahant, Massachusetts, then merely a "fish house," a restaurant without rooms and but two hundred and fifty feet of floor space. He prospered from the first, enlarging his quarters and accommodations rapidly. His establishment is now a model of its kind. The dining hall alone has twelve hundred square feet of floor space, with a cafe of six hundred square feet, both attractively furnished; the hotel has forty bed-rooms and in the season requires a force of one hundred and ten employees. The permanent force numbers seventy-five. The hotel is a handsome four-story structure, beautifully situated. The Dutch room is especially attractive. It is decorated and furnished strictly in Dutch style, the prevailing color being red. The furniture is massive Dutch oak and there are fifty tables for guests in this room. The establishment boasts of a splendid dancing pavilion, eighty by one hundred and thirty feet, shooting galleries, bowling alleys and a theatre. The Relay House wharf is seven hundred and forty-seven feet in length. The Relay House stables have a reputation for style and variety of equipage, and for first-class horses. In the summer the average number of guests is three thousand five hundred a week, most of them, of course, being day-guests only. The Relay House attracts a high class of patrons from all parts of the country and many foreign visitors are guests. Mr. Brann takes a just pride in the old registers of the hotel, not only affording evidence of the continual growth of his business, but containing the autographs of hundreds of prominent men and women. Mr. Brann has recently added to his property ten cottages bought of the Nathan Moore estate to be rented in connection with the hotel, and other land in the vicinity with an eye to the future growth of business. He established the Lynn & Nahant Steamboat Company in 1894 and there are three boats in commission during the season: the "Sylvan Shore," "Canostota" and "Winthrop," besides the "Rice" which was the first boat in the service. He is a director of the Boston, Nahant & Pines Steamboat Company and a stockholder in the Nahant & Lynn Railroad Company. He has co-operated in every enterprise and movement tending to benefit the town. He is a life member of Lynn Lodge, No. 117, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks; of Saugus Lodge, No. 97, Knights of Pythias; of the Fish and Game Association of Massachusetts; of the National Lancers and of the various boating and yacht clubs of the vicinity. He was quartermaster sergeant of First Battalion Light Artillery, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, three years, 1898-99-1900, under Major Decheney (on his staff). In politics he is a Republican, in religion a Baptist. Mr. Brann has a natural aptitude for the hotel business. He is genial, cordial, sympathetic and democratic in disposition, always studying to secure comfort and entertainment for his guests, and incidentally making personal friends of most of them.

He married, April 11, 1901, Mary H. Thompson, born September 15, 1878, at Poughkeepsie, New York, removing when very young to Concord, New Hampshire. Their only child, Leslie E., was born 1871 at Gardiner, Maine, died 1877, aged six.

To no other country does MULLIGAN the United States owe so much to its increase of population as to the Emerald Isle, a green gem set in the silver sea. The movement toward these shores began early in the nineteenth century and the stream of come-overs has been steady and well sustained. Once on our shores, the Celts readily become assimilated with our people, adapt themselves to our institutions and become naturalized citizens. No class of emigrants are more thoroughly Americanized than Erin's sons. They never go back to the old home to stay like some other class we could name who come here solely to earn money and return to the land of their nativity. The Irishman is here to stay and here he will be buried. To the material development of this country we owe an inestimable debt to them. The railroads and great public improvements, like the Erie canal, were their work. They cannot but feel proud to recall the eminent statesmen and warriors originating from the noble isle beginning with Andrew Jackson and coming down through the long line to the civil war, not forgetting Phillip H. Sheridan. Theodore Roosevelt, though nominally a Dutchman, is of Irish descent from ancestors both within and without the pale. None of the Irish emigrants have arisen higher in the estimation of the communities in which they wrought than this one now in hand, and their great success in life has been due to a good ancestry and in the making the most of their opportunities. Mulligan is from Mullechean, meaning summit or heighth. It was first used as a cognomen to designate somebody who lived at the top of a hill.

(1) John Mulligan was born in the North of Ireland and came to this country in 1819, locating at Hartford, Connecticut. He was an expert machinist and had seven children, one of whom is treated in the next paragraph.

(II) John (2), son of John (1) Mulligan, was born in Hartford, January 12, 1820, died in Springfield, Massachusetts, February 22, 1898. He had to partly make his own way early in life and for some time was employed by Philemon Canfield, publisher of the Christian Secretary. He swung the ink roller for the old-fashioned press and distributed the paper among the city subscribers. When fifteen years of age he learned the machinist trade and was taught all about locomotives at the works of William Norris in Philadelphia. In the summer of 1841 he was installed as the engineer of the steamer "William Hall," which towed freight between Hartford and Willimansett. In 1842 he was made engineer of the passenger boat "Phoenix" running between Springfield and Hartford. That year he was transferred to the Boston and Albany road, then called the Western railroad and for ten years he ran locomotives. In 1852 he was made master mechanic of the Connecticut road and in 1868 assumed the duties of superintendent, succeeding N. A. Leonard as president of the company in 1890. It was during his trips between Worcester and Springfield as engineer that Mr. Mulligan met with the most serious accident in his career as a railroader. He started with his train from Worcester one afternoon in the midst of a blinding snow storm. The storm had delayed freights and three of them had started out in rapid succession. Mr. Mulligan was then engineer of the "Massachusetts" and his train was the second one of the three. When the first train was about four miles out of Worcester and pulling up a heavy grade it parted, six cars breaking away. Among them were three platform cars heavily loaded and these gave the runaways an impetus, sending them down the grade at a fearful pace. The runaways dashed around a curve and struck the "Massachusetts" head-on, the force of the collision being so great that one of the cars was thrown completely over the engine and landed on the tender. Engineer Mulligan was struck by one of the trucks and partially stunned. He soon recovered and the train which was not far behind was signalled in time to save any further mishap. While Mr. Mulligan was making his daily trips between Springfield and Northampton an incident occurred that Mr. Mulligan used to relate. It was during the early spring and the breaking up of the ice above sent large quantities of it down the river. One large ice floe was crowded up on the railroad tracks in the cut below the old dam at Holyoke. Several tons of ice were jammed into the narrow space and the train was nearly hemmed in by ice almost before the crew and passengers realized it. Mr. Mulligan succeeded in rescuing the train from its perilous situation without any serious accident. One of his trips as an engineer that he always took particular pride in was when he ran the special train taking Kossuth, the Hungarian patriot, to Northampton in 1852. Mr. Mulligan worked his way up literally from the ranks and he never forgot that, even when he stood at the head of the railroad for which he formally worked in the cab of the engine. He was one of the most democratic of men and always approachable by his employees or anyone who had business to transact. It can be said of John Mulligan that there was not the least bit of snobbery or ostentation in his character. And yet with all his warm-heartedness and sympathy with the employees he was able and ready to administer a just rebuke whenever it was deserved, and he was always frank and outspoken about it, so that even those he rebuked knew there was good reason for it. John Mulligan was a plain-spoken man and there were times when he did not mince his words or stop to carefully choose his language, but even then he was careful to know the exact facts, and if he had hastily done an injustice was always willing and anxious to repair it. This explains why the employees liked him and also why he was liked by every one with whom he came in contact. He was essentially the man of the people. It was not his practice to neglect a single detail that goes to make up a modern railroad, and his familiarities with all branches of the service stood him in good stead.

A man of great energy and unflinching will, yet he was quiet and unassuming and had a way of accomplishing results without friction. His equanimity was rarely disturbed even in cases of emergency. There was something about his determined way that inspired men whom he led. He was peculiarly fitted for the railroad career. His snow-white hair fringed one of the kindest of faces, and his life was as white as his snowy white hair. In politics he was an uncompromising Republican. In 1863 he was elected a member of the common council from ward one, serving in the years 1864-65. In 1866 he was elected to the board of aldermen, being re-elected in 1867-68. In 1875 he again represented his ward in common council, serving this time until 1877. In his service to the city he was as conscientious as in his business and gave it his best thought and effort. He never cared for political honors but might have been mayor had he consented to the use of his name. He was a trustee of Hampden Savings Bank and was its president at his death. Also he was a director in the Chapin National Bank. He married Lydia Ann, daughter of Hastings Bridges, in 1845. She died at the age of fifty-seven in 1887. Children: Charles H., mentioned below, and Mary Henrietta, who married James T. Abbe, of Springfield.

(11) Charles Henry, only son of John (2) and Lydia Ann (Bridges) Mulligan, was born in Springfield, January 26, 1849, and graduated from the high school in 1886. In 1867 he went with the Hawkins Iron Company as clerk and rose to the position of general manager. He is a Republican and has served his native city as councilman and in the board of aldermen in 1897-98-99. He is a prominent club man and belongs to the Nayasset and Winthrop clubs, also the Springfield Country Club. He married, June 12, 1872, Louise Jane, daughter of Jason Lyon, of Thetford, Vermont. Mr. Lyon was an old time stage driver before the days of railroads and drove stage for Chester W. Chapin. When the Boston and Albany road was built, Mr. Lyon was one of Mr. Chapin's right-hand men in the field operations. He was subsequently made chief baggage master on that road. Children of Charles H. Mulligan: 1. Walter Lyon, born July 6, 1875, received his preparatory education in the Springfield schools and was graduated from Cornell University; he is now manager of the United Electric Light Company of Springfield; he married Maria Snow. 2. Ralph Fuller, February 23, 1887, educated in the Springfield schools; now studying in the Student's League, New York City.

John Welch was born, lived and WELCH died in county Galway, Ireland.

He came of an ancient and honored Irish family and was a respectable farmer. He was a faithful Catholic in religion. He married Mary Fallon.

(11) Patrick, son of John Welch, was born in Ballaymacord, county Galway, Ireland, in 1828. He was the first of the family to come to this country. With many of friends and neighbors he joined the great emigration of the forties caused by the Irish famine, making the trip on a sailing vessel in a voyage lasting eleven weeks, surviving two wrecks, and landing in Boston. He secured employment first in the construction of what is now the Dedham branch of the New, York, New Haven & Hartford railroad. His wages at first were but sixty cents a day but were gradually advanced as his strength and willingness to make himself useful were manifested. He continued to work on this contract until it was completed. He made his home in West Roxbury, now part of Boston, and as soon as his savings were sufficient, embarked in business as a contractor and stone mason. He was a skillful craftsman and faithful in his work. He built many of the cellars in that section and had the mason work for many years of the Welds, Shaws and other leading families. His last years were spent in Roxbury in retirement in the home he purchased there, having accumulated a modest competence by years of frugal living and hard work. He died in 1899. He was a lifelong Democrat in politics and was a useful and respected citizen. He married, at West Roxbury, Bridget McLaughlin, also a native of Galway, Ireland, sister of Thomas McLaughlin, with whom she came to America in 1848, and settled in West Roxbury, where her brother is still living at the advanced age of eighty-three years. He is one of the best known Irish citizens of that section of the city, retaining in a remarkable degree his faculties and physical strength which in his active years gave him the reputation of being the strongest man in West Roxbury. Mr. McLaughlin married Bridget Cohen and their children were: Catherine, Bernard, Thomas and Sabina. Bridget (McLaughlin) Welch survives her husband and lives in the West Roxbury home in full enjoyment of her health and faculties. She and her husband were faithful communicants of the Roman Catholic church and liberal contributors to its support. Children: 1. Katherine, died in middle life; married Henry Carroll, who died before her, leaving no children. 2. Mary, resides in Providence, Rhode Island; widow of Samuel Murdy. 3. The Wittenauer family is descended from an ancient German family, which has for many years been associated with public affairs in the state of Baden, Germany. They were an industrious, thrifty people, always identified with the best class of public-spirited citizens.

(I) Stephen Wittenauer was born in Sasbach or Sassbad, a village of Baden, seventeen miles from Strasburg, Germany, in 1829. The family was of the Catholic faith. He received such education as was possible there in the public schools, and in the early fifties set out for the United States, while yet a young man. After a long and tedious voyage in a sailing vessel, he landed in the city of New York, intending, however, to come to Boston. This he soon did, and engaged as a machinist there for the next five years. By strict economy and saving he accumulated enough money to return to Germany to marry the maid to whom he had become affianced, of his own village and about his own age, Katherine Ernst. She was also a Catholic and a descendant of an old Baden family. After his marriage Stephen Wittenauer settled in his native village, where he lived the remainder of his life. His wife died in 1869, aged about thirty-three. He died in 1900. Children: 1. Joseph, mentioned below. 2. (II) Joseph, son of Stephen Wittenauer, received a good education in the public schools of his native town. He came to the United States in 1873 in the good ship "Mosely," and completed his education in Boston. He found his first employment in the grocery and provision store of Mr. Ganter, a well-known dealer of Boylston street, Jamaica Plain, as clerk. Here he bent every energy to acquire a thorough knowledge of every branch of the business. In 1905, having saved enough to form a neat capital, he decided to establish in business on his own account, and opened a store at 160 Lamartine street, Jamaica Plain. From the very first day his success was most gratifying. He catered to the best class of trade, and soon found that his diligence was paying him many fold. After a time his elder children became associated with him in the business, and constant success has followed his efforts, his straightforward methods and systematic habits being largely responsible. In politics he is a Republican. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum and the Boylston Schul-Verein. A few years ago he bought a substantial home at 133 Paul Gore street, Jamaica Plain, where he is surrounded by the comforts of life. He and his family attend the Congregational church. He is a member of the E. O. H. He married, in 1883, Louise Littig, born in Rheinpalz, Germany, in 1862, of an ancient German family of that place. Heinrich Dunkel was born in DUNKEL Hesse, Germany, of hardy German stock, such as has made Germany one of the foremost manufacturing and commercial nations of the world, active, energetic, enterprising and progressive. He was educated in the schools of his native place and learned the trade of cabinetmaker. He engaged in business on his own account and achieved success of a substantial kind. In the course of years he laid aside a comfortable competence. He retired from business a few years ago and he and his wife are now living quietly and comfortably in the town of Brietenbach in which they have made their home for many years. He has held various offices of trust and honor and was mayor of his native city for a period of fifteen years. Few men have won a higher degree of popularity and esteem among their townsmen and none have deserved it more than Mr. Dunkel. He married Augusta Moesta, born 1832, in Hesse. Children: 1. Rudolph, born July 14, 1859, mentioned below. 2. Heinrich Jr., September, 1862, mentioned below. 3. George Frank, March 6, 1866, mentioned below.

(II) Rudolph, son of Heinrich Dunkel, was born in the town of Brietenbach, Hesse, Germany, July 14, 1859. He was educated in his native province in the thorough fashion of the German elementary and grammar schools. For a few years he was engaged in business as a liquor dealer, but the business proved uncongenial and he decided to make his home and seek his fortune in America. Accordingly he sailed on an Atlantic liner, landing in the city of Baltimore, Maryland, September 13, 1879. He went immediately to Richmond, Virginia, and found employment in a bakery. With a view of seeing the country and acquiring a fuller knowledge of his trade, he went to Cincinnati, thence to Chicago. Later he worked in bakeries in New York City and Newport, Rhode Island. In 1885 with the capital he had saved he embarked in business as proprietor of a bakery in West Roxbury, Boston. His experience and skill at his trade, combined with a wise selection of location and a natural capacity for business, have brought him success in generous measure. From time to time he has enlarged his store and facilities for baking on Washington street, Roslindale, where he located in 1887. His plant is said to be a model of its kind as to cleanliness, equipment and convenience. After three years apprenticeship, he became associated with his brother in the baking business he had established at Roslindale, in Boston. He is a Republican in politics and a Lutheran in religion. He married Hilda Hansen, born in Christiana, Norway, August 28, 1873, of an old and respectable Norwegian family. His later years were spent in the United States, whither he came in 1881 at the urgent request of children who had preceded him, and he lived a quiet and retired life among his kinsfolk in Boston until his death in 1903 at the age of seventy-five years. They worked as laborers in a brewery for a time. Then John, who was enterprising and ambitious, invested his savings in the liquor business. He began in a modest way as a wholesale dealer in wine and liquor with a small bottling establishment. As business grew he increased his facilities and at the present time enjoys a large and growing business, employing many men and carrying an immense stock of goods. He has also invested extensively in real estate and owns valuable property from 201 to 207 Boylston street, Jamaica Plain. Mr. Imbescheid's fair and straightforward methods in business, his shrewdness and sagacity in judging goods, in buying and selling, and his natural executive ability have contributed largely to his success in life. He received a good education in the schools of his native town and completed a course in the trade schools of that place. He received his license as a baker when he was eighteen years of age. The same year he enlisted in the regular army and served three years. Returning home, he made his plans to engage in business as a baker, but soon afterwards, in 1871, the Franco-Prussian war broke out, and he at once enlisted as an active soldier. He served with distinction in the Fourth Infantry Regiment for two years. He fought in many serious engagements, ten battles, including those of Worth-Bairmont, Sedan, Strasburg and Metz. He was a non-commissioned officer in both the regular army and in active service. He was seriously wounded by a gun-shot in both legs, from the effects of which he suffered severely in after life. At the time of his discharge from the army, he was confined in the hospital on account of his wound. He was honored for his conspicuous bravery by receiving from the hands of the German Empress a fine meerschaum pipe, and was also awarded two medals. In his youth he was noted as an athlete, and was a fine swimmer, winning the first prize in a great aquatic contest at Kutomz. In June, 1873, attracted by the exceptional opportunities for the young man in America, he left his native country and came to Boston, Massachusetts. He started in as a journeyman baker, but in a few years found an opportunity to establish himself in business in Jamaica Plain. He opened a bakery on Boylston street, near Boylston station, and from the first the business prospered. As the years went on, he was able to purchase from time to time what was then vacant land, which he improved, and he left at the time of his death some very valuable real estate in the business section of the town. He was popular among his associates everywhere, and took an active interest in the affairs of town and state. Mrs. Ernst came of pure German stock of high order and good social standing. She came to America three months after her husband, having been betrothed to him before he left Baden. She was a true helpmeet to her husband, exceptionally generous and good hearted. As an illustration of her kind heart, it is related that it was her custom throughout the winter months to scatter a large amount of bread crusts from the bakery, in the back yard for the birds, every morning, and large flocks of the little creatures used to visit the yard each morning for their accustomed meal. After the death of her husband she conducted the business successfully for five years, and then transferred it to her son. The family attends the Congregational church. Children: 1. Carl Emil Julius Weissbrod was born at Coburg, Germany, in April, 1843. His father was a landscape gardener on one of the estates of King Leopold of Belgium. He attended the common schools until he was twelve years of age, and was chosen with two others to be promoted to the college preparatory school. These picked scholars were allowed free tuition. His tastes, however, were for a mercantile life, and he left school and entered the large manufacturing house and banking establishment of Bartels & Mohart, of Coburg, as apprentice, intending to remain four years. The failure of the firm changed his plans, and he entered an insurance office, and then worked for a man who bought goods on commission for the English market. Learning of a position in New York, he left Antwerp, and after a voyage of fifty-nine days, reached New York only to find that owing to his late arrival, the position had been filled. His money was soon gone, and he found it very difficult to get work. At last he found employment making pocket books in Union Hill, New Jersey, and as he was a beginner his pay was but twenty-five cents a week. By this time he was so weak from hunger that he was glad to take even that small pay. It was soon increased to fifty cents, and he soon went with his employer to New York to work, there receiving six dollars a week, and walking to and from the ferry each day. The next year his pay was advanced to seven dollars a week, and the following year eight. Then the summer came and work was dull. His employer, John Melil, was very kind to him and kept him until he could find work. For a short time he worked in an office on Broadway which published a musical paper, and his pay barely covered his board bill. About this time he met George Palmer, who was looking for a pocketbook maker to go to Montague, Massachusetts, and the pay was ten dollars a week. Mr. Weissbrod eagerly accepted the position, and borrowed the money for his car fare there. He went to South Deerfield by train, and thence by carriage to Montague. There was no other German in the small country town, and he was very homesick, thinking he would stay but a week. He stayed over twenty years. He boarded with Otis Caswell, and the people were kind to him. Soon he sent for a friend in Germany who worked at the same trade. His pay was raised from time to time, and from then on he was a successful business man. As soon as his capital was sufficient he started in business for himself, taking his work to the large cities to sell it. The business increased and he was obliged to hire help. In 1887 he removed to Greenfield, purchasing the property on Hope street, where the business is still located. He died after a short illness, October 5, 1905, at his home on Highland avenue. He married, September 14, 1869, Mary Eliza Newcomb, born at North Adams, Massachusetts, July 1, 1842, daughter of Ezra P. and Mary (Hamilton) Newcomb. Children: 1. Carl Julius, born at Bernardston, February 16, 1871, was educated in public schools, then worked in his father's factory, and when they reorganized was made president of the company; member of Second Congregational Church, Greenfield Business Men's Club, and Country Club; married Florence H., daughter of Frank Leslie, of New York City. 2. He came of a poor family and without a dollar of reserve sought his fortune in America. He found employment soon afterward in the dye works of the Nashawannick Manufacturing Company, at Easthampton, Massachusetts. His handwriting was as beautiful as copperplate script, and when he signed the pay-roll the attention of the countingroom was directed to him. He was immediately made a shipping clerk and soon afterward a clerk in the office. From time to time he won promotions until he became the head paymaster of this large corporation, and he held this position for thirty years, in fact until blindness and his last illness compelled him to resign. Altogether, he was in the employ of the company for forty-nine years. He was one of the most expert and accurate bookkeepers in the corporation to which he gave nearly all his active years. For many years he was deemed an expert in the keeping of accounts and was often called by other companies to put their books in order. The professional and official auditors, who had to do with books in his charge, always commended their accuracy, cleanliness and eligibility. He was extremely methodical and punctual in his habits of work. He reached his desk at exactly the same time daily, and it has been said that, knowing the time when he was due at a certain place, one might safely regulate his watch by Mr. Oberempt's movements. He was a charter member of Ionic Lodge, Free Masons, of Easthampton; a member of Royal Arch Masons, exalted July 19, 1871; and a member of the Deutsche Order Harugari. His sister Charlotte died in Germany, in 1905. He was shrewd in making investments, and at his death left a modest fortune as the fruit of his long, industrious and well-ordered life. He was a Congregationalist in religion and Republican in politics. He married, in Easthampton, July 12, 1857, Margaretta Kretz. She lives with her son at Easthampton. Children: Christina, Fred, William, Herman, mentioned below.

Hugo Oberempt served in the armies of two nations. He was for three years in the Guard de Cours (King's body-guard) in Germany. He enlisted in the civil war early and was mustered in July 22, 1861, at Hartford, Connecticut, in Company D, Fifth Connecticut Volunteers, Colonel Loomis; and was mustered again July 6, 1864, taking part in the grand review at Washington, May 24, 1865. He took part in the battle of Winchester, Virginia, March 25, 1862; in the battle of Cedar Mountain, August 9, 1862, when he was taken prisoner; in the battle of Chantilly, Virginia, September 1, 1863; and at Chancellorsville, May 1, 2, 3, 1864; at Resaca, Georgia, May 13, 14, 15, 1864; at Casville, Georgia, May 19, 1864; at Lost Mountain, June 17, 1864; at Culp's Farms, June 22, Peach-tree Creek, July 20, 1864; at the siege of Atlanta in August; in the battle at Montieth Station, December 15, 1864; and at the siege of Savannah in December. He was in the engagement at Chesterfield Court House, South Carolina, February 4, 1865; at Averysborough, North Carolina, March 16, 1865, and at Bentonville, March 19, 1865.

(11) Herman, son of Hugo Oberempt, was born at Easthampton, Massachusetts, October 17, 1861. He was educated in the public schools and at Williston Seminary, Easthampton, graduating there in the class of 1879. He studied chemistry for two years and a half at Crefeld, Germany. Upon his return he was employed in silk-dyeing in various mills in this country for twenty-five years. During the greater part of this time he was in Paterson, New Jersey. He worked a short time in early life in the Nashawannick Mills as a shipping clerk. He is at present treasurer of the Barnett Drop Forge Works, of Easthampton, and secretary of the Flexible Tire Company, both new concerns in Easthampton, manufacturing principally for the automobile companies. He is a Congregationalist in religion, an independent in politics. He is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He married, September 2, 1886, in Germany, Eveline Lienarz, born December 25, 1862, daughter of William and Wilhelmina (Bleuss) Lienarz. Her father was a soldier in the German army. Children: Margaret, a student in Smith College, class of 1911; William, Catharine, Elsie, Dorothy, Gertrude.

The sons of the Kings of DAUPHINEE France have been called dauphins from time immemorial. The surnames Dauphin and Dauphiné (Dauphinee) take their origin from the locality or province of Dauphiné. The province is named for the fish, doubtless, and some of the family bear the dauphin on their coats-of-arms. The Dauphins of Dauphine bear: D'argent a deux fasces d'azur. Another Dauphin coat-of-arms is: D'or à deux dauphins adossées d'azur acc. d'une étoile du même en chief.

Daniel Dauphinee, born 1703, came to Canada, and married Marie Jeanne Bessiere. Francois, son of Daniel Dauphinee, married Marie Madeleine Gnaudron. Jean Baptiste, son of Peter and Marie Catherine Dauphinee, came from Maqui de Noailles, diocese of Limoges, France, and married, in Canada, Marie Antoinette, born 1737; married, February 10, 1759, at Baie du Febvre.

(1) Frederick Dauphinee, immigrant ancestor, was born in France. He and his brother were French cavaliers under Napoleon, and served in his campaigns. Their father was a fine cabinet-maker, and a man of considerable property, owning a large estate. When the brothers entered the army they took with them gold, sewing it in belts around their waists, and, taking their horses, went to fight for their country. In one of the battles, when defeat became certain, and they saw the white flag of surrender, they turned their horses and escaped to a river, which they swam. They travelled until they came to the nearest seaport, and embarked with their horses on a vessel bound for America. After three months they reached Lunenburg, Nova Scotia. His brother went east to the Bay of St. George, where he settled, married, and had a large family of children. Many of his descendants are still living in that vicinity. Frederick Dauphinee settled in Lunenburg, and married Hannah Cornish.

(11) George Lewis, son of Frederick Dauphinee, was born at Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, December 25, 1802, and was baptized in the Episcopal church there. He attended the parish school until he was sixteen, and acquired a good education, being also a fine penman. He was brought up on a farm, and early learned the trade of ship carpenter. After his marriage he settled in Chester, Nova Scotia. He followed the sea, owned a vessel, and was engaged in coastwise service from Chester to Halifax. In 1847 he removed to Blanford, Nova Scotia, where he carried on a farm which he had leased, and also worked at the mason's trade. Later he removed to Aspogogan, Nova Scotia, where he lived until 1861, following his trade. In 1861 he went to Bridgewater, Nova Scotia, and worked at the mason's trade for a number of years. Later he was janitor of the Episcopal church, up to within a short time of his death in 1882. He was a man of serious bearing and good Christian principles. He was well educated, and had a good knowledge of the German language, which he had learned from his wife. In politics he was conservative. He married, at Lunenburg, July 4, 1824, Catherine Wenzel, born there September 25, 1802, died at Bridgewater, Nova Scotia, May 13, 1879, daughter of Nicholas and Catherine Wenzel. She was a very capable woman, by profession a nurse and physician. She was a member of the Episcopal church. Children, born at Chester, Nova Scotia: 1. Mary Ann, May 8, 1825; married Peter Morash; had George, Sophia, Ellen, Ada and Alice Morash. 2. John Lewis, October 22, 1826; married Elizabeth Corcomb; had Emma, married Simeon Ernst. 3. Sophia Elizabeth, December 24, 1843; married, May 28, 1861, Josiah Hebb; children: i. Ira Scott Hebb, born March 24, 1865, married Susan McFettridge, and had Ira Cecil Hebb; ii. Edgar Hebb, born February 28, 1868; iii. Lydia Maria Hebb, born December 21, 1870; iv. Percival Hebb, born June, 1872, died aged eleven; v. Ethel Maud Hebb, born April 23, 1873, married, November 29, 1905, Frank E. Robbins, and had George Elliott Robbins, born September 6, 1907, and Florence Ethel Robbins, born March 4, 1908; vi. Bertha May Hebb, born July 3, 1876, married (first) September 26, 1889, John E. Young, and had John Edward Young, born October 16, 1900, married (second) April 23, 1905, Ernest H. Atkinson, and had Mary E. Atkinson, born April 23, 1906, and Edgar Oliver Atkinson, June 24, 1907.

(111) George Caleb, son of George Lewis Dauphinee, was born at Chester, Nova Scotia, September 17, 1837, and died at Franklin, Massachusetts, April 5, 1906. He received his education in the parish school of his native town, and then worked on his uncle's farm at Mahone Bay for two years. For three seasons he drove logs on the Eastern river, working on the farm at other times. At the age of eighteen he went into the shipyard at the basin of La Have river, where he learned the trade of ship-carpenter, serving an apprenticeship of three years. He worked at this trade until 1864, when at the age of twenty-six he shipped as a seaman. After his first voyage he was promoted to first mate, and in 1867 became captain and half owner of a vessel. Three years later his ship was wrecked, all on board, however, being saved. Later he became an owner of the "Eureka," which was also wrecked. His next ship was the "Martin." His voyages were coastwise from Newfoundland to Boston, up to 1879. At this time he settled in Boston, Massachusetts. He obtained employment in the furniture shop of Philip Donohue, 83 Everett street, where he worked for three years as a furniture repairer. He was afterward employed by the Boston & Maine Railroad Company, having charge of the repair and woodwork of bridges and railroad stations. He built the buildings of the Dowell Rope Works, at East Boston, and engaged in general carpenter work until he removed to Norfolk, Massachusetts (City Mills), where he settled, and followed his trade for five years. In 1892 he removed to Franklin, Massachusetts, and established a business as general contractor, which he followed until his death, April 5, 1906. Among the many contracts which he had were the Crafts residence, Wait's Mill, the Bush Mill, Baltimore Mill, the residence of Edwin Trowbridge, and many other residences in Franklin and Milford. He was a member of the Improved Order of Red Men and of the Golden Cross. In religion he was an Episcopalian, and in politics a Republican. He married (first) Adelaide Ernst, born at Bridgewater, Nova Scotia, November 24, 1844, died at Franklin, Massachusetts, of cancer, August 25, 1901, daughter of Gasper and Delia (Greenough) Ernst, of Bridgewater, Nova Scotia. He married (second) September 11, 1903, Mrs. Delia (Collins) (Kennedy) Everett, daughter of Charles and Isabel (Tierney) Collins. There were ten children, all by the first wife. Among them were: 1. Delia. 2. George Melville, mentioned below. 3. James Titus, mentioned below. 4. Albert. 5. Arthur, burned to death. 6. Olive Maud, born February 13, 1888; died October 11, 1895.

(IV) George Melville, son of George Caleb Dauphinee, was born at Bridgewater, Nova Scotia, January 15, 1867. At the age of five he removed with his parents to Port Midwed, where he attended the public schools until the age of seventeen. For a short time he worked on the Oakes farm, at Bridgewater, Nova Scotia, and for four years in the brick yard there, and subsequently in the lumber yard of Henry Davison of that place. He then remained with a contractor, Mr. Smith, of Bridgewater, for three years, learning the carpenter's trade. He went to Boston and thence to Franklin, Massachusetts, and found employment with Mr. Willet, a contractor, of Wrentham. Subsequently he entered the employ of his father, who was then a contractor in Franklin. About 1896 he started in business for himself, doing general contract work, and since 1905 has added the business of plumbing to his other work. His place of business is at 19 Depot street, succeeding J. F. Hussey. He has a large and profitable business. Among the many fine residences which he has built are those of E. Waters, at Franklin; of William Luscomb, Robert Munroe and Walter Slade, at Plainville. He has also remodeled the paper mills at City Mills, and is the builder of the Kingsbury residence, at Norfolk. He is an enterprising, hard-working man, and has accumulated a comfortable fortune. He built a home for himself on Fales street, which was burned April 3, 1909, but he immediately rebuilt it. He owns considerable real estate. In religion he is an Episcopalian, although he and his family attend the Congregational church. He is a member of the Society of Pilgrim Fathers. He married, April 30, 1897, at Boston, Eliza Agnes Fisher, born at Montreal, Canada, February 18, 1875, daughter of David and Emma (Fryer) Fisher. Her father was an iron moulder by trade. (V) James Titus, son of George Caleb Dauphinee, was born at Bridgewater, Nova Scotia, October 6, 1871. He attended the public schools at Port Midwed, where his parents had removed when he was an infant. He lived five months at Bridgewater, and then went to East Chester, where he worked for his uncle, Lewis Dauphinee, on his farm. In 1885 he came to Boston, Massachusetts, and was employed for nine months in the dry goods store of Jordan, Marsh & Co. Afterward he entered the machine shop of Robinson & Chase, Boston, remaining a year, and attending the Phillips school for five months. He went with his parents to City Mills, worked in the car shop of John Fisher, and later for the City Mills Felt Company for two years. At this time he decided to learn his father's trade, and worked in his employ until 1906, when his father died. Since then he has been in business for himself, and he has erected a number of houses in Franklin and vicinity. In April, 1908, he purchased the Nickerson homestead of three acres on Central street, where he makes his home. He is a member of the Improved Order of Red Men, at Franklin; of the New England Order of Protection, and of the Franklin Fire Department. William Casey, of an ancient and prominent family, was a farmer all his active life in county Longford, Ireland. He married Esther ———. Among their children was Owen, mentioned below.

(II) Owen, son of William Casey, was born in county Longford, Ireland, in 1822, and died in 1888, at the age of sixty-six years. The rudiments of an education he obtained in his native parish, and at the age of eighteen he joined the tide of emigration to America. He found employment in the brick kilns of Kingsley Brothers, Somerville, Massachusetts, and learned the business thoroughly. With his savings he embarked in brick-making on his own account in 1865, at Somerville, and continued for ten years. Then he became a stone mason and builder, contracting for structures in which he used the bluestone from his own quarry, near the Mystic river, and after about five years found sufficient business in the sale of stone from this quarry. He was a shrewd, careful and successful business man. He was a Democrat in politics, and a Roman Catholic in religion. He married, March, 1854, Jane Smith, of Charlestown, Massachusetts, born March 14, 1832, in county Donegal, Ireland, daughter of Andrew and Hannah (Scanlon) Smith. Her father was a mason by trade, removing to St. John, New Brunswick, in 1834, and followed his trade there and at Boston and Charlestown, Massachusetts, where he died January 21, 1891, aged ninety years. Her mother, Bridget Scanlon, daughter of Barnard Scanlon, died at Charlestown, November 4, 1905. Mrs. Jane (Smith) Casey's great-uncle, John McLoughlin, was a soldier in the British army, and took part in the battle of Bunker Hill, settling afterward at Woodstock, New Brunswick, where he received a grant of land from the British government for his military service; he married ——— Matthieson, who lived to the age of one hundred and two years. Her grandfather was one hundred and one years old when he died. Mrs. Casey came to Boston with her parents when she was ten years old, and her education was completed in the public schools of that city. Before her marriage she was engaged in the millinery business in Boston. The family moved from Boston to Charlestown after her marriage. Children of Owen and Jane (Smith) Casey: 1. William, died aged ten years. 2. Sarah, died aged nine years. 3. Julia A., mentioned below. 4. Annie, died aged seven years. 5. Andrew, was a soldier in the Spanish-American war in Cuba, in the regiment of Colonel E. V. Sumner; lives with his mother and sister at Needham. 6. Frederick F. 7. Jane, married Hugh Campbell; children: Margaret G., Annie, Julia, Mary. 8. Esther, married Alvah Reynolds, of Somerville. 9. William, manager of the Needham Exchange of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company; married Mary Cashman, of Canton, Massachusetts. 10. Owen L., employed by New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

(III) Julia A. Casey, daughter of Owen Casey, was born in Somerville, February 5, 1859, and was educated there in the public schools, graduating from the high school in the class of 1877. She entered the Training School for Nurses at the Massachusetts General Hospital, of Boston, in 1879, graduating in 1881. She practiced her profession for the next fourteen years, attending surgical cases for the most part. In the course of her work she went abroad, visiting London, Paris, and southern France. Since 1901 she has been at home caring for her mother and managing the household. The home is on Grant street, Needham, near the Park. She bought the place and has planned the architecture and surroundings in simple colonial style. Even the gardens and sun-dial are carried out along strictly old-fashioned lines. Miss Casey likes nothing better than to work in her flower gardens with her own hands. The house is furnished throughout with colonial furniture, some of it being antique and valuable. Altogether it is a picturesque and delightful home, one of the most charming and attractive of its kind in the county. Miss Casey keeps in touch with her profession without practicing, by retaining her membership in the Alumnae Association of Nurses. Uniformly kind and tactful in all her relations, devoted in her care of her mother and brothers, refined in her tastes and of artistic temperament, she is loved and esteemed by all her neighbors and many friends besides her own family circle. Like all the family she is a devoted Catholic in religion.

LANDERS The family intended to be treated in this place is not one whose American ancestor dates to the colonial period, nor has it an ancestor who fought in the French and Indian wars, nor in the revolution, nor even in the second war with the mother country; but its immigrant ancestor was of sturdy Irish stock, who came over when about thirty years old, with wife and children, and with the aim and purpose of improving the condition of his domestic life, for then he was almost without means, and his only capital was a determination to succeed, good health and a strong constitution—possessions that even large wealth cannot always secure.

(I) John Landers was a native of old county Kerry, Ireland, his birthplace alone being evidence of the sturdy stock from which he sprung. He was born about 1818, and came to this country in 1848. He settled in Holyoke, Massachusetts, and began life there as a laborer on the construction work of the original dam at South Hadley Falls. From Holyoke he went to Winchester, Virginia, lived there several years, and died about 1858, when he was about forty years old and in the prime of manhood. In Ireland Mr. Landers married Jane Sullivan, and by her had six children, three of whom were born in Ireland and three after he came to America. Those born in this country were sons Richard and Dennis, and a daughter Johanna, the latter of whom became the wife of John O'Connell.

(II) Dennis J., younger of the two sons of John and Jane (Sullivan) Landers, was born in Winchester, Virginia, April 14, 1853, and during the forty years of his life in Holyoke has come to be recognized as one of the best examples of the purely self-made man of which that famous industrial city can boast. At the time of his father's death he was only about five years old, and just as soon as he was old enough to work it became necessary that he do something to help his mother provide for her little family. Throughout the years of the civil war Mrs. Landers remained in Richmond, and when he was eleven years old Dennis was employed in making bullets and cartridges for use in the Confederate army, and in doing this he was able to earn a little something for the family support. In 1866, when he was thirteen, he came north to Holyoke, where his father first settled on coming to this country. There he found work in a factory, and proved an industrious and steady boy. After four years he set out to learn the trade of a mason, became in good time a practical workman and soon afterward started in business for himself. Whatever he undertook to do was done well, and he was straightforward in every transaction. Thus it was that one finished contract brought another, so that his business increased rapidly and he became prosperous and employed many workmen in the erection of public buildings and factories, to a large number of which he can point with pardonable pride as evidences of his thrift and honest methods. In 1882 he built the greater part of the large building erected for the Parsons Paper Company, the George R. Dickinson Paper Company. In connection with his building operations Mr. Landers for many years has carried on a brickyard, which he originally began according to his means and the demands of trade, but now the average annual product of his kilns is more than four and a half million bricks. The yards furnish employment to about thirty-five workmen, in addition to which his contract work requires something like eighty competent masons, bricklayers, tenders and helpers, besides teamsters. It will be seen from what has been stated that Mr. Landers has been a very busy man during all these years, and it may be said also that his business life has been rewarded with substantial and deserved success. In Holyoke he is known as a progressive and public spirited citizen, always taking an earnest interest in whatever measures are proposed for the welfare of the city and its people. In 1881 he was elected a member of the board of aldermen, representing ward five, but generally he has not been particularly active in political affairs.

In 1881 Mr. Landers married Mary Cavanaugh, daughter of Thomas and Mary Cavanaugh, of Holyoke. Of their five children two died in infancy. The others are: 1. Minnie, born 1882; married Martin Millane. 2. Frank, born 1884. 3. John, born 1887. 4. Lena, born in 1891.

William Pollard Cavanaugh was born in Ireland in 1800, and died in South Boston, Massachusetts, in 1889. He was brought up in his native town where his ancestors had lived for many generations. In 1819 he came to this country, a pioneer among the Irish that flocked to America in the middle of the nineteenth century. He first located in New Bedford, later settled in South Boston, 1834. A few years later he engaged in business as a building mover and pile driver, and later as a general contractor. From a modest beginning he developed a large and profitable business. He was a faithful Roman Catholic and a generous supporter of the parish. He is buried in the Catholic cemetery, in South Boston. He married, in Boston, in 1830, Margaret Alston Russell, who died at the age of forty-six years. Children: 1. James V., born April 29, 1831; a twin of John; died aged twenty-seven. 2. John, mentioned below. 3. George H., born in Boston, June 16, 1839; resides in Milton, Massachusetts.

(II) John, son of William Pollard Cavanaugh, was born April 29, 1831, in New Bedford, Massachusetts. When he was about three years old his parents moved to Boston and he was educated there in the public schools. He learned the trade of mason and later that of carpenter. When he was twenty-one years old he began in business as contractor and builder. He was associated with his father and succeeded him in the building-moving business in South Boston. He has had contracts for moving, raising and altering many large buildings in Massachusetts, especially in Boston and vicinity. He had the contract for the moving and altering of the county court house at Taunton, Massachusetts, and a similar contract for the Middlesex county court house at Lowell, Massachusetts. He raised and straightened the Baltic tower, a contract that required the use of a two thousand lifting jack. He had one of the best equipped plants in New England, and his reputation for handling large and difficult operations in his line of work was excelled by no contractor in the country. He practically retired in 1905. He has resided in Braintree since 1868 and built his own residence at 72 Cedar street in 1894. He has built many other residences and buildings in Boston and vicinity. In later years his son William has been in partnership with him, and he still continues the business, while his younger son Charles is independently engaged in the same line of contracting. In politics he is a Democrat, but has never sought public office. In religion he is a Catholic, a member of the Braintree parish. He married (first) 1854, Mary Phillips, born at South Boston. He married (second) in 1867, Mrs. Hilliard Sweeney, born 1846, in county Cork, Ireland, in the parish of South Bar. Mabel, died at age of twelve. 12. Arthur. 13. Agnes, married George Garvin. 14. Grace. 15. Child, unnamed.

Colonel August H. Goetting
GOETTING was born in New York City.

In the early eighties he came to Springfield, Massachusetts, and engaged in the music publishing business, which at the present time (1909) is one of the largest houses of its kind in the country. He is largely interested in real estate investments in Springfield, is one of the heaviest taxpayers, stands high in the business and social life, is a member of all the leading social organizations, and in 1886 was one of the committee of fifty appointed to arrange for the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the settlement of the city.

Colonel Goetting is one of the leading Republicans of Massachusetts. As a young man, before leaving his native state, New York, he took an active part in the election of Seth Low to the mayoralty of Brooklyn, and in 1880 was a delegate from New York to the Republican national convention which nominated the late James A. Garfield, his colleagues being Roscoe Conkling and Chester A. Arthur. On taking up his residence in Springfield he was elected a member of the Republican city committee, and during the ill-fated Blaine canvass served as secretary. In 1889 he succeeded William H. Haile as a member of the state committee, and the regard in which he was held by his political co-workers was demonstrated by the fact that he was placed on the executive committee and was finally appointed to the chairmanship of that committee. Being recognized from the first as a leading spirit, subsequently when it was necessary to raise funds for the national campaign he was made chairman of the finance committee, serving two years, and subsequently was elected chairman of the Republican state committee, serving six years, during which time the party never suffered defeat. In 1904 he was a delegate to the Republican national convention and served on the committee on permanent organization. He was one of the electors-at-large in the 1908 election, and the fact that he ran far ahead of his ticket attests the great popularity he enjoys. He was appointed to fill the vacancy on Governor Guild's council, having also been elected to serve as a member of Governor Draper's council, 1909. His military title comes from service on the staffs of Governor John Q. A. Brackett, Governor Greenhalge and Governor Wolcott. He is a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company and also of the Old Guard of Massachusetts. He has been president of Independence Day Association for three years.

 MORE Scotch, and has its numerous variants, Lanarkshire alone having the forms of More, Moir, Moore and Muir. Its members have adorned every profession, and have been conspicuous both in civil and military life.

(I) Thomas More, born in Scotland, in 1820, was educated there, and learned the carpenter's trade. In young manhood he came to the United States, locating in Springfield, Massachusetts, where he first worked as a journeyman, and in a few years engaged in business for himself as a contracting builder. Among his most important work were many houses which he built for Willis Phelps, a prominent real estate promoter of Springfield. He also invested wisely in real estate in that city, accumulated considerable means, and held high place in the estimation of the community, as a man upright and honorable in all his relations, and of unspotted integrity and sterling character. He was a member of Trinity Church, and for many years a prominent member of Hampden Lodge of Odd Fellows, of Springfield. He made a visit to his old home in Scotland. He died February 23, 1891. (II) William Wallace More, second son and child of Thomas and Susan E. Keith More, was born in Springfield, Massachusetts, July 31, 1848, and died in Boston, January 6, 1899. He was educated in the public schools and received his training for a commercial career in a New York business college. His first engagement was a bookkeeper for King, Norton & Ladd, of Springfield. On arriving at age, in 1869, he became a partner of Samuel Bigelow in the wholesale flour and produce business, with store in Hampden street. In 1875 A. A. Marston was admitted to partnership, and these three gentlemen were associated until 1891, when Mr. Bigelow retired. At the time the Union railroad station was built, the firm moved to its present location on Lyman street. In addition to the business above mentioned, Mr. More was for many years a director of the Springfield Safe Deposit and Trust Company, and of the Chapman Valve Company, of Indian Orchard, and was also treasurer of the Springfield Board of Trade. As a man of affairs he was able and upright, with a well earned reputation for business sagacity and exceptional fairness and honesty in all his dealings. He was active as a member of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, served long as one of the board of trustees, and was at one time president of the Laurel Park Camp Meeting Association. In politics he was a Republican, and for three years (1887-88-89), was a member of the Springfield common council. He had attained rank in the Masonic order, and was affiliated with Roswell Lee Lodge, Springfield Chapter, Springfield Commandery, and Massachusetts Consistory, thirty-second degree. Until the spring before his death he was in good health, and shared in the activities of social as well as of business life. He was frank, sincere and kindly in disposition, and had many warm friendships. He was a victim of tumor on the brain, for which he was undergoing treatment in Boston at the time of his death.

STOHN Carl Stohn, Sr., was born in Saxony, Germany, in 1828. He was educated there and learned the art of silk manufacture. He engaged in business in his native land in the making of silk novelties which he sold with other goods of similar nature in a store. He came to this country in 1880 and engaged in the same line of business with a factory at Jersey Heights, New Jersey, continuing until his death in 1896. He was descended from an ancient German family of good standing in social life as well as in business. He married in his native province Ada Zierold, born January 6, 1836, in Saxony, and came to America with her husband. She is living in New Jersey and very active for her years. Both were active members of the German Lutheran church. Children: 1. Gustave, born February 4, 1859; a manufacturer of silk button cloth in New Jersey; married Annie Wilham, and has three daughters and one son. 2. Carl, February 2, 1861; mentioned below. 3. Oscar, October 26, 1862; is employed in the Jersey Heights silk mill founded by his father; has a son and daughter. 4. Emil, February 28, 1865; has charge of the silk mill at Jersey Heights established by his father and now operated by the firm of Carl Stohn & Sons; has two daughters. 5. Paul, January 28, 1867; is retired from business; resides at Jersey Heights. 6. Otto, December 18, 1874; is superintendent of the silk mill of his brother Carl at Jersey Heights; has no children. Six children are deceased.

(II) Carl (2), son of Carl (1) Stohn, was born in Saxony, February 2, 1861. He was educated in the schools of his native place, and had at the age of fourteen a thorough knowledge of the rudimentary branches of learning. He worked in his father's shop and learned various branches of the art of making silk novelties during the next three years. With a desire to try his hand at business on his own account, and at the same time to see the world, he set out from home at the age of seventeen with a stock of goods as an itinerant merchant. He traveled far and near selling his wares through Hungary and Austria and other German-speaking countries, as well as in the Fatherland. Eventually, he determined to seek his fortune in the United States. The journey exhausted his slender resources, however, and he landed in New York City in 1881 with less than a nickel in his possession. He found work at his trade immediately and, with his pay at piece work, made eighteen dollars during his first three days. From that moment he has made steady progress in business. He rose rapidly in the esteem of his employers, and at the age of twenty-six became superintendent of a silk mill. He had charge of various silk-making factories in New York, New Jersey and California. Thence he came to Boston in 1890 and was superintendent of a button cloth factory in that city for the next five years. When he was refused an increase of salary which he believed should have been given him, he left the concern, and began business on his own account, in a modest way, with ten looms, manufacturing the silk novelties with which he had been familiar from his youth. His mastery of the art and familiarity with the trade furnished him with an equipment that compensated for his lack of capital. From the outset business prospered, and from ten looms he has increased his plant to one hundred and twenty. His factory is located at 178 Green street, Jamaica Plain, Boston, in a large brick building. He has agencies in Chicago and New York and a representative in Canada. The product of his factory finds a good market in all parts of the country. He manufactures a variety of novelties, in silk and other fabrics, including button cloth. After the death of his father, he took charge of the business at Jersey Heights and has been at the head of the firm of Carl Stohn & Sons to the present time. In the Jamaica Plain factory one hundred and twenty-five hands are employed; at Jersey Heights sixty or more. Mr. Stohn is vice-president of the Henrici Washer Company, of Boston, and also of the Ruttkamp-Mineke Company, of Jersey City. Mr. Stohn is a Republican in politics and in religion a Lutheran. He is a Mason, a Shriner and an Elk. Mr. Stohn has a beautiful residence on Metropolitan avenue, Roslindale, favored with an excellent view of the attractive scenery of this fine old section of Boston. He is an excellent type of the self-made American of foreign birth. Coming here with ambition, skill and much natural ability, but handicapped by a foreign language and lack of capital, he has achieved a degree of success that does credit to both the country of his birth and education and to that of his adoption. He has shown discretion, tact and discernment in his business career, as well as energy, industry and integrity.

He married, in New Jersey, March 27, 1886, Mary Kleindienst, born in Saxony, January 27, 1866. She came to America with her parents, Fred and Augusta Kleindienst, who were born, reared and married in Saxony. Chil-

The Veasy family is thought to VEASY be of French origin. It is found in England and Scotland as well as in Ireland. The original spelling of this surname is in doubt. Two of the name came to Massachusetts from England before 1650—Robert, of Watertown, and William, of Braintree. The name is spelled in an infinite variety of ways, such as Vasey, Veazie, Veasie, Vesay, Vesey, Veza, Phese, Facy and Feasy.

(I) Mathew Veasy lived and died in county Roscommon, Ireland, where many generations of his ancestors had lived. Most of the Irish family now use the spelling Vesey.

(II) Michael, son of Mathew Veasy, was born in county Roscommon, Ireland, about 1810. He came in the early forties to the United States, and made his home in the town of New Marlborough, Massachusetts. He married Nora, daughter of James and Ellen (Hanley) McGlaughlin. He made his home in New Marlborough, until 1884; he died at Westfield, April, 1905. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religion a devout Roman Catholic. He married Ann Kelley, born in Hollymount, county Mayo, Ireland, February, 1837, daughter of Patrick and Bridget (Roland) Kelley, and granddaughter of William Kelley and Martin Roland. Children, born at New Marlborough: John, Michael J., Mary E., Catherine E., William (died young), Patrick H., William E., Agnes A., Sarah J. (deceased), Alice L.

When a young boy he began to work in the paper mills. In 1892 he came to Westfield and was a clerk in the retail shoe store of B. F. Lewis & Son until 1896, when he embarked in his present business as a real estate and insurance agent. He has been remarkably successful in business, and has won the utmost respect and confidence of his townsmen. He is a Democrat in politics, and has taken an active and prominent part in town affairs. For many years he has served as chairman of the appropriation committee of the town, the most important committee in connection with town affairs under the present method of conducting the annual town meeting, when appropriations are made for the ensuing year. He was a director of the Westfield Board of Trade for a number of years. He is one of the incorporators of the Woronoco Savings Bank. As his parents did not wish him to go to war, in 1882 he was sent to Italy. From there he went to the United States, and found employment at once as a journeyman baker. Three years later he started in business on his own account in Boston, a bakery, which he carried on most successfully for twenty-five years, and by hard work and careful management accumulated a large competence. The surname Phillips is spelled PHILLIPS in a variety of ways, and is derived from the baptismal name. In Wales and other parts of Great Britain it has been used as a surname for at least five hundred years. It is said that Phillipse is Welsh, and Philips is from Worcestershire. It is stated on good authority that the Phillips family of Watertown, Massachusetts, were of the Devonshire family. Others think that all the descendants in America are from the Welsh family. There were many immigrants of the name who settled in New England.*

(1) Rev. George Phillips, immigrant ancestor, was born at Raynham, county Norfolk, England, about 1593, and was son of Christopher Phillips of that place. He graduated as B. A. from Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, in 1613, and received the degree of M. A. in 1617. "He gave early indications of deep piety, uncommon talents, and love of learning, and at the University distinguished himself by his remarkable progress in learning especially in theological studies, for which he manifested an early partiality." He was settled for a time in the ministry in county Suffolk, but being a non-conformist determined to cast his lot with the Puritans in America. He sailed for New England, April 12, 1630, in the ship "Arabella," with his wife and two children, in Governor Winthrop's company, and arrived at Salem June 12. His wife soon died (evidently unable to endure the hardships of the voyage) and was buried by the side of Lady Arbella Johnson. He soon located in Watertown, and was settled as the first minister of the town. He had thirty acres of land granted him in 1630 and built a house, which was burned before the close of the year. Tradition says that his next house is still standing, "opposite the ancient burial ground, back from the road." This old house has a solid oaken frame said to have been brought over by Sir Richard Saltonstall. It was remodelled, but the interior shows marks of great age. Rev. Mr. Phillips remained as pastor of the church until his death, July 2, 1644. He was admitted a free-man May 18, 1631, the earliest date of any such admission. He left a large estate for the time, five hundred and fifty pounds, two shillings, nine pence. His library was valued at seventy-one pounds, nine shillings, nine pence. "He was the earliest advocate of the Congregational order and discipline. His views were for a time regarded as novel, suspicious and extreme, and he, with his ruling elder, Mr. Richard Brown, stood almost unaided and alone, until the arrival of Mr. John Cotton, in family maintaining what was and still is, the Congregationalism of New England. It is not now easy to estimate the extent and importance of the influence of Mr. Phillips in giving form and character to the civil and ecclesiastical institutions of New England." He married (first) a daughter of Richard Sargent. He married (second) Elizabeth ———, probably widow of Captain Robert Welden. She died in Watertown, June 27, 1681. Children of first wife: 1. Samuel, born 1625; settled in Rowley. 2. Elizabeth, born in England; married Job Bishop. Children of second wife: 3. Zerubabel, born April 6, 1632; married Ann White. 4. Jonathan, born November 16, 1633. 5. Theophilus, born May 28, 1636; mentioned below. 6. Annabel, born December, 1637; died April, 1639. 7. Ephraim, born June, 1640-41, died young. 8. Obadiah, died young. 9. Abigail, married, October 8, 1666, James Barnard; died in Sudbury, 1672.

(11) Theophilus, son of Rev. George Phillips, was born May 28, 1636. He lived in Watertown, and married (first) Bethia ———, who died March 15, 1669. He married (second), November 21, 1677, Mary Bennet. She, being a widow, made her will in Hopkinton, December 3, 1730. Children of first wife: 1. Bethiah, born December 21, 1668; died young. Children of second wife: 2. Samuel, born February 20, 1679-80; died November 9, 1752; settled in Weston; married, February 12, 1710-11, Deborah Dix. 3. Benjamin, settled in Waltham; married Mary ———; died 1740 s. p. 4. Mary, born September 16, 1684; died June following. 5. Mary, born November 15, 1685; married ——— Cook. 6. Theophilus, born June 24, 1688; married, May 28, 1723, Alice Cook; settled in Hopkinton. 7. Jonathan, baptized July 13, 1690. 8. John, born December

*Editor's Note—There is little doubt concerning the origin and ancient ancestry of the Phillips family in England, and volumes have been written of the descendants of the several representatives of that surname who crossed the Atlantic and settled in the plantations of New England during the years of the seventeenth century. In Great Britain the name has been known in some of its various forms for more than five hundred years, and when written "Phillipse" it indicates a Welsh family, while "Phillips" is distinctly English. It has been urged by some authorities that the English Phillips family originated in Wales and in later generations spread throughout the kingdom and adopted various forms of spelling, such as Phillips, Philips, Phillipse, Philipps and others as well; but in this country the almost universal orthographical construction of the name is Phillips.

He owned several tracts of land in Oxford and vicinity. The farm was inherited by his son Israel and grandson Simon, at whose death it passed out of the hands of the family. William D. Dalrymple afterwards occupied the farm, and the site of the old house is supposed to be known. He married (first) Ruth Towne, who died July 4, 1760. He married (second), December 10, 1760, Mrs. Bathsheba Towne, of Oxford. Children, born in Oxford: 1. Jonathan, born August 12, 1732; settled in Sturbridge. 2. He married, September 18, 1760, Huldah Towne, born November 2, 1737, daughter of Jonathan Towne, of Topsfield. (V) Israel (2), son of Lieutenant Israel (1) Phillips, was born in Oxford, April 7, 1771; died February 3, 1844. He removed about 1790 to Greenfield, Massachusetts, and bought a piece of wild land, when he settled. He lived the first few years in a log house. It was his practice for several winters during the early part of his married life to teach school, taking his dinner, and leaving his wife alone in a house three-quarters of a mile from any neighbors in the midst of a forest which at that time was not clear of wild beasts. He went two or three miles to the schoolhouse, returning at night. He married, in 1791, Mercy Bascom, daughter of Deacon Moses Bascom, of Greenfield. Children, born in Greenfield: 1. Stephen C. Bemis, of Springfield. He was a successful and popular hotel keeper and followed the business for thirty years and lived successively in Springfield, Brattleborough, Vermont; Hartford, Connecticut; Athol and Fitchburg, Massachusetts. gust 16, 1873. 4. Henry Moses, born August 11, 1845, mentioned below. 5. Mary Anne, born February 23, 1847, married John A. Field; son, Henry Alonzo Field, born August 8, 1870. 6. Emma Lucy, born December 23, 1854, married C. A. Brown.

(VII) Henry Moses, son of Alonzo D. Phillips, was born in Athol, Massachusetts, August 11, 1845. He attended the public schools at Fitchburg, Massachusetts, the Deerfield Academy at Deerfield, Massachusetts, and the Norwich University, where he had been a student for a year and a half when the civil war came on. In company with students from Norwich and from Dartmouth College he went to Providence, Rhode Island, to enlist in a squadron of cavalry that Governor Sprague had been authorized to recruit for three months service. It was called the Seventh Squadron, Rhode Island Cavalry. It was raised for the purpose of taking the place of seasoned troops in guard duty at Washington, but every man was needed at the front at that time. General McClellan was being driven back from the Peninsula and the squadron was sent into active service in the Valley of the Shenandoah. Just after the battle of Antietam Mr. Phillips returned to Springfield and became a clerk in the office of Mayor Henry Alexander, Jr. He was commissioned second lieutenant by Governor Andrew and assigned to the Fourth Massachusetts Cavalry. He went with his regiment to the front in South Carolina and later joined the Union army under General Butler on the south side of Richmond. He served until shortly before the end of the war and was breveted captain. Upon his return home, he was appointed to an office in the internal revenue department and finally became deputy collector of the district. In 1871 he established himself in the business of manufacturing steam heating apparatus and built up a thriving trade. His business was incorporated as the Phillips Manufacturing Company, of which he was president and treasurer. He sold out about 1895 to a new corporation and retired. In politics Mr. Phillips is a Republican. He was for a number of years member of the Springfield common council from ward four and represented his district in the general court in Boston. He was mayor of Springfield in 1883-84-85, and state senator in 1886-87. From 1889 to 1893 he was postmaster of Springfield. In 1893 he was elected state treasurer of Massachusetts and receiver-general. He was re-elected in 1894. In April, 1895, he resigned the office of state treasurer to accept the office of secretary of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company. He was elected to the office of vice-president of this company, July 27, 1904, and resigned January 1, 1909. Mr. Phillips is a member of the Massachusetts Commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, and of E. K. Wilcox Post, No. 16, Grand Army of the Republic. He belongs to the Winthrop and Nayasset clubs of Springfield. He is vice-president of the Springfield Five Cents Savings Bank. Mr. Phillips has been for many years one of the financial leaders of the city and no man is better known or more highly respected in the community. In religion he is a Unitarian, being a member of the Church of the Unity. He married, December 29, 1874, Julia Bowles Alexander, daughter of Henry and Amelia (Peabody) Alexander, and granddaughter of Henry Alexander Sr., of Northfield, Massachusetts. Their only child, Henry Alexander, was born September 10, 1875, at Springfield. He was educated in a private school at Belmont, Massachusetts, at Harvard College, where he was graduated in the class of 1897 with the degree of A. B., receiving the Master's degree a year later. He took a course of five years in "L'Ecole des Beaux Arts" in Paris, France, graduating in 1904 and is now a member of the the firm of Phillips & Ingalls, architects, of New York City.

The surname Watson is derived from Wat, the familiar form for Walter, with the termination Son, meaning son of. It is of English origin. The arms borne by the Watsons of Rockingham, county Northampton, are: Parted pr. pale first argent on chevron azure three crescents or, between three martlets sable.

(1) John Watson, immigrant ancestor of this branch of the family in America, settled first in Rowley, Massachusetts, where he was admitted a freeman in 1672. He removed to Bradford, where he was one of the original members of the church in 1682. The inventory of his estate was filed in 1685. He married Eunice (or Emma), daughter of James Barker. She was admitted to the Bradford church in 1695. Children: 1. Nathaniel. 2. William, born about 1650. 3. John, mentioned below.

(II) John (2), son of John (1) Watson, was born about 1660. His will was dated April 24 and proved June 5, 1710. He was a signer of both Bradbury petitions. He settled in Salisbury. He married, March 22, 1687, Ruth Griffin, who was admitted to the Bradford church in 1697, and to the Salisbury church August 25, 1706. Children born at Salisbury: 1. Abraham, December 13, 1688. 2. John, September 11, 1690; died young. 3. Hannah, April 5, 1695; died April 12, 1695. 4. Jonathan, October 12, 1696. 5. Ruth, baptized November 14, 1697. 6. (III) Ebenezer, son of John (2) Watson, was born about 1634, and married Martha Rawlins, of Newbury. Children: Eliphalet, mentioned below, and others.

(IV) Eliphalet, son of Ebenezer Watson, was born in Newbury, Massachusetts, June 1, 1717. He went to Maine when a young man, and was admitted to the church at Falmouth in 1739. He was an early settler in Gorham, Maine. He was a proprietor of Gorham as early as 1742, and it is said that he was the fifth settler of the town. The tradition in the family that he was English, like many other similar traditions, applies to his ancestry. Many of the Watson families are Scotch, and there is a tradition in some branches of the family that he was of Scotch ancestry. He owned lots 27 and 28, and built a log house on the former. A few years later he erected a substantial frame dwelling, which was torn down not many years ago. He was there when the French and Indian wars broke out, and in 1746 with others he removed to the fort, where he lived seven years. Two of his children and perhaps more were born in the fort, or garrison house, as it was called. The hardship of these years is hardly conceivable by the present generation. Often starvation threatened the settlers. Watson became one of the most prominent and useful citizens of the town, and was one of the first deacons of the Congregational church. He held various offices of trust and honor, and was distinguished by his sound sense, wisdom, industry, prudence and honesty. He has been described as a pillar of strength in the community. In later years he lived at Norway, where he died March 14, 1812, aged ninety-four years eight months. He married (intentions dated at Falmouth, April 29, 1740) Elizabeth, died April 15, 1795, aged seventy-four years, daughter of Captain John P. and Martha (Colman) Phinney. Children, born at Gorham: 1. John, September 23, 1741; married, December 5, 1765, Tabitha Whitney; soldier in the revolution. 2. Martha, December 4, 1743; died May 10, 1790. 3. Susanna, February 1, 1746. 4.

He resided on the Watson homestead at Gorham until March 6, 1805, when he sold it to J. P. Little and Major Ellis, of Standish, and removed with his family to Poland (now Norway) Maine, on the Fort Hill road. The farm is still known as the Watson place, and possesses a fine trout brook and excellent orchards. He was a soldier in the revolution, private in Captain John Reed's company, Colonel Samuel McCobb's regiment, August 28 to December 1, 1781, engaged in coast defense. He married (first) Anna Maxfield, born in Casco or Raymond, September 26, 1768, died October 22, 1802; (second) May 22, 1803, Mrs. Polly or Mary (Bacon) Hanscom, born in Barnstable, Massachusetts, August 28, 1775, died in Westfield, Massachusetts, January 10, 1855. Minnie, born July 7, 1861; died August 18, 1861.

(VII) Addison Howard, son of Joseph Hanscom Watson, was born in Saccarappa, May 7, 1846. His father moved to Westfield, Massachusetts, from Saccarappa, when he was a young child and he attended the public and high schools of that town. During the civil war he accompanied Captain John Avery, of Company K, Forty-sixth Massachusetts Regiment, and was with that officer nine months. He returned to Westfield, where he found employment in the tobacco business of Thomas R. Kneil, in Westfield. In 1867 he came to Springfield to work in the woolen mill of Caleb Alden, and continued with this concern under the ownership of father and sons until 1883, when he became a partner in the firm of Alden, Lillie & Watson, dealers in cotton waste. In 1884 this firm was absorbed by the Springfield Waste Company. The other firms that went into this consolidation were Howard Brothers, of Springfield, and the Union Wadding Company of Pawtucket, Rhode Island. Mr. Watson has been secretary of the corporation, and is well and favorably known to the trade. In Politics he is a Republican. He is a member of the Winthrop and the North Branch fishing clubs, both of Springfield. He is a member of the First Congregational parish, also the Connecticut Valley Congregational Club.

He married, October 8, 1873, Ruema Chapin Call, born August 6, 1851, daughter of Amos and Ruema Chapin (Skeele) Call. Her father was born January 4, 1814, died August 30, 1888, and married, May 16, 1838, Ruema Chapin Skeele, born June 23, 1815, died May 14, 1892; they had children: i. HAYNES John Haynes, born 1684, is said to have left an account of the families of his great-grandparents. Walter Haynes and Peter Noyes, who came to this country together and located in Sudbury, Massachusetts. This account was written later than 1772, since it gives that date, and was probably prepared when the writer was nearly ninety years old. Copies of the original document have been handed down to the present generation.

(I) Walter Haynes was born in England in 1583, in the town of Sutton, Mandeville, in the county of Wilts. He also owned a house and outbuildings in the village of Shaston, situated in the Island of Purbeck, in the southeastern part of Dorsetshire. He came to Massachusetts in the ship "Confidence" from Southampton, in 1638, being then of the age of fifty-five years. He brought with him his wife, sons, Thomas, John and Josias, all under sixteen years of age, and daughters Suffrance and Mary. He also brought three servants, John Blanford, John Riddel and Richard Bildcombe. Walter Haynes was a linen weaver. About a year after his arrival he, with others, removed from Watertown, having obtained a grant for a township named Sudbury, where they settled December 22, 1639. He was made a freeman in 1640, was representative in the years 1641-44-48-51, and was one of the selectmen of Sudbury for ten years. He died February 14, 1665, aged eighty-two. Nothing is known of his wife Elizabeth. They had children (date and order of birth unknown): Thomas, John, Josiah, Suffrance, Mary, and another, name unknown, who remained in England.

(II) Josiah, son of Walter and Elizabeth Haynes, was born in England and came with his father's family on their removal to Massachusetts. He married, November 13, 1646, Elizabeth Noyes, daughter of Peter Noyes, and widow of John Freeman. Peter Noyes came from England in 1638, in the same ship with Walter Haynes, bringing with him three sons and three daughters, Thomas, Peter, Josephus, Dorothy, Elizabeth and Abigail. The children of Josiah and Elizabeth (Noyes) (Freeman) Haynes were: Josiah, Caleb, Joshua, Deborah and Abigail.

(III) Josiah (2), eldest son of Josiah (I) and Elizabeth (Noyes) (Freeman) Haynes, was born April 27, 1655, died in 1743. He married, about 1685, Abigail Stark, and they had Josiah, Caleb, and a son and a daughter, names not given.

(IV) Josiah (3), eldest child of Josiah (2) and Abigail (Stark) Haynes, was born in 1685. He had two sons, Joshua and Jason.

(V) Joshua, eldest son of Josiah (3) Haynes, was born in 1707, and had children: Joshua, Rachel, Dorothy, John, Susannah and Silas.

(VI) John, second son of Joshua Haynes, was born in 1762. He had children: Sally, Tilly, Reuben, Stephen, John, David, and Lyman, next mentioned.

(VII) Lyman, youngest child of John Haynes, was born in Sudbury, October 13, 1803, died in Billerica, December 21, 1860. He was born and spent his early life on a farm. For about six years before and after his marriage he was engaged in brickmaking and farming. The new railroad from Boston to Lowell was being built in 1832, when Mr. Haynes and a friend went over to Billerica to see what the possibilities were for getting contracts to construct road-bed. Before going to the scene of operations, Mr. Haynes stopped at the hotel for dinner, and then looked at the railroad work, with which he was not pleased. He then returned to the hotel and leased it and began business as a hotel man in 1832, this was known as the Corner. Later he bought on the corner of Andover street, where he remained until 1842. In that year he exchanged the hotel for a farm in Billerica. There he lived in the village, and forming a partnership with Anthony Jones and Dudley Foster, engaged in real estate business, owning various farms in the vicinity. This business was carried on for eight or ten years. This was the last of his active life. The farm on which he lived was devoted largely to the culture of fruit, peaches, of which he had a large orchard, being a specialty. In politics he was a Whig till the rise of the Republican party, and from that time he was a supporter of its principles and candidate. He married, May 28, 1826, at Sudbury, Caroline Hunt (see Hunt VIII), who was born in Sudbury, June 9, 1808, and died at the United States Hotel in Boston, June 8, 1882. She was the daughter of William and Thankful (Wheeler) Hunt. She survived her husband twenty-three years, and a large part of that time she was a resident of Springfield, where she bought a lot and built a house at 59 St. James avenue, where several of her children have since lived. The children of Lyman and Caroline (Hunt) Haynes were: Tilly, Theodore L., Cyrus H., Charles R., William H., Caroline, John and Adeline. The sons are severally mentioned below. Caroline, born in Billerica, January 26, 1841, married (first) in Billerica, November 25, 1863, Henry M. Jenkins, of Concord, who died in Panama, July 12, 1866. She married (second) Daniel Webb. She is now proprietor of the Broadway Central Hotel, New York City, which was given to her by her brother Tilly. Adeline, born in Billerica, May 28, 1849, married, in Boston, July 13, 1885, James G. Hickey. She is manager of the United States Hotel in Boston through the will of her brother Tilly.

(VIII) Tilly, eldest child of Lyman and Caroline (Hunt) Haynes, was born in Sudbury, February 13, 1828, died in Boston, August 10, 1901. He resided with his parents in Billerica until 1842, when they removed from the hotel to the farm. Tilly attended the sessions of the common school until the family settled on the farm, and then thoughts of a more congenial life filled his mind, for he did not like to live on a farm. He was a bright pupil in school and never required much time to learn his lessons. His spare time while in school and on the farm, he spent drawing pictures of buildings and the like. After one particularly hard day's work on the farm the young man decided to leave, and with his father's help secured a place as clerk in a general store in North Reading in 1842. He was then fourteen years old. He seemed to like the work, for a short time after entering upon the duties of the place one of his brothers offered him a yoke of oxen if he would return to the farm. The offer was promptly refused. After a year in North Reading, and a short time in Methuen, now a part of Lawrence, he went to work in a dry goods store in Waltham. He soon proved his worth, and the proprietor sent him to Saco, Maine, with a small stock of "odds and ends." While there Mr. Haynes caught a severe cold and was forced to return to his home to recover. After three months' rest he entered the employ of George W. Simmons in the well known Oak Hall establishment in Boston. There he was given a subordinate position, having charge of the oil-skins and such rainy-weather goods sold to sailors. Mr. Simmons had a branch store in Springfield at that time, and was complaining to one of his men that it was not paying. The man replied "There's that young Tilly

Haines back there, why don't you send him out to run the store?" "Why," replied the proprietor, "he's only a boy." It was urged that the boy be given a trial, and Mr. Haynes went to Springfield in 1840. He took hold of the business with much energy, and in three months decided there was money enough in it to buy out his Boston employer. He visited his parents in Billerica and explaining the possibilities, asked his father to take his note for $500. His father was unwilling, saying "What's the use? It would only mean that I would have to give you the money." The mother, as usual, was persuasive and confiding, and in the morning Tilly departed for Springfield with his money. He succeeded so well in the business that he paid back the money in about three months. This beginning was made in a little store twenty by thirty feet in size, located second from the corner of Maine and State streets where the institution for savings now stands. In 1851 Tilly's next brother, Theodore L., began as a clerk in the store. In 1852 Mr. Haynes rented the next store on the north side, which had just been vacated by Gunn & Company. The new quarters extended through from State to Market street, and until a short time before Mr. Haynes's death a sign marked "Tilly Haynes" hung on the Market-street end. The clothing store now boasted three numbers, and on the second floor Mr. Haynes opened a custom department. The opening of the custom department started Mr. Haynes off on another enterprise. He was dissatisfied with the kind of sewing machine he bought for making custom goods, and for about two years he devoted his spare time and money to experimenting with new inventions intended to be improvements. The venture did not pay, however. He sold his clothing business in 1855 to his brother Theodore L., then beginning his successes in this line, the new firm being Alley, Haynes & Company. Tilly Haynes devoted himself to his outside interests, and in 1854 built the large double brick house now occupied by D. Frank Hale, on State street, opposite Merrick park, where he lived for a few years. In 1856 he bought the property on the southwest corner of Maine and Pynchon streets and at once began the erection of a block that was to contain several stores and a music hall. This was the present site of the new Gilmore theater building, and the second building erected for business purposes above Court Square. Colonel Homer Foot, when he learned that Mr. Haynes had bought the property, remonstrated with him for buying so far up town. However, Mr. Haynes built the block which was finished in 1857. It contained two stores and the music hall. The latter was, according to the orthodox people, a serious inroad upon the morals of the place. It aroused strong opposition, even the newspapers criticising it. The house was formally opened, however, in November, 1857, by W. J. Fletcher, who played for three weeks, and in fact, gave most of the entertainment during the winter. Mr. Haynes increased his real estate interests in 1862 by buying lots fronting on Main and Pychon streets, opposite the music hall. He had one hundred feet frontage on Main street, and a large frontage on the side street. He erected two large stores, four stories high, that now form a part of the Haynes block. On the night of July 24, 1864, a disastrous fire swept through the block between Court and Pychon streets. The fire destroyed the theater and left Mr. Haynes without income and without insurance. At this time P. T. Barnum, with whom Mr. Haynes had already had some successful speculations, offered him the management and an equal interest in his New York property. While clearing up the ruins and considering Mr. Barnum's proposition, "Uncle" Ben Day, who was the president of the Springfield Institution for Savings, came along and asked how much money he needed to begin again. Mr. Haynes replied that he could begin with $100,000. This was a large sum at that time, and Mr. Day walked away, but within half an hour came along, and before he reached Mr. Haynes, called out, "Go to work; we will give you $60,000, and Henry Fuller will give you $40,000." And so Mr. Haynes began the hall and the Haynes hotel on the opposite corner, and both were successfully opened within the next twelve months. The new theater was completed in a year, and on July 24, 1865, Mr. Haynes was presented with a handsome clock "by a few personal friends on the completion of his buildings." He then began his active hotel life, assuming the management of the Haynes Hotel, which he continued until the death of his wife, in 1876, when he leased to Curtis & Bowman, and later Goodman and Gaylord received the property. Mr. Haynes then retired from active hotel life until 1880, when he was induced to remove to Boston to take charge of the United States Hotel, which was not a profitable investment at the time. He assumed the personal management of the hotel, and by his liberal and up-to-date methods soon built up a large business which steadily increased. Some years later he took charge of the Broadway Central Hotel in New York City, and built up a reputation there that was envied throughout the country. He adopted common sense methods and allowed no one to impose upon him or to be imposed upon in his hotel. He said he allowed no feeing by guests. He paid his help good wages and expected good service. Loafers were not seen about his hotels, but he had a lively contest to rid his New York hotel of these pests. He watched for some time and discovered that about two hundred men were utilizing the accommodations of the hotel who did not spend a cent there at any time. As soon as he was sure of his men he gave them emphatic notice to leave. The result was that the privileges of the hotel were always secured to the guests, and the change was appreciated.

Mr. Haynes held important public offices and served the city of Springfield and the state with credit. He was a member of the common council in 1864 and again in 1871. He was a member of the house of representatives in 1868-70, the senate in 1875-77, of the executive council in 1878-79. During his first term in the legislature he was chairman of the committee in charge of the rebuilding of the state house. In 1876 he was chairman of the railroad committee, and at other times held the chairmanship of various other committees, both in the house and senate, council and city government. In 1892 he was appointed a member of the Metropolitan sewerage commission, of which he was a member until its existence was terminated by the consolidation of the board with the Metropolitan water board, according to the recommendation of Governor Crane. He was an original Daniel Webster Whig, and later, with Wilson, Phillips and the old leaders of the progressive elements joined the Republican party at its birth, and was always identified with whatever was best in national state and municipal affairs. He left to the city of Springfield ten thousand dollars for the improvement of the river front and extension of Court Square.

He married, in Billerica, July 16, 1852, Martha C. Eaton, born in Salisbury, died in Springfield, March 6, 1876. They had no children. Mr. Haynes has been spoken of as "bluff, genial, kindly Tilly Haynes," and the expression described the man. His warm heart and ready hand were minute-men in the service of humanity. His words, fitly spoken, were like "apples of gold in pictures of silver." His speech was appointed and incisive. The inspiration of his life seemed to be drawn from the fountain of right and not from that of expediency. The Golden rule was far from being a dead letter with him. He died at the United States Hotel in Boston, and was buried in Springfield.

(VIII) Theodore L., brother of the preceding, was born in Sudbury, April 2, 1830, died in Springfield, December 29, 1906. He received his education in the public schools of Billerica. March 2, 1851, he accepted a position in his brother Tilly's store in Springfield, receiving at first his board and clothes for his services. His advancement was rapid, and at length he and Messrs. Alley and Miller bought an interest in the firm, which then became known as Alley, Haynes & Miller. A few years later Theodore L. Haynes bought out the interests of Alley and Miller and assumed the management of the business with his brother as a silent partner. In 1857 the business had increased to such an extent that it became necessary to find larger quarters, and in the midst of a period of financial depression the Haynes Brothers erected a new and much larger building. In the new quarters and under Theodore L. Haynes's conservative management the extent and prosperity of the business increased rapidly. In July, 1864, their building, together with a large part of the stock, was destroyed by fire and for a time there was no Haynes clothing store in Springfield. Tilly Haynes, with characteristic enterprise, almost immediately began the erection of a new building upon the ruins of the old, and in October, 1865, the store was again opened in better quarters than before. At this time Theodore L. bought Tilly's interest and became the sole owner. Later he admitted his brother John into the firm. John Haynes was endowed with a large amount of business foresight and was highly progressive, traits that were perhaps necessary in order to offset the almost ultra-conservative nature of Theodore L. The combination proved successful almost from the start, and the business made more rapid advances than before, at the same time being firmly grounded. Owing to the rapid advance in the volume of trade on several different occasions, it became necessary to add more space. In 1875 the business was moved to the Massachusetts Mutual Building, where it remained only two years, and was then removed to the present location on Main street.

When the business was first moved to the present site only the first floor was occupied. In the early eighties it was considerably extended, and in 1901 the entire block was taken over and a new front built. The business now requires the services of one hundred employees, and this is one of the largest firms carrying nothing but men's furnishings in New England. Mr. Haynes was always proud of the city, in which his firm played so active a part, and any project which had in view the betterment of Springfield or its people was sure of his cordial support. For many years he was active in the work of the board of trade, and supplied the early office of the board in his building. Mr. Haynes was probably the originator of the plan which led to the development of what is now known as the McKnight district. The possibilities which lay in this tract of land early attracted Mr. Haynes's attention and in 1871 he invested some surplus capital in twenty acres of land bordering upon Thompson and State streets, and at the same time induced J. D. McKnight to join him in the project. Mr. McKnight at once became enthusiastic, and with his brother, William H. McKnight, took up the plan and carried out to a successful completion. He was known as the generous hearted man and the full extent of his benefactions will never be known. He was one of the instigators of the movement which led to the establishment of the home for friendless women and children, and he gave two lots which comprised the site of the Buckingham street home. The range of Mr. Haynes's activities and interests also included politics, in which he was always an active supporter of the Republican party. He never held any office, but was considered one of the strong men of his party, consistently loyal and ready to work for the principles for which it stands. He was a member of Hope Church, and for many years one of the church committee. His labors in the church were as active and enthusiastic as in other lines. Such projects as the Court Square extension and the more recent river front agitation attracted Mr. Haynes's interest and support from the start. He gave five thousand dollars to the Court Square extension and had contributed to the river front project indirectly. Theodore L. Haynes married (first) in Cambridge, February 28, 1865, Jennie Lewis, of Utica, New York, who died in Billerica, June 3, 1867. He married (second) Laura A., daughter of John K. and Mary Stanford, and widow of Thomas Blanchard, of Boston, the distinguished inventor. She died in 1905. There was born of the second wife one child, Stanford L., October 3, 1869, who became a member of the firm about 1890. He married Emily R. Leonard, born 1865. Children: Laurance, Theodosia and Emily.

(VIII) Cyrus H., brother of the preceding, was born in Billerica, July 8, 1833, and passed all his early life there, going to Springfield in 1852 to enter the employ of his brother Tilly. He remained in that employ until the store was burned in 1864, when he went to Boston to work, but remained only a few months. When Tilly again opened his store Cyrus H. went in with him. After another period he again left his brother's establishment and entered the employ of Charles E. Maxfield, the furniture dealer. Later he returned to Haynes & Company, and has since been with them. He married, in Billerica, May 28, 1856, Harriet Brown born in Billerica, daughter of Colonel Sumner and Issamiah (Page) Brown. On May 28, 1906, they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. They have five sons: Clifford C., Nathaniel L., Philip L., Caleb S. and Otis B.

(VIII) Charles Robbins, brother of the preceding, was born in Billerica, April 17, 1836, died in Springfield, January 24, 1906. He went to Springfield in 1856 and became a clerk for Haynes & Company, remaining with the firm, of which his brother Theodore L. was the head, until the outbreak of the civil war, when he enlisted in the Thirty-third Massachusetts Infantry and went to the front. His active service covered a number of important campaigns. He was with General Joseph Hooker's corps at the battle of Lookout Mountain, and as he was climbing up the steep side of the mountain he was shot through the fleshy part of the neck, the bullet piercing the shoulders. After the wound had mended he continued in the service until nearly the close of the war, when his term of service having expired, he was honorably discharged and returned home. He next went to work for the government in the post office department, as a mail clerk, covering a route from Boston to New York for twenty-one years. He retired from active work about 1890, and went to live with his sisters at the family home on St. James avenue, where he died. Mr. Haynes had some interesting traveling experiences. He made a voyage from New York to Yokohama, Japan, on the R. D. Rice oil ship in 1899. He was the only passenger on the ship and took the trip for pleasure. It lasted from August 19, 1899, until January 12, 1900, a period of one hundred and forty-seven days. He visited several places in Japan, and returned on a passenger steamer. On the return voyage the boat encountered a severe storm, a long account of which Mr. Haynes wrote. This was published in the Springfield Republican. He also made trips to Jamaica and Cuba, and had an interesting collection of antiques. He was of a quiet, philanthropic nature, and was always ready to help along a good cause. This was especially noticeable of him as a member of St. Peter's Church, of whose new building committee he was a valuable member. He gave generously to the church work and also for the new building, in the planning of which and in its progress of erection he was much interested. He never married.

(VIII) William H., brother of the preceding, was born in Billerica, April 21, 1838, was educated in the public schools. At fifteen years of age he went to Springfield where he spent a part of each year until he was twenty years old, returning to Billerica to attend school a part of the year and assist his father. He was first in the employ of Tilly Haynes and later of his brother Theodore L., and finally became a partner in business with the latter. In 1902 he sold his interest and has since lived at leisure, residing in the family mansion on St. James avenue. He is somewhat of a traveler and has visited California, Florida, the cities of Nassau and Havana and other points of interest. He is unmarried.

(VIII) John, brother of the preceding, was born in Billerica, September 18, 1846. He was engaged in clothing business in Springfield, now in business with Paul Cramer under the Massasoit House, and for a time resided in Pasadena, California. He married, in Salem, August 2, 1869, Elizabeth Wiggan, of Tamworth, New Hampshire, who died in Springfield, Massachusetts, April 13, 1875. He married (second) at Salem, September 18, 1890, Abbie Herrick.

(The Hunt Line).

This is an ancient occupative surname and is derived from the Anglo-Saxon word Hunta, signifying a hunter. Among the many pioneer settlers of New England of this surname were: Edmund of Cambridge, 1634, and Duxbury, 1637; Robert, of Charlestown and Sudbury, 1638; Bartholomew, of Dover, 1640; Enoch, of Weymouth, 1640; William, of Concord, 1641; Peter, of Rehoboth, 1644. Among the hunts of England who have attained distinction are: William Hunt, landscape painter, born 1830; Arabella Hunt, musician and vocalist, born 1705; George W. Hunt, member of Parliament; Robert Hunt, author and philosopher, born 1807; William H. Hunt, historical painter, born 1827; and James H. L. Hunt, popular poet and litterateur, intimate of Byron, Moore, Shelley and Keats. In America Thomas Sterry Hunt, born 1826, and Edward B. Hunt, born 1822, attained eminence, the first as a chemist and geologist, the other as a military engineer.

(I) William Hunt was born in England about 1605, died in Marlboro, Massachusetts, in October, 1667. In parish register of Halifax, Yorkshire, says that William, son of Robert Hunt, was born 1605, and was baptized January 27, 1605. He came from Yorkshire, England, in 1635, and was one of the founders of the town of Concord, Massachusetts. June 2, 1641, he was made freeman. He removed to Marlboro, where he resided at the time of his death. He made his will October 21, 1667, and it was probated December 17, 1667. In this will he leaves to his heirs fifteen parcels of land containing six hundred and twenty-six acres and other property appraised at five hundred and ninety-six pounds twelve shillings, Concord; and property of the value of thirty-six pounds eighteen shillings in Marlborough. William Hunt married (first) Elizabeth Best, who died at Concord, December 27, 1661; (second) 1664, Mercy, whose maiden name was Hurd. Before marrying Mr. Hunt she had married and become the widow, first of Thomas Bingham, and second of Edmund Rice. His children, all by wife Elizabeth, were: Nehemiah, Samuel, Elizabeth, Hannah, Isaac, next mentioned.

(II) Isaac, youngest child of William and Elizabeth (Best) Hunt, was born in 1647, and resided in Concord. His estate was appraised December 12, 1680, at two hundred and seventy pounds, sixteen shillings, and April 5, 1681, his widow Mary was granted administration. April 6, 1686, the children had guardians. He married, May 14, 1667, Mary Stone, daughter of John Stone, of Cambridge. She married (second) November 30, 1681, Eliphalet Fox, of Concord. Children of Isaac and Mary: Isaac (died young), Hannah, Samuel, Isaac, Ebenezer.

(III) Isaac (2), third son of Isaac (1) and Mary (Stone) Hunt, was born in Concord, November 18, 1675, died December 6, 1717. He resided in Sudbury, January 20, 1718, his widow was appointed administratrix of his estate, the inventory of which, December 25, amounted to one thousand four hundred and seventy pounds five shillings. Among the items enumerated are "a bought servant maid, £8;" eight lots of land, 200 acres, with two houses, &c." The property was in the probate court fourteen years. Mary, the widow, died before the estate was discharged and was succeeded by her son Isaac. Isaac Hunt married Mary Willard, who after his decease married (second) Ebenezer Leland, of Sherborn, August 29, 1721. The children of Isaac and Mary were: Isaac, Thomas, Mary, Ebenezer, Samuel, John, Simon, Henry and Abidah.

(IV) Isaac (3), eldest child of Isaac (2) and Mary (Willard) Hunt, died in Sudbury, August 22, 1781. He married, December 8, 1721, Martha Goodnow, and they had: William (died young), Hannah (died young), William, Patience, Isaac, Hannah, Martha, Aaron, Eunice, Samuel (died young) and Samuel.

(V) William (2), eldest son of Isaac (3) and Martha (Goodnow) Hunt, was born November 13, 1722, died April 4, 1802, aged eighty. He married, January 1, 1750, Mary Wheeler; she died June 13, 1810, aged seventy-seven years. Their children were: Abigail, William, Molly, Martha, Ann, Hamon, Elisha (died young), Elizabeth, Sarah, Elisha and Patience.

(VI) William (3), eldest son of William (2) and Mary (Wheeler) Hunt, was born in Sudbury, March 7, 1753, died September 18, 1845, aged ninety-two years. He resided in Sudbury. By his wife, Mary Plympton, he had twelve children: Peter (died young), Molly, William, John, Ruth, Peter, Israel, Abigail, Patience, Thomas, Nathan and Sally.

(VII) William (4), second son of William (3) and Mary (Plympton) Hunt, was born October 7, 1775, died November 16, 1851. He lived in Sudbury all his life, and acquired large property. He married (first) September 20, 1796, Thankful Wheeler, who died December 9, 1808, aged twenty-nine. He married (second) Esther Bringham, June 9, 1811. The children of Thankful, the first wife, were: Aaron, William, Cyrus Asabel (died young), Abel (died young), and Caroline; by wife Esther: Harriet, Mary, Abel, Andrew, Elizabeth, Thomas, Asabel and Abigail (twins) and George.

(VIII) Caroline, only daughter of William (4) and Thankful (Wheeler) Hunt, was born June 9, 1808, and married, May 28, 1826, Lyman Haynes (see Haynes VII).

Springfield, so named by William Pynchon, its founder, on April 16, 1640, in honor of his native place in England, had been known by him and his small band of migrants who came from Roxbury in 1636, in the early spring, and settled with their families on the Connecticut river, calling the place by its Indian name, Agawam. The town was in the Colony of Massachusetts Bay and enclosed a territory of probably twenty-five square miles, as it embraced what is now West Springfield, Westfield, Southwick, Suffield, Enfield, Long Meadow, Somers, Wilbraham and Ludlow, the nucleus being Agawam, or as known after 1640, Springfield, and the Indians and white men lived in peace and carried on a mutually advantageous trade in corn, skins, and general produce for forty years. This peace was dispelled by the destruction wrought in the peaceful valley in 1675, through the agency of Philip of Pokanoket, the youngest son of Massasoit, who created a union of Indian tribes for offensive operations against the whites, resulting in a "general rising of the natives to sweep these hated intruders from the ancient hunting grounds of the Indian race." Springfield, the most prosperous town in the colony, fell under the ban of savage destruction and the Indians pillaged the plain, burned upwards of thirty houses and well filled barns, and destroyed mills and growing crops just ready for harvest, for it was October and corn and apples were abundant crops. A mild winter followed, and the plain was saved from the threatened desertion by the remaining homeless families. It was amid such scenes that Deacon Samuel Chapin in New England lived with his family and helped in the work of rehabilitation.

(1) Samuel Chapin had come to the Colony of Massachusetts Bay previous to 1642, as his name is among the subscribers to the oath of allegiance made before the general court, June 2, 1641. He brought with him his wife whose surname was Cisily and children born either in England or Wales, whence he came, or in or about Boston. The Boston records give a Shem Chapin and Deborah, his wife, who had a daughter, Jane, born September 16, 1665. This may have been his eldest son who remained in Boston and died without male issue. The children who came to Springfield were: Japhet, (q. v.), born 1642; Henry, married, December 5, 1664, Bethea, daughter of Benjamin and Sarah Cooley, of Long Meadows; Catharine, married (first) November 20, 1646, Nathaniel Bliss, who died in 1654, (second) June 30, 1655, Thomas Gilberts, who died in 1662, (third) December 8, 1664, Samuel Marshfield, who died in 1692, and the thrice widow died February 4, 1712, having given birth to ten children; David who married Lydia Crump, 20th 6 mo. 1654, and had seven children born at Springfield; Josiah died September 10, 1726; Sarah died August 5, 1684. Their youngest child, Hannah, was born in Springfield, December 2, 1644. We do not know that the order of names is in accordance with the order of their birth. Japhet and Henry settled in the north part of Springfield, David resided a few years in the center of Springfield and then removed to Boston; Josiah settled in Mendon, Worcester county, and was an original grantee of that town. Springfield records give "Josiah Chapin married Mary, son Samuel born November 11, 1659." He may have gone from Springfield to Braintree and thence to Mendon. Sarah married Rowland Thomas, and had thirteen children. Hannah married, September 27, 1666, Deacon John Hitchcock and had nine children. By deed dated March 9, 1666, John Pynchon conveyed to Samuel Chapin the greater part of the land lying in the valley between Chicopee river and Willimasset brook, and by deed dated April 16, 1673, Samuel Chapin conveyed this same premises to his son, Japhet Chapin. Japhet also owned one-half of his father's premises, known as the home lot next south of the ministry lot in the center of the village of Springfield, where Deacon Samuel died November 11, 1675, and in 1697 Japhet sold his half of the property to Deacon John Hitchcock, husband of Hannah. The widow, Cisily Chapin, died February 8, 1683.

(11) Japhet, son of Deacon Samuel and Cisily Chapin, was born in 1642. He probably for a time resided in Milford in the Connecticut colony as, in a deed made by Worshipful Captain John Pynchon of Springfield, he conveyed to Japhet Chapin, of Milford, Connecticut Colony, a small strip of land near Connecticut river in Springfield, bound east by Deacon Chapin's land; deed dated November 16, 1669. He, however, built a house at the upper end of Chicopee street, northwesterly of where the dwelling house of Henry Sherman was standing in 1862, and this house was on the land deeded to him by his father, April 16, 1673. He was present at the fight with the Indians at Turner's Falls, May 18, 1673, as appears in a memorandum made in his own handwriting on the outside leaf of an old account book belonging to him, which reads: "I went out as volunteer against Indians in 17 May, 1676 and we engaged in battle 19 May in the morning before sunrise, and made great spoil upon the enemy and came off the same day with the loss of thirty-seven men and the captain Turner, and came home the twentieth of May." (The original orthography is not used in this copy.) He married (first) July 22, 1664, Abilenah Cooley, and she died November 17, 1710. She was the mother of all his children. He married (second) May 31, 1711, Dorothy Root, of Enfield, Connecticut, who probably after his death married Obediah Miller, of Enfield, Connecticut, in 1720-21. Upon his death, February 20, 1712, his remains were buried alongside the grave of his first wife, the mother of his children. Their children in the order of their birth are: 1. Samuel, born July 4, 1665, married, December 24, 1690, Hannah Sheldon; had ten children; died in Springfield, October 19, 1729. 2. Sarah, March 16, 1668, married March 24, 1690, Nathaniel Munn. 3. Thomas (q. v.), May 10, 1671. 4. John, May 14, 1674, married Sarah Bridgman, the marriage being published January 24, 1702; had eight children; died June 1, 1759. 5. Ebenezer, mentioned at length with descendants in this article. 6. Hannah, June 21, 1679, died July 7, 1679. 7. Hannah, July 18, 1680 (q. v.). 8. David, November 16, 1682, married, November 21, 1705, Sarah, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Stebbins, had twelve children; married (second) Mindwell Holton, of Northampton. His first wife, the mother of all his children, died February 6, 1726, his second wife October 20, 1758, and he died July 8, 1772, aged ninety years. He was deacon of the church of Chicopee Parish. 9. Jonathan, February 20, 1685, died March 1, 1686. 10. Jonathan, September 23, 1688, married, April 20, 1710, Elizabeth, daughter of Jonathan and Lydia Burt, of Long Meadow; they had eleven children; he died February 23, 1760-61, and his widow January 31, 1769, aged eighty years. Hannah, seventh child of Japhet and Abilenah (Cooley) Chapin, married, December 3, 1703, John Sheldon, of Deerfield, Massachusetts, and when the town was attacked by Indians about three months after her marriage, she was taken captive with many others and marched to Canada. Her husband probably followed the retreating party, for after over a year he obtained her release and brought her home from Canada. This version of the story is at least generally credited, and the presentment of her mother at least came true when she advised her in making a dress before her marriage that she must make it so it would do to wear into captivity, which shows the anxiety felt in the frontier at that time.

(III) Thomas, second son and third child of Japhet and Abilenah (Cooley) Chapin, was born May 10, 1671, probably in Milford, Connecticut. He married Sarah Wright, who was the mother of his eleven children. He died August 27, 1755, and his widow July 26, 1770, aged ninety-eight years. Their children, named in the order of their birth are: 1. Thomas, born January 2, 1694, married, March 19, 1719-20, Jerusha Jones, of Sunderland; had four children; died in Belchertown in 1781. 2. Japhet, March 16, 1697, married Thankful Dickerson, of Hatfield; published April 22, 1726; she was the mother of his ten children; married (second) October 28, 1778, Lydia Belding, widow of Rev. Benjamin Doolittle, of Northfield, Massachusetts. His first wife died March 17, 1773, and when his second wife was eighty years old, he was eighty-two, and they made the journey on horseback from their residence in Chicopee street, Springfield, to Northfield, a distance of more than forty miles, in one day, each on a separate horse, and are said to have each sat as upright and enjoyed the ride as well as if they were still young. 3. Abel, January 28, 1700, married, January 9, 1720, Hannah, daughter of Luther and Elizabeth Hitchcock; they lived in that part of Springfield known as Willimansett; he afterward kept a tavern on the east side of Chicopee street for many years; they had six children; he died May 3, 1772, and his widow April 12, 1778, aged seventy-six years. 4. Shem, February 3, 1702, married (published December 4, 1752) Anna Clark, of Uxbridge, widow of Mr. Clark, of Springfield (Chicopee); they lived in Ludlow, Massachusetts; had three children and he died there. 5. and 6. Martha and Esther (twins) December 5, 1704, Martha married, October 20, 1740, Samuel Wills, of Hatfield, and died July 8, 1801, aged ninety-seven years; Esther married, October 22, 1747, Noah Cook, of Hadley, and (second) Deacon Nathaniel Horton, of Somers. 7. Sarah, February 18, 1708, married, May 17, 1753, Luke Parsons, of Somers, Connecticut. 8. Nathaniel (q. v.), August 9, 1711. 9. Bathsheba, December 19, 1713, married (first) April 2, 1745, Jacob Hitchcock and (second) Dr. Lambertson Cooper, of Agawam. 10. Jabez, April 3, 1716, died April 20, 1716. 11. Deborah, October 31, 1719, married, April 30, 1746, Eleon Frary, of Hatfield.

(IV) Nathaniel, fifth son and sixth child of Thomas and Sarah (Wright) Chapin, was born August 9, 1711. He married Sarah Abbee, daughter of Thomas Abbe, of Enfield, where they lived and where their three children were born. Captain Nathaniel Chapin died at Cape Breton, and as only the service in the French war would have brought him to that place it is reasonable that he was with the expedition against Louisburg, which place surrendered to the British and Colonial troops, June 16, 1745, and as many of the troops in the expedition were from Connecticut it is probable that he was in the service and died there about that time, aged thirty-four years. His widow married Captain Hezekiah Parsons, of Enfield, Connecticut. The children of Nathaniel and Sarah (Abbee) Chapin were: 1. Nathaniel (q. v.), born December 31, 1738. 2. Eliphalet, March 2, 1741, married Azuba Pease and had nine children. 3. Jabez.

(V) Nathaniel (2), son of Nathaniel (1) and Sarah (Abbee) Chapin, was born in Enfield, Connecticut, December 31, 1738, died there February 11, 1831. He married (first) Sibyl Terry and (second) Leviah Parsons. They had six children. The children of Nathaniel and Sibyl Chapin were: 1. Nathaniel (q. v.). 2. Jabez, married a Miss Dwight, of Longmeadow, Massachusetts, removed to Ohio, and had six children; he died in Ohio. 3. Simeon, who died in Enfield, Connecticut. 4. Sibyl, married Thomas Metcalf. 5. Esther, married Moses Allen. 6. Betsy, died unmarried.

(VI) Rev. Nathaniel (3), eldest child of Nathaniel (2) and Sibyl Chapin, married (first) Cynthia Perkins and (second) Lovisa Sexton. He was a Methodist clergyman. He had ten children as follows: 1. Henry, died at the age of two years. 2. Lovisa, died unmarried. 3. Henry (q. v.), of Springfield, Massachusetts. 4. Charlotte, married Samuel Curbin, of Union, Connecticut. 5. Sibyl, married Levi Lody and lived in Windsor, Connecticut. 6. Charles, died at three years of age. 7. Miranda. 8. Charles, married but had no issue. 9. Eliza, married Colonel Henry Holkins, of Windsor; lived at Windham Port, Connecticut, and had children. 10. Nathaniel, married Olive, daughter of God Van Horn, of Chicopee, Massachusetts; removed first to Jenksville, Massachusetts, and then to Springfield, Illinois, and has six children.

(VII) Henry, second son of Rev. Nathaniel (3) and Cynthia (Perkins) Chapin, married Elizabeth Wilson, and resided in Springfield, Massachusetts, where he was deacon of the Pynchon Street Methodist Church. They had seven children: 1. Elizabeth, born January 30, 1821. 2. Lovisa, August 21, 1824. 3. Henry Augustus (q. v.), August 29, 1826. 4. Ellen, October 18, 1828, died October 12, 1846. 5. Lucy A., October 23, 1830. 6. Miranda, April 9, 1835. 7. Susan C., July 5, 1839.

(VIII) Henry Augustus, eldest son of Henry and Elizabeth (Wilson) Chapin, was born in Springfield, Massachusetts, August 29, 1826. He married, November 21, 1850, Sarah E., daughter of Isaac Stevens and their children were born in Springfield. He removed to Bridgeport, Connecticut, where he was interested in the George Dwight & Company Gas Works. The children of Henry Augustus and Sarah E. (Stevens) Chapin are: 1. Elizabeth Maria, born July 17, 1854. 2. William Henry (q. v.), June 26, 1856. 3. Emma S., October 13, 1858. 4. Ellen Olney, 1864.

(IX) William Henry, son of Henry Augustus and Sarah E. (Stevens) Chapin, was born June 26, 1856, in Springfield, Massachusetts. He was educated in the public schools of Springfield, Massachusetts, and of Bridgeport, Connecticut. After several years' residence in Europe he returned to Springfield, where he engaged in his present line of business, that of patent attorney. He married, June 24, 1886, Charlotte E. Scott, of Toledo, Ohio, daughter of Maurice A. and Mary B. (Messinger) Scott. Children: 1. Maurice S., born in Springfield, Massachusetts, April 17, 1887. 2. Henry, born in Toledo, Ohio, November 17, 1893. 3. Stuart, born in Springfield, January 29, 1897.

(III) Ebenezer, son of Japhet CHAPIN and Abilenah (Cooley) Chapin, was born in Enfield, Connecticut, June 26, 1677. He lived in Somers for a time but returned to Enfield. He married, in December, 1702, Ruth Janes, of Northampton, Massachusetts. Her father after her marriage removed to Lebanon, Connecticut. Ebenezer and Ruth (Janes) Chapin had thirteen children, all probably born in Enfield. The mother of these children died in Enfield, Connecticut, January 18, 1736, aged fifty-four years, and her husband outlived her thirty-six years, and died in Enfield, December 13, 1772, after he had reached the ninety-fifth year of his age. The children were: 1. Rachel, born August 27, 1703, died in East Windsor, Connecticut, 1773. 2. Ebenezer, September 23, 1705, married Elizabeth Pease, daughter of Jonathan Pease, and they had five children. He died March 1, 1751, and his widow July 6, 1786. 3. Noah, October 25, 1707, was lieutenant in the colonial militia; married Mary Wright, of Deerfield, and they had seven children. Lieutenant Noah died August 23, 1787, and his widow March 3, 1795. 4. Seth (q. v.), February 28, 1709. 5. Catharine, January 4, 1711, married a Mr. Ellsworth, of East Windham. 6. Moses, August 24, 1712, married Jerusha Rockwell, of East Windham, and their only child was Jerusha. (IV) Phineas, second son of John and Sarah (Bridgman) Chapin, was born September 23, 1715, died October 11, 1788. He was evidently a man of means, as he was the owner of negroes, as witness: 1755, November 10, Pompey, a negro and Betty, a negro (servants of Phineas Chapin) were joined in marriage, says the town record. He married, February 1, 1739, Bethia Chapin, daughter of Benjamin and Hannah (Colton) Chapin (see Chapin III). She died May 1, 1793, aged seventy-five. This surname was Anglicized

MERRILL from the French name de Merle. Merle signifies a blackbird. Its original bearer is said to have derived it from the figure of a blackbird displayed at his door. The ancient seat of the de Merles of France was at Place de Dombes Avergne. The English Merrills are for the most part descended from a follower of William the Conqueror. Their coat-of-arms is thus described: "Or, a barrulet between three peacocks erased proper." Crest: "a peacock's head erased proper." The immigrant ancestor of the Merrills of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine was Nathaniel Merrill, who settled in Newbury, Massachusetts, about the year 1635, and died there in 1655. He came from Salisbury, England.

(I) Nathan Merrill, a descendant of Nathaniel Merrill, of Newbury, was residing in Concord, Massachusetts, in 1736, but as his birth is not to be found in the records of that town he was probably born elsewhere. A careful examination of all available records fails to disclose the names of his parents, therefore his line of descent from the Newbury settler could not be ascertained. The Christian name of his wife was Mary and she survived him, marrying for her second husband a Mr. Jones and moving to Kennebec county, Maine. Nathan and Mary Merrill had one son and perhaps other children.

(II) Nathan (2), son of Nathan (1) Merrill, was born in Concord, January 21, 1763. In 1780, when a youth of seventeen years, he enlisted for service in the revolutionary war, served six months, participating in the North River campaign, and was detailed to do guard duty at the execution of Major Andre. August 29, 1782, he re-enlisted and served a similar length of time in and around Cambridge, Massachusetts. In 1786 he purchased a tract of wild land in that part of Amherst, New Hampshire, which was afterward set off as the town of Milford, and settling there permanently in 1788 cleared a farm which is still known as the Merrill homestead. This property is now owned by his grandson, Calvin Merrill. Nathan Merrill died in Milford, March 13, 1846. He was a Jeffersonian Democrat and a strong anti-slavery advocate. January 21, 1788, he was married in Bedford, Massachusetts, by the Rev. Joseph Penniman, to Susanna Bacon, his first wife. She was born in Bedford, January 28, 1765, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Lane) Bacon, of that town. She was a descendant of Michael Bacon, who was in Bedford as early as 1676, and the Bacon family was one of the most prominent in that locality. Elizabeth Lane was a daughter of Job Lane. Mrs. Susanna Merrill died in Milford, September 26, 1831, and on December 25 of the following year Nathan Merrill married for his second wife Mrs. Mary Spaulding, nee Flinn, widow of Isaac Spaulding and a daughter of Jacob and Mary (Pearson) Flinn. She was born in Milford, July 25, 1779, and died in Wilton, New Hampshire, February 24, 1850. The children of Nathan Merrill, all of his first union, were: 1. Nathan, who will be again referred to. 2. Susan, born June 17, 1791, died April 16, 1868; married Henry Gray, son of Timothy and Ruth (Burnham) Gray, of Wilton. 3. Asa, January 17, 1794. 4. Joshua, March 7, 1802, was for many years a successful teacher in the public schools of Lowell, Massachusetts; was engaged in the book business in that city; died November 9, 1880.

(III) Nathan (3), son of Nathan (2) Merrill, was born in Milford, October 5, 1788. His boyhood and youth were practically spent in the wilderness, as that section of Amherst in which his father had located was but sparsely settled, and he therefore became well adapted to the life of a pioneer. During the war of 1812-15 he served as a lieutenant and did garrison duty about Portsmouth. About the year 1814 he settled in New Boston, New Hampshire, and is said to have built the first dwelling house in that town. He was a prosperous farmer and frequently drove to Boston, Massachusetts, on business. While returning from the latter city on February 28, 1847, he perished in a terrible blizzard, when within a short distance of his home, and his frozen body was found on the highway just over the Mount Vernon line. November 2, 1811, he was married in Boston to Rebecca Foster, daughter of Jonathan and Dorothy (Jenkins) Foster, of Ashby, Massachusetts. Children: Leonard Willey, mentioned below; Nathan F., Susan, Rebecca and others.

(IV) Leonard Willey, son of Nathan (3) Merrill, was born in New Boston, November 12, 1820, died there February 28, 1908. His preliminary studies in the district school were supplemented with a course at the Clinton Grove Seminary in Weare, New Hampshire, and in addition to obtaining a good education he acquired an excellent agricultural training by assisting his father in carrying on the homestead farm. In 1842 he was for a short time engaged in driving a milk wagon from Quincy, Massachusetts, to Boston, and he subsequently went to Florida, where he spent five years with a corps of engineers who were conducting some important surveying operations in that state. He also was employed as a pilot on Pensacola Bay. Returning to New Boston he turned his attention to the lumbering industry, which he followed successfully in connection with farming, and he resided there for the remainder of his life. Politically he acted with the Republican party from the time of its formation, but was never desirous of holding public office, although his natural ability and sterling integrity made him especially eligible to the civil service. In his religious belief he was a Baptist. On May 1, 1851, he married Sarah Elizabeth Brown, born in Lyne, New Hampshire, December 31, 1832, daughter of Samuel and Ruth (Snow) Brown, of that town, who is still living. She is the mother of six children: 1. Louisa Rebecca, born February 24, 1853. 2. George Nathan, mentioned in the succeeding paragraph. 3. Helen Augusta. 4. Henry Samuel, May 10, 1863. 5. Charles Asa, April 28, 1865. 6. Nellie Florence, January 23, 1872.

(V) George Nathan, son of Leonard Willey Merrill, was born in New Boston, June 10, 1855. He was graduated from the McCollum Institute, Mount Vernon, New Hampshire, in 1870, and entering Colby University, Waterville, Maine, the following year, he took his bachelor's degree in 1881. Having given attention during the last year in college to civil engineering he accepted, immediately after graduating, a responsible position upon the engineering staff of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, and proceeding to Iowa was placed in charge of important miscellaneous work covering seven hundred and seventy-five miles of road. During the year 1884 he was occupied in work extending over the continental divide between Denver and Middle Park, and a portion of that year he devoted to the surveying and also to the construction engineering of the diagonal road running southwest from Des Moines to Creston, Iowa, and for a short period during 1885 he was employed by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad. Leaving the employ of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Company he entered the service of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern railway as constructing engineer. He next located a line of road westward from Battle Island for the Chicago, Burlington and Northern Company, and a year later became chief engineer of the Chicago, St. Louis and Nashville line. He subsequently constructed for the same company a line from Savannah, Illinois, to St. Paul, Minnesota, and later assisted in constructing a railway line running westward from Topeka for the Chicago, Kansas and Nebraska Company, also designing and building bridges through the Wabaunsee Valley. In December, 1887, he was suddenly summoned to New Boston by the severe illness of his father, and resuming his work the following spring he completed the construction of the Chicago, Kansas & Nebraska line to Colorado Springs. In 1888-89 he superintended the work of connecting the Central New England and Western railroad with the Poughkeepsie bridge and after completing that operation he was for a time engaged in constructing a line through the Cumberland Mountains for the Louisville and Nashville railway. In 1890 he settled in Springfield and is still residing in that city devoting his time to general civil engineering as well as the locating and constructing of steam and electric railways. In addition to several steam roads he has surveyed during the past nineteen years some forty electric roads, among the most important of which are a freight line through Fall River, the laying out of which necessitated some unusually complex and intricate engineering; the preliminary survey for an elevated road in Boston; lines from Haverhill to Lawrence and Lowell; and an electric railway to the summit of Tom, in the surveying of which he was not only called upon to provide for an unusually deep foundation, but was required to devise an entirely new system of construction. He is also the official engineer at Forest Park, Springfield, and the other public reservations, and has furnished plans for sewers and aqueducts in other states. Mr. Merrill is a member of the American and the Boston societies of Civil Engineers. He is a thirty-second degree Mason, and a member of the following Masonic bodies: Roswell Lee Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons; Morning Star Chapter, Royal Arch Masons; Springfield Council, Royal and Select Masters; Springfield Commandery, Knights Templar; the Massachusetts Consistory; and Melha Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine. He is a past master of Hampden Commandery, Knights of Malta; has attained a similar rank in the Patrons of Husbandry, and affiliates with Miles Morgan Lodge, Ancient Order of United Workmen, and Knights of Pythias. He is actively interested in religious work, having formerly been a deacon of the Highland Baptist Church; was for some time treasurer of the Park Avenue Memorial Baptist Church and is at the present time serving on one of its important business committees. On March 10, 1886, Mr. Merrill was married in Springfield to Sarah Frances Cleaves, his first wife. His second wife, whom he married July 10, 1907, was Lulu Loleta Spiller, of Beverly, Massachusetts.

The family of this name derives HOLT its cognomen from a holt or grove at or near which a remote English ancestor dwelt. The progenitor of the American branch of the family was a pioneer settler in two towns, and a man of influence among his associates. There is a tradition that the dwellings of Nicholas Holt, the first settler, is one which still stands on Holt's Hill, sometimes called Prospect Hill, in Andover. The descendants of the emigrant progenitor in Andover have been noticeable for their attention to learning. The Holt family in that town included four college graduates prior to 1800. The family in this country in all its branches is very large, and includes many names of considerable influence in the town of Andover and elsewhere.

(I) Nicholas Holt was a passenger on the ship "James," of London, William Corper, master, which sailed from the port of Southampton, England, about April 6, 1635, and arrived at Boston, in New England, on June 3 following, after a voyage of thirty-eight days. The names of forty-three male persons are found as passengers on the ship's roll, "besides the wives and children of Dyvers of them." Among the former occurs the name of Nicholas Holte, of Romsey (county of Hants), England, "tanner." He was undoubtedly accompanied by his family, which consisted of a wife and at least one child. He proceeded the same year to Newbury, where he was one of the first settlers, and resided there for a period of ten years. There he received his proportionate share of the lands allotted to each proprietor. In 1637 his name appears as one of the ten persons who in order to vote to prevent the re-election of Sir Henry Vane to the office of governor, and to strengthen the friends of Governor Winthrop, went from Newbury to Cambridge on foot, forty miles, and qualified themselves to vote by taking the freeman's oath May 17, 1637. This defeat was a severe blow to the pride of Sir Henry Vane.

April 19, 1638, Nicholas Holt was chosen one of the surveyors of the highways "for one whole yeere & till new be chosen." February 24, 1637, it was "agreed that Wm. Moody, James Browne, Nic. Holt, Francis Plummer, Na Noyse shall lay out all the generall fences in the towne that are to be made, as likewise tenn rod between man & man, for garden plotts, this to be done by the 5th of March on the penalty of 5 s apiece." In the month of June, 1638, all the able bodied men of Newbury were enrolled and formed into four companies under the command of John Pike, Nicholas Holt, John Baker, and Edmund Greenleaf. They were required "to bring their arms compleat one Sabbath day in a month and the lecture day following," and "stand sentinell at the doores all the time of the publick meeting."

The first church records of Newbury prior to 1674 are lost, and consequently the name of Nicholas Holt is not found, but it appears in the following order of the town records: "Jan. 18, 1638. It is ordered that Richard Knight, James Brown & Nicholas Holt shall gather up the first payment of the meeting house rate and the towne within one fourteen-night on the penalty of 6s 8d a piece." In 1644 Nicholas Holt was one of the ten original settlers who removed their families from Newbury and accompanied their pastor, the Rev. John Woodbridge, to "Cochichawicke," now Andover. On a leaf in the town records containing the list of householders in order as they came to the town his name is sixth. He was one of the ten male members including the pastor elect who composed the church at the ordination of Mr. John Woodbridge, October 24, 1645. May 26, 1647, he was appointed in connection with Sergeant Marshall "to lay out the highway from Reading to Andover, and with Lieut. Sprague and Sergeant Marshall to view the river (Epswich river) and make return to the court of the necessity and charge of a bridge and make return to the next session of this court." At a general court held May 2, 1652, he was appointed with Captain Johnson of Woburn, and Thomas Danforth of Cambridge, "to lay the bounds of Andover," and May 18, 1653, he was appointed with Captain Richard Walker and Lieutenant Thomas Marshall to lay out the highway betwixt Andover and Reading and at the same term of Court, September 10, 1655, the committee made a report of said survey.

Nicholas Holt lived to a good old age and died at Andover, January 30, 1685, aged one hundred and four years, says the record, but Coffin, with more probability, says eighty-three. In his early life he carried on the business of manufacturer of woodenware. A few years before his death, in distributing his property among his children, he styles himself "dish turner". The word "tanner" on the roll of the ship "James" is probably an error of the recording official who mistook the word turner for tanner. There is no doubt but that the same motives that actuated the other early settlers of New England in leaving their pleasant homes in England and emigrating to this country, had their due influence on him. That he was a religious man is made evident by the fact that he was one of the original members of the Andover church, and by his forsaking his native home in England, to encounter the privations and difficulties of the wilderness in order that he might enjoy the privilege of worshipping God according to the convictions of his own mind and his understanding of God's word. While honestly and conscientiously discharging his duties in this regard, he took an active part in public affairs of the town, and his appointment on important committees in laying out roads and other improvements indicates that his services were valuable and appreciated.

Nicholas Holt was married in England, a few years before he came to Massachusetts. The name of his wife was Elizabeth Short, of whom nothing more is known than that she died at Andover, November 9, 1656. He married (second) June 20, 1658, Hannah, widow of Daniel Rolfe, and daughter of Humphrey Bradstreet. She died June 20, 1665, at Andover, and he married (third) May 21, 1666, Widow Martha Preston, who died March 21, 1703, aged eighty years. He had by his first wife four sons and four daughters: by his second wife one son and one daughter. His children, born in Newbury, were: Elizabeth, Mary,

Samuel, Andy; and in Andover, Henry, Nicholas, James, John and Priscilla.

(II) Nicholas (2), sixth child of Nicholas (1) and Elizabeth Holt, was born in Andover, in 1647, died there October 8, 1715. September 9, 1684, his father deeded to him "one-third of the farm whereon he now dwells," and several other parcels, also the dwelling-house "with ye cellar room & Leantowe". He married Mary, daughter of Robert Russell, whose ancestry is traced herein, and she died April 1, 1717. Children: Nicholas, Thomas, Abigail, Sarah, James, Robert, Abiel, Deborah, Joshua, (of whom hereafter) and Daniel.

(III) Captain Joshua, ninth child of Nicholas (2) and Mary (Russell) Holt, was born in Andover in 1703, died in Windham, Connecticut. He removed there in 1725. He married his cousin Keturah, daughter of Henry and Samuel Holt. She died at Windham, October 2, 1781. Children: Dinah, Joshua, (of whom hereafter); Keturah and Phebe.

(IV) Joshua (2), only son of Captain Joshua (1) and Keturah (Holt) Holt, was born in Windham, March 19, 1728, died there July 5, 1791, from being overcome by the heat. He was remarkable for his averdupois, tipping the beam at over four hundred. He married Mary, daughter of Paul and Elizabeth (Grey) Abbot, who was born March 3, 1728, died August 10, 1760. A second union was contracted with the relict Susanna Derby, of Canterbury, Connecticut. Children by first marriage: Dinah, Mary, Uriah (of whom hereafter), Lemuel, Keturah, Sarah, Hannah and Dorcas. Children by Hannah: Samuel, Oliver and Zilpha.

(V) Uriah, eldest son of Joshua (2) and Mary (Abbot) Holt, was born March 23, 1754. He lived in Ashford and West Springfield, Massachusetts. He married Margaret Mason, born August 15, 1754. Children: Sarah, Polly, Clarissa, Betsy, Rodney (of whom hereafter), John and Polly.

(VI) Rodney, eldest son of Uriah and Margaret (Mason) Holt, was born in West Springfield, July 18, 1788, died in Springfield, September 25, 1862. He married Chloe, daughter of Peletiah Foster, of Barkhamstead, Connecticut. Children: Frederick, Clara, Albert (of whom hereafter), John R., Martha and Jane A.

(VII) Albert, second son of Rodney and Chloe (Foster) Holt, was born in Springfield, April 16, 1831. He received a rudimentary education in the district school, supplemented by four terms at Wilbraham Academy. He worked on his father's farm summers and taught school winters until he was twenty-one, having taught in Chicopee, Springfield, Longmeadow, Cleveland, Ohio. He was employed one year at the Massasoit house and three years by S. C. Bemis. In 1858 he engaged with the Boston & Albany railroad, then the Western railroad, as assistant paymaster, and in the same year was promoted to be paymaster, holding the position until 1901, when he resigned to be succeeded by his son. He is a member of the Winthrop Club, and attends the Methodist Trinity Church. He was one of the old volunteer firemen, was assistant of Niagara company and afterward clerk for the Ocean hose company and is now a member of the Veteran Firemen's Association. He is a Democrat, and has been prominent in the councils of his party. He has served in the city government as councilman, and a member of the board of aldermen. He protested strongly against the city acquiring the Ludlow water system. Mr. Holt is one of the old-time railroad men of whom few remain, who saw the rise and fall of the Boston & Albany as a railroad system, and in all this he took a leading part. He was a co-worker with Chester W. Chapin, James A. Rumrill and Charles O. Russell, of whom he was an intimate friend, and of these he is the only one now remaining. He married, April 20, 1859, Adeline S., daughter of Solomon C. Warner. She was born August 23, 1835, in Springfield, and attended the old high, also the Wilbraham Academy. She taught school until her marriage in 1850. She is a member of the Mercy Warren Chapter, Daughters of American Revolution, and actively interested in the same; also the Union Relief Association. (The Foster Line).

The first that is known of the name of Foster was about the year 1065, A. D., when Sir Richard Forrester went from Normandy over to England, accompanied by his brother-in-law, William the Conqueror, and participated in the victorious battle of Hastings. The name was first Forrester, then Forester, then Foster. It signified one who had care of wild lands; one who loved the forest, a characteristic trait which has marked the bearers of the name through all the centuries that have followed. The Fosters seem to have located in the northern counties of England, and in the early centuries of English history participated in many a sturdy encounter with their Scottish foes. The name is mentioned in "Marmion" and the "Lay of the Last Minstrel."

During its existence the Foster family has been a hardy, persevering and progressive race, almost universally endowed with an intense nervous energy; there have been many instances of high attainments; a bearer of the name has been, ex-officio, vice-president of the Republic (Hon. Lafayette G. Foster, president pro tem. of the senate during Andrew Johnson's administration); another Hon. John W. Foster, of Indiana, was member of President Harrison's cabinet; another, Hon. Charles Foster, of Ohio, was the secretary of the treasury. Many have attained high positions in financial life, and many have gained prominence in military affairs. The record of Major-General John G. Foster through the Mexican war and the war of the Rebellion, stamped him as a soldier without fear and without reproach. Professor Bell is the reported and accredited inventor of the telephone, but before that distinguished man had ever conceived the plan of electric transmission of the human voice, Joseph Foster, of Keane, New Hampshire, a mechanical genius, had constructed and put into actual use a telephone embodying practically the same working plan as the Bell machine. The Foster family has an authentic record covering a period of nearly one thousand years. It has furnished to the world its share of the fruits of toil; it has contributed its share to enterprise and progress. Wherever it appears in the affairs of men it bears its crest: the iron arm holding the golden javelin poised toward the future.

(I) Christopher Foster was born in England in 1603. He came over in the "Abigail" in 1625, was made a freeman in 1637 in Boston, the same year removed to Lynn, and in 1651 to Southampton, where he died in 1687. His wife was named Frances, whom he brought from England, together with three children. Children: Rebecca, born 1630; Nathaniel, 1633; John, whose sketch follows; George, Benjamin, Joseph and Sarah.

(II) John, third son of Christopher and Frances Foster, was born in England in 1634, was brought to America by his father, and died at Southampton. The records do not state the name of his wife, but she bore him the following children: John, whose sketch follows; Sarah, born January 20, 1664; Hannah, January 2, 1667; Jeremiah, March 2, 1671; Patience, March 7, 1673; Rachel, February 2, 1675; Jonathan, April 2, 1677; David, March 15, 1679; William, April 2, 1681; Phebe, April 1, 1683; Abigail, February 16, 1685.

(III) John (2), eldest son of John (1) Foster, was born in Southampton, February 8, 1662, and there died. He married Hannah Abbott, who bore him the following children: Thomas, 1661; John, 1665; Hachaliah, 1700; Abraham, whose sketch follows.

(IV) Sergeant Abraham, youngest son of John (2) and Hannah (Abbott) Foster, was born in Southampton in 1702, died at Wapping, Connecticut, April 2, 1784. He married at East Windsor, Connecticut, November 30, 1727, Elizabeth, daughter of John and Abigail (Strong) Moore. She was descended from the original John Moore who came over in the "Mary and John" in 1630. Her strong line came from Elder John Strong, who also came over in the "Mary and John", and was one of the party of colonists that settled Windsor, Connecticut, and he was their pastor. Abraham served in the Indian war, and bore the title of sergeant. Children: Thomas, born July 25, 1727; Abel, October 11, 1728; Hannah, October 4, 1730; Peletiah, whose sketch follows; Sybil, March 19, 1735; Hachaliah, July 4, 1740; John, September 19, 1742; Elizabeth January 20, 1745.

(V) Peletiah, third son of Sergeant Abraham and Abigail (Moore) Foster, was born in East Windsor, November 30, 1732, died there July 20, 1826. He married Phebe Pomeroy, who was born in 1740, died April 23, 1821. She bore him the following children: Phineas, May 13, 1763; Eli, born September 1, 1767; Chloe, 1774, who married Rodney Holt, and became the mother of Albert Holt, whose ancestry is traced above.

William Bowman was a resi-

BOWMAN dent of Brookfield, Massachusetts. He was a surveyor of land and the "History of Amherst" states that he surveyed the boundary line between that town and Shutesburg, October 25, 1792. He was elected sealer of leather in 1798 and 1799. Family tradition says "he would have had a large grant of land but for the fact that he died one hour before the messenger reached his residence with the grant." The "History of North Brookfield" names him as one of the minute-men of that town who enlisted for the term of six months, November 14, 1774. He married, May 23, 1769, Susannah, daughter of Corlis and Janet (McMaster) Hinds. She was born in Brookfield, March 15, 1750, and was fourth in descent from James Hinds, the immigrant. She was third daughter of Elisha and Persis (Hubbard) Field. Her father was born in Leverett, Massachusetts, February 19, 1781; settled in Sunderland in 1806; in 1816 removed to Deerfield, where he died, August 25, 1865. He was educated in the public schools of Sunderland and Springfield, graduating from the high school of the latter city in 1867. He was office boy for Howes Norris, agent for the Remington Arms Company, and went from that employ to General Horace C. Lee, agent for the Lamb Knitting Machine Company. April 1, 1867, he took service in the Springfield Institution for Savings as boy. There he remained until 1879, having been made assistant treasurer. At that date he became cashier of the City National Bank, of which he was then one of the organizers. In 1893 he organized the Springfield National Bank and became its first president and has ever since held that office. The number and magnitude of the enterprises which Mr. Bowman has promoted and organized are the strongest evidence of his ability to recognize the possibilities of a proposition and to convince others of its merit. He organized and since its organization has been president and director of the United States Spring Bed Company; he assisted in organizing the Holyoke Card and Paper Company, and has since been its treasurer and one of its directors; he was one of the organizers of the Confectioners' Machinery and Manufacturing Company, of which he has since been treasurer and a director; he helped to organize the Consolidated Wrapping Machine Company, and is treasurer and a director of the company; he is a director of the Automatic Weighing Machine Company of New York of which he was an organizer, he is a director of the United Button Company of New York, and was also a member of the reorganization committee; he was an organizer and is treasurer and a trustee of the Springfield Realty Trust, director of the American Finance and Securities Company of New York, and was one of the organizers of the Fuller Realty Trust, of which he is president and a trustee. Training School; treasurer of the Hitchcock Free Academy of Brimfield; trustee of Wesson Memorial Hospital, and a member of the River Front Commission. He is a member of the First Highland Church and is chairman of its board of directors. He is also an honorary member of the Naval Brigade. Mr. Bowman is a close observer, and has obtained much of his large stock of general information at first hand by travel. In 1878, in company with Ralph W. Ellis, he visited Europe and toured nearly every country, both continental and insular. In America he has become familiar with the United States and a large part of Canada and Mexico by travel.

PARSONS This patronymic comes from persona, Latin for mask. Actors wore a wooden mask in early times so as to throw their voice out, a presagement of the modern telephone. Eventually the actor was called after the mask he wore—dramatis personae. The possessor was called by the thing he possessed. The word had a double significance. In ecclesiastical language it was referable to a man of dignity, and bestowed upon one with a benefice or living who committed the cure of souls to a vicar. Thus actors and parsons derived their names from the same root, though they are now diametrically opposed to each other. We first had the form, the parson's son, or the parson's John. This was finally and formally abbreviated to Parsons. In early times the clergy were not bound to celibacy. The heraldic designs of this family were. Gu. two chevronels ermine between three eagles displayed or. Crest: An eagle's leg erased at the thigh or, standing on a leopard's face, gules. Among those of the name in America who have especially distinguished themselves have been the learned Theophilus Parsons, chief justice of Massachusetts; Andrew Parsons, governor of Michigan; Lewis P. Parsons, governor of Alabama; and General Lewis B. Parsons. We find by the herald's visitations that the oldest known Parsons of record was John of Cuddington, A. D. 1284. In the roll of possessions in the Abbey of Malmesbury is the name of William le Parsons in 1307. It was a south of England name not found much in the northern counties. Thomas Parsons was of the squirarchy and gentry of England, and lived at Great Milton in Oxfordshire.

(I) Hugh, son of Thomas Parsons, of Great Milton, had five children. We have the names of three—Robert, Joseph and Benjamin.

(II) Benjamin, fifth son of Hugh Parsons, was born in Great Torrington, Devonshire, about 1627, and died August 24, 1689, in Springfield, Massachusetts. He came from England, and settled in Springfield in 1656. He was a brother to Cornet Joseph Parsons. He was constable, fence-viewer, on the committee to make and seal a "Tole Dish" for measuring wheat and corn, overseer of highways, was selectman for a great many years. He was a witness to the Crawford agreement, was a juror in 1660 on a committee to grant lands, 1665-79. He was a witness at the trial of the slander suit of Cornet Joe Parsons vs. Bridgeman, who had charged Joe's wife with being a witch. In 1679 he was on a committee to take a list of all ratable persons, also on committee to admit inhabitants. In 1681 he was fined for being absent at town meeting, and in 1685 was on the committee of the Enfield boundary, and in 1687 to make a valuation of land. His pew in church was fourth from the deacon's seat. January 30, 1656, he was granted one acre by the town, provided he continue to live in Springfield five years, and in 1660 he was granted land in what is now Suffield. In 1662 he was allotted one acre at Wet Meadow; in 1663 two acres of meadow near John Matheas; in 1664 land at Shipmuck; in 1666 still another tract in Pacowsick meadow. He went back to England as a witness to his brother's will. He was said to have been of superior intellectual and social status from those by whom he was surrounded. He was eminent in the church, and an earnest worker and of great purity in private life. His estate inventoried two hundred twenty-two pounds. He married (first) Sarah Vore, November 6, 1653, in England; (second) Sarah (Heald), widow of John Leonard who was killed by the Indians. She married after Benjamin's death, Peter Tilton of Hadley. Their children: Sarah, born August 13, 1656; Benjamin, September 15, 1658; May, December 10, 1660; Abigail, January 6, 1662; Samuel (mentioned below); Mary, December 17, 1670; Hezekiah, November 24, 1673; Joseph December, 1675.

(IV) Moses, seventh child of Samuel and Hannah (Hitchcock) Parsons, was born presumably in Springfield, and is said to have died in a fit perhaps of apoplexy. The name of his wife was Ruth. Their children: Moses, Ezra and Ruth.

(V) Ezra, eldest son of Moses and Ruth Parsons, was born in June, 1742, and died in Ludlow, Massachusetts, 1802. This town was first called Blanford, and by the Indians Mineachogue. Eleven centuries ago a
his appearance at the court of Halfdan Huilbein, king of Norway. His name was Ivar. He had been a shepherd and had been captured by the Northmen and carried to sea. He became a favorite at the Norwegian court. The king made him general of his army and in 725 gave him his daughter Euritheia in marriage. He was called Prince of Uplands. When the king died the son of Ivar became heir to the throne and during his minority Ivar was regent. This son Eystein reigned until 755. He was succeeded by his son Harold Harfager. Rollo, a Prince of this line, overran Normandy in 910. His sixth and youngest son,

Walter, received the castle and town of Caen as an inheritance. His great-grandson, Walter de Caen, accompanied William, the Norman, to England at the time of the conquest. To this nobleman the line of Dickinsons descended from the first American pioneer, Nathaniel, may be traced. Tradition says that the name Dickinson is taken from the fact that Walter De Caen lived in a manor in England, known as Kenson, and that ever afterward the name was De Kenson, now Dickinson. Nathaniel is the fifteenth in this line, as follows:

(I) Walter de Caen, later Walter de Kenson, taking the name from his manor in Yorkshire. (II) Johnne Dykonson, freeholder of Kingston upon Hull, Yorkshire, married, 1260, Margaret Lambert, died 1316. (III) William Dykenson, freeholder as above, died 1330. (IV) Hugh Dykensonne, freeholder as above, died 1376. (V) Anthoynne Dickensonne, freeholder as above, married, 1376, Katheryne De La Pole; he died 1396. (VI) Richard Dickinson, freeholder as above, married, 1399, Margaret Cooper, died 1441. (VII) Thomas Dickinson, freeholder as above, married Margaret Lambert; alderman first ward Hull 1443-44; mayor 1444-45; died 1475. (VIII) Hugh Dickinson, freeholder as above, married, 1451, Agnes Swillington; removed 1475 to Kenson Manor, Yorkshire; died 1500. (IX) William Dickinson, freeholder of Kenson Manor, married, 1475, Isabel Langton; died 1546. (X) John Dickinson, settled in Leeds, Yorkshire, married, in 1490, Elizabeth Danby; alderman 1525-54; died in 1554. (XIV) William Dickinson, settled in Ely, Cambridge, married, 1594, Sarah Stacey, of Ely; died 1628.

(XV) Nathaniel Dickinson, son of William Dickinson, was born in Ely, Cambridge, in 1600. He married, January, 1630, at East Bergolat, Suffolk, Anna Gull, widow of William Gull. They came to Wethersfield, Connecticut, in 1636-37. He was one of the leaders in the colony. He was town clerk in 1645, representative to the general court in 1646-47. He removed to Hadley, Massachusetts, in 1659, and was admitted a freeman there in 1661. He was chosen deacon of the church and first recorder of the town. He was selectman, assessor and town magistrate. He was a member of the Hampshire Troop, and on the first board of trustees of Hopkinton Academy. He resided a few years at Hatfield. He died at Hadley, June 16, 1676. (XXI) Elijah Walden, eldest child of Elijah and Clarine (White) Dickinson, was born in Hadley, February 20, 1816, died in Springfield, September 9, 1885. He was educated in the common schools and at Hopkins Academy. "He was a close student and at one time traveled as a lecturer for a panorama of the Holy Land. He also taught school at Hadley and other places and in 1840 went to Springfield, where he was principal of the grammar school which was afterward taken charge of by Mr. Charles Barrows. Later he went into the furniture establishment of Robert Crossett where he learned the upholstering business, and continued in the business until 1862, when he went into the furniture business in the Union Block. He sold out in 1868, and a year later became a member of the undertaking firm of Fisk & Dickinson, the firm having formerly been Pomeroy & Fisk. In 1872 Mr. Fisk retired and the firm of E. W. Dickinson & Company was established. Mr. Dickinson was a member of the common council from ward three in 1855, but never sought office. Before the war he was an abolitionist to the core and was counted with the "under ground railway" that aided slaves to escape, and was a firm friend of John Brown and other workers in the anti-slavery cause. He was one of the first deacons of the North Church, but some thirty years before his death with several others became a Spiritualist and left the church. In speaking of this change, he always said it was "a matter of conscience with him, that he left the church at great personal sacrifice, but in accordance with his firm convictions. He was a good citizen and his death was a loss to the community." Elijah W. Dickinson married, November —, 1839, Mary Abbott Crossett, born February 18, 1814, died in Springfield, November 17, 1859. She was the daughter of Robert and Mary (Abbott) Crossett (see Abbott). Robert Crossett, of New Salem, was born May 18, 1781, son of Samuel and Abigail (Cady) Crossett, and grandson of Robert Crossett, who served in the revolutionary war at Bennington, Vermont, 1777. It is also claimed by his kinsmen that Samuel Crossett served in the revolutionary war at Ticonderoga, where he was made a prisoner by the Indians, but after great suffering effected his escape. After her mother died, Mary Abbott Crossett was brought up in Elijah Abbott's family until old enough to take care of herself. She attended school at the academy in Hadley, where she met Mr. Dickinson, whom she afterward married. She was a member of the North Congregational Church. Four children were born of this union. 1. Mary Abbott, born August 31, 1840, died in Springfield, August, 1877. 2. Arthur Stuart, August 11, 1844, married, in Agawam, April 6, 1872. Anna Robinson Marsh, born in Northfield, Massachusetts, July 20, 1853, daughter of Edwin A. and Betsey (Presho) Marsh, of Agawam. Four children have been born to them in Springfield: Lucille Marsh, June 28, 1873, died in Oak Hill, Florida, October 14, 1865; Daisy Anna, October 4, 1874; Mary Abbott, February 12, 1880; Lena Stuart, July 13, 1844. 3. Francke W., see below. 4. An infant son.

(XXII) Francke Walden, second son of Elijah W. and Mary A. (Crossett) Dickinson, was born in Springfield, April 10, 1849. He was educated in the public and private schools of Springfield, and learned the business in which his father was engaged. In March, 1873, Arthur S. and Francke W. Dickinson became associated with their father in business under the firm name of E. W. Dickinson & Company, and carried on the enterprise until September, 1874, when the father and Francke W. bought out the interest of Arthur S. After the death of Elijah W. Dickinson, Francke W. became the sole owner of the business which he has since carried on successfully. Mr. Dickinson has always taken an active interest in municipal affairs, and being endowed with good judgment, executive ability, and a pleasing personality, he has often been chosen to serve the people. In 1888-90 he served as a member of the common council of Springfield, and in 1891 was president of that body. In 1903-04 he was a member of the board of aldermen. In 1904, having discharged his public duties in such a manner as to receive the approbation of his fellow citizens, he became a candidate for mayor and was elected, serving 1905-06. In 1908 he was elected state senator, and during the following session was a chairman of the committee on election laws and member of the committee on cities, and of the commission on federal relations. In 1908 he was again elected to the senate and served with the approbation of his constituency as a member and chairman of the committee on cities, member committee on rules and committee on insurance, and in the discharge of his other duties as an officer. He is a Republican and always a consistent supporter of the principles of his party and a public servant whose conduct has ever been above reproach. He is a member of Springfield Lodge, F. and A. M.; Morning Star Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, Springfield Council; Springfield Commandery, Knights Templar; and Massachusetts Consistory, Sublime Princes of the Royal Secret, in which he has received the thirty-second degree, and of Melhia Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He is also a member of the Royal Arcanum and is past grand regent of that order, and trustee of the supreme council. He is an Odd Fellow, being a member of Hampden Lodge, No. 27; and Agawam Encampment, Patriarchs Militant. He attends the Third Congregational Church (Unitarian). Francke W. Dickinson was married in Springfield, January 16, 1873, to Katie May Allgood, born in Cincinnati, Ohio, June 27, 1854, daughter of James Allgood, of Cincinnati, Ohio. They have had three children: 1. Emma Allgood, born December 4, 1873, died February 14, 1884. 2. Ethel May, July 10, 1875, married, January 1, 1900, Edward William Beattie, Jr., and resides in Springfield, Massachusetts. 3. Henry Walden, September 13, 1876, died September 6, 1896.

(The Abbott Line).

(1) George Abbott, pioneer settler, was probably born in England, and died in Rowley, Essex county, Massachusetts, in 1647. He was one of the first settlers of Rowley, where he took his family from England about 1642. On account of the loss of the early records of Rowley, little is known of George Abbott, and the date of the death of his wife is unknown, nor is it certain that she came to America. In accordance with custom, Mr. Abbott probably deeded most of his estate before his death to his eldest son, Thomas Abbott Sr. His inventory of effects amounted ninety-five pounds two shillings eight pence. The estates of his sons, however, indicate that he owned much more land than there is any record of in his day. He probably had a large share in the undivided lands of the town, which were afterwards distributed to his heirs. George Abbott left three children, born in England; Thomas, George and Nehemiah.

(II) George (2), second son of George (1) Abbott, born in England, about 1631, came to Massachusetts with his father's family probably about 1642. He lived in Rowley about fourteen years and in 1655 moved to that part of Andover afterwards North Andover, but now Andover Center. He was a tiller of the soil and a tailor, very thrifty and industrious, and for that day was financially well off, being, as shown by the tax list, one of the five wealthiest men in the town. He was a member of Sergeant James Osgood's militia company, 1658-9, and had previously been a member of Sergeant Steven's company. He became a freeman May 19, 1669, and was elected constable June 3, 1680, "for ye north end of ye town for ye year ensuing". Whether he held other town offices or not it is impossible to determine, as there were so many other George Abbotts. For many years he had charge of the north meeting house, Andover, and it was voted to allow him the use of a part of the parsonage lands for his services in repairing the meeting house, he agreeing to "mend ye pulpit cushions, and to get ye meeting-house lock mended". In 1675 he was paid "for sweeping ye meeting-house and ringing ye bell, thirty shillings per annum". June 1, 1676, he bought nine acres "of upland on ye north side of Joseph Marble's land, provided it be not judicial to Richard Barker, and he is to pay for it nine pounds in sweeping ye meeting-house and ringing ye bell at thirty shillings per annum". He was also town drummer. It was the custom at one time to beat the drum as the signal for service and daily labor, "and none but a sober and industrious man could be chosen for such duties". George Abbott probably had charge in all about thirty years, some of his sons temporarily taking his place about the time of his death. He received numerous grants or assignments of land from Andover, but they were scattered, and none large. He was a party to many real estate transactions with individuals. He was a thrifty man and at his death was well off". He died intestate, in Andover, March 22, 1689, aged fifty-eight years. He was married, in Ipswich, by "Mr. Gradstreet", April 26, 1658, to Sarah Far-num, who was probably born in Massachusetts about 1638, daughter of Ralph and Alice Farnum, of Andover. She was married (second) by Rev. Francis Dane, August 1, 1689, to Sergeant Henry Ingalls, and died in 1728, aged ninety years. Children of George and Sarah Abbott: George, Sarah, John, Mary, Nehemiah, Hannah, Mehitable (died young), Lydia, Samuel and Mehitable.

(III) George (3), eldest son of George (2) and Sarah (Farnum) Abbott, was born January 26, 1659, in Andover, and died January 24, 1724. He was a farmer and shoemaker, and resided in Andover. His father gave him sixteen acres of upland, on which he built a house during his father's life. He also received from his father's estate, when divided, two pieces of meadow, live stock, household effects, etc. November 9, 1723, for sixty pounds, he sold his brother Obed, of Salem, certain land in Andover, and October 25, 1723, he deeded certain lands to his son Uriah Abbott. There were so many Abbotts in Andover bearing his forename, that it is not possible to tell what if any offices he held. His will, dated October 1, 1724, was probated December 7, 1724, and his son Uriah named as executor. He was married (first) in Andover, by Rev. Francis Dane, September 13, 1689, to Elizabeth Ballard, of Andover, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Phelps) Ballard, granddaughter of William Ballard, the twenty-third pioneer settler of Andover, and a large landholder there. She died May 6, 1706. He married (second) July 21, 1707, Hannah Estey of Topsfield, born there in 1667, daughter of Isaac and Mary (Town) Estey, and granddaughter of Jeffrey Estey, who first bought land in Salem, Massachusetts, in 1636. Mary Estey, mother of Mrs. Abbott, was executed at Salem for witchcraft, September 22, 1692. Hannah Abbott died in Topsfield, November 5, 1741. Children all by first wife: George, Uriah, Jacob, Elizabeth, Obed, Moses, Peter, Sarah and Hannah.

(IV) Peter, sixth son of George (3) and Elizabeth (Ballard) Abbott, was born in Andover, July 27, 1701, and died probably in 1785. He was a yeoman, and lived in Brookfield, where he first bought "four score" acres of land, for sixty pounds, on the south side of the Quaboag river, joining Quaboag pond, November 13, 1725. He was a soldier in the Colonial wars, and his service is stated in the Massachusetts Archives as follows: "Private seventeen weeks two days, July 17, 1722, Colonel Shadrack Walton's command; discharged November 14, 1722; private four weeks four days, November 22, 1734, in Colonel Thomas Westbrook's command; discharged December 23, 1724". He was in the revolution, although at the time he was seventy-seven years old. There were stores in Brookfield which at one time had to be guarded, and men of his age could do such duty. His name is on the list of men who served to the credit of the third precinct of Brookfield, dated June 30, 1778, credited with four and a half months service. His will, dated April 27, 1744, was probated April 26, 1785, and his son Joel was made executor and to him the entire estate was given, provided he paid certain legacies, etc. His father had previously deeded him, November 11, 1760, half of his real estate, ninety and one half acres, building, etc. His other bequests were: To sons Nathan, Jesse and John, twenty pounds each, "lawful silver money"; to daughters Lydia, Prudence and Sarah, fifteen pounds each; and forty pounds to daughter Elizabeth. He married, in Brookfield, Worcester county, 1730, Lydia Gilbert, probably born there, January 3, 1712, daughter of Samuel and Lydia (Barnes) Gilbert, of Brookfield. Children born in Brookfield: Nathan (died young); Joel, Damaris, Gideon, Elizabeth, Nathan, Jesse, Moses, Joshua, Lydia, Prudence, Sarah and John.

(V) Corporal Joel, second son of Peter and Lydia (Gilbert) Abbott, was born in Brookfield, January 1 or 12, 1732, and died in Brimfield, January 23, 1823, aged ninety-one years. He served as a corporal during the French and Indian war, 1752-53, in Captain William Page's company, of Hardwick; private, fifteen weeks three days, in Captain Daniel Brewer's company, Colonel Whitcomb's regiment, in Crown Point expedition, August 26 to December 11, 1755, nine days billeting being allowed; private July 10 to December 31, 1756, in General Abercombe's expedition; corporal thirty-four weeks one day, in Captain William Paige's company, in Crown Point expedition, April 6 to November 30, 1758; corporal at age of twenty-six years, in Colonel Timothy Ruggle's regiment, General Amherst's Canadian expedition; enlisted April 6, 1759, and equipped himself. His name is also on the list dated June 30, 1778, of men who served during the revolution, for the third precinct of Brookfield, and is credited with four and a half month's service. He married, in Brookfield, 1763, Judith Stevens, of Brookfield, born there May 13, 1744, died May 6, 1800, and buried beside her husband, in Brookfield. Children: Gideon, Zebina, Ruth Zephaniah, Olive, Rachel, Jernsba, Jabez, Jairus, Mary, George, Joel and Elijah.

(VI) Mary, fifth daughter of Corporal Joel and Judith (Stevens) Abbott, was born in Brookfield, May 3, 1782, and died in Northampton, November 5, 1815. She married, in Brookfield, November 29, 1804, Robert Crosssett, of New Salem, born May 18, 1781, and was the mother of George A., Sarah A., Abigail, Robert, Charles Rollin and Mary Abbott Crosssett. The last named married Elijah Walden Dickinson (see Dickinson XXI).

The Pomeroy family of England and America is descended from Ralph de Pomeroy, a knight of William the Conqueror. He took his name from the parish of S. Savern de la Pomeraye in the department of La Manche in Normandy. He founded a great and famous family in England, and he or his descendants named Berry Pomeroy in Devonshire, the ancient seat of the family. Ralph de Pomeroy held fifty-eight lordships at the time of the survey of the Domesday Book. The name Pommeraye in old French means orchard, and it is easy to see how it came to be first a place name and then a surname. All the families of this name seem to belong to the Devonshire family, the coat-of-arms of which is: Argent a lion rampant sable within a bordure unweaked sable. Crest: A fir cone charged with a bezant. All the Pomeroy, Pomerai, Pommeray and other families in England, however spelled, of this ancestry, bear similar armorials.

(I) Richard Pomeroy, father of the American immigrant, lived in the parish of Beaminster, Dorsetshire, England. Among his children were: 1. Eltweed, christened July 4, 1585, mentioned below. 2. Edward, baptized March 4, 1591, buried at Beaminster July 19, 1592. 3. Henry, baptized August 5, 1593.

(II) Eltweed, son of Richard Pomeroy, was christened (the word used in the record, while his brothers were baptized) at the Beaminster church, July 4, 1585. Of his life in Beaminster we know little. He was well educated certainly. He married (first) Joan Keech, at Beaminster, May 4, 1617. His wife was buried at Beaminster, November 27, 1620. (records from A. A. Leonard, vicar.) He married (second) being then of Beaminster (Beaminster), May 7, 1627, Margery Rockett. (Record from Gerbert C. Gaye, rector, from the register of the Crewkerne parish church.) With his second wife and his son Eldad he came to America in 1630 in the ship "Mary and John," Captain Squibb. He settled in Dorchester, as it was called, and from the first was a prominent citizen. He was admitted a freeman, March 4, 1632. He was one of the proprietors and founders of the town of Dorchester, and presided at the first town meeting, being first selectman. Though the idea of the town meeting did not originate in this town, "this Dorchester town meeting—the first in America, was the model of all the town meetings in New England, and the germ of our American Commonwealths," said the Outlook recently. Near by was soon established "the first free school supported by general taxation in America." The meeting was held in the church or meeting-house in which the first service was held in June, 1630. The meeting house stood at the corner of what is now East Cottage and Pleasant streets, Dorchester, now part of Boston. It was built of logs, surrounded by palisades and had a thatched roof. A sentinel was kept on guard, so that it served as a place of refuge and defense against the Indians. Pomeroy was an armorer and gunsmith by trade and must have been an exceedingly valuable man in the colony. He was appointed constable of Dorchester by the general court, June 3, 1634. In 1636-37 he emigrated with Rev. John Warham's congregation to Windsor, Connecticut. His house and lot there were within the Palisado. He had a grant of land in 1638; sold land to Thomas Newell in 1641 and later gave land to his sons Caleb and Joseph. He had had a seat of honor on the "long seats" in the meeting house. In 1671 he removed to Northampton, Massachusetts, to live with his son Medad and tradition says that in his last years he was blind. He died in 1673 and was doubtless buried in the Bridge street burial ground, Northampton. His second wife died at Windsor, July 5, 1655. He married (third) Lydia (Brown) Parsons, widow of Thomas Parsons, November 30, 1664, and in 1665 made generous provision "for his dear and loving wife Lydia." Children of first wife: 1. Dinah, died young. 2. Elizabeth, born November 27, 1619, died less than two years afterward. Children of second wife, Margery: 3. Eldad (probably named for his father, Eltweed being the same as Eldad), married Susanna Cunliffe. 4. Mary, died at Windsor, December 19, 1640. 5. John, died at Windsor in 1647. 6. Medad, baptized at Windsor, August 19, 1638, married (first)

Experience Woodward, (second) Abigail (Strong) Chauncey, (third) Hannah (Warham) Noble; he died at Northampton, December 30, 1716; was deacon of the church at Northampton. 7. Caleb, baptized 1641, mentioned below. 8. Mary, baptized April 1, 1644, died 1647. 9. Joshua, baptized November 22, 1646, died 1683; married Elizabeth Lyman and Abigail Cooke. 10. Joseph, baptized June 30, 1652, died September 22, 1734; married Hannah Lyman.

(III) Caleb, son of Eltweed Pomeroy, was baptized at Windsor, March 6, 1641. He was one of the first settlers of Northampton and was admitted a freeman in 1663. In 1686 he sold his farm at Northampton and moved to Southampton or Easthampton, near by, in Massachusetts. He died November 18, 1691. He was a soldier in the Falls Fight, May 19, 1676, in King Philip's war. He married, March 8, 1665, Hepsibah Baker, born May 10, 1646, daughter of Jeffry and Joan (Rockwell) Baker, of Windsor. Children: 1. Hepsibah, born July 27, 1666, died young. 2. Samuel, May 29, 1669, mentioned below. 3. Abigail, October 26, 1671. 4. Hepsibah, baptized January 19, 1673, married Walter Lee, of Westfield, Massachusetts. 5. Ebenezer, born March 14, 1674, died September 12, 1699. 6. Caleb, May 3, 1677, died April, 1690. 7. Eldad, December 6, 1670, married Sarah Wait, daughter of William Wait. 8. Mercy, September 20, 1684, died April 17, 1712; married, July 7, 1702, Joseph Baker, of Windsor. 9. Sarah, August 6, 1687, married (first) Deliverance Church; (second) Noah Wright.

(IV) Samuel, son of Caleb Pomeroy, was born at Northampton, May 29, 1669. About 1732 he removed to Easthampton and settled on land lately owned by Deacon E. W. Hannum. His brother Eldad settled at the same time in the same town. Samuel was a farmer and school teacher. By change of town lines his homestead is now located in Southampton. He married (first) about 1690, Elizabeth French, daughter of John and Mary (Kingsley) French, of Rehoboth, Massachusetts; (second) December 7, 1703, Joanna Root, born November 5, 1681, died January 20, 1713, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Frary) Root; (third) about 1715, Elizabeth (probably Strickland), who was living in 1746, when he made his will. Children of first wife: 1. Samuel, born 1691, married Hannah Hannum, daughter of John Hannum. 2. Caleb, May 14, 1693, died young. 3.

By a subsequent change of town lines, the farm came within the bounds of Southampton. He died April 15, 1842. He married, September 16, 1790, Silence Brown, born May 26, 1769, died July 19, 1848, great-granddaughter of Abigail (Pomeroy) Searle, daughter of Caleb Pomeroy (3), mentioned above. Abigail, born October 26, 1671, married, April 5, 1694, John Searle, son of John Searle Jr. and Ruth (Janes), daughter of William Janes. The Searle family settled at Pascommuck, a hamlet at the foot of Mount Nonotuck, Northampton, destroyed in 1704 in an Indian massacre, in which John Searle was slain and Abigail, his wife, left for dead, but she recovered and married (second) December 3, 1707, Nathaniel Alexander John (3); George (2); John (1). The name of Morton, Moreton and Mortaigne is earliest found in old Dauphine, is still existent in France, where it is represented by the present Comtes and Marquises Morton de Chabrilion, and where the family has occupied many important positions, states the "Genealogy of the Morton Family," from which this sketch is taken. In the annals of the family there is a statement repeatedly met with, that as a result of a quarrel one of the name migrated from Dauphine, first to Brittany and then to Normandy, where he joined William the Conqueror. Certain it is that among the names of the followers of William painted on the chancel ceiling in the ancient church of Dives in old Normandy, is that of Robert Comte de Mortain. It also figures on Battle Abbey Roll, the Domesday Book, and the Norman Rolls, and it is conjectured that this Count Robert, who was also half-brother of the Conqueror by his mother Harlotte, was the founder of the English family of that name. In the Bayeux tapestry he is represented as of the Council of William, the result of which was the intrenchment of Hastings and the conquest of England. Count Robert held manors in nearly every county in England, in all about eight hundred, among which was Pevensea, where the Conqueror landed, and where in 1087 Robert and his brother Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, were besieged six weeks by William Rufus. Here Camden (1551-1628) found "the most entire remains of a Roman building to be seen in Britain."

When William, Earl of Moriton and Cornwall, son of Robert, rebelled against Henry I, that prince seized and razed his castles, but this one seems to have escaped demolition. In early Norman times this William built a castle at Tamerton, Cornwall, and founded a college of canons, as appeared by the Domesday Book, where it is called Lanstavecton. On the north side of the Greta in Richmondshire, stands an old manor house, called Moreton Tower, from a lofty, square embattled tower at one end of it.

Of the family of Morton were the Earls of Dulcie and Cornwall; Robert Morton, Esquire, of Bawtry; Thomas Morton, secretary to Edward III; William Morton, bishop of Meath; Robert Morton, bishop of Worcester in 1486; John Morton, the celebrated cardinal archbishop of Canterbury and lord chancellor of England, 1420-1500; Albert Morton, secretary of state to James I; Thomas Morton (1564-1659), bishop of Durham and chaplain to James II. Prominent among the English Mortons who early came to America were Thomas Morton, Esquire, Rev. Charles Morton, Landgrave Joseph Morton, proprietary governor of South Carolina, and George Morton.

(1) George Morton, the first of the name to found a family in America, and the ancestor of former Vice-President Levi P. Morton, was born about 1585, at Austerfield, Yorkshire, England, and it is believed was of the ancient Mortons, who bore for arms: Quarterly, gules and ermine; in the dexter chief and sinister base, each a goat's head erased argent attired or. Crest; a goat's head, argent attired or. Hunter, in his "Founders of New Plymouth," suggests that he may have been the George Morton hitherto unaccounted for in the family of Anthony Morton, of Bawtry, one of the historical families of England, and that from Romanist lineage "he so far departed from the spirit and principles of his family as to have fallen into the ranks of the Protestant Puritans and Separatists." Of George Morton's early life no record has been preserved, and his religious environments and the causes which led him to unite with the Separatists are alike unknown. His home in Yorkshire was in the vicinage of Scrooby Manor, and possibly he was a member of Brewster's historic church; but it is only definitely known that he early joined the Pilgrims at Leyden, and continued of their company until his death. When the first of the colonists departed for America, Mr. Morton remained behind, although he "much desired" to embark then and intended soon to join them. His reasons for such a course is a matter of conjecture. As he was a merchant, possibly his business interests caused his detention, or, what is more probable, he remained to promote the success of the colony by encouraging emigration among others. That he served in some official capacity before coming to America, is undoubted. One writer states that he was "the agent of those of his sect in London," and another, that he acted as "the financial agent in London for Plymouth County."

The work, however, for which this eminent forefather is most noted, and which will forever link his name with American history, is the publication issued by him in London, in 1622, of what has since been known as "Mourt's Relation." This "Relation," may justly be termed the first history of New England, and is composed of letters and journals from the chief colonists at Plymouth, either addressed or intrusted to George Morton, whose authorship in the work is possibly limited to the preface. The "Relation" itself is full of valuable information and still continues an authority. Shortly after it was placed before the public, George Morton prepared to emigrate to America, and sailed with his wife and five children in the "Ann," the third and last ship to carry what are distinctively known as the Forefathers, and reached Plymouth early in June, 1623. "New England's Memorial" speaks of Mr. Timothy Hatherly and Mr. George Morton as "two of the principal passengers that came in this ship," and from Morton's activity in promoting emigration it may be inferred that the "Ann's" valuable addition to the Colony was in a measure due to his efforts. He did not long survive his arrival, and his early death was a serious loss to the infant settlement. His character and attainments were such as to suggest the thought that, had he lived to the age reached by several of his distinguished contemporaries, he would have filled as conspicuous a place in the life of the Colony. The Memorial thus chronicles his decease:

"Mr. George Morton was a pious, gracious servant of God, and very faithful in whatsoever public employment he was entrusted withal, and an unfeigned well-willer, and according to his sphere and condition a suitable promoter of the common good and growth of the plantation of New Plymouth, labouring to still the discontents that sometimes would arise amongst some spirits, by occasion of the difficulties of these new beginnings; but it pleased God to put a period to his days soon after his arrival in New England, not surviving a full year after his coming ashore. With much comfort and peace he fell asleep in the Lord, in the month of June anno 1624."

He married Juliana Carpenter, as shown by the entry in the Leyden Records:

"George Morton, merchant, from York in England, accompanied by Thomas Morton, his brother, and Roger Wilson, his acquaintance, with Juliana Carpenter, maid from Baths in England, accompanied by Alexander Carpenter, her father, and Alice Carpenter, her sister, and Anna Robinson, her acquaintance."

"The banns published 6-16 July, 1612; the marriage took place 23 July-2 August, 1612."

Mrs. Morton married (second) Manasseh Kempton, Esquire, a member of the first and other assemblies of the colony. She died at Plymouth, 18 February, 1665, in the eighty-first year of her age, and is mentioned in the Town Records as "a faithful servant of God."

Children of George and Juliana (Carpenter) Morton: Nathaniel, Patience, John, Sarah and Ephraim.

(II) Ephraim, third son of George and Juliana (Carpenter) Morton, was born in England. He married, in 1644, Ann Cooper, and had George, born in 1645; Ephraim, 1648; Rebecca, 1651; Josiah, 1653; Mercy, Nathaniel, Eleazer, Thomas, 1667; Patience.

The Hurlbut of this article
HURLBUT are the first of the name in New England. The courage and energy which made the immigrant a good soldier and hardy pioneer have made many of his descendants successful men in various vocations in life.

(1) Thomas Hurlbut is thought to have come to America in 1635. Lyon Gardiner, who built and had command of the fort at Saybrook, Connecticut, is said to have sailed from England in a little Norse fishing vessel, July 10, 1635, with a wife and female servant and eleven male passengers, and after a long and tempestuous voyage to have arrived at Boston, November 28, following. Thomas Hurlbut is claimed to have been one of the eleven passengers referred to, but nothing of his previous history is known. It is confidently believed that he was born as early as 1610. While at Saybrook he was a member of a party of eleven men sent out February 22, 1637, to burn leaves, weeds, and reeds upon the neck of land half a mile from the fort. While attending to this work they were attacked by a party of Indians (said to have numbered a hundred), and Hurlbut and two others were wounded and two shot dead. "Hurlbut was shot almost through the thigh," but escaped. After the Pequot war Hurlbut settled at Wethersfield, Connecticut, and was the first blacksmith there. "A single extract from the Colonial Records would seem to indicate that he was a good workman and charged a good price for his work: 'March 2, 1642, Thomas Hallibut was fined 40 shillings for encouraging others in taking excessive rates for work and ware,' but this fine appears to have been 'respite'd' February 5, 1643, upon Peter Bassaker's 'tryal' to make 'mayles' with less loss and cheaper rates." He was a man of substance and good standing in the settlement, and was clerk of the "Train Band" in 1640, deputy to the general court, grand juror and also constable in 1644. He received various tracts of land in the several divisions of the town, which were recorded together in 1647. In 1660 the town of Wethersfield granted Thomas Hurlbut lot 39, one of the "four score acre lots" (in Naubuc on the east side of the river), which he afterward sold to Thomas Hollister. For his services in the Indian wars, the assembly voted him a grant of one hundred and twenty acres of land

October 12, 1671. He is supposed to have died soon after that time. In 1694, on the petition of John Hurlbut Jr., of Middletown, a grandson of the settler and soldier, the land which his grandfather had never claimed was set off to him. The baptismal name of the wife of Thomas was Sarah, but no further fact is known of her. Their sons were: Thomas, John, Samuel, Joseph, Stephen and Cornelius. There is no record of any daughters.

(II) Samuel, son of Thomas and Sarah Hurlbut, was born probably in Wethersfield, about 1644. He was a farmer, and first settled in Wethersfield, where he bought, December 27, 1668, a house and home lot of John Goodrich. He owned other lots in town. He appears as a resident of Wethersfield in 1692. A Samuel Hurlbut died in Wethersfield, in 1712, who may have been this Samuel, though he may have moved to Farmington, as has been suggested, where some of his family were living. There is no record of his death or that of his wife, or of the probate of his will. His wife's name was Mary, but there is no record of his marriage. His children were: Stephen, Nathan, Mary, Sarah, Jonathan, David, Titus, Miriam, Samuel, Elizabeth and Lemmon.

(III) Stephen, eldest child of Samuel and Mary Hurlbut, was born in Wethersfield, December 27, 1668, and died October 7, 1712. He settled in New London soon after 1690. He married, about 1696, Hannah Douglas, of New London, and they had Stephen, Frelove, Mary, John, Sarah, Titus and Joseph.

(IV) John, son of Stephen and Hannah (Douglas) Hurlbut, was born in New London, and settled in North Groton, now the town of Ledyard, where he died May 5, 1761. He married Mary, a daughter of Ralph Stoddard. She was living in 1782. Their children, though perhaps not given in the order of their ages, were: Stephen, Mary, John, Rufus, Hannah, Ralph, Lydia and Rispah.

(V) Stephen (2), son of John and Mary (Stoddard) Hurlbut, was born in Groton. It is probable that he first settled in his native town where he resided some years, but he later became a settler of Southampton, Massachusetts, after a number of children had been born to him. He was a land surveyor, and was at the Connecticut settlements on the Susquehanna in 1772 and the spring of 1773, and perhaps part of the succeeding year in that capacity. It is quite probable also that he was there in the year 1770, and was the individual referred to in Miner's Wyoming, page 120, erroneously called Christopher Hurlbut, employed by the Susquehanna company to make surveys. Christopher Hurlbut, son of Deacon John and nephew of Stephen, afterward became a settler and surveyor at Wyoming, and hence probably comes the error. He married (first) Mary Morgan; (second) Widow Alley; (third) Widow Rebecca Sheldon. The children by wife Mary Morgan were: Sarah, Mary, Phebe, Hannah, Frelove and Stephen Douglas; by the second wife: Martin Luther, Collins, Rispah, Susannah and Eunice; and by the last wife: Rufus.

(VI) Stephen Douglas, youngest child of Stephen (2) and Mary (Morgan) Hurlbut, was born in Groton, December 14, (or 19), 1770, and died April 4, 1832, in Southampton, Massachusetts, where all his children were born. June 9, 1791, he married Eunice Clapp, born November 26, 1770, in Southampton, who died December 24, 1824. Their children were: Phebe, Stephen, Sarah, Douglas, Asaph, Samuel and Moses Clapp.

(VII) Asaph, third son of Stephen Douglas and Eunice (Clapp) Hurlbut, was born in Southampton, Massachusetts, September 28, 1801, and resided in West Springfield, where he was engaged in milling. Later, to gain better educational opportunities for his children, he settled in the center of Springfield, where he was in the employ of the Boston & Albany railroad till his death. He was a Whig in politics, and a Congregationalist in religion. He married, in Southampton, November 8, 1827, Asenath Searle. He died August 28, 1867, and she died December 20, 1860. Their children, all born in West Springfield, were: Milton Clark, Cornelius Searle, Sarah Jane, Edward Asaph, Jairus Searle and Lewis Seneca.

(VIII) Jairus Searle, fourth son of Asaph and Asenath (Searle) Hurlbut, was born in West Springfield, January 5, 1842, and died very suddenly, November 9, 1902. At ten years of age he accompanied his parents in their removal to Springfield, and was educated in the schools of that city, graduating from the high school, under Ariel Parish, in 1860. From school he went into the dental office of his brother, Dr. Cornelius S. Hurlbut, with whom he was associated as student and partner until 1865, in which year he went to the Philadelphia Dental College, from which he graduated the same year. He went west for his health, and spent a winter in St. Paul, Minnesota, and then returned to Springfield and located at 374 Main street. After an occupancy of twenty-seven years he removed his business from that place, in 1893, to the Masonic building at the corner of Main and State streets, where for the remainder of his life he maintained his office, complete with equipment of every appliance known to modern dentistry. Dr. Hurlbut was a member of the Connecticut Valley Dental Society, of which he was president and executive officer. He was president, orator and member of the executive committee of the Massachusetts Dental Society, and belonged to the American Academy of Dental Science, the New England Dental Society and the American Dental Association, the International Dental Congress, and the Odontological Society of New York. On the passage of the state dental law in 1887 he was appointed by Governor Ames on the board of registration, and from 1891 till his death he was its president. He was also president of the American Association of Dental Examiners, before which every aspirant to the dental profession must come for examination. It is a fact worth remark that Dr. Hurlbut was president of every dental society of which he was a member, and he had a national reputation. Dr. Hurlbut voted the Republican ticket but never sought political honors. Although domestic in his habits he was a member of the Winthrop and the Nayasset clubs. While not a member of the church, he was a very active member of the South Church Society and did very much for it. While Dr. Hurlbut seemed in late years the picture of health, his appearance was due to his fine physique, and his strength was kept up only by the strictest care of the body, for he was never robust. He had been away from Springfield much because of ill health, and for a number of years had spent his winters in Nassau, a place he was very fond of. In former years he had visited Florida many times, and had also traveled in Mexico and California. He traveled extensively through Europe, and was benefited by all these trips. Accompanied by his wife and her two sisters, he made his first visit to Europe in 1876, and while absent visited all the countries in that continent except Spain, Sweden, Norway and Russia, and in 1882, on a return trip they toured these countries and various others. He was particularly interested in the benevolent and charitable institutions of the city, and by the terms of his will he left the Springfield Public Library a fund, the income of which is to be used for the purchase of dental books. He also left bequests to the Home for the Friendless, the Young Men's Christian Association, and subsequent to his death Mrs. Hurlbut presented to the Science Museum his valuable collection of Mexican curios. He also left bequests to nieces and nephews and to several of his cousins. Very soon after the death of Dr. Hurlbut, Mrs. Hurlbut presented to the Springfield Hospital, on the staff of which he served thirty years, the operating chair used by him and a large number of his instruments. Dr. Hurlbut made a collection of native woods while in the Bahamas, and these, with a handsome case, presented by Mrs. Hurlbut, went to the Science Museum. He also gave to the Science Museum a collection of fine photographs of rare and beautiful trees of the Bahama Islands. Dr. Hurlbut started in life without money, and by his own efforts made his way to a splendid professional and social success, being a man of attractive personality, fine character and helpful to all who came in contact with him. His was a cleanly life and his virtues and his charities made him many friends. As a friend, Dr. Hurlbut excelled. One of his most intimate acquaintances said of him: "He was something special to each of his friends, and his thoughtfulness and gentleness in times of trouble were remarkable." He died of apoplexy after an illness of only four months. He had been injured by a fall in a barn in Southampton about eight weeks before his death, sustaining injuries to his head and internal organs, from which he never fully recovered. Dr. Hurlbut is missed in business circles where he was well known as a careful investor. His judgment in business matters was often asked and freely given. He was a director from the time of its organization till his death of the Springfield Safe Deposit & Trust Company, and for many years a close friend of Henry S. Lee, with whom he had much in common.

Dr. Hurlbut married, October 15, 1868, Julia Ann Sampson, who was born in Worthington, May 10, 1844, daughter of Ira B. and Julia Ann (Blush) Sampson, of Springfield. (See Sampson VI).

(The Sampson Line).

(H) George, second son of Abraham Sampson, (q. v.), was born in Duxbury, in 1655. He was one of the first settlers of Plympton, which was originally a part of Plymouth. The site of the house he lived in was afterward owned and occupied by his great-grandson, George Sampson, and also by a son of the latter. George Sampson died July 20, 1739, aged eighty-five. He and his wife were buried in the old cemetery in Plympton near its northerly side. Their gravestones were still standing some years ago. He married, about 1678, Elizabeth, whose surname is unknown. They had ten children, as follows: Joseph, Abigail, Judith, Ruth, Benjamin, Martha, George, Elizabeth, William and Seth.

(III) George (2), third son of George (1) and Elizabeth Sampson, was born in Plympton, March 10, 1691. He resided in Plympton, in a house which stood two or three rods north from the Lower Mill pond on the Wimetuxet river. It had a stone chimney, and the fireplace in the front was capacious enough to contain the whole family, sitting on each side of the fire. Mr. Sampson and his wife were members of the church in Plympton, admitted during the pastorate of the first minister there, Rev. Isaac Cushman. Mr. Sampson was frequently moderator of the town meetings, and was a selectman and assessor. He was town treasurer from 1739 to 1760, a period of twenty-two years. His will is dated August 27, 1773; proved April 8, 1774; recorded in Plympton. In it he calls himself "yeoman." He died in Plympton, February 6, 1774, in the eighty-third year of his age. The children of George and Hannah were: Gideon, Sarah, Deborah, Zabdiel, Hannah, George, Rebecca and Elizabeth.

(IV) Zabdiel, second son of George (2) and Hannah (Soule) Sampson, was born in Plympton, April 26, 1727. He lived in Plympton, in the house which his father had occupied. He was a soldier in the "Old French War" of 1756, and the years following. Tradition has it that he was taken by the Indians, who tied him to a tree and amused themselves with throwing hatchets on each side of their prisoner, to see how near they could throw and miss. He was also a revolutionary soldier. A private in Captain John Bradford's company, Colonel Theophilus Easton's regiment, which marched April 19, 1775.

to Marshfield; service twelve days; reported enlisted into the army. His name appears on the Massachusetts archives as one of the "Eight Months' Men" who served from the beginning of May till the end of December, 1775, his service from May 2, being three months seven days. He is also mentioned on the company return dated October 7, 1775, and on an order November 9. At the end of that period of service he re-enlisted and was slain in the battle of Harlem, in the upper end of the island of Manhattan, September 10, 1776, aged forty-nine years. He married (first) December 31, 1747, Abigail Cushman, born November 22, 1727, daughter of Benjamin and Sarah Cushman. She died in Plympton, May 4, 1751, aged "23 years, 5 mos., 12 days." He had by his wife Abigail one child, Sarah; by wife Abiah, nine: Zabdiel, George, William, Abigail, Gideon, Hannah, Abiah, Philemon and Issachar, next mentioned.

(V) Issachar, youngest child of Zabdiel and Abiah (Whitmarsh) Sampson, was born in Plympton, June 12, 1768, died in Worthington, July 31, 1825. He married, May 28, 1795, Deborah Wilbur, who died November 23, 1833, aged sixty. Their children were 1. Fordyce, born April 12, 1797, died April 24, 1842. 2. He worked at the trade of shoemaker for some time, and in 1846 removed to Springfield and became a partner with his brother-in-law, H. S. Reynolds, in the manufacture of fine broadcloth. He was for some years tax collector of Springfield. He was always of a delicate constitution and died at the age of forty-four. In politics he was first a Whig and then a Republican. (The Durant Line).

The family, a line of whose representatives are given below, is of French extraction and not unlikely found shelter on English shores from persecution following the horrors of St. Bartholomew's day. The name signifies enduring, lasting, sturdy.

(I) George Durant appears first in Colonial records in 1662, as a tenant on Dexter property in Malden, Massachusetts, just west of Boston. He settled at Middletown, Connecticut, receiving a large grant of land extending over several modern counties on both sides of the Connecticut river. He was often recorded as "blacksmith", which in those days covered all occupations for shaping iron for various purposes, not merely for shoeing horses. His name is still preserved in the Durant school district of Middletown, on the south side, covering the site of his mill and land. He also dwelt part of the time at Hadlyme; and also had land and a mill at what is now North Lyme. The christian name of his wife was Elizabeth; her surname has not been learned, but certain indications suggest that her father was John Blake, a relative of Robert Blake, an admiral in the British navy. They had one son Edward, mentioned below; and four daughters: Elizabeth, married John Wade, Mary, married (first) John Waller; (second) Samuel Shether; (third) Robert Chapman Jr. Sarah, married Amos Finker. Abigail, married Samuel Tinker, brother of Amos.

(II) Edward, only son of George and Elizabeth Durant, "was born June 2d, 1661, as his mother saith", according to the record of the town clerk of Middletown, Connecticut. The town record of Boston states that he died

"March 28th, 1718, aged 66 years." In 1686 Edward Durant had a child baptized in Boston, and in 1689 another baptized in Middletown, Connecticut. In Boston he kept the famous inn of his time, the "Lamb Tavern", which stood on the site of the present Adams house, but had more land, on Washington street. He married (first) about 1684, Anne Hall, who seems to be the one of this name, born November 20, 1661, sixth child of "Mr." John Hall, who settled in Middletown, Connecticut, in June, 1654, and died there May 26, 1673, "being in the 89th year of his age, and the 40th of his being in New England." The following inscription is on his tombstone in Middletown:

"Here lyeth the body of John Hall aged LXXV years departed this life January the XXII. 1694. Here lyes OUR deacon Hall who studied peace withall was upright in his life voyd of malignant strife
gon to his rest, left us in sorrow, doubtless his good works will him follow."

(III) Captain Edward (2), fifth child of Edward (1) and Anne (Hall) Durant, was born in Boston, March 2, 1694-95, and died at Newton, October 14, 1740, and was buried in the churchyard of King's Chapel, Boston. In 1732 he bought for £1800 ninety-one acres in Newton, including a large part of Nonantum hill, on which he built a large wooden house which descended to one of his daughters who married a Kenrick, and it went out of the family only a year or so ago. He moved to Newton about the time of the purchase. He left a great estate, which was appraised by Samuel Jackson, Esq., John Hill, Thomas Foster, Samuel Sparhawk, Thomas Greenwood, August, 1741. He had ninety-seven acres of land, house, and two barns in Newton, three dwelling houses in Boston; one hundred and thirty acres of land, with house and barn, in Worcester, and a township in New Boston, and three slaves, amounting in all to £10,277 and 10s. He married, March 31, 1714, Judith Waldo, born in Boston, January 25, 1692, died in Medford, October 27, 1785, daughter of Cornelius and Faith (Peck) Waldo. Their children were: Edward, Thomas, Cornelius and Elizabeth.

(IV) Edward (3), eldest child of Captain Edward (2) and Judith (Waldo) Durant, was born in Boston, February 7, 1715, and died at Newton, April 10, 1782. He settled on the homestead which his father left him in Newton. He was moderator of town meetings from 1705 to 1775; selectman four years, and was a leading, influential, and patriotic man in Newton, in opposing the arbitrary measures of the British government for more than ten years preceding the revolutionary war, and was chairman of a committee to report instructions to the representative to the general court, 1765, upon the passage of the stamp act. He was chairman of a committee in 1772, and a member of the committee in 1774 to report resolutions upon the state of public affairs, and instructions to their representative, and an answer to a circular of the selectmen of Boston. He was chairman of the committee of correspondence in 1774, and a delegate to the provincial congress in 1773-75. He married (first) Anne, daughter of Captain John Jackson, and granddaughter of John Jackson, Sen., September 15, 1735. She was born in Newton, June 15, 1714, and died there November 25, 1753. They had Anne, Abigail, Edward, Nathaniel, Catherine, Thomas, John and Elizabeth. He married (second) November 25, 1754, Mary Allen, born in 1728, died in March 1792, daughter of John Allen, a merchant of Boston. There were three children by this marriage: Allen, Martha and Nathaniel.

(V) Thomas, seventh child of Edward (3) and Anne (Jackson) Durant, was born at Newton, March 18, 1746, and died at Middlefield, August 2, 1831. He was a "Minute man" in the exciting times preceding the American Revolution for independence. He took part in the opening of that war at the Lexington fight, when he served as corporal in Captain Jeremiah Wiswell's company from Newton. Later in the war, according to his widow, who used to relate incident of his service after Lexington, he was a commissary and a captain, but there had not been found any public record of this latter service. He removed to Middlefield between October, 1788, and 1791, his eighth child, Thomas, having been born in the latter place January 30, 1791. His farm at Middlefield was about two miles west of the village towards Hinsdale, and was later known as the "Harry Meacham farm." Thomas Durant married, at Newton, July 23, 1775, Elizabeth Clark, born May 25, 1752, died in Pittsfield, March 17, 1853, aged one hundred years, nine months and twelve days, daughter of William and Mary Clark. Their children were: William, Edward, and Anna, next mentioned.

(VI) Anna, called "Nancy," only daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Clark) Durant, was born at Cambridge, October 21, 1777; baptized "Anna" at Trinity Church, Boston, November 8, 1770, and died at Middlefield, October 15, 1841. She married, at Middlefield, about 1802, Amasa Blush, who died there, November 18, 1830, son of Joseph Blush. Their children who lived were: William, Oliver, Nancy, Julia Ann.

(VII) Julia Ann, seventh child of Amasa and Anna (Durant) Blush, was born at Middlefield, Hampshire county, Massachusetts, June 20, 1814, died in Springfield, March 14, 1864. She married, June 9, 1834, Ira Bradford Sampson (see Sampson VI).

Robert Reynolds, immigrant

REYNOLDS ancestor of this family, was born in England. He is known to have been living in Boston, Massachusetts, as early as 1632. He was a shoemaker by trade, and was admitted to the church at Boston, August 10, 1634. He was admitted a free-man, September 3, 1634. He removed to Wattertown and was dismissed to the church at Wethersfield, Connecticut, March 20, 1636, but returned to Boston later and died there April 27, 1650. Stratton is what is known STRATTON as a place name, and probably originated from the Anglo-Saxon straet, meaning a paved road, and the Saxon tun, a small village. In 1124 the lands of Stratton, in Scotland, were given to Alexander, son of Robert, and he became Alexander de Stratton, though the prefix de was afterwards dropped, and the name took its present form; in the colonial records the name is spelled in various ways, as, for instance, Stroughton, Straiton, and Stretton. There were families of this name living in Virginia and New Jersey very early, as well as in all parts of New England.

J. D. Stratton

Jones, daughter of William and Sarah (Locke) Jones; William Jones was a distinguished surveyor, who perished at sea, January 26, 1761, and built at Lunenburg, a house known as the "Castle," still in the possession of the family. James, son of Joseph and Sarah (Jones) Foster, married Lucinda Stetson, and they had a daughter, Hannah, who married Harvey Stratton, above mentioned. Harvey and Hannah (Foster) Stratton had a son J. Dwight.

(VII) Joseph Dwight, son of Harvey and Hannah (Foster) Stratton, was born in Northfield, August 16, 1833, and died in Springfield, July 16, 1902. His father died when Joseph was eleven years old, and he stayed on the farm until he was fifteen, when he entered Keene Academy, of which Rev. C. L. Woodworth was then principal. In 1849 he studied another year in the academy under Mr. Torrance, who had taken Mr. Woodworth's place. The question of finance had to be considered, and in June, 1849, he apprenticed himself to a printer. He worked two evenings a week, and kept up his studies. In 1852 he attended Northfield Academy, of which Rev. C. E. Bruce was then principal. In vacations Mr. Stratton worked full time in the printing office, and for a year he was foreman of the Keene American News office. After experience in the Gilsum (New Hampshire) school district a period to which he looked back with pleasure on account of the novel experience of boarding around, coasting and sleighing parties and other delights of a country teacher's life he studied at Brattleboro under Mr. Bruce, and later was invited to take charge of the academy at Feeding Hills, which was the intermediate stepping stone to Springfield. In December, 1855, he was asked to teach the Auburn street grammar school, then the only grammar school in Ward One. His first few weeks were marked by some unpleasant experiences that were a severe trial to a young teacher, but by tact and perseverance he lived them down, and then everything went on smoothly as could be asked. He was in charge of the Auburn street school for ten years, and in the last five years there was not a single case of corporal punishment. From 1865 to 1895 he was principal of the Hooker grammar school, and as principal of this school he will be best remembered. Year after year he sent to the high school classes which reached an unusually high mark, and as he advanced in age he never lost touch with improvements and changes in education. When the new Carew street school was erected he was transferred to that building, as the Hooker grammar school became practically the Carew street school. In this position he remained until his retirement a short time before his death. He was a member of the Hampden County Teachers' Association and the New England Association, and an attendant at the National Association meetings. Besides his school work, Mr. Stratton took an important place in Memorial Church for a quarter of a century, was one of its first deacons, and at least two-thirds of the time was superintendent of the Sunday school; but he succeeded in keeping the two fields of work far apart so that one never interfered with the other. In politics he was a Republican. He was a Mason for forty years, being a member of Hampden Lodge, and was also a member of the Winthrop Club. For several years he was a trustee of the Moody school in Mt. Hermon. His active service as a teacher extended over forty years. He died suddenly at his home, 23 Holyoke street, July 16, 1902. About one o'clock of that morning Mrs. Stratton was awakened by Mr. Stratton's heavy breathing. A physician was called, but fifteen minutes after the attack, and before medical assistance could be given, he breathed his last. Death was entirely unexpected, as he had been in comparatively good health, with no indications of immediate and serious heart trouble. J. Dwight Stratton married, November 21, 1860, Helen Sophia Fuller, born March 11, 1835, fourth daughter of Benjamin and Cynthia (Collins) Fuller, of Monson, who survives him, and resides in Springfield. Before her marriage she taught with Mr. Stratton in the Auburn street school, and always entered enthusiastically into all the interests which touched his life. Their only child Willie F. Stratton, a boy of much promise, died August 12, 1863, after a few days sickness, just at the close of his second year.

The family of Kendall in KENDALL England derives their surname from the town of Kendall, county Westmoreland. The town's name was doubtless derived from that of the river Ken on which it is located. The family in England is very large and widely distributed, many of the branches bearing arms and having distinguished members. The name is common in counties Bedford, Essex, Lancaster, Derby, Devon and Hertford. In 1575 a branch of the family settled in Thorp-thules, Durham, a younger son of the Kendall family of Ripon, Yorkshire, where the family lived at an early date. Among the early Kendalls who were prominent was John Kendall, sheriff of Nottingham, killed in the battle of Bosworth in 1485, fighting in the army of Richard III. It is said that the Westmoreland family of Kendall has sent more representatives to the British senate than any other in the United Kingdom. This family bears arms: Argent a chevron three dolphins naiant embowed sable. Crest: A lion passant gules. Motto, Virtus de pressa resurget.

(I) John Kendall, progenitor of the American family, lived in the county of Cambridge, England, in 1646, died there in 1660. Two of his sons came to America: 1. Francis, mentioned below. 2. Deacon Thomas, proprietor of Reading, Massachusetts, in 1644; admitted freeman May 10, 1648; had ten daughters and one son, leaving no descendants bearing his name.

(II) Francis, son of John Kendall, was the immigrant ancestor, and was born in England about 1620. He was in Charlestown, Massachusetts, before December, 1640, when with thirty-one others he signed the town orders of Woburn. His name was on the tax list of Woburn in 1645. He was admitted a freeman May 26, 1647. The town records of his marriage, May 26, 1647, to Mary Tidd, daughter of John Tidd, call him Francis Kendall alias Miles. His brother Thomas had no such alias and the tradition is that he assumed the name of Miles in order to conceal his intentions about emigrating, at a time when the restrictions were obnoxious to those seeking homes in America. Sewall says in his History of Woburn: "He was a gentleman of great respectability and influence in the place of his residence. He served the town at different times eighteen years in the board of selectmen and was often on important committees to distribute land and erect meeting houses." In 1678 he was tythingman, but later he differed with the church as to infant baptism and was fined for neglecting to attend public worship. He was attending the meetings of the Anabaptists. His will was dated May 9, 1706. He was a miller by trade and he left his corn mill to his sons Thomas and Samuel. It remained in the family by inheritance in direct line six generations, the present structure being built by Samuel Kendall (2), about 1700. On June 25, 1778, he was a committee of the second parish to procure soldiers. He inherited a tall clock that is still an heirloom in this family. He was a founder of the social library, February 17, 1800. He was also one of the founders of the Universalist church, January 21, 1811, and at one time clerk of the society. From 1831 to 1843 he was clerk of the reorganized first parish (Unitarian) church. He was selectman in 1828. Children, born at Dunstable: 1. Peter, born October 14, 1793. 2. Rebecca, born December 10, 1795. 3. (VII) Madison, son of Temple (2) Kendall, was born in Dunstable, Massachusetts, July 30, 1810, and was educated there in the public schools. During his youth he worked on his father's farm. At the age of nineteen he left home and located in Chicopee Falls, Massachusetts, entering the employ of N. P. Ames. When the shops of Mr. Ames were moved to the other village a few years later he went with the concern. He followed the trade of blacksmith until within a few years of his death. When the Ames Company began to manufacture sword blades for the United States government, there were no mechanics in the shops who could do the tempering satisfactorily. Mr. Kendall experimented for some time in a quiet way and was fortunate enough to discover the right process. He was successful in keeping it secret, and while the shops were making swords, he had all the work he could do, sometimes finishing three hundred blades in a day. He bought the Cabot House of Chester W. Chapin in 1850 and carried on that hotel and a livery stable in connection with it for many years. He also owned the stage route between Springfield and South Hadley and the mails for the north were carried over this line. He built a brick block on Market square and also an Exchange street block that still bears his name. He lived for many years in the house on Center street in which he died, May 10, 1891. He was never active in public or social life, and amassed his property by great industry and application during the sixty-two years in which he lived in Chicopee. At the time of his death he was one of the largest taxpayers in the city and one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens. In religion he was a Universalist, in politics a Democrat. In many respects his career was unique. He made his fortune by his own hands and his superlative skill as an artisan. He dignified the trade that he followed and demonstrated the possibilities of his calling. He married, in 1833, Armena Phillips, who died 1864. He married (second) in 1866, Harriet Prime Carson, of Chicopee, born November 27, 1830, daughter of James and Rachel (Prime) Carson. She survives him. Children, born at Chicopee: 1. Hattie M., born April 4, 1868, married George D. Eldredge, of Chicago. 2. Charles, born November 12, 1870. 3. Anne, born February 19, 1876. 4. Manson Stacy when a small boy, STACY lived at Turkey Hill, Belchertown, Hampshire county, Massachusetts, and worked for a Mr. Clark. He was made heir to all of the Clark estate, including a farm of about six hundred acres of land. (III) Avery Wells, eldest son of Manson (2) and Adelia (Barnes) Stacy, was born in Belchertown, Massachusetts, in 1872, and went from the public schools in Belchertown to business schools in Springfield and Worcester. He was a professional athlete and a notable bicycle rider in his school days, and when he retired from the professional athletic field, he conducted his father's large farm, on which he carried on a large dairy, raised blooded cattle, and engaged in the lumbering business. Under his skillful management the "Old Clark Farm," always noted as the best farm in central Massachusetts, gained fresh honors, and its great crops, fine cattle and excellent dairy products were known in the best markets. He was a popular man and a Mason of high degree. He married, in 1899, Maud, daughter of Elisha Ashley Rudd and Nannie Jane (Crown) Fairchild, of Milton, Vermont, born in July, 1871. She is a member of the Eastern Star. Her father was a farmer at home, then engaged in the railroad business as station master, and subsequently conducted a feed store in Belchertown, Massachusetts. Her mother was born August 4, 1851. Her grandfather, Herman Fairchild, was the first white child born in Milton, Vermont, June 21, 1803, and her grandmother, Sarah Torrance, was born in Sheffield, Massachusetts, in 1812, had children Mary, Judd and Rudd, and she died in Georgia, Vermont, in 1885. GOODRICH son of Gideon Goodrich, was born May 18, 1738, in Wethersfield or Upper Middleton, Connecticut, and resided in Dalton, Massachusetts. He married twice, the date of his second marriage being December 25, 1776, but the names of neither of his wives is known. Children, all by first wife: 1. Zenas, born August 10, 1762. 2. (VI) Selah (2), son of Selah (1) Goodrich, was born in New York state about 1790. According to the census of 1790 his father had one son and two females in his family at Dalton at that time, so that his birth place may have been Dalton, though none of the children are recorded there. He moved from New York state to Nottawa, Michigan. Among his children was Lofus Hyatt, mentioned below.

(VII) Dr. Lofus Hyatt, son of Selah (2) Goodrich, was born at Nottawa, Michigan, March 28, 1844, died at 210 Maple street, Springfield, May 2, 1907. He attended the public schools of Nottawa and at Kalamazoo, Michigan, where he studied the profession of dentistry. He opened an office and began to practice in Sturgis, Michigan, about the time he came of age, and he practiced in that town for several years. He then moved to Coldwater, Michigan, and for a number of years practiced there in summer and at Phoenix, Arizona, in winter. He invested in real estate in Phoenix and aided largely in the development and upbuilding of that city. He was the owner of the first brick building of the town and took an active part in building up the business section. The increase in value of his property brought him much wealth in later years. He was also active in developing the city of Guthrie, Oklahoma, and owned valuable real estate at Coldwater. He came to Springfield, Massachusetts, to make his home in 1899 and lived there the remainder of his life, spending his winters mostly at his home in Phoenix. When his other interests became too large, he retired from his profession. He was a prominent Free Mason, having taken all the degrees of Masonry to the thirty-second. Andrew Moore was a resident MOORE of Windsor, Connecticut, in 1671. He was a carpenter by trade. In December, 1680, he was paid by the town for labor on the church. He had fifteen acres of land in Windsor, and his inventory mentions a house and barn, carpenter's tools and farming implements, a cider mill, loom and spinning wheel, a sword and belt etc. He had a grant of land at Salmon Brook, now Granby, Connecticut, in 1680. The regiment marched to the defense of New York in August, 1776, where Lieutenant Moore was taken prisoner and died November 3 following. He had been in prison seven weeks. He was town clerk, 1779-81; deputy to the general court on the committee of correspondence in 1776. He married Mary Stevens, who died August 21, 1811, aged ninety-two years and three months, daughter of Thomas and Miriam (Buel) Stevens. prisoner in the hands of the British for some time. He was a lieutenant in Captain Beebe's company of Salisbury, Connecticut, and vicinity in 1776; also first lieutenant in the regiment of Colonel Roger Enos in 1777. He was afterward a captain. He was selectman of Simsbury in 1806-07. It has been said of Captain Moore that he was born in Westfield, resided in Simsbury, Hartford county, and Granby, Hartford county, yet never left the place of his birth; yet was a citizen of two states, voter in four towns and resided in three different counties. In November, 1791, he bought of Eli Moore, of Granby, and Samuel Moore, of Suffield, all the land that had belonged to their father in Simsbury, with two houses and barns. By other purchases he acquired land in Granby, and in 1831 sold a part of his land in Simsbury. His will was dated April 10, 1833, and proved September 10, 1838. In 1790, when the Western Reserve in Ohio was opened, Roger Moore bought four pieces of land in Portage county, over four hundred acres in all. On April 3, 1811, he wrote to his son Homer from Southwick, Massachusetts, asking his opinion about the worth of the land. He married, in Granby, Connecticut, December 4, 1786, Rosetta Hayes, born December 4, 1768, died November 7, 1836, daughter of Silas and Hannah (Holecomb) Hayes. Children: 1. Homer, born July 23, 1787, died September 1, 1811, in Worthington, Ohio. 2. Fanny, January 15, 1790. 3. Harriet, July 9, 1792, died June 13, 1839. 4. Emma E., 1814, died April 8, 1831.

(V) Roger Sherman, son of Roger Moore, was born at Southwick, Massachusetts, July 25, 1806. He attended the public schools of his native town and entered Yale College at the age of seventeen years, graduating in the class of 1827. Among his classmates were Dr. William Adams, of New York, Horace Bushnell, of Hartford, and Nathaniel P. Willis. Mr. Moore studied law at Troy, New York, and was admitted to the bar in Hartford, Connecticut, but never practiced this profession. Until 1849 his life was spent at his father's home in Southwick and in travel. In 1849 he came to Springfield, Massachusetts, where the remainder of his life was spent. He was a man of substantial means and soon after coming to this city became interested in banking business.

He organized the John Hancock Bank in 1850 and served on the board of directors until he retired. He succeeded Colonel J. M. Thompson as president of the John Hancock National Bank in 1863. He served as president for twenty-seven years declining re-election on account of his advanced age. He was for many years a commanding influence in the financial affairs of this section. He was an earnest and thorough man of business, and his large and varied interests engrossed his time during his active life. He never sought public honors and the only office he held was that of alderman of the city of Springfield in 1850 and one term as a savings bank examiner of the state. He was a life-long student and especially in later years spent much of his time in his library. He had an excellent collection of books. History was his favorite study, but he read Hebrew, Latin and Greek to the end of his life. He was one of the few men of his generation who followed the scholarly life of a former generation and retained a fondness for intellectual pursuits gained in college. His love for his alma mater was marked. In June before his death he and Nelson Beardsley of Auburn, New York, one of the few survivors of his class of eighty, visited Yale at Commencement. He loved good society and had the manners and courtesy of the type so well described by the phrase, a gentleman of the old school. His home life was delightful. In business his course was governed by the strictest integrity and the most scrupulous regard for keeping his word and his engagements even in trivial matters. As a financier he was naturally conservative and he never sought success by a short path. The bank over which he presided so long enjoyed great prosperity largely on account of the great confidence in him and his sound judgment and careful management. The position of this bank to-day is due chiefly perhaps to his administrative ability and excellent financiering. He attended Christ Church, the First Protestant Episcopal church of Springfield, but was not a member. In politics he was a Republican. He married, October 6, 1841, Sarah Ann Root, born May 16, 1812, died at Springfield September 30, 1875, daughter of Joel and Clarissa (Ensign) Root, of Granville, Massachusetts. He died at Springfield, December 31, 1893. They had one child, Sarah Jane, born at Springfield, July 29, 1842, now residing at 23 Buckingham street in that city. She is a member of the Connecticut Valley Historical Society, also the Hampton Club.

MOORE Many English pioneers of the name of Moore came to New England and some also from Scotland and Ireland. In the early days the spelling was as often Moor and Moors as Moore, though the latter style is now in general vogue. The family in England is very ancient and has many noble and distinguished branches.

(I) John Moore was the immigrant ancestor and was born in England about 1610. He bought a house and land in Sudbury, Massachusetts, as early as 1642 of the pioneer, Edmund Rice. His will dated August 25, 1668, describes himself as aged. He died January 6, 1673-74, and his will was proved April 7, 1674, at Cambridge. He bequeathed to sons John, of Lancaster, William, Jacob, Joseph, to whom he left the homestead, and Benjamin; also to daughters Elizabeth, wife of Henry Rice; Mary, wife of Daniel Stone; and Lydia, wife of James Cutler. (II) Jacob, son of John Moore, was born in Sudbury, April 28, 1645, and married there, May 29, 1667, Elizabeth Loker, daughter of Henry Loker, of Sudbury. In 1678 Henry Loker deeded his entire estate "for love," etc., to his son and daughter, Jacob and Elizabeth Moore, (Middlesex county Deeds, vol. 10, p. 93) and Jacob deeded the same property, consisting of one hundred and thirty acres, to his oldest son Jacob for the same consideration (Middlesex Deeds, vol. 37, p. 517). A few months later, in 1678, Jacob also gave his son Jacob one half his homestead (Middlesex county Deeds, vol. 37, p. 521). In 1718 Jacob disposed of the remainder of his property by dividing it among his other sons, Samuel, Daniel, Jonathan, James, Richard and Nathaniel. Children, born in Sudbury: 1. Jacob, born 1668. 2. Lyman as a surname existed from the earliest use of surnames in England and is derived from an old Saxon personal name, Leoman. The name has been varied by different branches of the family, but Limas, Limon, Lemon, Leamond, Lehman, Leyman, Lyeman, Lamman, Leman and de Leman have been used. Possibly some branches of the family have taken the surname from the word layman, just as priest and pope, sexton and deacon have become surnames. Mann itself used as a surname may have the same origin as Le Man, the French style of spelling. The oldest coat-of-arms is now used by families, spelling the name Lyman, Leman, Leeman, Lemmon, distinguished by a ring within a triangle. The arms are quartered with the Lambert armorials. The family motto: Quod verum tutum. While the name Lemman occurs in the Domesday Book, the authentic English pedigree begins two centuries later, as given below.

Holyoke College.

The surname Heywood is

HEYWOOD distinct from Haywood, Hayward and Howard, although the spelling of each in every possible way makes it difficult not to confuse the families, especially where Heywards, Howards and Heywoods were living in the same town. The derivation of the name Heywood is given in a pedigree prepared by Peter John Heywood, of Whitehaven, England, in 1781, and published in "Hunter's Life and Times of Oliver Heywood," who was a non-conformist clergyman of note in the days of Charles I. The pedigree runs back to the year 1164, a period when surnames were beginning to come into use in the mother country. Often some local feature of a man's place of residence was employed to distinguish him from others bearing the same christian name. The earliest authentic document containing the name of Heywood or its prototype is a title deed, still preserved, for a tract of land in Lancashire, from one Adame de Burgo or de Bury, who held the Knight's fee to a large section of territory in the vicinity to Peter de Ey-wood, that is, "of wooded island." The latter was the reputed founder of the Heywood family in England, from which the American family is descended. This estate remained in the possession of the descendants of Peter Heywood more than five hundred years, or until 1717, when Robert Heywood sold it to John Starkey, of Rochdale, whose grandson, James Starkey, dying intestate, allowed the place to pass into the hands of the Crown. It is now an attractive public park, having been donated for the purpose by Queen Victoria. While the English line from this Peter Heywood is traced in an unbroken line, the ancestry of the emigrant to America had not at last accounts been discovered. James and John Heywood, both about twenty-two years old, presumably brothers, came together in the ship "Planter" in 1636. They were both certified from Stepney parish, London. James Heywood settled in Charlestown and Woburn, where he died November 20, 1642.

Walter Le Ventre came to

BURNHAM England at the time of the Conquest in 1066 in the train of his cousin-german, Earl Warren, son-in-law of William the Conqueror. He was lord of the Saxon village of Burnham and others, and from Burnham, where he lived, he was known as De Burnham. He took his surname from this town. The name is often spelled Burnam, Bernam and Barnham, as well as Burnham, and in the old Anglo-Saxon, Beornham, Byrnham, etc. In the old Norse the name is Bjørh, which in Anglo-Saxon is Beorn, and Burn (a bear), meaning according to Ferguson, "chief, hero, man." There were towns of this name in both Somersetshire and county Sussex before 900, and the family has been distinguished ever since. The ancient coat of arms is: Sable a cross between four crescents argent.

Their three sons Robert, John and Thomas Burnham sailed in the ill-fated ship "Angel Gabriel," of which Captain Andrews was owner and master, and which early in 1630 was wrecked on the coast of Maine. Their lives were saved, but all their valuables and possessions in a chest were lost. The captain and his three nephews settled first at Ipswich. John and Thomas were soldiers in the Pequot war, and settled permanently in Chebacco, the second parish of Ipswich, afterwards Essex. Children of Robert Burnham: 1. John, mentioned below. 2. This surname is found in KELLOGG England early in the sixteenth century, and there are differences of opinion as to its origin. Some think the name comes from two Gaelic words meaning lake and cemetery, making it a place name. The earliest record of the family is in Debden, county Essex, England, when in January, 1525, Nicholas Kellogg was taxed. William Kellogg was also on the tax list. There were many ways of spelling the name, among them being Kelhogge, Kellogue, Cologe, Calaug, Cellodge, Kellock, Killhog, Collidge, Cellog, Kellog, and many others. There were many families of the name in county Essex, Great Leigh and Braintree being the seat of different branches probably of the same family.

Nicholas Kellogg was born about 1488 and married Florence Hall, daughter of William Hall. He was buried in Debden, May 17, 1558, and she was buried there November 8, 1571. Children: 1. He sold this property June 13, 1661, to John Witherden. The lot of land is now occupied by the Advertiser building on Washington street. He paid seven hundred dollars for it at that time. (IX) George Daniel, son of Daniel F. Emery, was born in Fall River, Massachusetts, September 10, 1833. At an early age he went with his parents to Buffalo, New York, and when a young man engaged in the lumber trade, in which he remained all his life. He settled first in Indianapolis, Indiana, and established himself in the lumber trade, making a specialty of black walnut, and had the largest business in that line in the country. The black walnut becoming scarce, he turned his attention to mahogany, and became a heavy importer of that lumber. He returned east and located his plant at Chelsea, Massachusetts, in 1882. He was the first in North America to engage in getting out lumber in South America, as prior to this time all mahogany was bought from native dealers. His field of operation extended along the northern coast of South America, and Central America as far as Mexico. His company had concessions in the Bluefields country, where there were extensive forests, and hired coolie labor to get out the lumber. The company established a railroad to the coast, and then transported on their own steamers. In October, 1908, Mr. Emery retired, and the business was bought by an English syndicate. Mr. Emery is said to have been the largest dealer in mahogany in the world. He was a member of Joseph Warren Lodge of the Free Masons, and of the Allston Congregational Church. He was educated in the public schools, the Boy's classical school, Indianapolis, Wabash College, and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. From his youth he was associated in business with his father. He was admitted to partnership and later became first vice-president of the George D. Emery Company, of Chelsea, Massachusetts, when the business was incorporated. He lived much of the time in South and Central America from his twentieth year to the time of his death, and had an unusually accurate knowledge of the speech and customs of the people, and remarkable aptitude for conducting commercial transactions in these Latin-American nations. He knew the virtues and failings of the people, and was held in high respect by those with whom he had dealings. The "Emery Claim" which has been in the hands of the State Department at Washington, concerns large concessions in Nicaragua granted through the personal efforts of Mr. Emery eleven years ago. He and his father were two of the most prominent merchants dealing with South America and Mr. Herbert Emery was long a conspicuous figure in Nicaragua especially. He was for years a member of the Boston Athletic Association, the Corinthian Yacht Club, the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, Joseph Warren Lodge of Free Masons, and many foreign clubs, including the American Society of London. He was a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, and of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in which he was for a time a student, leaving before completing his course. He always retained a keen interest in the work of this college, and displayed the utmost loyalty and affection for his alma mater. In politics he was a Republican. In religion he was liberal in his views, but not connected with any particular denomination.

He married (first) Mary Louise, daughter of E. B. Martindale, of Indianapolis, Indiana. He married (second) March 27, 1908, in Managua, Nicaragua, Winifred Louise White, of Richmond, Indiana, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver White. His widow resides in Brookline, Massachusetts. He had no children.

He settled in Springfield at the age of thirty-three, and from May 10, 1845, till his death, a period of fifty-one years, he lived in the house where he died, in which, until the date of his demise, there had been neither a wedding nor a death. For a number of years he worked at the armory, after which he conducted a machine shop at the South End. He was foreman of the famous old Lion Engine Company, one of Springfield's first fire companies. His life was thoroughly pleasant and honorable, and he was respected and loved by all with whom he came in contact in business or social relations. He was married, at Long Hill, Springfield, June 13, 1830, by Rev. Hiram A. Graves, then pastor of the First Baptist Church, to Amanda Mercy Osborne, who was born on Long Hill street, April 16, 1810, and is still living (1909). She was the daughter of Chester and Olive (Waterhouse) Osborne. (See Osborne III.) Mr. and Mrs. Perkins celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding June 13, 1880, at their home No. 11 Garden street, a house Mr. Perkins built in 1845. There they also celebrated their fifty-fifth anniversary. The children born of this marriage were: 1. Nathaniel D., who died young. 2. Hollister Day, mentioned below. 3. River railroad; clerk at the Wilnoth Hotel, now Park Square Hotel, Westfield, Massachusetts, and the Rockingham Hotel, Springfield. He was engaged in the restaurant business on Main street, corner of Pynchon, ten years, and then proprietor of various hotels which he conducted with success, among which was Hotel Gilmore. The last hotel which he carried on was the Laton House, Nashua, New Hampshire, which he had for three years. At the end of that time he retired from active business. He is member of Roswell Lee Lodge, F. and A. M. Hollister D. Perkins married, in Springfield, December 17, 1885, Hattie A. Patterson, daughter of Captain S. G. and Hannah Patterson, of 18 Franklin street, Springfield. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Stidham. Mrs. Perkins died at Hartford, Connecticut, June, 1890. There were no children.

(The Osborne Line).

Ezra Osborne died in Springfield, Massachusetts. He was a revolutionary soldier, and after his death his wife drew a pension on that account. He was the first Baptist settler in Springfield, and lived in what was known as the old Linus Dickinson place on Long Hill; the first Baptist meeting, however, was held in the old house where Mrs. Osborne died. This was sold to Ezra Osborne's son Chester on March 27, 1820, by Samuel and Abigail Barker, for the sum of $265, with one acre of land. Mr. Osborne was a machinist by occupation, and a Republican in politics. He married Mary —, who died in Springfield, being over ninety years of age. Children: Ezra, born October 27, 1784; Chester, December 16, 1786; Abigail, February 20, 1789; Willis.

(II) Chester, second son of Ezra and Mary Osborne, was born December 16, 1786, died in Springfield, February, 1879, aged ninety-two years, three months. He was an armorer and was counted a prosperous man for his time, yet he is remembered to have said that the best pay he ever made was during the month of his fiftieth birthday, when his wages at the historic gun factory amounted to the sum of fifty dollars. He gave to the hill upon which Dr. Philip Kilroy's residence now stands the name of Fort Pleasant, from which the street later cut in this section was called Fort Pleasant avenue. Mr. Osborne at one time owned much of this land, and he sold a part of it to Mr. Stoors for a comparative insignificant sum, as values go to-day. For a long time the lot was known as Storr's lot, and was a favorite view place for people of Springfield. He married, November 27, 1810, Olive Waterhouse, born November 2, 1780, and they had seven children: 1. Chester E., born January 9, 1812, was a carriage maker; he lived in Springfield, Barre and Palmer till the close of the civil war, and after that at Westfield; he died February 24, 1893, aged eighty-one. 2. Olive Harriet, born February 25, 1813, died November 15, 1894, in her eighty-second year; she married Harrison Smith, who died May 21, 1859, aged forty-seven years. 3. (II) Amanda Mercy, third daughter of Chester and Olive (Waterhouse) Osborne, was born April 16, 1819, and married at Long Hill, June 13, 1830, Drayton Perkins, of Springfield (see Perkins I). She celebrated the eighty-ninth anniversary of her birth at her home, 11 Gardner street, entertaining over thirty of her friends at a supper which she prepared herself. During the day nearly fifty friends were entertained, and each was presented by Mrs. Perkins with a needle book of which she had made one hundred since the preceding September. She also celebrated her ninetieth birthday anniversary in 1909. She is a regular attendant at the State Street Baptist Church. Her son, H. D. Perkins, who with one exception is her sole relative, lives with her. She has always been a resident of Springfield.

WESTON This family has furnished a governor to the state of New Hampshire, as well as many other worthy and valuable citizens. It is represented in the early settlement of several different points in Massachusetts, and has been long identified with the commonwealth. Among the pioneers of Salem, Massachusetts, was Francis Weston, who was made a freeman there in 1633 and was representative to the general court in the next year. Soon after he removed to Providence, and in 1639 was one of the founders of the Baptist church in America. John Weston came to Salem in 1644, and Edmund Weston to Duxbury in 1645. It is presumed that these and Thomas Weston, mentioned hereinafter, were relatives, but no certain information in this regard is afforded by the records. The first of the name in Massachusetts was Thomas Weston, a merchant, who came from London and commenced a colony at Wissagasset, now called Weymouth, in 1622. This colony was superintended by Richard Green, a brother-in-law of Weston, who died very suddenly, and soon after this Thomas Weston returned to London, and not long after he died at Bristol, England. After his death, his widow remained in England. It is not believed by modern genealogists that John Weston, of Salem, was a relative of Thomas above named and we shall therefore begin with the next named as the first generation. Descendants now use two form in spelling the name—Wesson and Weston.

(1) About the year 1644, during the civil war in England, John Weston came from Buckinghamshire, England, to Salem, Massachusetts. He left his widowed mother and secured a passage to America by concealing himself in an emigrant ship until well out to sea. He was then thirteen years of age. He was a member of the First Church in Salem in 1648, and about the year 1652 removed to Reading. He lived in that part of the town now Wakefield. He was a large land proprietor, his property adjoining the meeting house square and bordering on the southeast part of the Reading pond, extending thence southerly. He was a man of great industry and wealth, being the largest taxpayer in the town and became distinguished for important services and active participation in the formation and administration of the colonial government. Deeply interested in religious matters, he frequently penciled down sermons, in which he exhibited a good degree of skill. He died about the year 1723, at the advanced age of more than ninety-two years. He married, April 18, 1653, Sarah Fitch, daughter of Deacon Zachary and Mary Fitch, of Reading. Children: John (died young), Sarah, Mary, John, Elizabeth, Samuel, Stephen and Thomas.

(II) John (2), second son and fourth child of John (1) and Sarah (Fitch) Weston, was born March 9, 1661, in Reading, which town was his home throughout life. He married, November 26, 1684, Mary Bryant, born in 1666, daughter of Abraham and Mary (Kendall) Bryant. Children: John, Abraham, Samuel, Mary, Stephen, Zachariah, James, Benjamin, Jeremiah, Timothy, a still-born son, Jonathan, Sarah and John. The first of these, born 1685, was killed during the French war in an engagement at Casco Bay, June 11, 1707. The last was born in 1709.

(III) James, sixth son of John (2) and Mary (Bryant) Weston, was born March 27, 1697, in Reading, and passed his life as a citizen of that town, dying October 10, 1726. He married, April 8, 1718, Joanna Phillips, who died March 17, 1726.

(IV) James (2), son of James (1) and Joanna (Phillips) Weston, was born March 13, 1719, in Reading, died there June 21, 1759, aged forty years. He married Esther Miles, of Concord, Massachusetts.

(V) Nathan, son of James (2) and Esther (Miles) Weston, was born July 14, 1745, in Reading, and resided in that town in early life, removing to New Ipswich, New Hampshire, and from there to Rockingham, Vermont; in the last named town he owned the Intervale Farm in the northeast portion and died there November 20, 1820. He married, April 8, 1768, Hannah Mansfield, born February 27, 1745, died in Rockingham, November 30, 1825. Children: 1. Nathan, lived in Springfield, Vermont. 2. Rev. James. 3. Joseph, who receives further mention below. 4. Pierson. 5. John. 6. Ezekiel.

(VI) Joseph, third son of Nathan and Hannah (Mansfield) Weston, was born March 31, 1774, probably in Reading, and was a farmer in Rockingham, Vermont, November, 1820, when he removed to Springfield in the same state and subsequently resided in Wethersfield, Vermont, where he died January 14, 1838. He married, February 3, 1801, Lucinda Mather, born November 17, 1780, and survived him four years, dying July 11, 1852. Children: Lewis, Horace, Jehiel, Randall, James, Lucinda, Joseph and Reuben.

(VII) Horace, second son of Joseph and Lucinda (Mather) Weston was born December 27, 1802, in Rockingham, Vermont, and from an early age worked out among neighboring farmers, his wages going to aid in support of the family. On attaining his majority he engaged with John Davis, afterward his father-in-law, and continued in his service at one and one-half dollars per day until May 1, 1827. At that time he purchased a farm in Rockingham, and in 1834 he sold this and bought a farm in Springfield, known as the Parker Place on Parker Hill. He remained on this farm nineteen years, when he sold it and purchased a place in Windsor known as Ingersoll Farm, consisting of five hundred acres, for which he paid $15,000. He continued on this place until his death, May 20, 1871. He was a man of sound judgment in all business matters, was highly esteemed as a citizen, and was frequently chosen to positions of honor and trust in both Springfield and Windsor. He represented the former town in the state legislature in 1852. A man of domestic tastes, he was fond of reading and did not seek to engage extensively in public affairs. He was an active member of the Universalist church in Springfield, Vermont, and contributed liberally to its support. He married, May 1, 1827, Mary, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Hinick) Davis, and they were the parents of two sons: Albert and Horace.

(VIII) Horace (2), younger son of Horace (1) and Mary (Davis) Weston, was born October 31, 1835, in Springfield, Vermont, and was educated at the Wesleyan Seminary in that town. He became the owner of the paternal homestead in Windsor in 1871, and subsequently purchased seven hundred acres in Wethersfield and was known as one of the best and most extensive farmers in that section of New England. He represented Windsor in the legislature in 1872-73, was seventeen years a selectman, serving fifteen years in succession; thirteen years a lister; and served twenty years as justice of the peace. He married, December 6, 1859, Sarah C., daughter of George and Susan (Wait) Dake. She was born December 18, 1838, and lives in Windsor, Vermont. Mr. Weston died January 8, 1906. Children: George Dake, Frederick H., Charles A. and John.

(IX) George Dake, eldest son of Horace (2) and Sarah C. (Dake) Weston, was born August 9, 1860, in Windsor, and attended the public schools of his native town, graduating from the high school in 1879. He then entered Dartmouth College, from which he was graduated with the degree of B. S. in 1884. He subsequently pursued a medical course at the University of Pennsylvania, from which he received the degree of M. D. in 1887. Following this for fifteen months, he was interne at the Philadelphia Hospital, and subsequently was in practice two and a half years at Fort Payne, Alabama. In April, 1892, he settled in Springfield, Massachusetts, and since that time has been continuously engaged in general practice with gratifying success. He is a member of the Hampden County Medical Society, the Massachusetts State Medical Society, the American Medical Association and the Springfield Academy of Medicine. He is on the staff of the Springfield and Mercy hospitals of Springfield, and is consulting physician of the former. He is a Knight Templar, has attained the thirty-second Masonic degree, and is affiliated with Melha Temple of the Mystic Shrine. In politics Dr. Weston is a consistent Republican and for the last twelve years, (1909) he has served as a member of the Springfield school board. These services and affiliations amply testify to his work as a man, a citizen and a physician. He married, July 30, 1901, at Springfield, Massachusetts, Alice Haskell, born July 14, 1861, daughter of Reid and Maretta (Thrasher) Haskell, of Wetherfield, Vermont.

Sir Robert de Humfrey-HUMPHREY ville was one of the followers of William the Conqueror. Humphrey, Lord of Bohun, had descendants who became earls of Hereford.
The family had many members who went with the Crusaders to the Holy Land, and many have distinguished themselves in other ways. The name is found in several counties, in the Domesday Book, and has long been common in all parts of England. John Humphrey was deputy governor of the Massachusetts Company, and returned to England in 1632, but left sons behind him.

(I) Isaac Humphreys, with his wife Mary, was living in Dudley, Massachusetts, where the following children are recorded: Mary, born September 19, 1761; Esther, June 30, 1764, and Noah August 12, 1767. As it has been ascertained from another source that three brothers, Noah, Stephen and Elijah, were born in Dudley at some time approximately near the dates given above, it is supposed that Elijah and Stephen may have been also children of Isaac and Mary.

(II) Noah, son of Isaac and Mary Humphrey, was born August 12, 1767, at Dudley, Massachusetts, and settled in Hartford, Connecticut, where he died April 15, 1824. It is supposed he was the Noah who married Ann Bidwell, of East Hartford, Connecticut. His children, born in Hartford, were: Lemuel; Samuel, born and died in Hartford; and Horace, who removed to Cape Cod, Massachusetts.

(III) Lemuel, eldest son of Noah Humphrey, was born about 1794, at Hartford,

Connecticut, and married Marcie Martin, of Ellington, who died about 1881. He engaged in the manufacture of soap and candles at Hartford, and later became a member of the firm of R. S. & G. Sims, which he continued until his death at Hartford. He was much respected by his neighbors, and was of a kindly and philanthropic disposition, taking a friendly interest in his fellowmen. His children were:
1. Henry Sooter. 2. Frederick M., served in the United States navy and died in Hartford, in 1854. 3. Cyprian N., married Mrs. Louisa B. Davis. 4. Marcie, died young, at Hartford. 5. Frances, married Charles B. Smith, of Hartford.

(IV) Henry Sooter, eldest son of Lemuel and Marcie (Martin) Humphrey, was born in 1817, in Hartford, Connecticut, died at Chicopee, Massachusetts, January 21, 1892. He removed to Ogdensburg, New York, in pioneer days, and there started in the forwarding business also in wholesale and retail drugs, living on a farm and driving back and forth to his store. When about fifty years of age he sold out and removed to Springfield, Massachusetts, where he went into the spice business with John Fox, of that place. Later became general agent for Fire & Marine Insurance Company, and afterward adjuster for the Hartford Insurance Company. He next entered the employ of W. D. & James H.
Sherrerd Company, of Philadelphia. He came to be known as one of the best insurance adjusters in the country. In his declining years he retired, settling first in Springfield and later in Chicopee, Massachusetts. Mr.
Humphrey was an earnest member of St.
John's Episcopal Church, while living in Ogdensburg, and was a vestryman. He was also captain of the local militia of the town and foreman of the volunteer fire department. He married Mary, daughter of Captain Stephen and Mary (Palmer) Gregory, of Guilford, Vermont, and they had children as follows:
1. Charles Henry, born June 19, 1841, married Rosamond Winant, of Hackensack, New Jersey; he had two children, Rosamond Marcy, deceased, and George Richardson. 2.
Frank Gregory, born in 1846, died unmarried, in 1883. 3. Frederick, born in 1848, died unmarried in 1870. 4. James Lemuel.

(V) James Lemuel, fourth son of Henry Sooter and Mary (Gregory) Humphrey, was born November 19, 1851, at Ogdensburg, New York, where he spent his early years on his grandfathers farm; he removed to Massachusetts with his parents, and there attended the Cambridge high school and Phillips Exeter Academy. He spent two years as office boy for Howard Brothers, his first experience in the line of business, then removed to New York City and for some years was employed as clerk in a company dealing in carriages and saddlery. As his lungs were found to be weak, he returned to Ogdensburg and spent eight or nine years on his grandfather's farm, which were of such benefit to him that he again entered the business world, and for thirteen years travelled for a Chicago firm dealing in steel products, and two years for a Pittsburg house, Singer Nimmick & Company, Ltd. He then removed to Springfield, Massachusetts, where he became connected with Olmstead & Tuttle Company, of Chicopee, of which he is now vice-president, and is also interested with Mr. Tuttle in real estate, under the name of Tuttle & Humphrey. He is a member of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, of Springfield. He is unmarried. Mr. Humphrey is considered one of the wide-awake and enterprising business men of Chicopee, and is much interested in the city's development; his many years of travel have been of great value to him, and have enabled him to see the possibilities in his environment.

A brave, hardy, patriotic and liberty-loving race in America have sprung from early colonists of this name in Massachusetts. The citizens of this cognomen performed yeoman service in the Colonial days in the founding of the civil liberties that their descendants, in common with all other Americans, now enjoy. A goodly per cent of Shattucks have fought in all the principal wars of the nation, and a due proportion have filled places of influence, honor and trust in the various professions and institutions of learning, and under the government. The number of persons of this name now living in the United States is probably about fifteen thousand. The American spelling of the name is Shattuck, the old English form Shattocke. There are many other early forms now in use.

(I) William Shattuck is the most remote ancestor with whom the persons of the Shattuck family in America are enabled to connect themselves. Of his parentage and birth-place nothing definite is known, though there is no doubt that his immediate ancestors and connections were residents of England, and that they were either of Lancashire, Somersetshire or Berk-shire. William Shattuck was born in England in 1621 or 1622, and died in Watertown, Massachusetts, August 14, 1672. He was a weaver, and in addition to his trade also engaged in agriculture. His name appears in the old list of proprietors of Watertown, made about 1642, twelve years after its first settlement, although he was but twenty years of age. The first allotment of land to him was a homestead of one acre, by estimation, and three acres of upland by estimation. To this estate he made large additions by subsequent grants and purchases. Among other parcels of land the records show a house, garden and thirty acres of land situated on Common Hill, near his own estate; a farm at Stony Brook near the present bounds of Weston, also a dwelling house and a large farm in another part of the town. He resided in Watertown about thirty years, and acquired for the times in which he lived a large property, the inventory of which at his death amounted to £434 19s 11½ d sterling, of which £200 was in real estate, and £234 19s 11½ d in personal estate, including £103 17s 7½ d in money. He appears, so far as can be ascertained from contemporary records, to have sustained the character of a sagacious, energetic and successful business man; of an honest, upright and worthy citizen; and of a good and peaceful neighbor. He held a respectable social position among his fellow townsmen, and his family and the families to whom they were allied by marriage were highly respected, and among the most wealth and influential in Watertown. He was buried in the ancient burying ground situated on the old road leading from Cambridge to Watertown, a short distance westerly of Mount Auburn. He married, about 1642, Susan or Susanna ——. She married (second) fifteen months after his death, November 18, 1673, Richard Norcross, who survived her. She died in Watertown, December 11, 1686. The children of this union were: Susanna, Mary, John, Philip, Joanna, William, Rebecca, Abigail, Benjamin and Samuel.

(II) Dr. Philip, second son of William and Susan or Susanna Shattuck, was born in Watertown, probably in 1648, died in what is now Waltham, June 26, 1722. He resided near the Waverly station on the Fitchburg railroad, easterly of Beaver Brook; and his estate extended northerly into Cambridge. He was a physician of eminence, and for a long period a leading man in the public affairs of the town. He was chosen moderator of town meetings, and held the offices of assessor, town treasurer, chairman of the selectmen, and very many other important stations of public trust and responsibility. A gravestone erected to his memory was standing in the Waltham cemetery in 1852, bearing the following inscription:

"Here Lyes Buried
ye Body of Doctr
PHILIP SHATTUCK, who deed June
ye 26th, 1722, in ye 74th
Year of his Age.
Blessed are the Dead
that Die in the Lord."

A new marble tablet was later erected, to which the above inscription was transferred, with the following appended: "The above record was transferred from a moss-grown crumbling headstone of slate, to one of more enduring marble, by a descendant of the 5th generation, A. D. 1853." His will was dated January 29, and proved August 30, 1722. He had two sons by the name of Philip living at the same time, one by each wife, and they were distinguished from each other in his will as "Philip Shattuck of Saybrook," and "Philip Shattuck, the younger," or as "the youngest son of my present beloved wife." Accounts of two living children of the same name in one family sometimes occurs in the early history of this country and in England, but this is the only instance found in this family. Dr. Shattuck married (first) November 9, 1670, Deborah Barstow, daughter of William and Anna Barstow. She died November 24, 1679. He married (second) February 11, 1680, Rebecca Chamberlain, who survived him, and died in 1728. She also left a will dated December 13, 1727, which was probated November 19, 1728. Children of first wife: Deborah, Philip, Susannah, Anna; by the second wife: Joseph (died young), Rebecca, Benjamin, Joseph, Nathaniel, Isaac, Amos, Sarah, Theophilus and Philip.

(III) Dr. Joseph, third son of Dr. Philip and Rebecca (Chamberlain) Shattuck, was born in Watertown, March 6, 1687. He was a physician and resided in Boston from 1708 to 1715. He afterwards removed to Watertown, and assumed the medical practice of his father and there he died in the full vigor of life, May 19, 1729. He married, in Boston, October 12, 1708, Mary Ladd, of that town. His first three or four children were born in Boston, and were baptized in the Brattle Street Church, of which the parents were members. Children: Joseph (died young), Rebecca, Joseph Mary, Samuel, Sarah, Nathaniel, John and William.

(IV) Samuel, third son of Dr. Joseph and Mary (Ladd) Shattuck, was born in Watertown, May 29, 1710, died in Montague, December 29, 1760. He was probably the Samuel Shattuck who was a proprietor of Peter-sham at its first incorporation. He afterward settled in Deerfield. His eldest son served a campaign in the French war, and on his return brought home the smallpox, and gave it to both his parents. The mother and son recovered, but the father died. Samuel Shattuck married, December 4, 1740, Sarah Clesson, born January 10, 1722, daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Anns) Clesson, of Northampton, and granddaughter of Matthew and Mary (Phelps) Clesson, who were married in 1670. Her will, dated September 14, 1785, appoints her kinsman, Eliakim Ames, her executor, and leaves legacies to ten children or their representatives. Children: Samuel, Sarah, Joseph (died young), William, Joseph, Oliver, Hannah, Mary, Joanna, Lucinda and Submit.

(V) Captain Oliver, fifth son of Samuel and Sarah (Clesson) Shattuck, was born in Deerfield, July 29, 1751, died in Hawley, August 27, 1797. Like his father and grandfather he was a comparatively young man at the time of his death. He commanded a company from the county of Hampshire in the revolutionary army from July to November, 1781. His will, dated April 10, was probated September 12, 1797. The Massachusetts Revolutionary Rolls state that Oliver Shattuck was "Captain in a regiment commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Barnabas Sears; engaged July 17, 1781; discharged November 8, 1781; service, three months, twenty-eight days, including five days (100 miles) travel home; regiment raised from Hampshire County Militia to serve three months. Roll dated Deerfield." He married, November 10, 1772, Lucy Parker, born January 30, 1751, daughter of Nathaniel and Eleanor (Walker) Parker, of Groton. She married (second) December, 1797, Joseph Longley, and died in Hawley, May 20, 1834, in the eighty-fourth year of her age. Children: Lucy (died young), Amile (died young), Lucy, Oliver, Amile, Polly, Justus, Pliny, Henry and Harriet (twins), Electa, Calvin and Thera.

(VI) Henry, son of Captain Oliver and Lucy (Parker) Shattuck, was born in Deerfield, May 13, 1786, where he resided as a farmer until 1833, when he removed to Amherst, where he died June 22, 1851. He married (first) October 13, 1811, Olive P. Turner, born in Charlestown, August 30, 1790, died in Deerfield, October 24, 1828, daughter of Micah and Mary (Pratt) Turner. He married (second) May 21, 1829, Tirza Porter, born in Weymouth, July 9, 1798, daughter of Samuel and Mary (White) Porter. She died September 24, 1857, aged fifty-nine years. Children by first marriage: Harriet (died young), Harriet, Levi Hubbard, Mary Ann, Joseph Henry; by second marriage: Olive, Edwin White and Ellen Maria.

(VII) Edwin White, only son of Henry and Tirza (Porter) Shattuck, was born in Amherst, August 12, 1834. He attended district school until sixteen years of age. At thirteen he began work in a cotton mill, where he was employed during the warm season of the year for three years. Then on account of the illness of his father he took charge of the farm for a year, until the death of the father. The following three years he spent learning the carpenter's trade with Charles Bangs, of North Amherst. At the age of twenty he began contracting and building on his own account at Amherst, where he remained until 1858. At that time there was much going on in the new southwest to attract men, and Mr. Shattuck went to Leavenworth, Kansas, and to Crystal Lake, Illinois, where he spent a year mostly at the latter place. In 1859 he returned to Massachusetts and engaged in the business of construction at Springfield, where he has been actively engaged ever since—a period of over fifty years. He has built many well known structures in Springfield, among which are W. D. Kinsman's block, the Chicopee National Bank, the Lyman building, the Art building, all the Milton Bradley and Tapley buildings near Willow and Grove streets, the Woman's Christian Association building, the residence of Dr. Corcoran, the residence of Mrs. E. Brewer Smith, the residence of E. O. Sutton, the Irving Page house, Chicopee Falls, the Leed House, Ridgeway Place, and the Springfield Republican building, to which he is now adding two stores. Mr. Shattuck was a Whig, but joined the Republican party soon after its organization, and has since voted for its candidates. He has been a member of the Memorial Church (Evangelical) for many years and one of its deacons. Edwin W. Shattuck married, May 17, 1850, Bessie Kimball, by whom he had one child, Edward Porter who died at the age of sixteen years. He married (second) February 25, 1864, Sarah Lavinia Bugbee, in Amherst, July 10, 1834, daughter of Elbridge and Eliza A. (Bugbee) Bugbee, of Belchertown, Massachusetts. They had four children: Emma Eliza, born July 2, 1865; Harriet Elmira, September 2, 1867, married E. F. Leonard, druggist, of Springfield; Gertrude, died in infancy; Grace, April 5, 1873, was killed July 24, 1893, while driving on State street, Springfield.

The Jones family of this sketch JONES was of Welsh ancestry and is closely related to the Janes family, the immigrant ancestor of which spelled his name Jeanes. The Jones and Janes families were closely connected for many generations.

(I) Griffin or Griffith Jones, immigrant ancestor, settled in Springfield, Massachusetts, as early as 1646 and was a proprietor of the town in that year. He was admitted a freeman April 5, 1649. He was a Welshman and married Sarah — before coming to this country. She died May 6, 1665; he died February 19, 1676-77. The two younger children were bound out until they came of age, Pelatiah to Deacon William Holton, of Northampton, and Benoni to Lieutenant William Clarke, of Northampton. The estate was administered by sons Samuel and Ebenezer. Children, born at Springfield: 1. Child, born and died September 25, 1645. 2. Mercy, born July 4, 1647, married James Barker. 3. Hepzibah, born September 26, 16—, married Isaac Cakebread. 4. Samuel, born January 19, 1651. 5. Ebenezer, born July 14, 1653, resided at Northampton; married Mercy Bagg. 6. Thomas, born June 8, 1655, married Elizabeth Graves. 7. Griffith, born June 4, 1658, died young. 8. Griffith, born March 28, 1660. 9. Experience, born August 12, 1662, married John Higgins. 10. Pelatiah, born July 22, 1664. 11. Benoni, mentioned below.

(II) Benoni, son of Griffin or Griffith Jones, was born in 1666. At the age of twelve years he was indentured to William Clarke, of Northampton, until he came of age. It was stipulated that Clarke should "learn him to read and write and give him five pounds at the end of his term with sufficient clothing such as servants usually have and at the end of his time two suits of apparel." He and four others resided in Pascommuck, now Easthampton, settled about 1690. His farm was about four miles from Northampton center and was the garrison house during Indian hostilities. Benoni and two sons were slain by the Indians May 13, 1704, and his wife taken a captive to Canada, where she died later in the year. The wife of Benjamin Janes, a neighbor and relative, was taken to the top of Pomeroy Mountain, scalped and left for dead, but she recovered. Benjamin moved to Coventry, Connecticut. Samuel Janes was slain during the same attack. Benoni Jones married, January 23, 1689, Esther (Gurley) Ingersoll, daughter of John and William Gurley. Children: 1. Jonathan, born January 4, 1695, died young. 2. Benjamin, born 1696, mentioned below. 3. Ebenezer, born November 12, 1698, killed by Indians May 13, 1704. 4. Jonathan, born March 3, 1703, killed May 13, 1704, with father and brother.

(III) Benjamin, son of Benoni Jones, was born in 1696 or earlier. After the massacre at Northampton, May 13, 1704, when his father and two brothers were killed and his mother taken a captive, he appears to have removed with the Janes family to Coventry, Connecticut. Benjamin Janes, with whom he went, was son of the immigrant William Janes or Jeanes, who was a school teacher at New Haven, Wethersfield and Northampton, and perhaps brother of Griffith Jones. The history of Wethersfield, indeed, gives Benoni as a son of William Janes. The maintenance of the difference in spelling the name though the families lived side by side, is a means of tracing them and is evidence that this Benjamin Jones was the son of Benoni Jones, not of Benjamin Janes. The similarity of names of the children of this Benjamin Jones and those of Benoni Jones corroborates this assumption. Benjamin and Hannah Jones or Janes had a son Seth at Coventry, August 31, 1715. This Benjamin married Patience —, who died April 24, 1770, aged seventy-five years, at Coventry. Children of Benjamin and Patience Jones, born at Coventry: 1. Ebenezer, born April 8, 1718, mentioned below. 2. Esther, born May 1, 1720. 3. Jonathan, born June 21, 1722, married, March 12, 1747, Abijah Strong, and lived in Coventry. 4. Noah, born May 15, 1724, married, May 9, 1745, Dinah Hitchcock; lived at Coventry. 5. Huldah, born June 25, 1729. 6. Asahel, born July 7, 1731, died August 7, 1740. 7. Sybil, born April 22, 1735, died August 29, 1740. 8. Dinah, born March 29, 1739, died September 8, 1740.

(IV) Ebenezer, son of Benjamin Jones, was born at Coventry, April 8, 1718. He married (first) at Coventry, May 5, 1743, Abigail Long, who died December 16, following. He married (second) December 4, 1745, Zerviah Loomis. Ebenezer moved from Coventry to Palmer, Massachusetts, about 1770. He was an active patriot during the revolution. In 1774 he served on the committee of inspection. He was highway surveyor in 1775. He is called lieutenant on the Palmer records and doubtless fought in the French and Indian war. He was chosen on a committee to provision the minutemen at the time of the Lexington call with a barrel of biscuit, a barrel of pork, a barrel of flour. He served on the committee of correspondence in 1776; and on the committee to care for the families of revolutionary soldiers in 1777. He was selectman 1777-79. Children of second wife, born at Coventry: 1. Abigail, born February 24, 1747, died September 18, 1750. 2. Adonijah, born August 20, 1748, mentioned below. 3. Dinah, born October 11, 1750, married, at Palmer, December 21, 1773, Luther Chapin. 4. Ebenezer, born April 19, 1752, married, at Palmer, April 23, 1778, Anna Spear. 5. Israel, born October 24, 1753, married, at Palmer, August, 1782 (intentions dated), Elizabeth Maekelwan. 6. Abigail, born February 2, 1756. 7. Esther, born April 24, 1758. 8. Benoni, born November 5, 1759. 9. Eber, born June 4, 1761. 10. Silas, born July 28, 1764. Born at Palmer: 11. Lucretia, born September 9, 1772.

(V) Adonijah, son of Ebenezer Jones, was born in Coventry, Connecticut, August 20, 1748. He moved with his father and family to Palmer about 1770. He was a soldier in the revolution, April 19, 1775, in Captain David Spear's company of minute-men; also sergeant in Captain Jonathan Danford's company, Colonel David Brewer's regiment (Ninth). His brother Ebenezer was also in the revolution in Captain Sylvanus Walker's company, Colonel Timothy Danielson's regiment, in April, 1775. Adonijah settled at Palmer, and married (first) at Coventry, March 15, 1770, Sarah Lyman, who died at Coventry, May 1, 1771. He married (second) at Palmer, July 9, 1778, Anna MacElwain, born February 27, 1753, died December 18, 1831. He died December 18, 1820. Child of first wife, born at Coventry: 1. Sarah, born April 26, 1771. Children of second wife: 2. Adonijah, born April 9, 1779 (records April 24, 1780), died June 8, 1841. 3. Ann, born February 22, 1781, died December 18, 1831. 4. Esther, born December 22, 1784, died January 31, 1864. 5. Eber, born June 7, 1787, mentioned below. 6. Susanna, born August 5, 1789, died May 12, 1864. 7. Timothy, born April 9, 1792, died May 16, 1813. 8. Zachary Loomis, born August 15, 1797.

(VI) Eber, son of Adonijah Jones, was born June 7, 1787, died April 4, 1860. He removed from Otis, Massachusetts, with his family to engage in business as a jeweler in Brooklyn, New York, and subsequently located upon a farm in Wellington, Ohio. He married, July 16, 1813, Betsey Amanda Pelton, born April 20, 1794, died April 13, 1886, daughter of Captain Samuel and Mary (Woodworth) Pelton. Her father was in the revolution. Children: 1. Gaville Orlando, born June 18, 1814, died October 20, 1902. 2. Samuel Pelton, born January 17, 1817, died in San Diego, California, February 7, 1909. 3. Mary Eliza, born June 2, 1819, died September 14, 1885; married Allen Barker. 4. Edward Dorr Griffin, born September 22, 1824, mentioned below. 5. Eber Loomis, born May 13, 1827, died young. 6. Harley Leander, born August 30, 1831, died November 30, 1876.

(VII) Edward Dorr Griffin, son of Eber Jones, was born September 22, 1824, died December 30, 1904. He was educated in the public schools of Brooklyn, New York, and in Wellington, Ohio, and remained with his father on the farm until he became of age. He then returned to Lee, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, and learned the trade of millwright with his uncle, Timothy Jones. In 1853 he established himself in business as a millwright at Lee, and an important part of the business was the agency for the sale of turbine wheels manufactured by the James Lefell Company of Springfield, Ohio. The business of equipping paper mills and the manufacture of paper mill machinery was added and soon became a feature, and eventually the exclusive manufacturing interest. In 1866 he sold his Lee business to Henry Couch and Freeman Oakley, and started in business in Pittsfield in the same line, which evolved into the E. D. Jones & Sons Company, in which he was engaged up to the time of his death. He was president and director of the company; also vice-president and director of the Third National Bank of Pittsfield; president and director of the Co-operative Bank; director of the Keith Paper Company of Turner's Falls; president of the Terry Clock Company of Pittsfield. He was a member of the Park Club of Pittsfield; of Berkshire Commandery, Knights Templar, and a thirty-second degree Mason. He was one of the board of trustees of the Methodist Church and an active church worker. He was an active Republican and was representative to the general court in 1879-80 for the third Berkshire district, and of the state senate in 1880-87, where he rendered efficient service. As a member of the board of public works in Pittsfield from 1891 to 1899, however of which body he was chairman, his services were conspicuously valuable. During this time the sewerage system was installed, and to this work Mr. Jones gave his best efforts, and to him, in a large measure, is due the splendid results accomplished for the city in that direction. He believed in doing well whatever he had to do, and his ability and integrity soon established for him an enviable reputation in business and financial circles. He had many friends who appreciated his fine qualities as a gentleman, and his character was without blemish.

He received a public school education, and about 1846 went to Chicopee Falls, Massachusetts, where he settled. He began the manufacture of agricultural tools and implements with the firm of Whittemore, Belcher & Company, in a shop located between the canal and the river. This was the first concern in that part of New England to do a general agricultural tool business, and for many years it enjoyed a large and very successful trade. The firm, with a few changes, continued to carry on the business until about 1881, when the firm became B. & J. W. Belcher, and John R. Whittemore engaged in the same line in the shop near the present Overman Wheel Works.

About a year before his death, Mr. Whittemore sold his business to Belcher, Taylor & Company, which is still in business, and spent his time in the care of his real estate, much of which was in rentable property. His tenants looked upon him as a model landlord, always kind and considerate. Although he never held public office, Mr. Whittemore was identified with every public movement of his town and community. He was for many years prominent in the temperance movement, and was a strong Prohibitionist. He was a member of the Second Congregational Church at the Falls, and served on the standing committee of that church. (IV) Joseph, son of John (3)

BALL Ball, was born in Watertown, May 4, 1674. Among his children were: 1. Peter, who sold his lands in that section and located in Southborough, where he became the progenitor of all of that name in that section, among them being the Hon. Phineas Ball, of Worcester, and Rev. George S. Ball, of Upton; Eben Tourjee, celebrated in musical circles, was also one of his descendants. 2. Josiah, see below.

(V) Josiah, son of Joseph Ball, was born in Watertown, March 2, 1712-13, died October 28, 1791. He was a man of influence in his day and left a large estate to his children. June 5, 1731, he with his brother Peter purchased and took a deed from William Brewer, of Boston, for several adjacent parcels of land, for which they paid the sum of one hundred and eighty pounds. These parcels included almost two hundred acres of land, to which belonged a mansion-house, and also a two-acre right in the town's common lands after the eighth division. Josiah Ball gradually added to his landed possessions until he was the owner of several hundred acres which he left to his children, although none of it now remains in the hands of his lineal descendants. He owned one slave, named Andrew Dewner or Duno, who was presented to him by a friend in Boston, when it was but four weeks old. Mr. Ball brought the little fellow to his home on horseback, nourishing him on the way with milk from a nursing-bottle. Upon his arrival at his home he found that all of the family had retired, and finding his wife asleep he placed the sleeping child on her bed while he cared for his horse. Before he returned the child awoke and by its cries aroused his sleeping bed-fellow, who was considerably alarmed by this demonstration; her husband's entrance soon cleared up matters, however, and Andrew grew up a faithful servant, being awarded his freedom and a horse upon attaining the age of twenty-one years. He exchanged the horse for a slave girl in Marlboro, whom he married. Mr. Ball gave Andrew a little homestead of twelve acres and a small dwelling-house, upon which he resided comfortably. The name of Downes first appears in the colonial records of Massachusetts shortly after the settlement of Boston. Thomas Downes arrived there from England in the ship "Defence" in 1635; a William Downes also appears in the records of that year, and several other early settlers of this name located in various parts of New England. The Canton family, mentioned below, was founded in this country by an immigrant who arrived at a much later date than those just referred to, and among his descendants was Commodore John Downes of the United States Navy, born in 1784, died in 1854; was a son of Jesse, and grandson of Edward Downes (2). Entering the United States navy as a protegee of Captain Silas Talbot of the frigate "Constitution," he worked his way upward from the humble position of a cabin boy, winning honors for himself and glory for his country.

(I) Edward Downes, who came from Ireland early in the eighteenth century, settled in Canton in or prior to 1727, in which year his name appears in the tax list. He resided on the main road, under the Blue Hill, in the immediate vicinity of the Doty Tavern. In 1740 he served in the war between England and Spain, participating in the disastrous assault upon Carthagenia, United States of Columbia, and subsequently enlisting for service in the French war he probably lost his life in that struggle, as he never returned. March 11, 1724, he married Ruth Puffer, born March 16, 1704, daughter of James and Abigail Puffer, of Newton. In the records of 1744 she is referred to as a widow, and it also appears that she bravely persisted in keeping her children with her, instead of binding them out, as a woman in her circumstances was expected to do at that time. She later received a legacy from John Newton, of Milton, and her death occurred April 22, 1790. The children of Edward and Ruth (Puffer) Downes were: 1. Ruth. 2. Sarah, born October 22, 1727. 3. Hannah. 4. Miriam, born July 25, 1730, married Jacob French, probably the earliest composer on this side of the Atlantic. 5. Abigail. 6. Edward.

(II) Edward (2), only son of Edward (1) Downes, was born in Canton, February 26, 1742. He resided in his native town and married for his first wife Miriam Jordan, born March 25, 1745, daughter of William and Mary Jordan, of Canton. Shaw is a very common English

SHAW surname, used also as a termination. It means a small wood, from the Anglo-Saxon Scua, a shade or place shadowed or sheltered by trees. Several parishes and places bear the name, and from these doubtless the families of Shaw took their surnames. We find also the name in combination as Abershaw, Bagshaw, Coekshaw, Henshaw, Bradshaw, Longshaw and Eldershaw. The coat-of-arms of the Shaw family of Kilmarnock, Scotland, is: Azure three covered cups two and one or; on a chief argent a merchant ship under sail proper, a canton gules charged with the mace of the city of London surmounted by a sword in saltire, also proper pommel and hilt of the second. Crest: A demi-savage affrontee, wreathed about the head and waist proper, in the dexter hand a key or, the sinister resting on a club reversed also proper. Supporters: Dexter a savage wreathed about the head and waist with laurel, his exterior hand resting on a club all proper (emblematical of fortitude), the sinister hand presenting an escroll, thereon inscribed "The King's Warrant of Precedence" sinister, an emblematical figure of the city of London, the dexter arm supporting the shield, the sinister extended to receive the escroll presented by the other supporter. Motto: "I mean well." The other armorials of the Shaw families of Scotland are the same or similar in design.

B. W. Shaw

Thos. B. Griffith

The Griffith family is of GRIFFITH Welsh origin, and claims descent from Llewellyn, last of the Welsh Kings, who was beheaded by the English in 1282, son of Griffith, also king of Wales. No less than thirty branches of this ancient family, according to Burke, bear coats-of-arms. The arms of the royal family were: Gules three passant in pale argent armes gules. Several Griffiths came early to Maryland and Virginia and founded families of importance and distinction.

Joshua Griffith, first in New England, came with Henry Collins, in the ship "Abigail," from the parish of Stepney, London, England. Nothing further is known of him, but the name Joshua is preserved in the family of this sketch. Stephen Griffith settled at Harwich, Massachusetts, before 1600. He married, April 6, 1609, Rebecca Ryder, of Yarmouth, Massachusetts. Children, born at Harwich: 1. Joseph, March 15, 1609-1700. 2. Stephen, March 15, 1701-02; lived at Brestler. 3. Rebecca, June 18, 1703; married, July 29, 1725, Gershom Phinney. 4. Lazarus, June 7, 1708; married Lydia Doane. 5. Barnabas, November 21, 1710. 6. Thankful, April 3, 1714. 9. Abraham, July 31, 1716.

(I) Samuel, brother or son of Stephen Griffith, was born about 1700. He settled at Rochester, Massachusetts. Children, born at Rochester: 1. John, February 11, 1723. 2. Daniel, July 8, 1726. 3. Samuel, July 22, 1730. 4. Ephraim, July 25, 1733; mentioned below. 5. Joshua, August 15, 1735. 6. William, August 2, 1737. 7. Eleanor, November 1, 1739. 8. Mary, June 21, 1741. 9. Thankful, September 16, 1743. 10. Desire, 1745.

(II) Ephraim, son of Samuel Griffith, was born in Rochester July 25, 1733, died December, 1823; married ——. Children, born at Rochester: 1. John. 2. Ellis. 3. Abigail. 4. Lot. 5. Ephraim. 6. Lydia. 7. Obed, mentioned below. 8. Alden (judging from this name it is likely that the mother was a descendant of John Alden, of the "Mayflower.")

(III) Obed, son of Ephraim Griffith, was born in Rochester, about 1760-70. He married Rebecca Maxon, and was a farmer. Children, born at Carver or Middleborough: 1. Ellis, mentioned below. 2. Sylvanus. 3. Obed. 4. Wilson. 5. Stillman. 6. Lucena. 7. John W., 8. Albert.

(IV) Ellis, son of Obed Griffith, was born in Middleborough about 1800, and died at Avon, May 8, 1885. He was an iron moulder by trade, and operated a blast furnace. He lived at Carver for many years. In religion he was a Universalist, and attended the Union church, in which services of various denominations were held. In politics he was a Republican. He married Lucy M., daughter of John Bent, granddaughter of Bartlett Murdock. Her father was one of the oldest manufacturers of the town of Carver, commencing business about 1792, at what was known as Benson's Forge, making wrought iron bars, drawing them out with a hammer, in 1798-09 he went to Pope's Point and ran a blast furnace until about 1817, when he sold out, and in company with Timothy Slavery bought the Federal Furnace, and had charge of those works until about 1830, making hollow-ware, such as pots, kettles etc. Children; born at Middleborough: 1. Thomas Bartlett, May 17, 1823; mentioned below. 2. Charles W., died December 31, 1893, at sixty-nine years. 3. Ann Maria Bent, married Dr. Benjamin Shurtleff. 4. Lucius E., soldier in the Civil war; died November 6, 1862, in his twenty-seventh year, while a prisoner at Belle Isle.

(V) Major Thomas Bartlett Griffith, son of Ellis Griffith, was born in Middleborough, May 17, 1823, and died in Roxbury February 18, 1897. He was educated in the public schools of his native town, and assisted his father on the farm up to the age of seventeen, when he went on a whaling and merchant voyage to South America. On his return he was employed as a clerk in Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1842-3, and then returned to Massachusetts. His health not being of the best, he embarked on another whaling voyage from Warcham, in the bark Montezuma, for the Indian ocean, cruising most of the time along the eastern coast of Africa, calling at the different villages along the coast, which were mostly inhabited by Arabs and Hottentots. During this voyage he visited the Isle of St. Helena, and saw the tomb of Napoleon, and also assisted at the burial of Mrs. Judson, one of the India missionaries. Returning home, he was clerk for a short time in New York City, and then returned to Carver, and entered the employ of Benjamin Ellis & Company as Clerk, where he remained eight years. In 1853, in company with George W. Bent, under the firm name of Bent, Griffith & Company, he engaged in the manufacture of parlor grates, continuing until 1868, when Bent retired and the firm became Murdock & Company. This partnership was terminated in 1875 by Mr. Murdock's death, and a stock company was formed, with Major

Griffith as president and Samuel Shaw treasurer. Major Griffith gave his personal supervision to the manufacturing department, getting up the patterns, furnishing designs and supervising construction. Changes were frequent and radical in the style of goods, which embraced everything in the line of iron goods for the furnishing of dwelling houses, hotels, stores, etc. He gave much of his time in setting grates and fireplaces where the best results were desired in the way of heat and draught. When France, England and Germany began putting on the market brass goods to take the place of iron, Major Griffith was one of the first in the United States to give attention to that branch of manufacturing. In 1877, before much progress had been made in the matter, he went to Europe and gained such information as would assist him in the work. The knowledge he had gained was applied, and his establishment took a high rank among the progressive manufacturers in this country. The salesroom was in Boston, and the aim of the firm has always been to put out only first class goods of superior design and workmanship. The firm of Bent, Griffith & Company was situated first at 11 Marshall street, Boston, later at 21 Washington, and at 2 and 18 Beacon street, and 156 Boylston street. Later, as the Murdock Parlor Grate Company, they did an extensive business in and around Boston in tiles and mosaic work, and many of the historical tablets in the city are of their construction.

In 1852 Major Griffith headed an enlistment roll for a military company which was chartered as Company K, Third Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers. In 1861 he was still a militiaman, and started to Fortress Monroe, but was ordered back as a recruiting officer to fill the Third Regiment. In 1862 he was mustered into his regiment as captain of Company F, (nine months' volunteers). He served in North Carolina, stationed most of the time in Newberne, and was in the battles of Kinston, Whitehall, Goldsborough, and Blount Creek. In 1863 the regiment was mustered out, and Major Griffith returned to Carver. In 1868 he was commissioned captain of what was then the Eighty-sixth unattached company, and in the fall of that year it was placed in the Third Regiment. In 1870 he was elected major of the regiment, holding this position until 1875, when he resigned. In politics Major Griffith was independent, and his first vote was for General Taylor for president. He then voted for Bell and Everett, but remained loyal to the government at the time of the rebellion, and after that time voted mostly with the Republican party. He served as selectman and assessor in the town of Carver, also postmaster many years, was a member of the state legislature in 1870, and held various minor positions. He was a member of the Republican town committee of Wareham; treasurer of the Onset Association; trustee of the Wareham Savings Bank, and a heavy owner in shipping, especially in the Boston Fruit Company's steamship line, engaged in the banana trade in Jamaica. He owned large amounts of real estate in Middleborough, Onset and Carver, and was largely interested in Oregon mines and lands, and in other business enterprises. He was one of the organizers, and for a number of years was president of the Onset Bay Street Railway Co. He was a member of Gen. E. W. Pierce Post No. 8, Grand Army of the Republic, and Camp Major T. B. Griffith, Sons of Veterans. of Middleborough, was honored with his name in recognition of his services in behalf of his country. In religion he was a Spiritualist, and his attitude in this respect as well as his personality is well described in his obituary in the Wareham Times, a part of which is as follows:

"Liberality in thought was the keynote to the life and the existence of this remarkable man, to whom belongs more than any one the measure due for maintaining in his old age, the liberal movement in ideas and attendant material development at Onset Bay, which has latterly made the Summer School of Philosophy set up there, famous from America to farthest India. The eagerness with which he accepted and aided the new dispensation at Onset the past two years, that aims to attain the highest in progressive thought and science, attests to this. Major Griffith was the enemy of what is sometimes termed the old-fashioned hellfire and brimstone orthodoxy. It stifled him and he hated it. He was a good hater. His keen pricks into that phase of it which appealed to his insight as hypocrisy, were pungent, and counted against its continuance in his presence most tellingly. The humbly pious man who asked for aid on account of his piety got a strong recommendation usually to depend more upon himself and less upon his faith, though rarely was the supplicant sent away empty handed if his cause appeared at all just. This antagonism to shams made him a marked man. Accused of antagonism and a spirit which he did not feel against the truth that is inherent to the church, he would scathingly denounce what he considered a totally false position. Major Griffith's religion was very real to him. His advanced position and eagerness to comprehend the new thought in modern philosophy and scientific research, served to make him a most interesting conversationalist to those who could appreciate his power and the natural bent of his nature. His love for and care of the welfare of Onset Bay was the bright light that illuminated his declining years. He made the common enemies to the camp ground, who would have perverted its propaganda to sectarian lines and its platform to narrow, unliberal position, his personal foe. And then he fought. Almost always he won. When he did fail, subsequent events proved it to be a greater public misfortune than personal loss to him."

Major Griffith founded the Mediums' Home at Onset. At his funeral a military escort composed of picked men from Gen. E. W. Pierce Post 8, G. A. R., and Major Thomas B. Griffith Camp, Sons of Veterans, of Middleborough, accompanied the remains to the cemetery at South Carver, where the last rites were performed. Major Griffith married, December 22, 1852, Hannah Maria Dunham, born December 15, 1827, at Carver, daughter of Isaac L. and Hannah P. (Cobb) Dunham. She is now living with her daughter, Mrs. Benjamin W. Shaw, at South Weymouth. Children: 1. Henry, died aged six months. 2. Hannah Bartlett, born November 14, 1855; married Benjamin W. Shaw (see Shaw family). 3. Thomas Bartlett, died aged nine years.

This surname was originally spelled Att Wode and was undoubtedly given in the first instance to one or more families who resided in or near a forest. The coat-of-arms of no less than sixteen Atwood families are recorded in the Herald's College in England. The various Atwood families in America are not the posterity of one immigrant, but trace their lineage to several early English colonists. It is quite probable, however, that they are for the most part descended from the Attwoods of Sanderstead in Surrey, where according to a burial record in the parish church, they were living as early as the year 1520. The immigrants of this name were: John, who came previous to 1635; James, freeman in 1639; Herman, prior to 1643; John, arrived at Plymouth in 1643; Stephen, who settled in Eastern Massachusetts; Dr. Thomas, (sometimes called Captain), was of Hartford, Connecticut, in 1664, and settled in Wethersfield three years later; and Joseph Woode (Atwood), ancestor of the Taunton Atwoods, a record of whom follows.

(I) Joseph Woode (Atwood), who was of Taunton before 1679, married, January 1, 1679, Hester Walker, born in 1650, died April 8, 1696, daughter of James and Elizabeth (Phillips) Walker, of Taunton. James was a son of "Widow" Walker, of Rehoboth, Massachusetts, and both were natives of England. For his second wife Joseph Atwood married Abigail Paul, October 18, 1697. His children were: 1. Joseph, born August 4, 1681, died September 26, 1724; married Mary Reed. 2. John, February 28, 1683, died in 1764. 3. Ephraim. 4. Joanna, who was of his second union.

(II) Ephraim, son of Joseph and Hester (Walker) Atwood, was born in Taunton about the year 1689, died August 14, 1776. This surname is a place name, BELDEN and the family is of ancient English origin. Bayldon or Baildon Common is a chapelry in the West Riding of Yorkshire, situated on an eminence overlooking the river Aire. Baildon was in the Angle kingdom of Deira, A. D. 550, whence came the immortal youths seen by Gregory at Rome, and has been the seat of the family of that name since the time of king John. Baildon Hall is still in a good state of preservation. Some alterations were made in 1660 by Francis Baildon, cousin of the American immigrant, and the cornice of the drawing room bears his initials. The hall was built some time during the fifteenth century. The name was spelled variously—Bayldon, Belden, Belding, Baildon, etc. The coat-of-arms of the Bayldons of Bayldon is: Argent a fesse between three fleurs-de-lis sable. James Wells came to Springfield in the early part of the nineteenth century and bought largely of real estate, afterward engaging in the grocery business in a building opposite Court Square, where he carried on a successful trade. He was one of the donors to the Court Square fund which donated to the city the present Court Square Park. He married, in Springfield, Rebecca Ames, daughter of David Ames, the noted paper manufacturer (see Ames IX).

James Wells

They had three children: Mary, James and David Ames.

(II) James (2), elder of the two sons of James (1) and Rebecca (Ames) Wells, was born July 21, 1820, in a block on Main street, Springfield, opposite Court Square, his father having a store in the building. When thirteen years old he moved to New York City, where he was employed as a clerk in one of the large drug stores of Rust & Aspinwall. For two years he was a clerk in the dry goods store of Catlin & Company, at Hartford, Connecticut, but in 1842 he returned to Springfield and was soon employed by his grandfather, David Ames, in the paper mill of D. & J. Ames. Before leaving their employ he was for three years in charge of the paper mill at Chicopee Falls. In 1849 Mr. Wells began railroad life as agent of the Connecticut River railroad. Soon after the depot burned in 1850, Mr. Wells went into partnership with Marshall Besse, and for two years was engaged in the management of the newsroom under the Massachusetts House. Then for two years he was forwarding clerk in the Boston & Albany freight depot, but returned to ticket selling in 1856, succeeding Horace Bartlett, ticket agent on the south side of the River depot. There he remained till the depot was torn down, and saw the daily receipts from ticket sales more than double. The occupation of the new station was an event of no little interest to the veteran ticket agent, and he took great delight in the rivalry to buy the first ticket. Mr. Wells was a prominent figure in the social life of the old time firemen and militiamen. He organized the old Union Battery, formed in March, 1862, which fired salutes when regiments passed through the city and helped to celebrate when news of victory came from the front. The clambakes of the old Union Battery on Allis Park were annual events of no small importance. Few old residents remember the location of buildings and homesteads of Springfield Village so well as did Mr. Wells, and he was considered an authority on old landmarks. He took delight in telling how, when a boy, he skated almost the length of Main street, between State and Carew, on the shallow pond that once stood on the swampy ground east of the present business thoroughfare. Mr. Wells was ticket agent for the Boston & Albany railroad thirty-four years. He had not been in good health for nearly six months before his death, and had suffered much from rheumatism. He seemed much improved a week before his death, however, and walked down to the depot on Saturday. Then he suffered an attack of heart failure and had to be carried home. The second attack of heart failure came suddenly March 5, 1890, and proved fatal. James Wells married, December 18, 1847, Lydia A. Patterson, who was born in Goffstown, New Hampshire, — 1823, and survived her husband until June 30, 1904. She was the daughter of William and Sarah (Whittle) Patterson, of Goffstown, New Hampshire. Four children were born of this marriage, two of whom died in early life. Two other sons were born: James R., mentioned below; and Thomas H., for years a conductor on the Illinois Central railroad, now a resident of West Medway, Massachusetts.

(III) James Russell, son of James (2) and Lydia A. (Patterson) Wells, was born in Springfield, October 5, 1851. After obtaining a practical education in the common and high schools of Springfield he entered the employ of the firm of Ray & Taylor, with whom he remained until 1870, when he took the position of clerk in the office of the register of deeds, James E. Russell, his uncle, who held the position for many years. Mr. Wells subsequently became assistant register of deeds, and on the resignation of Mr. Russell, 1893, he was unanimously elected to the office of register, and has been the nominee of both leading political parties at every succeeding election. For some time before his resignation Mr. Russell was in poor health and Mr. Wells was practically manager of the register's office. He had advanced ideas about bettering the accommodations, improving the indexing, and so on, in the office, which he put in force after he became register. He has always been alert for improvements, anxious to please, and expeditious in the dispatch of business, and has filled the position so well that no candidate for his place has received serious consideration from either party. Although elected on the Republican ticket, Mr. Wells takes no active part in politics, and has never been a candidate for any other office. He is a member of Brigham Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, of Ludlow, and in his religious views is advanced and liberal, being an attendant of the Unitarian church. He is a member of the Nayasset, the Springfield and the Country clubs. James R. Wells married (first) February 21, 1878, at the residence of the bride's brother, Henry K. Simons, of Greenfield, Mary B. Simons, daughter of Cicero and Hannah K. (Winter) Simons, of Springfield. She was born April 30, 1851, died June 30, 1893. They had four children: Edith B., born 1883, died October 19, 1903; Marion R., November 26, 1884, a graduate of the high school; Frank C., August 4, 1887, a student of Sheffield Scientific School of Yale, class of 1912; and Joseph Howard, October 30, 1889, now in the employ of the Stone & Webster Traction Company. Mr. Wells married (second) May 24, 1906, Eliza F. Chapin, daughter of Walter Edward and Julia (Foster) Chapin, both of Springfield, Massachusetts.

Daniel Wells lived in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He married Mary Sproat and had a son, Chester, mentioned below.

(II) Chester, son of Daniel Wells, was born in Sullivan county, New York, in 1832, died at Lambertville, New Jersey, December 18, 1903. He married, March, 1856, Clara Cowin Makin, born in England, September 5, 1834. Children: Joseph M., Edgar, mentioned below, Charles, Frank and Elizabeth, twins and Florence.

(III) Edgar, son of Chester Wells, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, November 26, 1858. He attended the public schools at Chester, Pennsylvania, and Wilmington, Delaware, and also the high school in Lambertville, New Jersey, in 1875. He was first employed as clerk in the hardware store of J. W. McDowell and A. C. Gaudey for twelve years at Lambertville, New Jersey, and then engaged in the copying book business at Lambertville, becoming the treasurer of the Chadwick Copying Book Company in 1886. In 1891 the plant was removed to Springfield, Massachusetts, Mr. Wells purchasing the stock in the company, of which he was the sole proprietor until May, 1909, since which time he has had no business. While a resident of Lambertville he took an active part in local affairs and served as a member of the excise board. He is a member of Hampden Lodge of Free Masons. In politics he is a Republican, and in religion a Congregationalist. He married, November 23, 1882, Justina Brittain, born January 3, 1860, daughter of Samuel B. and Hannah (Wells) Brittain, of Lambertville, New Jersey. They have no children.

(II) Jonas, son of Jonathan Fairbanks, (q. v.), was born in England and came to America with his parents. He settled first in Dedham, where he was one of the signers of the covenant, and was called one of the "Fathers of the Town." He removed to Lancaster in 1657. He was a carpenter and farmer. In 1652 he was in court charged with wearing "Great Boots" before he was worth two hundred pounds, contrary to the sumptuary regulations and statutes in such cases made and provided. This law was passed in 1651. Jonas Fairbanks was found guilty and fined. If all his descendants had to pay fines for wearing "great boots," not even the distinguished descendant from Indiana, vice-president of the United States, would escape the penalty, except on the ground that he had over 200 pounds saved up. Jonas Fairbanks was killed by the Indians, February 10, 1676, when King Philip and one thousand five hundred braves attacked the town of Lancaster. Fifty or more were massacred and others taken prisoners. Jonas Fairbanks and his son Joshua were among the victims. (Reported eighty-four years on gravestone.) He was a very efficient soldier and officer in the Indian wars and "was no doubt incited to heroic exploits by the massacre of his father and brother in 1676 and his only surviving brother in 1697." During the raid of the town of Lancaster in 1697 when his brother Jonathan was slain with one of his children, Captain Fairbanks was the means of saving a garrison and perhaps many lives, including that of his little son, probably Joseph. The Indians killed twenty-one persons, wounded two, and carried off as captive six, of whom five were returned later, including the wife of his brother Jonathan. In the year 1700 he received grants of land on both sides of Dane's brook above Thomas Sawyer's saw mill. The site became the home of the Fairbanks family of Lancaster for more than a century. Captain Fairbanks was deputy to the general court in 1714-21-22-23. He married Mary Wilder, who died February 21, 1718, aged forty-three years, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Houghton) Wilder. (V) Captain Luther, son of Deacon Joshua Fairbanks, was baptized July 15, 1755, died in Barnard, Vermont, at the home of his son, Calvin, December 8, 1836, of typhoid fever, aged eighty-one years. He resided in Lancaster, Northfield and Swanzey, New Hampshire, until about 1782, when he removed to Barnard, Vermont. Afterward he resided in Pittsfield. He was a farmer and blacksmith. He enlisted as sergeant in the revolutionary army, marching to Concord on the alarm, April 19, 1775. In September, 1775, he enlisted with Captain Jonas Hubbard's company and marched to Quebec with Colonel Benedict Arnold, and took part in the assault on Quebec, December 31, 1775. While in the act of scaling the fortification he was taken prisoner and kept in the jail until September, 1776, when he was transported by water to New York City, paroled, and soon exchanged. He was in the battle of Stillwater, September 19, and October 7, 1777. After the surrender of the British he accompanied that part of the army which was ordered to Chestnut Hill, probably near Philadelphia. Arriving at Albany, he was detached to be appointed wagon conductor general in the quartermaster's department, in General Patterson's brigade. Benjamin Hanks was born in HANKS England, probably in Malmesbury, Wiltshire, in 1666. Davis gives a John Hanks as of Plymouth, Massachusetts, as early as 1633, but we have no further record of him. It is curious, however, that Benjamin Hanks, the only other early comer of this surname, should have selected the same place for his home, unless he was a relative. One record tells us that he landed at Plymouth in 1699 and settled in that part of the old town set off as Pembroke. When the town of Easton was incorporated in 1712 he was one of the original heads of families. His homestead was on what is now Purchase street near the swamp. The house is gone and the traces of the old cellar nearly obliterated. This is in the south part of the town. He died at Easton in 1775, aged eighty-nine years. He married (first) Abigail —; (second) at Pembroke, March 23, 1727, Mary Ripley, of Bridgewater. He had eleven children by the first wife, one by the second. His widow Mary died in 1760 at Easton, aged eighty-two years. Children of first wife, born at Pembroke: 1. Abigail, April 8, 1701. 2. Benjamin Jr., July 15, 1702, married, April 23, 1724, at Marshfield, Mary White; children, born at Plymouth: i. Isaac, 1725; ii. Abigail, 1726; iii. William, 1728; iv. John, 1730; v. Richard White, 1734; vi. Uriah, 1736; vii. Benjamin, 1738; viii. Mary, 1741; ix. Silas, 1744. 3. William, February 11, 1703-04, thought to be the father of Joseph Hanks, of Virginia, whose daughter, Nancy Hanks, married the father of Abraham Lincoln and was mother of the president; family tradition has it that William Hanks went to Virginia in a sailing vessel and had sons Abraham, Richard, James, John and Joseph. 4. Anna, November 14, 1706. 5. Mary, February 14, 1707. 6. John, October 22, 1709, married, January 16, 1734-35, Mary Delaney, of Duxbury. 7. Elizabeth, March 5, 1711, married, October 27, 1731, Nehemiah Peirce. 8. Rachel, May 2, 1712, married, March 14, 1732-33, James Bumpass at Middleborough. 9. Johanna, October 9, 1713. 10. Jairus, February 24, 1714-15. 11. Jacob, mentioned below.

(II) Jacob, son of Benjamin Hanks, was born about 1717 in Pembroke or Easton. He appears to be the only son of Benjamin to settle in Easton and certainly was the only voter of the family there in 1749. He was a soldier from Easton in the French and Indian war in 1755 in Captain Ebenezer Dean's company of Taunton, Colonel Ephraim Leonard's regiment, with the rank of sergeant. Again in 1757 he served as a private in Captain Eliphalet Leonard's company. The following soldiers from Easton in the revolution were probably all his sons: William, Joseph, Ebenezer, mentioned below, Benjamin.

(III) Ebenezer, son of Jacob Hanks, was born in Easton in 1759, died August 1, 1850, at the advanced age of ninety-one years at Belchertown, Massachusetts. He was a soldier in the revolution from Easton, a private in Captain Matthew Randall's company, Colonel George Williams's regiment, in 1776-77, in Rhode Island campaigns; in Captain Randall's company, Colonel Jacob Gerrish's regiment, in 1778; in Captain Isaac Hodge's company, Colonel John Hathaway's regiment, at Rhode Island in 1779. He settled at Belchertown at the close of the war and married there Hepzibah Ward, daughter of John Ward (V), April 12, 1785. (See sketch of the Ward family herewith). Children, born at Belchertown: 1. Isaac, November 14, 1785, mentioned below. 2. Abigail, October 11, 1787, married Asa Shaw. 3. Sylvia, December 16, 1789, died August 13, 1794. 4. (IV) Isaac, son of Ebenezer Hanks, was born in Belchertown, November 14, 1785. He was a farmer in his native town. He married there November 24, 1808, Elizabeth Wilson, born October 9, 1783, daughter of Thomas Wilson. Children, born at Belchertown: 1. Thomas Wilson, September 16, 1809, died February 12, 1810. 2. Esther A., March 25, 1811, married Daniel T. Trask. 3. Elizabeth W., May 2, 1812, married, December 19, 1838, Benjamin Ward, of Belchertown. (See Ward, VII). 4. Ebenezer B., January 20, 1814, married Mary Church. 5. Hepzibah, June 3, 1815, died November 8, 1838. 6. Roxanna M., May 29, 1817, married Benoni E. Rust. 7. Vesty M., July 27, 1818, died November 10, 1839. 8. Isaac W., August 18, 1821, married Henrietta Kennedy.

This family seems to be distinct from others of the name so numerously represented in this work.

George Adams, of Watertown, may have been a brother of William of Cambridge, and there are many circumstances to support such a probability, but there is no evidence to support it. At any rate, his descendants have borne an excellent character and fulfilled their part in the shaping of the destiny of Massachusetts.

(I) George Adams was in Watertown, Massachusetts, as early as 1645, with his wife Frances, but whence he came will ever remain a mystery among many others of like nature. He was a glover by trade, and had land in Watertown, which he sold with house, November 4, 1664, and about that time removed to Cambridge Farms (now Lexington), Massachusetts. There he was killed by a fall of rock, October 10, 1696. The inventory of his estate placed its value at sixty-one pounds thirteen shillings eight pence. Children: John, George, Daniel, Joseph and Mary.

(II) George (2), second son of George (1) and Frances Adams, was born 1647, in Watertown, and resided in Lexington, where he died February 17, 1733. He married, January 20, 1684, Martha, fourth daughter of John and Sarah (Wyeth) Fiske, born December 15, 1666, in Watertown, died May 7, 1747, in Lexington. She was baptized in the church at Watertown, November 21, 1686, by Mr. Bailey, and her husband owned the covenant and was baptized in the same church by Mr. Angier, June 19, 1698. Children: George, Martha, John, Nathaniel, Sarah, Benjamin, and probably Abigail and Anna.

(III) George (3), eldest child of George (2) and Martha (Fiske) Adams, was born

April 28, 1685, in Lexington, and was baptized in Watertown November 21 of the following year. He was a physician, and resided in Lexington until 1720, when he removed to Waltham, where he died February 8, 1767. His wife bore the baptismal name of Judith. Children: Lydia, Jonathan, Judith, Elizabeth, Hannah, Seth, Jonah, Deborah, Abigail and Daniel.

(IV) Daniel, youngest child of George (3) and Judith Adams, was born May 2, 1724, in that part of Watertown now Waltham, and resided in that town, where he married, November 22, 1743, Elizabeth Baker, of the same town. Children of record: Elizabeth, Jonas and Seth.

(V) Seth, elder son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Baker) Adams, was born March 11, 1746, in Waltham, and settled in Marlborough, Massachusetts, where he was probably a farmer. No record of his marriage appears in Watertown, Waltham or Marlborough, but the Christian name of his wife was Sarah. Children: Jacob born December 2, 1771; Dorcas, March 26, 1774; Sarah, February 27, 1777; Joel, mentioned below; John, February 7, 1782; Samuel, April 1, 1784; Lucy, November 1, 1786; Polly, August 9, 1788 (baptized Mary, August 17).

(VI) Joel, second son of Jonas and Sarah Adams, was born August 3, 1779, in Marlborough, and was probably a machinist or other mill employe. He was in Northbridge, Massachusetts, in 1806, in Marlborough in 1810, and was later in Providence, where he kept a store. He married Azubah, daughter of Elijah and Mindwell (Hardy) Whitney, of Shrewsbury, born October 13, 1785, in that part of Shrewsbury known as "the Shoe," now in Westboro. Their intention of marriage was published March 5, 1806, in Shrewsbury, he being then a resident of Northbridge.

(VII) John B., son of Joel and Azubah (Whitney) Adams, was born in Marlboro, Massachusetts, December 10, 1814, died in Springfield, June 12, 1894. He removed with his parents to Providence. Until he was eighteen his time was mostly spent in school. For the three following years he was a clerk in his father's store where he acquired a practical business education. Upon reaching his majority he was for two years engaged in the construction of the Stonington railroad and for four years afterwards on the Western, Norwich and Worcester railroads with contractors Birnie, McManis and Company, until the completion of the roads in 1842. In this capacity Mr. Adams displayed such integrity of character and business ability as to retain the confidence of his employers and command their influence for the future. In the year 1842 Mr. Adams was appointed a conductor on the Western (now Boston and Albany) road, and ran the first passenger train over the rails between those two cities. In this position he remained conducting the morning train from Springfield to Albany and return for thirty-two years, probably as long as any man ever served in a like position in the state. During these years the distance travelled was equivalent to encompassing the globe seventy-four times. In 1852 Mr. Adams received as a token for his courtesy, fidelity and kindness to all classes of society, for his sleepless vigilance and assiduous attention to the duties he had in charge, a service of silver plate, with the following inscription engraved thereon. "To John B. Adams, conductor of the W. R. road, for his unflinching kindness, his unremitting attention and his constant care, this testimonial is presented by a few friends, January 1, 1852." November 26, 1873, Mr. Adams resigned his position as conductor to take effect on December 15th of that year. During his service as conductor he was interested in the construction of the Pittsfield and North Adams road. It is a fact worthy of note that Mr. Adams received many expressions of confidence and esteem from prominent personages who travelled upon his train and one in particular from Henry Clay during his last trip to New England, written unsolicited and showing the uniform attention he gave to all who came his way. He was originally connected with the Whig organization and was quite active in the ranks, but after that party was disbanded and became absorbed by the other parties he acted independently. In 1838 he married Alice Holmes, daughter of John and Phoebe (Arnold) Cook, of Tiverton, Rhode Island. Children: 1. Phoebe Cook, married Charles Vinton. 2. John Cook, born July, 1840, died in 1882, in Middlefield, Massachusetts. 3. Alice Whitney, born in Springfield, April 23, 1842. 4. William Holmes, born February 20, 1848, died in 1880.

RICHARDSON John Richardson, immigrant ancestor of William Stephen Richardson, of Franklin, Massachusetts, came from England about 1636, and settled in Watertown, where he had a grant of land that year in the Beaver Brook Plowlands, within the present city of Waltham. His name is not found in Watertown after 1643, as he doubtless emigrated from there with many others. There was a John Richardson in Exeter in 1642, but he did not continue there. It seems probable that he was implicated in the Antinomian controversy in 1637, which would account for his leaving Watertown in 1637. And if he, being an ardent, impulsive, indiscreet young man, and a favorer of Wheelwright, nothing is more likely than that he should follow him to Exeter. Wheelwright later, in April, 1643, purchased about five hundred acres of land at Webhannet, afterwards known as Wells, Maine, and removed thither the same year, where a church was formed and Wheelwright became its pastor, and we find John Richardson also here, as we find a young man here in 1673 which must have been his son, born somewhere about 1645 or 1650. John Richardson, of Exeter, had a wife there, Hannah Tryer or Truair. It is safe to conclude that John Richardson who came to Watertown and was in Exeter and later Wells, Maine, was the father of John who in 1679 married Rebecca Clark, of Medfield, and there is no notice of the Medfield Richardsons until 1679. It is not at all unlikely that John of Medfield was the son of John of Watertown.

(II) John (2), son of John (1) Richardson, of Watertown, Exeter and Wells, first appears in Medfield in 1676, when he was credited with a month's service in the Medfield garrison. In 1678 he had a grant of land from the town on the west side of the river. Medfield was attacked by the Indians, February 21, 1675, five hundred of them. Fifty buildings and two mills were destroyed and twenty people killed. John Richardson, wherever he was at that time, waited until the hostilities had ceased and peace established before he came to Medfield, and he was without doubt in Maine during King Phillip's war. On the death of Phillip in August, 1676, the war ceased in Massachusetts but continued to rage in Maine and Wells, Scarborough and other places felt its horrors. John Richardson felt that safety could be had in Medfield and soon made his home there in or very near the present village of East Medway, which up to 1713 was a part of Medfield. He was a cordwainer by trade, and cultivated a small farm of less than fifty acres. He was a member of the Medfield church before 1697, as was also his wife. He died there May 29, 1697, probably about fifty years of age. No will of his is found on record, and he possessed but little property. The inventory of his estate, February 22, 1699, included a homestead of twenty-six acres with orchard and buildings valued at £30. Eight acres of meadow near Boggastow Brook and ten acres of upland and swamp near Bear Hill. Power of administration was granted his widow, July 18, 1700. She married (second) John Hill, of Sherborn, and died February 17, 1738-39, aged seventy-nine. He married, May 1, 1678, Rebecca Clark, born August 16, 1660, daughter of Joseph and Alice Clark. Children: 1. John, born April 25, 1679, mentioned below. 2. Elizabeth, September 24, 1681. 3. Daniel, August 31, 1685, died August 28, 1748. 4. Joseph, 1687, died October 5, 1768. 5. Mehitable, June 16, 1689. 6. Benjamin, 1693, died 1761. 7. Rebecca, February 28, 1696-97.

(III) John (3), son of John (2) Richardson, was born in Medfield, Massachusetts, (now Medway) April 25, 1679. He was a cordwainer, but later became a farmer and husbandman; he was also a carpenter. He refused the real estate left him by his father, which was accepted by his brother Daniel. He owned considerable land as shown in various deeds. He and his wife sold to Nathaniel Fairbank, of Wrentham, two parcels of meadow in Wrentham. For £200 he sold to his son Moses of Medway forty acres of land in Medway. He died in Medfield, now East Medway, May 19, 1759, and John, his son, was appointed February 13, 1761, his administrator. His wife Esther died of cancer, August 17, 1774. He married, about

1699, Esther Breck, born in Medfield, 1679, daughter of John Breck. Children: 1. Sarah, born April 25, 1700. 2. John, October 22, 1701, mentioned below. 3. (IV) John (4), son of John (3) Richardson, was born in Old Medfield (now Medway), October 22, 1701, died in what is now Franklin, November 5, 1767. He lived in the extreme north part of what is now Franklin. He was an exceedingly active and capable man of business and bought and sold considerable property. He was by trade a housewright. June 4, 1724, when he was twenty-three years of age, his father bought for him for £60 fifty-four acres of wild land in the westerly part of Wrentham, now Franklin, about one mile south of the Charles river (later a part of the Stephen Richardson farm). He and his wife were church members of the west precinct of Wrentham when the church was formed February 27, 1738, the church at Wrentham Center being six miles away. He died in Franklin, November 5, 1767. He married, May 5, 1730, Jemima Gay, born September 20, 1705, died December 26, 1782, daughter of Edward and Rebecca (Fisher) Gay, of Wrentham, Massachusetts. (V) John (5), son of John (4) Richardson, was born at Franklin, Massachusetts, (then Wrentham) June 19, 1735, died on the day of making his will, May 4, 1809. While a young man he lived for some time in Framingham, working at his trade of house carpenter. After his father's death in 1767 he returned to Wrentham and bought his father's homestead of his two brothers for £200, consisting of eighty-five acres and all the buildings. For thirty years he was nearest neighbor to his brother Elisha. They lived less than one-third of a mile apart in present town of Franklin and became strongly attached to each other, having farming implements and other things in common. John Richardson in particular was a man of great amiableness and gentleness of character, and after the death of Elisha he was exceedingly kind to the widow and children. He was admitted to Franklin church, September 21, 1783. He was a private in the revolution from Wrentham in Captain Elijah Pond's company which marched on the alarm of April 19, 1775, service to April 30, 1775. (VIII) John Warren, son of Stephen Wilkes Richardson, was born at Franklin, Massachusetts, September 8, 1839, on the old homestead. When old enough he attended the district school and a few terms of select school in Medway and Walpole, Massachusetts. He began early to assist his father on the farm, and at twenty-one years of age his father deeded him an undivided half of the farm and he assumed the management of the entire farm. He gave much attention to fruit and vegetables, and after a few years commenced canning tomatoes for the market. This proved successful and his business increased to such an extent that he made also a specialty of sweet corn, squashes and string beans; apples and pears were also added to the list of articles canned. This business proved lucrative for nineteen years, until the establishment of the canning factories in the south and west, making it less profitable, and in 1888 he sold the business. He then engaged in lumbering and the manufacture of wooden and paper boxes for the mills and factories of Franklin and vicinity, the farm having in the meantime been sold after the death of his father, when he removed his residence to the center of Franklin. In the fall of 1896 he and his son, William S. Richardson, who was associated with him, sold the business and Mr. Richardson with his son, Albert M., went to Boulder, Colorado. (See Wood IV).

Nathaniel Whiting, immigrant ancestor, was born in England, in 1600, and died January 15, 1682-3. He is mentioned in the will of his maternal grandfather, John Smith, who bequeathed to his daughter, Sarah (Smith) Whiting, lands in Hoxden, Middlesex county, showing undoubtedly that the family seat of the Whitings was nearby. Nathaniel, who had a brother Samuel, also mentioned in the aforesaid will, came to Lynn, Massachusetts, in 1638, and was one of the proprietors of that town. In the earliest records the name is spelled variously Whiting, Whyting and Whitinge. Hannah Dwight, his wife, came from England with her parents and brothers John and Timothy. The father was at Watertown in 1635, removed to Dedham, was admitted a freeman 1638-9, and "owned half the water-mill." He is first mentioned in this country in the Salem court records where as a proprietor he owned ten acres. He is next mentioned in the records of the First Church at Dedham, where he was admitted May 30, 1641, made a freeman May 18, 1642. By occupation he was a miller, and the first to operate a corn mill in Dedham. The townsmen granted liberty to Abraham Shaw to erect a corn mill, and later granted sixty acres to go with it. After Shaw's death, Whiting received a title to the mill and by an ingenious method a portion of the water of the Charles river was diverted into Neponset river, and a sufficient supply and fall of water was obtained for the mill, July 14, 1641, and a committee was appointed to lay out a cartway to the watermill. This privilege was retained in the Whiting family until 1823, when the heirs of Hezekiah Whiting sold it to Jabez Chickering. The records of Dedham contain many entries concerning Nathaniel Whiting, the mill, his grants of land and his tax rates. On January 15, 1682-3, the very day of his death, the town empowered the selectmen to grant to Nathaniel Whiting and James Draper the privilege of erecting a fulling mill on the stream below their corn mill. (V) Lemuel, fourth son and fifth child of David and Hannah (Wollcutt) Whiting, was born in Attleboro, Massachusetts, December 12, 1776, and died in the same town, September 30, 1823. He was industrious and energetic and prided himself upon the superiority of his cattle, of which he had some fine specimens, notably oxen, which he used in the business of removing buildings. He was a captain in the state militia. Administration of his estate was granted November 4, 1823, to Elihu Daggett, Jr., the widow Nancy having declined to act, and Calvin Richards was made guardian of the minor children, Mary Ann, Willard and William. He married, July 2, 1811, Nancy, born in Attleboro, December 23, 1790, died in Attleboro, October 18, 1868, daughter of Oliver and Polly (Daggett) Blackington. Nancy, born February 4, 1818, died September 17, 1819. 4. Levi Willard, born in 1821.

(VI) William Dean, eldest son and second child of Lemuel and Nancy (Blackington) Whiting, was born in Attleboro, December 23, 1815, and died in North Attleboro. He was but seven years of age when his father died and left his family in straightened circumstances. At the age of eight years he commenced to contribute to the family support by doing chores for his uncle, Artemas Stanley, and two years later was working Silas Whitmore, a farmer, for his board and schooling. At the end of two years he returned to his mother's home and commenced to work at anything he could get, for the munificent sum of twenty-five cents per day. At the age of fourteen years he was apprenticed to the firm of Draper & Tiffts, manufacturing jewelers, to learn the trade, which he succeeded in mastering in six years, his uncle, Mr. Tiffts, taking an especial interest in his progress. He remained with the firm one year as a Journeyman, then, as there was a period of business depression, he commenced chasing gilt buttons for R. & W. Robinson, then chased gilt jewelry for Draper & Blackington. About 1837 he had acquired such an excellent reputation for skill, steadiness and reliability that he was offered and accepted the position of foreman in the shop of H. M. Richards, at East

Attleboro. Mr. Richards manufactured enameled jewelry and French imitations, and not long after this removed to Philadelphia, Mr. Whiting superintending the removal of the machinery, etc., and the setting up of the new plant. He was advanced to the position of superintendent, and remained with Mr. Richards and his successor, Mr. Garrett, for two years. He then commenced business in a small way for himself, manufacturing principally hearts and crosses. At the time the country was laboring under a severe business depression, and in a short time Mr. Whiting decided to try his fortune in the west. Just at this time, however, Albert C. Tift, a former fellow workman, made him a proposition to return to Attleboro and enter into a partnership with him in the manufacture of jewelry. Mr. John Tift, of the firm of Draper & Tift, became their financial backer, and this was undoubtedly the turning point of Mr. Whiting's business career. With a joint capital of five hundred dollars these two ambitious and industrious young men laid the foundation of their future success. The shop, in which they manufactured gold crosses, hearts and finger rings, was a small room in an old blacksmith's shop, on the bank of Ten Mile river, on the Boston and Providence turnpike. Mr. Tift undertook the mechanical part of the work, and Mr. Whiting shouldered the responsibilities of the shop. They had two workmen at this time Willard, brother of Mr. Whiting, and Peter Bishop, a former employe of his in Philadelphia. At first Mr. John Tift sold their goods for them, but in a short time Albert C. Tift went to New York as a salesman, and upon his return Mr. Whiting would look after the interests of the concern in Boston and other New England markets. They had the fixed determination not to run into debt, and all the monetary aid they accepted from Mr. John Tift was to get one note of one hundred and fifty dollars discounted at the Wrentham bank, and even this was quickly paid. Their trade soon became too large for their small quarters, and at the end of eighteen months they were forced to build a new shop. They expected the building they then erected would suffice for their needs for all time, being two stories in height, twenty-five by forty feet, and costing eight hundred dollars. By this time they were employing from thirty to forty men, and soon found they needed more power to facilitate the manufacture of certain wares. Prior to this time the Beaver Dam Cotton Company and the factory of Draper & Tift had burned, and in February, 1847, Tiffit & Whiting purchased the site and water powerage, paying two thousand dollars. They at once put up a portion of what was later the Whiting Manufacturing Company's building, erecting a stone three-story building, ninety by forty feet. This was put up under Mr. Whiting's personal superintendence, and the latest improved machinery was installed. They occupied it the same year, commencing with a force of seventy-five workmen, soon increased to one hundred and fifty. Later forty feet were added to the length of the building, and a stone safe, eight by twelve, constructed. January 1, 1853, Mr. Tiffit sold his interest to his partner, Mr. Whiting paying ninety thousand dollars in cash for the same. Subsequently he established offices in New York City, and for many years, under his own name and also as W. D. Whiting & Company, continued a large business, with offices also in Philadelphia and Boston. Soon after the erection of the stone factory he commenced the manufacture of silver combs and other articles, until this branch became an immense business of itself, and resulted in what was the largest house of its kind in the country, the Whiting Manufacturing Company. This was organized as a stock company with a capital of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, later increased to two hundred and fifty thousand, Mr. Whiting being president, and it then became wholly a silver manufacturing firm. After the burning of the works in 1875, the building was rebuilt two hundred and fifteen feet in length, but they soon removed to New York City as their headquarters, where Mr. Whiting also removed in order to give his personal attention to the company's interests. At the expiration of five years he returned to North Attleboro where he later organized the firm of F. M. Whiting Company, later Frank M. Whiting & Company, his son Frank M. being his partner. Mr. Whiting was actively engaged in this new firm up to the time of his death.

Mr. Whiting was one of the best types of selfmade men. He was well known for his philanthropy, and it is due to his aid and excellent advice that many young men found themselves on the high road to success. His own success was due in a great measure to his steady industry, honest principles, and determination to give full value to all that he undertook. His political views were those of the Republican party but he never held office. He married, December 17, 1839, Rebecca, born May 8, 1818, daughter of Pitt and Lucy (Butterfield) Damon, of Dedham. Children: 1. William Osborne, born September 20, 1846, drowned April 26, 1851. 2. Frank Mortimer, see forward. 3. (VII) Frank Mortimer, second son and child of William Dean and Rebecca (Damon) Whiting, was born in North Attleboro, April 21, 1849, and died in the same town, May 28, 1892. His early education was received in the common schools of his native town, and he then entered the Norwich Military Academy at Northfield, Vermont, from which he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Science in 1868. The following year he entered the employ of his father to become thoroughly acquainted with the manufacturing branch of the business, then was assistant in the office at Attleboro, and later in the New York office of the Whiting Manufacturing Company. Still later he became a traveling salesman for the firm, and in 1878 he organized the firm of Holbrook, Whiting & Albee for the manufacture of plated jewelry and novelties. They located in the Whiting building, formerly occupied by his father, and in 1880 the latter purchased the interests of Messrs. Holbrook and Albee, and the firm became F. M. Whiting & Company. In addition to the manufacture of jewelry they gave special attention to the manufacture of sterling silver goods, the name character and style of their wares enjoying the highest reputation in the market.

Mr. Whiting was a man of exemplary character, devoted to his business and his home. While he would not accept public office, which was repeatedly offered him, he took a great interest in public matters, was a firm believer in good government, and a staunch adherent to Republican principles. He was closely identified with the Masonic fraternity, being a member of Bristol Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons. When the Saturday Night Club was organized, he became a member and acted for some time as secretary, but finding this duty interfered with more important ones he withdrew from membership. He was a member of the Jewelers League of New York City, and a director of the North Attleboro National Bank. In 1895 the F. M. Whiting & Company was incorporated under the name of F. M. Whiting Company, with Mrs. F. L. Whiting, president, Josephine S. Whiting, vice-president, and Florence R. Whiting, treasurer. Mr. Whiting married, North Attleboro, June 21, 1881, Florence Leland, born October 4, 1855, daughter of Timothy Edwin and Dorcas Porter (Doane) Hancock, the former a merchant of North Attleboro. The Hancock family were among the pioneer settlers of Wrentham, having received a grant of land from the Queen covering the entire town. He married, at North Attleboro, November 1, 1865, Sophia Emeline, born November 28, 1839, daughter of Pardon and Ardelia (Jenks) Carpenter. (See Carpenter sketch elsewhere in this work. Children: George Aaron and Frank Eugene, both further mentioned.

(IX) George Aaron, eldest child of John French and Sophia Emeline (Carpenter) Whiting, was born in North Attleboro, March 30, 1868. He attended the public schools of his native town until 1883, and then for one year the Bristol Academy at Taunton, Massachusetts. For a year he acted as bookkeeper for George W. Cheever, then for a time as office and shipping clerk for S. E. Fisher & Company, and when this firm discontinued business in 1897, Mr. Whiting, together with D. Sturtevant and William A. Bigelow, entered into the manufacture of jewelry in the Union Power Company's building, under the firm name of Sturtevant, Whiting & Bigelow. In 1903 the plant was removed to larger and more commodious quarters in the old Whiting Manufacturing Company's building, and in 1905 Mr. Bigelow sold his interests to his partners, the firm now being known as Sturtevant & Whiting. They occupy a floor space of five thousand square feet, and employ an average force of sixty-five hands, making a general line of plated jewelry known as carded jewelry, with an extensive trade throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico. Mr. Whiting is a resident of North Attleboro, his residence, which he erected in 1902, being on Washington street. He is a Republican in politics, and an attendant at the Universalist church. (IX) Frank Eugene, son of John French and Sophia Emeline (Carpenter) Whiting, was born at North Attleboro, Massachusetts, August 5, 1860. His educational training was received in the public schools, graduating from the grammar school when fourteen years of age. He then entered the employ of Samuel E. Fisher, a manufacturing jeweler, where he remained a short time in the stock room. Subsequently he was employed in the office of G. K. Webster, jeweler, and after a time entered the employ of Wade, Davis & Company (1889), manufacturing jewelers at Wrentham (now Plainville), where he was assistant foreman. His close application to business and his recognized ability led his employers to offer him the position as their New York salesman, where he remained a number of years, but later returned to Wrentham as foreman in the works, remaining seven years, when he became their salesman for the western trade. Later the firm of Whiting & Davis was formed, Mr. Edward P. Davis, of the old firm, and Charles A. Whiting, Frank E. Whiting continuing with the western trade. In July, 1907, Charles A. Whiting purchased Mr. Davis' interests. In May, 1908, after the death of Mr. Davis, Frank E. Whiting and Frederick E. Cook were admitted to the business, the firm name remaining the same, Whiting & Davis. Clifford Carpenter, May 28, 1894.

WHITNEY Henry Whitney, the immigrant ancestor, was born in England about 1620. No record has been found of the time of his arrival in this country, but the town records of the town of Southold, Long Island, show that on October 8, 1649, he with Edward Tredwell and Thomas Benedict bought three-fourths of William Salmon's land at Hashamomock, now Southold, Long Island. The town records of Huntington, Long Island, show that he was an inhabitant of that place August 17, 1658, when he bought of Wyandance, sachem of Pemmanake, "three whole necks of land for the use of the whole town of Huntington". He built a grist mill there for Rev. William Leverich, and the dispute that followed over payment finally led to the dismissal of the minister from his parish. Once he was in court for grinding corn in the absence of the owner of the mill which he formerly owned, but he proved that the grinding was necessary and that no harm had been done the property, and he was acquitted. He removed next to Jamaica, Long Island, where he bought a tract of land of Richard Harker. His name appears several times on the town records there as a member of important committees. He made a contract, July 24, 1665, with the town of Norwalk, Connecticut, to build a "corne" mill there and received a grant of land from the town for that purpose, and also grants of a home lot and of several other pieces of land. He probably died at Norwalk in 1673. His will was dated June 5, 1672. He was admitted a freeman October 11, 1669. His will shows that his only son was John, mentioned below.

He was also a miller and millwright, and succeeded his father as owner of the Norwalk mill and homestead. He built a fulling mill and in the deed of his mills and land to his son, July 8, 1712, attempted to entail the estate. John Jr., reconveyed the land to his father and his father deeded it to his second son, Joseph, May 20, 1713, on condition that he support his parents the remainder of their days. His administrator was appointed October 11, 1720. He married, March 17, 1674-75, Elizabeth Smith. Children: 1. He taught school for two years after graduating, then began the study of law in the office of William G. Bates, of Westfield, one of the leading attorneys of Western Massachusetts. He was admitted to the bar in 1853, and entered into partnership with Mr. Bates immediately afterward. The firm continued until 1865, after which Mr. Whitney practiced alone until 1874, when the firm of Whitney & Dunbar was formed. This firm took high rank in the legal world and enjoyed an extensive practice in Western Massachusetts. In 1887 the firm was dissolved, and in 1888 Mr. Dunbar was appointed an associate justice of the superior court of Massachusetts. From 1887 to 1892 Mr. Whitney was senior member of the law firm of Whitney & Brigham, of Westfield. From 1858 to 1865 he was trial justice, a magistrate for Westfield and vicinity in both civil and criminal cases, with jurisdiction similar to that of the district courts. In his profession Mr. Whitney has been singularly successful, standing especially well in his knowledge of business and corporation law and characterized by sound and conservative judgment. He was attorney for the town of Westfield for many years and for many principal business firms and corporations. He has practiced in all the western counties of the Commonwealth, and is known to bench and bar as a lawyer of wide experience and high legal attainments. He retired from general practice in 1897.

He has been prominent not only as a lawyer, but in public life. He has been elected to various offices of trust and honor. In early life he was a Whig, but when that party went to pieces he became a Republican and has continued a Republican to the present time, though at times he has been rather independent and differed from the policies and disapproved of certain candidates of that party. He was elected to the state senate in 1862 and 1863 from the western (second) Hampden senatorial district. Although the senate of 1862 contained no less than thirteen lawyers, of whom he was the youngest, he was made chairman of the committee on public lands and chairman of the joint special committee on the important subject of the Concord and Sudbury rivers. He also served on several other standing and special committees of the general court. In 1863 he was a member of the senate committee on the judiciary, and chairman of the joint committee on federal relations, and an active and leading part in the legislation of that year. He was elected a presidential elector of the Republican party of Massachusetts in 1868, and voted for General Grant for president in the electoral college. He was a delegate to the Republican national convention that nominated Garfield for president in 1880. He was appointed a member of the Massachusetts State Board of Education in 1881, reappointed at the expiration of his term of office in 1889, and served the second term. He has always taken a keen interest in educational affairs, especially in the public schools. He was for many years chairman of the board of visitors of the State Normal School at Westfield, also of the board of visitors of institutions for the education of the blind and of deaf mutes, such as received financial aid from the state.

He has lived and had his office in Westfield, in which town he has always shown a public-spirited interest. He has been a trustee of the Westfield Savings Bank since 1857; a director of the First National Bank of Westfield since its incorporation in 1865, and president from 1881 to 1897. He was a director of the Westfield Bank before it was merged with the First National Bank. He was elected fellow of the American Geographical Society in 1890, and in 1891 a councillor of the American Institute of Civics, a national society incorporated under the laws of congress. He has been an active member of the library committee, and a director of the Westfield Athenaeum ever since it was organized in 1864, and its president from 1893 to the present time. He is a director and trustee of various other institutions. He has the honor at present of being the senior member of the bar of Hampden county. In June, 1909, he deeded to the town of Westfield a tract of land, containing about seventeen acres, as a free gift, upon condition that it be kept and maintained as a public play ground for the use of minors in said town forever. The town accepted the gift by unanimous vote and made provision for its equipment and maintenance.

In the maternal line he is a direct descendant of Peregrine White, who was born on board the "Mayflower" in Cape Cod Bay, November 20, 1620, being the first white child born in New England. He is also a descendant in the same line of Samuel Bancroft, the first settler in Granville, Massachusetts.

Mr. Whitney married, October 2, 1901, Florence, born February 27, 1867, daughter of Hon. Henry Fuller, of Westfield, Massachusetts.

He was witness to an inventory of Samuel Smith in 1642; was admitted a freeman May 13, 1640. He deposed in 1601 that he was aged fifty-two years. He sold land at Ipswich, October 11, 1649, and signed a bill there in 1649 against William Payne. He may also have been the William Howard, of Hampton, New Hampshire, in 1650, a lieutenant and deputy to the general court. William Howard was a commoner and freeman of Ipswich and a citizen of prominence. With Joseph Fuller he was on a committee to build a wharf on the south side of the Ipswich river, now Foss wharf. He had a pew in the Ipswich church and was a man of property, as shown by large holdings in real estate and numerous mortgages. He had a share in Plum Island. His homestead was previously owned by Thomas Emerson, progenitor of Ralph Waldo Emerson. He sold it to Daniel Rindge; Susanna Rindge deeded it to Usual Wardell in 1669 and of him William Howard bought the place about 1679. At last accounts the old house, partly built by William Howard, was still standing. His will was dated July 23, 1709, and proved August 1, 1709, devising to his wife, to son William, who had the homestead, and to sons John, Samuel and daughter Martha. He was a tanner and currier by trade at Ipswich and Pomfret, whither he removed about 1741. He lived on the principal street in Pomfret. He sold his homestead in May, 1777, to his son William and removed to Somers, where he died. He is buried there in the old North Burying ground, and his grave is marked by a stone of red sandstone. He was a man of great industry, strict integrity and sterling worth. He was a member of the First Church of Pomfret in January, 1758. His wife was received by letter from the First Church of Ipswich which she joined December 27, 1741. In a funeral sermon, preached by Rev. Charles Backus and afterward published, he says of Mr. Howard: "Of sober life, his temper was remarkable for benevolence and hospitality. All who knew him admired his faithfulness and integrity * * * made him sincerely beloved by all his neighbors and acquaintances, by whom his death was much lamented." He married, in Ipswich, September 21, 1734, Elizabeth Smith, born September 29, 1713, died July 2, 1790, in Somers. Children, born at Ipswich: 1. John, Jr., July 20, 1735. 2. He went from Pomfret to Somers, Connecticut, with his father, to assist on the farm and in the tanning business. His father deeded to him the farm and other property in the northwest part of Somers, shortly before he died. After his mother died, Aaron sold the place to his "brother Smith" and bought land in Leverett where his brother Hezekiah lived. He was a tanner and currier, also a saddler and harness maker. He was a worthy citizen and a prominent and valued member of the church. He was constant and devout in his attendance on public worship, even in his last years when his hearing was impaired. He was a soldier in the revolution, in Captain Daniel Lyon's company, Eleventh Regiment of militia of Connecticut. He was afterward captain in the militia. His wise counsel, christian example, industry and liberality made him a man of mark in his day. (II) William Henry, son of Horatio Nelson Wright, was born June 6, 1833 in East Granville, Connecticut, and died August 26, 1897. Being in the tobacco region, he learned the trade of cigar-maker when a boy, and before he was twenty-one became foreman and buyer for a factory in Suffield, Connecticut. He went to Springfield, Massachusetts, in 1858, and was employed by Calvin L. Loomis in his cigar store. Later he became a partner with Mr. Loomis, and the first store was where Patton's block stood later. Six years later they moved to 470 Main street. Upon the death of Mr. Loomis in 1866, Mr. Wright bought out the business and carried it on himself, conducting it on a conservative and solid basis, and established a reputation for certain lines of goods and kept them up to the standard. Some of these lines were on the market for more than thirty-five years. His long experience in the business made him an expert, and he was called one of the best, if not the best judge of Havana tobacco who went to New York. This expert knowledge enabled him to produce a very fine cigar, and his "Gold Bar," "Massasoit" and "Wright's Hand-made" brands were well known all through the western part of the state and are to-day holding their old-time prestige with those who are lovers of a good cigar. He accumulated a comfortable fortune, and owned considerable real estate. In politics Mr. Wright was a Republican, and served on the board of aldermen in 1887-88, and from 1890 until his death was a member of the board of public works, the last part of the time its chairman. His practical good sense and sound judgment made him a valuable public servant. He was a director of the Second National Bank and a trustee of the Hampden Savings Bank. He was a member of the Nayasset and Springfield clubs, and of Hampden Lodge of Masons and Springfield Commandery, Knights Templar. He was a lover of a good horse, and was a stockholder of Hampden Park, and one of those who guaranteed purses for races there. He was also one of the directors of the early base ball association in 1879-80, and was a member of the old Horse Guards before the civil war. His first residence in Springfield was on West Bridge street, near the present site of Winkler's Hotel. Later he moved to the corner of Mattoon and Elliot streets, then to the Benjamin Bowles place on the corner of Union and School streets, where he lived for several years before he sold it to Mrs. Horatio Lyon. After that for a time he lived at the corner of Elliott and Salem streets, just opposite his former residence. About 1893 he moved to the Warren place on State street, where he lived until his death. His death was sudden, and occurred at Quechee, Vermont, while he was out driving. He was staying at his summer home at Woodstock, Vermont, and while driving from White River Junction to that place, was suddenly stricken with paralysis, and died before help could be summoned. Personally Mr. Wright was social and agreeable, and of fine physical appearance. He was generous and kind at all times. His associates on the board of public works join in saying that his work on the board was faithful and conscientious, and while guarding well the interests of the city, he was painstaking in his efforts to be fair and just to individuals, and impartial to all.

He married, May 14, 1852, Charlotte Ann Prior, born at East Windsor, Connecticut, April 4, 1834, died July 26, 1905, daughter of Horace and Charlotte (Chapin) Prior, great-granddaughter of Captain Thomas Abbe of Enfield, Connecticut, of revolutionary fame. He went to work with his father in the cigar business and remained with him until his death. Mr. Wright inherited the business which he has since conducted very successfully. He is a member of the Nayasset, Winthrop and Canoe clubs of Springfield.

The Hydels were a noted family in England. Sir Nicholas Hyde was chief justice of the Kings Bench, and Edward Hyde, Earl of Clarendon, was lord chancellor at the restoration, and was grandfather to two queens in the English succession, Mary, the second, and Anne. The Hyde ancestry in America is equally strong in great men. Such was Hon. Matthew Griswold, chief justice and governor of Connecticut; such the Hon. John M. Niles, United States senator and postmaster general in Van Buren's administration, such was the Rev. Edward Duran Griffin, president of Williams College; such the Hon. William Woodbridge, United States senator and governor of Michigan.

(I) William Hyde came from England to this country about 1633, and sojourned for a time at Newton, Massachusetts. It is supposed he was a follower of Rev. Thomas Hooker and he went with that clergyman to Connecticut in 1636, settling at Saybrook. He was one of the original proprietors of Norwich, Connecticut, in 1660, and was frequently called to undertake public office. He died at Norwich, January 6, 1681. Children: Samuel and Hester.

(III) William (2), third son of Samuel and Jane (Lee) Hyde, was born at Norwich in January, 1670, died August 8, 1759. He was one of the magistrates of Norwich, a member of the colonial legislature, and a man of wealth according to the standards of that day. He married Anne Bushnell, who died July 8, 1745. Their children: William, who died in infancy; William, Richard, Ezra, Jedediah, Elisha, Benjamin, Anne, Elizabeth and Hannah.

(IV) The Rev. Jedediah, fifth son of William (2) and Anne (Bushnell) Hyde, was born at Norwich, June 2, 1712, died there September 26, 1761. Mr. Hyde was ordained to the Christian ministry in the Congregational church and preached at Beans Hill. He married, July 17, 1733, Jerusha, daughter of Deacon Joseph and Martha (Morgan) Perkins, of Norwich. She died February 8, 1741. Children: Jedediah, Martha, Jerusha and Diadama. He married, May 17, 1742, Jerusha, daughter of Captain Joseph and Mary (Winslow) Tracy. She was descended from Governor Edward Winslow of the "Mayflower." Children: Reuben, Apphia and Elizabeth. After Mr. Hyde's decease, his widow married Daniel Peck and had one son. She died August 20, 1769.

(V) Captain Jedediah (2), only son of Rev. Jedediah (1) and Jerusha (Perkins) Hyde, was born at Norwich, August 24, 1735, died at Hyde Park, Vermont, May 29, 1822. He was an officer in the revolutionary war. At Bunker Hill he was lieutenant in Captain Coit's company and was slightly wounded there. He afterward commanded a company in the regular army. He married, January 28, 1761, his second cousin, Mary, daughter of Asa and Lucy (Hyde) Waterman, of Norwich, who died September 2, 1780, while he was away to the war. Their children: Jedediah, William, Arunah, Thomas W., Pitt William, Jerusha, Mary and Deborah. After his first wife died, he married Elizabeth (Brown) Parker, relict of David Parker. The romance connected with this marriage is that Mr. Parker joined Captain Hyde's company soon after his marriage and Mrs. Parker applied to the captain to release him. He declined doing that but remarked jocosely that if her husband should be killed and his own wife should die before his return from war, he would himself become her husband. And sure enough both Private Parker was killed and Mrs. Hyde died at her home in Norwich and Captain Hyde kept his promise by marrying the Widow Parker. They removed to Hyde Park, Vermont, after whom the town was named, and of which he was an original proprietor. He was a farmer. Children by second marriage: Reuben, Russell B., Jabez, Hiram, Martha P., Elizabeth and Diamada.

(VI) Pitt William, fifth son of Captain Jedediah (2) and Mary (Waterman) Hyde, was born in Norwich, December 29, 1776, died May 29, 1823, at Sudbury, Vermont. There is some reason for LOMBARD supposing that the original bearer of this surname was a banker or money lender, and that he derived it from that source. It is quite probable that the earliest bankers in London were from Lombardy, and Lombard street in that city has been for centuries the principal location of bankers, brokers and bullion-dealers. The first of the name to be found in the colonial records of New England are Bernard and Thomas Lombard, Lumbard or Lombart, who came from Tenterden, county of Kent, England, and were in Scituate, Massachusetts, as early as 1637. John Lombard, an account of whom and some of his descendants is given below, was the progenitor of quite a numerous posterity, and several of his progeny were prominent men of Springfield in their day.

(1) John Lombard, the immigrant ancestor of the Springfield Lombards, came from England about the year 1640. Whether or not he was from Kent, or was related to the Bernard and Thomas Lombard, previously mentioned, has not as yet been ascertained. He first located on Cape Cod, but in 1646 settled in Springfield, and between the years 1657 and 1667 received five grants of land. He erected his residence on Main street in the immediate vicinity of what is now York street, and this house was burned by the Indians in October, 1675. He served as fence viewer in 1655 and again in 1657. He was a weaver. His death occurred May 15, 1672. On September 1, 1647, he married Joan Pritchard, who died May 19, 1692. She was a daughter of Roger and Frances Pritchard, who were in Springfield in 1643. Mrs. Frances Pritchard died in Springfield, March 9, 1651, and Roger went to Connecticut, dying in New Haven in 1681. The children of John and Joan (Pritchard) Lombard were: 1. John, born July 20, 1648, died at the age of twenty-four years. 2. David, see next paragraph. 3. Nathaniel, born September 6, 1654, died September 20 of the same year.

(II) David, son of John Lombard, was born in Springfield, October 16 (or August 8), 1650, died there August 17, 1716. After the destruction of the house built by his father he moved to Long Hill, probably settling upon land allotted to his father, and for more than one hundred and fifty years afterward this property was known as the Lombard estate. In 1676 he was paid the sum of ten shillings for killing a wolf. He served as surveyor in 1696; as tithing-man for the years 1698-99, and being chosen constable for the years 1697-98 he hired Samuel Warner to perform the duties of that office. He married Margaret Filley and his children were: 1. Mary, born in 1677. 2. Margaret, 1679. 3. Abigail, 1682. 4. John, 1685. 5. David, 1690. 6. Ebenezer, who will be again referred to. 7. Joseph, 1696.

(III) Ebenezer, son of David Lombard, was born in Springfield in 1692, and resided at the old homestead on Long Hill. In 1717 he married Rachel Loomis, and had a family of six children, one of whom was Joseph.

(IV) Joseph, son of Ebenezer Lombard, was born in Springfield in 1720. He married (first) Ruth Draper and (second) Lydia Leach. (N. B. Owing to the meagre information concerning the early history of this family contained in the various records examined, it is almost impossible to trace with accuracy the generations from David (II) to Obed (5), but the line of descent as given here is probably correct).

(V) Obed, probably a son of Joseph Lombard, was born in Springfield in 1756. Having succeeded to the possession of the homestead, on Long Hill, he carried on general farming there with energy for many years, and witnessed the dawning of a new era in the history of Springfield, which from that time forward underwent rapid development as an important commercial and manufacturing centre. An increase of population, which is invariably the result of business expansion, made it absolutely necessary to raise the rate of taxation in order to comply with the demand for public improvements, and when his property assessment became more than what he considered to be just, the owner of the Lombard estate made a forcible remonstrance. This act may be said to have been the initial inspiration for the subsequent establishment of the public reservation known as Forest Park. Obed Lombard married a Miss Addleton and reared children, among whom were Roderick and Zelotes. The latter, born in 1800, died at the age of forty-eight years, was in addition to being a well-known manufacturer of machinery for making barrels a very successful inventor, and in 1838 was awarded silver medals for valuable improvements in machinery by the Mechanics Institute of New York City.

(VI) Roderick, son of Obed Lombard, was born in Springfield in 1798, died at East Longmeadow in January, 1869. He inherited the homestead and his active years were devoted to its cultivation. In 1868 the property was purchased by a number of public-spirited citizens, who presented it to the municipality for recreation purposes, and thus the ancient Lombard estate became a part of Forest Park. The remainder of Roderick Lombard's life was spent upon a farm in East Longmeadow, whither he moved upon leaving his ancestral home. He married (first) Alta Frink, who was born at Williamsett, Massachusetts, in 1800, and her death occurred in 1863. She bore him five children: 1. Lois, who died at the age of nine years. 2. Nelson, who will again be referred to. 3. John Frink. 4. Elbridge. 5. Ellen, who died at the age of ten years. He married (second) Maria Robinson, of Chicopee Falls.

(VII) Nelson, son of Roderick Lombard, was born in Springfield, November 21, 1831. At the age of four years he entered the public schools of Springfield, and although the school which he attended for primary instruction was located a long distance from his home at Long Hill, he did not miss a single day's attendance during his first term. When eleven years old he attended the Wilbraham Academy one term, after which he returned to the public schools of Springfield, and at sixteen entered Henry Bang's private school, where he completed his studies at nineteen. He then turned his attention to agriculture, assisting his father in carrying on the homestead farm and becoming thoroughly familiar with modern agricultural methods. In 1868 he relinquished with regret the Lombard estate, which had been the scene of his family's industrial activities for seven generations, and accompanied his father to East Longmeadow. After the latter's death he succeeded to the possession of the farm and conducted it successfully for twenty years or until 1888, when he retired. Returning to Springfield he located at No. 74 Walnut street and is still residing there. In early manhood he became deeply interested in religious work, and upon resuming his residence in Springfield united with the Emanuel Congregational Church, of which he has been a deacon for many years. At the present time he is chairman of the committee selected to superintend the erection of a new church edifice. He has also for many years served as a delegate to the Congregational State Conference, and in various other ways has been active in the affairs of that denomination in this section of the commonwealth. His personal character and everyday life so well exemplifies his religious title that his friends and acquaintances refer to him almost invariably as Deacon Lombard. While in East Longmeadow he served many years on the prudential committee. While a resident of East Longmeadow he took an active part in public affairs, was frequently called upon to perform grand jury duty at the county seat, and the greater part of the time for twenty years served as road surveyor. Deacon Lombard married (first) January 2, 1855, Delia Cadwell, daughter of Orin Cadwell, of Springfield; she died in June, 1857. He married (second) December 25, 1860, Ann Eliza Cadwell, a cousin of his first wife, and a daughter of David A. Cadwell. Child of first wife, Walter, who died at the age of fifteen months. (II) Jacob, son of John Bartlett, was born in New England, and married Sarah ———. He and his sons were Quakers. He was a farmer, and also a manufacturer of hardware and edged tools. He bought, in 1696, commonage from James Albee, of Mendon. Before this time Jacob Bartlett had been living in Providence, but probably removed to his new purchase, which was afterwards (1713) the first land laid out in the new town of Bellingham. He had other grants of land, one of them near Iron Rock Brook, and bought land in various places. In 1737-38 he conveyed by deed of gift his homestead in Bellingham and two other tracts of land to his sons Jacob Jr. and Joseph. The house which he probably built in 1696 was at last accounts still standing, and was in 1879 owned by George Waterman. The old hinges and wooden latch from one of the doors is in the Society of Antiquity at Worcester. The old burying ground of the Bartlett family is situated on his homestead, where he was probably buried. Children: 1. Damaris, married, January 5, 1717-18, Obadiah Ballou. 2. (III) Jacob (2), son of Jacob (1) Bartlett, resided first in Providence, Rhode Island, where he had land of his uncle, Moses Bartlett. On September 22, 1737, he sold the land back to his uncle and removed to Bellingham, where he bought in 1737 a part of his father's homestead, and carried on the business of making scythes and blacksmith's supplies. He was associated with Peter Darling at the Muddy Brook water privilege, a "short distance south from the highway that leads to Wainsocket." At the incorporation of the town of Cumberland in 1746 he was chosen a member of the town council, and filled other positions of trust. He was fence viewer in 1747. He married (first) Sarah ———, and (second) October 20, 1742, Lydia Muzzy, who died November 10, 1786, daughter of James Muzzy, of Mendon. They were married according to Quaker rites, and he took an active part in church affairs. A complaint was made against him in 1762 for sitting with his hat on during prayers, and a committee was appointed "to labor with him." He died April 17, 1768, and was probably buried in the family burying ground. His will was dated November 19, 1760, and bequeaths to his daughter Amey Cass his pewter, etc.; to his son David his wearing apparel, except the cloak which was his uncle Moses'; to his daughter Sarah, beds, bedding, etc.; and to his wife Lydia, the executrix, the remainder of the estate. Children: 1. Amey, married ——— Cass. 2. David, mentioned below. 3. Sarah, married, 1790, Anthony Razez.

(IV) David, son of Jacob (2) Bartlett, was the settler at Belchertown. Philip Bartlett was a soldier from Belchertown in the revolution in 1775, in Captain Jonathan Bartlett's company, and again in 1779. Benjamin Bartlett, aged seventeen, five feet six inches in height, in 1780 was in the revolution from Belchertown. In 1790 Benjamin is reported by the federal census as having two sons under sixteen and one female in his family. In the same census David had two males over sixteen, two under sixteen and two females in his family. The sons of David: Benjamin, Philip, Solomon, Gideon, mentioned below.

(V) Gideon, son of David Bartlett, was born at Belchertown, and settled in the section set off as Enfield, Massachusetts. He was a farmer. He married Lydia Brown. Children: Lucas, Avery, Marshall Jones, Erastus, Amy, Almira, Prentiss.

(VI) Marshall Jones, son of Gideon Bartlett, was born at Enfield, Massachusetts, 1809, died October, 1876. He was educated in the public schools, and was a carriage trimmer by trade. He lived in Ware, and was a highly respected citizen. He married Abigail J. Warren, born at Ft. Warren, Boston Harbor, 1813, died September, 1876, daughter of Isaiah Warren. Children, born at Ware: 1. Estus, killed at the mine explosion at Petersburg, Virginia, in the civil war, 1864. 2. Calista. 3. Livingston, served in the civil war. 4. Myron E., served in the civil war. 5. Caroline. 6. Eugene P. 7. Melora. 8. Leander. 9. Henrietta. 10. Joseph Freeland, mentioned below.

(VIII) Joseph Freeland, son of Marshall Jones Bartlett, was born at Ware, July 25, 1843. He was educated in the public schools of his native town. At the age of seventeen years he enlisted, April 22, 1861, in Company H, Tenth Massachusetts Regiment, and was made sergeant of his company. He was transferred to Company I, Thirty-seventh Massachusetts Regiment, as first sergeant, and later commissioned second lieutenant. He was commissioned first lieutenant of Company K, Twentieth Massachusetts Regiment, June 12, 1865, and mustered out July 28, 1865. He took part in thirty-three battles and engagements, and was wounded on three occasions. He was at the front from the time he enlisted to the end of the war, except for three months when he was incapacitated by his wounds. His company made the last stand at the battle of Fair Oaks, and was on the skirmish line in the battle of the Wilderness. He put the last line of soldiers across Sailors Creek in the last battle of the war. In 1870 Mr. Bartlett came to Turner's Falls and engaged in the paper, paint and window glass business, in which he has been very successful. He has been active and prominent in public life: for eight years he was on the board of selectmen and chairman two years; has been road commissioner, assessor, overseer of the poor, water commissioner, and member of the school committee. In 1879-80 he represented his district in the general court; in 1893-94 he was state senator from his district, and was chairman of the committee on banks and banking. He is a director of the Crocker National Bank; vice-president of the Crocker Institute of Savings; and president of the Franklin Electric Light Company. Holdsworth, and has five children: Marion, Hester, George, Marcia and Joseph Bartlett.

FRENCH This name, as is plainly indicated, had its origin in France, the early Norman records showing it in a variety of forms. The Frenches of Frenchgrove, county Mayo, are said to have sprung from Robert Fitz-Stephen de France, who accompanied Strongbow into Ireland during the reign of Henry the Second, and he was supposed to be a descendant of Theophilus de France, a follower of William the Conqueror. There were many emigrants of this name who came to America and made their homes in Braintree, Ipswich, Salisbury, Weymouth, Cambridge, Dorchester, Exeter, Rehoboth, and in other important New England settlements.

(I) John French, immigrant, came first to Ipswich, Massachusetts, and died in Northampton, February 1, 1697. He was a Dennison subscriber as early as 1648; went to Northampton in 1676 and took the oath, February 8, 1678. He was a planter and prominent in the settlement, and also held lands at Deerfield. With the exception of his son John his family settled in Northampton. He married Freedom, who died July 26, 1689, daughter of John and Mary Kingsley, formerly of Dorchester, later of Rehoboth. Children: John, see forward; Thomas; Samuel, died unmarried, September 8, 1683; Jonathan; Mary, died before 1697, married, March 4, 1678, Samuel Stebbins; Hannah, married Francis Keet; Elizabeth, married Samuel Pomeroy.

(II) John (2), eldest child of John (1) and Freedom (Kingsley) French, was born in 1755, died at Rehoboth, February 25, 1724-25. He removed with his father and the other members of the family from Rehoboth to Northampton about 1676, living at the home of John Kingsley, his grandfather, and was made a freeman, together with his brothers Thomas and Samuel, in Northampton, February 8, 1679. Shortly after he returned to Rehoboth as we find him an inhabitant and proprietor of that town, February 7, 1689, having right and titles to the measures, tenements and lands by quit-claim of William Bradford to the town of Rehoboth. He married, November 26, 1678, Hannah, born November 8, 1657, daughter of Jonah and Elizabeth Palmer, of Rehoboth. Children: 1. Hannah, born October 19, 1679. 2. John, April 13, 1681, married (first) Martha Williams, who died August 17, 1717, at the age of forty-three years; (second) May 23, 1728, Abigail White. 3. Mary, March 15, 1683-84. 4. Elizabeth, January 19, 1684-85. 5. Martha, March 28, 1688. 6. Samuel, March 30, 1690, died June 10, 1709. 7. Jonathan, November 17, 1693. 8. Thomas, see forward. 9. Ephraim, January 22, 1698-99.

(III) Thomas, fourth son and eighth child of John (2), and Hannah (Palmer) French, was born in Rehoboth, September 6, 1696-97, died at Oak Hill, Attleboro, January 3, 1746. With his brother John he came to Attleboro in 1710, the former settling near what is known as Bear Swamp, in the southeastern part of the town, and his descendants are still living there. Thomas made his home near Park Hill, where he erected a two-story dwelling with a chimney at one end. Later his son Joseph erected a house adjoining this in such a manner that this chimney was midway between the two. Thomas married, January 5, 1720-21, Mary Brown. Children: 1. Thomas Jr., born April 16, 1722, married, January 2, 1746, Keziah Perry. 2. Christopher, married Amy Weswold. 3. (IV) Joseph, third son and fourth child of Thomas and Mary (Brown) French, was born near Oak Hill, Attleboro, in 1728, died in Attleboro, October 20, 1794. He inherited the homestead and was a farmer and blacksmith. During the revolution he was a private in Captain Moses Wilmarth's company, Colonel John Daggett's (Fourth Boston) regiment, which marched on the alarm of April 19, 1775, and he was entitled to draw wages and bounty for the services of his son Joseph, who also served. He married, April 4, 1755, Sibbel Carpenter, born October 20, 1733, daughter of Obadiah and Bethia (Carpenter) Lyon. Children: 1. Joseph, born September 29, 1756, died in the hospital at Cambridge, September 20, 1775. 2. Thomas, June 7, 1758. 3. Mary, November 10, 1760, married Major ——— Tyler. 4. Ezra, see forward. 5. Obadiah, July 27, 1766, settled in Poultney, Vermont, married ——— Warner. 6. Sibbel, October 8, 1768. 7. Huldah, June 16, 1771. 8. Cynthia, October 7, 1773.

(V) Ezra, third son and fourth child of Joseph and Sibbel Carpenter (Lyon) French, was born on the Oak Hill homestead, May 7, 1763, died there in 1806. At an early age he commenced to work on the farm, and during his minority learned the cooper's trade, which he followed all his life. His shop was located on his farm, and he cut the timber he needed for supplies from his own woods, making all the parts needed in the manufacture of the barrels, and making a speciality of hard wood casks. One of these, dated 1803, is still preserved by his descendants. He raised general crops, bred sheep and cattle, and was considered wealthy for those times. The farm was of large area, and upon the death of his widow was divided among the five children. He enlisted July 27, 1780, as private in Captain Alexander Foster's company, Colonel Thomas Carpenter's regiment, and marched to Tiverton, Rhode Island; re-enlisted, July 23, 1781, in Captain Jabez Barney's company, Colonel Luke Drury's regiment, and joined the regiment at West Point. He and his wife were members of the Orthodox church, and he belonged to the Whig party. (VI) Ezra (2), eldest son and second child of Ezra (1) and Jane (Titus) French, was born on the French homestead, July 5, 1790, died in Pawtucket, Rhode Island. He acquired a common school education and was sixteen years of age when his father died. He was somewhat incapacitated for all kinds of labor, by reason of a broken leg which had been improperly set, and which caused a permanent lameness. During his minority he took any sort of work which came to his hand, and later sold to his brother Joseph that part of the homestead which he had inherited and removed to Hebronville. There he worked as a butcher and also drove a wagon for Ira K. Miller. He also lived in Dodgeville, and throughout his life was more or less engaged in farming. During his later years he divided his time between his children, living the greater part of the time with his daughter Nancy B., at whose home in Pawtucket he died. He was captain of an Attleboro company of militia, attended the Baptist church, and voted with the Democratic party. He married (first) Nancy Bullard, and had: 1. (VII) Deacon Ebenezer, second son and fourth child of Ezra (2) and Susan (Fuller) French, was born in Attleboro, Massachusetts, September 5, 1825, died in North Attleboro, September 6, 1896. He attended the district school and at an early age commenced to earn his own living. As a boy he worked in the cotton mills of Hebronville, a part of Attleboro, later learning the carpenter's trade, which he followed for many years. He was in the employ of William George, who had a straw shop in Wrentham, was foreman for Jonas Munroe, a builder in North Attleboro, and later was in the employ of the Whiting Manufacturing Company. In 1850 he built the house in which he resided until his death, where his son's widow resides. He formed a partnership in the building contracting business in 1875, with William Bennett, under the firm name of Bennett & French, and this was continued until 1891, during which time they erected many of the residences of prominence and shops in North Attleboro and Plainville. Deacon French was a Republican in politics and a member of the school committee. He was a deacon in the Baptist church, earnest in his endeavors for the welfare of this institution, and gave liberally of his time and means. He married (first) at Hebronville, Ann Maria Norton, and had: Edwin Davis, see forward. He married (second), Mrs. Harriet Anna (Bates) Albro, born in 1835, died October 7, 1897, daughter of Deacon Joseph G. Albro.

(VIII) Edwin Davis, only child of Deacon Ebenezer and Ann Maria (Norton) French, was born in North Attleboro, January 19, 1851, and died in New York City, December 8, 1906. He attended the public schools of his native town, and after a year's preparatory course in Suffield, Connecticut, he entered Brown University. There after two years' of close application to his studies, his health became impaired and he was advised to abandon a university education. He yielded to the solicitations of his friend, William Dean Whiting, of the firm of that name, and became an engraver on silver. His extraordinary gifts as a designer and in the execution of his work were speedily recognized and he became chief of the engraving department, serving as such with the exception of two years when he was designer for Frank M. Whiting. He left the Whiting Company in 1894 to take up engraving as one of the fine arts. He went to New York City in 1876, and resided there with the exception of two years until 1897. During the earlier years of his residence in New York Mr. French connected himself with the Art Students League, where he studied under George de Forest Brush and William Sartain. The last mentioned connection was a particular advantage to him. In 1886 Mr. French became a member of the board of control of the League; in 1887, its treasurer; in 1889 and 1892, its president. Systematic and eager for details, he was an effective factor in the great advance made by the League during his official terms. When he became a member the records showed a roll of four hundred and twenty-five members, it had more than twice that number when he retired from the presidency and became a trustee of the American Fine Arts Society. For more than two years after Mr. French had withdrawn from the Whiting Company he devoted his time and attention entirely to copper engraving. Book plates had been called to his attention by the collection made by his sister-in-law, Helen Elvira Brainerd, at that time a librarian in Columbia University. His first copper-plate was roughly engraved and printed, and slipped into this collection as a jest, but it has since become famous. From this time he decided to make copper engraving his life work. In the summer of 1897 he removed to Saranac Lake and established his home in the heart of the Adirondack mountains. He frequently spent the winters in the south but invariably carried with him his engraver's outfit. He always had several designs in hand at the same time and commissions came in more rapidly than he could fill them. In 1905 he made a trip to Europe and feasted his eyes upon the works of his brothers in art. June of 1906 found him back in his mountain home and again at his beloved work. During the last year of his life, while his wealth was being surely undermined, there was no waning in his enthusiasm, the firmness of his lines, or the fertility of his invention. Toward the close of the year he returned to New York, where his death occurred. As a copper engraver Mr. French ranked among the first in this line. He took no active part in the political struggles of the times unless fundamental principles were at stake, and did not enter very actively into social life, preferring the retirement of a quiet home. He married, November 18, 1873, Mary Olivia, born April 26, 1848, daughter of Deacon Harvey Pierce and Mary Lavinia (Brainerd) Brainerd, the former a farmer of Enfield, Connecticut.

This ancient and respectable FRENCH family established itself in America about the end of the first decade of colonization in Massachusetts, and has furnished many valued citizens. The name comes either from a French ancestor who settled in Britain and was called "the French," in reference to his nationality, or from his having lived in France.

(I) John French, progenitor of the family, was born in county Dorset, England, about 1612. After coming to this country he resided a short time in Dorchester, Massachusetts, and was admitted freeman in 1639. He was probably the first settler in the present limits of the town of Braintree, Massachusetts. Among the grants of land given by the town of Boston we find February 14, 1640, John French, of Manoticot, as receiving twenty acres for five heads in his family. This land was situated on Commercial street at the corner of Elm street as is plainly shown by deed given by himself and sons. In 1645 he was one of the petitioners to begin a plantation at Warwick, Rhode Island, but never went there. It is probable that he was one of the sympathizers of the Rev. Samuel Gorton, but for some reasons unknown did not carry out his intentions. He is recorded by Samuel Thompson, who was town clerk about 1690, as having been since his remembrance clerk of the training band. He married (first) Grace ———, about whom little is known except as mother of his children, and the record of her death February 28, 1681. She was buried in the old country at Quincy, where a stone marks the spot and gives her age as fifty-nine years. Their children: 1. John, born February 28, 1641, in Dorchester, Massachusetts, married Experience, daughter of Thomas Thayer. 2. Thomas, July 10, 1643, in Dorchester, died in Braintree, August 28, 1656. 3. Dependence, January 7, 1648, in Braintree, married Mary Marsh and Rebecca Frenno. 4. Temperance, in Braintree, January 30, 1651, married John Bowditch. 5. William, in Braintree, January 31, 1653, married Elizabeth Belcher. 6. Elizabeth, July 29, 1655, married ——— Thayer and ——— Wheelock, of Mendon. 7. Thomas, in Braintree, January 10, 1657, married Elizabeth Belcher. 8. Samuel, in Braintree, December 22, 1659, see forward. John French married (second) 1683, Elinor, widow of William Veazie; she died April 23, 1711, aged eighty-five years; he died August 6, 1692, aged eighty years. No will of his was found or administration on his estate.

(II) Samuel, sixth son of John and Grace French, was born in Braintree, Massachusetts, December 22, 1659. He married (first) Anna, daughter of Lieutenant Alexander and Bathsheba (Lathrop) Marsh; she died February 17, 1712. Married (second) November 12, 1713, Elizabeth Clapp, of Milton. Children of the first marriage: 1. Samuel, born November 17, 1680, died young. 2. Samuel, August 13, 1688, died January 11, 1770, unmarried. 3. Hannah, January 15, 1690. 4. Samuel French (father) died in October, 1718.

(III) Alexander, third son of Samuel and Anna (Marsh) French, was born December 13, 1695, died January 31, 1745, aged fifty years. He married (first) Mary, daughter of Thomas and Mehitabel (Adams) White, and their children were: 1. Alexander, born February 28, 1724. 2. Samuel, September 5, 1725, see forward. 3. Isaac, November 13, 1729. 4. Benoni, May 30, 1732, died June 2, 1732. The mother of these children died May 30, 1732. Mr. French married (second) May 14, 1734, Rebecca Staples, by whom he had six children: 5. Elizabeth, August 13, 1735. 6. Jacob, June 11, 1736, died June 20, 1736. 7. Asa, May 7, 1737. 8. Jacob, September 19, 1739. 9. Experience, April 23, 1742. 10. Job, June 16, 1744, died June 19, 1744.

(IV) Samuel (2), second son of Alexander and Mary (White) French, was born September 5, 1725. He lived in Braintree, where he was a farmer, but on account of annoyance of the British he went to Goshen, where he was the first settler and the first taxpayer. He married Mary (surname unknown). Children: 1. Mary, born January 14, 1748, died April 17, 1748. 2. Mary, October, 1750, died November 2, 1753. 3. Samuel, January 18, 1755. 4. Asa, see forward.

(V) Asa, second son of Samuel (2) and Mary French, was born May 3, 1757. He was a farmer during the greater part of his life. He took an active part in "Shay's rebellion" and many legends exist as to his absolute lack of fear. He enlisted first at the age of seventeen, re-enlisted and served through the entire war; after the war he became an extensive cattle buyer. He married Sarah, daughter of Ezekiel and Abigail (Blanchard) White, and granddaughter of Deacon Samuel White, in Williamsburg, February 14, 1784. Children: 1. Elihu, died young. 2. Samuel, married and moved to Vermont. 3. Irene, married (first) a Mr. Staples and had two children, William and Sarah; married (second) a Mr. Bagley and had two children, Frances and Irene. 4. William, see forward. 5. Sophia. 6. Jabez, born in Williamsburg, June 17, 1794, died at Northampton, February 11, 1857. 7. Ambrose, March 22, 1797, died April 29, 1863; married Sophia Town. 8. Sally, died young. 9. Nathan, died young.

(VI) William, son of Asa and Abigail (White) French, was born probably in Williamsburg, as nearly all of his father's children were born there. He was a farmer by occupation. He married Eunice Coates. Children: Orange, William, Edmond, Henry, Frank, Fred, Miranda, Minerva.

(VII) Edmond, son of William and Eunice (Coates) French, was born in Stamford, Vermont, January 14, 1826, died September 6, 1901, at Brattleboro, Vermont. After a common school education, he learned the trade of carpenter, later taking large contracts to build mills. In 1849 he removed to Pittsfield and there and in neighboring towns built several large mills, among which was a paper mill at West Cummington. He married, about 1852, Mary Galloway, born in New York, August 1, 1832, died June 24, 1889. Children: 1. Grenville W., born in Pittsfield, July 12, 1853, married (first) Nettie Hollister, of Hartford; one daughter, Edith M.; married (second) May Elliot; one boy, died in infancy. 2. Arthur M., see forward. 3. Ervin E., January 2, 1859, died April 6, 1864. 4. Nellie Elizabeth, October 7, 1864, married G. W. Gardiner; no issue. 5. Alice Gertrude, March 12, 1868, died unmarried, April 11, 1909. 6. Mary Emily, August 29, 1869, married L. G. Mugford, of Chicago; three children: Dorothy, Gertrude and Elizabeth.

(VIII) Arthur M., son of Edmond and Mary (Galloway) French, was born in Pittsfield, October 10, 1856. He obtained his education in the public schools of that place, and April 26, 1875, came to Holyoke, at once entering the employ of the Massasoit Paper Manufacturing Company. The business of paper manufacturing appealed to him, and at the expiration of nine years he was offered the position of superintendent of the Whiting Paper Company's mill, No. 1, at Holyoke, Massachusetts, remaining for five years, later assuming a like position with the Hurlburt Paper Manufacturing Company of South Lee, Massachusetts, and after one year there returned to Holyoke as superintendent of the Valley Paper Company. He soon purchased an interest in that company and was elected to the board of directors, serving four years. With his assistance the Linden Paper Company was then organized. Mr. French was entrusted with the difficult problem of drawing the plans for the building so that all available land might be utilized, also with the superintendency of its erection and the installing of the plant. Soon after the mill was in operation he became ambitious to manufacture "Blueprint" paper, which heretofore had never been successfully done in this country, and at the present time (1909) this is one of the principal papers manufactured by him. On the absorption of the company by the American Writing Paper Company, Mr. French was retained as superintendent. He is a director of the Home National Bank, member of the Masonic orders, Knights Templar and Shrine, and of the Congregational church. In politics a Republican, serving in 1897-98 as alderman at large, and 1890-91 as president of that body. He married, September 20, 1882, Melissa D., daughter of Albert G. and Mary (Jenne) Ridout. They have one child, Arthur Edmond, born May 7, 1889, who graduated from the high school, Worcester Academy, and is now at Dartmouth, class of 1911.

Line of descent of the Jenne family of which Mrs. Arthur M. French is a representative:

Sometime in the early settlement of this country Isaac and Ephraim Jenne came from England and settled in Massachusetts, in the part which is now New Bedford. Tradition says they were of Welch extraction; also that they married sisters (English women) about 1720.

(1) Isaac Jenne married Milly ——— and had five children: Isaac, Ephraim, James, Mary and Milly. Many descendants of this line are now living in Chester, Vermont.

(2) James, son of Isaac and Milly Jenne, was born in New Bedford, August 14, 1744. He married Miriam Pope, sister of General Pope, of revolutionary fame. They had nine children: Isaac, Thomas, Miriam, James, Sarah, Elisha and three others who died in infancy.

(3) Thomas, son of James and Miriam (Pope) Jenne, was born in New Bedford, Massachusetts, January 11, 1773, died January 9, 1861. When about four years of age his parents moved to Grantham, New Hampshire, where March 2, 1797, he married Betsey Hunter, born in Ashford, Connecticut, September 13, 1777, died January 13, 1854. They were the parents of three children: Thomas, born March 23, 1799; Siloam S., July 26, 1809; Moriah, December, 1817.

(4) Siloam S., son of Thomas and Betsey (Hunter) Jenne, was born in Grantham, New Hampshire, July 26, 1809. He removed to Lenox, Massachusetts, with his parents, where November 26, 1829, he was married to Amelia P. Root. She was born in Lenox, October 5, 1806. They had children: Nancy M., born December 10, 1830, died November 6, 1834; Mary Ann, August 25, 1833; William McK., January 14, 1837; Frances Amelia, June 27, 1846, died May 16, 1873.

(5) Mary Ann, daughter of Siloam S. and Amelia P. (Root) Jenne, born August 25, 1833, married, November 24, 1853, Albert G. Ridout, of Lee, Massachusetts. Children: Charles Albert, born Lenox, November 9, 1854; Melissa D., born in Lee, Massachusetts, July 17, 1860, married Arthur M. French, as previously stated.

(For preceding generations see preceding sketch).

(IV) Jacob French, son of FRENCH Alexander French (q. v.), was born September 19, 1739, at Braintree. He married Olive ——. He and his brothers settled in Williamsburgh, Massachusetts, when young men. According to the first federal census taken in 1790 John, Thomas, Samuel, Asa and Jacob were heads of families in that town. Jacob had one male over sixteen years of age, three males under that age and two females, four children in all, at that time. He was a soldier in the revolution.

He married, October 2, 1814, Nancy Hill, born on Battery-march street, Boston; died at Williamsburgh, Massachusetts, in 1886, at an advanced age. She was descended from an old and prominent family of Boston. Children, born in Williamsburgh: 1. (VI) Chauncey, son of Isaac French, was born in Williamsburgh, March 29, 1817, died in 1888. He was educated in the public schools, and learned the trade of blacksmith. He engaged in business on his own account at Hinsdale, New Hampshire, in the manufacture of axes. Afterwards he manufactured at Northampton, Massachusetts, hoe eye-sockets, at which he was especially skillful and successful. At that time all this work in making tools was done by hand and there were no large factories. He returned to Williamsburgh in his declining years and spent the remainder of his life there. He died in 1888. He married, in Hinsdale, New Hampshire, Martha Elizabeth Smith, born 1816, at Hinsdale, died 1894, in Williamsburgh. She was of an old New England family. Children: 1. (VII) William C., son of Chauncey French, was born in Hinsdale, New Hampshire, May 11, 1841. He was educated in the public schools. He was gifted with mechanical ability and when a boy learned the trade of machinist and stationary engineer. He worked in various machine shops in Springfield and in 1875 took charge of the stationary engine on the Hunnewell estate in Boston, and continued in charge of the mechanical plant there until he resigned in 1890. From the time of the experimental use of electricity for lighting purposes, Mr. French has been a student of electricity and an expert electrician. As early as 1878 the inventor, C. F. Brush, introduced his mechanism for electric lighting, and under his supervision Mr. French learned to run the dynamo. The demonstration was successful and the Brush system was developed successfully on commercial lines. While Mr. French was engineer in charge of the Continental Clothing House, corner of Howard and Washington streets, Boston, an arc light machine constructed by C. F. Brush was installed in its engine room. In 1899 Mr. French was placed in charge of the electric lighting plant of the Masonic Temple of Boston and superintended its installation. He has held the position of chief engineer of this plant to the present time.

For many years Mr. French has been interested in Masonry and is a member of Blue Lodge; Royal Arch Masons; Boston Council, Royal and Select Masters; De Molay Commandery, Knights Templar; Lodge of Perfection; Princes of Jerusalem; Mount Olivet Chapter, Rose Croix; the Massachusetts Consistory; and Aleppo Temple, Order of the Mystic Shrine. He took part in both battles of Bull Run and in several skirmishes, and served for three months, the period of his enlistment. He was a member

He married (first) July 30, 1862, Henrietta Chadwick, born 1839, died December 12, 1879. He married (second) June 8, 1884, Louise M. (Malcolm) Anderson, born in New York City in 1851, widow of Frederick Anderson, who died in 1881. By her first marriage she had one child, William G. Anderson, who married Harriet Rouchfuss, of Boston, and has one child, William C. William G. was married under the name of William G. French, the name he has been known by for twenty-five years. Mr. French has no children. He resides at No. 3 Alveston street, Jamaica Plain, Boston.

The surname Wolcott is identical with Walcott, as shown by the use of the same coat-of-arms, but both in England and America the two forms of spelling have survived for several centuries. The coat-of-arms, which was engraved on the silver of Governor Roger Wolcott, of Connecticut, mentioned below: Argent a chevron between three chess rooks ermine. Crest: A bull's head erased argent or ducally gorged lined and ringed of the last. The family motto: Nullius addictus jurare verba magistri—accustomed to swear in the words of no Master; or, taking nothing on trust. The English ancestry of the American immigrant has been traced for several generations, as follows:

(I) John Wolcott lived and died in Tolland, Somersetshire, England. His will, dated February 9, 1571, proved April 11, 1572, bequeathed to children John, Alice, Mary; wife Agnes, and also to John Howe, Agnes Meyer, and appointing his brothers Henry and Roger Wolcott overseers. Children of John and Agnes: John, mentioned below; Alice; Mary.

(II) John (2), son of John (1) Wolcott, lived at Tolland, and died there March 2, 1618, according to his gravestone. Various branches of the families lived in that and adjacent parishes. William and Thomas Wolcott were in Tolland as early as 1525, but the records are wanting, so the relationship is not known. John married Joan ———, who died April 5, 1637. He owned mills and other property at Tolland. His will, dated November 10, 1623, proved January 16, following, bequeathed to John Wolcott, son of his son John, and Agnes and Mary, daughters of son John; to children of son Henry; to kinsman Symon Wolcott; servant Giles More; also to Richard Locke, Alexander Thatloke, John Sealy and Alexander Engrave; witnessed by sons of the testators, Christopher and Henry Wolcott. Children, baptized in Lidiard, a parish adjoining Tolland: 1. Henry, mentioned below. 2. Christopher, died March 25, 1639. 3. John, died February 17, 1652.

(III) Henry Wolcott, immigrant ancestor, was son of John Wolcott, of Tolland, and was baptized at Lydiard, or Lidiard, England, December 6, 1578. He came with the first company to Dorchester, Massachusetts. Although it is said that he came first in 1628, he came with part of his family in the ship "Mary and John," of four hundred tons, Captain Squib, landing at Nantasket, May 30, 1630. He was one of the original settlers and proprietors of Dorchester, and was on the first list of freemen, dated October 19, 1630. He was one of the leading citizens, held the office of selectman, and other positions of trust. He removed with many of his neighbors to Windsor, Connecticut, in 1636-37, and was a member of the first general assembly of Connecticut in 1637. He was one of the undertakers (stockholders or owners) of the ship "Hopewell" in 1640, when he made a visit to England, and in that year his name stands first on the list of inhabitants. He was elected to the house of magistrates of Connecticut in 1643, and served during the rest of his life. He was one of the most prominent immigrants to New England. He was possessed of wealth and influence. He owned a good estate in Somersetshire. We are told that he spent his youth in gaiety and the usual country pastimes of the normal English youth, but afterwards, under the instruction of Rev. Edward Elton, "his mind was entirely changed and turned to the sincere love and practice of religion." He became an austere Puritan. As the Puritans were then treated with great severity in England, he sold an estate worth eight thousand pounds and prepared to remove to America. At his death, he still owned a considerable estate in England, rented for sixty pounds per annum, and afterwards sold by his heirs. His home in Windsor was at the south end of the town, south of the Farmington river, on a tract of land called the Island. He was called by contemporaries a "man of fine estate and superior abilities." He died May 30, 1655. He married, January 19, 1606, in England, Elizabeth Saunders, baptized December 20, 1584, died at Windsor, July 5, 1655, daughter of Thomas Saunders.

His tombstone of brown stone stands at the rear of the First Congregational Church, surrounded by the gravestones of descendants. His wife was buried at his side, and Prince's Chronology says: "These both dyed in hope and Ly buried under one Tomb in Windsor." The stone and inscriptions are perfectly preserved.

Children: 1. John, baptized at Lydiard; died in England. 2. Anna, married, October 16, 1646, Mathew Griswold, of Windsor. 3. Henry, baptized January 21, 1610-11. 4. George, married Elizabeth ———; died at Wethersfield, Connecticut, February 12, 1662. 5. Christopher, died September 7, 1662; had his father's homestead at Windsor. 6. Mary, married June 25, 1646, Job Drake; both died September 16, 1689. 7. Simon, mentioned below.

(IV) Simon, son of Henry Wolcott, was born in 1624-25, in England. He was five years old when his father came to America, and he came with other children later. He lived opposite his father's homestead in Windsor, on land that he bought of Goodman Whitehead, on the road to Hartford. He had a grant of land at Simsbury in 1667. He was prominent in public life. In 1668 he was on a committee of the general court to further planting. He removed to Simsbury in 1671 and was captain of the trainband there, August 11, 1673; selectman 1674. He and other settlers were driven from their homes during King Philip's war, and it said that he buried a brass kettle containing the family silver, sinking it in the mud of the swamp, and that it has never been recovered. He had a grant of two hundred acres from the general court in 1680, and was one of six in the colony honored with the title "Mr." He married (first) March 19, 1657, Joanna Cook, born August 5, 1638, died April 27, 1657, aged only eighteen years. He married (second) October 17, 1661, Martha Pitkins, who came from England with her brother, William Pitkins, attorney general and treasurer of the colony. Wolcott died September 11, 1687, and two years later his widow married (second) Daniel Clark. She died October 13, 1719, aged Wolcott, wrote of her: "She was a gentle-eighty years. Her son, Governor Roger woman of bright and natural parts which were well improved by her education in the city of London. She came to New England in 1661, and the same year was married to my father. The rest of her useful life she spent in the wilderness in doing good and setting an example of piety and prudence, charity and patience." Children: 1. Elizabeth, born August 19, 1662; married, December 10, 1680, Daniel Cooley, of Longmeadow, Massachusetts. 2. Martha, born May 17, 1664; married, January 6, 1686, Thomas Allyn, of Windsor. 3. Simon, born June 24, 1666. 4. Joanna, born June 30, 1668; married September 2, 1690, John Colton, of Longmeadow. 5. Henry, born May 20, 1670. 6. Christopher, born July 4, 1672; died April 3, 1693. 7. Mary, born 1674; died 1676. 8. William, born November 6, 1676. 9. Governor Roger, mentioned below.

(V) Governor Roger Wolcott, son of Simon Wolcott, was born January 4, 1679, at Simsbury, Connecticut. He became the foremost man of his day in the colony, and from him are descended many distinguished American statesmen, among whom may be mentioned Governor and United States Senator Edward O. Wolcott, of Colorado, and Governor Roger Wolcott, of our own generation in Massachusetts. From the private journal of Governor Wolcott we gain an excellent account of his life. In 1680, when he was an infant, the family settled on the east side of the river at Windsor, at some distance from any school, and he never attended a school. He was instructed by his parents. There was no church in the vicinity. His father died, leaving his buildings unfinished, his land to be cleared, and in debt, but the widow and her six children managed, and as the governor say, "we never wanted." After his mother married Daniel Clark, he went to live with her in her new home on the west side of the river. In 1690 he learned to write and read; in 1694 he was apprenticed to a clothier or fuller to learn the trade, and January 2, 1699, he engaged in business as a clothier on his own account and became very successful. He was elected selectman of Windsor in 1707; deputy to the general assembly in 1710. He took part in the expedition against Canada in 1711 as commissary of Connecticut stores. He was elected councillor in 1714; judge of the county court in 1721; of the superior court, 1732; deputy governor and chief judge of the superior court in 1741. He was commissioned major general of the colonial army by Governor Shirley, of Massachusetts, and Governor Law, of Connecticut, and led the Connecticut troops in the expedition against Cape Breton in 1745. He was then sixty-seven years old, the oldest man in the service except

Rev. Mr. Moody. Gov. Wolcott said: "It was a tough business. Divine Providence appeared wonderfully in our favor and should forever be remembered with thankfulness." Louisburg surrendered and the expedition was successful. In 1750 he was elected governor of Connecticut. In November, 1752, some Spanish merchant vessels took refuge in New London harbor, and through the neglect and delay of the owner suffered much loss while in port. Governor Wolcott was accused of oppression and held responsible in the popular mind of the Spaniard's misfortunes. For this reason he was retired from governorship in 1754. But when the case reached the King's council, Governor Wolcott was absolved entirely from blame, and in a measure the public confidence in him returned. In 1755 he lacked but two hundred votes of re-election. After his retirement from public life "he divided his time between devotion, reading, agriculture, and the enjoyment of his friends. His body was strong and well proportioned, his countenance and deportment peculiarly adapted to command reverence and esteem. His wit was ready and uncommonly bright, his method of reasoning (free from sophistry) was clear and manly, as became a generous inquirer after truth and not a noisy wrangler for victory. He was a sincere unfailing friend to every industrious, virtuous, honest man, what ever his walk in life. He was a wise legislature and able statesman. While he was a judge he held the balance of justice with a steady unwavering hand, and being far superior to venality or the influence of personal, family or party connections, he pronounced the law impartially on all the causes brought before him. As a governor he appeared to advantage. This was his proper element, for he seemed originally formed to govern. He was a kind and provident husband and parent. His moral character was unblemished, his religion and piety unaffected and he died as he had lived a member of the Second Church of Windsor." And one who knew the late governor of Massachusetts, his descendant and namesake, must be reminded by this contemporary eulogy of the physique, bearing and character of the late Roger Wolcott, of Massachusetts.

Governor Wolcott's mansion house was built in 1704, and stood until a recent date. Some of the panels on which the paintings illustrated the Indian attack on Deerfield have been preserved. His will was proved July 18, 1761. He published three books: "Poetical Meditations" (1725); "A Tract on a Controversial Letter on the New England Churches" (printed in 1761); "Letter to the Freemen of Connecticut" (1761). He died May 17, 1767.

He married, December 3, 1702, Sarah Drake, daughter of Job Drake, (see below). Children: 1. Roger, born September 14, 1704; mentioned below. 2. Elizabeth, born April 10, 1706; married, August 24, 1727, Roger Newberry, of Windsor. 3. Alexander, born January 20, 1708; killed by a cart-wheel, October 8, 1741. 4. Samuel, born January 9, 1710; died December 22, 1717. 5. Alexander, born January 7, 1712. 6. Sarah, born and died December 10, 1712 (?). 7. Erastus (twin), born February 8, 1721; died May 10, 1722. 11. Epaphras, born February 8, 1721 (twin); died April 3, 1733. 12. Ursula, born October 30, 1724; married, November 10, 1743, Governor Matthew Griswold.

on the commission to revise the laws of the province. His premature death alone prevented him from attaining the governorship. He was on the commission that met delegates from the other colonies at Albany in June, 1754, to arrange a plan of union. The Connecticut delegation dissented from the plan adopted and the union was not effected at that time. He married (first) October 10, 1728, Marah, daughter of Captain Benjamin Newbury. She was born February 5, 1710, and died June 5, 1758, aged forty-nine years. He married (second) June 19, 1759, Eunice Ely, daughter of John Ely, of Springfield and daughter of John Colton. He married, June, 1762, Mabel Burnham, of Hampton, daughter of John Burnham, of East Hartford, Connecticut. She died March 27, 1814, aged seventy-nine years. Children: 1. Sarah, born January 10, 1764; married February 5, 1795, Ebenezer Pomeroy, of Hadley, Massachusetts. 2. James, born April 19, 1766; mentioned below. 3. Mabel, born March 17, 1770; married John B. (The Wesson Line).

(IV) William Wesson, son or nephew of Samuel Wesson (q. v.), was born about 1700. He and his brother Jeremiah settled at Sudbury, Massachusetts. William married at Sudbury, March 30, 1721-22, Mary Stanhope, of an ancient Sudbury family. He appears to have been an early settler of Hopkinton, Massachusetts, with other Sudbury men. Some of his descendants have a tradition that he was an immigrant, but all the evidence at hand tends to show that he belongs in the Reading family of which the Springfield Wessons are also descended, except perhaps the following interesting advertisement copied from the Boston Evening Post, of June 11, 1753: "If William Pullen, who was born in Shobrook, six miles from Exeter, England, and came to these parts thirty or forty years ago (about the same time that William Wesson settled in Sudbury) is yet alive and will come to William Wesson of Hopkinton in New England, he may hear of an estate in land worth 500 sterling per annum left him by one Mr. Pullen of Thorverton near Exeter and there is no heir found to enjoy it." William Wesson was a member of the Hopkinton church in 1752, and must have been of age. A Captain William Wesson, probably of this family, died at Marlborough, March 21, 1816, aged forty-four. Children: William, mentioned below; John, soldier in the revolution; perhaps others.

(IV) William, son of William Wesson, was born about 1730-40. He married, April 11, 1764, at Southborough, Mary Bruce; (second) at Southborough, being then of Hopkinton, February 9, 1789, Mrs. Sally Bixby, of Hopkinton. He was a soldier in the revolution, credited to Dudley, Massachusetts, in Captain Corbin's company, Colonel Davis's regiment, in 1777. According to the federal census there were two of the family in Hopkinton in 1790—John; a brother Levi, who appears to be a relative, probably son of John (IV). William was then in Athol, and had one son over sixteen, one under that age, and three females in his family. Children: 1. Josiah, whose will at Worcester has made clear much of the family history, dated May 23, 1843, at Athol, filed June 20, 1843, bequeathing to his sister Susanna Priest, niece Mary Brown, to children of brother William Wesson, to other heirs not named, and leaving the greater part of his estate to Maria, wife of Samuel Cummings Jr., including lands in Athol and Petersham. 2. William, Brigham, mentioned below. 3. Daughter, married — Brown. 4. Susanna, married — Priest.

(V) Rev. William Brigham Wesson, son of William Wesson (q. v.).

(VI) William Cutler Wesson, son of Rev. William Brigham Wesson, was born at Hardwick, December 23, 1814. He married, June 14, 1840, at Hardwick, Elizabeth Jones. He was a farmer, and lived on the homestead. Children, born at Hardwick: 1. Maria E., born March 29, 1841, John D. Morton. 2. Sarah A., born March 6, 1845; married, November 5, 1868, George M. Wolcott (see Wolcott).

The name Pierce was common PIERCE in England in a very early age, and had many ways of spelling
such as Parr, Piers, Pierce, Pears, Pearse, Peers, Peirce and Purse. Coat-of-arms:
Three ravens, rising. Motto: "Dixit et fecit" (He said and he did). Crest: Dove, with olive branch in bill.

(I) Thomas Pierce, emigrant ancestor of Harry H. Pierce, of North Attleboro, Massachusetts, came from England (doubtless Norfolk) and settled at Charlestown, Massachusetts, 1633-34, with his wife, Elizabeth. He was born in England in 1583-84 and his wife Elizabeth was born 1595-96. She died October 7, 1666. He was admitted to the first church at Charlestown, February 21, 1634-35, with his son Thomas; Elizabeth, his wife, was admitted January 10, previously. He was admitted a freeman May 6, 1635. September 27, 1642, he was one of the twenty-one commissioners appointed by the great and general court "to see that Salt petre heapes were made by all the farmers of the colony." He had a grant of four acres of planting ground in 1635-36. He was possessed of large estates in and around Charlestown, as far back as Medford and Woburn, and his property was inventoried at four hundred and fourteen pounds, which was an ample fortune in those times. His will was dated November 7, 1665. He gave to Harvard College twenty shillings, the bulk of his estate going to his wife Elizabeth; his "loving friend Richard Russell, Thomas Danforth," and his son John he nominated overseer of his will. He married Elizabeth ——. Children: 1. John. 2. Samuel. 3. Thomas, mentioned below. 4. Robert, married Sarah Eyre. 5. Mary, married Peter Tufts. 6. Elizabeth, married Randall Nichols. 7. (II) Thomas (2), son of Thomas (1) Pierce, was born in England in 1608, and came to New England about 1633-34. As no mention is made of him coming with his parents, it is surmised that he came shortly after them if not with them. He married shortly after his arrival and settled in Charlestown. He was styled Sergeant Thomas, and was admitted to the Charlestown church, February 21, 1634, at the same time as his father, showing that the family must have emigrated together. Sergeant Thomas Pierce was among the original settlers of Woburn in 1643, and was taxed there in 1645; was selectman in 1660; and many times was on the committee for dividing the common lands there. He was also one of "the right proprietors chosen March 28, 1667, and also of the general court committee appointed for the same purpose in 1668." He was a large land owner as he sells Thomas Richardson forty acres formerly of John Cole, southeast of Mount Discovery; also numerous real estate transactions in his name are found in the Middlesex county registers in Cambridge. The inventory of his estate after his decease, November 6, 1683, amounted to four hundred and forty pounds, and was appraised by Matthew Johnson and James Convers. He was sergeant 1669-82 and a member of Captain Thomas Prentice's troop, also under Lieutenant Oakes in King Philip's war, 1675-76. He married, May 6, 1635, Elizabeth Cole, who died March 5, 1688, daughter of Rice and Arnold Cole; children: 1. Abigail, born August 17, 1639. 2. John, March 7, 1643. 3. Thomas, June 21, 1645. 4. Elizabeth, December 25, 1646, died March 10, 1670. 5. Joseph, September 22, 1648, died February 27, 1649. 6. Joseph, August 13, 1649, died 1716. 7. Stephen, July 16, 1651, died January 31, 1742. 8. (III) James, son of Thomas (2) Pierce, was born at Woburn, Massachusetts, May 7, 1659, died there January 20, 1742. He gave a deed to his "brother" Moses Parker, of Chelmsford, under date of January 21, 1707. He served in campaigns against the Indians in and around Woburn. He was a husbandman and dwelt in the easterly part of Woburn on present Cambridge street, on the place latterly known as the Jacob Pierce place. He married, 1686, Elizabeth Parker, born April 10, 1663, died October 16, 1715, daughter of Abraham and Rose (Whitlock) Parker, of Woburn, Massachusetts. Children: 1. Elizabeth, October 11, 1688. 2. James, February 28, 1690, mentioned below. 3. Rebeckah, September 16, 1692.

(IV) James (2), son of James (1) and Elizabeth (Parker) Pierce, was born at Woburn, Massachusetts, February 28, 1690, died there December 21, 1773. He was a yeoman at Woburn and housewright. His will was made March 15, 1769. He gives to his wife, Phebe, the use and improvement of one-half of his real estate. His son Jacob he appointed his sole executor and gives all his real estate in Woburn and elsewhere together and his right in the meeting house in the First Parish and other personal belongings. He remembers his six daughters in the will, Samuel Wyman, Nathan Richardson and Josiah Parker, witnesses. He married (first) Hannah ——. He married (second) Phebe Reed, born March 22, 1695, daughter of Lieutenant

Joseph and Phebe (Walker) Reed, of Woburn. Children: 1. Rebecca, October 8, 1711. 2. Phebe, September 28, 1713. 3. James. 4. Joshua, April 1, 1722, mentioned below. 5. (V) Joshua, second son of James (2) Pierce, was born at Woburn, Massachusetts, April 1, 1722, died there February 13, 1771. He is mentioned as a reputable farmer of Woburn. He is left but one shilling in his father's will, having previously received his just proportion of his father's estate. He married (first) February 18, 1749, Susanna Ried, born September 9, 1726, daughter of Daniel and Mary (Converse) Ried, of Woburn. He married (second) October 27, 1753, Esther Richardson, born August 6, 1727, died June, 1810, daughter of Nathan and Esther Richardson. Children: 1. (VI) Joshua (2), eldest son of Joshua (1) and Esther (Richardson) Pierce, was born at Woburn, September 6, 1756, died at Hudson, New Hampshire, September 24, 1857, aged one hundred and one years. When a young man he and his brother Daniel settled at Hudson, New Hampshire, and his brothers, Nathan and James, in nearby towns. Joshua was married at the age of twenty-five years and soon began housekeeping on a farm of considerable area, in Hudson. He followed this occupation together with cooper for many years. He was a man of much influence in his community and deeply religious. He married, December, 25, 1781, Sarah Lund, born July 6, 1763, died October 20, 1851, aged eighty-eight years. Children: 1. (VII) Joshua (3), third son of Joshua (2) and Sarah (Lund) Pierce, was born at Hudson, New Hampshire, July 9, 1787, died at Nashua, New Hampshire, September 16, 1828. He was brought up on his father's farm, acquiring the usual common school education of a farmer's son at that period. He remained at home during his minority, but soon after his marriage settled on the farm he lived and died on. This farm compared favorably with the best in that section and was of large area, situated on the Merrimac river, on the road to Hudson, New Hampshire, and the present Indian Head corporation of cotton manufacture, one of the largest in the state, comprises the major part of Joshua's Pierce's farm which was sold after his death by his brother. He raised the common crops, sheep, cattle and horses, and was industrious, frugal and honest with all mankind. His wife, a most capable woman, died within a week of her husband, leaving a family of children. He married, March 10, 1810, Dolly Hutchins, born May 18, 1790, died September 24, 1828, daughter of General Gordon Hutchins (of revolutionary fame). Children: 1. (VIII) Joshua D., eldest son of Joshua (3) and Dolly (Hutchins) Pierce, was born at Nashua, New Hampshire, March 22, 1813, died at Augusta, Maine, December 17, 1884. At the age of eleven years his parents died while he was attending the academy at Derby, New Hampshire. He continued here up to about seventeen years of age, living with his uncle, James Pierce. After completing his schooling he began a clerkship in a furniture store at Nashua, thoroughly mastering every branch of the business, and in 1837 removed to Augusta, Maine, where he established himself in the manufacture and selling of furniture on Water street of that town, his father having left him a competency in his will and with what he had saved during his clerkship at Nashua gave him a successful start. He later added to his furniture stock crockery and glass ware. This proved to be a paying adjunct to the furniture line, and fully or more profitable, for in 1860 he sold the furniture end of the business to L. C. Avery and made the crockery business his specialty. His store was the most attractive and best stocked in the state and at his death he was the oldest importer of crockery in New England (and one of the largest stores). He carried all the costly lines of French china, having thirty-two stock patterns, and for that time showed the magnitude and character of his trade. He was the first customer in the United States who handled the Reed and Barton hollow ware, when the firm was in its infancy. He continued his business up to October 10, 1881, when he retired from the active end of the business and three years later, December 17, 1884, he died at his residence at 18 Green street. Mr. Pierce was a man of retired habits, passionately fond of his fireside. He was amiable in his manner and a gentleman of the old school, true to his principles which were his religion. He was considered the soul of honor in every dealing, leaving no stain on the page of just accounts. He was by faith a Unitarian and he contributed to the church where his family attended. He was a sterling Andrew Jackson Democrat, remaining strong for the Union during the trying times that beset his country's honor. He would not accept the gift of office from his citizens, but for a time was fence-viewer and tithingman. He was also truant officer of his town. He was a member of the Augusta Lodge of Odd Fellows in his early residence in Maine.

He married, January 8, 1835, Lucy Louisa Corbin, born in Salem, New York, February 21, 1813, died at Augusta, Maine, February 22, 1886, daughter of Asa and Abigail Giles (Hurd) Corbin, of Salem, New York. He attended the public schools of his native town, taking a course in the Augusta high school up to fifteen years of age. During his early manhood years, he was taught the habits of industry and economy. As soon as his schooling was complete, he began by selling papers for a time, later entering the express business where he remained a number of years. During the civil war he received an appointment of government clerk at Augusta and after the war again entered the express business, continuing in this when he entered into the book and stationery trade in Augusta, and has continued in that up to the present time, being one of the leaders in his time. Mr. Pierce is an attendant of the Episcopal church. While not active in the conduct of local affairs, he has always adhered to Democratic principles, being affiliated with that party. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity of Augusta. Is a member of the Abnaki Club of Augusta. He married, June 7, 1871, Emma A. Hutchinson, of Vassalboro, Maine, born October 30, 1848, daughter of John and Betsey Ann (Ladd) Hutchinson. John was a teacher. Children: 1. His educational training was received in the public schools of his native city, graduating from the Augusta high school in 1892. He entered the Augusta National Bank as clerk, remaining in the capacity for one year, subsequently accepting a similar position in the Granite National Bank at Augusta, for a like time. He later came to Boston where for a short time he was cashier of the Kennebec Steamboat Company. Mr. Pierce became identified with the Boston Journal, and was in the employ of this paper about four years as assistant superintendent of the circulation department. In 1897 Mr. Pierce accepted the position of salesman for T. I. Smith & Company, manufacturers of jewelry at North Attleboro, Massachusetts, and became their western representative with headquarters at Chicago. After about five years, at the time of the incorporation of the new firm of T. I. Smith Company in 1901, under Rhode Island laws, Mr. Pierce became a member of the new firm with office of secretary and assistant treasurer, which office he now holds. Mr. Pierce is also salesman for the Western trade to some extent, which he has done since giving up his Chicago office. He occupies a beautiful residence with spacious grounds on Washington street in the residential section of the town. He is an attendant of Grace Episcopal Church at North Attleboro. He is a Republican in politics, and a member of Bethlehem Lodge of Masons at Augusta, Maine. He is a member of North Attleboro Lodge, No. 1011, of Elks, and of the North Attleboro Jewelers' Club. They have one child, Harry Hutchinson, Jr., born November 18, 1902.

John Pers, of Norwich, Norfolk PIERCE county, England, weaver, came to New England in the year 1637, with his wife Elizabeth and four children, either in the "John and Dorothy" of Norwich, or the "Rose" of Yarmouth. The following extract from a register of certain emigrants to New England says: "April the 8th 1637. The examination of John Pers, of Norwich, weaver, aged 49 years, and his wife Elizabeth, aged 36 years, and four children—John, Barbre, Elizabeth and Judith, and one servant, John Gedney, aged 19 years, are desirous to passe to Boston, New England, to inhabitt." Bond and Savage agree in identifying this John Pers with John Pers, of Watertown, who was a weaver and appears to have come over about 1637, and who had a wife Elizabeth and children John, Elizabeth and Judith. If this identification is correct some of his children must have come to New England before him, and the four here named were probably the youngest of the family. Elizabeth was doubtless ten years or more older than she is here represented. She is said in the county records to have been "aged about 79" at the time of her death in 1667.

(1) John Peirce was a freeman of Watertown in 1638, and was one of the original proprietors of this town. He was a grantee of one lot in Watertown, and a purchaser of three lots before 1644, one of which was the homestall of twelve acres, land now bounded north by Belmont street, south by R. Beach, west by W. Parker, east by B. Pierson; this was made up of two lots in the town plot, six acres granted to J. Smith, Sr., and the same to W. Barsham. He was born in 1588, died August 19, 1661. Edward, New York, and at Colby College, Waterville, Maine, from which he was graduated in the class of 1860. He taught in the state normal school for the western half of Maine for a year, in the Uxbridge high school, Uxbridge, Massachusetts, two years, and in the high school at Chicopee Falls for eight years. He then entered upon a business career and during the following five years was president of the Arlington Piano Company. In 1874 he engaged in the retail music trade in Springfield, on Main street, remaining there until his death, April 1, 1908. He was a member of Belcher Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, of Chicopee Falls. In politics he was a Republican, and was a member of South Church, Congregational. Mr. Peirce had traveled extensively, especially in this country while he was engaged in manufacturing. He was a well known and highly esteemed citizen of Springfield. His home was at 247 Union street. He married, April 24, 1862, Mary H. Foster, of Norway, Maine, born July 23, 1839, daughter of William and Calista (Wood) Foster. Children:

1. Leona May Peirce, born August 4, 1863; attended the public schools of Springfield, graduating from the high school, class of 1880; graduated from Smith College, class of 1880; received master's degree in 1893; attended Cornell University two years; then took a course at Newham College, Cambridge, England; at that institution Miss Clough, sister of Arthur Hugh Clough, the poet, was principal, and Miss Helen Gladstone, daughter of the Hon. William E. Gladstone, was vice-principal; upon the death of Miss Clough, Mrs. Henry Sidgwick, sister of Arthur Balfour, was elected to the chair of principal. Upon her return to the United States, Miss Peirce entered Clark University as a student and remained three and a half years, then spent one year at Yale College, receiving the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in 1899, specializing in mathematics; thesis subject was "On Chain Differentials." Miss Peirce was for two years president of the College Club of Springfield, and one year president of the West Massachusetts Branch of the Association of Collegiate Alumni. She has been member of the school board since January 1, 1905, and is a member of the Women's Club.

2. William Foster Peirce, born at Chicopee Falls, Massachusetts, February 3, 1868. At the Springfield high school he was prepared for college, entering Amherst at the early age of sixteen. Although he took the classical course, he was greatly interested in natural science, and until his senior year he expected to become a practical chemist. For two summers during his course he attended the Amherst Summer School, doing laboratory work in science. But in his senior year he elected the study of philosophy with Professor Gorman, and he discovered a decided taste for philosophy, and determined to make the teaching of philosophy his profession. At Amherst he had the honor to be elected to the Senior Scientific Society and to the Phi Beta Kappa Society, and these elections well indicate his all-around scholarship. Being graduated in 1888, he spent a year in business with his father, in which he gained a practical knowledge of bookkeeping and much valuable experience. In 1889 he entered for a year the Graduate School of Cornell University for the study of philosophy and economics. His thesis for the degree of M. A. was presented to his alma mater instead of to Cornell. It was a masterly production on the "Methods of Inducing Introspective Power: one Aspect of the Pedagogics of Psychology". It has since been published as a monograph by the Ohio University. After the course at Cornell, Professor Peirce taught in a boys' boarding school in northern Massachusetts. In January, 1892, he came to the Ohio University at Athens as substitute for the professor of psychology and pedagogy. His work there was so acceptable that the chair of philosophy and ethics was created for him, and he was elected to it. But at the same time he was considering the chair of history and economics in the University of Colorado, and the Spencer and Wolfe Professorships of Mental and Moral Philosophy at Kenyon. Although of the three positions the one at Kenyon was much the least attractive financially, the high reputation of Kenyon in the east and the fact that it was the college of his church, determined him to come to Gambier. He has steadily grown in the esteem of his colleagues and acquaintances. With unusual mental strength and attainments he unites unusual loveliness of character and grace of manner. A profound scholar, he is a man of the times, awake to present day interests. In the spring of 1893 he wrote for the University Magazine of New York some elaborate articles on the college, which were published with handsome illustrations. Since 1896 he has served as president of Kenyon College. His ideals for the college are high, and his interest in all the departments of the institution is intense. He appreciates the purpose and opportunity of Bexley Hall, having himself been ordained to the diaconate in June, 1894, and later to the priesthood.

In June, 1896, President Peirce received the degree of L. H. D. from Hobart College; in 1908 he received the degree of D. D. from Western Reserve. He has served as president of the Ohio Association of College Presidents and Deans, and is now (1909) vice-president of the Ohio Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. He is a member of the County Teachers' Association and of the State Teachers' Association, also of the Society for Psychological and Pedagogical Inquiry, whose membership is limited to twenty-five specialists, and is serving in the capacity of secretary and treasurer.

President Peirce married, June 18, 1891, Louise Fagan, of Hackettstown, New Jersey, the marriage being the outcome of an acquaintance and attachment formed in the Graduate School at Cornell. At the age of eighteen Miss Fagan was graduated from Vassar College. After a year of graduate work at Vassar in philosophy and English she went to Cornell at the same time as Professor Peirce for further work on these lines.

The family of Trowbridge derives its name from its ancient inheritance, Trowbridge, in Devonshire, England, where it resided for many centuries, and which was the property of Peter de Trowbridge, in the reign of Edward I. The name was variously spelled: Trobridge, Troubridge, Trowbridge, Throwbridge, Trobblebridge, Strobridge and Strawbridge, the mode generally adopted now being Trowbridge. Thomas Trowbridge, of Devonshire, died March 15, 1570, seized of Loxbear, Tiverton and Caldwellley in Washfield, Bycott and Easturn.

(1) Thomas Trowbridge, common ancestor of all the Trowbridges in America, emigrated from Taunton, Somersetshire, England, as early as 1636, as Mrs. Trowbridge joined the church in that year, and not improbably as early as 1634, and located at Dorchester, Massachusetts. His youngest child was born there. In an assignment of land the record reads: "January 2, 1637, It is ordered that the parties underwritten shall have each of them satisfaction in lieu of the calves' pasture, from the burying place towards John Phillips, Mr. Trobridge, 1 acre." Same date, "It is ordered that Mr. Trobridge have two acres of marsh, in Mr. Ludlow's neck, where it is out of propriety." March 18, 1637, "The proportion which each man is to have in the neck, according to estate and number of persons, Mr. Trobridge, 7 acres 1 rood 20 rods." "The proportion of town pasture and other lands this side the river, 7 acres 1 rood 20 rods." The following year we find: "It is ordered that Mr. Clark have liberty to take in four rods of land, next his pale, towards the meeting house, which is near the barn that was late Mr. Trowbridge's." October 31, 1638, "It is ordered that Mr. Jones shall have one acre of land, near his own, in lieu of an acre which he bought of Mr. Trobridge, which was appointed him." He undoubtedly removed late in 1638 or early in 1639 to New Haven with the early settlers. His time was mostly spent in making trading voyages between Barbadoes and England. The evidence of his residence in New Haven is the fact that he owned a house and lot there, and his three sons lived there under the care of a servant or steward, named Henry Gibbons, who so neglected his master's affairs that his property was attached for the payment of rates and debts as early as November, 1641. The following year Mr. Trowbridge had cattle at large, and in 1643 he is recorded among the planters with a family of five—himself, wife and three sons—and is rated at five hundred pounds. In February, 1644, Mr. Cheever was allowed four pounds three shillings six pence for teaching Mr. Trowbridge's children. Mr. Trowbridge went to England probably in the latter part of 1644, and never returned to America. The steward Gibbons neglected matters in so shameless a manner, taking no care whatever of the children, that Sergeant Thomas Jeffries, a friend of Mr. Trowbridge, took charge of the latter. In consequence of Gibbon's neglect of the estate it was attached to satisfy the creditors, December 8, 1645. Mr. Trowbridge wrote frequently from England to his sons and the authorities of New Haven to bring Gibbons to account, and finally, January 14, 1664, sent his sons a power of attorney to recover the property from Gibbons, have it divided equally among them and punish the steward. A settlement could not be effected before the death of Mr. Trowbridge, which occurred at Taunton, England, February 7, 1672, and in 1680, Gibbons, for "sundry good causes best known to myself," made over to Thomas Trowbridge, the eldest son, his house and lot and sundry other property, including "the bed and bolster I lie on." He died in 1686, and his brother, William Gibbons, refused to take out letters of administration, and said Thomas Trowbridge was appointed administrator and, as Gibbons had no children, the matter was thus concluded. The sons, after attaining their majority, became men of influence and acquired large estates. There is no record of the name of the wife of Thomas Trowbridge, but his children were: 1. Thomas, mentioned above, born in Taunton, England, in 1632; married (first) Sarah, daughter of Henry and Sarah Rutherford; (second) Hannah, daughter of Major John Nash, and widow of Eliphalet Ball. 2. William, born in Taunton, England, in 1634, married Elizabeth, daughter of Captain George Lamberton, and widow of Daniel Selivant. 3. James, see below.

(II) Deacon James, youngest child of Thomas Trowbridge, immigrant, was born in Dorchester, Massachusetts, in 1636, baptized in 1638, and died May 22, 1717. He was but five years of age when his father removed to New Haven with his family, but returned to Dorchester shortly before attaining his majority, and occupied lands owned by his father prior to his removal. In 1664 he removed to Cambridge Village (now Newton). After the death of his father-in-law, Deacon John Jackson, he was elected to succeed him in office in 1675, the duties of which he discharged until his death, a period of forty-two years. In 1675 he purchased of Deputy Governor Danforth, eighty-five acres of land with dwelling house and outbuildings, on which the deputy-governor had lived many years, and this estate was since that time occupied by descendants of Deacon Trowbridge, and in 1869 was the property of Nathan Trowbridge, seventh in descent from the first settler. Deacon James was chosen one of the first on the board of selectmen when the town was organized, August 27, 1679, and continued in office nine years; also served as clerk of writs, 1692-3, and as lieutenant and representative to the general court, 1700-1703. His will, dated 1709, had a codicil dated 1715 and was proved in June, 1717. The inventory of his personal estate was two hundred and forty pounds seven pence. He bequeathed the right of lands he had in Dorchester, which came of his father, to all his children equally, and all the right to lands that came by his father-in-law, Atherton, to his children by his first wife, equally. He married (first), December 30, 1659, Margaret, died August 17, 1672, daughter of Major General Humphrey Atherton; children: Elizabeth, married John Myrick; Mindwell, married Jonathan Fuller; John, married (first) Sarah Wilson, (second) unknown; Margaret, married Hon. Ebenezer Stone; Thankful, married Deacon Richard Ward; Mary, married ——— Stedman; Hannah, married John Greenwood, Esq. Deacon James married (second), January 30, 1674, Margaret, born 1649, died September 16, 1727, daughter of Deacon John Jackson; children: Experience, married Samuel Wilson; Thomas, married (first) unknown, (second) Mary Goffe, (third) Susanna ———; Deliverance, married Eleazer Ward; James, married Hannah Bacon; William, see forward; Abigail, probably never married; Caleb, married (first) Sarah Oliver, (second) Hannah Walter.

(III) William, third son and fifth child of Deacon James and Margaret (Jackson) Trowbridge, was born November 19, 1684, and died November 19, 1744. He was selectman, lieutenant, and deacon of the church at Newton. His will, dated 1744, gives five pounds to the church "to be loaned out so as not to depreciate," the interest to be given to such poor widows as the deacons judged proper; to son James two hundred pounds; Huldah and Mary, each one hundred pounds; Margaret, two hundred pounds; Beulah, two hundred pounds; Thaddeus, fifty pounds; children of his daughter Mary Coolidge, three hundred and twenty-five pounds; his wife Sarah, fifty pounds; the residue of his estate to Lieutenant Joseph Fuller, Lieutenant William Hyde, Deacon John Stone and Thomas Greenwood, in trust for his wife Sarah during her life. At her decease two-thirds of his real estate and one-quarter of his grist mill to his son Thaddeus, and he to pay his son James one-quarter of its value. William Trowbridge married (first), December 14, 1708, Sarah, died June 1, 1720, daughter of John Ward, Jr., and took the end of his father-in-law's house; children: Mary, married Richard Coolidge; William, died young; Huldah, died young; William, died in infancy; Huldah, married Isaac Stedman; James, married Jerusha Park; and two daughters, stillborn. He married (second), May 30, 1721, Sarah, who was born March 2, 1694, and died September 10, 1787, daughter of Francis Fullum, Esq., and had children: Sarah, died young; Margaret, married John Druce and settled in Wrentham, Massachusetts; Beulah, married Stephen Winchester; Thaddeus, see forward; Abigail, died young.

(IV) Thaddeus, only son and fourth child of William and Sarah (Fullum) Trowbridge, was born in Newton, Massachusetts, November 20, 1728, and died there January 6, 1777. He took over his father's homestead at about the time of his marriage. He married, May 20, 1749, Mary, born April 11, 1731, died April 9, 1813, daughter of Lieutenant Moses and Esther (Woodward) Craft, of Newton. Lieutenant Moses Craft was selectman in 1744-45, and in Colonel Choates' regiment at the time of the capture of Louisburg. After the death of her husband Mrs. Trowbridge married, October 1, 1780, Lieutenant John Rogers, a blacksmith, and an ingenious maker of clocks and machines of various kinds; he came from Boston and resided in Newton, on the Roxbury highway, where he died October 19, 1815, at the age of ninety-one years. Thaddeus and Mary (Craft) Trowbridge had children: Mary, married Joseph Hall, of Richmond, Vermont, son of Stephen and Sarah (Taft) Hall, of Sutton, Massachusetts; Edmund, see forward; Esther, married John Wiswall, of Newton, a soldier during the revolutionary war; Samuel, married (first) Elizabeth, daughter of Phineas and Thankful (Fuller) Bond, (second) Ruth (Fuller) Trowbridge, widow of his brother Edmund.

(V) Edmund, eldest son and second child of Thaddeus and Mary (Craft) Trowbridge, was born in Newton, October 30, 1752, and died there July 30, 1812. He served during the revolutionary war, as corporal in Captain Amariah Fuller's company, which marched at the alarm of April 18, 1775, to headquarters at Cambridge; also in Captain Abraham Pierce's company, Colonel Eleazer Brooks' regiment of guards, February 3, 1778, to April 3, 1778, at Cambridge; as sergeant in Captain Edward Fuller's company (First Newton), Colonel Thatcher's regiment, entered camp September 2, 1778, discharged September 4, 1778. October 1, 1798, he paid direct tax of United States on two thousand three hundred sixty-four dollars. January 4, 1801, Captain Edmund Trowbridge, his son, was one of a committee of five appointed to devise such plan as they should think proper in connection with the Hon. William Hull, relative to the establishment of an academy within the town; and in 1833 the widow of Edmund Sr. kept the boarding house in connection with this institution. November 19, 1805, Edmund Trowbridge purchased a pew in the new church for one hundred and three dollars. He married (first), December 15, 1774, Elizabeth, born in Newton, March 20, 1753, died February 22, 1799, daughter of Captain Jeremiah and Elizabeth (Murdock) Wiswall; children: John, born October 14, 1775, married Eunice Stone; Edmund, July 16, 1777, married Mary Stone; William, November 23, 1779, married Anna Woodward; Polly, August 11, 1782, married Timothy Emerson; Nathaniel, July 7, 1784, married Martha F. Hall; Reuben, August 13, 1789, married Eliza Smith, and settled in Baltimore, Maryland; Elisha, August 3, 1797, married Margaret Stimson, and settled in Portland, Maine. Edmund Trowbridge married (second), January 11, 1800, Ruth, born July 19, 1752, died July 11, 1835, daughter of Captain Edward and Ruth (Jackson) Fuller; children: Ruth, born February 8, 1801, married William Wiswall; Stephen Winchester, see forward; Elizabeth W., born February 6, 1805, married Luther Davis.

(VI) Stephen Winchester, only son and second child of Edmund and Ruth (Fuller) Trowbridge, was born at Newton, Massachusetts, June 26, 1802, and died there October 10, 1853. He was very young when his father died, and was adopted by his maternal uncle, Deacon Ezra Fuller, a well-to-do farmer, on the road to Waltham. There Stephen was raised, attending the district school and becoming proficient in his studies. Later he taught school in West Newton, and in the intervals between school sessions worked on the farm. He entered into farming for himself in West Newton, in Washington street, near the site of the present depot, and was successful. In 1835 he removed to Newton, where he established himself as a wheelwright, having served an apprenticeship with one of the leading carriage builders. He soon opened a shop at the corner of Pearl and Galen streets, where he continued as a manufacturer of carriages and heavy vehicles up to the time of his death. He also manufactured hay cutters, and many times exchanged these for the products of the district as was the custom of those days. In business and in his home life he was an exemplary man, a devoted husband and loving father, a true friend to the poor, and the afflicted and despised reckoned upon him as one of their most steadfast helpers. He was also foremost in the cause of temperance. In politics he was a Whig, and filled many important offices in the gift of the town; he served as assessor for many years, was selectman, overseer of the poor, and chief of the fire department. He was a member of the Newton Freedom Association, and a staunch supporter of the anti-slavery movement. He was one of the number who organized the church, and was ever afterward its most punctual attendant. He was deacon from 1840 until his death, was clerk of the Society for twenty-five years, led the choir for the same length of time, was teacher in the Sunday school and its superintendent. He married, May 4, 1826, Sarah Emmons, born in Boston, March 13, 1806, died in Newton, June 4, 1886, daughter of Amasa and Sarah (Crane) Murdock, of Boston; children: 1. Louis Armitage, born January 27, 1864; vi. Mabel T., born May 9, 1866. 3. Eliza Davis, born April 4, 1831; married, May 29, 1849, Benjamin Stow Wetherbee, of Newton; children: i. Charles Clarence, born July 15, 1853, died September 5, 1854; ii. Helen Frances, born July 25, 1855, married, June 13, 1877, Gilman Bradford Paine, of Holbrook, Massachusetts, and had Harold Clark, born July 18, 1879, died December 4, 1901; Nellie Gertrude, married, April 4, 1904, Edward Marcey Hill, of Boston. 4. Stephen Winchester, see forward. 5. Francis Mortimor, born November 10, 1839, died January 28, 1883; married, February 18, 1863, Abbie Ann Learned, of Watertown. 6. Theodore William, born June 5, 1845, died February 8, 1905; married, October 14, 1874, Almira A. Moulton, of Providence, Rhode Island; children: i. Herbert Moulton, born July 5, 1876; married, June 8, 1904, Rosalie Wood, of Trinidad, California; ii. Julia Moulton, born March 6, 1886, died April 15, 1888.

(VII) Stephen Winchester, eldest son and fourth child of Stephen Winchester and Sarah Emmons (Murdock) Trowbridge, was born at Newton, Massachusetts, October 5, 1834, and died there January 12, 1907. He attended the district school in Washington street and other schools of the town, and was then placed in the old Chauncey Hall School in Boston, then one of the best preparatory schools in the country. He was nineteen years of age when his father died, and he immediately took up the burdens and responsibilities of the family. He commenced as a grocery clerk in the store of Andrew Cole, of Newton, where he remained a year or two, and having perfected himself in accounting, entered the employ of Wetherell Brothers, wholesale dealers in ribbons, laces, etc., in Boston. He served them faithfully for some years, then became identified with the insurance business and located at Brighton in the interest of the Citizens' Fire Insurance Company of Boston, of which Edward Sparhawk was the president. He was soon advanced to their Boston office as a bookkeeper and a worker in other departments, rose by his energy and close application to business to the position of secretary, an office he filled for a period of sixteen years, was also treasurer for a time, and later served as president for five years. Altogether he was connected with the company for more than twenty years. He resigned the presidency about 1877 and engaged in the study of law, though he frequently expressed his regret that he lacked a college education. His ambition, however, led him to take up the study, and he entered the Boston Law School in 1876, and at the end of three years was admitted to the bar, having completed a four years' course in three years. He was graduated in the same class with William E. Russell, who became governor of the state, and who was a close friend of Mr. Trowbridge. He devoted his life henceforth to the practice of the profession, establishing his office in the Davenport Building, corner of Court and Washington streets, and living at the corner of Tremont and Brookline streets during his sojourn in Boston. He was appointed judge of the Brighton municipal court, filling the office with dignity. About the middle of the nineties he was obliged to relinquish his practice, his health becoming impaired, his eyesight failing, and finally he became totally blind. This misfortune was thought to be due to overstrain while in pursuit of his legal studies. He died in his home on Bradford road, Newton Highlands, surrounded by those he loved. He was a staunch supporter of the Republican party, voting whenever he was able to do so, yet never accepting public office, holding that a good citizen's first duty was toward his family. Like his father, he was a sturdy upholder of temperance principles, and prominent in the Channing church of Newton; he possessed a fine baritone voice, had charge of the singing there for a long period, and also sang in the Park Street Church and St. Paul's Church, in Boston, and the Unitarian Church in Cambridge. He affiliated with the Masonic fraternity as a member of Pequossette Lodge, at Watertown, from which he was demitted, and joined Dalhousie Lodge at Newtonville, June 13, 1861, of which he was worshipful master several years, and was elected honorary member May 8, 1895. Mr. Trowbridge was possessed of rare judgment and great foresight, qualities which enabled him to attain prominence both in his business and legal career. While of a retiring nature, his genial and amiable disposition brought him a host of friends. He married, August 19, 1856, Mary Rebecca, born in Boston, May 10, 1834, daughter of Daniel and Rebecca (Clark) Baird, the former born in Wilmington, Massachusetts, December 23, 1776, and was a housewright in Boston. Mr.

and Mrs. Trowbridge had children: 1. Mary Charlotte, born April 18, 1862; married, May 5, 1880, Charles Hall Adams, born March 6, 1853, son of Charles B. F. and Sophia (Hall) Adams, of Boston, and resides in Brighton; children: Lawrence Trowbridge, born June 16, 1881, died February 3, 1882; Charles Lloyd, born March 19, 1887, is a member of firm of Lockwood, Adams Company, importers, No. 222 State street, Boston. 2. Caroline Winchester, born March 30, 1867, died March 27, 1892; married, February 9, 1891, Willis Clark Curtis, of Cambridge, Massachusetts. 3. Gertrude Wyoming, born April 9, 1869; married, May 30, 1894, Arthur Robert Torrey, of Cambridge, Massachusetts; now residing at Newton Highlands; children: Abbott Trowbridge, born April 25, 1895; Katherine, May 29, 1897; Arthur Robert, Jr., October 8, 1899; Stephen Winchester, October 2, 1901; Edith, September 27, 1903.

(VII) Lewis, son of Lazarus Andrews and Bethia (Lewis) Beals, was born in Weymouth, October 13, 1793, and died May 10, 1882. He was a mason by trade. He married Sarah S. Harding, born November 1, 1796, died September 4, 1858. Children: 1. Elias Smith, born October 20, 1814; mentioned below. 2. Mary H., December 17, 1816. 3. (VIII) Elias Smith, son of Lewis and Sarah S. (Harding) Beals, was born at Weymouth October 20, 1814, and died February 11, 1897, aged eighty-two years. He attended the public schools of his native town, and for about three years worked with his father at the mason's trade. When he was about eighteen years old he learned the trade of shoemaker, and for a few years worked at cutting and making shoes for neighboring manufacturers. In 1838 he took a large lot of boots and shoes for the Weymouth manufacturers and sailed for Savannah, Georgia, where he disposed of part of his consignment, selling most of the remainder in Charleston, South Carolina. This was his first business venture, and was most successful. On his trip from Savannah to Charleston he sailed on board the first steamship that crossed the Atlantic. In a furious gale the boat parted with all but one of her cables and was in imminent danger of being lost with all on board. During the storm, however, a passing vessel took off the passengers, the transfer being made at the risk of their lives, and the port of Charleston was made in safety. After a week or two Mr. Beals took passage in the ship "Leland," and after a very rough voyage arrived home safely. He then began in a small way to manufacture boots and shoes and also kept a small country store. Later he built a factory at Torrey's Corner, and continued as a manufacturer and merchant until 1849, when he went to New Orleans, Louisiana, and in company with others carried on a jobbing trade in boots and shoes for about two years. Returning to Weymouth, he built a large factory and began to make shoes for the southern market, and studying the tastes and requirements of his customers soon established a profitable business. He was always enterprising and seeking new and improved methods for use in his business. He purchased and ran the first sewing machine for shoes, ever used in Weymouth, and soon afterward bought another. In the first year of their use these two machines saved him a thousand dollars in the cost of production. The outbreak of the civil war, however, broke up his trade, as nearly all his customers were from the south, so he was obliged to discontinue his factory.

On account of his age he was not able to enlist for the war, but he sent a substitute, thus doing all he could in aid of the government. He took an active part in local politics, and in 1855-56 served as selectman of Weymouth, and in 1859 as representative to the state legislature, where he served on the committee on schools and others. It was almost wholly through his efforts that the toll privileges of the Hingham and Quincy bridges were abolished by the legislature. Through his earnest endeavors in this matter he was brought in contact with almost the entire senatorial body, and as a result of this acquaintance in 1862 a petition was circulated in the senate directed to the authorities in Washington, requesting his appointment as internal revenue assessor for the Second District of Massachusetts. He was appointed to the position and retained it until the administration of Andrew Johnson. Three months later he acted as special agent for the Treasury Department to instruct the revenue service, and received his honorable discharge in 1868. He was a Republican in politics, and prior to 1883 was town auditor for many years, and justice of the peace at the time of his death. He added to his business that of insurance agent, placed risks in more than a hundred companies, and in all his business lost less than one thousand dollars. He was a director in two national banks, president of the Village Improvement Society many years, and held the office of park commissioner. He was senior member of the firm of Beals, Torrey & Company, now the Beals & Torrey Shoe Company, engaged in shoe manufacturing in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. His interest in the improvement of his native town was shown in a substantial manner by his gift of the park at North Weymouth, which bears his name and is a lasting monument to his memory. As a tribute to his services as a public citizen the hook and ladder company in his ward assumed his name, and his portrait hangs in their hall. He was a member of Orphans' Hope Lodge of Free Masons, and a charter member of the Century Club. In religion he was an active worker in the Third Universalist Church, of which he was treasurer many years. Mr. Beals was a man of high ideals, and was frank and outspoken in his opinions. He was a faithful public officer and honorable in all his dealings. His efforts through life were crowned with that success which comes of intelligently directed and persistent energy.

Mr. Beals married Betsey T. Burrell, born in North Weymouth, January 20, 1819, died May 26, 1894, daughter of Ancil and Eliza L. Burrell; Ancil Burrell was son of Robert Burrell. She was educated in the public schools and in the private school of Joseph Corlew, a teacher of note in his day. Her home was her delight, and she spent her whole life to make it cheerful and happy. At her funeral the officiating clergymen were Rev. B. F. Eaton and Rev. I. D. Morrison, and the interment was in Old North Cemetery. Children: 1. Augustus, born August 16, 1837, died April 17, 1893; married (first) Abbie F. Lovell; children: i. Clara Emily, married John Taylor; ii. (IX) Elias Franklin, son of Elias Smith and Betsey T. (Burrell) Beals, was born in Weymouth, September 27, 1841, died August 30, 1906. He received his education at the public and high school of Weymouth, and in 1861, at the age of nineteen, at the first call for volunteers, enlisted in Company H, Twelfth Massachusetts Infantry, for three years, and was made a corporal. He was disabled by a gunshot wound in the leg at the battle of Fredericksburg, December 13, 1862, and as a result, in the spring of 1863, he was honorably discharged. When he had recovered from the effects of his wound he determined to go west. In 1867 he went to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and opened a shoe jobbing business on Huron street, as junior member of the firm of Mann & Beals. The business prospered, and soon the quarters became too small and another location on West Water street was secured. After a few years Mr. Beals bought out the interests of his partner and the name of the firm was changed to Beals, Torrey & Company. This firm later was incorporated under the title of Beals and Torrey Shoe Company, removing to Buffalo street. Mr. Beals was made president of the corporation, which office he held until his death. He was a prominent Mason, joining Independent Lodge, March 17, 1873; Kilburn Royal Arch Chapter, No. 1, March 28, 1873; Ivanhoe Commandery, No. 24, March 24, 1897; he was also a member of Wisconsin Consistory, up to and including the thirty-second degree, Imperial Council, and Tripoli

He was educated in the public schools of Weymouth, and at the age of nineteen went to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and entered the shoe firm of Mann & Beals. He was in this firm at the time it was changed to Beals, Torrey & Company, and later when it was incorporated as Beals & Torrey Shoe Company was elected secretary and treasurer, which offices he held until his death. He was a member of Lafayette Lodge of Masons; Ivanhoe Commandery, Knights Templar; Wisconsin Consistory, up to and including the thirty-second degree; and Tripoli Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He was also a member of the board of directors of the Milwaukee Industrial Exposition. He married Etta E. Fowle, and had one son, Frederick E., born 1885.

(The Burrell Line).

The surname Burrill, Burrell or Burwell, is of English origin. John Burrill, a shoemaker, came to Roxbury, Massachusetts, as early as 1634, and died in 1654-6 leaving a widow Sarah and daughter Sarah, the latter born in July, 1634. Many of the Burrill families of New England trace their lineages to George Burrill, Sr., who was in Lynn, Massachusetts, before 1637, who doubtless came from Boston, England.

He was discharged on account of disability in April, 1863. He was unable to work for a long time after he came home, and then he entered the employ of his father-in-law, who was collector of internal revenue and had an insurance agency. This is a Welsh name of great antiquity, it having been in common use at the time of MORGAN William the Conqueror, and appearing on records for some centuries prior to that period. The founder of the Pelagian theory was a Welshman, whose name of Morgan was thus translated, its exact meaning being: Of the sea, sea born or by the sea. The coats-of-arms of the various branches of the family differ but little, except in the crest; they are all alike in the color of the shield and the main device, which is an escutcheon in green bearing a lion rampant in gold.

(I) Richard Morgan, immigrant ancestor of the family in this country, was one of several bearing the surname who were identified with the early settlement of New England. He arrived in Portsmouth prior to 1658, and was probably induced to come to America by the freedom of religious thought enjoyed by those in the new world. He soon settled at Dover, as we find him taxed there, November 22, 1659. He was prominent among those who settled Exeter, the records showing that he had land there, March 29, 1668; his grants in that settlement were: Twenty acres, October 10, 1664; sixty acres, March 30, 1681; one hundred acres, February 21, 1698. He was one of the sixteen sued by Mason to recover land. He took the oath of allegiance, November 30, 1677, and was one of the garrison of Exeter in 1696. Children: Richard, Jr., born about 1670, married, March 17, 1699, Abigail Harris; John, see forward; Abraham, born about 1680.

(II) John, son of Richard Morgan, was probably born in Exeter, New Hampshire, about 1675, and died at Stratham, New Hampshire, September 29, 1745, in the home of his brother Abraham. He lived in Hampton, New Hampshire, on the "Falls" side, where all his children were born, and he paid a tax there in 1709 on a large tract of land which he owned. He served in Captain Samuel Chesley's company during the French and Indian war, and took part in the Port Royal expedition. He married, July 10, 1700, Deborah, born June 27, 1679, daughter of Timothy and Naomi (Sleeper) Blake, of Hampton. Children: Luther, see forward; Joanna, born August 4, 1703; ———, born September 24, 1707; married, December 31, 1724, Mary Dearborn; Timothy, October 24, 1710; married, June 16, 1735, Betsey Massey; Deborah, April 27, 1813; Anna, September 8, 1721.

(III) Luther, eldest child of John and Deborah (Blake) Morgan, was born in Hampton, May 1, 1701, and died in Pembroke, New Hampshire, December 10, 1768. He was a yeoman at Pembroke and, December 3, 1760, the proprietors of the town deeded to him six acres in the Gore, and to his son Nathaniel three-quarters of an acre. Since that time members of the family have lived on the farm, which was later in the possession of the great-grandson of Luther, George P. Morgan. This farm was deeded in 1738 to Benjamin Holt, and in 1749 purchased from him by Luther Morgan. It was located in the extreme southern part of the township, near Suncook village. Son Nathaniel built what is now the front part of the house, and it was later repaired and improved. Luther Morgan married, August 1, 1723, Abigail, born in Pembroke, February 22, 1703, died March 30, 1785, daughter of Nathaniel and Sarah (Nason) Sanborn. Children: Abigail, born in 1725, married, about 1750, Samuel Smith, of Suncook; Rachel, born in 1729, married, about 1756, John Fellows, of Kensington; Nathaniel, born May 16, 1731; Deborah, 1735; Edward, 1737; Jeremiah, see forward.

(IV) Jeremiah, youngest child of Luther and Abigail (Sanborn) Morgan, was born in Pembroke, New Hampshire, August 18, 1741, and died in the same town, July 21, 1819. He was a farmer and blacksmith, of large stature and great strength, and a prosperous citizen. April 21, 1817, James Wallace, Jeremiah Morgan and Jeremiah Morgan, Jr., with their home farms and all in the district living south of them, were constituted school district No. 8. He was a soldier during the war of the revolution. July 24, 1777, Nathaniel Stead Jr., gave to Jeremiah Morgan four pounds ten shillings "for doing a part of a turn for 2 months servis in the Armeey." Later he was in the alarm list and training band of the First Pembroke company, Colonel Daniel Moore, known as the English company, and December 30, 1777, they petitioned the New Hampshire general assembly to be annexed to Colonel Suckney's regiment. April 12, 1776, he signed the oath of allegiance. He married, January 12, 1764, Elizabeth, born in Pembroke, January 21, 1742, died there, April 11, 1815, daughter of Deacon David and Elizabeth (Chandler) Lovejoy. Children: 1. Elizabeth, born May 31, 1765; married, December 13, 1787, Joseph Mann, of Pembroke. 2. David, born December 18, 1766, died December 13, 1854; married, July 27, 1788, Lois Ladd; children: Truelove Ladd, born July 11, 1789; David, March 9, 1792; Jeremiah, September 8, 1796; Lois, April 6, 1798; Jesse, September 11, 1800; Seth, June 18, 1803; Ira, December 3, 1805; Lucinda, August 14, 1809. 3. William, see forward. 4. Priscilla, born July 13, 1773, died April 12, 1862; married, December 26, 1797, John Johnson. 5. Jeremiah, born August 12, 1776, died April 12, 1839; married, October 8, 1797, Abigail Johnson; children: Mary, born June 24, 1801, died June 5, 1873; Melinda, born March 10, 1803, died May 12, 1856; Cynthia, born December 9, 1804, died December 22, 1892; Nathaniel, born October 21, 1806; Eleanor Johnson, born December 30, 1808, died May 4, 1858. 6. Sally, born May 31, 1781; married, April 26, 1805, Enoch Holt.

(V) William, second son and third child of Jeremiah and Elizabeth (Lovejoy) Morgan, was born in Pembroke, April 21, 1769, and died in Bow, New Hampshire, November 24, 1825. He resided on the paternal farm until his marriage, when he moved to one of his own in the southern part of the town. Subsequently he disposed of this, and April 27, 1800, removed with his family to Bow, New Hampshire. He was successful in his undertakings and became a man of wealth and influence. He was active in the interests of the Congregational church at Bow, of which he was a devoted member. He married, November 1, 1787, Betsey, born October 20, 1767, died August 20, 1842, daughter of James Russ. Children: James, see forward; Amos, married Betsey Dunklee; Asa, married Clarissa Colby; Jeremiah, married Abiah Colby; Martha, married John Ypton; Betsey, married Willoughby Colby.

(VI) James, eldest child of William and Betsey (Russ) Morgan, was born in Pembroke, November 12, 1789, and died in Bow, New Hampshire, July 20, 1872. He was eleven years of age when his father bought a large tract of land in Bow, and he and five of the other children of the family had but small chance of obtaining the regular schooling of the time. He was, however, of an observant and quick nature and ready to take advantage of any opportunity that presented itself. He worked with his head as well as his hands, and by the time he attained manhood had more than a fair amount of knowledge. At the time of his marriage he built a small house in the woods near his father's farm, cut timber, made charcoal, made huge stone walls, and spent his evenings in shaving shingles. His wife assisted him to the fullest extent. She spun wool and flax on the "big" and "little" wheels and wove many yards of cloth in addition to managing her large household. Shortly after the birth of their ninth child an epidemic of measles and dysentery carried off four of their children within sixteen days. He built two large barns and outbuildings, and in 1834, on an attractive rise well back from the road, a two-story residence. He was accounted a progressive farmer, and the cultivation of his one hundred acres compared favorably with the best in the section. He made a specialty of growing hops on a large scale, kept forty to sixty sheep, twenty head of cattle, and was exceedingly proud of his sleek oxen, which he used in his lumbering industry. He worked for a time for the Androscoggin Lumber Company and for Quaker Rogers, a well known lumberman. During the winter of 1831-2 he teamed in Hebron, clearing two hundred dollars, which he donated to the Bow Baptist church, of which he was a deacon. He was very generous, hospitable and charitable, his home being open to the poor to such an extent that it was known as the "Pilgrim's Tavern." He served the town as selectman, and was representative to the New Hampshire general court, 1844-5. For several years he and his wife cared for the town's poor, receiving but slight recompense for their efforts. Their home passed into the hands of strangers in 1863 and they lived with their children. In 1869 Captain A. B. Farmer, a son-in-law, purchased the property, repaired and improved the buildings and land, planting vines, shrubs and numerous elms, and the place has since been known as "The Elms." Mr. and Mrs. Morgan were both possessed of fine voices and frequently rode long distances in order to assist at concerts.

He married, at Bow, July 28, 1812, Fanny, born in Bow, November 20, 1789, died in Hookset, New Hampshire, October 26, 1872, daughter of Eliphalet and Eunice (Parks) Rowell, of Bow. Children: 1. (VII) John Johnson, tenth son and thirteenth child of James and Fanny (Rowell) Morgan, was born in Bow, New Hampshire, December 10, 1833. His education was acquired in the district school of his native town, and he assisted with the farm labors until he was twenty years of age, when he entered the factory of Charles Austin to learn the trade of organ reed and reedboard making, from March, 1853, to May, 1856. He then went to Boston to Mr. Austin's warerooms, taking charge of the sales of organs, and at the end of eight months returned to Concord, New Hampshire, and entered into a contract with Mr. Austin to take charge of the reed and tuning department, having his own workmen and sharing in the profits with Mr. Austin. After ten years he formed a partnership with Alfred Davis, under the firm name of Davis & Morgan, in the manufacture of organ reeds and reedboards for the trade in the United States and Canada. The factory was in Concord, and at the expiration of one year Mr. Morgan sold his interest in the concern to his partner and commenced the construction of machinery for the Smith American Organ Company in Boston. He had contracted to remain with this firm for one year in order to get the new machinery into proper working order, but remained with them twenty years in all, in time becoming superintendent. He went to Worcester, Massachusetts, for one year, in 1874, becoming financially interested in the Munroe Organ Reed Company, but in 1875 sold his stock in this undertaking and returned to the Smith American Organ Company. At the completion of his term of service with this company he devoted some time to the invention of an organ reed which differed essentially from others in an important particular. He spent ten years in inventing the machine necessary to manufacture this reed, but owing to the old style being so firmly established, this venture did not prove a financial success. About 1895 Mr. Morgan started in the general piano business, having warerooms in Boylston street, South Boston, for two years, then removed his business to Needham, where he had previously resided and purchased, in September, 1873, the Whitaker place, a fine homestead in the center of the town, consisting of about twelve acres. His trade is very flourishing, extending over a large section. His political affiliations are with the Republican party, and he is a member of the Evangelical Congregational Church, of Needham, having served on its standing committee and as superintendent of its Sunday school, and also as choir director. He married, October 5, 1856, at Concord, New Hampshire, Eveline Brown, born in Bow, July 30, 1838, daughter of Richard Wheeler and Drusilla (Colby) Goodhue. Children: 1. Georgia Eveline, born March 4, 1858, died August 21, 1863. 2. John Edwin, born October 23, 1859, died August 21, 1863. 3. Jennie Frances, born October 27, 1860, died December 30, 1861. 4. Lewis Edson, see forward. 5. Lizzie Ellen, born August 10, 1864. 6. Anson Winfield, born January 12, 1867. 7. Walter Edward, born October 20, 1872; married, December 10, 1889, Daisy M., daughter of John F. and Alice (Littlefield) Moore, of Needham; children: Alice Marion, born February 15, 1891; Amy Eveline, June 1, 1892; Adele, June 9, 1895; John Moore, July 20, 1898. 8. Lottie May, born June 25, 1875; married Charles Measure, of Needham, and has: Beatrice and Walter.

(VIII) Dr. Lewis Edson Morgan, second

son and fourth child of John Johnson and Eveline Brown (Goodhue) Morgan, was born in Concord, New Hampshire, January 25, 1863. His preliminary course of study was pursued in the various towns and cities in which the family resided, being partly in private and partly in public schools. He then commenced a preparatory course of study to fit himself for entrance to Harvard University, but his health becoming impaired by close application, he was compelled to take a complete rest of one year. Upon his return he was made assistant principal of the Needham high school, a position he held for three years, then entered the Harvard Medical School and was graduated in 1892 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He studied abroad for a period of two years, taking a course in the Dublin (Ireland) Maternity Hospital, in addition to his study of special branches in London, Berlin and Paris, during this time being awarded eleven diplomas. While in the Maternity Hospital at Dublin he officiated successfully in seventeen hundred labor cases. He studied bacteriology under Koch and Guenter, and surgery with the late von Bergman; diseases of women with Martin and Oldshausen; general medicine with Klemperer, Senator and Krause; took a course in Paris at the Pasteur College; in Berlin served as interne at Charité Hospital. Upon his return to this country Dr. Morgan established himself in the practice of his profession at Malden, Massachusetts, after one year removing to Needham, where he remained for a period of four years, then removed to Brookline, Massachusetts, which he has since made his permanent home, now residing at No. 1740 Beacon street. He makes a specialty of surgical operations, particularly those connected with abdominal diseases, and is frequently called in consultation with other physicians. While residing at Needham he was assistant superintendent of the Congregational Sunday school and had charge of the organ music. He also served as auditor of the town for three years. He is a Republican in political principle, and an attendant at the Harvard Congregational Church in Brookline. At various periods he has been or is at the present time associated with the following named organizations: Was a member of the Royal Arcanum, Golden Cross and Good Templars; is a member of Norfolk Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, of Needham; of Tabernacle Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, of Malden; of Gethsemane Commandery, Knights Templar, of Newtonville; was a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company and assistant surgeon; is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, Harvard Medical Alumni, American Medical Association, Norfolk District Medical Society, and Brookline Medical Club.

Dr. Morgan married, October 2, 1889, Edith Atwood, born in Shrewsbury, Massachusetts, February 2, 1869, daughter of Thomas and Ellen (Lawrence) Rice, the former proprietor of a tannery in Shrewsbury. Children: Samuel Rice, born July 18, 1890; Ruth Goodhue, December 10, 1897.

The McElwain family in America is of Scotch origin, or Scotch-Irish, having sojourned for a short time in the north of Ireland on the way from Scotland to this country. Families of the name are numerous in the north of Ireland, in the counties of Antrim, Down and Armagh, province of Ulster. The name is also spelled McElwane, McIlwain, McIlvaine, etc. Charles Petit McIlvaine, one of the ablest bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America, is probably the most widely known member of the family.

(I) James McElwain, immigrant ancestor, with his two sons, James and Timothy, came over previous to 1727. In 1728, he bought of Lamb & Company one hundred acres of land at the junction of the Ware and Swift rivers, in what was known as the "Elbow Tract." This he sold in 1729 to Green & Walker, merchants of Boston. At this time he called himself of New Marlborough, and in 1733 his widow Elenor quit-claimed her right of dower in the same land, dating it "New Marlborough, or Kingsfield." In 1729 he received pay from the town for a journey to Boston, to present a petition to the general court in regard to the titles to the land bought of this company. He was collector of rates for the town, clerk of the church, and on a committee to provide a site for the meeting house. His farm was in that part of the "Elbow Tract" which was set off as the town of Western (now Warren) Massachusetts. He died in 1730. Children: 1. James, sold his land and returned to Ireland; never married. 2. Timothy, mentioned below.

(II) Timothy, son of James McElwain, was born in 1709, and died September 7, 1790. He came to New England with his father and was granted a hundred acre lot near his father's. In 1733 he served on a committee to lay out highways, also on a committee to select a site for the meeting house. He was constable in 1774, and was a taxpayer of Palmer in 1786. He married (first) August 24, 1738, Anna Spear, who died April 28, 1746. He married (second) August 10, 1750, Susannah Thomson. Children: 1. Sarah, born August 24, 1739; married, December 1, 1761, Timothy Ferrell. 2. Betty, born March 24, 1741; married, May 19, 1764, John King. 3. John Allen, born March 12, 1743; married August, 1779. 4. Timothy, born April 17, 1746, mentioned below. 5. Samuel, born June 18, 1751; married, June 2, 1776, Sarah Ferrell. 6. Anna, born February 27, 1753; married, July 9, 1778, Adonijah Jones. 7. Elizabeth, born January 31, 1755; married Israel Jones. 8. Elenor, born June 29, 1757. 9. Roger, born August 23, 1759; married, November 29, 1790, Delina Hill.

(III) Captain Timothy McElwain, son of Timothy McElwain, was born April 17, 1746 and died November 6, 1830, aged eighty-four. He lived in Middlefield, Massachusetts. The house which he built in 1797 on his farm on the hill tops, still stands, in excellent preservation, a fine example of simple old colonial architecture, and of a size to meet the needs of his good old-fashioned family of twelve children. The place has come down in regular succession in the family, being now occupied by his great-grandson, Edwin Smith McElwain. He married, in Somers, Connecticut, January 9, 1772, Jane Brown, who died January 2, 1832, aged eighty-one. He served in the Revolutionary War, and was a prominent military figure in his day. Children: 1. Timothy, born October 21, 1772. 2. Anne, born June 12, 1774. 3. Jane, born September 24, 1776; died January 7, 1787. 4. Alexander, born November 9, 1778. 5. James, born February 22, 1781. 6. George Washington, born May 4, 1783. 7. Betsey, born August 18, 1785. 8. Sarah, born March 30, 1787. 9. David, born April 19, 1789. 10. Jennet, born March 31, 1791. 11. Jonathan, born June 11, 1793; see forward. 12. Laney, born June 21, 1795.

(IV) Jonathan, son of Timothy McElwain, was born at Middlefield, June 11, 1793, died February 23, 1866. He lived all his life on the McElwain place. A broad minded man, he was thoroughly devoted to the town and its interests, at one time representing his district in the legislature. His breadth of view is well illustrated by the fact that, when Mary Lyon went through that section soliciting money for the founding of Mt. Holyoke, an institution for the education of women, he contributed one hundred dollars, no small sum for the New England farmer of that day, and this in spite of the fact that he himself had five sons and no daughters to educate. Only two other men in the town subscribed to the fund. He married, October 15, 1818, Lucy Smith, of Middlefield. Children:

1. Jonathan (2nd), born July 14, 1819, died January 23, 1899. He succeeded his father on the farm and was also prominent in town affairs, holding the office of town clerk for nearly thirty years, and that of secretary of the Highland Agricultural Society for many years. He married (first) May 20, 1847, Clarissa Lyman, of Chester; (second) December, 1852, Mary Smith, of Salisbury, Connecticut. Children: i. Albert, born November 1853, died in 1855; ii. Edwin Smith, born April 20, 1855; succeeded his father on the old place; married, February 13, 1876, Lucy Maria Graves, of Middlefield; children: (a) Bessie Lillian, born April 18, 1879; married July 18, 1898, Walter S. Newell; (b) Jessie Bell, born July 10, 1880; married, October 18, 1904, Reuben Franklin McElwain, of West Springfield; (c) George Edwin born December 10, 1885, engaged in the paper manufacturing business at Holyoke. iii. Mary Jane, born June 5, 1858; married (first) June 12, 1885, Fitzhugh Babson, of Gloucester; (second) Clark B. Wright, of Middlefield. iv. Lura Verona, born April 20, 1862; married, November 19, 1891, Arthur D. Pease, of Middlefield.

2. Oliver, born August 24, 1821; married at Becket, February 10, 1853, Paulina Doane Witherell, of South Wellfleet; children, born at Becket: i. Lucy Hannah, born December 6, 1854; married June 16, 1881, Clifton A. Crocker, of Springfield; ii. Laney Smith, born April 14, 1857; married, January 4, 1888, Arthur E. Ford, of Chicago; iii. Harriet Aurelia, born February 12, 1859; not married. Was graduated at Mt. Holyoke Seminary, became a teacher, and was for nineteen years the head of the Department for Women at The Pennsylvania State College; iv. Oliver Dwight, born February 10, 1862; not married; v. Reuben Franklin, born March 30, 1865; married, October 18, 1904, Jessie B. McElwain, of Middlefield; one daughter, Paulina Witherell, born March 8, 1906. He is vice-president and manager of the Crocker-McElwain Paper Company of Holyoke; vi. Carrie Mabel, born February 20, 1870; married, February 12, 1896, Edward P. Butts, of Springfield.

3. Timothy Dwight, born August 10, 1825; died September 3, 1841.

4. John Smith, born March 17, 1828, mentioned below.

5. Edwin, born November 5, 1833; married December, 1863, Caroline Church, of Middlefield. Children: i. Charles Church, born May 19, 1872; married, November 8, 1899, Greta Parks, of Springfield; one son, Edwin (second) born December 17, 1908; ii. Arthur Edwin, born February 8, 1879, died July 14, 1880. On leaving the firm of McElwain Bros. (see below) he entered the firm of The Kibbe Brothers & Co. of Springfield, confectionery manufacturers, and, on the death of the Kibbe brothers, he, with S. D. Porter, acquired the business. His son Charles is now also of the same firm.

(V.) John Smith McElwain, son of Jonathan McElwain, was born March 17, 1828. He attended the public school of Middlefield, acknowledged as one of the best of that day, and, later, Williston Seminary at Easthampton. At about eighteen years of age he had an opportunity to go into mercantile business, which he much wanted to accept, but his father would not consent, saying he would do what he could to make a farmer of him by keeping him on the farm till he was of age. After attending Williston Seminary and teaching for a time, he wished to be nearer Springfield. Starting on foot from Easthampton with a friend, he obtained a school in West Springfield, where he taught successfully for two seasons. In addition to his duties as teacher he worked at gardening for Richard Bagg, Jr. During vacations he also worked in the gardens and sold vegetables for Mr. Bagg. His first attempt at selling farm produce was hardly prophetic of his ultimate business success, since he failed to sell a single beet from the wagon load which he took out—an experience he never forgot. He stayed with Mr. Bagg for four years, and later, after Mr. Bagg's death, returned to carry on the place for Mrs. Bagg, remaining in this position two years. He then took a place as clerk in the agricultural store of Allen & Mason, of Springfield, later bought out the concern, and, with his younger brother Edwin, under the firm name of McElwain Brothers, built up a prosperous business.

During this period Mr. McElwain was on the watch for an opening in the paper manufacturing business. In 1867, he accepted the position of general manager of the office of the Parsons Paper Company of Holyoke, and assistant salesman, becoming the agent of the company in 1886, after Mr. Parsons' death. He held this office until 1893, when he helped to organize the Linden Paper Company and became its president. During this period as agent, the Parsons Company's business was enlarged by the building of a second mill, known as "Parsons No. 2." Meantime, for several years, he was treasurer and general manager of the Valley Paper Company; also during this time, in 1880, he organized the Nonotuck Paper Company. This proving a success, in 1892 the Symes and Dudley mill was added to the Nonotuck, the company successfully carrying on its work till the mills were merged into the American Writing Paper Company in 1899.

As a citizen, Mr. McElwain has always been closely identified with the interests of the city of Holyoke, serving as member of the city council during the first years of its existence; as a member of the Library Commission; as a director of the City National Bank; as director of the City Hospital, and trustee of the benefaction known as The Whiting Street Estate. He is also a director of the Third National Bank of Springfield. His religious affiliations are with the Second Congregational Church. The vigorous young Grace Chapel stands as the outgrowth of suggestions as to practical piety made by him to his Sunday school class of young men. In politics he is a Republican of the broader minded type.

He married (first) in West Springfield, in 1858, Esther M. Ely, daughter of Homer Ely, and has one son by this marriage, Henry Ely McElwain, treasurer of the Linden Paper Company until it entered The American Writing Paper Company combination. He is now of Denver, Colorado, engaged in mining. He married (second) in 1863, Celia S. Ely, a sister of the first wife.

Henry Ely McElwain married, December 11, 1883, Isabel Hazen, of Hartford, Vermont. Children: 1. Esther Ely, born December 13, 1884, died July 2, 1885. 2. John Hazen, born May 29, 1886. 3. Henry Ely, born June 19, 1891. 4. Leicester Kent, born May 10, 1895. 5. Louise, born January 8, 1897.

WOOD or Woods is a surname of ancient English origin and had its origin in designating some men from their residence near woods. Atwood and Bywood are forms of the same name.

The surname Hill is of similar origin and perhaps quite as generally used. Other surnames formed in this way are Pond, Rivers, Lake, Bridge, etc. The medieval spelling of this surname was Atte Wode, afterwards softened to Atwood. Since the immigrants came to this country with the early settlers at Plymouth, we find Wood and Atwood used interchangeably. Almost every conceivable Wood in England surnamed some family back in the tenth, eleventh or twelfth centuries, and hence the multitude bearing this name. In Domesday the name is found in the Latin form De Silva, in county Suffolk. In the Hundred Rolls the forms de la Wode, In le Wode and Ate Wode are found. Many famous men in England and America have belonged to the Wood family. In England and Scotland one hundred different coat-of-arms belong to various Wood families. A branch of the Scotch Wood family is numerous in Ireland. There is a general similarity of design in the armorials of many of these families that indicate common origin at some remote period. The Derbyshire family coat-of-arms: Azure three naked savages proper each holding in the dexter hand a shield argent charged with a cross gules and in the sinister a club resting on the naked hand proper. The families bearing arms and the surname Wood are common in Devonshire, Gloucestershire, county Kent and county Middlesex. Thomas Wood, chief justice of the court of common pleas in 1501 had these arms: Gules semee of crosses crosslet fitchee argent three demi-woodmen holding clubs proper. Note the resemblance to the other. Viscount Halifax bears: Azure three naked savages ambulant in fess proper in the dexter hand of each a shield argent charged with a cross gules, in the sinister a club resting on the shoulder also proper on a canton ermine three lozenges conjoined fess sable. Crest: A savage as in the arms the shield sable charged with a griffin's head erased argent. Motto: Perserandox Most of the Scotch and Irish families bearing arms have the following or one very like it: Azure an oak tree eradicated or. The family had seats in Fife or Forfarshire, as early as the sixteenth century.

April 25, 1644, Abigail Jenney. He died before September 30, 1670, when the inventory of his estate was taken. Administration was granted to his widow Abigail. His son John made a nuncupative will dated April 13, 1673, bequeathing to his two youngest brothers, his sister Mary and his mother. The court ordered land of his to be given over to Abiel and Isaac, the two youngest brothers, by Samuel, the eldest. Children: 1. Samuel, born May 25, 1647, mentioned below. 2. (IV) Robert, cousin of Samuel (2) Wood, and grandson of one of the family given above, was born at Middleborough about 1740-60. He was a soldier in the revolution in Captain Nathaniel Wood's company, Colonel Simeon Cary's regiment at Roxbury in 1776. There were no less than twenty families in Middleborough, all descended as far as can be ascertained from Henry Wood, living in Middleborough when the federal census of 1790 was taken. Robert died, removed or was unmarried in 1790. He is not given among the heads of families.

(V) Robert (2), son or nephew of Robert (1) Wood, was born in Middleborough, November 16, 1796, died October 12, 1867. He was a ship-builder in early life, afterwards a farmer. In early life he engaged in the manufacture of shoes and boots at Hopkinton, Massachusetts. His product was called the Mansfield Shoe and attained a wide fame and popularity. Previously he had been a soldier in the Mexican war, enlisting from Fort Adams, Rhode Island; he was wounded and stricken with malarial fever in the service and he was disqualified for service in the civil war later. He worked at farming for a time after he was mustered out, then he engaged in the shoe business as superintendent of the Pingree & Smith factory at Detroit, Michigan, remaining for three years, and afterward established the business at Hopkinton. He was prominent in public life in Hopkinton and held many offices of honor and trust. He was a member of the Hopkinton school committee for three years, town treasurer six years, selectman ten years. He was representative to the general court of Massachusetts in 1881-82 from the twenty-seventh Middlesex district, and served on important committees in the house. His popularity and the confidence in which he was held by his townsmen without regard to politics is shown by the fact that he was never defeated, though a candidate for office no less than thirty-two times. In national politics he was a Democrat, but in local affairs he voted with the non-partisan Citizen party, a distinctly local organization. In religion he was a Congregationalist. He was a trustee of the Hopkinton Savings Bank for many years. He was a prominent Free Mason, one of the charter members and founders of John Warren Lodge, in which he held all the offices in succession. He was a member of Montgomery Lodge of Milford previously. In politics Mr. Wood is a Republican. From 1898 to 1906 he was a member of the common council of Boston and served efficiently in this office. (VI) Nathan, son of Colonel*Christopher and Eunice (Prentice) Avery, was born in Groton, Connecticut, May 2, 1744, and married, in 1770, Rebecca Elderkin, the dates of whose birth and death are not known. According to the "Avery Genealogy" they had four children, of the first two of whom nothing is known except their names: 1. Nathan, Jr. 2. Rebecca. 3. Prentice; see forward. 4. Roxcelena, October 19, 1779.

(VII) Prentice, son of Nathan and Rebecca (Elderkin) Avery, was probably in Norwich, Connecticut, October 5, 1776, and died there September 22, 1811. He married, October 9, 1802, Mary Gallup, born 1780, died 1870, daughter of Jesse Gallup. Children, all probably born in Norwich: 1. Ardelia Everett, November 5, 1803; married Benjamin Durfey. 2. (VIII) Nathan Prentice, only son of Prentice and Mary (Gallup) Avery, was born in Norwich, Connecticut, January 22, 1809, and died September 13, 1863; married (first) May 11, 1835, at Griswold, Connecticut, by Rev.

Mr. Jewett, Lydia Durfey, who died December 31, 1843; married (second) January 12, 1845, Sybil B. Woodworth, of Norwich. He had four children, all born of his first marriage and in Norwich: 1. Edwin P., October 26, 1836. 2. Lucy Jane, May 29, 1839, died February 27, 1856. 3. Mary C., February 6, 1841, died December 7, 1842. 4. Albert L., December 18, 1843, died February 8, 1844. Nathan Prentice Avery was a carpenter and joiner during the early part of his life, later became a contractor and builder, and also became somewhat extensively interested in the manufacture of paper. He was in all respects a capable, successful and straightforward business man. He was an ardent supporter of the old Whig party and its principles, and lived long enough to witness and take part in the organization of the Republican party and to see its first successful candidate inaugurated at Washington as our national president and begin the righteous work of slave emancipation and the still more arduous work of subduing the states in rebellion against the federal union; but he died two years before Lincoln's work and the first great mission of his party were fully accomplished. In religious preference Mr. Avery was a consistent member of the Congregational church, and one of the deacons of that church in Norwich.

(IX) Captain Edwin Prentice Avery, son of Nathan Prentice and Lydia (Durfey) Avery, was born in Norwich, Connecticut, October 26, 1836, and after completing his early education in the public schools of that city became interested in the paper manufactory of which his father was proprietor. Soon afterward, however, he left that employment and engaged in business in New York and Norwich, Connecticut. He went to Florence, Massachusetts, in 1881, where he became connected with the Nonotuck Silk Company. In 1891 he came to Holyoke and became book-keeper for the William Skinner Manufacturing Company. He enlisted in Company A, Eighteenth Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, during the civil war, and he made an excellent war record. During his service he was captured by the enemy and held prisoner at Libby and Belle Isle for a considerable time. Captain Avery was a Free and Accepted Mason, and a regular attendant at the services of the Congregational church. He married, October 16, 1866, Adelaide L., daughter of Deacon Simeon and Mary Ann (Morgan) Smith, of East Lyme, Connecticut. Mrs. Avery, through her mother in the Morgan line, is of the same ancestral family as was Aaron Burr, and had in her possession letters written by that noted figure in our early national history. Captain Edwin Prentice and Adelaide L. (Smith) Avery had two children: Nathan Prentice (see forward), and Sybil Louise, born January 18, 1873.

(X) Nathan Prentice, only son of Captain Edwin Prentice and Adelaide L. (Smith) Avery, was born in Norwich, Connecticut, May 13, 1869, and acquired his elementary education in the public schools of his native city, his secondary education at Northampton high school, class of '87, and his higher education at Amherst College, where he graduated A.B. in 1891. The next few years after leaving college were devoted to pedagogical work, first as principal of Yates High and Union School at Chittenango, Madison county, New York, and he afterward took a post-graduate course at Clark University. He is a member of two college fraternities—Theta Delta Chi and Phi Beta Kappa. In the meantime he took up the study of law, and in 1896 was admitted to practice in the courts of this state. In the same year he began his professional career in association with Judge Edward W. Chapin, of Holyoke, and soon came to be recognized as one of the leading young members of the Hampden bar. For five years he was city solicitor of Holyoke, and for five years has served as mayor of that city by successive re-elections. Mr. Avery is an independent in politics. He holds membership in several Masonic bodies, and several other fraternal orders, is an Odd Fellow, member of the Sons of Veterans, of the Congregational church, and secretary of the board of trustees of the Mechanics' Savings Bank of Holyoke. He married July 7, 1897, Katherine Barnes Van Valkenburg, a descendant of an old Holland Dutch family of the Mohawk valley in New York state. Mr. and Mrs. Avery have two children: Adelaide and Katherine Avery.

The Flint family was one of those who attained prominence in the settlement of the early colonies. Henry Flint, one of the first ministers of Braintree (now Quincy), Massachusetts, arrived in this country from England in 1635. He became a member of the church in Boston, soon after removing to Braintree, where he was ordained as minister of the gospel, March 17, 1640, and died April 27, 1668. His wife, a sister of President Oaks, of Harvard College, died in March, 1645. They had five sons and five daughters. Josiah, eldest son of Rev. Henry Flint, was graduated from Harvard College in 1664 and ordained at Dorchester in 1671. His son Henry was graduated from the same college in 1693 and soon afterward became a tutor in that institution, a position he occupied for forty years and his portrait may still be seen there.

(I) Thomas, brother of Rev. Henry Flint mentioned above, came from England to Boston in 1635 and settled in Concord in 1637. While in England he resided in Mattock, Derbyshire, where he sold his property for four thousand pounds, expending nearly all of this amount in improving the town of Concord. He was a representative to the general court of Massachusetts from 1637 to 1640 and lieutenant-governor many years. Children: 1. John, see forward. 2. Ephraim, born 1642, married 1684, died August 3, 1722, leaving no children. Thomas Flint had other children.

(II) John, son of Thomas Flint, died in 1687. He was lieutenant and representative from 1677 to 1687. He married Mary, sister of Mr. Oaks, president of Harvard College. Children: Mary, born 1668, died 1675; Thomas, born 1670, died 1675; John, born 1673, died 1675; Abigail, born 1674, died 1769; John, see forward.

(III) John (2), youngest child of John (1) and Mary (Oaks) Flint, was born July 18, 1677, resided in Concord, Massachusetts, and married, May 7, 1713. Children: Ephraim, born 1713, died 1762; Abigail, born 1715, died 1762; Mary, born 1717, died 1719; Sarah, born 1720, died 1789; John, see forward; Hannah, born 1724, died 1792; Jane, born 1727, died 1786.

(IV) John (3), second son and fifth child of John (2) Flint, was born May 12, 1722, and died in 1792. He married, January 12, 1744, Hepsibah Brown. Children: Hepsibah, born 1744, died 1790; Edward, born 1749, died 1812; John, born 1751, died 1822; Abigail, born 1753, died 1753; Nathan, see forward; Ephraim, born 1757, died 1769; Thomas, born 1759, died 1840; Eleazer, born 1761, died 1839; John, born 1763, died 1842; Abisha, born 1766, died 1807.

(V) Nathan, third son and fifth child of John (3) and Hepsibah (Brown) Flint, was born in 1755, and died in 1824. He married Molly Brown. Children: Molly, born 1782; Abigail, 1783, died 1786; Nathan, 1785, died 1786; Abigail, born August 31, 1786; Nathan, May 11, 1788, died 1809; Ephraim, see forward; Hannah, born November 9, 1791, died

April 7, 1875; Polly, born 1793, died 1826; Hepsibah, born 1795, died 1858; David B., born September 23, 1797, died December 25, 1871; John, born November 8, 1799; Charlotte, born January 5, 1802, died October 7, 1882; Almira, born January 31, 1806, died 1862.

(VI) Ephraim, third son and sixth child of Nathan and Molly (Brown) Flint, was born November 10, 1789, and died November 3, 1805. He married, April 30, 1816, Deborah Brooks. Children: Ephraim H., born March 1, 1817; Mary A., November 1, 1818; Deborah A., September 25, 1820, died 1867; Elias B., born May 21, 1823, died October 5, 1853; David B., see forward; Charles I., born September 23, 1833.

(VII) David Brown, third son and fifth child of Ephraim and Deborah (Brooks) Flint, was born in Winchenden, Massachusetts, June 18, 1827, and died in his home in Dale street, Roxbury, Massachusetts, July 27, 1900. His early years were spent on the farm of his father, and he enjoyed the advantages of a common school education and was for a time under the instruction of the late Mr. Washburn, afterward governor of Massachusetts, and who regarded young Flint as of an ambitious and determined character and an excellent student. At the age of nineteen years, having completed his education as far as local opportunities admitted, Mr. Flint went to Orange, Massachusetts, where he entered the employ of Rodney Hunt, a well known machinist and manufacturer. Before many years he was associated with Mr. Hunt as a partner, the firm name being Hunt, Wade & Flint, and the concern made rapid strides forward. They were engaged in the manufacture of water wheels and cotton mill supplies, but the foresight of Mr. Flint soon made them abandon water wheels and manufacture turbine wheels, and in consequence the business of the firm made great progress. Some years later it was incorporated, the plant being known as the Rodney-Hunt Machine Company, becoming one of the wealthiest manufacturing concerns in western Massachusetts, with Mr. Flint as leading spirit and manager. His close and constant application to business interests had, however, impaired his health, and he was obliged to retire from an active business life but did not withdraw his interests from the company. He established himself in his pleasant home in Dale street where, surrounded by his family and friends, he resided until his death. He was a man of commanding appearance, strong mental attainments, and many noble qualities which endeared him to all, and to none more so than to the men in his employ; generous and scrupulously honest, and possessed of the most progressive and practical ideas. He was a member of the Congregational church, and gave his political support to the Republican party, taking an active and intelligent interest in the affairs of his town and the nation, but never cared to hold public office. He married, January 12, 1853, Clarissa Greene (see Greene). She is a woman of much force of character and mental activity, has been a great traveler, and is a broadminded well informed member of the Congregational church. Children, all born in Orange, Massachusetts: 1. Arthur Eugene, May 15, 1855, died February 8, 1865. 2. Clara Gertrude, December 2, 1856, died March 9, 1867. 3. Arria Emogene, January 7, 1866; married William E. Fay, a broker of Boston, official in many mining propositions, and known as one of the most reliable and successful business men of Boston; he and his family live in Dorchester and are leading spirits in the local societies of that community; children: Edith, born March 1, 1894; a student in the Dorchester high school, and Arthur Flint, born December 11, 1895, attends the common school. 4. Perley Greene, born June 16, 1872; has a well established reputation as a shoe manufacturer of Brockton, Massachusetts; married Elsie, daughter of Alfred Ewer, bank examiner of Massachusetts.

(The Greene Line).

(I) Robert Greene located in Wales (then a part of Brimfield), Massachusetts, in 1743. After a time he removed to Tolland, Connecticut, then returned to Wales, where he resided until his death. He married, October 11, 1744, Sarah, sister of Ichabod and Deacon Joel Rogers. Children, the three eldest born in Wales, the next four in Tolland, and the two youngest in Wales: Ruth, February 14, 1745; Joel, May 5, 1748; Lydia, March 6, 1750, died in Tolland, July 5, 1851; Lydia, born July 28, 1751; Amos, June 22, 1753; Nathan, see forward; Eunice, born February 14, 1757, died in Wales, 1822; Solmon, born March 12, 1766; Reuben, May 24, 1769.

(II) Nathan, third son and sixth child of Robert and Sarah (Rogers) Greene, was born in Tolland, Connecticut, March 28, 1755, and died May 6, 1838. After his marriage he removed to Whitingham, Vermont, with his young bride. They were obliged to travel with their entire outfit on foot or horseback from Greenfield, Massachusetts, a distance of twenty miles, guided only by blazed trees. He had made a favorable selection for a homestead, built his log cabin and cleared and cultivated a patch of land. His cabin stood in an unbroken wilderness, and there were several other families who had settled in different parts of the town. Nathan Greene was an extensive land owner. The town records show that he sold in 1785 and the few years immediately following, tracts of land or farms to nine different persons, and having become old he sold his homestead to David Hosley, Jr., his son-in-law, March 20, 1822, taking back a life lease of the premises. He was a man of great physical strength and intellectual development, energetic and ambitious, always ready with a joke, yet of great will power and decision of character, attributes which appear to be characteristic of the Greene family. He married, May 10, 1780, Sarah Shields, born November 24, 1758, who had lived with Rev. Mr. Stebbins, of Monson, as her father died when she was very young; she died in May, 1843. Children: Hannah, born January 31, 1781, married Lincoln Hall, and removed to Pennsylvania; Alfred, see forward; Rhoda, born July 12, 1785, died July 26, 1806; Lydia, born April 17, 1787, died December 3, 1864; Polly, born June 22, 1789; Anna, born October 21, 1791, died January 10, 1847; Nathan, Jr., born December 3, 1793, died November 30, 1837; Twins, born March 17, 1795; Daniel, born December 18, 1796, died October 9, 1849; Sally, born March 3, 1799, died January 20, 1870.

(III) Alfred, eldest son and second child of Nathan and Sarah (Shields) Greene, was born in Whitingham, Vermont, November 21, 1783, and died July 19, 1873. He is said to have been the first male child born in the town, and he purchased the southwestern part of the homestead from his father and also the Dunnel place adjoining, where he established his home and lived and died. He learned the carpenter's trade early in life, and at the age of seventeen years was one of the workmen upon the old meeting house which was erected in the summer and fall of 1799. He soon became a master carpenter and builder, and erected the greater number of the principal buildings in the town during the next forty years. He was a man of unusual strength and power of endurance, and even in old age took a lively interest in business and the care of his farm. The day before he was taken sick he walked six miles in the forenoon to transact business, and then worked the greater part of the day in the hay field with almost the vigor of youth. In the afternoon a sudden shower came upon him and he was drenched before he could reach shelter. This shock was too great for one of his age and he succumbed to an attack of typhoid which set in, living but ten days. He married, March 26, 1810, Clarissa, born February 26, 1788, died June 21, 1868, daughter of Asa and Submit (Severance) Smith. Children: Eli, born October 9, 1812, died August 21, 1854; Alfred, Jr., born August 7, 1814, died August 28, 1864; Reuben, born February 18, 1817, died February 27, 1900; Polly, born February 2, 1819, died January 28, 1892; Asa, born October 6, 1821, died October 1, 1866; Miranda, born November 11, 1824, is living in Winchester; Clarissa, see forward.

(IV) Clarissa, youngest child of Alfred and Clarissa (Smith) Greene, was born December 18, 1833, and married David B. Flint (see Flint VII).

Next to Jones, Smith and Robinson this is a most common name. One hundred and twenty-three Browns had emigrated to America before 1700. Over thirteen hundred, a regiment in itself, served in the revolution from Massachusetts. According to the Herald's College, the Browns have been granted one hundred and fifty-six coats-of-arms. One hundred and thirty-nine had graduated from Yale up to 1904. The orthographic changes have been Boown, Bown, Braun, Broan, Brione, Broom, Brioun, Broune, Broun, Browne, Brownn and Brune. The first Mr. Brown was called so because of his swarthy complexion. Browning was the son of Brown. Brownell was the mighty Brown, nell coming from neil meaning the mighty. Brownly or Brownlee was the Mr. Brown who lived in a pasture and Brownlow from lowe meaning a hill was the Mr. Brown who lived on a hill. Among the distinguished men of this line have been B. Gratz Brown, who ran for vice-president with Horace Greely; Justice Henry B. Brown of the United States supreme court who was a Connecticut Brown; Senator Joseph E. Brown, of Georgia; Jacob Brown, commanding general of the United States army in the war of 1812; John Brown, the abolition leader; Charles Brockden Brown, the novelist; Henry Kirk Brown, the sculptor; Charles Farrar Browne (Artemus Ward); and J. Ross Browne, the war correspondent.

(I) Richard Brown came from Malford, Wiltshire, England, and sailed in the good ship "Mary and John" in 1635. He settled first at Ipswich, Massachusetts. A little party of about a dozen families went by water from Ipswich through Plum Island sound and up Parker river in 1635. Of this party Richard was one. They made a landing place on the north bank of the river near where the present bridge stands. They called the place "Ould Newberry", after a town in England. Richard removed to the "Trayning Green" in 1646 and his lot was number sixteen from the river. He was made a freeman in 1635. The name of his wife was Edith. Children: Joseph (died young); Joshua (mentioned below); Caleb, born May 7, 1645. He married (second) February 16, 1648, Eliza, widow of Giles Badger. Their children were: Eliza, born March 20, 1649; Richard, February 18, 1651; Edmund, July 17, 1654; Sarah, September 7, 1657; Mary, April 10, 1660. Richard Brown died April 26, 1661.

(II) Joshua, the second son of Richard and Edith Brown, was born in Newbury, April 10, 1642, died November 21, 1742. September 30, 1694, he was on a committee who petitioned the general court in behalf of a company that erected a meeting house at their own expense, "and supplied themselves with a minister, requesting the honorable court to take some effectual care for the relief of the petitioners and for the quiet of the whole town, the peace whereof is now so dangerously interrupted." This is what is known in local history as the Queen Ann chapel controversy and Joshua was in it from first to last. It continued to agitate the town for many years. A majority of the inhabitants had voted to move the meeting house to Pipe Stave hill, West Newbury, and discontinue the one at "Ould Newberry". In 1705 it was voted to build a new house at Pipe Stave hill, and work was begun on the same, but it was not completed until the year 1709. That year a tax was levied on all the people of the town to pay for the building of the new church. Those living at "Ould Newberry" strongly protested and refused to pay their taxes. In some cases their lands and household goods were forcibly taken and sold and some committed to jail, but afterward by order of the general court the collector of the parish was instructed to return the goods and chattels taken on distraint. Trouble kept brewing. The "removers" were still in the majority and by 1711 the town voted to sell and dispose of "Ye ministry house at ye plains and also to take the seats and glass out of ye old meeting house to be used in the new one, and remove ye old house to Pipe Stave hill and use it for a barn for ye minister". Following this vote certain of the objectors at the plains signed this agreement.

"We whos names Are heartho Subscribed doo Agree And oblide oursealves to each other to mayntain the publick Ministry At the old meeting house in ye west precinct in Newbury, Although we are forced to pay Elsewhere what shall be levid upon us."

On this Joshua's name appears. At this juncture a number of disorderly persons from the upper parish bent on having their own way came down in the night and demolished the old meeting house. Indignant at this turn of affairs the plains people determined to replace the one that had been destroyed. The materials were provided and the work begun. July 19, 1711, the general court advised and directed that the raising of the church be deferred until a hearing be had; and on August 24, issued an order forbidding Samuel Bartlett, Joshua Brown and Joseph Annis and their associates, aiders and abettors from proceeding with the work. November 2, reports coming to the ears of the court that the order was not being complied with, a new and peremptory injunction was issued. In this dilemma the plain folks applied to Mr. John Bridger, of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, governor general of her Majesty's lands and woods in America. He visited Newbury, heard the grievances and promised to help them "at home" if they would promise to use the liturgy of the Church of England. They were willing to do this and upon his advice a long petition was drawn up and forwarded to his Grace, the Bishop of London, reciting the whole situation and praying for a relief. On this Joshua Brown's name was second. They then directed a petition of similar import to Governor Dudley who requested the authorities in Essex county not to interfere with the worshippers at the plains. The following letter written by Judge Sewall of witchcraft fame explains the matter further:

"Sir,—I have thought on your words relating to the West Precinct in Newbury, mentioned in your Letter of the 22th of January last. It came to my mind that my Landlord Webster was a near neighbor to Joshua Brown for many years. You are a Younger Man and a Deacon. I would have you goe to Mr. Webster, and accompany him to your brother Deacon Brown, and speak to him with that Seriousness and Solemnity as the case requires, and see if you can reclaim him and recover him. Be not discouraged with thinking that he will not hear you. Hereafter, possibly, he may complain that few, or none, dealt plainly and faithfully with him. However it be, if you in faithfullness and Meekness endeavor to restore your brother thus surpris'd, you will have peace & Comfort in it. Success belongs to GOD."

The church was rebuilt by the inhabitants, Joshua Brown contributing his mite towards it. The next thing the matter was taken to the courts for an airing and damages for the demolition of the old chapel was sued for, but a compromise was effected without a trial. Judge Sewall in his diary says:

"Mr. Rogers prays at opening of the Court. Din'd at Smith's. At noon Brother and I persuaded them of Artichoke precinct to agree. I gave Lt Moodey Five pounds, and Jno Emery gave five pounds, and Moodey and others let fall their Review; went into Court and said, They are Agreed. The Agreem't was made in Smith's Garret. Adjourned sine die."

The matter, however, continued to agitate the town up to 1722 when those of Artichoke precinct asked Governor Shute to relieve them from paying rates or supporting the West parish. The relief was accordingly granted. It continued to be used for a house of worship until 1766 when it was deserted and in 1776 was blown down by the wind. Part of the building saw further religious use. The pews were put into a gallery of a nearby church. The Bible went to a church in Boscawen, New Hampshire, and the silver christening basin was donated by Joshua Brown, to St. Paul's, Newbury, where it remained until stolen by burglars in 1887. The bell, with the inscription: "Presented to Queen Ann Chapel by the Bishop of London", hung for a long time in a school house in Pillsbury lane now Ashland street, but it disappeared in 1830, no one knew how. Joshua Brown was buried in the old Belleville cemetery and the following inscription is on his tombstone:

Here is Interred The

One Of Ye First
Founders Of The Church In Newbury
He Died November
The 21st A. D. 1742

He cleared and made productive the land of the rocky primeval forest, made an attractive home where he lived and died and where his children were born and some of them died and where some of his grandchildren were born. It stood near the Goshen road. He was a prominent man in the town for many years, was justice of the peace, held all the town offices and was representative to the legisla-

(VII) Charles Edwin, youngest son of Edwin and Sally (Witt) Brown, was born at Hubbardston, December 19, 1842. He came to Springfield in December, 1859, and for a time attended school on Court street. He then went to work for J. W. Hale & Company, retail grocers, at the corner of Main and Court streets. He remained there until September 1, 1863, when he went into partnership in the grocery business at the watershops with W. H. Pinney, the firm being known as Brown & Pinney. While they were together they erected the Lincoln hall block. In 1868 Mr. Brown left the firm of Brown & Pinney and began traveling for West, Stone & Company, wholesale grocers, whose business was an outgrowth of J. W. Hale & Company. Soon after he was made a partner in the firm with John West and Harlan P. Stone, though the firm name was not changed. This firm was maintained for over thirty years. In 1901 it was dissolved, Mr. Brown and his son, Fred, taking the wholesale grocery business, as C. E. Brown & Company. In September, 1907, Mr. Brown and his son moved into a fine new building on Lyman street. Deacon Brown was one of the best-known citizens of Springfield, through both his church and business connections. His business career here of forty years had been prosperous. During most of this time he had been prominent in the First Church and had become one of its pillars. He had an absorbing interest in the church and labored faithfully for its success. His Sunday school class there, only recently and but temporarily given up, was famous. It is said that in size it was second only to John Wanamaker's. Mr. Brown served in the city council, as councilman in 1887-88, and as alderman in 1897-98, and he gave the city the honest service of a shrewd business man. During his service as alderman he was chairman of the city property committee which built the Forest park school. To the Young Men's Christian Association also he gave wise and faithful service. He was for years one of the directors of the organization and was very influential, his advice being much relied upon. He was chairman of the building committee that erected the central Young Men's Christian Association building in 1894 and gave to the work much time and wisdom. With Harlan P. Stone, Noyes W. Fisk and others, Mr. Brown organized the Grasse River Club, a well-known outing organization with a preserve in the Adirondacks. He was a member of the board of trade, of the Masonic order and of the Royal Arcanum. The late ex-Lieutenant-Governor William H. Haile was a close friend. Deacon Brown united with the First Church in 1878 during a series of evangelistic meetings held here by the celebrated Dwight L. Moody. He had previously taken little interest in church affairs, although he had been a reputable and upright man. Soon after joining the church he took up the work with the Sunday school class which still bears his name. It began with about ten or so young women, three or four of whom are still members of the class. In 1883 Mr. Brown was elected deacon and had served continuously since, having for a number of years been senior deacon. He had been treasurer of the deacons' or church charities fund for many years also. He served as a member of the parish committee twenty-five years, except for two years, and during the past year was chairman of the committee. His service for the church has been faithfully and generously given. During the many years of his three-fold service, there have been few business or religious meetings he has not attended. Probably no one connected with the church now, and few in its long history, have given more, and not of his means alone, though he was one of the largest contributors, but also of his time and his earnest, whole-hearted effort on the various activities of the church with which he allied himself. Of few are there more people ready to speak highly. Deacon Brown was firmly established in the respect, esteem and affection of many who had been closely associated with him for many years. No small portion of his success with his Sunday school class has been due to his own example, his sincerity and his sympathy. He married Mary Elizabeth Crane, of Springfield, daughter of Samuel R. and Mary W. (Butler) Crane, both natives of Berkshire county, Massachusetts, and their children were: 1. Fred, married Isabella Little, of Meriden, Connecticut; two children: Dorcas B., and Gathleen; he is carrying on a wholesale grocery business in Springfield. 2. Alice, lives at home.

Few indeed are the names
PARTRIDGE that can be traced with so little difficulty to their origin, or rather invasion, in England, where, owing to the prominence of families bearing this name, noted antiquarians have written extensively on the subject. We quote as follows:

"In the year 1066, at the historic battle of Hastings, William, Duke of Normandy, defeated Harold, then King of England, and ascended to the English throne, and to his new possession he soon added his own little duchy of Normandy. To those of his countrymen who had assisted him in his work of conquest, William made grants of land in the conquered kingdom, the number and size of which depended upon the value of the service rendered. After the death of William his successors carried out this same policy during the wars of the next century. All land of value was soon disposed of and the estates of the British nobles were seized, confiscated and turned over to the intrepid Normans, who thus became the landed gentry of England. Among those who thus received grants was one described by English antiquarians as "Partridge, the Norman." He is said to have emigrated during the reign of Stephen (1135-54) and in recognition of his military service to have received from Henry II (1154-89), estates in Essex, though the family afterward settled in Gloucestershire. Certain it is that in the next century (1254) "Richard de Pertriche" (that being the Norman and original spelling of the name) is indisputably recorded as the head of the family, with manors in the county of Gloucester. These royal grants not only proved the family to have been in high favor at court, but at once marked it as one of ancient distinction."

For many years he was night watchman of all the banks in Northampton, and held that position at the time the bank was robbed of a million and a half dollars. He was a member of the Masonic order, a Republican in politics, and in religious faith a Unitarian. He married, November 5, 1839, Julia A., daughter of John S. and Abigail (Hitchcock) Partridge, who was a cousin of his, born September 12, 1819, died September 20, 1895. John S. Until he reached the age of fifteen years he attended the schools of his native town, then his desire for earning money overcoming his desire for study, he entered a dry goods store in the capacity of clerk, and remained there for three years. He then spent a short time in a lawyer's office, but having an opportunity for employment as clerk in a bank he accepted that position, and six months later (in 1881) was offered the position of book-keeper for the City National Bank, at Holyoke, Massachusetts, which offer he accepted. In 1884, the organization of the Home National Bank was completed, with James H. Newton as president, E. L. Munn as cashier, and Mr. Partridge as teller and book-keeper. On March 4 that year (1884) Mr. Partridge received the first deposit for the bank over a counter made by placing planks across two barrels—although the large vault was in readiness, the fixtures were not all in place at the time advertised as "Opening Day." In 1892 Mr. Partridge became cashier, on the resignation of Mr. Munn. The deposits of this bank aggregate more than one million dollars, and of its board of ten directors there has for many years been an average attendance of eight members at the meetings. Mr. Partridge is a Republican, is treasurer of the First Congregational Society, and a member of Nonotuck Lodge, No. 61, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is treasurer of Mount Holyoke Company, organized to develop a pleasure resort. He belongs to the Bay State, Mount Tom Golf and Holyoke Canoe Clubs. He attended the Unitarian church with Mrs. Holmes, though as a child he was brought up an Episcopalian. In politics a Republican, not active. He was a member of college societies.

John S. Perkins.

He married, in Jamaica Plain, February 8, 1872, Frances A. Whitney, born October 10, 1843, daughter of Edmund Burke and Lydia Augusta (Bouvé) Whitney (see Whitney below).

The following tribute to the character of Mr. Holmes was printed in the Whitney Genealogy: "As a counselor he was known to his clients and to his antagonists by his assiduous achieving industry, his concentrated devotion, his hearty energy in attack, his steady courage under fire. To his professional brethren, he had strongly commended himself by his clearness of mental vision, his store of carefully selected and well digested learning and his scrupulous regard for his word. Circumstances had decreed that the larger part of his legal work should be devoted to patents; but very few either of the lawyers or laymen who met him in the United States courts could have guessed that he began his studies profoundly ignorant of every kind of machinery and with something like a native antipathy to investigation in the mechanical arts. With all his noble endowment in intellect Mr. Holmes's prime distinction was after all his moral quality, which was singularly high and fine. Hundreds of persons who had no acquaintance with Mr. Holmes, and perhaps did not know his name, have been struck by the singular distinction of his appearance and bearing, in which a certain swift, decisive grace of movement was well matched with the fineness of his sharply cut features, the deep brilliancy of his large gray eyes and the premature beauty of his whitening hair. To his acquaintances he was most charming, with a charm, to which the easy elegance of his manners, the refinement of his tastes, the responsive vivacity and shrewdness of his talk alike contributed." Mrs. Holmes survives her husbands, residing in Jamaica Plain. They had no children.

Stephen Reynolds, the first REYNOLDS of the family of whom we have information, was born March 25, 1798. He learned the blacksmith trade in Southbridge, Massachusetts, and subsequently carried on the same business in Wilbraham, Massachusetts. He married Sybil Vinton, born January 4, 1799. The following is an account of their golden wedding:

"Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Reynolds celebrated their golden wedding in Wilbraham October 23d at the residence of their son-in-law Mr. George Edson with whom in life's decline they have a pleasant home. Thirty-one persons were present whose united ages amounted to 1372 years. Relatives respecting five generations were there from Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island. Many valuable and delicate souvenirs of kindred and affectionate regard were presented to them. The venerable pair replighted their early troth the bride of seventy one years perhaps never happier than now; receiving again the wedding ring. A few remarks were made by the officiating clergyman, the divine benediction was invoked, congratulations were offered, tears from loving eyes shed, and the wish expressed by the daughters that father and mother might live to enjoy their gifts, was seconded by all.

It was a deeply interesting occasion and will furnish pleasing reminiscences for time to come. To Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds it was one of life's Indian summer days full of unutterable content. Thirty-six years of their wedded life has been spent in Wilbraham. 'Twas a matter of regret that Mr. Reynolds' aged mother now in her ninety-fourth year was not able to be present. She resides in Charlton, Massachusetts. She is a venerable woman in more than one respect, her sight is good she is as spry as most people at sixty, her mental faculties are well preserved and she is the mother of eleven children. Very few have a similar record."

(II) George, son of Stephen and Sybil (Vinton) Reynolds, was born in Southbridge, September 18, 1822, died in Springfield, May 16, 1902. He came to Springfield in 1841 and established the business of landscape gardening in which he was later associated with the late Justin Sackett, and together they laid out many of the parks and lawns here. He married, April 13, 1848, Harriet Angeline, daughter of Haman Colton. She was born in Longmeadow, Massachusetts, in 1822. In 1863 he entered the employ of Smith & Wesson, arms manufacturers, at Springfield, and remained with them about two years. He was later employed in the United States armory and then became a clerk for his uncle, Erastus Bly, who conducted a grocery store on the site of the present post office. In 1871 he bought out this business and carried it on for ten years, at the expiration of which time he sold out and became bookkeeper and financial manager for R. B. Currier, by whom he was employed two years. He then accepted a similar position with Rice & Lockwood, with whom he remained four years, and on the formation of the Rice & Lockwood Lumber Company he became its first treasurer. In 1888 he developed lung disease; he then went to Colorado and was employed in the lumber business five years, associated with the Sayre, Newton Lumber Company and the Halleck, Sayre, Newton Lumber Company.  Rhode Island, November 5,

That he was a man of influence in his day is evidenced by the fact that he held town office. He was a member of the Baptist Church, and a Whig in politics. He married Tryphena Place, who died at Hopkinton, February 10, 1849. Children: Ira; Elliott Lee, see forward; Potter

He attended the district school during three months of the summer and three months of the winter until he was twelve years of age, then only during the winter months until he was sixteen years old. At that time his parents removed to East Killingly, and for six months worked in cotton mills, then on the farm of William Cook, in Gloucester, Connecticut, and at the age of eighteen years shipped on board the whaler "Ocean," Captain Swift, bound for the Arctic seas. They made a roundabout voyage, touching at the Azores, Sandwich Islands, Hongkong and Japan. Later he made numerous trips along the Atlantic coast, spending altogether thirteen years at sea. During the Civil war he enlisted at Wrentham, February 20, 1864, in the Fourteenth Massachusetts Battery, and saw much hard and honorable service. In the spring of 1872 the Plainville Stock company was organized for the manufacture of specialties in jewelry, a number of the most prominent manufacturers in the jewelry line, among them being Albert Williams Burton, forming this corporation. From time to time there were various changes in the membership, older members retiring and making way for new, but it was from the start a pronounced success, at no time more so than when Mr. Burton retired, March 26, 1909, to enjoy a long merited and well deserved rest from his arduous labors. Mr. Burton was an attendant of the Methodist church of Plainville, and gave liberally towards its support, especially to the building of the church, and donated the organ. He was a member of George H. Mainlein Post, No. 133, Grand Army of the Republic, and served as senior and junior vice-commander and as quartermaster many years. After a time the firm was dissolved, and Edward R. went to

Norwood, where he was employed by George W. Everett & Company, and ran a circular saw. During the panic of 1857 this latter firm became insolvent, and Mr. Bennett returned to Wrentham, after a short residence in Roxbury, and commenced farming in a small way. His farm consisted of thirty acres and he raised general crops. In 1870 his son, Edward P., purchased his father's property, and the elder Bennett and his wife made their home with their son. In connection with his farming Mr. Bennett owned a saw mill at Wrentham, which he operated during the winter months until within ten years of his death. He was interested in military affairs, and was captain of the Wrentham company of militia. He was of a quiet, unassuming nature, earnest religious views, a strong temperance advocate and he and his wife were members of the orthodox church of Wrentham. Politically he gave his support to the Republican party. He was married, at Wrentham, by Rev. Elijah Fiske, September 21, 1830, to Susanna, born in Weymouth, February 7, 1804, died in Wrentham, November 14, 1885, daughter of John and Catherine (Childs) Dale, of Weymouth. (VIII) Edward Payson, youngest child of Edward Renouf and Susanna (Dale) Bennett, was born in Wrentham, June 30, 1848. He acquired his education in the "Wharf" district school and assisted his father in the cultivation of the farm until he was seventeen years of age. He then entered the employ of Lincoln & Bacon, a jewelry firm of North Attleboro, where he learned the jewelry trade. He continued with this firm until the spring of 1872 when he became a partner in the Plainville Stock Company, which was then formed, and included Daniel H. Corey, Albert W. Burton, Richard Donald, George Demorest, Henry Packard, John Barrett, Walter H. Rogers, Davis D. Reed, Edward P. Bennett and Bradford Corbin. In 1875 Mr. Corbin retired and Mr. William S. Metcalf purchased his interest in this company, and later at different times other members sold out their interests to those remaining in the company, until finally they were all vested in Mr. Bennett and Mr. Metcalf. The corporation prospered from its inception and at no time has it held a higher place in the jewelry trade than at the present. They occupy two floors in Lincoln & Bacon's new building, each thirty by one hundred feet, with eills each thirty by thirty feet. They manufacture ladies' brooches, scarf and hat pins, cuff links, etc., and their wares are known throughout the United States. Mr. Bennett resides in the southern part of the town where he has a fine estate on which are located handsome and commodious buildings.

He is a Republican in politics, having served his party as a delegate to various conventions, and as selectman in 1906-7, and is an attendant at the Congregational Orthodox Church of Wrentham. He is a member of the Providence Jewelers and Silversmiths Association of Providence, Rhode Island, and was formerly a member of Wampum Lodge, No. 195, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. (VII) Isaac Francis Bennett BENNETT (called Frank Bennett), youngest child of Isaac and Elizabeth (Randall) Bennett, was born in Wrentham, October 11, 1810, and died there July 13, 1897. He attended the Wampum district school and worked in his spare time for his father. At the close of his school years he entered his father's employ regularly, and was later taken into partnership with his brothers. When the business was sold, Isaac F. apprenticed himself to learn the blacksmith's trade, working for David Farrington and George Grant, at West Wrentham, where he resided for a time. At the outbreak of the civil war he and his son Bradford removed to Springfield, where they found employment under the United States government at the

Arsenal, finishing bayonets, remaining there throughout the war. He then returned to Wrentham, entering the employ of E. Ira Richards & Company, at North Attleboro, as a tool maker, and retained this position until he was seventy-five years of age, when he retired from active work and made his home with his son, Alonzo F., until his death. His farm on which he died, consisting of more than twenty acres, was bought of Timothy Whiting, and was later sold by his son Bradford to his brother Alonzo F. He possessed a sunny, amiable nature, and, like his father, was fond of children and nature, and a great reader. In religious faith he was a Universalist, and his political affiliations were with the Democratic party. He married, at Cumberland, Rhode Island, Lydia, born December 4, 1813, died February 3, 1903, daughter of Daniel and Lydia (Haskell) Hayden. Children: 1. Ellen Frances, born February 27, 1837, died September 12, 1899. 2. Bradford, born December 17, 1838, died December 30, 1902. 3. Alonzo Francis, see forward. 4. Charles Henry, born March 11, 1843. 5. Daniel, born April 23, 1848, died August 11, 1882; married, January 21, 1872, Annie O. Whiting, of South Franklin, Massachusetts; children: i. Willard F., born September 4, 1874, died November 24, 1874; ii. Alice Bradford, born November 25, 1876; iii. Marian Willard, born December 23, 1878; married, October 28, 1905, Clyde Blanchard; child: Marjorie Marie, born November 15, 1906; iv. Arthur Hayden, born December 25, 1880; married, September 7, 1907, Harriet Louise Smith. 6. Mary Alice, born January 31, 1851; graduated from Women's College of Philadelphia, and Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and was the first woman to receive the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in this country. She is a member of the Legal-Medico Society of Pennsylvania and the Legal Medical Society of New York, was for sixteen years superintendent of the State Asylum for the Insane at Norristown, Pennsylvania, and is now practicing medicine in Brooklyn, N. Y.

(VIII) Alonzo Francis, second son and third child of Isaac Francis and Lydia (Hayden) Bennett, was born in Wrentham, February 13, 1841, and died at his family homestead, October 9, 1905. His education was obtained in the district school at West Wrentham and the old academy at Wrentham Center, up to the age of fourteen years. He then worked for some time among the farmers of the vicinity—Joseph Wicks, John Craig and others—and in his young manhood found employment with Sturdy & Shepardson, who were at that time manufacturing jewelry in Wrentham. Here Mr. Bennett learned the trade thoroughly, and at the end of two years found a position with the firm of E. Ira Richards & Company, of North Attleboro. It was at this time that he enlisted in Company I, Forty-fifth Massachusetts Regiment, was sent into camp at Readville, Massachusetts, and, October 24, 1862, prepared to embark for the seat of war. The regiment was conveyed by the transport "Mississippi," under the protection of a gunboat, to Beaufort, North Carolina, thence to Newbern, was assigned to Colonel Amory's brigade, and went into camp at Trent, where they remained without incident until December 12. On that date they set forth upon the Goldsboro expedition. Two days later the battle of Kinston was fought, driving the Confederates from their position, with slight loss to the Forty-fifth. At Whitehall, on the 16th, the regiment bore an honorable part, fighting the Confederates across the creek, the bridge having been burnt. In the action of Goldsboro, the following day, the regiment took little part with the exception of burning the bridge across the Neuse, and then returning to camp at Newbern. January 26, 1863, it was detailed as provost guard at Newbern, remaining until April 25, when it was returned to the brigade and went into camp at Trent. April 27, 1863, it went to Core Creek, fifteen miles from Newbern, and at Dover Road drove out the enemy, planting the flag in their entrenchments. They were occupied near Fort Spinola until June 24, and then proceeded to Moorehead City, where they embarked for Boston, reaching that city on the 30th, and were mustered out at Readville, July 8, 1863. During his term of service Mr. Bennett was sergeant of his company.

After his return Mr. Bennett resumed his employment with the Richards Company until 1872, when he associated himself with Charles P. Young in the jewelry business, under the firm name of Young & Bennett, with quarters in the basement of the Whiting building, Broad street. This partnership was dissolved in 1888, and Mr. Bennett retired from manufacturing. During the first five years of the existence of the firm of Riley, French & Hef-fem, Mr. Bennett was a silent partner, and this was his last business venture, he having been actively manufacturing for a period of seventeen years. He then devoted his time and attention to the management of his home farm and property interests, and in his home life found his greatest enjoyment, his latter days being spent in the bosom of his family. His every thought was for them and their happiness, and he took especial pride in the education of his two daughters, now at Wellesley College. He was possessed of a strong, determined nature, clear, honest business principles, and sound judgment which gained success for him in all his undertakings. His friends were many, and he was ever ready to lend a helping hand to those who showed a desire to assist themselves. Many of the jewelers of that section owe their first upward step to the aid of Mr. Bennett. He was by faith a Universalist, and in his political views supported the Republican party; he would never accept public office, although tendered him, yet took an active interest in the public welfare of the town. He was prominently identified with the building of the new town hall, in association with George Austin, Daniel Brown and William Proctor. Mr. Bennett married, at Melrose, Massachusetts, October 11, 1888, Mary Allston, born in Melrose, March 12, 1856, daughter of William and Jane Dixey (Goss) Morss, the former a contractor and builder, and assessor of Melrose. Children: 1. Helen Frances, born July 18, 1889. 2. Alice Allston, January 19, 1891.

The ancient family of Mock, of MOCK Bavaria, dates back several hundred years, and has always been thrifty and energetic, faithful to country and family, both in war and in peace.

(1) Henry Mock was born in Rhein-Pfalz, Bavaria, in 1760, and served in the army during the war with France. He was assistant forester in his native province, and held the position for many years, also carrying on a farm. He had a large circle of friends and acquaintances, and his political influence and religious associations marked him as a representative citizen of the state. He died in 1835, at the age of seventy-five. He married a well-known physician and midwife, of Bavaria, died in 1845, aged seventy-five, beloved by all who knew her. Of exceptionally strong mind and fine character, she was unusually successful in her profession. Children: 1. Barbara, married Henry Avenius, and came to American, settling in New York City, where her husband died; she came to Boston, where she died at an advanced age, leaving seven children. 2. John William, lived and died in Bavaria at the age of seventy; was in business many years as a teamster and expressman; left a family. 3. Elizabeth, married in Bavaria, Mr. Braun, a German who died there; she came later to New York and then to Boston, settling at Roslindale, where she died very aged, leaving seven children. 4. Jacob, mentioned below.

(II) Jacob, son of Henry Mock, was born in Bavaria, March 26, 1801. He was brought up in Rhein-Pfalz, and succeeded to his father's farm and his office as state forester, serving until 1859. In that year he came to the United States and settled in Boston, Massachusetts, residing on Ruggles street, where he died April 27, 1867, having retired from active business some years before. He was a man of superior intelligence and good education, with progressive ideas, industrious and energetic. He married, in Rhein-Pfalz, Magdalena Fischer, born 1805. While on the journey to the United States in 1859, in a sailing vessel, with her husband and children, she was taken suddenly ill, and died on the voyage, and was buried at sea. Mr. Mock never recovered from the shock of her death, and came to the shores of the new land with his children, a broken-hearted man. He and his family were members of the Lutheran church in Germany, and their descendants have continued to affiliate with that church in this country. Children: 1. John, died in Europe, of croup. 2. Conrad, died in Europe, of epidemic croup. 3. Louise, born August 9, 1830; came to the United States in 1851, settled in Boston, and married Philip Dorr; he came from Germany to Boston, and for many years was foreman for the Boston Belting Company of Roxbury; he died in 1890, and his widow now lives at the corner of Lamartine street and Lamartine Place, Jamaica Plain, and, while aged, is still capable and active. 4. Adam, born March 8, 1837; mentioned below. 5. Catherine, born March 6, 1840; married Daniel Schreck, who died several years ago in Roxbury, where she still resides. 6. Jacob, born September 1, 1842; came with his father to the United States in 1859, and became a lithographer; after some years at his trade he established a restaurant, and later retired from active business; lives on his farm at North Brookfield; married Carolina Stucke. 7. Elizabeth, born in Bavaria, 1844, and came with her father to America; settled in Boston, and married Jacob Heibner, who died in Roslindale, where she now resides.

(III) Adam, son of Jacob Mock, was born in Bavaria, in Rhein-Pfalz, March 8, 1837. He grew up in his native town under the careful instruction of his parents, according to the custom among the German boys, and attended the public schools. He was well educated, his parents training him along practical lines for the business of life. At the age of eighteen he came to the United States. After a somewhat tempestuous voyage of nearly seven weeks, he landed at New York City, April 18, 1855. He went to Boston and found employment in the rubber works of Roxbury. He strove to please his employer in every way, and also to accumulate a "nest-egg" that he might establish himself in a business of his own, a desire that had been implanted within him from the early instruction of his parents. In 1875, with the small capital he had accumulated, he purchased a restaurant on Essex street, Boston, which he conducted successfully for a number of years. His business was prosperous and he removed to Central street, remaining until 1884. In that year he leased the large place at 120-124 Water street, and here achieved marked success as one of the representative German restaurateurs of the city. The business is still carried on by his sons, although he continues to give it some attention. He visits the place daily, making a tour of inspection to see that the well-known high character and tone of the establishment do not fall from the standard he has set. The restaurant is a favorite rendezvous for people of all classes, not only of the German race, but for Americans who enjoy the pleasant repasts so well served by German chefs. Since coming to Boston Mr. Mock has made his home at Jamaica Plain, and is well-known and highly respected by a large community of Boston. While full of years, he is a man of remarkable activity. When a young man he ran with Tremont, No. 7, hand fire engine, and is still a member of Tremont, No. 7, Veteran Fire Company. In politics he is a Republican, active since the inception of that party. Always contributing to the happiness of those who sought his hospitality, his genial temper and whole-souled German enthusiasm endeared him to a large circle of friends, who enjoyed his company quite as much as his excellent cuisine.

He married, August 2, 1862, Margaret E. Mueller, at Rappendorf, near Kitzingen, Bavaria, born April 26, 1839, daughter of Casper and Anna Barbara (Hartlep) Mueller. Her father was born in Bavaria in 1804, died 1890, and was a farmer of Bavaria. Her mother died some years before that time, age sixty-eight. Her parents were Lutherans of excellent reputation and family, and had ten children, of whom these are living: Martin Muller, lives in Roxbury, retired carrier; Margaret E., mentioned above; Dorothy Muller, married Justus Wissker and lives in Hartford, Connecticut; Barbara (Mueller), widow of Ernest Schumann, lives in Jamaica Plain; Anna Muller, married ——Wolf and resides in Roxbury. Mrs. Mock came to the United States at the age of twenty, and settled in Boston. She has been a helpmate to her good husband in the truest sense of the word, always contributing to his assistance in every way possible. Of a genial nature, she has had a welcome home for all who sought her companionship, and with generous hands has given freely to every worthy cause, and, unsolicited, helped many poor German friends whom she found in need. Children: 1. Jacob Henry, mentioned below. 2. Frederick John, born January 18, 1866; died April 12, 1869. 3. Philip A., born May 27, 1870; educated in Boston public schools and at business college, and later was associated with his father in the restaurant business; is a member of the Jamaica Plain Veteran Firemen, and has been captain of the company five years ago; married June 6, 1900, Louise C. Heyl, born April 7, 1877; attends the German Lutheran Church; resides at 28 Burrough street, Jamaica Plain; children: i. Harold A., born June 5, 1901; ii. Hazel E., October 27, 1903; iii. Ralph Jacob, November 20, 1905.

(IV) Jacob Henry, son of Adam Mock, was born May 14, 1863. He received a good education in the public and private schools and at business college. He early entered a business life, associating himself with his father in the restaurant, and of late years has practically succeeded to the management of the business. While he has not been a political office-seeker, at the urgent request of his friends he accepted the nomination for representative to the general court in 1906 and was elected for that term, and again in 1907 and 1908. He has faithfully represented the interests of his constituents, working hard and earnestly for the good of the community. He was a member of the state taxation committee for three years, chairman of the printing committee, and served on the elections and other committees. In 1904 he was a delegate to the Republican national convention which nominated Roosevelt for president. He is a prominent German Republican, and served as a member of the ward committee for four years. In musical circles he is well known, and is also a moving spirit in social organization. For fifteen years he has been organist of the German Lutheran church, and is an active member of the Boston Germania Society, which organization numbers among its members some of the best German citizens of Boston.

He married, October 26, 1892, Mary Anna Heyl, born in South Boston, November 28, 1866, died at her home in Jamaica Plain, August 4, 1898. She was the daughter of August A. Heyl, who was born November 13, 1835, in Weiler, Duchy of Saxe-Weimar, and granddaughter of John Christopher Heyl, who was born in the Harz Mountains, kingdom of Hanover, September 17, 1789. The last named became a papermaker and went to Saxe-Weimar, where he died aged seventy-two years six months; he married, late in life, Elizabeth Nierergal, of Saxony, born June 30, 1816, died March 17, 1900. August A. Heyl learned the baker's trade and came to America when a young man, establishing a bakery in South Boston, where he accumulated a competence; he married Elizabeth Avenius, who was born in Rhein-Pfalz, Bavaria, August 3, 1840, and had children: i. Mary A., married Jacob H. Mock, mentioned above; ii. George A. Heyl, born September 13, 1869; iii. Elizabeth Heyl, May 23, 1870; iv. John Heyl, July 2, 1873, died January 4, 1879; v. Lulu C. Heyl, born April 7, 1877; vi. Laura A. Heyl, twin with Lulu C., died July 26, 1878; vii. Fred. C. Heyl, born April 14, 1881. Children of Jacob H. Mock: 1. Frederick Adam, born August 26, 1893; attends the high school, and is much interested in music. 2. Elsie Eva, January 30, 1896; pupil in grammar school. 3. Louisa M., September 28, 1897, also grammar school student.

John Beless, immigrant ancestor, BELESS lived at Barrow-on-Suir, Leicestershire, England. He was a knitter by trade. He had no schooling and was largely self-educated, but having a gift of speech and being prominent for his religious zeal and fervor, he was made local preacher in the Methodist church. After his five sons had been in America and prospered, they sent for their father and mother. Mr. Beless made his home in Needham, Massachusetts, where he worked in the factory of his son Thomas during the remainder of his active life. He was a prominent member and faithful worker in the Methodist church in Needham. He married Catherine ———, who survived him some years. She is buried in the Needham cemetery. Children: 1. John, born April 5, 1826, mentioned below. 2. Thomas, came from England in 1849, spent a few years at Oakhill, now part of Newton, Massachusetts, removing in 1855 to that part of Needham, an adjoining town, now known as Highlandville, the name first given to it by the Beless brothers and Marshall S. Rice; he and his brother James were in partnership many years, manufacturing knitted goods; they built a larger shop on High street, the house where the brothers lived for thirty years, and their old factory with some additions has recently been remodeled for the Mother's Rest, an institution conducted by the Baptist Society of Newton. 3. James, came from England with his brother Thomas, and was associated in business with him. 4. George, lived at Needham, a knitter by trade also; returned to England, and died there. 5. Joseph, born in England, came to this country about 1850 and lived with his brothers at Oakhill; finally located with his brother Thomas at Needham Plain, where he bought a farm.

(II) John (2), son of John (1) Beless, was born in Barrow-on-Suir, Leicestershire, England, April 5, 1826, and was baptized in infancy in the established church of that parish. He began to learn the knitting trade at the age of eight years. Throughout his boyhood he worked in the mill and in his father's garden, and had but limited schooling. At the age of eighteen years he was a miller's apprentice, but had to abandon that trade on account of an injury to his left hand. He resumed the trade of knitter. His brother, James and Thomas, who preceded him to this country, sent for him. He took passage in the sailing vessel "Stratfordshire," which was lost with all on board when making its next trip to the United States. The voyage lasted twenty-one weeks and he landed in Boston, April, 1852. From Boston he made his way on foot to Oakhill where his brothers lived. He had been given up, the ship being so long overdue, and was welcomed as if he had risen from the dead. He was employed at his trade in the knitting factory of his brothers. His wife and two children, Ruth and Catherine, sailed from England, July 7, 1853, arriving August 25 following. He followed his trade during the remainder of his life. He died at Needham, December 27, 1903, at the age of seventy-seven.

He was a Republican in politics, casting his first vote for Lincoln. He attended the First Parish Church of Needham. He had suffered from asthma from his youth, and, in addition to this affliction was handicapped by the injury to his hand, yet he lived a long and exceedingly useful life. He was distinguished for his uprightness and fair dealing. An instance of the faith reposed in him by those who knew his character is that exhibited by a townsman, Mr. George Gay, who once advanced him five hundred dollars to take up a mortgage debt, refusing to take a note or other security, relying upon the honor of Mr. Beless. It is the simple truth to say that his word was as good as his bond. He was frank, straightforward and honest in all his dealings. He and his brothers helped build up the village of Highlandville, now Needham Heights, and the section has often been called Belessville in token of their enterprise. The deaths of three of the brothers, John, James and Thomas, within the space of seven months was a great loss to the community. He married, in 1847, at St. Mary's Church, Loughborough, England, Charlotte Wright, born July 14, 1831, died November 14, 1885. Children: 1. Ann, born June 21, 1848, died young. 2. Ruth, May 4, 1849, died 1875; married William Lee, a manufacturer of knit goods. 3. Catharine, January, 1851, married George Scotton, manufacturer of knit goods; children: i. Ethel, married, October 12, 1899, Frederick Merton Holmes; their children are: Dorothy Holmes, born October 21, 1900, and Donald Holmes, born October 23, 1904; ii. Grace, a stenographer and bookkeeper. 4. John, October 24, 1852, died young. 5. Esther Ann, September 3, 1854, married William R. Lee, a chemist. 6. Sarah Jane, March 2, 1856, married Joseph Thorpe. 7. John Henry, December 21, 1857, married Mary Lee, daughter of Mark Lee, of the well-known and long-established firm of Lee Brothers. 8. Grace A., mentioned below.

(III) Grace A., daughter of John (2) Beless, was born in Needham, and educated there in the public schools. Since she was twenty years of age she has worked in the knitting factories at different times of Thomas and George Scotton, M. J. Moseley and her brother-in-law, Joseph Thorpe. In fact, all her brothers and sisters who grew to maturity followed the family trade of knitting at some period in their lives. In her youth she attended the First Unitarian Church and for many years belonged to the Sunday school. At present she attends the Episcopal church and is actively interested in its work.

(For ancestry see Richard Pomeroy).

(VII) Thomas Jefferson POMEROY Pomeroy, son of Deacon Justus Pomeroy, was born at Easthampton, April 12, 1808, and died March 17, 1888. He was educated in the public schools and at Williston Seminary at Easthampton. He was for many years an undertaker in Easthampton. (For preceding generations see Robert Eyricke 1).

This Scandinavian name of HERRICK great antiquity has had numerous variations as follows: Eric, Eitike, Erik, Erike, Erick, Irek, Eyrek, Eyrice, Eyricke, Herik, Heryk, Herick or Heyrick. Among those on record are Henry and Alam Eyryk of Great Stretton, in the twelfth century; Robert Eyricke of Houghton, in 1450; and John Heyrick of Leicester, with his son Nicholas of London, who were probably the first to introduce the initial H. His son Robert used the form Herick, and the other sons adopted Heyrick. The ancient family claimed descent from Ericke, the Danish chief who invaded Britain in the reign of Alfred, and being vanquished was compelled to repeople the wasted districts. He was known as "Eric, King of the Danes who hold the Countrie of East Angle." The pedigree of the English family of Herrick points to Sir William, of the Leicester county branch, as the father of the American ancestor. William Herrick was a goldsmith of London—in those days a most honorable occupation, in-volving more than the mere sale of plate and jewels. He was honored with knighthood by James I. The next year Sir William entered Parliament, and for twelve years or more he was in almost daily service at the court. He loaned huge sums of money to the king for both public and private purposes. He finally settled, a very rich man, on his fine estate, Beau Manor Park, as a retired merchant, in 1624. His wife, Lady Joan, was noted for her piety and beauty, as the following couplet placed under her portrait shows:

"Art may her outside thus present to view,
How fair wth'in no art or tongue can show."

(I) Henry or "Heneric Hericke" was the fifth son of Sir William and Lady Joan Hericke, of Leicester county England, and was born at Beau Manor in 1604. When he came to America he probably landed first in Virginia, for his father, Sir William, was interested in the early mercantile adventures of that colony. The only record of any of the sons of Sir William residing abroad was in 1653, when Henry was mentioned under circumstances indicating that his residence at that time was in America. It is stated that "a Cleveland emigrated with Henry Hericke from Beau Manor, parish of Loughborough." The following communication in support of this was received in 1651 by Rev. Henry Cleveland while in England: "Henry Herick, son of Sir William, went from Virginia to Salem, Massachusetts, and was there January 28, 1653, as per letter now preserved at Beau Manor, addressed to his brother John. With this Herrick went to America a Cleveland of Loughborough." It is stated that the family arms of the Salem branch are identical with those of the Leicester county family of England. Henry settled at Salem, "on the Cape Ann Syde of Bass River", now Beverly. He was "a husbandman in easy circumstances". He married Editha, daughter of Hugh Las-kin, of Salem, who was born in 1614, and was living in 1674. He and his wife were among the thirty founders of the First Church at Salem, 1629. They are on record as having been fined "for aiding and abetting an excommunicated person, contrary to order". He is described as a good honest man, of no special civil rank or influence in the colony. Besides his farm on "Cape Ann Syde" he purchased others at Birch Plain and Cherry Hill, on which he settled his sons Zacharie, Ephraim, Joseph and John. He died in 1671. He had eight children, viz: Thomas, married Hannah Ordway, died s. p.; Zacharie, baptized December 25, 1636; Ephraim, baptized February 11, 1638; Henry, baptized January 16, 1640; Joseph, baptized August 6, 1645; Elizabeth, baptized July 4, 1647; Jone, baptized May 25, 1650; Benjamin, died s. p., about 1677.

(II) Ephraim, third son of Henry and Editha (Laskin) Herrick, was born in Salem, Massachusetts, and baptized February 11, 1638. He lived on the farm at Birch Plain, given to him by his father. He married, July 3, 1661, Mary Cross. His death occurred September 18, 1693. They had eight children, viz: John, born May 31, 1662; Ephraim, August 13, 1664; Mary, June 14, 1667; Stephen, March 15, 1670; Sarah; Samuel, June 4, 1675; Timothy, January 4, 1681; Anna, November 20, 1683.

(III) Stephen, third son of Ephraim and Mary (Cross) Herrick, was born on the Birch Plain farm, Beverly, Massachusetts, March 15, 1670. He married, December 31, 1692, Elizabeth Trask. He removed to Preston, Connecticut, subsequently to 1716, and was commissioned lieutenant as shown by public records: "Colonel Rec of Connecticut, October, 1737: This Assembly doe establish and confirm Mr. Stephen Herrick to be the Lientenant of (the) second company or train band of (the) town of Preston and order that he be commissioned accordingly." The children of Stephen and Elizabeth, all born in Beverly, were: Elizabeth, October 17, 1693; Edward; Stephen Jr., July 24, 1697; Ebenezer, May 17, 1699; Abigail, June 15, 1701; Anna, November 2, 1702; Mary, April 15, 1705; Lydia, July 13, 1707; Sarah, October 10, 1708.

(IV) Edward, oldest son of Stephen and Elizabeth (Trask) Herrick, was born at Beverly, Massachusetts, October 17, 1695. He married three times. The first wife left no children. His second marriage took place December 9, 1737, and this wife, Margaret

Avery, of Groton, Connecticut, was the mother of his children. They probably resided at Preston or Norwich, Connecticut. The children by the second marriage were: Lucy, born August 31, 1738; Henry, April 3, 1740; Jonathan, December 3, 1743; Margaret, March 20, 1745; Grace, July 4, 1747; Moses, September 24, 1749, died July, 1794. The third wife of Edward Herrick was Elizabeth Brannan (married 1757).

(V) Jonathan, second son of Edward and Margaret (Avery) Herrick, was born at Preston, Connecticut, December 3, 1743, died in 1822. He was a soldier of the revolutionary war. He married Elizabeth Clark, and resided at Norwich. Their children were: Lucy, born April 14, 1762; Stephen, May 10, 1764; Jonathan and Elizabeth (twins) July 14, 1767; Moses, April 17, 1774; Aaron, May 13, 1776; Thomas, January 14, 1779; William.

(VI) Aaron, fourth son of Jonathan and Elizabeth (Clark) Herrick, was born in Norwich, Connecticut, May 13, 1776, died at Montgomery, Hampden county, Massachusetts, April 28, 1828. He was a farmer. He married, 1823, Polly Shurtliff, born October 3, 1788, died at Litchfield, Medina county, Ohio, March 16, 1869. Their children were: Aaron Hutchinson, born July 20, 1821; Henry S., December 8, 1822; Polly Swann, August 17, 1824; Sarah Orlanda, January 2, 1826; Maderia Alsina, February 2, 1828, married, February 22, 1850, William Howard Brooker, born February 9, 1826, lived in Litchfield, Ohio. He served as private two years in the Mexican war and as lieutenant in the war of the rebellion. They had no children.

(VII) Henry S., second son of Aaron and Polly (Shurtliff) Herrick, was born in Chicopee, Hampden county, Massachusetts, December 8, 1822. He was a builder. He married (first) in 1846, Louisa M. Cooley, of Somers, Tolland county, Connecticut, who died leaving no children. Mr. Herrick married (second) in 1854, Cynthia A., daughter of Eleazur and Nabby (Kellogg) Wright, who was born June 20, 1832, a graduate of Mt. Holyoke Seminary in 1851. Children: Anna L., born April 20, 1855, and Edward W., born June 25, 1863, a wood carver.

(VIII) Anna Louisa, only daughter of Henry S. and Cynthia A. (Wright) Herrick, was born at New Haven, Connecticut, April 20, 1855. She married, November 3, 1875, Austin Ely Smith, born at Holyoke, Massachusetts, February 4, 1850, son of Roswell

Ely and Elizabeth (Ely) Smith, the former of whom served as superintendent of the Glasgow Cotton Mills at South Hadley Falls, George A. Atwater, president

Austin E. Smith attended the Hadley high school, and when fourteen years of age, having developed in his boyhood a capacity for business, he secured a position at the mills where his father was employed, remaining for three years when he resigned to take a clerkship in Hiram Smiths general store. A year later he entered the Providence Conference Seminary and took a commercial course. In the meantime his father had purchased a farm, and he returned home to take charge of it, but entered business life again after a period of six months. Mr. Smith came into local prominence by reason of his efficient service in the employ of the Springfield Street Railroad Company. He had been connected with the local company since its organization, holding different offices from that of cashier to treasurer and manager, and in every part of this employment he showed an efficiency that marked him as one of the men whose business ability and honorable qualities insure them the highest confidence of all those with whom they come in contact. During the nine years he was managing director he did much to improve the facilities of the road and develop and promote the courtesy and careful attention which have been marked characteristics of the public service of this company. Mr. Smith was very methodical in all of his work, keeping his business affairs and that of the company in the most complete shape, always under his own immediate direction, and in all of his work he showed the greatest of frankness and honesty and his word was always relied upon implicitly by his superior officers as well as by those in his employ. Mr. John Olmstead, who was president of the Street Railroad Company, had come to rely wholly upon Mr. Smith as his assistant; he often spoke of his efficiency, and remarked many times about the smoothness with which street railway affairs were going, and how much confidence he placed in his ability. The employees of the Street Railroad Company, with whom Mr. Smith was in almost immediate touch, looked up to him as one of the finest men for whom they could work, their interests being always his, and he looked carefully after their welfare; he had been known to consider favorably many applications of men whose misfortunes had placed them in tight places and who came to him with clean records otherwise, but who were pressed for employment through which to find support.

Mr. Smith's connection with the business interests of Springfield were not confined alone to street railway management. He held much stock in other street railway organizations, and had direct interests with many of the large business affairs of the city. He was a director in the Northampton street railroad, also in the Holyoke street railroad system, and in the First National Bank of Springfield. He was considered an expert in street railway affairs, and when the city of Boston consolidated the old East End street railway into its present system, Mr. Smith was called to that city as a railroad expert and spent several months there in that capacity, being the only one selected to fill that important position. Entering the employ of the Springfield Street Railroad Company in 1870 as cashier, when but twenty years of age, he counted out the first dollar ever earned by the company, which is now preserved in scrip in the office of the company. Mr. Smith was for several years during his residence at the North End prominent in the work of the Memorial Church, of which organization he for a time was treasurer. Upon taking up his residence at Forrest Park he became prominent in the work of Faith Church. He was not a man who talked much of his religious convictions, but was one of the few who lived every day a conscientious, moral, honest life. Though not demonstrative he was very sympathetic, and was a man of exceptional taste.

He married, as aforesaid, Anna Louisa Herrick, and they were the parents of two children: Lyda, born July 20, 1876, died August 16, 1879; and Rubie Adelaide, born February 8, 1887. Mr. Smith died August 8, 1880. He was survived by a widow and daughter; a brother, Frank D. Smith; and a sister, Mrs. Frederick W. Wilson, of Chicopee, Massachusetts.

He was a farmer in Raynham, Massachusetts, and came to Wrentham in 1794, settling at Honey Pot (Pondville), where he bought of Ephraim Wilbore (Wilbur), one hundred and sixteen acres, also two tracts of

He early learned the trade of cooper, which he followed with farming, doing cooper work for the people of the town. He became much impaired in fortune in later years, and died of a tumor of the stomach. His farm was in Honey Pot, consisting of some seventy-five acres, and he raised cattle and sheep for their wool, and marketed his hay at Walpole. He served in the revolution, as private in Captain John Shaw's company, Colonel Abiel Mitchell's regiment; marched to Rhode Island, March 6, 1781, by order of Governor John Hancock, on a forty days' expedition from Raynham. He belonged to the orthodox church in Wrentham and was a Whig in politics. (V) Charles Pinkney, son of Andrew (2) Gilmore, was born at Wrentham, at what is known as Honey Pot, (Pondville), now a part of the town of Norfolk, February 21, 1803, and died at Wrentham, April 13, 1872. He attended the old district school at Pondville until about fifteen, working with his father on the farm. Later he began working out for different farmers in the town, and also managed several farms on shares, but owing to drouth these efforts proved failures. He was an indefatigable worker. He lived on the old Preston Pond place, which he bought. This he lost through a flaw in the deed. He later removed to the home of his son Joseph, at Pondville, where he died, April 13, 1872, and is buried in Norfolk. He was a good farmer and an upright man, of retiring habits, and very pronounced on the temperance question. He attended the Congregational orthodox church, and was a Republican in politics. He married, at Wrentham, December 17, 1826, Almirax Keith, born at Barre, Vermont, June 11, 1806, died March 29, 1900, daughter of Warren and Jemima (Merrifield) Keith. Children: 1. Joseph G., born in Walpole, November 26, 1827, died in Wrentham, April 27, 1900; married Catherine Casey, of Dedham; children: i. Laura C., born February 20, 1858, died September 10, 1858; ii. Joseph Warren, born November 11, 1859, died February 22, 1866; iii. John, born July 18, 1866; iv. Mary Amelia, born March 24, 1870, married (first) October 17, 1894, Charles W. Blake, (second) William Guthre; v. Ruth, married Dennis Tagney; vi. Rebecca, married (first) James Day, (second) Warren Slater; vii. Robert, married Grace L. Williams; viii. Edward Keith, born January 24, 1864, died February 3, 1889. 2. Charles Metcalf, born September 2, 1829, died March 22, 1845. 3. Henry Merrill, born November 4, 1831, died September 4, 1852. 4. Warren Keith; see forward. 5. Ellen Almira, born October 12, 1839; married, April 19, 1859, William Riley Farr, of West Chelmsford, New Hampshire. 6. William Metcalf, born March 21, 1847.

(VI) Warren Keith, son of Charles Pinkney Gilmore, was born in Medfield, Massachusetts, October 9, 1836. At the age of six months his parents removed to Wrentham, where he received his education in the district schools, and helping his father on the farm until he was fifteen years old. He then spent three years learning boot making, with Lewis Shepard, after which he entered the straw shop (Allens) at Norfolk, where he worked in the bleachery six months. For three years afterward he worked in the blocking room of William E. George's straw shop, at Wrentham. He then decided to engage in business on his own account, and began in the livery stable line in a small way, but soon became fully equipped with stock and vehicles, and conducted the business with success for a period of fifteen years. For fourteen years of this time he ran the mail stage to Norfolk, and during the latter part of this service was earning nine hundred dollars a year—a very good showing in those days. On August 11, 1867, he was so unfortunate as to lose his entire equipment, including fifteen horses (saving only seven) by fire, and entirely without insurance. This disaster would have impelled him to move from the town, but his fellow townsmen decided to keep him with them, and they contributed nine hundred dollars to aid him in rebuilding. He built his homestead where it now stands, but decided to give up the livery business, and he engaged in the flour and grain trade in his new quarters, and has since successfully conducted a profitable trade in flour, grain, hay, cement, lumber, coal and drain pipe. In 1904 he admitted his four sons as equal partners, George and Fred conducting the business at Wrentham, and Frank and Charles having charge of the branch at Walpole, this affording a wide circle of trade, taking in many of the surrounding town. The family attend the Orthodox church at Wrentham. Mr. Gilmore has served the society as a member of the prudential and other committees. In politics he is a Republican.

Mr. Gilmore married, (first), at Milford, Massachusetts, 1857, Evelyn Capen, born in Holliston, died in Wrentham, April 7, 1862, daughter of Benjamin (of Brighton) and Rebecca (Sanger) Capen. Of this marriage was born Evelyn Capen, March 20, 1862, married, July 11, 1897, Frank Emerson George. Mr. Gilmore married (second) November 14, 1865, Ellen Maria Rand, born July 28, 1845, daughter of David Anson and Harriet Caroline (Austin) Anson, of Wrentham. Her father was a wood merchant of Providence, Rhode Island. Children: 2. George Warren, born January 18, 1867. 3. Frank Rand, born November 2, 1868; married, January 28, 1897, Lena Frances Hartshorn, of Walpole; children: i. Warren Rand, born October 10, 1898; ii. James Francis, March 7, 1901; iii. Evelyn, April 13, 1904; iv. Fred Hartshorn, December 14, 1908. 4. Charles Austin, born August 25, 1870. 5. Fred Edwin, born March 30, 1873; married, October 29, 1902, Alice Amelia Carpenter. (See Carpenter).

Many of the citizens of BLEILER Boston and vicinity whose knowledge of the crafts acquired in Germany have made them useful in building up the industries of the United States, are successful in the line they represent, and none stand higher in general esteem in the community than the Bleiler family, who have been prominent and successful as meat and provision dealers.

(I) Joseph Bleiler was born in Rhein-Bavaria more than a hundred years ago, of an old and respected German family. He was a soldier for some years in the wars of his times, including the Napoleonic and Holland wars. He was a dealer in meats in the village, and applied himself industriously to his trade for many years, and died at the advanced age of over ninety years. He was of the German Catholic faith. He was twice married, rearing a large family, five of whom grew to maturity and married. These were: 1. Peter, spent his entire life in Germany; was a butcher by trade, conducting it in connection with other business; married, and had a large family, of whom Peter Jr. and Margaret came to the United States, the former living in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. 2. Charles, came to the United States and later settled in Canada, and died at the home of a brother who had been a resident of that country, near Montreal, for a number of years. 3. Frederick Jacob, mentioned below. Two daughters also came to America and lived near Montreal, where they died.

(II) Frederick Jacob, son of Joseph Bleiler, was born in the village of Lohrweiler, Bavaria, in January, 1805. He learned his father's trade and succeeded well in the same business, as was characteristic of the family. He married, in his native province, Charlotte Simmons, born in Grumbach, Prussia, a town four miles away, in another state, in December, 1804. She was the daughter of parents born in Rhein-Prussia, of strong Lutheran faith, and although differing in religion, Mr. and Mrs. Bleiler always lived in harmony, never allowing difference in faith to disturb the serenity of the family. In 1852 he and his wife and six children came to the United States, four of their children having already preceded them to this country. He landed in New York City, and from there went to Boston, where at one time or another all the male members of the family have been engaged in the meat and provision trade. Children, all of whom lived to maturity, and to be over fifty years of age: 1. Jacob, born in Bavaria about 1829; married Julia Schmidt, and came to this country in 1848, settling in Boston, where he was a butcher on Ruggles street, Roxbury; later he became a mechanic, and after some years he retired and died in 1905, leaving a widow and family residing on Mechanic street; he was one of the men most prominent in securing the naturalization of Germans who came to Boston, and settled in the Roxbury district, and worked always for the advancement of the German-American citizens; children: i. Mary; ii. Jacob, deceased; iii. Charles, deceased; iv. Louise; v. Emma, deceased; vi. Julia Fenia; vii. Caroline. 2. Catherine, came to America with her brother Jacob, in 1848, and settled in Boston. 3. George, came to America in 1849, and settled at Watertown, where he conducted a large abattoir; married Elizabeth Fischer, now deceased; children: George, Charles, Lena, Lizzie, Frank and Edward. 4. Charlotte, came with her brother George, in 1849, to Boston, and married Jacob Jacobs, of Bavaria, Germany, who was a machinist in Boston from young manhood until his death some years ago; she died a number of years ago, leaving children William, Lizzie, Frank, Charles and Louise Jacobs, all married; other children who died young were John, Jacob, Charlotte, Catherine and Julia Jacobs. 5. Peter, settled in Roxbury, where he carried on the meat business; married Orphra Zimmerman, who died before him; he died leaving children, Peter and Charles (cigar manufacturers), and a daughter Barbara, who died young. 6. John, born in Bavaria, May 9, 1838; mentioned below. 7. Frederick, born in Germany, in July, 1840; mentioned below. 8. Elizabeth, married Philip Albrecht, retired, and resides on Mt. Pleasant avenue, Roxbury; children: Louise, Lizzie and Ernest Albrecht, and Philip Albrecht, deceased. 9. Charles, born March 7, 1845; mentioned below. 10. Louise, married Jacob Mentzger, who was for years a well-known musician of Boston, now dead; she died leaving children Elizabeth, Charlotte, William and Henry Mentzger.

(III) John, son of Frederick Jacob Bleiler, was born in Bavaria, May 9, 1838, and at the age of thirteen came with his parents to the United States, settling in Boston. Not long afterwards he became interested in the meat and provision business, first as driver of a delivery wagon. When the Bleiler business was located at the corner of Tremont and Vernon streets, he became proprietor and succeeded well. In 1862 he purchased a lot of land on which he began to make improvements, and from time to time added to his possessions, until he owns a valuable block of business and residential houses, all free and clear from any incumbrance. He also owns a pleasant summer home and beach lot at Hough's Neck Beach, near Boston. After forty years of active industry he retired and now spends a quiet life, giving himself the pleasure of reading, and keeping well informed on the current subjects of the day. He has been an active Republican, prominent in his ward. For five successive years (1897-98-99, 1900-01) he was elected to the house of representatives, and during that time worked hard in the interests of his constituents. He served on many important committees, including printing and mercantile affairs, and the committee on liquor laws, of which he was the chairman. He was a unique character in the legislature, and his ready wit and flow of oratory made him very popular in debate, and the galleries were always crowded to hear him. With his extremely fluent, well-expressed sentences, was an admixture of his German accent which added not a little to the attractiveness of his speech. Always looking sharply about him for material for his argument, he held the attention of his audience closely, and his unimpeachable honesty and strong argument drove his well-taken points home. His efforts in the legislature were very fruitful, and no bill that he advocated failed to pass. He was locally known as "the old war-horse," "Uncle John," and "Honest John Bleiler." He was frequently called upon by people of all classes to settle disputes and misunderstandings and adjust claims. In his political career it was the pride of his friends that he never was controlled by corporations or a political machine. Being a well-informed man and a constant student of human nature, he is exceedingly well equipped to cope with the many difficult questions brought to him for settlement. In his ambition to do everything well and to make the most of his opportunities he has carved out a career of which he may well be proud. He was for twelve years a member of the Boston Dragoons, part of which time he was first lieutenant, and exhibits with great pleasure a beautiful sword and scabbard presented to him at a special gathering. It is a pleasant memento of respect, bearing this inscription: "Presented to First Lieutenant John Bleiler, by his friends of Company B, Boston Dragoons, May 15, 1872." Mr. Bleiler has served in the local military company for thirty-two years. He is ex-president of the Roxbury Horse Guards Veterans Association, mounting through the various promotions from private to quartermaster, and serving under thirteen captains. He is a member of the Knights of Honor; Pilgrim Fathers; German Order of Harugari; Kossuth Lodge No. 24; Star of Jamaica Plain, Veteran Firemen's Association; and the Boston Schwaben Verein.

He married, in Boston, January 29, 1860, Katherine Mangels, born in East Boston, May 5, 1841, daughter of Christopher J. and Katherine (Beeler) Mangels. Her father was a native of Alstedt, county Leo, Holland, and her mother of Strasburg, Germany. Her mother was daughter of Joseph Beeler, who was one of Napoleon's aides during much of the military career of that great general, and her brother now living in East Boston, was identified prominently with the artillery during the civil war in this country, serving with distinction and losing an arm as the result of a gunshot wound at Pensacola, Florida, and carrying several medals for bravery in action. Her father and mother were married in Boston, and Mr. Mangels was associated with the sugar refining industry, where he met with a serious accident which resulted in his death at the age of thirty-six years; his wife survived him a number of years, dying in 1890; they had six children: i. Mary M. Mangels, married Albert Ostermeyer, and died in New York City, in 1908; ii. John C. Mangels, died when a young man; iii. Katherine Mangels, married John Bleiler, mentioned above; iv. Franklin Mangels, a United States marshal, and a member of the Signal Service, is now a ranchman of El Paso, Texas, and is married; v. Wilhelmina Mangels, widow of Arnold Schupback, of Malden; vi. Andrew Mangels, resides at East Boston, in the employ of the Boston & Albany railroad

(III) Frederick, son of Frederick Jacob Bleiler, was born in Germany, July 18, 1840, and came when a boy of ten with his parents to America. He attended the public schools of this country, and before he was of age had acquired a good education and a very thorough knowledge of the butcher's trade. From his early youth his ambition was to become a successful man, and so well did he succeed that he is now one of the wealthiest German citizens of Boston. He conducted an extensive business in meats and provisions in Boston, and invested largely in real estate to good advantage. In early manhood he was a member of the Boston Light Dragoons, of which he was for some time a sergeant. In politics he took an active part, and was the first citizen of German birth to be elected to a city office, from his ward, being elected a member of the city council in 1872-73. For some years he was a member of Ward Nineteen Republican committee, and was an active worker for his party until he retired a few years ago. Late in life he joined the Democratic party on account of political intrigue in local politics. Besides his large estates in Boston he owns a beautiful farm of nineteen acres in Watertown, which is operated now as a gardening farm. He is a member of the Boston Market Gardeners' Association and the Retail Grocers' Association of Boston.

He married, September 2, 1863, Rosa J. Grabert, born in Schorndorf county, in the village of Schnide, Wurtemberg, Germany, May 17, 1843. She came to this country in 1857 with her mother, to join her father, who had come in 1852 and settled in Boston, where they have since made their home. She was daughter of Gottlieb and Christina (Hammer) Grabert, of old Wurtemberg stock. Her father had been a baker in Germany, but after coming to Boston, became a currier. He was born in 1817, and died in Boston in 1864. Her mother was born in 1816 and died in 1858. They had children: i. Christina Grabert, born December 22, 1841; unmarried. ii. Rosa Grabert, married Frederick Bleiler, mentioned above; iii. John Grabert, born January 27, 1845, a caterer by profession, married Mary Yetto, and resides in Roxbury, with the following children: John, Alice, William, Henry and Emma Grabert; iv. Jacob Grabert, engaged as manager of large rubber works at Bristol, Rhode Island; married Katherine Evers, now deceased, and had Ellam, Mary, Henry, John, Herman, Fred, Rosa, and Lelia Grabert; v. Gottlieb Grabert, a confectioner, married Emma Krautwurst, and had Roscoe and Walter Grabert, the latter deceased; vi. Henry Grabert, a provision dealer who went to Arkansas and settled, married Jennie Crowell, and had Clottie, Alphonso, Clarence, Mabel and Florence Grabert. Mr. Bleiler is a German Catholic in religion, and his wife is of the Lutheran faith. He is an active member of the Boston German Society, the German Aid Society, and other local social orders. Children: 1. Frederick C., born December 11, 1864; merchant of Roxbury, and member of the city council in 1892, unmarried. 2. Amelia, born October 27, 1877; married Henry Keller and resides in Roxbury. 7. Julius, born January 29, 1880; is associated with his father in business; unmarried, and lives at home. 8. Joseph, born May 7, 1883; lives at home.

(III) Charles, son of Frederick Jacob Bleiler, was born in Rhein-Bavaria, March 7, 1845, and at the age of seven came with his parents to the United States. He was educated in the Boston public schools, and at the early age of fifteen entered the meat and provision business on his own account, being the youngest business man in Boston at the time. In 1861, when the call for troops came for the defense of the Union, Mr. Bleiler was anxious to serve his adopted country, and enlisted in the First Massachusetts Volunteer Cavalry Regiment, responding to the first call for three years men. He enlisted under Captain Leonard, Colonel Robert E. Williams. The regiment was ordered to the front in December, 1861, stopping at Annapolis until February, 1862, when it moved to Port Royal, South Carolina, doing active service, and a little later joined the Army of the Potomac, going to Alexandria, Virginia, in the fall of 1862. From that time the regiment was with the Army of the Potomac until mustered out of service, after many engagements. At Poolsville, Private Bleiler was with a small detachment sent out to meet the vanguard of Lee's army, and the little force was driven back with severe loss to their number. He afterwards fought under McClellan in the battles of South Mountain; Antietam; Fredericksburg; Rapidan Station, April 30, 1863; Chancellorsville; Sulphur Springs; Gettysburg; Culpeper, and again at Sulphur Springs; Auburn, Virginia, October 14, 1863; Mine Run; Weldon Railroad; Lee's Mills; Williamsport; Stony Creek, December 1, 1864, and finally at Appomattox, having taken part in more than forty different engagements and skirmishes. Before he had served two years he was made a corporal of his company, and July 11, 1864, was commissioned sergeant. After two years and six months of service he was honorably discharged, but reenlisted February 23, 1864, and was again honorably discharged July 26, 1865, when the troops were disbanded at the close of the war. He then held the rank of quartermaster-sergeant. Later he was offered a commission by Governor Andrew as lieutenant of a company of colored troops to make a scouting tour through the south, but declined the commission. While in the army he was frequently selected for detached duty, and was in many hardfought battles and skirmishes, having many narrow escapes, but returned home unharmed, and resumed business at Roxbury as a meat and provision dealer, continuing until his retirement in 1899.

While he was in business he built up and improved some splendid property in both the residential and business sections of Roxbury, has a pleasant summer home at Hough's

Neck, where he spends a part of the year. He takes an active interest in local matters, but is not especially interested in politics, though he is identified as an independent Republican. In 1885 he was one of the organizers of the exclusively German post of the Grand Army of the Republic, known as Frederick Hecke Post, No. 21, and was elected junior vice-commander at its inception. Two years later he was made senior vice-commander, and the following year commander. At this time he was presented with a gold medal bearing the inscription: "Presented to Charles Bleiler by the comrades of Frederick Hecke Post, No. 21, G. A. R., June 8, 1885." He retired from active official duty in connection with the post in 1907, but was prevailed upon again to accept the command in 1908, and still holds the office. He is a member of the Boston Pilgrim Fathers, John Winthrop Colony, No. 16.

He married, May 1, 1867, in Boston, Florence R. Abele, born near the Paul Revere house, in the north part of Boston, October 16, 1846, died October 24, 1907, daughter of Philip and Barbara (Elick) Abele. Her father was born in Baden, Germany, and came to Boston, where he was engaged in business as a tradesman and died aged sixty years. Her mother was born in Alsace-Lorraine (then France, now Germany), and died aged eighty-four. Their children were: i. Philippina Abele, married William Einhorn, a cooper-smith, and is living, a widow, in Roxbury; ii. Philip Abele, married Kate Mullen, and died in middle life, and his widow lives in Boston; iii. Josephine Abele, married Joseph Hantz, and resides in Jamaica Plain; iv. Louise Abele, married William Jacobs, a retired merchant, living on Perkins street, Jamaica Plain; v. Edward H. Abele, resides in Boston. Children of Charles and Florence Bleiler: 1. Frances M., born May 23, 1868; married Henry Kaisle, a machinist; lives in Roxbury; children: Gertrude and Harry. 2. Charles W., born 1870; married Annie McFee, and lives in Boston; children: Reta, Saltie, George, Walter C., and Hazel. 3. Two daughters named Lotta, and sons Frank and Frederick, died young.

This family is of Welsh extraction, and its members have been widely dispersed throughout the United States from the early colonial days. It had various representatives in the patriot army in the war for independence.

(I) The line at present under consideration had for its American progenitor Bartholomew Ellis, who came from Ireland, where his ancestors settled in the early part of the seventeenth century. He was captain of a merchant vessel, died of ship fever on one of his return voyages to New York and was buried on Staten Island, New York harbor. He married Mary Rosina Waterbury, February 23, 1815. Children: 1. John Peter, born in New York, July 20, 1817, died September 6, 1896; buried in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn, New York. 2. Charles Bartholomew, born June 28, 1819, died February 10, 1850; buried at Panama. 3. Mary Lydia, born October 27, 1821, died September 13, 1885; buried in Greenwood cemetery; married George Z. Bartholf. 4. Theodore Waterbury, born July 25, 1823, see forward. 5. Edwin, born June 25, 1825, died August 15, 1826; buried in New York. 6. Robert Haskell, born June 10, 1827, died March 22, 1897; buried in Woodlawn cemetery, New York.

(II) Theodore Waterbury, fourth child and third son of Captain Bartholomew and Mary Rosina (Waterbury) Ellis, was born in New York, July 25, 1823, died in Springfield, Massachusetts, January 15, 1903. He was an active business man, and for many years had the management of the Glasgow Mills at South Hadley Falls, Massachusetts. He married Maria Louise Van Boskerck, a descendant from Anneke Jans, famous as the grantor of the lands now occupied by Trinity Church, in New York City. Her line is as follows: (I) John and Aneke Bogardus. (II) Sybrant Brower Uldrich. (III) Abraham Brower, Elizabeth Ackerman. (IV) John Brower, Rachel Van Broeckel. (V) George W. Van Boskerck, born in Hackensack, New Jersey, November 17, 1764. (VI) Abraham Van Boskerck, born in Hackensack, New Jersey, May 19, 1794, died December 30, 1872, and Hannah Maria Pitman. (VII) Maria L. Van Boskerck, married Theodore W. Ellis.

(III) Ralph Waterbury, son of Theodore Waterbury and Maria Louise (Van Boskerck) Ellis, was born in South Hadley Falls, Massachusetts, November 25, 1856. He attended the public schools until he was fifteen years of age. In 1871 the family removed to Springfield, and he attended the high school there, graduating in June, 1875, at the age of eighteen, as valedictorian of his class. He then entered Harvard College, from which he was graduated Bachelor of Arts in 1879, eleventh in a very large class. While in college he was prominent in indoor athletics, taking the cup for horizontal bar work one year. He was secretary of the Pi Eta fraternity. He took a two years course in the Harvard Law School, graduating in 1881, then entered the law office of Hon. M. P. Knowlton, of Springfield, and was admitted to the bar of Hampden county, November 17, 1881. He at once entered upon the active practice of his profession, with offices in Springfield. Out of inclination and on account of other important business relations, he gradually restricted his professional labors to probate practice, examination of titles to real estate, and conveyancing, and in the latter line has probably the largest clientele of any single attorney in western Massachusetts. He is officially connected with various corporations, being president of the John Hancock and Agawam Bank (in liquidation); director of the Springfield National Bank; trustee of the Five Cents Savings Bank; director of the Holyoke Card and Paper Company; and of the United States Spring Bed Company; president of the Nepissiquit Lumber Company of New Brunswick, Canada. In politics he is a Republican, and served in 1893 as a member of the state legislature for the Sixth Hampden district, and serving on the insurance and public service committees. He was for four years a member of the Springfield common council, and also served on the board of aldermen. In 1903 he was mayor of Springfield, and conducted a most successful administration. He is a member of the First Congregational Church of Springfield, and clerk of the First Parish. He is treasurer of the Wesson Maternity Hospital; member and former president of the Harvard Club; and member of the Harvard Alumni Association, the Harvard Law School Association, the Phi Beta Kappa fraternity, the Saturday Night Club, the Nayasset Club, the Springfield Country Club, the Connecticut Valley Congregational Club, and the Connecticut Valley Historical Society. Mr. Ellis married, January 12, 1882, Katharine Allyn Rice, born January 12, 1856, daughter of George W. and Jane C. (Marsh)

Rice, of Springfield. Children: 1. Theodore Waterbury, born September 2, 1887; graduate of Springfield high school, 1906, of Harvard, class of 1910. 2. Ralph Waterbury, born May 3, 1896.

Matthew James Van Leeuwen, one of the most successful and best known nurserymen and landscape gardeners of this state, is a citizen of Farnklin, Massachusetts. He was born January 26, 1869, in the village of Watergraafsmeer, Holland, which at that time was famous for its Botanical School, "Lineaus", where his father was employed as a practical instructor in arbor culture. At the age of two his parents moved to the city of Rotterdam to embark in the business of florist and nurseryman on a small scale on their own account, and it was there that young Matthew J., in company with his older brother Adrianus, now located at Worcester, Massachusetts, at an early age attended the common schools, making an enviable record as a pupil. At the age of twelve years, having finished the studies of the common school, he entered upon a higher course of education under the preceptorship of Professor E. Johnson, taking in at the same time an evening course for two years of drawing and moulding at the Academy of Arts and Technical Knowledge. When at fourteen years of age, as is the custom in Holland, he was to choose an occupation, he expressed the desire to continue his studies with a view of becoming a teacher, and consequently secured a position as assistant teacher in one of the public schools, which he filled with great credit to himself.

The accounts of golden opportunities in a new country induced him in the spring of 1888 to emigrate to America. Upon his arrival here he settled in the little village of Garfield, Bergen county, near Passaic, New Jersey, where, with his knowledge of plants and flowers and their culture, he soon secured a position in a floral establishment, which gave him an opportunity to acquire a ready acquaintance with the English language, and also fitted him to start out soon in his first successful undertaking on his own account, the opening up of a commodious flower store in one of the principal buildings in the city of Passaic, where he built up a good and profitable trade as a florist, nurseryman and dealer in seeds, which he disposed of in the spring of 1902 to engage in the real estate and in-surance business as a broker, and agent for the Dundee Water Power and Land Company, which offices he occupied a number of years, while developing the eastern section of the city on the unimproved land owned by the company. Gradually branching out and gaining the public confidence of the cosmopolitan population of the town, buying and building on his own behalf, with a remarkable amount of success, he became largely instrumental in the development of the easterly section of Passaic, known as "Dundee", his popularity in that section causing him to be styled "The mayor of Dundee". While thus engaged, during the summer of 1890, Mr. Van Leeuwen entered upon the study of jurisprudence, taking a course in law at the University Law School of New York, where he made the acquaintance of Anna Marie Downs, daughter of Michael J. and Margaret L. (Joyce) Downs, to whom he became engaged and was married March 20, 1897. Continuing in the real estate business, he purchased at that time as a matter of recreation in part, and partly to satisfy his love for agriculture and things pertaining thereto, the Post farm at "Two Bridges", Morris county, New Jersey, containing eighty acres. Here much of his spare time was devoted toward tearing down and remodeling buildings, and in experimenting in agriculture and floriculture. The disastrous floods of 1903, which swept the beautiful valley of Passaic, became the undoing of this enterprise and left Mr. Van Leeuwen a heavy loser in real estate values in that section of the city of Passaic, which he had labored to build up. Disposing of much of his holdings in improved property during the summer of 1903 he moved with his family in the spring following to Franklin to take up his residence there, and the management of the Continental Nurseries, in which he had acquired an interest, and which then in its infancy needed a strong guiding hand. In the spring of 1905, by purchase, he secured the entire interest in these nurseries, and with rapid strides started the development of the grounds, the improvement of the buildings, as well as the building up of an extensive business. He has met with marked success, adding to the acreage by the purchase in the fall of 1907 of a ten acre plot located on Oak street, where improvements are to be made in the near future and which will be in the main devoted to the culture of ornamental evergreens, and will form the annex to the nurseries. Nineteen acres of the home grounds are now under a high state of cultivation and speak for the ability of Mr. Van Leeuwen and the men under him as nurserymen.

As a man of minute detail, much of the working of this extensive business receives his personal attention or by systematical methods gives him the opportunity of a daily review of the work of the day, and the men in charge of each department, and thus by painstaking methods he guards the interest of his customers and enjoys their confidence. From a large acquaintance with many of the old country nurserymen, he has become the representative of a number of these firms, who yearly send large shipments of ornamental stock to these nurseries, from which they find their way to many of the markets of the northern and eastern states. From his sturdy Dutch ancestors he has inherited the many fine qualities they have in common with the New England people, and is esteemed for his benevolence and kindness in thought and deed. His political views are entirely those of the independent; he does not believe in being tied to any particular party, and is in a measure independent in his support, although he has often taken an active interest in politics. The only public office he has ever accepted and held is that of tree warden of Franklin, believing that his experience would be of benefit to the community. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Amelia Lodge, No. 215, Passaic, and an enthusiastic Granger.

(XVII) Dr. George Cushman GATES Coleman Gates, son of Aaron Gates, was born November 8, 1876, at Montgomery, Vermont. He was educated in the public schools of his native town and in the high school at Gardner, Massachusetts, studying his profession in the Dartmouth Medical School, from which he was graduated with the degree of M. D. in 1903. He was an interne for a year and half in St. Vincent's Hospital, New York City; at Boston City Hospital and for six months, and the Deer Island Hospital, Boston, at the Children's Hospital, Boston, and at the New York Lying-in Hospital. He began to practice medicine in partnership with his brother, Dr. Ernest A. Gates, at Springfield, Massachusetts. Since the fall of 1903 he has been established in general practice at Chicopee, Massachusetts. He is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, Hampden District Medical Society, Chicopee Medical Society and the Springfield Academy of Medicine. He is a member of St. John's Lodge of Free Masons, of Chicopee, and Chicopee Falls Chapter, Royal Arch Masons. He is a member of the First Congregational Church of Gardner, Massachusetts. In politics he is a Republican. Dr. Gates is devoted to his profession and enjoys an extensive practice. He married, January 9, 1907, Annie Armstrong, born November 7, 1883, daughter of George W. and Ann (Smith) Armstrong, of Iroquois, Ontario, granddaughter of William and Louise (Brouse) Armstrong, great-grandmother of George Brouse, member of the Canadian parliament, representing a district in Ontario. Her father was a farmer and substantial citizen. They have one child, Philip Armstrong, born November 24, 1908.

This name is probably derived from the word meaning a society or lodge, and may have been Guilder at first, that is, one belonging to a guild, and was spelled Gyller, Gayler, Gyl-lard, Gildard, etc. As Guilder and Guildart the name was found among the Huguenots who emigrated to England and Scotland, and many of its bearers attained distinction in the various professions.

(I) John Guild was born in England about 1616, and died October 4, 1682. With his brother Samuel and sister Ann, who married James Allen of Medfield, he came to America in 1636. He was admitted to Dedham church July 17, 1640, that year buying twelve acres of upland on which he built the homestead which was occupied by himself and descendants for more than two hundred years. He was made a freeman May 10, 1643. He owned land to a considerable extent in Dedham, Wrentham, Medfield and Natick, and was thoroughly honest and industrious in his habits. He never held public office, and the town records show his attendance at but one town meeting, and this was in relation to making alterations and additions to the meeting house. His will was made October 3, 1682, and his inventory shows a valuation of one hundred fifty-three pounds eleven shillings. He married, June 24, 1645, Elizabeth Crooke, of Roxbury, who transferred her relation from the church of that place to that in Dedham, July 4, 1649. Children: John,

In 1703 he was one of a committee to invest and manage school funds; selectman of Dedham from 1693 to 1719; delegate to the general court in 1719. He married, November 29, 1676, Mary, born May 9, 1631-2, daughter of Samuel and Ann (Herring) Woodcock. (III) Ebenezer, sixth son and eighth child of Samuel and Mary (Woodcock) Guild, was born in Dedham, July 23, 1692, and died in Attleboro, Massachusetts, June 8, 1774. He resided in Attleboro, where he is set down as a cordwainer and yeoman. He married, October 12, 1714, Abigail, born in 1701, died November 20, 1708, daughter of Deacon John Daggett. (IV) Joseph, eldest child of Ebenezer and Abigail (Daggett) Guild, was born in Attleboro, Massachusetts, June 22, 1716, and died there, September 18, 1792. He was a man of prominence in the community, owned considerable tracts of land, his name appearing on several deeds as yeoman, and administered on the estate of Otis Whiting, of Wrentham. He was identified with the first Attleboro church, and served during the revolution in Captain Jabez Ellis' company of minute-men and as sergeant in Captain Enoch Robinson's company, Colonel Dean's regiment. He married (first) Hannah ———, died June 16, 1764, daughter of Rev. Ebenezer White. Shortly after his marriage he removed to Wrentham, where he established himself as a farmer and where all his children were born. During the revolution he served as a private from Attleboro in Captain Abiel Clapp's company, Colonel Carpenter's regiment, and marched to Rhode Island, July 24, 1777; also served as private in Captain Amos Ellis' company, Colonel Isaac Dean's regiment, also in Rhode Island. (VI) Samuel (3), second son and child of Samuel (2) and Mittee (Parmenter) Guild, was born in Wrentham, May 5, 1786, and died in Attleboro, Massachusetts, March 12, 1857. He received the ordinary school training of that period, and at an early age devoted himself to his chosen profession of farming, at Wrentham. Three of his children were born on this farm, which was later owned by William Ide. About 1829 he removed with his family to what is now North Attleboro, buying a farm of large area located in what is now the center of the town. He was progressive in his ideas and ready to adopt any improvement which seemed to be at all practicable, and made a specialty of dairy farming, which proved very profitable. He disposed of some portions of this land, among the parcels being the lots on which are now located the Episcopal and Universalist churches. He was a genial and kindly natured man, esteemed for a host of good qualities. At first a member of the Whig party, he later joined the Republicans, was a strong supporter of the anti-slavery measures, and at one time collector of the taxes for his town. He was an active member of the Baptist church. He married, December 31, 1812, Huldah, daughter of Elkanah and Dorcas Whiting. Children: 1. Julia Ann, born September 13, 1813, died July 11, 1873; married, August, 1837, William P. Grover, and has: Helen Stanley, born June 19, 1838, married, July 23, 1868, Hector McLeod, and has: Minnie and Emma. 2. Samuel Simmons, born July 6, 1818, died October 29, 1873; married (first) January 1, 1845, Mary Ann Foster, died September 6, 1849; (second), June 2, 1851, Elizabeth N. Shackley; children: Walter Elmwood, born November 26, 1846, married, September 28, 1876, Ada Byron, of Barrington, Rhode Island. 3. Jason Ferdinand, see forward. 4. Emily Parmenter, born November 9, 1826, died April 19, 1866. 5. Charles Lyman, born May 1, 1829, died June 4, 1883; married, January 16, 1852, Nancy Macpherson; children: i. Alice Minerva, born May 13, 1857, married, June 15, 1874, Elton E. Whiting; children: Frank, Harry and Nettie; ii. Nellie Frances, born August 3, 1862.

(VII) Jason Ferdinand, second son and third child of Samuel (2) and Huldah (Whiting) Guild, was born in Wrentham, January 16, 1824, and died in North Attleboro, Massachusetts, January 2, 1907. When four years of age he removed with his parents to North Attleboro, and his educational training was received in the common schools of that town and the Attleboro Academy, which he attended until he was sixteen years of age. He was then apprenticed to H. M. Richards to learn the jeweler's trade, and worked as a journeyman for two years for Tift & Whiting, manufacturers of gold jewelry. He was also employed by them as a stone setter, and later was a colorer of jewelry for H. M. Barrows. For a number of years he did contract work for F. G. Whiting & Company, employing his own men, and later contracted with Bennett & Young to manufacture swivels used in the jewelry trade, his shop being located for a number of years at his home in High street. Subsequently he made these swivels for many other firms. During his later years he retired from the jewelry business and devoted his time and attention to the cultivation of his homestead. He was a strong advocate of temperance principles, and did a great deal to further the interests of that movement. In his younger days he affiliated with the Adventists, and was always active in the cause of religion, at one time furnishing the necessary financial means for carrying on missionary work in the West Indies. At seventeen, when he first made a profession of religion, he became a member of the old First Baptist Church, in the northern part of town, and helped organize the society that met in Barden's Hall, and later bought the property on which the "White Church of the Free" was erected, this being of the Evangelical creed. Owing to dissensions Mr. Guild withdrew from this society, and, with many followers, founded the Emmanuel Church Mission (undenominational), which was established in Guild's Block in Washington street. He was deacon of this new society and furnished a great part of the funds needed in its work. In politics he was identified with the Republican party, though he never held public office. Mr. Guild married at Attleboro, May 19, 1846, Adelaide Charlotte, born November 27, 1826, daughter of Harvey and Charlotte (Richards) Blackington, the former a farmer of Attleboro. Mr. and Mrs. Guild adopted a boy, Martin Wood, who is now a missionary in India, having been trained for that calling by Mr. Guild.

From our northern neighbor, BULLOCK Canada, the United States has borrowed some of its leading citizens. James J. Hill, the empire builder of the great northwest, was a Canadian; so was the Hon. Jacob H. Galinger, United States senator from New Hampshire. The Bullock stock was from over the Canadian border and it has made a good mark for itself in the states.

(I) Lewis Bullock was born in Stanstead, Province of Quebec, 1809, lived in Yamaska Mountain, Canada, and came to Milton, Vermont, about 1835. He married, March 20, 1832, Mary Jackman, born in Washington, New Hampshire, January 15, 1812.

(II) Orvis Woods, son of Lewis and Mary (Jackman) Bullock, was born at Yamaska Mountain, Canada, December 29, 1834, died in Springfield, Massachusetts, July 31, 1905. He was taken to Milton by his parents when a few months old, and educated in the public and high schools of that place. At the age of nineteen he went to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, as a teacher, and remained there two years. Returning to Milton he entered the general merchandise business, first as a clerk and later as owner. In 1873 he sold his business, came to Springfield, and with his cousin, the late H. W. Bullock, bought the old English key business in Central street. This partnership continued four years, Mr. Bullock then purchasing his cousin's interest in the business. Later, when his health began to fail, he associated with him the late J. A. Robins, this connection continuing for five years. From the small beginning of the key business, Mr. Bullock developed the extensive business known as the Bullock Manufacturing Company, and later as the Bullock Manufacturing Association, which is now owned solely by his widow, who continues this extensive enterprise. She is a highly capable woman and under the supervision of her brother, Wallace B. Fish, who acts as president, E. C. Watson as treasurer, and E. W. Beattie as secretary, the business is in a flourishing condition. They give employment to more than one hundred hands and send goods to foreign countries, as well as furnishing a large domestic trade. Mr. Bullock was an invalid the last few years of his life and traveled extensively for health and pleasure, spending much time in his winter home in Pasadena, California. He was a member of Seneca Lodge, No. 127, Free and Accepted Masons, of Milton, Vermont, and of the Winthrop Club of Springfield, Massachusetts. He was an attendant of the Church of the Unity. He married, August 11, 1875, Fannie Maria, daughter of Judge David and Betsey (Hutchins) Fish.

(I) The Fish line runs back to John Fish, who came over from England and settled in Vermont.

(II) Master David was the son of John Fish and was one of the early settlers of Jerico, Vermont, dying there in 1844, a septuagenarian. He was one of the "masters". His authority was based on the rod which he neither spared, nor spoiled the child. He carried the ensign of office into school at the start and appealed to it powerfully, though of course not frequently. After he had resigned his vocation as "superannuated," he was repeatedly urged to "take the school" after some teacher had been "carried out" by the scholars. Many incidents are still remembered of his bringing unruly scholars to order after they had revolted. In one of these a large band of raw-boned youngsters had conspired to "carry out" Master Fish, putting forward their "bully" and pledging to sustain him with "their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honors". The leader transgressed the "rules", was ordered to "take the floor", doff his coat and "stand up to the mark". So far he obeyed. That was part of the plan. For the rest he was to give blow for blow, and if necessary his comrades were to "pitch in". The blow came with a "twig of the wilderness" fit for an ox-whip, and he attempted to return it with his "fists and feet, tooth and nail", but he dashed his jaw against Master Fish's fist and "was laid out". As he lay gasping and his comrades, who were all standing "eager for fight", looked on aghast, the order came like thunder, "sit down!" and order was restored for that school. The plan in another school was to put forward the largest girl. She rose and very politely asked, "Mr. Trout, may I go out?" "Sit down", and business proceeded; but, at the close of school for the day, the polite miss was served with the beech like a refractory horse. The "boys did not try it". Mr. Fish married Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Brown. The following is an account of Mr. Brown's adventure with the Indians:

In 1780 the party which sacked Royalton, passing up the Winooski river, found a hunter named Gibson skinning his game, and took him prisoner. Mr. Brown's people were in the habit of entertaining hunters hospitably, and but a short time before this, Gibson had spent several days with them, while sick. Not wishing the prospect of captivity, he told the Indians that if they would let him go he would lead them to a white family. A number of Indians were detached for the purpose. Mr. Brown, with his two sons, Charles and Joseph, were employed in making a fence around his cornfield. Indians suddenly surround them, and with demoniac yells announced that they were prisoners. The traditions of their manners are illustrative of notions generally prevailing. After entering the house, one savage ran towards Mrs. Brown brandishing his knife, not seeking her life, as she supposed, but only her gold beads, which he cut from her. The Indians compelled the family to start immediately on the march. The second night they were encamped at Mallet's Bay, where they compelled Mrs. Brown and two children to stand in the water all night. The prisoners were taken to Isle Aux Noix, where they met General Burgoyne, who ordered them discharged upon their accepting submission to the crown. They were then taken to St. John's, C. E., where the Indians received a bounty of eight dollars a head from the British authorities. After their discharge they were set on the western shore of Lake Champlain. Here they were obliged to work some time before sufficient money was secured to cross the lake, and nearly three months elapsed before they were able to return to their home, which they found desolate, the remainder of the family having accompanied the party which retreated from the block-house, after the incursion of the Indians. Mr. Brown was therefore obliged to go to the southern part of the state to collect his scattered family. The two boys were left in the vicinity of St. Jolins. Charles, the elder of the boys, enlisted in the British service as a scout. In this capacity he repeatedly traversed the northern frontier in many directions, visiting the ruins of Royalton, as also a post-office kept in a hollow tree in Peacham. By mails carried through by scouts and hunters some limited communication was kept up between Canada and the frontier settlements. Joseph, the younger son, remained with the Indians until reaching manhood when he returned to the states, but later went back to the tribe and so far as is known, never left them. Mr. Brown returned to his farm and for many years was the only settler in the vicinity, his only neighbors being hunters and trappers scattered through the forests.

(II) Hon. David (2), son of David (1) and Elizabeth (Brown) Fish, was born in Jerico, Vermont, and was educated in the schools of his native town. For twelve years he was judge of probate of Chittenden county, and a very prominent and useful man in the community. He married (first) Fannie L. Hutchins, May 2, 1835; children: Hiram B., born May 20, 1836, died in 1880, and Wallace B., born October 26, 1841. He married (second) January 10, 1852, Betsey Hutchins, a sister of his first wife, who were daughters of Dr. Elizur and Betsey (Hollenbeck) Hutchins, of Jericho, who came from Litchfield, Connecticut, and served as a surgeon at the battle of Plattsburg. Child of second marriage: Fannie Maria, widow of Orvis Woods Bullock. Mrs. Bullock is a member of Mercy Warren Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, of Springfield, Massachusetts, which she entered on Mr. Hollenbeck's line of ancestry. She is a past regent of the chapter. Dr. and Mrs. Hutchins came from Litchfield, Connecticut, both riding one horse and leading a cow, and were the first settlers on "Brown's River," in what is now the town of Jerico. Dr. Hutchins' people were the first family in that vicinity to own a stove, and parties came from miles distant to see it.

This surname was originally
 the term applied to those employed in gathering the king's levy. Tradition asserts that the Tolmans are of remote German origin, and that their Teutonic ancestors settled in England at a very early date. In the year 825 A. D., during the reign of Egbert, first king of the United Saxons, Sir Thomas Tolman was grand almoner of that sovereign. The recognized head of the family in England during the first half of the seventeenth century was Sir Thomas Tolman, of North Lincolnshire, and a nephew of the latter was a favorite of the ill-fated Charles I. A Sir Thomas Tolman of the same period commanded a Puritan regiment under Cromwell at the battle of Marston Moor, in 1644. The family coat-of-arms is thus described: "Sa. a martlett ar. between three ducal crowns or; crest: two arms in amour embowed, wielding a battle axe, all ppr."

(I) The American descendants of the English Tolmans now being considered, are undoubtedly the posterity of Thomas Tolman, of Salcomb Regis, Devonshire, who according to the parish register was buried there August 24, 1622, and his son Thomas, the immigrant, was baptized in Salcomb, December 6, 1608.

(II) Thomas (2), son of Thomas (1), of Salcomb, embarked at Plymouth in the "Mary and John," March 30, and settled in Dorchester, Massachusetts. He was admitted a freeman May 13, 1640; served as constable several years subsequent to 1660; and his death occurred in Dorchester, June 18, 1690. The Christian name of his first wife was Sarah, and that of his second wife was Katherine; the latter died November 7, 1677. In his will he gives to his son Thomas "my great chub axe," etc.; to his son John, meadow lands; and legacies to his daughters. His children were: Thomas, Ruth, Mary, Hannah, John, Rebecca, Sarah.

(III) Thomas (3), son of Thomas (2) Tolman, was born in Dorchester, in 1633; resided in Tolman's Lane, near what is now Ashmont street, Dorchester, and died there September 12, 1718. He married, November 4, 1654, Elizabeth, daughter of Richard and Alice Johnson, of Lynn. She died December 15, 1726. Thomas and Elizabeth Tolman were admitted to the church in Dorchester.

May 17, 1674. Children: Mary, married Ebenezer Crane. 2. Thomas, probably born in Lynn; died December 22, 1716. 3. Samuel. 4. Daniel, born May 1, 1679; married Sarah Humphrey; died April 30, 1761.

(IV) Samuel, son of Thomas (3) and Elizabeth (Johnson) Tolman, was born June 11, 1676. About the year 1695 his father built for him a dwelling-house in Tolman's Lane, and he resided there for the rest of his life, dying May 18, 1738. This homestead descended to his son Aquila and his grandson Increase. He married (first) November 21, 1704, Experience Clap, born November 30, 1683, died April 9, 1726, daughter of Desire Clap. March 13, 1727-28, he married (second) Patience Humphrey. Children, all of first union: 1. Augusta, born October 16, 1705, died November 7, 1771. 2. Samuel, September 20, 1706; died July 14, 1767. 3. (VI) William, son of John (3) and Sarah (Pritchard) Mansfield, was born in Boston, February 20, 1802. His rudimentary training in the public schools was supplemented by a short course of study at a private school, and when not busy with his books he assisted his father in carrying on the homestead farm. At the age of sixteen years he began an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade with his father, and during his eight years of service he not only acquired superior skill as a craftsman, but developed a capacity for mechanical ingenuity, which afterward enabled him to achieve many notable successes in his art. In 1826 he accepted a position with the Bolivar Manufacturing Company as general machine repairer, remaining with that concern for about two years, on January 1, 1828, established himself as a builder of machinery, giving special attention, however, to the construction of printing presses, and in this enterprise he realized a substantial success which was mainly due to his superior mechanical skill and minute accuracy in following the inventor's design. One of his most notable achievements was the construction for the Perkins Institution for the Blind, Boston, of the first embossing press used in this country, which was invented by Mr. S. P. Ruggles, then its superintendent, and especially designed for printing in raised letters books to be used in educating its sightless pupils. This invention, known as the Ruggles press, became extensively used in the United States. Mr. Mansfield also constructed many other articles used exclusively in educating the blind, requiring unusually skillful workmanship, including the large globe, four feet in diameter, long in use at that institution. From 1843 to 1846 Mr. Mansfield conducted a baking business in Hingham, but in the latter year his fondness for mechanics caused him to re-enter that field of usefulness, and returning to Canton he erected a plant on Walnut street, having as a partner Jedediah Morse. The firm of Morse and Mansfield purchased the Presbury thread and twine mill, which he carried on until 1858, and was then succeeded by his sons. In 1850 he was chosen a director of the Norfolk and the Dedham Insurance companies, and taking the local agency of both in 1858 he was actively interested in their behalf for the rest of his life. For twenty years he served as a trustee and also upon the investment committee of the Canton Savings Institution, resigning in 1881; was for six years United States assistant assessor of internal revenue for the second district, and served as United States census enumerator for the town of Canton in 1870. For a period of seven years he served as a member of the board of selectmen, and also as an assessor, and for nearly thirty years acted as a justice of the peace. Joining the Republican party at its formation he thenceforward supported its principles with vigor, and his political influence was always used conscientiously and with beneficial results. His liberal views in matters relative to religion early in life brought him into warm sympathy with the Universalists, and he was one of the founders of that church in Canton. As a business man he was methodical, punctual and upright, his word being considered as good as his bond, and it has been said of his personal character that "it was above fear and beyond reproach." William Mansfield died about 1884.

He was an enterprising farmer, and his farm consisted of a hundred acres on which he raised large quantities of flax and sheep for wool. In 1826 he built a fine house. He was representative to the general court from 1807 to 1814, and was also captain of the militia, and justice of the peace. He was deacon of Rev. Nathaniel Emmon's church. In politics he was an ardent Whig. He married (first) Chloe Lethbridge, born November 25, 1761, died December 15, 1802; (second), January 17, 1804, Ruth Heaton, born September, 1766, died January 17, 1866. Child of first wife: 1. (VII) Joseph Thomas, son of Joseph Bacon, was born in Franklin, February 14, 1808, and died there April 2, 1868. He was brought up on his father's farm, and attended the common schools. Being naturally of a mechanical turn of mind he disliked farming; but being an only son, yielded to his father's wishes, and remained on the farm. He served as selectman of Franklin in 1852 and 1853. He was a faithful worker in the First Congregational Church, was chosen deacon when twenty-one years old and filled this office all his life. He attended the district school, and at an early age taught school in Franklin several winters. He remained on the homestead until 1858, when he prospected several months in Kansas, but decided not to move his family west. He purchased several tracts of land which became more valuable years later, and was found to have been a good investment. In 1865, after the death of his wife, he established himself in business in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where for nearly ten years he carried on a hat and bonnet bleaching with success. In 1874 he was called to Franklin on account of the serious illness of his mother, and remained to carry on the farm. He enlarged the house, and at once began to make improvements and to carry out his ideas of practical farming. From 1881 to 1885 he raised crops for canning, making his own cans, and put up in one season fifty-four thousand cans. As soon as the industry began to be unprofitable he sold his machinery and stock in hand to a neighbor packing company. He then gave his attention to the management of his farm, one of the best in the town, making his dairy his chief object, and building three large silos for feeding his animals in winter. He also raised large quantities of vegetables and small fruits. He largely added to the beautiful farm residence, making it of the very largest in the county, containing twenty-one rooms. In 1907 he retired from this fine property to make his home in Pleasant street, Franklin, giving his attention to the care of his real estate interests.

He married (first) November 9, 1852, Julia Adams Brooks, born in Henniker, New Hampshire, June 18, 1831, died June 14, 1865, daughter of Dr. Paschal Presby and Eleanor (Adams) Brooks. In 1875 he was elected deacon in the First Congregational Church of Franklin, and has always taken a deep interest in its affairs. He is a man of the highest character. His indomitable energy, combined with unflagging industry and wise judgment, brought him large material success, while his integrity and Christian spirit have won for him the respect and friendship of the community.

(VII) Sergeant Ezekiel, son of FULLER Joshua and Mercy (Lothrop) Fuller, was born in Ellington, July 23, 1758, died at Ludlow, October 16, 1838. He was a revolutionary soldier, serving in Captain Olivers company, Colonel Greaton's regiment. Also he was a minuteman and bore the title of sergeant. He married Mary Bartlett, of Granby, Massachusetts, who was born in 1762, and died May 26, 1850. Children: Mariana, Elijah, Rachel, Polly, Mercy, Ezekiel (whose sketch follows), Lyman and Franklin.

He received a fair education in the schools of his native town and was there honored by elevation to office by his fellow townsmen, he being assessor for several years and deputy sheriff for nine years. He came to Springfield in 1877 and bought out a store which he successfully conducted. He was chosen alderman from his ward on the republican ticket. He was made a Mason in Roswell Lee Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and was enrolled as a Knight Templar. He married, April 3, 1844, in Belchertown, Massachusetts, Susanna McClintic, and she died January 8, 1895. He married (second) November 14, 1865, in Ludlow, Melina N., daughter of Henry and Nancy (Parsons) Charles. She was born March 11, 1836, in Ludlow. Children by Susanna: Frank Davenport, born January 14, 1849, Ida Ellen, January 5, 1852, married George Fisher and they reside in Belchertown, children: Louis R., Grace A., Mary Blanche, Melina E. Child by Melina N.: Henry Charles, born June 20, 1869, died December 24, 1885.

(VII) Benjamin, fourth son of Deacon Joshua and Mercy (Lothrop) Fuller, was born in Ellington, Connecticut, July 23, 1767, died in Monson, December 8, 1842. He settled in Monson in 1795; where he was a pioneer and where he became a leading and industrious farmer and substantial citizen, influential in promoting the best interests of both the church and the municipality. He married, November 19, 1788, Annis, daughter of Jehiel and Sarah (Day) Fuller, of East Had-dam, who was from John Fuller, a grandson of the original Edward, the line diverging in the third generation to meet again in the seventh. They had nine children: Horace Day, born February 7, 1790; Harriet, January 23, 1792, married Christopher Comstock, of Hartford; Achsah, November 13, 1793, married Theodore Strong, of Monson; Benjamin, January 1, 1796; Austin, January 2, 1798; Sophia, May 10, 1800 (died young); Warren (died young); Sophia, September 2, 1806, married Charles B. Jones; Warren, referred to later.

(VIII) Warren, youngest son of Benjamin and Annis (Fuller) Fuller, who was a Fuller of a Fuller, was born and raised in Monson, May 25, 1807, died there February 7, 1862. He married, April 26, 1831, Lucy Chapman, of Monson, who was born July 8, 1812, died July 8, 1821. Children: Sanford, born January 8, 1832; Charles (referred to later); Ellen, October 17, 1842, married George Cogswell, and (second) A. E. Wildes.

(IX) Charles, second son of Warren and Lucy (Chapman) Fuller, was born in Monson, April 18, 1840, died in Springfield, November 1, 1891. He was educated at the academy in that town and was a wholesale manufacturer of cigars. In 1872 he came to Springfield and was associated with Herman Huck in the same business, their shop being located on Hampden street. The upper story was used as a storage for grain and a fatal collapse of the over-loaded building is a familiar incident in Springfield's past. The firm of Towne Fuller Company was organized in 1873 and of this firm Mr. Fuller composed a member, the other partners being Mr. Huck and E. E. Towne. Mr. R. W. Richards entered the firm in 1878. Mr. Fuller was also an active promoter of the Connecticut Valley Cigar Company of Westfield. He likewise was president of the Cigar Manufacturers' Protective Association of New York, and a director in the First National Bank. When Mr. Fuller managed the business in Monson, cigar making was run on altogether different lines, the method then in vogue was for the manufacturer to provide the leaf and the journeyman rolled the cigars at home. Mr. Fuller at this period of his business career personally sold every cigar himself as well as looking after the details of the manufacturing. His long connections with the cigar trade brought him into contact with tobacco growers as well as the makers. In 1887 the trade journal stated that the firm with which Mr. Fuller was associated as a partner and general manager was the largest cigar manufacturers in New England, and among the largest packers of Connecticut leaf tobacco. Although he achieved unbounded success in his principal calling, he was also concerned in other interests in the community. He both loved and knew a horse thoroughly and was posted on the history of the turf and the scores of the annual racing circuit. He was president of the Hampden Park Association. He invariably served as one of the judges at the meets and his decisions were always impartially given, creating entire satisfaction to those concerned. He was fond of boating and fishing and an active member of the Amabelish Club. He was a Democrat politically, though he frequently exercised the privilege of independent voting. In 1884 he served in the common council and in 1887 represented his ward in the legislature where he made a creditable record for retrenchment and reform. He had a vivacious disposition and was fond of good companionship. He married Sophronia Adaline, daughter of Amasa and Adaline (Munn) King, of Monson, and granddaughter of Amasa and Azula (Lewis) King, of Monson. The children of Amasa King Jr., were: George Munn, married Martha Carroll; Sophronia Adaline, married Charles Fuller; Frank Henry, married Mary Ann Haywood; Maria Louise, married Edward Gallup, of Brooklyn, Connecticut. Griffin, June 10, 1902, and has one child, Katherine Louise. 3. Annie E., November 17, 1876, unmarried.

The name Buckland is BUCKLAND found on the list of adventurous pioneers who first carried civilization into that part of the unbroken forest now Hingham, when the first actual settlers had been but fifteen years in what is now the state of Massachusetts.

(I) William Buckland, whose earlier history is unknown, was in Hingham in 1635, in Rehoboth in 1658, and the first of his name in East Hartford, where he settled before 1678. He deeded land to Daniel Cushing, August 2, 1663. His residence in East Hartford was on the present site of the Buckland homestead on Meadow Hill, at the corner of Mill and Prospect streets. Under the east front room was a secret cellar entered by a trap door from above; its common cellar was on the west side; William Buckland was buried September 1, 1678, but there is no record of his age, nor is there any record of his wife. His children are thought to have been: Lydia, William, Joseph, Benjamin.

(II) William (2), supposed to be the son of William (1) Buckland, was born in Rehoboth, Massachusetts, about 1628, and died in Windsor, Connecticut, May 13, 1691. He married Elizabeth, who survived him, but how long is not known. Their children were: William and Charles.

(III) William (3), son of William (2) Buckland, was born about 1650, died December 12, 1725. He moved to East Hartford in 1687. His will dated December 9, 1724, was filed for probate, January, 1726, and mentions seven children, and widow Elizabeth. She was appointed guardian, March 2, 1726, of John, aged about nineteen, Elizabeth about fifteen, and Jonathan about twelve. Widow Elizabeth married (second) James Forbes Sr., father of James Forbes Jr., husband of Anna Buckland, daughter of Elizabeth. William Buckland married Elizabeth, daughter of John Hills, and they were the parents of William, Mary, Mehitable, Prudence, Anna, Elizabeth, John, and Jonathan, next mentioned.

(IV) Jonathan, youngest child of William (3) and Elizabeth (Hills) Buckland, was born about 1716, died about 1812, at Ellington, Connecticut. He was a soldier in the Eighth Regiment, Colonel Jedediah Huntington, Fifth Company, Captain Charles Ellsworth, raised by order of the assembly, July, 1775. He enlisted July 9. The regiment was stationed on the Sound until September 14. At Washington's request he was sent to Boston, and posted at Roxbury in General Spencer's brigade. His term of service expired December, 1775. He married Sybil Burnham, by whom he had: Alexander, Jonathan, Polly, Timothy, Sybil. He may have married (second) Sarah Anderson.

(V) Alexander, eldest child of Jonathan and Sybil (Burnham) Buckland, was born about 1737 or 1739, died November 26, 1813 or 1815. He settled in Ellington on the west side of the Marsh. Alexander Buckland and his son Alexander were freemen in Ellington, April 7, 1788. The East Windsor record shows that his will was filed for probate January 3, 1816, his widow, Sarah, being one of the executors. He married Sarah Smith, daughter of John and Ruth (Kernes) Smith. She was born about 1738, died January 19, 1823, or January 20, 1824. Their children were: Alexander, Epaphras, Sarah, Leverett, Walter, Ashbel, Erastus, John, Electa and Sarah.

(VI) Captain Erastus, sixth son of Alexander and Sarah (Smith) Buckland, was born April 2, 1773 (or 1774), died November 28, 1820. He was probably a captain in the militia. He was fuller and dyer by occupation, owning and operating a mill. He married Sarah Heath, born April 19, 1775, died October 21, 1850, daughter of Stephen and Sarah (Osborn) Heath. Their children were: Erastus, Emily, Harlehigh (died young), Sarah Maria, Lorenzo Montgomery, Almanzor Aurora, Harlehigh Heath, Harriet, Almira H. and Marilla Ann.

(VII) Harlehigh Heath, son of Captain Erastus and Sarah (Heath) Buckland, was born October 25, 1805, at East Windsor, Connecticut, died in Springfield, Massachusetts, August 25, 1846. He attended the common schools until he was prepared for higher institutions and then went to Willbraham Academy where he prepared for college. In 1827 he entered Washington, now Trinity College, and graduated from that institution. In the programme of the "Fifth Junior Exhibition of Washington College, Wednesday evening, April 14, 1830, H. H. Buckland, of East Windsor, Connecticut, is set down for a poem, 'The Voice of the Past.'" The manuscript of a poem entitled "Retrospect of Our Country," read before the Athaeneum Society of Washington College by him, in 1830, is still in his daughter's possession. Other college poems of his writing are in her possession. The "Order of Exercises" of the college, of 1831, August 4, gives as the second item "A Disputation—Are Wars, in the present state of the world productive of more evil than good?"—by Nathaniel Ellsworth Cornwall and Harlehigh Buckland, and farther down the same page "An Oration—The Prospects of Poland"—by Harlehigh Buckland. In the list of those who received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1831, his name again occurs. He went from Washington College to Yale College, from which he graduated in the law after two years attendance and was subsequently admitted to the bar. He began practice in Hartford and later went to Springfield, Massachusetts, where he spent the remainder of his life except three years, while at Bentsport, Iowa. He was a man whose mental and educational qualifications would have insured marked success in his professional pursuits had his health permitted his continuance, but for some years he was practically an invalid, and at forty years of age he died, being confined to the house only two days. He married, November 5, 1834, Sophia Moseley, youngest daughter of Nathaniel (3) and Electa (Buckland) Moseley, of Springfield. She was born March 19, 1815, died September 10, 1897. (See Moseley VII). They had five children, two of whom died in infancy; the surviving children were: 1. Edward Harlehigh, born June 11, 1842, graduated from the Philadelphia Dental College, February 28, 1885, and the Medical Chirurgical College, April 16, 1891. He settled in Philadelphia where he now practices dentistry. He married, November 2, 1869, Florence P.

Byers, eldest daughter of Colonel Charles P. and Emeline (Cox) Byers, of Tennessee and Massachusetts. They had three children, two of whom died in infancy, and the eldest, Florence Cora, died February 21, 1895, aged twenty-three. 2. Almanzor Ames, born November 25, 1844, married November 16, 1881, Ella D. Wood, youngest daughter of Rev. Pliny Wood. At the time of their marriage, she was ill, being in the last stages of diabetes; she died one week later, November 23, 1881, aged thirty-one years. October 3, 1888, he married (second) Julia Isadore Buckland. Almanzor A. died November 27, 1893, at his home, 735 State street. Julia I. Buckland married (second) Lewis G. Putney, April, 1895. Almanzor A. was associated with his brother, Edward H., in the jewelry business in Springfield before the latter studied dentistry. This business was given up on account of the failing health of Almanzor A. and change of business of Edward H. Their store in the building of the Springfield Institution for Savings, corner of Main and State streets, will be remembered by many because of the sidewalk clock they erected in front of the building. 3. Anne Sophia, resides in the homestead, 731 State street, erected by her mother in 1887. She is a member of Woman's Club, Daughters of the American Revolution, and the Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, in the work of which she is much interested. She is also active in works of benevolence and charity.

(The Moseley Line).

The original bearer of this cognomen took it without doubt from the locality in which he dwelt. The assumption of the name indicates that he was one who dwelt permanently at one place, and was a person of settled habits. When the religious troubles of the seventeenth century arose, a descendant of the first Moseley found his environment intolerable on account of fanatical oppression and removed from England to the freedom of the New England forest, and settling there was the first of five generations who lived contentedly in the same town. The name and the record of the family both show that the Moseleys were of that class of citizens who are esteemed for their virtues, love of home, and can succeed wherever they choose to make their abiding place. The name now spelled Moseley was anciently written with many variations, as Mawdesley, Modesley, Madesley and Maudsley, before assuming its present form.

(I) John Moseley came probably in the ship "Mary and John," which sailed from Plymouth, England, March 20, 1630, settled at Dorchester, Massachusetts, of which he was one of the founders, the same year, was admitted freeman March 14, 1639, and died there August 29, 1661. He married (first) Elizabeth (surname unknown), and by her had a son, Joseph or John, born 1638, but whether any more children is not known. His second wife, Cicely, who died December 3, 1661, named in her will three children: John, Elizabeth, and Thomas, next mentioned.

(II) Thomas, the youngest child of John and Cicely Moseley, was born in Dorchester, about 1636, and died there October 22, 1706. He was admitted to the church in 1658. He married, August 28, 1658, Mary Cooper, daughter of Thomas Lawrence, of Hingham, and his wife Elizabeth, who was the Widow Bates. She died April, 1723. They had nine children: Increase, John, Mary, Thomas, Elizabeth, Unite, Ebenezer, Nathaniel and Joseph.

(III) Ebenezer, fifth son of Thomas and Mary Cooper (Lawrence), Moseley, was born in Dorchester, September 4, 1673, died September 19, 1740. He was constable in 1705, town treasurer, 1720, town clerk, 1721, selectman, 1719-21. He was a weaver and resided in Stoughton. He married (first) Elizabeth, daughter of William Trescott, and had: Ebenezer, Elizabeth, Samuel and Sarah. He married (second) Hannah Weeks, daughter of John. She was born February 28, 1677, died in Dorchester, March 27, 1747. They had Mary, Samuel, Hannah, Nathaniel and Silence.

(IV) Deacon Nathaniel, second son of Ebenezer and Hannah (Weeks) Moseley, was born December 1, 1715, died in Hampton, Connecticut, March 7, 1788. He was a clock maker. He moved to Windham, Connecticut, before 1745. He married, August 11, 1742, Sarah Capen, born July 21, 1725. They had thirteen children, the first born in Dorchester, the others in Hampton: Nathaniel, Joseph, Hannah, Flavel, Thomas, Sarah, Beulah, Elizabeth (died young), Uriel, Elizabeth, Ebenezer, Ruth and Elisha. Sarah Capen was descended from John Alden and Priscilla Mullins, his wife, as follows:

(1) John Alden, the progenitor of all of the name of Alden in the United States, was one of the pilgrims of Leyden, who came in the "Mayflower" to Plymouth in 1620. He was, says the Family Memorial, by Elisha Thayer, "about twenty-two years of age, when he arrived, and was one of those who signed the original civil compact formed and solemnly adopted by the first adventurers at Cape Cod Harbor, on the 15th of November. This was a few days previous to their finding and selecting a place for the commencement of their settlement in this western world. He was a single man and appears to have been an intimate in the family of Captain Myles Standish. He was the stripling who first leaped upon the rock, as mentioned by President Adams in a certain communication. It is well known that of the first company, consisting of one hundred and one, about one-half died in six months after landing, in consequence of the hardships they were called to encounter. Mrs. Rose Standish, consort of Captain Standish, departed this life on January 29, 1621. This circumstance is mentioned as an introduction to the following anecdote, which has been carefully handed down by tradition:

"In a very short time after the decease of Mrs. Standish the Captain was led to think that if he could obtain Miss Priscilla Mullins, a daughter of Mr. William Mullins, the breach in his family would be happily repaired. He, therefore, according to the custom of the times, sent to ask Mr. Mullins' permission to visit his daughter. John Alden, the messenger, went and faithfully communicated the wishes of the Captain. The old gentleman did not object, as he might have done, on account of the recency of Captain Standish's bereavement. He said it was perfectly agreeable to him, but the young lady must be consulted. The damsel was then called into the room, and John Alden, who is said to have been a man of most excellent form, with a fair and ruddy complexion, arose, and in a very courteous and prepossessing manner, delivered his errand. Miss Mullins listened with respectful attention, and at last, after a considerable pause, fixing her eyes upon him, with an open and clear countenance, said, 'Prithee, John, why do you not speak for yourself?' He blushed, bowed, and took his leave, but with a look, which indicated more than his diffidence would permit him otherwise to express. However, he soon renewed his visit and it was not long before their nuptials were celebrated in ample form. For a few years John Alden lived in Plymouth, and then settled in Duxbury, on a farm, which it is a little remarkable, has remained in the possession of his descendants ever since, and is one of the best in the town. He built his house on a rise of land near Eagle Tree Point, where the ruins of his well are still to be seen. Through a long protracted life John Alden was almost continually engaged in public employments. In the patent for Plymouth, in New England, dated January 16, 1629, and signed by Robert, Earl of Warwick, Myles Standish, Edward Winslow, John Howland, and John Alden or any of them, are named as the true and lawful attorneys of the council established at Plymouth, in the county of Devon. Accordingly, John Alden entered into some part of the tracts specified in the patent, and took possession in due form, and delivered the full and peaceable possession and reign of the same to William Bradford, Governor of the Old Colony, his heirs, associates and assigns, secundum formam chartae. He was one of the court of Assistants in 1633, and successively for a number of years. From 1641 to 1649 inclusively, he was chosen to represent the town of Duxbury in the General Court of the Old Colony. In 1633, and for several succeeding years he was one of the council of war, appointed on account of danger apprehended from the Indians. In the year 1650, he was again elected one of the assistants to the governor, and every year after till 1686. He was assistant to all the governors of the Old Colony, except Carver, who early fell a victim to the distressing calamities which afflicted the adventurers on their first arrival at Plymouth. For thirty-six years without interruption he was elected to this office, and for the last twenty years of his life, from 1666 till the liberties of the people were infringed, through the folly of James the Second, he was senior assistant. From tradition, this aged and venerable Puritan was distinguished for his holy life and conversation. He was meek, humble, sincere, pious, and faithful follower of the blessed Redeemer, and his end was peace and triumph. The object which in his youthful days he anxiously sought, was fully attained. He came to the howling wilds of America to enjoy the sweets of religion, pure and undefiled. Like the saints of old he was willing to endure the hardships with the people of God, while he might be instrumental in extending the Kingdom of Immanuel, and looking to a better and eternal state of existence for the rewards of grace."

John and Priscilla (Mullins) Alden had eight children: four sons and four daughters, who lived to enter the marriage state, who had many children and most of them lived to a good old age. They were: John, Joseph,

David, Jonathan, Elizabeth, Sarah, Ruth and Mary.

(2) Ruth, third daughter of John and Priscilla (Mullins) Alden, was born probably in 1631. On the "12 month, 3, 1657," John Bass and Ruth Alden were married by Mr. John Aulden, of Duxbury. John Bass, son of Deacon Samuel Bass and wife Ann, was probably born in Roxbury, about the year 1632. The children of this marriage were: John, Samuel, Ruth, Joseph, Hannah, Mary, and Sarah, next mentioned.

(3) Sarah, youngest daughter of John and Ruth (Alden) Bass, was born 29, 1, 1672, and married January 7, 1692, Ephraim Thayer, born in Braintree, 17, 11, 1660, son of Shadrach and Deliverance Thayer. Sarah died August 19, 1751, aged seventy nine years. Ephraim died suddenly June 15, 1751, in the eighty-eighth years of his age; his death being occasioned it is supposed by a violent blow in his forehead, with the sharp end of a rail, at the barn door where he was found dead. A great concourse of people attended his funeral. The fourteen children of Ephraim and Sarah were: Sarah, Ephraim, Philip, Hannah, Joseph, Shadrach, Christopher, Ruth, Esther, Naphtali, Peter Priscilla, James and Abigail.

(4) Ruth, third daughter of Ephraim and Sarah (Bass) Thayer, born April 1, 1704, married, September 20, 1722, John Capen, and settled in Braintree. John Capen, born October 16, 1694, was the son of Preserve and Mary (Payson) Capen, of Dorchester. The children of this marriage were: John, Esther, Nathaniel, Ruth, Christopher, Anna, Elizabeth, Sarah, Ephraim, Philip, Samuel and Rebecca.

(5) Sarah, fifth daughter of John and Ruth (Thayer) Capen, was born July 21, 1725, married Nathaniel Moseley, August 11, 1742, and settled at Pomfret, Connecticut.

(V) Colonel Nathaniel (2), eldest son of Deacon Nathaniel (1) and Sarah (Capen) Moseley, was born in Dorchester, December 22, 1743. He was probably colonel in the raid on Danbury, April 20-28, 1779, with regiment from Fishkill; October 13, 1777; Peekskill, March and June, 1777. He married (first) Rosanna Alworth, September 29, 1768. He married (second) Esther Swift, when his youngest child was about fifteen years old. There were no children by the second wife. Those by the first wife were: Rosanna, Nathaniel, Marsylvia, William, Samuel, Christopher and Mary.

(VI) Nathaniel (3), eldest son of Nathaniel (2) and Rosanna (Alworth) Moseley, was born June 20, 1771, died September 26, 1854. He had a farm in Springfield, about two and a half miles east of the armory on what is now State street, then Boston road. In religion he was a Unitarian. Besides farming he occasionally worked for the United States armory, making gun stocks, sometimes performing the work at home during the winter months. He married Electa Buckland, July 14, 1796. She was born December 18, 1778, died March 23, 1848, daughter of Alexander and Sarah (Smith) Buckland, of Ellington. They had Electa, Sarah, Nathaniel Buckland, Marsylvia, Jonathan Ogden, Edward Franklin, James Albert, Sylvia Ann, Sophia, Charles Benjamin, Alexander Hosea (died young), and Alexander.

(VIII) Sophia, youngest daughter of Nathaniel (3) and Electa (Buckland) Moseley, married Harlehigh Heath Buckland. (See Buckland VII).

Thomas Kimberly, immigrant ancestor, is progenitor of all of the name in America. He settled in Dorchester, Massachusetts, in 1635, coming from London, and his wife Alice was a member of the Dorchester church in 1639. He removed to New Haven, Connecticut, in 1638. He must have been a man of middle age at that time, as in 1643 the records of New Haven show that there were seven in his family. In 1667 he bought land of Joseph Hawley at Stratford, Connecticut, whither he removed. He married (second) December 18, 1668, Mary ———, who married (second) in 1673, Eliasaph Preston. He left property to the amount of one hundred sixty pounds sixteen shillings. Children: 1. Nathaniel, mentioned below. 2. Thomas, died February, 1705, at New Haven, s. p. 3. (VI) Ezra, son of Israel Kimberly, was born about 1750. In 1790, according to the federal census, he was living at Hampden, Connecticut, and had three males over sixteen, two under that age, and three females in his family. He was a farmer, and also engaged in shipping at Woodbridge, Connecticut, owning one-half of a merchant vessel, which was captured by the French.

(VII) Ezra (2), son of Ezra (1) Kimberly, was born in Woodbridge (now called Bethany), Connecticut, April, 1794. He married Mary Mansfield, born at New Haven in 1800, died at Springfield in 1870, whose father was a soldier in the revolution. Ezra Kimberly learned the trade of clothier, and for a time followed his trade, fulling and dressing the homespun cloth that was manufactured on the farms. He then started a general store at Hampden, Connecticut. At the time of the great financial panic he removed to Springfield, in 1837, and established a general store at the corner of Hickory and Walnut streets, near the water-shops; but after two or three years removed to the corner of Mill and Central streets, where his son John was located, the business having been conducted there since 1840 by Ezra and his family. He continued in business until the time of his death in 1867. He was active in public affairs, was selectman under the town charter, and a member of the first common council under the city charter, and as senior member had the honor of calling that body to order for the first time and presiding over the first meeting. In 1860 he was elected a representative to the general court on the Republican ticket. He was fortunate in his investments, and added largely to his possessions through the increase in value of his real estate. He and his family were communicants of the Protestant Episcopal church, and he was on the building committee in charge of the first church of that denomination in Springfield. Children: Mary, married Elisha Gunn; William; John, mentioned below; Rensselaer.

(VIII) John, son of Ezra (2) Kimberly, was born in Hamden, Connecticut, November 10, 1820, and died April 15, 1900. He attended school in his native town, and also in Springfield, being a student in the high school when Rev. Simeon B. Calhoun was principal, on School street. He worked as clerk in his father's store, and when he came of age was admitted to partnership under the firm name of E. Kimberly & Company. After the death of his father in 1867 he admitted his son, Fred Hobart Kimberly, to partnership, and the name was changed to J. Kimberly Company, which has continued in use to the present time (1909). Mr. Kimberly as well as his father was constantly investing in real estate. He was a director in the John Hancock Bank from 1870 to the time of his death. He was a Democrat, but the only office he ever consented to fill was that of school committeeman.

He married, in 1842, Sarah Ann King, born June 9, 1822, died January 5, 1897, daughter of Horace and Mercy (Treat) King, of Springfield. Her father's old farm is now in a busy section of the city, located where King street is now. (IX) Fred Hobart, son of John Kimberly, was born in Springfield, October 24, 1842. He attended the public and high schools of Springfield, and like his father went into the Kimberly store as a clerk in his youth, and at the death of his grandfather became a partner with his father in the business. The present head of the firm has shown the same sagacity and enterprise that characterized the founder and his successor. The store has been enlarged to meet the growth in business, and the excellent reputation of the firm for square dealing and quality of merchandise sold has always been maintained. In politics he is an Independent, in religion an Episcopalian. He is a member of Roswell Lee Lodge, F. and A. M.; and was a charter member of De Soto Lodge, I. O. O. F. He married, October 18, 1865, Henrietta Bush, born in Tariffville, Connecticut, July 23, 1843, daughter of William and Jane (Clark) Bush.

He became a clerk in the old John Hancock Bank, and filled various responsible positions in that institution for twelve years, when he resigned to look after his real estate and other interests. He is a member of Nayasset Club, Country Club, and the Winthrop Club. In politics he is a Republican, in religion is a member of Christ Church (Episcopal). He married, February 9, 1909, Emilie A. Owen, daughter of Joel S. and Lucy V. (Chapin) Page, the former a native of Stockbridge, and the latter of Pittsfield, Massachusetts.

The coat-of-arms of the Cowell family is a Shield with deer standing. Motto: "Pax et amicitia". The name according to Lower (the authority) possibly came from the district of Cowal, Argyleshire, England, when surnames were derived from districts or county seats.

(I) Captain Edward Cowell, emigrant ancestor of the Wrentham, Massachusetts, Cowells, was born about 1620 in England, died September 12, 1691. He was captain of horse in King Phillip's war, and took part in the march and battle with Mohegans and Pequots under General Winslow in the Narragansett campaign at Quaboag (Brookfield). He was allowed £3 six shillings for horse meat, the company having been reduced to such straits as to eat horse flesh. He was in the Sudbury fight, commanding eighteen men, four of whom were killed and one wounded. When returning from Brookfield via Marlboro and his band was rescued by Captain Prentice's dragoons. The account of the fight will be found in "Historical & Genealogical Register", vol. xi, pp. 400-405, and vol. xiv, p. 117. In his will he is named yeoman and gives to sons John and Joseph, Mary at Hingham, and Sarah his wife, his housing, outhousing, lands in Boston, shop goods, &c. (Will in copy of

His land was a part of the old Cowell farm, now owned by Dr. Joseph H. Cowell, of Saginaw, Michigan, and has been in the possession of the family nearly two hundred years. Joseph Cowell acquired and sold many other pieces of land in Wrentham; at least three deeds signed by him are in existence, and he signed his name with only one l. He was a man of considerable education, as his correspondence shows. He lived to a good old age, and died in Wrentham, in the house built by him in 1730. This house was demolished in 1841, and another erected on the site. He and his wife Martha lie side by side in the old Wrentham burying ground, where their headstones can be seen, though the inscriptions are somewhat faded by time. His wife was said to have been a very capable woman, and after her second marriage to Deacon Richard Fisher took her children to bring up. She died May 20, 1798, aged eighty-six years, and is buried by the side of her first husband in the old Wrentham cemetery. November 6, 1740, she administered his estate. (VII) Joseph (4), son of Samuel (2) Cowell, was born in Wrentham, Massachusetts, January 25, 1806, died there December 25, 1893. He was brought up on his father's farm, acquiring the usual common school education of a farmer's son at that period, remaining at home until his marriage in 1830, when he settled in Foxboro, where he purchased a twenty acre farm near the Wrentham line. There he erected a wheelwright's shop and followed his trade, making wagon wheels, and cultivated his farm. In 1855 he removed his family to Wrentham, and built his homestead on East street in 1860. He was employed by William E. George as foreman in his straw shop, and then had a straw route, carrying out straw to be sewed by the townspeople and collecting it when made, continuing in this up to 1878, when he retired from active work, but did some work in the shop later (Brown & Cowell's shop). He was a gentleman of the old school, faithful in every duty, both as a citizen and as a churchman, being a member of the Episcopal church, in which he took a great interest and helped the church. He was a deep thinker, with clear ideas and valuable in all things. He was a staunch Democrat, and served in the office of field driver. He was a member of Excelsior Lodge, No. 87, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, at Foxboro, Massachusetts. He married (first) November 17, 1830, Elizabeth George, born November 1, 1807, died July 8, 1834, daughter of Jesse and Hannah George. Children: 1. Sarah Elizabeth, born November 10, 1831, died March 17, 1844. 2. Joseph George, born 1835; resides in Wrentham. He married (second) Emily George, sister of his first wife, born October 7, 1805, died April 8, 1872. Child of second marriage: 3. Hiram Augustus, mentioned below.

(VIII) Hiram Augustus, son of Joseph (4) and Emily (George) Cowell, was born in the west part of Foxboro, Massachusetts, January 17, 1845. He attended the district school, and at the age of ten years removed with his parents to Wrentham, where he attended the common schools and Day's Academy up to seventeen years of age, when he entered the employ of his uncle, William E. George, a straw goods manufacturer of Wrentham, first in the capacity of engineer and charge of boiler. This was at the time of the civil war, and while the old engineer of the factory, responding to the "call of his country," was drilling with his company on the common, in readiness for the bugle call to leave for the seat of war. He later took a course in Comer's Commercial College at Boston, fitting himself for office work in Mr. George's business, and served as his bookkeeper up to 1878, when the business became involved. As a result Mr. Daniel Brown and Mr. Cowell associated themselves together for the continuance of the business under the firm name of Brown & Cowell. At the end of sixty days, just at the beginning of a successful start, they were burned out, but nothing daunted, the partners removed their remaining effects into the old Day's Academy building until a new factory could be erected, on the site of the one burned, into which they moved the following year. The business prospered from the start, and in July, 1885, Mr. Cowell retired, selling his interest to Mr. Brown, who continued it, and upon his death in 1904 was succeeded by his son, C. E. Brown. After his retirement from the straw business, Mr. Cowell devoted himself to the care of his property, became also interested in town affairs, in which he took great interest, was honored by his townsmen by being chosen a member of the board of selectmen, overseer of poor, and member of board of health in 1887, and he was made chairman of the board, which position he held up to 1894. His name was again presented to the voters of the town in 1908 for the same offices, and he was again elected and re-elected in 1909. He has served as a director of the National Bank of Wrentham for more than twenty years, and as its president since 1906; as vice-president of the Co-Operative Bank of Wrentham from its organization, October 17, 1900; treasurer of the Wrentham Cemetery Corporation since 1902; also treasurer and manager of the Plainville Land Company, in which he has an interest; this company owns factories in which manufacturing jewelers have their plants. The company also does the pumping for the town of Plainville for its public water supply system. Mr. Cowell has been interested and successful in western investments, owns considerable real estate in town and at Lake Archer, one of the beautiful lakes of the town, and a fast growing summer resort. With the offices he holds and the care of his property, Mr. Cowell says he finds his time fairly well occupied. In politics, while set-down normally as a Democrat, yet with such strong convictions in the matter of party principles and platforms, that he just calls himself an Independent. His friends often about election time call him "a man without a party." He is a member of Excelsior Lodge,

Free and Accepted Masons, of Franklin, Massachusetts, and of Wampum Lodge, No. 195, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. From the institution of the lodge in Wrentham, November 14, 1887, up to the present time, has passed through the chairs, and served as noble grand, and is now one of the board of trustees of the lodge.

The surname MacIntosh or McIntosh was well established in counties Inverness and Moray, Scotland, before 1200. The name is spelled in other ways but all are of the same race and clan. The McIntosh clan is one of the oldest and most numerous of the Highlands. Like all the Scotch clans it was at war from prehistoric times with other clans, especially with the MacPhersons, who finally conquered them. The principal Highland clans in 1863 numbered: MacGregors, 36,000; MacKenzies, 21,000; MacLeans 16,000; MacLeods, 14,000; MacIntoshes, 11,000; MacDonalds, 10,000. The members of each clan though sometimes only cousins a hundred times removed all bore the same name, fought and worked together. Their land was originally held in common, being periodically divided among the clan.

(1) Robert McIntosh, ancestor of this family in America, was born in Scotland, about 1670. He had a sister who married a Scotchman named Alexander, and perhaps other sisters and brothers, though nothing is now known of them. He married, about 1685, ——— Gordon, a native of Scotland, and immediately afterward his marriage, on account of the persecutions of the Scotch Presbyterians or Covenanters, by the Papists under James II, removed to Ulster province, north of Ireland, with his sister and her husband Alexander, settling in county Antrim. In 1890 there were born in the whole of Ireland but seven children of this family, and six McIntoshes were born, doubtless descendants of Robert, in county Antrim. Children: 1. Robert, born about 1685; came to America in 1705, and settled in Philadelphia. 2. Andrew, mentioned below. 3. Matthew, probably ancestor of the present families of the name in Antrim. 4. Hannah. 5. Catherine.

(II) Andrew, son of Robert McIntosh, was born in 1690, in county Antrim, Ireland. In 1715, at the age of twenty-five, he came to America and joined his brother Robert at Philadelphia, soon went to Boston, and later to Dedham, Massachusetts. A year later he went to Voluntown, Connecticut, and from there to Stonington, Connecticut. Here, in 1754, at the age of sixty-four, he married Naomi Delthic. There is a tradition that he was married in Ireland by his father's command to a girl whom he did not love, and that he refused to stay with her, and came to this country immediately after the marriage; but he would not marry until he was assured of her death, which accounts for his late marriage to Naomi Delthic. Seven years after his marriage, when seventy-one years old, his first son was born. In 1777, when he was eighty-seven years old, he removed with his family to Willington, Tolland county, and bought a farm where he lived the remainder of his life. He died there March 26, 1793, aged one hundred and three years. He was a pious man, and in his old age his Bible and hymn book were constantly at his hand. Although a man of quick temper, he was always ready to atone for a fault, and it was his custom always at the same time, whether in the house or field, to kneel and ask forgiveness of God. He retained his faculties to the last, and refused to have a physician called, saying he had no desire to see one unless he could make him young again.

(III) Andrew (2), son of Andrew (1) McIntosh, was born in Stonington, Connecticut, April 30, 1761. In 1777, at the age of sixteen, he removed with his parents to Willington. He married, November 25, 1781, Hannah Lillibridge, born in Exeter, Rhode Island, December 12, 1765, died March 10, 1821, daughter of Elder David and Miriam (Moore) Lillibridge; her father was a prominent Baptist minister of Willington. He inherited the farm of his father and remained there until 1811. In September that year he went to Steuben, Oneida county, New York, at that time a wilderness. The entire trip was made with a span of horses and a farm wagon. He joined his son-in-law in the purchase of a large farm on installments, and was unable to keep up the payments, but his son Hezekiah assumed the contract and paid for the farm. A descendant thus writes of him: "Andrew lacked ambition and energy, and never had a keen appetite for work, and as the children with him grew to be of some assistance to him on the farm, he relaxed his efforts and showed from year to year less inclination to work, and after he was sixty years old performed no manual labor of any kind. After the death of Hannah he lived upon his sons Clark in Vernon, and Austin in Steuben, alternating between them for many years, but the last ten years of his life he lived entirely upon the two sons in Steuben. In the fall of 1840 he made a visit to New England and spent the following winter in the family of Robert, in East Longmeadow. He was there as late as April 9, 1841, but soon afterward returned to his sons in Steuben. At the time of that visit he was eighty years old, but remarkably strong and vigorous and had the possession of all his faculties. Ten years later, when ninety years old, he could take his staff and walk off four miles with little fatigue". He died in Steuben, October 19, 1850, aged ninety-five years, five months nineteen days. His wife Hannah was a woman of fine physique and good constitution, and a good mind. Children, born in Willington: 1. Hannah, March 24, 1782; died May 7, 1806, unmarried. 2. Robert, November 9, 1783; married, September 17, 1787, Philena Blodgett; died February 9, 1879, aged ninety-five years three months. 3. Clark, December 22, 1785; married Lura Blodgett; died December 24, 1848. 4. Naomi, May 6, 1790; married in March, 1809, Willard Merrick; died June 12, 1868. 5. Andrew, March 26, 1793; mentioned below. 6. Hezekiah, September 4, 1797; married, February 22, 1824, Maria Moulton; died March 22, 1886. 7. Ethan, January 26, 1800; died young. 8. Ethan, January 13, 1803; married, October 11, 1827, Olive Green; died May 6, 1873. 9. Austin, July 21, 1806; married, September 23, 1840, Lucy Crowell. 10. Mari Ida, August 10, 1808; married, March 15, 1832, James Mitchell.

(IV) Andrew (3), son of Andrew (2) McIntosh, was born at Willington, Connecticut, March 26, 1793. At the age of sixteen he went to East Windsor, where his brothers Robert and Clark had previously located, remained there and in the adjoining towns of Ellington and Somers about four years, and then went to East Longmeadow, where he lived the remainder of his life. He was for a time a merchant, and had a store in the lower village nearly opposite the present site of the Baptist church. Later he was a carpenter, and used a part of his store as a shop. For the last thirty years of his life he was a farmer, and owned a small farm a half mile south of the upper village of East Longmeadow. He taught school several terms at East Longmeadow. It is said of him: "He was an industrious reader, had a fairly good memory, and was a man of wonderful observation. Nothing escaped his notice in the heavens above or the earth beneath. He was an easy fluent talker and a capital story teller. His stories were elaborated and wrought out to a finish, and he took great pleasure in telling them. His supply seemed inexhaustible. He always had one more to tell and he would take time to tell it. He loved music, and was a good singer." He was of medium height, and had fair regular features. He was slim in his youth, but after he was thirty weighed never less than two hundred and fifty pounds. He was at one time captain of militia. He married (first) in 1821, Elizabeth Indicott, born in Hartford, December 3, 1785, died of cancer, November 25, 1833, daughter of Dr. John Indicott (see Indicott). He married (second) May 15, 1853, Dorcas, sister of Burgess Salisbury, and a tailoress by trade. She died August 11, 1873. He died September 17, 1863. Children: 1. Andrew Jackson, born October 3, 1822; mentioned below. 2. John Church, June 18, 1824.

(V) Andrew Jackson, son of Andrew (3) McIntosh, was born in East Longmeadow, Massachusetts, October 3, 1822. He lived for a time after his mother's death with his uncle Robert, then in Springfield, and in a few years became driver for a stage line from Springfield to Norwich. Three years later he worked for Simons & Kibbe, confectioners, and for eight years drove one of their four-horse teams, selling their goods throughout a large part of the state. For a year and a half he was conductor on a branch of the Rome & Watertown railroad. After his marriage he returned to Springfield, and joined his brother in the auction and commission business opposite Court Square, as the firm of A. J. & J. C. McIntosh. In 1863 his health had become impaired, and he was obliged to give up business, and the firm was dissolved. He travelled in the west for a year to regain his health, and returned restored. Soon afterwards he opened a jobbing house for the sale of boots and shoes with two Cutler brothers, the firm being Cutler, McIntosh & Company. In 1878 the Cutlers retired, and Mr. McIntosh took into partnership with him four clerks, and the firm became McIntosh & Company, and has remained thus to the present time. The business which was established in 1864 grew year by year to enormous proportions, employing a dozen traveling salesmen and finding customers throughout the country. Mr. McIntosh was an able and astute manufacturer and merchant, a wise and conservative manager. He was fond of good horses, and always owned a good pair. He married, April 11, 1855, at Sackett Harbor, New York, Mary A. Soggs, born February 8, 1835, at Buffalo, N. Y., daughter of Thomas and Selina (Clark) Soggs. She received a musical education, and was a teacher of music in her native town and vicinity until her marriage. For many years the family lived at Sackett Harbor in summer. Children: 1. Daughter, born January 26, 1856, at Springfield, and died three days later. 2. Mary Clark, born at Springfield, March 10, 1857; married Arthur H. Glennan, of Washington, D. C. 3. Selina Elizabeth, born at Springfield, December 30, 1858; studied two years at Wellesley College; married, at Springfield, June 22, 1882, Rev. Henry Nason Kinney, of Boston, born at Chicago, January 30, 1856, graduate of Harvard, 1879, and Andover Theological Seminary 1882; pastor at Fergus Falls, Minnesota, and Winsted, Connecticut, Indianapolis, Indiana, and at the time of his death was chaplain of Pomona University, California. Children: Marion Kinney, born at Fergus Falls, May 26, 1883, graduate of Wellesley College, 1904; ii. Selina Kinney, born at Sackett Harbor, March 24, 1885. 4. (VI) Sarah Cushman, daughter of Andrew Jackson McIntosh, was born in Springfield, June 9, 1862. She was educated there in private schools. She married (first) at Carthage, New York, November 10, 1882, Horace Clark, of New York City, born at Buffalo, New York, November 4, 1862. He graduated from Harvard College, class of 1885, and from Harvard Medical School, class of 1888. She married (second) November 5, 1896, Dr. William Wallace Broga, born April 5, 1853, in Otis, Massachusetts. He is a graduate of the Albany Medical School. He practiced first at Longmeadow, Massachusetts, for five years, and since then in Springfield, Massachusetts. He is a member of the Springfield Medical Society and Nayasset Club. In politics he is a Republican, in religion a Congregationalist. Andrew McIntosh, born January 28, 1889. Dr. and Mrs. Broga have no children.

(The Indicott Line).

The surname Indicott is identical with Endicott, Endicot, etc. The best known immigrant of the family was Governor John Endicott, of Salem, one of the most distinguished pioneers of Massachusetts Bay. But the progenitors of Dr. John Endicott, mentioned below, were probably of the Boston family. Gilbert, son of John Endicott, of Marlton, Devonshire, was baptized at Marlton, October 22, 1648, and died in Dorchester, Massachusetts, October 18, 1716, aged sixty-eight years. His brother John commonly spelled his name Indicott, and doubtless his descendants have followed the style that he set; John was warden of Kings Chapel, Boston, in 1691. Another brother, William Endicott, lived in Canton, Massachusetts. All three were inn-keepers. Gilbert lived at Kennebunk, Maine, for a time, but was back in Dorchester in 1690; was a soldier in King Philip's war; died at Canton, October 18, 1716.

(1) Dr. John Indicott, very likely a descendant of John Indicott of Boston, mentioned above, was born in 1749. He was well educated and studied medicine. Immediately after his marriage in 1771 he began to practice in Hartford, Connecticut, and for many years was a well known and successful physician. After nearly thirty years he removed to a farm on the southwesterly part of Wilbraham, Massachusetts, where he spent the rest of his life. He intended to retire from practicing medicine when he turned to farming, but many demands were made upon him by his neighbors and other physicians in cases requiring consultation. He was universally respected and popular in Wilbraham. He was a prime mover in organizing a church in the lower village of East Longmeadow, and after the society was formed and the church erected attended service regularly though he was never a communicant himself. His wife and children joined the church, and his sons Samuel and Michael were pillars in it as long as they lived. He died January 10, 1826, aged seventy-seven years. He married, November 24, 1771, Elizabeth Church, born May 28, 1749, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Potwine) Church. Her parents were married at Hartford, November 27, 1749, and she had one brother, Joseph, born September 13, 1747. Children of Dr. Indicott: 1. John, born June 28, 1773; died in 1795, on brig "Samuel," on a voyage to Turk's Island, where he was buried. 2. Joseph (or James ?); master of a brig; lost at sea with his vessel off the Jersey coast. 4. William, born July 17, 1781; partner in wholesale house of Indicott & Pomroy, Hartford; never married; died in Longmeadow, June 12, 1852. 5. Samuel, born September 1, 1783; died January 28, 1831; came to Wilbraham with his father in 1800; married, November 17, 1814, Mary Ann, daughter of Elder Atwell, of Enfield, Connecticut. 6. Elizabeth, born December 3, 1785; married Andrew McIntosh, of Willington, Connecticut; (see McIntosh). 7. Mary, born April 22, 1788. 8. Michael, born May 17, 1792; came to Wilbraham with the family in 1800, but returned to Hartford, and became a clerk in the store of his brother William; later became a farmer in Wilbraham; married a daughter of Rev. George Atwell, of Enfield; died at Wilbraham, December 28, 1855.

John Page, immigrant ancestor, PAGE was born in England. He settled first in Hingham, Massachusetts, and was one of the signers of a petition to the general court, November 4, 1646. He removed to Haverhill about 1652, and died November 23, 1687. Administration on his estate was granted to his grandson, Thomas Page, March 12, 1721-22, and the estate was finally divided in November, 1723. His widow died February 15, 1796-97. He married Mary Marsh, daughter of George Marsh. Children: 1. John, baptized July 11, 1641, married, in Hingham, June 14, 1663, Sarah Davis. 2. (VIII) Thomas Clarke, son of James Page, was born in Hollis, Maine, April 23, 1832. At an early age he went to work upon his uncle's farm at Biddeford, Maine, attending school whenever there was opportunity. At the age of twelve he was apprenticed in a shoe manufactory at Haverhill, Massachusetts, where he remained two and a half years, going then to Biddeford, Maine, where he learned the machinist's trade. He was ambitious and went to school whenever he could, making the most of his meagre opportunities for an education. In 1853 he went as a journeyman machinist to Holyoke, Massachusetts, and in 1857 and 1858 established a small repair shop in a room scarcely large enough to contain his lathe and bench. This enterprise afterwards became one of the largest concerns of the kind in the state. In 1859 he took a partner, S. S. Chase, under the firm name of T. C. Page & Company, and a few years later organized the Holyoke Machine Company and built shops now running under that name. He acted as general manager and agent until 1865, when he had accumulated enough money to buy a knitting machine invented by L. W. Lamb. Mr. Page began at once to manufacture these machines at Rochester, New York, whither he removed, and in 1867 the company bought the old Massachusetts Arms Company property at Chicopee Falls and organized a stock company known as the Lamb Knitting Machine Manufacturing Company, capital $200,000, making Lamb and Tuttle knitting machines. In 1893 a combination was effected with A. G. Spaulding & Brothers of New York and the capital increased, the new name being the Lamb Manufacturing Company. The business was large and varied, consisting of Spaulding bicycles, gymnasium apparatus, American club skates, golf and other sporting goods, and gave employment to five hundred hands. The business increased rapidly and the company prospered. Mr. Page was treasurer, manager and agent. The factories were equipped with every modern improvement and made a speciality of finely finished work. In 1898 he retired and went abroad with his wife and daughter. On account of his wife's health, they soon returned, and in 1900 he resumed business with J. Stevens Arms & Tool Company. He is also interested in real estate and owns a number of valuable houses in the city. He is a member of Belcher Lodge of Free Masons; of Unity Chapter, Royal Arch Masons; of Springfield Commandery and Massachusetts Consistory, and the order of the Mystic Shrine. He is a director of the Confectionery Machine Manufacturing Company; of the Page-Storms Drop Forge Company; vice-president of the Chicopee Falls Savings Bank. He was a director and the last president of the First National Bank of Chicopee; director and treasurer of the Page Chocolate

Company; in 1909 he is second vice-president and second assistant treasurer of J. Stevens Arms & Tool Company, and Stevens-Duryea Company. In politics he is a Republican. (IX) Frank H., son of Thomas Clarke Page, was born in Holyoke, April 24, 1864. He attended the public schools at Chicopee Falls and was a student in Williston Seminary at Easthampton for one year, and a special student for four years in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology of Boston. In 1886 he went to Minneapolis, Minnesota, and organized the Northwest Knitting Company, of which he was the first treasurer. In 1889 he bought an interest in the Paris-Murton Company, a concern engaged in the manufacture of confectionery at Minneapolis. Soon afterward he was one of the inventors of the automatic Starch Buck which marked the beginning of a new era in the manufacture of candy by machinery, and the joint inventor with Gabriel Carlson of the Mogul Candy Machine. He organized the Confectionery Machine Company in Minneapolis and began business there. In 1894 the entire plant was removed to Springfield, Massachusetts, where it has since been operated. Mr. Page is president of the company and manager of the business, which is the largest of its kind in the world. He married, in 1887, Bertha Bausman, of Minneapolis. In the early records the surname Whitten is spelled Wheeton, Whetton, Wheeden, Whiten, Whiton, Whiting, Whitin, Whition, Whyton and Wyton, and several of these forms survive to the present time. The relationship of the various immigrants from which the Whitin, Whiting, Whitten, Wheaton, Weadon, Wheadon, and Whitten families descend, is not known, but all were English and the surname is of ancient English origin. Doubtless there were branches of the family also in Ireland and Scotland. According to tradition there were three brothers of the Whitten family early settlers in New Hampshire, Samuel, Thomas, and John Whitten, or Whidden. In 1671 John and Samuel Whitten (or Whidden) were members of the church at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and contributed to the fund for the maintenance of Rev. Mr. Moody.

(I) Michael, son of John or Samuel Whitten, was born about 1670, and settled in Portsmouth. Samuel Whidden (or Whitten) probably his brother, had a daughter Margaret, born in Portsmouth, September, 1695, and his wife occupied a seat in the North Church of Portsmouth with "Widow Whidden," probably the mother of Samuel and Michael. Michael married June 6, 1694. His children were baptized in the same church June 5, 1709, as follows: 1. Michael, married Anna Drew, May 27, 1719, at Portsmouth. 2. John, mentioned below. 3. Samuel. 4. Abigail. 5. Elizabeth. See vol. iv, p. 54, New Hampshire Gen. Mag.). Michael was a member of the church in 1699 and earlier.

(II) John, son of Michael Whitten, was born about 1700, in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and settled in the adjacent town of Kingston, New Hampshire, probably near the Salisbury, Massachusetts, for the "History of Kennebunkport, Maine," formerly Arundel, Maine, states that he came from Salisbury about 1724. He drew a lot at Arundel, on the Saco river, in 1728, and was a proprietor of the town in 1737. He married, at Salisbury, Ruth Merrill, born at Salisbury, July 26, 1711, daughter of Deacon John Merrill. Her father was a soldier in 1710, a housewright by trade, born 1674, married, September 23, 1702, Mary Allen, and he died January 7, 1756. Sergeant Daniel Merrill, father of Deacon John, was a resident of Newbury and Salisbury, Massachusetts, born 1642, married, May 14, 1667, Sarah Clough, who died March 18, 1705-06; married (second) May 29, 1708, Sarah Morrill, widow of Philip Rowell and Onesiphorus Page; he died June 27, 1717. Nathaniel Merrill, father of Sergeant Daniel, was the immigrant ancestor, brother of John Merrill. Nathaniel Merrill died March 16, 1654-55, leaving a widow Susannah. John may have been the John Whitten who married, April 24, 1745-46, at Kingston, New Hampshire, Bridget Wyman. Children, according to Kennebunkport history: 1. John, born 1734; died 1802; married Hannah Walker, of Arundel, and went to Topsham, Maine, 1764. 2. Phineas, moved east. 3. Samuel, mentioned below. 4. Humphrey, married Hannah Lassel. 5. Israel, married Sarah Fairfield; was in same company in the revolution with brothers Joseph and Samuel. 6. Joseph, soldier in the revolution; died at Lyman, Maine, 1797; married Ann Burnham. 7. Mary, married Samuel Waterhouse. 8. Hannah, married ——— Knight. 9. Ruth, married ——— Clay. 10. Martha, married ——— Gordon. 11. Sarah, married Daniel Davis. 12. Lydia, married Moses Wadlin. 13. Anna, married (first) Captain English; (second) John Burbank.

(III) Samuel, son of John Whitten, was born at Kennebunkport, formerly Arundel, about 1735. He settled in his native town, but late in life moved away, probably to Alfred. He married Hannah Poindexter, of Arundel. He was a soldier in the revolution, third corporal in Captain John Elden's company, Colonel Lemuel Robinson's regiment at Roxbury, Massachusetts, during the siege of Boston, 1776. His son Samuel and his brothers Israel, Joseph, and perhaps John, were in the same company. John was an officer in the service. He had a son Samuel, mentioned below. According to the census of 1790 he had two males over sixteen, two under that age, and four females in his family.

(IV) Samuel (2), son of Samuel (1) Whitten, was born in Arundel, about 1760. He served in Captain John Elden's company, Colonel Lemuel Robinson, in the revolution, and was drafted October 7, 1777, in Captain Joshua Nason's company, Colonel Joseph Storer's regiment, and was in the campaign that ended with the taking of General Burgoyne's army. In 1790, Joseph, Israel and Samuel were the heads of families of this name living in Arundel. In Arundel the spelling Whitten has been followed, but in the vicinity we find Whittum, Whittun and Whidden. Some of the family settled at Alfred, before 1767. John Whitten married, at Alfred, Maine, before 1767. John Whitten married, at Alfred, April 23, 1767, Sarah Hodgden; Mary Whitten married there, November 30, 1768, Richard Dearborn; Richard Whitten married there, November 3, 1784, Mercy Jose. The latter settled at Parsonfield, and was ancestor of the Parsfield family of Whittens. Samuel married twice, and had twelve children by the first wife, and four by the second. The town records are incomplete and do not give the dates of birth of all these children. Children, born at Alfred: 1. Samuel, blacksmith and farmer, married Lucinda Ladd, and settled in Saco, Maine. (A Samuel Whitten married at Alfred, December 14, 1828, Olive Hill). 2. Mary, married, March 30, 1824, at Alfred, Thatcher Friend. 3. Nancy, married Thomas Buckminster, coffin-maker and undertaker; married (second), Caroline ———. 4. William, born October 17, 1799; mentioned below. 5. Abel (?), married at Alfred, October 25, 1824, Judith Hubbard. 6. Daniel, married (?), at Alfred, August 1, 1817, Dorothy Cluff. 7. Nahum (?), married, at Alfred, May, 1810, Betsey Wormwood. 8. George, born October 17, 1802. 9. James, January 4, 1804.

(V) William, son of Samuel Whitten, was born at Alfred, October 17, 1799, and was educated in the district schools of his native town. When a young man he went west, but after a few years came home, and worked for a few years at farming and other vocations. He finally settled on a farm on the line between Biddeford and Kennebunkport, and was a well-to-do farmer and influential citizen. He was kindly and affable by nature, and made many warm friends. He was a Whig in politics, and both he and his wife were active in the Methodist church and earnest and consistent Christians. He married, in Saco, Maine, Lucy McKinney, born in Saco, May 25, 1800, died at the advanced age of ninety-four years, daughter of John and Tabitha (Phillips) McKinney, both natives of Maine. Her father lived to the age of eighty-four. Of a large family, Mrs. Whitten was the only daughter. Children: 1. Irving, born at Saco, August 2, 1831, a mason and farmer at North Lexington, Massachusetts; married Elizabeth Bird, of Walpole, Massachusetts (now deceased). 2. Lucy Jane, born November 25, 1833; resides at Biddeford, unmarried. 3. William Henry, mentioned below.

(VI) William Henry, son of William Whitten, was born at Biddeford, September 16, 1838, and educated in the common schools. He learned the trade of mason, and three years after serving his apprenticeship engaged in business on his own account. After a few years, however, he followed an inclination of his youth and went to sea in a whaling vessel. For three years and seven months he was whaling in the Indian Ocean, and some years afterward was a mariner in the merchant service, visiting many ports in Europe and the West Indies during the course of his voyages. After his marriage he gave up the sea and resumed his business as a mason and contractor, and settled in West Roxbury, Massachusetts, now Jamaica Plain, Boston, where he bought a home, and prospered in business. He invested in real estate, and owns some valuable property in the section in which he resides. He acquired a comfortable competence, and retired from business several years ago. He is a Republican in politics, conscientious in the discharge of his duties as a citizen. His life has been characterized by great industry and application, earnestness of purposes and strict integrity in all his business relations. In religion he is a Methodist.

He married, in Biddeford, Maine, November 23, 1865, Emily I. Pritham, born April 11, 1832, daughter of Samuel and Matilda (Milliken) Pritham, granddaughter of John and May (Googan) Pritham. Her grandfather was of an old New England family, born in New Hampshire, settled in Old Orchard, and was drowned off the beach of Scarborough at the age of fifty-seven years; her grandmother was a native of Old Orchard, Maine, of an old Maine family, died at the advanced age of eighty-three, leaving four sons and four daughters. Samuel Pritham was brought up on his father's farm, to which he succeeded when his father died, and on which he lived until his death in 1877, at the ripe old age of eighty-three years. Mrs. Whitten had three brothers—James Pritham, a farmer and carpenter, lives in Portland, Maine, a widower and childless, having lost his only daughter; Samuel Shirley Pritham, a farmer of Freeport, married Alice Stokes, and has three daughters; Charles Pritham, a farmer of Freeport, married Nellie (Merrill) Robinson, and has two sons and a daughter. She also had two sisters—Eliza Pritham, died in 1901, at Freeport, wife of Enoch Brewer (deceased), and Henrietta Pritham, who died in childhood.

Children of William Henry and Emily J. Whitten: 1. Ida Jane, born August 2, 1866; resides with her parents in Jamaica Plain; married Frederick Serrex; one child, Sophia E. Serrex. 2. Ernest P., born October 13, 1867, a civil engineer in the government service at Manila, Philippine Islands; married Susan Crowfoot; children: Mabel E., Ralph H., Clarence E. 3. Agnes H., born August 30, 1868, a skillful musician and teacher of music; died May 29, 1908, unmarried. 4. Mary W., born October 25, 1872; married Jonathan A. Hunt, of Westborough, Massachusetts, a manufacturer. 5. William H., born March 2, 1874, graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, an expert in the United States Patent Office, Washington, formerly in the hydrographic department. 6. Henrietta, died in infancy. 7. Clarence, died in infancy.

This name is not numerously represented in New England or in any part of America, but the quality of its representatives will compare favorably with that of many families of much larger numbers. It has been identified with the development of Massachusetts, and is entitled to honorable mention in connection therewith. It begins at an early period of American history, in settlement of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, and is still continuing in a worthy way along the lines of civilization.

(I) Robert Quimby (also written Quinby) is found of record in Amesbury, Massachusetts, as a ship carpenter, and was there married about 1657 to Elizabeth, daughter of William and Elizabeth Osgood, of Salisbury. He purchased land in Amesbury next year, and received grants in 1659 and 1668. He is of record as a "townsman" in 1660, and holding a meeting house seat in 1667. He died about 1677, and it is probable that his death occurred in the Indian massacre at Amesbury, July 7 that year; his wife was wounded in that massacre but survived. She was appointed administratrix of his estate October 9 that year, and the inventory was made August 27. Their son Robert was appointed to administer the estates of both parents September 26, 1694, and it was not divided until 1700. Their children were: Lydia, William, Robert, John, Thomas, Elizabeth, Philip and Joseph.

(II) William, eldest son and second child of Robert and Elizabeth (Osgood) Quimby (Quinby), was born June 11, 1660, in Salisbury, and resided in Amesbury. He took the oath of allegiance in 1677, and was a member of the training band in 1680. He was living in 1700, and administration upon his estate was granted June 11, 1705. The inventory was presented by his brother Robert. The Christian name of his wife was Sarah, but no record of her birth, death or parentage is obtainable. Children recorded in Amesbury: Elizabeth and William.

(III) William (2), son of William (1) and Sarah Quimby, was born October 8, 1693, in Amesbury. He married Hannah Barnard, born November 26, 1694, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Jewell) Barnard. They owned the covenant in the Second Salisbury church, February 4, 1728, and had children baptized at that church August 16, 1730, namely: Samuel, Joseph, Enoch, and Hannah; and on June 9, 1734, their sons Moses and Aaron were also baptized.

(IV) Aaron, son of William (2) and Hannah (Barnard) Quimby, was born July 22, 1733, and baptized June 9, 1734, in the Second Salisbury church. He was among those who asked for the incorporation of Hawke, now Danville, New Hampshire, and this town was incorporated February 20, 1760. There are several among the incorporators of the same name, including Moses, who was probably his brother. They removed to Derryfield, now Manchester, whence they went as pioneer settlers to Weare in 1752-53-54, says one account. The "History of Carroll County" states that Aaron Quimby was one of the incorporators of Weare, one of its first selectmen, served in the old French war, went on the expedition to Canada in 1755, was a captain in the revolution, and was promoted to major." His revolutionary record is as follows: Aaron Quinby's name is on pay roll of Captain John Parker's company Colonel Timothy Bedell's regiment of rangers, "raised by the Colony of New Hampshire in defence of the Liberties of America, joined the Northern division of the Continental army under General Montgomery, 1775." He was a sergeant, entered the service July 11, discharged December 20, after serving five months and ten days, for which he received pay, twelve pounds sixteen shillings, and coat and blanket valued at one pound sixteen shillings, billeting ten shillings six pence; amounting in all to fifteen pounds two shillings six pence. In the muster-roll his age is given as forty-one, occupation husbandman, and he is credited to the town of Weare. His name appears again on a muster and payroll of the men raised and mustered in the Seventh Regiment, December 16-17, 1776, to be under the command of Colonel David Gilman, Captain Gordon's company, to recruit the American army till March 1, 1777. The payroll of Captain Aaron Quinby's company of volunteers in Colonel Moses Kelly's regiment in the expedition to Rhode Island, has the following record: Aaron Quimby, captain, entered service August 6, 1778, discharged August 27, time of service twenty-four days, rate per month twelve pounds, amount of wages nine pounds twelve shillings, travel out at eight pence, home at eight pence, one hundred and twenty-five miles, eight pounds six shillings eight pence, subsistence money four pounds sixteen shillings eight pence. The roll, is attested by "Aron Quinby," but the name is elsewhere spelled Quinbee and Quenbe.

Aaron Quimby, from Derryfield, March 27, 1754, bought lot 37, range 1, Weare, of Jeremiah Bennett, the proprietor, who once thought to settle there himself, for one hundred pounds old tenor bills of credit and "Emediate settlement made on the lot". He built a good substantial large house of hewed logs and a rough log barn. It was on the north road from Oil Mill to South Weare, one-half mile east of Meadow Brook, and the mark of his cellar can now be seen. When the town filled up with inhabitants he opened an inn, probably the first in Weare, and kept it for a long time. It was a busy house and had some exciting scenes. The first barrel of rum ever in town was loaded by him on a "jumber" and drawn by a horse on the rough path up the Piscataquog and over the hills to his inn. How many got balmy on that first barrel cannot now be told. In his bar-room the old loggerhead was always kept at a white heat. With it he warmed the flip made of West India rum with some pieces of pumpkin dried on the "lug pole," apple skins and bran in it. This gave it excellent flavor, and lips smacked that tasted it. Half a mug of flip was three pence. He also used it to warm the sling and milk, and sold each for three pence a mug. He was a prominent man in town, and once held the office of coroner of Hillsborough county. About 1779 he moved to Sandwich, then on the very outskirts of civilization, and bought four hundred acres of Rock Maple Ridge, North Sandwich, (paying in Continental scrip) where he afterward lived and died December, 1810. He married (first) October 8, 1753, in Hampstead, Anna Batchelder; died about 1765; (second) in Hampstead, March 20, 1766, Mary Johnson. Children, first two children born of first wife: Sarah, Joseph, Moses, Enoch, Samuel, James, Daniel, Anna, Aaron J., Susannah, Johnson D. and Mary.

(V) Rev. Daniel, sixth son of Aaron and Mary (Johnson) Quimby, was born in Weare, New Hampshire, December 26, 1773. He became one of the pioneers of Lyndon,

Vermont, and was a prosperous farmer. He was also a Free Baptist minister, and erected the first Free Baptist church in that town. He never took any pay for preaching, and travelled miles to hold religious meetings. He married Dolly Burley, February, 1798; she died September 18, 1800. Their children were: 1. Thomas, born February 11, 1799. 2. Hannah, April 21, 1800. He married (second) May, 1803, Lydia Gilman, born June 4, 1783, died November 4, 1857.

(VI) Colonel Daniel (2), son of Rev. Daniel (1) and Lydia (Gilman) Quimby, was born in Sandwich, New Hampshire, September 10, 1804, died March 10, 1873. He removed to Lyndon with his parents. He was connected with the state militia, from which connection he obtained his title. In religious preferences he was a Free Baptist. He married Polly Woodruff, of Westmore, Vermont, September 25, 1825; she was born November 27, 1806, died November 20, 1877. Children: 1. Horace A., born April 18, 1828, mentioned below. 2. Lydia, July 25, 1830. 3. Cordelia H., December 10, 1832; married H. M. Nichols, of Lyndon. 4. Daniel J., January 10, 1835, of Portland, Oregon. 5. Lot P. W., July 6, 1837, of Portland, Oregon. 6. Mary E., May 2, 1840; married James E. Matthewson, of Springfield, Massachusetts. 7. Laura H., March 26, 1842, married Edwin Swetland, of Portland, Oregon.

(VII) Horace A., eldest son of Colonel Daniel (2) and Polly (Woodruff) Quimby, was born in Lyndon, Vermont, April 18, 1828. He received an academical education at Brownington Academy, Vermont. After leaving school he engaged as a peddler of silver-ware and jewelry. In three years he had saved enough out of his earnings to start in business on his own account. In 1853 he opened a general store at Wheelock, Vermont, and in 1855 a branch store was started at Lyndon Center. In 1867 Mr. Quimby became a resident of Springfield, Massachusetts, and for two years conducted a restaurant and ice cream parlors, and from then until 1882 engaged in the wholesale and retail fish and oyster business. He then purchased the old Dearden crockery store, which he now conducts at No. 9 Hampden street, Springfield, under the name of Quimby & Company. In politics he is a Republican, and was honored by the appointment of postmaster of Wheelock and at Lyndon. He is a member of the Baptist church and contributed liberally toward the support of the same. He is a Master Mason, connected with Roswell Lee Lodge. Commencing life at the bottom of the ladder, Mr. Quimby has risen to affluence by his own unaided industry and business foresight. Nature endowed him with a vigorous constitution and a clear mind. He inherited little else. A gentleman of the old school of merchants, his unbending integrity makes him respected by his associates in the business world, in which he is an important factor, and his many charities make him loved by the poor and unfortunate of his adopted city.

Mr. Quimby married (first) at Sandwiche, New Hampshire, December 7, 1853, Sarah E., daughter of David M. Hodgdon; she died March 2, 1854. He married (second) September 18, 1855, Martha M. Sanborn, born April 7, 1829, died April 15, 1909, daughter of Elisha Sanborn, of Lyndon, Vermont. Children: 1. Sarah E., married John Pettigrew. 2. Irving A., born December 26, 1863; educated in public schools of Springfield, Massachusetts, after which he entered his father's store, where he has since remained. In 1888 he was admitted a member of the firm of Quimby & Company, but most of his time is devoted to looking after their trade on the road, covering western Massachusetts, northern Connecticut, southern Vermont and New Hampshire. He is a charter member of the Commercial Travellers' Club of Springfield. He married, September 9, 1890, Stella, daughter of Leonard Clark, of Springfield, and their two children are: Marion, born August 10, 1892, and Horace A., October 11, 1894.

The name of Norton is of ancient French origin, and the many distinct families in America bearing it are undoubtedly descended from the same source. Their lineage can be traced back to Le Signr. de Norvile (Norvile), who crossed the channel with the Norman Conqueror and subsequently served as the latter's constable. This de Norvile married a lady of the famous house of Valois. A descendant of Cantable de Novile in the sixth generation, anglicized the name into its present form of Norton. Professor Charles Eliot Norton, of Harvard University, is a lineal descendant of the constable in the twenty-first generation. In addition to Norton street, a prominent London thoroughfare, there are in England several important rural communities of this name, viz.: Clipping Norton, Sedbey Norton, King's Norton and Philip's Norton, all of ancient origin, and doubtless deriving their name from some prominent family or individual. Several immigrants of this name are mentioned in the early colonial records of New England. Captain Walter Norton arrived in America in 1630. George Norton, of Salem, Ipswich, and other places, who came from London, was made a freeman in 1634 and died in 1659. William Norton, of Hingham and Ipswich, born in England, 1610, came in the "Hopewell" in 1635 and took the freeman's oath the same year. Rev. John Norton, brother of William, born in 1606, probably in London, emigrated to Massachusetts Bay in 1635, shortly after graduating from Cambridge, and located in Ipswich. In 1656 he became pastor of the First Church in Boston, and was noted for his piety and learning. Nicholas Norton, who is thought to have come from the county of Herts, was of Weymouth, Massachusetts, in 1638, removed to Martha's Vineyard, and his descendants are still found there. A Francis Norton was admitted a freeman at Weymouth in 1642. A Joseph Norton was married in Salisbury, Massachusetts, March 10, 1662, to Susanna Getchell. Major Peter Norton, an efficient officer in the revolutionary war, was a son of Ebenezer, grandson of Joseph, and great-grandson of Nicholas, the Martha's Vineyard settler. Bonus Norton, son of William, of Ipswich, previously mentioned, was born about 1657, took the oath of fidelity in 1678, and was residing at Ipswich in 1691. He was of Hingham in 1712, but subsequently removed to Hampton, New Hampshire, where he died in 1718. He married Mary, daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Whipple) Goodhue, and had six children: William, Joseph, Samuel, Elizabeth, Lucy and Anne. The line of descent of the Norton family mentioned below does not appear in any of the genealogies or other reference works examined for the purpose of obtaining it.

(I) Michael Norton, place and date of birth not ascertained, went from Newburyport, where he had followed the trade of a shipcarpenter for a number of years, to Derry, New Hampshire. He married Catherine ——. Among his children were: 1. Michael, became a prominent building contractor in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and erected a number of buildings in the Harvard University group; died in Cambridge, leaving no children. 2. Joseph, became a shipmaster, and died on the coast of Africa. 3. Henry; see forward.

(II) Henry, son of Michael Norton, was born in Newburyport. Settling in Cambridge in 1815, he entered the employ of Deacon Nathaniel Livermore and learned the soap-making trade. Naturally ambitious, he could not long devote his energies to the interest of others, and forming a partnership with Hiram Davis in 1820, this firm secured an old cooper shop on Windsor street, in which they established themselves as soap manufacturers. Selling out his interest to his partner a few years later he purchased a farm in Bedford which he carried on some fourteen months, and returning to Cambridge at the expiration of that time he resumed the manufacture of soap, erected a factory on Windsor street and conducted business successfully for nearly forty years, until his retirement in 1860. The remaining years of his life were spent at his home on Windsor street, where he died in 1868. He attended the First Universalist Church.

Henry Norton married Rebecca, daughter of Levi and Mary (Gill) Pease, of Northboro. It is definitely known that the Peases of England originated in Germany and that a coat-of-arms was given them by Otho II in the latter part of the tenth century. Representatives of the family settled in England and were the progenitors of the Peases who were among the early New England colonists. Robert Pease (I), a locksmith of Baddow, county of Essex, and his wife Margaret, had children: Robert, John and Elizabeth. His will was proved June 10, 1623. His son, Robert Pease (II), came over in the ship "Francis" from Ipswich, England, in 1634, and settled in Salem. He was accompanied by his brother John, his eldest son Robert, and probably his mother, his wife and other members of his family joining him later. He was granted ten acres of land at Salem in 1637; united with First Church in 1643; died in 1644. The Christian name of his wife was Marie, and this form of spelling suggests the fact that she may have been the daughter of a French Protestant who had taken refuge in England. His known children were: Robert, John, Nathaniel, Sarah (married John Sampson, of Beverly), and Mary, probably second wife of Hugh Pasco. Robert Pease (III), son of Robert (II), was born in England, in 1628, and came to New England with his father in the "Francis". Left fatherless at the age of seventeen, he was in 1645 ordered by the court to be apprenticed to Thomas Root, to learn the weaver's trade. In early manhood he spent a short time at Martha's Vineyard, but the greater portion of his life was passed in Salem as keeper of the town herd, as in 1704 he testified in court that "he had been keeper of several lots of creatures, as neat cattle, goats, etc., on the land belonging to the inhabitants of Salem about 60 years ago". He was a member of a local militia company, and saw active service against the Indians in 1676. The Christian name of his wife was Sarah, and in 1692 both suffered imprisonment on account of being suspected of witchcraft. He was living in 1713, in which year he was dismissed from the First Church in Salem to that of the Middle Precinct, now Peabody, which he helped to organize. His children were: Bethia, died young; Elizabeth; Deliverance, died young; Mary, Robert, Isaac, Deliverance, Bethia and Nathaniel. Robert Pease (IV), son of Robert (III), was born March 25, 1669. For some reason now unknown he left home in his youth, and settling in Enfield, Connecticut, was granted land, prior to his majority, located on the Somers road, east of Enfield street. In December, 1691, he married Hannah Warriner, and settled upon his allotment, where he was living in 1744. Children: Hannah, Nathaniel, Joseph and Benjamin. His son, Nathaniel (V), was born in Enfield. He was a weaver by trade. In 1759 he settled in Blandford, Massachusetts, where for several years he carried on a public house in connection with farming, and for three years was a member of the board of selectmen. In 1771 he sold his tavern to his son Levi and is said to have removed to Stephentown, New York, where he died. December 24, 1730, he married Miriam Pease, daughter of Robert, the latter a grandson of John Pease Sr., of Salem, previously referred to as having emigrated with his brother Robert (II). Children of Robert and Miriam Pease: 1. Nathaniel, born 1731. 2. Miriam, 1733. 3. Hannah, 1735. 4. Joel, 1737. 5. Levi. 6. Abel, born 1741. 7. William. 8. George. 9. Eleanor. Captain Levi Pease (VI), son of Nathaniel (V), was born in Enfield, in 1739. He learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed to some extent, and when a young man went to Stephentown, New York, but returned in 1770 or 1771, bought his father's tavern in Blandford, and carried it on for some time. At the breaking out of the revolutionary war he was enrolled in a Blandford company of minutemen, but instead of serving in the field was assigned to duties of a far different character. For some time he was employed by General Thomas on the northern frontier as a post-rider, and displayed much courage and discretion in eluding capture while conveying important despatches. He subsequently proved exceedingly useful to General Wadsworth, who as commissary-general employed him to purchase beeves and other supplies for the army. In these transactions he was often entrusted with large sums of money, for which no receipt was required by the General, who had implicit confidence in his integrity, and he never betrayed that confidence. Upon the arrival of the French fleet and troops at Newport, Pease was employed by the Continental government to procure horses for the purpose of conveying the artillery to Yorktown, and he was afterward engaged in foraging for the army. He was always referred to as Captain, but there is no record of his ever having been commissioned. Shortly after the close of the war he established a stage line between Somers and Hartford, and for many years was engaged in that business. In 1786 he removed to Boston, where he kept the New York stage house, some three or four years, and operated a stage line from that place to Hartford. His business expanded into large proportions, and at one time he conducted a stage line from Portsmouth, New Hampshire, to Savannah, Georgia, which carried the United States mail. For a long time he held numerous important mail contracts, many of which he sub-let to others, holding himself responsible for their conduct, and at that time he was the only mail contractor in New England known to the post-office department. He was the first person to procure from the commonwealth a charter for the construction and maintenance of a turnpike road, which superseded the former almost impassable highway through Palmer and Wilbraham to Springfield, and while the public acquired the advantages of a good thoroughfare, its public-spirited projector lost heavily by the undertaking through the subsequent depreciation in value of its capital stock, the major portion of which was owned by Captain Pease. About the year 1794 he established his residence in Shrewsbury, Massachusetts, purchasing the farm and tavern stand of Major Farrar, and carrying on both for several years afterward in connection with his stage lines. He outlived all of his children, and died in Shrewsbury, June 14, 1832, aged ninety-three years. Children: 1. Hannah, married Thomas H. Kimball, of Boston, 1796. 2. Levi. 3. Lemuel, born in Blandford, December 16, 1771; died married, in Shrewsbury, 1816. 4. Lory, born in Blandford, October 4, 1774. 5. Mary, born May 11, 1779; became

He attended the public schools, including the old Cambridge high school, located at the corner of Broadway and Windsor street, presided over by Mr. Wellington. He acquired proficiency in the art of soap making under the direction of his father, whom he succeeded in 1860, and conducted it successfully until about 1873, when he in turn surrendered its management to his son. While at the head of the business he made numerous improvements, removing the plant from Windsor to Lincoln street and keeping pace with the times in the way of improved machinery. During his active years he affiliated with the Citizen's Trade Association and the Non-partisan League, and for two years he served in the city council. He is a Master Mason and a member of Amicable lodge.

Mr. Norton still occupies the old homestead at No. 402 Windsor street. He married Mary Ann, daughter of Joseph Weeks, of Portsmouth, New Hampshire. Children: 1. Charles Edward, married, and resides in Bos-

Sawtell, Sawtelle, Sawtwell, Sautel, Sartwell and Saretil are the various spellings of the family of which Richard Sawtell, of Watertown, 1636, and of Groton, before 1655, is the forebear. Two brothers, Richard and Thomas Sawtell, immigrant settlers of New England, came from England before 1636, and Thomas settled in the town of Boston and Richard in Watertown. Thomas died in Boston, 1651, and left no male heir.

(I) Richard Sawtell was made a freeman of Watertown, "The town upon Charles river," five years after its establishment by the general court of Massachusetts Bay, September 7, 1630. At that time Watertown included a much larger area than is now represented by that name. It was a town which for many years ranked with Plymouth and Charlestown and Salem as one of the principal seats of influence of those mighty men of renown of the formative days of New England and its close neighborhood with Harvard College made it a centre whither the strong men of the period resorted and whence went forth influences which affected all the American colonies. Richard Sawtell was a leader there as early as 1637, at the time that Cromwell, Vane and Hampden were engaged in those struggles which proved the birth pangs of English constitutional liberty. After Watertown has been firmly established, the call came for those who had been foundation layers and master builders of the new community to again lay new foundations on what was then the frontier of civilization, and among them was Richard Sawtell, who was a natural leader and moved to the front in whatever community he lived. The new settlement was named Groton, and it afforded the background and environment which was appropriate to such noteworthy schools as the old Lawrence Academy and the present St. Paul's school. Richard Sawtell became a proprietor of Groton, formed out of the Plantation of Patapawag, and moved his family to that town as soon as suitable homes had been provided. He served as its first town clerk. All through those terrible days of the Indian massacres which made the name of Groton one to kindle terror even in those days of blood, Richard Sawtell remained at his place and counted the place of danger the place of honor. In extreme old age he returned to his old home in Watertown and died there August 21, 1694. His life almost exactly spanned the period of the struggle for liberty, commencing just as the struggle became acute and terminating just as victory was permanently assured. His wife Elizabeth died October 18, 1694. If, as seems probable, she was mother of Richard's children, she was probably daughter of Thomas Post, of Cambridge, who died in 1691, leaving a will in which he bequeathed to his "grandson John Sawtell," and others. Richard, by will, gave to his wife Elizabeth, for life, his lands in Groton and Watertown, his son Obadiah to improve the lands in Groton, and his son Enoch to do the same with lands in Watertown, and each to have the lands ne improved on the death of their mother. These two sons were to pay something to the tectators' daughters, Bethia, Sawtell, Hannah Winn and Ruth Hues, and his son John Sawtell. The son Jonathan was provided for already. Children: 1. Elizabeth, born May 1, 1638. 2. Jonathan, August 24, 1639, died January 6, 1690-91; married, July 3, 1665, Mary ———, who bore him six children. 3. Mary, November 19, 1640, married a Mr. Starling, or Sterling. 4. Hannah, December 10, 1642, married Increase Winn. 5. Zachariah, July 26, 1643-44, married (first) Elizabeth Parker, of Groton, by whom he had two children, Anna and Zachariah; (second) Mary ———, by whom he had three children, Edward, Nathaniel and Mary. 6. Bethia, 1646, married John Green. 7. Obadiah, 1648, mentioned below. 8. Enoch, married Susanna Randall, who bore him five children; he was a weaver in Watertown. 9. John, mentioned in his father's will. 10. Ruth, married, March 9, 1676-77, John Hewes, or Hues.

(II) Obadiah, son of Richard Sawtell, born in Watertown, 1648, resided and died in Groton, March 20, 1740. He was a soldier in the Indian wars carried on by King Philip, 1675-76, and he was driven from his home with the other families of the town. Among the names of soldiers from Groton in these Indian wars were found: Abel, David, David Jr., Ephraim, Hezekiah, Jonathan, Joseph, Josiah, Moses, Nathaniel, Obadiah, Richard, Samuel and Zachariah Sawtell, and according to the spelling of the name they were apparently of the same family as Richard the immigrant. He married, in Groton, Hannah Lawrence, born March 24, 1661-62, daughter of George Lawrence, of Watertown; she was living September 29, 1726. Children: 1. Nathaniel, born about 1681. 2. Elnathan, March 27, 1683. 3. Ephraim, about 1685. 4. Josiah, August 14, 1687. 5. Hepsibah, married, probably at Concord, August 24, 1706, Thomas Foster, of Billerica. 6. Zachariah. 7. Hannah, June 8, 1695, married Stephen Holden. 8. Abigail, March 13, 1697, married Joseph Parker. 9. Mary, about 1699, married Benjamin Parker. 10. Obadiah, March 18, 1701, mentioned below. 11. Hezekiah, March 2, 1703.

(III) Obadiah (2), son of Obadiah (1) Sawtell, was born March 18, 1701. He was a worthy descendant of his pioneer ancestor, for in 1740 he went to the new township, Charlestown, on the Connecticut river, just the kind of situation most exposed to sudden appearances of Canadian Indians, and the part of the town which was associated with the Sawtells and which still bear their name was an island in the river. He was captured by the Indians in 1746, was later released, probably through a ransom, but after his release returned to the same place and was shot by the savage while at work in the field in 1749. He married, November 16, 1721, Rachel Parker, daughter of Samuel and Abigail (Lakin) Parker. Children: 1. Simon, born November 14, 1722, mentioned below. 2. Lois, July 4, 1724, married Micah Fuller, and settled in Charlestown. 3. Esther, March 9, 1725-26, married John Johnson. 4. Nathaniel, February 12, 1729, probably married Hannah Gunn. 5. Rachel, June 9, 1731, married Adonijah Taylor. 6. Solomon, October 10, 1737.

(IV) Simon, son of Obadiah (2) Sawtell, was born in Groton, Massachusetts, November 14, 1722. He removed to Charlestown, New Hampshire, in 1746, where he was constable for 1762-63, selectman 1767-68, a prominent citizen, a good neighbor and influential man.

He married Hannah ———. Children, born in Charlestown: 1. Obadiah, November 8, 1746, married Elizabeth ———, who bore him seven children. 2. Electa, January 2, 1752. 4. John, May 2, 1754, mentioned below. 5. Hannah, August 26, 1756, died young. 6. Hannah, August 2, 1757, died young. 7. Hannah, December 21, 1760. 8. Rhoda, May 2, 1764. 9. (VI) John (2), son of John (1) Sartwell, was born in Charlestown, New Hampshire, April 29, 1783. In later life he moved to Glover and Barton, Vermont, where in a short time his name was changed from Sartwell to Sortwell. He married (first) March 27, 1808, Emma Crosby, who died May 31, 1818. ber 17, 1777, and under Colonel Vose of the First Massachusetts Regiment, November 3, 1783, when the continental army disbanded. Children of second marriage: 1. Members of this family have almost uniformly retained the spelling Haile, although in the Rhode Island Colonial Records it is often found spelled Hale. The ancestor doubtless emigrated from England, although no record has been found of his embarkation, and the first mention found of his name is in the Rhode Island Records. They have from the first taken an honorable place among their associates, many of them attaining positions of high public trust, and bearing themselves with great credit to themselves and the name they bore.

(I) The first record found of Richard Haile is the record of birth of his children: he first lived at Providence, Rhode Island, but later removed to Swansea, same state, which later became included in Massachusetts. He married Mary Bullock; children: Richard; Elizabeth, born July 22, 1685; Hannah, May 8, 1690; Rose, May 30, 1692; Patience, July 3, 1694. Richard, the father, was supposed to have been born about 1640.

(II) Richard (2), eldest son of Richard (1) and Mary (Bullock) Haile, was born December 22, 1681, at Swansea, Massachusetts, and died February 8, 1718-19. He married, January 2, 1705-06, Ann, daughter of Joseph and Lydia (Bowen) Mason, born in Swansea, August 28, 1688; she married (second) January 25, 1727-28, Benjamin Munroe. Children of Richard and Ann (Mason) Haile: Walter; Mary, born April 19, 1708; Amos, about 1710; Lydia, March 11, 1711-12; Amey, January 22, 1713-14; Nathan, April 9, 1716; and Bernice, May 23, 1719.

(III) Walter, oldest son of Richard (2) and Ann (Mason) Haile, was born November 16, 1706, and died June 3, 1786. He lived at Warren, Rhode Island, and married, February 1, 1727-28, Mary, daughter of Nathaniel and Ruth (Cole) Luther, born January 2, 1705-06, at Swansea, died August 19, 1785.

(IV) James, son of Walter and Mary (Luther) Haile, was born October 30, 1745, at Warren, Rhode Island, and died May 8, 1808. He married, November 2, 1768, Hannah, daughter of Hezekiah and Desire (Carpenter) Hix, of Rehoboth, Massachusetts, born May 17, 1740; they resided at one time at Putney, Vermont.

(V) John, son of James and Hannah (Hix) Haile, was born February 11, 1781, at Putney, Vermont, and died about 1856, at Swanzey, New Hampshire; he married Eunice, daughter of William and Mary (Conn) Henry, and after living some time in Chesterfield, New Hampshire, they removed to Swanzey, same state, where they spent their declining years on a farm. They became the parents of William Haile, who was so greatly honored by his native state.

(VI) William, son of John and Eunice

(Henry) Haile, was born in Putney, Vermont, May 23, 1807. He was elected governor of the State of New Hampshire, taking his office in 1857, and for two years served with credit and honor to himself; he was the first Republican governor to be elected. He married Sabrana Walker.

(VII) William Henry, son of Governor William and Sabrana (Walker) Haile, was born September 23, 1833, at Chesterfield, New Hampshire, and when a child removed with his parents to Hinsdale, New Hampshire, where he received his primary education, supplemented by attendance at Kimball Union Academy and Amherst College, and in 1856 he graduated from Dartmouth College, having studied law. He removed to Springfield, Massachusetts, where he was admitted to the bar, but returned to Hinsdale, and under the firm name of Haile, Frost & Company, later Haile & Frost Manufacturing Company, entered into partnership with his father and Rufus S. Frost, of Chelsea. He served in the New Hampshire state legislature three terms, and in 1871 again took up his residence in Springfield, Massachusetts, where he settled permanently. He became mayor of Springfield in 1881, and spent the next two years in the state legislature, where he served on several important committees. In 1889 Mr. Haile was elected lieutenant governor of Massachusetts, and twice re-elected, and in 1892 was considered a strong candidate by his party for the office of governor, but was defeated. Mr. Haile won the reputation of an able lawyer, and as a business man won a very fair share of success; he had many friends among his business and political associates, and was considered an honor to the community. He spent many years in the service of his native and adopted states, and his memory is revered and respected by all who knew him. He died February 13, 1901. Mr. Haile married, in January, 1861, Amelia L., daughter of Ethan S. and Louisa (Burns) Chapin, of Springfield. (See Chapin VIII).

(The Chapin Line—See Samuel Chapin 1).

He married, in December, 1702, Ruth Janes, of Northampton, Massachusetts, who died January 18, 1736, aged fifty-four; children: Rachel, born August 27, 1703; Ebenezer, September 23, 1705; Noah, October 25, 1707; Seth; Catherine, January 4, 1711; Moses, August 24, 1712; Aaron, September 28, 1714; Elias, October 22, 1716; Reuben, September 13, 1718; Charles, December 26, 1720; David, August 13, or 18, 1722; Elisha, April 18, 1725, died young; and Phineas, June 26, 1726, died unmarried, at the age of twenty-one.

(IV) Seth, third son of Ebenezer and Ruth (Janes) Chapin, was born February 28, 1709, and died February 22, 1807; he resided at Somers, Connecticut. He married (first) November 22, 1739, Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel Bliss, of Longmeadow, Massachusetts, who died April 10, 1751, and (second) Margaret Pease, who died October 7, 1802, at the age of eighty-four. Children by first wife: Samuel; Elizabeth, born about 1747, died February 17, 1819; Abigail, born March 20, 1744; Catherine, born about 1749, died December 14, 1774, unmarried.

(V) Samuel (2), oldest son of Seth and Elizabeth (Bliss) Chapin, was born about 1742, and died April 18, 1833. He married (first) Elizabeth Spencer, died February 4, 1812; (second) Widow Eunice King, daughter of Lieutenant Noah Chapin, who died March 25, 1816. (VI) Samuel (3), second son of Samuel (2) and Elizabeth (Spencer) Chapin, was born October 29, 1776, and died December 26, 1855, at Springfield, Massachusetts. He married, May 31, 1804, Mary, daughter of Stephen Pease, born September 7, 1777, died March 19, 1857, at Springfield, Massachusetts; children: Marcia, born April 10, 1805, died May 28, 1820; Marvin, July 5, 1806; Roxanna, June 14, 1808; Amelia, August 18, 1810; Elizabeth S., March 29, 1812; Ethan Samuel; Albert Pease, November 12, 1816; and Horace J., June 5, 1819.

(VII) Ethan Samuel, second son of Samuel (3) and Mary (Pease) Chapin, was born July 14, 1814, died March 1, 1889, at his residence in Springfield, Massachusetts, after a life of earnest endeavor and usefulness. He had little opportunity for education, as at an early age he became employed as bobbin boy in a factory, working fourteen hours a day, but he early became intensely interested in the natural laws of physics, and spent his leisure time studying such scientific books and treatises as he could find. His natural bent in the direction of mechanics and his application to details was such that at the early age of nineteen he held a position as overseer in the Ames factory at Cabotville, Massachusetts. From early boyhood he had a keen insight into the working and parts of machinery, and was often consulted by inventors as to devices they wished to patent, for the reason that he was able to see any defect very readily. He became a proprietor of a hotel known as the "Massassoit House," and had to give much of his time and attention to its successful management, but found time to continue his studies along scientific lines, and later became the author of several books which created attention throughout the world's scientific circles, among them, "Gravity and Heat," published in 1864, "Gravity in Nature," in 1867, and "Gravitation, the Determining Force," in 1887. On commencement day, 1864, Williams College conferred the degree of Master of Arts upon him. As a student he labored with great zeal and patience, not only to gain knowledge in the realms of science, but also along other lines which would overcome the defects and omissions in his earliest education.

Mr. Chapin was of a religious nature, and an active worker in the interests of the First Church of Springfield, also one of the organizers of the Memorial Church. He became interested in the establishment of the French Protestant Church, and donated help to many worthy objects, among them the founding of the Chapin Home, in India, for the benefit of Hindu women. He took interest in educational and literary affairs, and was one of the incorporators of the City Library at Springfield. He was public spirited and philanthropic, and was ready to give material assistance to any worthy cause, and also ready to give words of cheer or advice to those in need of them; his death was felt among a large circle of friends and acquaintances. He removed, in his later years, from his apartments at the hotel conducted by him, to his residence, 81 Chestnut street, where his last days were spent.

Mr. Chapin married, September 22, 1839, Louisa Burns, daughter of John Cogswell Burns of Windsor, Connecticut, and they had five children, of whom but one survives; they are: Amelia L.; Henry W., born in 1843, deceased; Emma Francis, wife of Henry S. Ward, of New York, deceased; Annie P., born in 1850, died in 1851; and Alice, born in 1852, deceased.

(VIII) Amelia L., daughter of Ethan Samuel and Louisa Burns Chapin, was born in 1840, and married, in 1861, William Henry Haile, whom she survives. (See Haile VII.)

(For preceding generations see James Bowker I).

(III) Joseph Bowker, son of BOWKER James and Hannah (Lambert) Bowker, was born in Scituate, Massachusetts, and so far as meagre records indicate appears to have been the only one of his father's sons who did not remain in that town. Deane in his "History of Scituate" in speaking of the children of James Bowker says "Joseph moved to Maine". The date of his birth is not known, but it is probable that he was born about 1730; and it also is probable that he was the progenitor of the Bowker families of Maine, although others not of his immediate family may have gone there in later years. He is presumed also to have been the Joseph Bowker mentioned in "Mayflower Descendants" as having married "may ye 26, 1700", Elizabeth Cowen, both of Scituate, the marriage ceremony having been performed by Joseph Cushing Jr., justice of the peace. No record is found which gives any account of their children.

(IV) Major Levi Bowker was born in Scituate, Massachusetts, July 6, 1763, died in Machias, Maine, August 28, 1850. There is no question that he was a descendant of the fourth generation of James Bowker, immigrant, of Scituate, and it is perhaps more than possible that he was a son of the Joseph Bowker who "moved to Maine", although the most patient research among vital records and genealogical references fails to reveal the names of his parents. The presumption that Joseph and Elizabeth (Cowen) Bowker were his father and mother is a fair one in the absence of any fact to indicate to the contrary, but still there appears no present means by which to determine the fact beyond question of doubt. But however this may have been the truth remains that Major Bowker was born in Scituate about three years after the marriage of Joseph Bowker and Elizabeth Cowen, and that both Joseph and Major Levi took up their residence in Maine, the latter in 1780. The records show too that he was a soldier of the revolution, in service from March, 1781, until December 18, 1783, in Captain King's company of Colonel Tupper's regiment. He enlisted as a private, but being expert in wood-working was employed as an artificer and had charge of keeping artillery carriages in repair. After removing to Machias he engaged somewhat extensively in building operations and erected many of the noted public and private buildings in that vicinity. And he always retained his old interest in military affairs and for many years was major of the state militia. He applied for a pension in May, 1818, and his claim was allowed, the pension surviving to his widow after his death.

Major Bowker married in Machias, October 25, 1780, Betsey Watts (see Watts), born 1764, died February 3, 1854, great-granddaughter of Hannah Dustan, who was captured by Indians in Haverhill, Massachusetts, in the winter of 1697. Children: 1. Watts, see forward. 2. Lydia, married Otis P. Hanscom. 3. Levi, married Martha G. Crocker, and had Simeon, Wellington, Warren, Ferdinand, George, Martha Ann and Hannah Bowker. 4. Betsey, married Levi Getchell, and had Levi B., Willard, Warren, Sarah, Randolph, Andrew, Agnes and Lucinda Bowker. 5. Hannah, married Stephen Boynton. 6. Sarah, married Ellis Hanscom. 7. Deborah, married (first) James McKellar, (second) William Bugbee, and had Mary, Eben and William. 8. Frederic, married Anna Dutton, and had Mary G., Emily B., Levi W. and George B. Bowker.

(V) Watts, eldest child of Major Levi and Betsey (Watts) Bowker, was born in Machias, Maine, and spent the greater part of his life there, being for many years extensively engaged in business as a manufacturer of and dealer in lumber. The later years of his life were spent in Nova Scotia, and he died there at the age of seventy-five years. He married Lydia Stickney, born and reared in St. John, New Brunswick. She survived him and lived to attain the age of ninety-four years, always retaining in a remarkable degree her mental and physical vigor. Of their six children, all of whom lived to be more than sixty years old, only one survives. Children: 1. Sarah A., married James Getchell. 2. Margaret, married Jacob Foster. 3. Elizabeth, married James Ferris. 4. Winslow, married Hannah Boynton. 5. William C., married Ruth H. Watts. Watts Henry, see forward.

(VI) Watts Henry, youngest son and child of Watts and Lydia (Stickney) Bowker, was born in Machias, Maine, December 20, 1836. After leaving school he worked at the carpenter's trade with his brother from the time he was fourteen until twenty-one years old and then for about a year worked as a journeyman. From 1858 to 1861 he carried on business on his own account in Machias, but in the latter year abandoned his tools and bench and enlisted as private in Company C of the Sixth Maine Volunteer Infantry. Soon afterward, however, he was detached from his company and became a member of the regimental band, with which he was connected about two years, being honorably discharged at the expiration of his term of enlistment. He then returned to Machias and resumed work at his trade, continuing until 1869, when he came to Massachusetts, spent a few months in Boston and then settled permanently in Brookline, then a village of about six thousand inhabitants. During the forty years of his business life in Brookline Mr. Bowker has been an extensive contracting builder and has erected a large number of fine residences in that city, also in Newton, Jamaica Plain and the city of Boston, and many large public buildings, including schoolhouses, a part of the Brookline public library building, Harvard Veterinary College building, Boston, Kieth's palatial residence, the Charles Williams building in Brookline and the large structure occupied by the Brookline Gas Company. In politics Mr. Bowker is a Republican and always has taken an earnest interest in public affairs in the city and county. He was elected member of the board of selectmen in 1889, was re-elected three years in succession afterward, then became one of the county commissioners and served three years in that body. While he was commissioner the beautiful county court house in Dedham, one of the finest structures of its kind in New England, was erected under his personal supervision, at a cost of four hundred thousand dollars. He is a member of Brookline Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanics Association, and of Post No. 143, Grand Army Republic. In 1856 Mr. Bowker married Julia M., daughter of James and Susan (Longfellow) Lyon, of Machias, Maine (see Lyon). Of the six children born of this marriage two died in infancy, and the youngest son, Philip, died when twenty-one years old. The three surviving children are: 1. Edwin P., in business with his father; married Caroline Howe and had one child, who died in infancy. 2. Arthur, a druggist of Brookline; married Edna Crane, of Machias, Maine, and has two children, Elizabeth and Julia. 3. Everett M., physician and surgeon of Brookline; graduated from Harvard Medical School and has practiced for seventeen years; married Lucy Anna, daughter of William Griggs, of Brookline, Massachusetts, and has four children: Phillip Griggs, Winthrop Harold, Everett M. Jr., and Eleanor Lucy Bowker.

(The Watts Line).

Samuel Watts came to this country from either England or Wales about 1640, took the oath of allegiance at Haverhill, Massachusetts, in 1667, and was still living in 1690. In the history of Haverhill he is mentioned as having received, August 24, 1676, the sum of thirteen shillings on account of his services as a soldier, and also as having been one of eight young men of Haverhill under command of Sergeant John Webster. There seems to be much difficulty in distinguishing the services of persons named Samuel Watts in the early history of Haverhill, for it appears that the christian name of Samuel was handed down to the eldest son through seven successive generations of the family.

(II) Samuel (2), son of Samuel (1) Watts, the immigrant, was a man of much prominence in town affairs in Haverhill, and is supposed to be the Samuel Watts who is mentioned as one of fifteen persons to whom in 1707 liberty was granted "to build a seat to sit in, in the hind seat of the meeting house, in the west gallery", on condition that they would "not build so high as to damnify the light of them windows at the said west end of the said west gallery". In 1704 and 1705 Samuel Watts was member from Haverhill of the great and general court. In 1715 he married Abigail Dustan, who is mentioned in the history of Haverhill as being one of thirteen "young ladies" to whom permission was granted in 1707 "to build a pew in the hind seat in the east end of the meeting house gallery", provided, as in the case above mentioned, they would not "damnify or hinder the light." Abigail Dustan, wife of Samuel Watts, was daughter and ninth child of Thomas Dustan who married, December 22, 1697, Hannah, daughter of Michael and Hannah (Webster) Emerson. Hannah (Emerson) Dustan was one of the famous characters in colonial history during the period of Indian troubles and she accomplished that which perhaps has no parallel in our national history. She was born December 23, and married Thomas Dustan December 3, 1677, by whom she had thirteen children. In an Indian attack on Haverhill she was made prisoner and carried away captive, with her nurse maid, having recently given birth to her eighth child, which was cruelly slain before her eyes by the merciless savages. Having remained captive for some time, she planned to escape, and at the proper moment arose from the bed in which she was sleeping in an Indian wigwam, quietly took a tomahawk and with desperate courage killed and scalped all of the sleeping Indians who were guarding the prisoners, except one boy who escaped her avenging hand by dashing off into the forest. She then took the nurse and other prisoners, with the scalps she had taken, and returned to Haverhill. Such is the story of her heroism without any of the multitude of accompanying details which contributed to make Hannah Dustan a famous character; and even the general court did not fail to reward her brave action. Samuel and Abigail (Dustan) Watts had five children: 1. Samuel, born August 29, 1716, see forward. 2. Hannah, January 23, 1718. 3. Thomas, May 17, 1720. 4. Joseph, November 4, 1722. 5. Mary March 5, 1726.

(III) Samuel (3), eldest son of Samuel (2) and Abigail (Dustan) Watts, was born in Haverhill, Massachusetts, August 29, 1716, and died in Maine. He married (first) in Haverhill in 1740, but had no children by his first wife. He married (second) in Haverhill in 1765, Elsie Bean, and in 1769 removed with his family to Maine. Of their seven children the first five were born in Haverhill and the last two in Jonesboro, Maine. Children: 1. Samuel, born 1756. 2. Hannah, 1758, married Josiah Weston, and was a famous character in early Maine history. Her services on the occasion of the first naval engagement at Machias are well known, and recently a beautiful monument has been erected to her memory in Jonesboro by the Daughters of the American Revolution. 3. Betsey, 1764, married, October 25, 1789, Major Levi Bowker (see Bowker). 4. Elsie, 1767. 5. Abigail. 6. Sally. 7. Thomas, 1786.

(The Lyon Line).

In the year 1648 three brothers, Henry, Thomas and Richard Lyon, were Scotch soldiers in Cromwell's army on guard before the banquetting house at Whitehall and were witnesses of the execution of Charles I. Immediately afterward these brothers fled the army and came to America. They were of the family of the Lyons of Glen Lyon in Perthshire, Scotland; and it is of Henry Lyon and some of his descendants that this narrative is intended to treat.

(I) Henry Lyon, one of the three brothers mentioned in the preceding paragraph, came to America in 1648, and first appears in Milford, Connecticut, February 24, 1649, when he was admitted member of the church there. In 1654 he took letters of dismissal from Milford to the church in Fairfield, Connecticut, in which town he continued to live until 1666, when he left that province and removed with his family to New Jersey. He was one of the founders of the town of Newark, its first treasurer and keeper of the first house of entertainment (called an ordinary) there. About 1674 he removed to Elizabethtown, where he was a prosperous merchant and extensive land owner. He also filled many important offices, and was a member of the house of assembly in 1675; justice of the peace by appointment in 1681 and afterward became judge for the trial of small causes; member of the governor's council in 1681; commissioner in 1682, and representative in the council of the governor in 1684. He married (first) in 1652, Elizabeth, daughter of William Bateman, of Fairfield, Connecticut; married (second) about 1690, Mary ——. Of his ten children six were born in Fairfield, two in Newark and two in Elizabethtown: 1. Thomas, 1652-53. 2. Mary, 1654-55. 3. Samuel, 1655-56, see forward. 4. Joseph, about 1659. 5. Nathaniel, 1663-64. 6. John, 1665-66. 7. Benjamin, 1668. 8. Ebenezer, 1670. 9. Mary, 1690-91. 10. Dorcas, 1692-93.

(II) Samuel, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Bateman) Lyon, was born in Fairfield, Connecticut, about 1655-56, and died before February 26, 1707. He was one of the signers of the "fundamental agreement" entered into by the Milford colonists of Newark, and in 1667, although then only a boy, he had a lot granted him in the distribution of the town lands of Newark. He married (first) Sarah Beach, born 1654, daughter of Zopher and Sarah (Platt) Beach, of New Haven, Connecticut. He married (second) Hannah, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Harrison) Pierson. He had five children by his first and three by his second wife: 1. Samuel. 2. Henry, born 1682, see forward. 3. Joseph, married Mary Pierson. 4. Mary. 5. Sarah. 6. John, married Elizabeth Riggs. 7. James, October 5, 1700, died November 6, 1775. 8. Hannah.

(III) Captain Henry (2), son of Samuel and Sarah (Beach) Lyon, was born in Newark, New Jersey, in 1682, died August 9, 1735. He married Mary Roberts, sister of Samuel Roberts, who was one of the overseers of his will. Children: 1. David, died after 1742. 2. Nathaniel. 3. Josiah. 4. Zopher, see forward. 5. Jonathan, born 1719, died 1784. 6. Henry.

(IV) Zopher, son of Captain Henry and Mary (Roberts) Lyon, was born probably in Newark about 1715-16, and died in 1744. He married Mary ———, who administered on his estate. Children: 1. Phebe, born May, 1733, died August 3, 1734. 2. James, see forward.

(V) Rev. James, only son of Zopher and Mary Lyon, was born in Newark, New Jersey, July 1, 1735, and died in Machias, Maine, June 12, 1794. He graduated from Princeton College, taking his B. A. degree in 1759 and his M. A. degree in 1762. In 1762 he was licensed to preach by the presbytery of New Brunswick and in 1764 was ordained. He preached several years at Onslow, Novo Scotia, and various other places, but found his work there so very discouraging that he determined to return to New Jersey. On his return journey in 1771 he passed through the province of Maine, just at a time when the people of the new town of Machias were casting about for a minister to preach to them; and they persuaded him to remain with them and become their minister, at a salary of eighty pounds per annum, and to preach on alternate Sabbaths at West Falls and East Falls. Although he was engaged to preach at a fixed salary, he actually received a very small sum of cash during the hard times previous to and during the period of the revolution, most of the subscriptions being paid in lumber. He continued to preach in Machias until the time of his death. During the revolution Mr. Lyon served as a volunteer in the ranks and afterward was appointed chaplain in Colonel Allen's Indian regiment. In writing of his services during this period, Mr. Smith, the historian of Machias, says of Mr. Lyon: "No man was more devoted or active in the cause than Mr. Lyon. He was repeatedly chosen by our citizens as one of the members of the committee of correspondence and safety and was emphatically one of the leading men of the times. Of his superior education and talents he made no boast, but his whole powers were always at the service of his country and his fellow citizens. Nothing daunted his resolution and energy, and his influence and power were largely extended. And, at the close of this busy year of 1775, we find a remarkable specimen of his devotion to the cause of liberty and of his self-reliance in a letter addressed by him to General Washington, in which he suggests the plan of a military expedition against Novo Scotia for the purpose of securing the beautiful province to the colonial union." Mr. Lyon also was an author and wrote several books on various subjects, which were much read at the time. He also was a skillful musician, and many anecdotes are related of his peculiarities. He was very near-sighted and also was color-blind, and it is said that his wife Martha conceived a great dislike to Ichabod Jones, he being said to have taken advantage of the reverend gentleman's infirmity and sold him a piece of red broadcloth instead of black, which was as Martha said much more suitable for a coat for one of his majesty's soldiers and not at all to her liking. Mr. Lyon married (first) February 18, 1768, Martha Holden, born December 24, 1749, of Cape May, West New Jersey. He married (second) November 24, 1793, only a few months before his death, Sarah Skillen, born 1744, died October 18, 1827. Children: 1. Ludlum, born Nova Scotia, January 1, 1769. 2. Phebe, September 26, 1770, died about 1792; married John Kelley. 3. James. 4. Jeremiah, January 26, 1775, died December 13, 1783. 5. Martha, May 1, 1777, died June 12, 1783. 6. Hannah, November 15, 1779; married William Ellis Smith. 7. Henry, May 20, 1782; married Betsy Crocker, and had Albert, James (see forward) Rebecca (married Henry Gallison), Hannah, Ludlum, William, Amelia (married Bryant Gates), Warren, Cyrus and Sanford. 8. Sarah Shannon, June 28 (or November 24), 1784. 9. Amelia (married E. H. Payson), Henry, George, Frank, Ann Eliza and Maria.

(VI) James Lyon, son of Henry and Betsy Crocker Lyon, was born in Machias, Maine, October 21, 1812, and married, May, 1837, Susan Longfellow. Children: 1. Julia Maria, born June 3, 1838; married Watta H. Bowker (see Bowker). 2. James Henry, May, 1840, died young. 3. Henrietta B., August 12, 1842. 4. James Henry, November 21, 1844. 5. Levi T., July 21, 1846.

The surname Holden, Holdin,

HOLDEN Holding or Houlding, is an ancient and distinguished patronymic in England. The derivation was doubtless from a place name. Various branches of the family bear titles and coats-of-arms.

(1) Richard Holden, immigrant ancestor of the American family, was born in England in 1609 and came to this country in the ship "Francis," sailing from Ipswich, England, April 30, 1634, and settling first at Ipswich, Massachusetts, where he was for a time a land owner. His brother Justinian, born in 1611, came over a year later and settled in Watertown, whither Richard removed soon afterward. A manuscript family record, written about 1800, states that the immigrants had brothers Adam and William, and an uncle, James Holden, "one of the Lords of England", who secured their release by the sheriff who had arrested them for attending a "dissenting meeting", on condition that they would do so no more "in that country." Richard Holden resided in Cambridge, adjoining Watertown, for a time, and Justinian also settled there. Richard was a proprietor of the adjacent town of Woburn as early as 1658. He sold his place at Watertown in 1655 to J. Sherman. He was admitted a freeman May 6, 1657. In the same year he removed to Groton where he had nine hundred and seventy-five acres of land in the northeasterly part of the town, now in Shirley, part of which was lately occupied by Porter Kittredge. His land extended on the west bank of the Nashua river from a point near Beaver pond to the northward. He spent his last years with his son Stephen, to whom he gave his real estate March 23, 1691, calling himself at that time "aged, infirm and a widower". He died at Groton, March 1, 1796. He married, in 1640, Martha, who died at Watertown, December 6, 1681, daughter of Stephen Fosdick, of Charlestown. The latter bequeathed to Holden a forty acre lot of land in Woburn. Children: 1. Justinian, born 1644; resided in Billerica. 2. Martha, January 15, 1645-46; married Thomas Boyden. 3. Stephen, July 19, 1648; killed by a fall from a tree at Groton in 1658. 4. Samuel, settled in Groton and Stoneham. 5. Mary, married Thomas Williams. 6. Sarah, married, December 20, 1677, Gershom Swan. 7. Elizabeth. 8. Thomas. 9. John, died young. 10. Stephen, mentioned below.

(II) Stephen, son of Richard Holden, was born in Watertown about 1658. He went to Groton with his father. During the interruption caused in the colony by King Philip's war, he went to Charlestown or Woburn, and several of his children settled in Charlestown. He returned to Groton and died there November 18, 1715. He married Hannah, daughter of Ensign Nathaniel Lawrence, who was deacon, and deputy to the general court in 1693. Stephen Holden's estate was divided among his heirs March 19, 1718-19, and the widow's estate was divided among the same heirs January 30, 1737. Children: 1. John, had children born in Charlestown. 2. Stephen, married Sarah Cresy. 3. Nathaniel. 4. William.

(III) Benjamin, son of Stephen Holden, was born in Groton about 1690. He lived at Needham at the time of his marriage and afterwards in Dedham. He married, May 8, 1728, Hannah, daughter of Thomas and Rebecca (Mason) Ockington. He joined the First Church, April 13, 1729, and his wife, April 2, 1738. She married (second) June 5, 1746, Samuel Bullard, of Dedham, and died in Princeton, January 4, 1776, from the effects of a fall, aged eighty years. Children, born in Dedham: 1. Benjamin, March 10, 1728-29, mentioned below. 2. John, December 31, 1731, died February 19, 1731-32. 3. Mindwell, February 16, 1732-33; married, September 12, 1751, Samuel Farrington. 4. He was prominent in the town of Princeton, where he settled, and in the army. He served as sergeant and lieutenant in the French and Indian war. He was a member of the provincial congress. He was in the revolution and commissioned lieutenant colonel in Colonel Ephraim Dolittle's regiment, May 19, 1775, his commission signed by General Joseph Warren. He commanded his regiment at the battle of Bunker Hill. He was lieutenant colonel of the twenty-seventh foot company under Colonel Israel Hutchinson, his commission signed by General Hancock, January 1, 1776. He commanded the detachment furnished from Fort Lee by General Washington's orders, November 14, 1776, to reinforce Fort Mifflin. He was wounded and taken prisoner at that battle and held from November, 1776, to May, 1778. He was a member of the Church of England. He died at Princeton, November 24, 1820, aged ninety-two years. John Hancock, February 23, 1775, died March 15, 1778.

(V) Joel, son of Colonel Benjamin (2) Holden, was born in Princeton, November 30, 1772, died March 17, 1856, at Rutland. He married, February 8, 1801, Fidelia (Mirick) Holden, born May 25, 1770, daughter of Caleb and Eunice Mirick, and widow of Joseph Holden, who died September 23, 1798. She had three children by her first husband. Children of Joel and Fidelia: 1. Eliza, baptized July 14, 1802; married, December 20, 1824, Rufus Gleason. 2. (VI) Joel (2), son of Joel (1) Holden, was born August 21, baptized October 20, 1804, and died in Dayton, Ohio, August 26, 1890. He married, December 10, 1829, Persis Louisa Estabrook, born in Rutland, May 4, 1810, died in Dayton, May 30, 1845. He was selectman and captain of militia in Rutland. He left Rutland, Massachusetts, May 4, 1841, and located in Salem, Montgomery county, Ohio. He removed August 10, 1843, to Dayton, Ohio, where he died. Children: 1. Eleanor Dana, born September 15, 1830; married Samuel N. Brown. 2. Mary Elizabeth, November 6, 1832; married, June 12, 1855, Charles M. Miles, died December 31, 1907. 3. Harriet Augusta, January 24, 1835; married David A. Honk Esq. 4. Susan Maria, March 26, 1838. 5. George Warren; mentioned below.

(VII) George Warren, son of Joel (2) Holden, was born at Rutland, September 14, 1840. He was educated in the public schools and high school of Dayton. He became a clerk in his father's grocery store at the age of thirteen. A few years later he established a commission business on his own account. He came to Worcester, Massachusetts, in 1856, and was associated with his brother-in-law in the management of the old Worcester Mutual Insurance Company. He finally had charge of a large share of the business of the company. He also engaged in the manufacture of writing ink in Worcester and the Holden ink became well and favorably known to the trade and public. He disposed of this business which is still continued by the Sanford ink concern. In 1864 he bought an interest in a wholesale paper and blank book business. This company manufactured blank books and stationery and the first noiseless school slate. His partner was Augustus F. Payne. In 1878 Mr. Holden started in business of manufacturing stationers' supplies at Dayton, Ohio, under the name of the Holden Manufacturing Company. In 1886 he moved his plant to Springfield, Massachusetts, and continued in business there to the present time. In 1869 he invented the first automatic book cover and patented the device the following year. He has from time to time taken out other patents on book covers and has for many years been the largest manufacturer of this kind of goods in the world. He has always taken a keen interest in public education and has spared no effort within his means and power to improve the public school system. To the smallest school district of the country he has given as favorable a price on his stationery as to the largest city. He is a member of the Economic Club of Springfield and of the American Civic Association and is interested in the work of those organizations. In politics he is Independent. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

He married, July 24, 1866, Annie Charlotte Hulbert, of Erie, Pennsylvania, born October 9, 1844, daughter of Egbert Nelson and Harriet (Carter) Hulbert. Children: 1. Hulbert Percy, born February 11, 1868. 2. Harriet Eleanor, born July 29, 1872; graduate of Smith College; married John E. Oldhan, of Wellesley Hills. 3. Anna Charlotte, born September 26, 1880; graduate of Smith College.

Francis Nourse, immigrant ancestor, was born in England, January 18, 1618, and died at Salem Village, now Danvers, Massachusetts, November 22, 1695. On account of the witchcraft delusion in Salem he and his wife became historical characters. The name of Rebecca Nourse is perhaps the best known of all the unfortunate victims of the Puritan fanatics. Francis Nourse was a settler before 1639 and a proprietor of the town of Salem in 1647. He lived for forty years near Sperry's, on River street, between the main village of Salem and the ferry to Beverly. He was a wood-worker, called a tray maker, a skilled workman, and a respectable man of more than ordinary ability and strength of character. He was called frequently as umpire and arbitrator in cases of dispute over land boundaries, served on local committees to lay out grants and highways, and on juries. He bought the Bishop farm at Salem Village, April 29, 1778, and settled there. It contained some three hundred acres and his children all built their homes and lived on it. The family was prosperous, and it is believed that their very prosperity was the cause of the malicious charge against the wife and mother, Rebecca Nourse. The story is well-known. She was arrested and protested her innocence of the charge of witchcraft. With steadfast dignity and unwavering patience she bore the ordeal of her trial, where crazy fanatics even threw their muffs and shoes at her, and had fits and exhibitions of that sort in court. Thirty-nine of her friends, among the highest and most respectable in the town, signed a statement testifying to her blameless character and faithfulness to the church. These names have been inscribed on a tablet on the memorial recently erected over her grave at Danvers. The jury found her not guilty, but the court reversed the verdict and condemned her to death. She was hanged on Witch Hill, July 19, 1692, and buried in the little cemetery at Danvers. Francis Nourse married her August 24, 1644. Her maiden name was Rebecca Towne, daughter of William and Jane Towne, of Yarmouth, England, where she was born February 16, 1621. She and her husband were members of the First church at Salem, and he was a deacon. Children: 1. John, born 1645; mentioned below. 2. Rebecca, 1647. 3. Samuel, February 3, 1649. 4. Mary. 5. (IV) Benjamin (2), son of Benjamin (1) Nourse, was born about 1715, in Salem or Salem Village. The lack of Salem records prevents research in the details of his family.

(V) Benjamin (3), son or nephew of Benjamin (2) Nourse, was apparently the only one of the family in his day living in Salem. Many were at Danvers, formerly Salem Village. In 1790 a Benjamin of Salem was head of a family of six, according to the first federal census; another Benjamin, probably of Salem Village, had six in his family. Children: 1. John, was the famous Boston printer, partner in the firm of Adams & Nourse, printers and book publishers, of Boston, owners of the Independent Chronicle newspaper; his will mentions his father and sister Elizabeth of Salem, November, 1789; partner was Thomas Adams; was unmarried. 2. Children: Ann B., Mary Ann, Judith L., Hannah B., Sarah W., Hannah B., Louisa, Harriet M., Benjamin Frederick (mentioned below), Fannie G.

(VII) Benjamin Frederick, son of Benjamin (4), Nourse, was born in Boston, February 28, 1814, and he died in Cambridge, December 29, 1886. He was educated there in the public schools, and learned the trade of book-binding, and became a skillful craftsman. He received many premiums on his work at exhibitions. He was in business in partnership with John Remick, under the name of Nourse & Remick, and later with Oliver J. Rand, in Boston. He was superintendent of street lighting in Cambridge for about ten years. He was a member of the Cambridge city council and the board of assessors. He was a prominent member of Amicable Lodge of Free Masons of Cambridge, and a 32nd degree mason. (The Child Line).

This surname, spelled also Childs, Childe and Chyld, is one of the oldest English family names. The progenitor was probably a Saxon chief who assumed the surname toward the end of the Saxon domination in England. After the Norman Conquest some of the families took the Latinized French form of L'Enfant for some generations, and several of that name were concerned in the conquest of Ireland in the reign of Henry II and in the government of the country in the twelfth century; others had seats at various places in Worcestershire and at Shrewsbury, England. Richard Le Childe was Lord of the Manor of Northwick in 1320, and was succeeded by his sons William and Thomas, and grandson Thomas Le Child, who was escheator for the county in 1428. The Child coat-of-arms (Worcestershire): Gule sa. fesse ermine, between three doves argent. Crest: A dove, wings expanded argent, with a snake twining about her neck and body, or.

(The Bardwell Line).

asserted, derived from two words—bard and well,—we may safely infer that the first to bear it was a poet who sang his own lays and sang them well. The Bardwell coat-of-arms shows that the family in England were of the gentry and bore an honorable record: Three scallops (shell fish), guarded by a lion rampant, with motto in English: "We fear no danger." It is said that the first of the name in New England spelled the name Bordwell, and that it was generally pronounced Bardle. One of the immigrant sons, who was a college graduate, saw fit to adopt the original orthography, in order to make the spelling agree more closely with the accepted manner of pronunciation. Members of the family participated in the early Indian wars, and also in the revolutionary war.

(1) Robert Bardwell, immigrant ancestor of this family, was born in London in 1647. He was living there in 1665 when the first plague claimed for its victims more than one hundred thousand people, and also at the time of the conflagration which is said to have destroyed thirteen thousand two hundred houses and shops and ninety churches. He was apprenticed to a hatter in London in 1667, and beside learning the usual trade he acquired a new branch of the business—the making of wool hats. He came to America in 1670, when twenty-three years of age. In the fall of 1675 he was the bearer of dispatches from Boston to the military forces in Hadley, and his orders were that "if the snow fell before he was ready to return, to remain through the winter." He received the appointment of sergeant, and was in command of one or more forts in the western part of the state. He took part in the Narragansett fight, December 19, 1676, and the following day received payment for his services that year. He settled in Hartford in 1675, and died there in 1726. On November 29, 1676, he married Mary, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Smith) Gull, widow of Nathaniel Foote. Children of Robert and Mary (Gull) Foote Bardwell: 1. Ebenezer; see forward. 2. Mary. 3. John. 4. Samuel, born September 26, 1685; married Martha Allen and settled in Deerfield. 5. John, born August, 1687. 6. Elizabeth. 7. Previous to 1770 he erected a house at the corner of the roads west of the South Hatfield school house. He was a lieutenant in the revolutionary war, and according to the revolutionary rolls his record is as follows: "Bardwell, Noah, Lieutenant, Capt. Seth Murray's Co.; Maj. (The Sturtevant Line).

To one who looks down the long vista of the ages as it is revealed by the light of history, there appears from generation to generation a recurrence of the family characteristics that were strong in the family line hundreds of years before. In the race of sturdy Sturtevants the same quiet energy, persistent perseverance, honest industry, self-reliance, regard for truth, belief in the ultimate triumph of right, and tendency to independent thinking, have prevailed in every generation.

(1) Samuel Sturtevant, who was settled in Plymouth, Massachusetts, as early as November, 1640, was no doubt a resident of Rochester, England, before becoming a member of Plymouth Colony. He lived on what is called the "Cotton Farm," in Plymouth. His wife's forename was Ann. To them nine children were born, Samuel Sr., died in October, 1669, and is said to have been at that time forty-five years old.

(I) Samuel (2), fourth child of Samuel (1) and Ann Sturtevant, was born April 9, 1645. He lived in that part of Plymouth which was incorporated in the town of Plympton, and afterward became part of the town of Halifax. He had several offices or places of trust in Plymouth, and was one of the first selectmen of Plympton, and deacon in its church. His first wife's given name was Mercy. She died July 3, 1714, in the sixtieth year of her age. Of this marriage there were nine children. He married (second) Mrs. Elizabeth Harrell. His death occurred April 21, 1736.

(II) Nehemiah, seventh son of Samuel (2) and Mercy Sturtevant, was born in 1681-82, and died in 1744. He resided at Plympton, Massachusetts, where it is supposed he was engaged in farming. He married Ruth, daughter of George Sampson; children: Cornelius, born 1704; Mercy, 1706; Paul, 1708; Nehemiah, 1710, married Fear Cushman; Noah, 1713; Ruth, 1715, married John Loring; Noah; Abiah, 1720, married Simeon Holmes; George, 1725, married Jerusha Cushman; Susanna, 1728, married John Waterman.

(III) Noah, fifth son of Nehemiah and Ruth (Sampson) Sturtevant, was born in 1713, at Plympton, Massachusetts, and died in 1792; he was probably a farmer; in 1744 he married Susanna Harlow; children: Anna, Abiah (both died unmarried), Nehemiah, Nathaniel, Lydia (died an infant), Noah, Susanna, Lydia and Ichabod.

(IV) Nehemiah (2), eldest son of Noah and Susanna (Harlow) Sturtevant, was born in 1749, in Plympton, Massachusetts, and died in 1816. He was a private in the war of the revolution, serving under Joseph Stetson, Colonel Dyke's regiment; also in Captain Sampson's company, Colonel Thomas Lothrop's regiment, Brigadier Joseph Cushing's brigade, recorded in Revolutionary Rolls as from Plympton, Massachusetts. In 1778 he married Huldah Fuller; children: Abiah, married John Eddy; Sally, Lucy, Huldah, Nathaniel (died young, unmarried); Elizabeth Fuller; Nathaniel, and Huldah.

(V) Huldah, daughter of Nehemiah (2) and Huldah (Fuller) Sturtevant, married Thomas, son of Joshua Purrington (see Purrington II).

(XX) Deacon David, second son of David and Mary (Clark) Morgan was born in Springfield, Massachusetts, February 18, 1679. He was one of the twenty citizens of Springfield who petitioned Governor Stoughton, February 12, 1700-01, setting forth in such petition that the lands allotted to them were "falling short, and that any thoughts of such falling off being very effective to us, lest there should be a want of accommodation for our posterity to live comfortably therein, the want thereof may enforce their removing (as well as some of ourselves) out of this province to such place where they may obtain land to live on". Governor Stoughton met this petition with favor, and with the consent of his council laid out a new town about seventeen miles east of Springfield, probably one of the resting places made by William Pynchon and his company on their long journey through the wilderness from Boston to Springfield in 1636, and had undoubtedly attracted the notice of the petitioners, or their fathers, as a goodly land to settle upon. Here was founded the town of Brimfield, in 1787; a meeting house was built, and when completed, in the distribution of the seats, September 12, 1727, David Morgan was given the first seat in the deacons' pew, the first on the men's side of the house, and Isaac Morgan was seated in the eleventh pew and Jonathan, Daniel, Stephen, John and Reuben in the fourteenth, eighteenth, twentieth and twenty-second pews, respectively. His wife was allotted the pew next the pulpit on the east side thereof at the same time. Deacon Morgan married, in 1703, Deborah, daughter of Ephraim Colton. He married Margaret Cooley, December 25, 1729, and she died July 17, 1754; he married (second,) August 11, 1757, Rachel Dada, who died March 27, 1810. Joseph and Margaret (Cooley) Morgan probably had at least one other son, Noah (q. v.) born about 1741. The mother died July 17, 1754, and they gave Bible names to most of their children. Children by second wife, Rachel Dada, whom he married August 11, 1757: 12. Elijah, born May 31, 1758; married, on October 8, 1778, Patty Hitchcock. 13. His homestead, Northfield Farms, was located about five miles from the centre of the town, where he conducted a general store and carried on an extensive and valuable farm. He married, and had nine children.

(XXIV) Elisha, seventh child of Noah (2) Morgan, was born in Northfield, Massachusetts, June 16, 1793. He received his school training in the district school of his native town, and was employed as a clerk in the railroad office. He became bookkeeper in the office of the Connecticut River Railroad Company at Greenfield, and was subsequently transferred to the office of the company at Holyoke, where he remained six months, and in 1814 went to Springfield as paymaster of the road at the general offices of the company at Springfield. In 1816 he was promoted to general freight agent, and in 1818 to general passenger agent, which position he held twenty-eight years, resigning in 1846, after a service for the road of thirty-five years. He died in Springfield, Massachusetts, October 30, 1856, aged sixty-three years. He married, January 1, 1818, Harriet Ruggles, born January 28, 1797, children: 1. (XXV) Elisha (2), third son and eighth child of Elisha and Hannah (Ruggles) Morgan, was born in Northfield, Massachusetts, September 7, 1833. He received his school training in the schools of Springfield, and became general ticket agent of the Boston & Maine Railroad Company at Springfield, and held the office until 1864, when he resigned to establish the firm of E. Morgan & Company, for the purpose of manufacturing envelopes. The paper and stationery world knows the gigantic proportions attained by the business thus begun. The other member of the firm was Chester W. Chapin, at the time president of the Boston & Albany railroad, who remained in the firm for eight years. This firm were the pioneer manufacturers of stationery put up in fancy boxes containing one quire of note paper and accompanying envelopes, the first known as papateries. They were also the first to contract with the United States government for the manufacture of postal cards. The business was incorporated as a joint stock company in March, 1872, and Mr. Morgan held the office of treasurer of the corporation, and was the managing head of the concern. Besides the extensive and in many ways intricate business, Mr. Morgan was a director in the Massasoit Paper Company of Holyoke; of the Chester Paper Company of Huntington; of the Hartford Manila Company, of East Hartford; of the John Hancock National Bank of Boston; and of the Springfield Printing & Binding Company. He was president of the United Electric Light Company and acting president of the American Writing Paper Company. He had large real estate holdings in the vicinity of Dwight and Hillman streets, in Springfield, and through his influence and liberality that section of the city was greatly improved and largely increased in value. He was a member of the executive council of the commonwealth of Massachusetts during the administrations of Governors Russell and Wolcott, 1887-90, and Republican elector from Massachusetts in the electoral college in 1889, voting with the two hundred and thirty-two other Republican electors for their candidates, Harrison and Morton, who were elected president and vice-president of the United States.

This family seems to have CHOATE migrated from Holland to the eastern counties of England about the beginning of the sixteenth century. The name at that time was Van Choate; in deference to the opinions and prejudices of their English neighbors the prefix was dropped. The family seems to have flourished along the borders of Essex and Suffolk counties. In the ancient parish of Finchingfield, in Essex, it is found of record as early as 1500. It appears later in the same parish, and also that of Groton in Essex, and in Hundon Clare, and in Birdbroke, county Suffolk. It has been especially noted in America in connection with the learned professions, and has left its indelible mark upon the history of American jurisprudence. Among the most noted representatives was Rufus Choate, the famous advocate of Boston; and Joseph H. Choate, a leader of the New York bar, is among its most prominent present representatives. By marriages in the successive generations the blood of many other leading families of America has been brought down to present generation.

(I) Robert Choate and Sarah, his wife, were residents of Groton, England, in the early part of the seventeenth century. Among the interesting ancient documents connected with American history, is preserved a letter from the pastor of "Goodman" Choate, in Aughton, Yorkshire, England, written to Governor Winslow, of Massachusetts, and urging that the governor redeem his promises to send for Choate and his wife. This may have been the Robert Choate whose son was the pioneer of the family in America.

(II) John, son of Robert and Sarah Choate, was baptized June 6, 1624, in Groton, Boxford, Colchester, England, and came to Massachusetts in 1643, being then nineteen years of age. He settled in Chebacco parish, Ipswich, Massachusetts, and paid for his first farm in grain and West India goods. The grain is described as English and Indian, presumably wheat and corn. He subsequently purchased more land and became the owner of several farms adjacent to his original purchase. In 1667 he began buying shares in the common lands held by other residents, and in time became owner of nearly all of Hog Island, near the Ipswich coast, containing about three hundred acres. These purchases included the birthplace of the famous Rufus Choate. He subscribed to the freeman's oath in 1667, became sergeant of militia, and an aetive member of the church. He seems to have incurred the enmity of others, who may have been envious of his prosperity, and in 1651 he was acquitted of the charge of stealing apples. He also cleared himself in 1657 of the charge of lying, and in 1659 was able to escape the penalty for refusing to assist the marshal in making an arrest. His heirs succeeded in setting aside his will, and these various experiences have been said by one of his descendants to have inculcated a liking for dealings with the law, which has continued among his descendants to the present day. He married, in 1660, Anne ———, born 1637, died February 16, 1727. He died December 4, 1695. Children: John, Margaret, Samuel, Mary, Thomas, Sarah, Joseph and Benjamin.

(III) Thomas, third son of John and Anne Choate, was born 1671, in Chebacco, and died there March 31, 1745. He received lands on Hog Island, a gift from his father, and was the first white man to settle there. He was a leading citizen of the parish, a prosperous and progressive farmer, and a man of bright mind, distinguished for his industry and energy. He resided for thirty-five years on the island, and in 1725 removed to the mainland. He was a large landed proprietor, being the owner of seven farms, and kept slaves, and was often called "Governor" Choate, either because of his being the owner of Hog Island, or because of his other landed possessions. He married (first) in 1690, Mary, daughter of Thomas and Abigail (Proctor) Varney, born 1669, in Ipswich, died November 19, 1733; (second) September 24, 1734, Mary, widow of Joseph Calef; (third) November 9, 1743, Mrs. Hannah Burnham, who died October 2, 1752. Children: Anne, Thomas, Mary, John, Abigail, Francis, Rachel, Ebenezer and Sarah.

(IV) Francis, third son of Thomas and Mary (Varney) Choate, was born September 13, 1701, in Chebacco, where he died October 15, 1777. He was by trade a blacksmith, a very industrious man and prosperous in business. He made the iron work for three schooners which he built, and by the aid of his negro slave sawed out the planks used in their construction. He was not only an owner of vessels, but chartered others used in the fisheries and coasting trade. He was prominent in town and church affairs, being a ruling elder, and actively identified with the "Whitefield Movement". He was the owner of slaves and provided in his will for their freedom or maintenance and comfort in old age. About 1739 he bought a farm on the mainland, but continued to retain his lands on the island. In his last years he lost his right hand by a cancer. He married, April 13, 1727, Hannah, daughter of Isaac and Mary (Pike) Perkins, born April 14, 1708, in Boston, died October 2, 1778. Children: Francis, died young; William, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, John, Hannah and Francis.

(V) William, second son of Francis and Hannah (Perkins) Choate, was born September 5, 1730, and died April 23, 1785. He fitted for college in Salem, and it was his father's wish that he enter the ministry, but his tastes inclined to other callings, and he pursued the study of navigation and was captain of a ship at the age of twenty-five years. He made voyages to southern shores in winter and continued to work on the farm in summer. He was not only commander but owner of vessels. In early life he taught school on the island, and when not engaged as teacher in the public schools, he maintained an evening school and taught navigation to all of his sons, who spent more or less time upon the sea. William Choate is described as a very handsome man, having a tall figure, with black hair and dark complexion. He was collector and treasurer of the parish during the revolution. He is described as a serious and exemplary man, though not a member of the church. He married, January 16, 1756, Mary, daughter of Job and Margaret (Low) Giddings, born March 27, 1732, died November 1, 1810, in Chebacco. Children: William, died young, David, William, George, Margaret, Job, Mary, Hannah, Sarah, Lydia.

(VI) George, fourth son of William and Mary (Giddings) Choate, was born February 24, 1762, in Chebacco, and died February 8, 1826. He was a man of much ability and strength of character, and filled many local offices, being a justice of the peace and representative of Ipswich in 1814-15-16-17, and of the town of Essex in 1819. A man of most amiable disposition, he made no enemies, and died much regretted. He married, January 1, 1789, Susanna, daughter of Stephen and Mary (Low) Choate, born January 1, 1762, died August 13, 1827. Their first child died at birth. The others were: William, John, George, Francis, Sarah.

(VII) George (2), third son of George (1) and Susanna (Choate) Choate, was born November 7, 1796, in Chebacco, and died June 4, 1880, in Salem. He studied latin in the northern district school of Chebacco parish, Ipswich, of which Rev. Dr. William Cogswell was master. He subsequently spent a year at

Dummer Academy in Byfield, and a like period at Atkinson Academy, and entered Harvard College in 1814, graduating in 1818. Of his class numbering eighty-three men, only eight survived him. For two years he was master of Feoffee's Latin School in Ipswich, and pursued the study of medicine during the same time. He then spent two years in the office of Dr. Thomas Manning, of Salem, and was subsequently in the office of Dr. George C. Shattuck, of Boston, and received his medical degree in 1822. He immediately began the practise of his profession at Salem, where he became the beloved physician of many families and was distinguished among his contemporaries. He was president of the Essex Southern District Medical Society, and of the Salem Athenæum for many years; represented Salem in the state legislature; was long chairman of its school committee; and was a member of the board of aldermen. In 1825, he joined Essex lodge, A. F. and A. M., and was its worshipful master in 1828 and 1829. He was also very much interested in the work of the church and the encouragement and progress of education. The large amount of labor which devolved upon him made inroads upon his health, and he retired in 1867 and removed to Cambridge, where the remainder of his years were passed in quiet and contentment. He married, December 6, 1825, Margaret Manning, daughter of Gamaliel and Sarah (Williams) Hodges, born January 25, 1805, in Salem, died October 5, 1887. She was a woman of superior mind and character, a model mother, prudent and industrious in the care of her household, and retained her faculties in a remarkable degree to the end of her life. When eighty years old she wrote many interesting letters, which are still preserved. All of her children have attained distinction in life, and have reflected credit upon themselves and their ancestry. 1. George Cheyne Shattuck, was an able physician and resided upon the paternal homestead in Salem. 2. Charles Francis, mentioned below. 3. Sarah Elizabeth, died unmarried. 4. William Gardner, A. M., LL.B.; began the practice of law in North Danvers, Massachusetts, was subsequently in Salem, and removed to New York City. He was assistant attorney general while residing in Salem, and in 1878, was appointed United States district judge for southern district of New York, a position which he resigned in 1881, because his talents could command a much larger income than that afforded by the official position. 5. Joseph

Hodges, is the present leader of the New York bar, being a member of the firm of Evarts, Southmayd and Choate. 6. Caroline, became the wife of Dr. Bruno de Gersdorff, of German birth, and resided in Salem, both are now deceased.

(VIII) Charles Francis, second son of George (2) and Margaret M. (Hodges) Choate, was born May 16, 1828, in Salem, and like his distinguished brothers has become a leader in his chosen callings. He not only achieved fame as a lawyer, but is universally known in connection with the management of large and important railroad and steamship prospects. He began his education in the public schools of his native town, and was subsequently a student at the Salem Latin School, and graduated from Harvard College in 1849. He subsequently pursued the course of Harvard Law School, from which he was graduated in 1852, being a tutor in mathematics from 1851 to 1854 in the college. In September, 1854, he was admitted to the Massachusetts bar, and immediately began a brilliant legal career in Boston, and in 1877 he was counsel for large corporations, among them the Boston & Maine railroad, and having invested of his means in the Old Colony railroad, he became one of its directors in 1872, having been its counsel since 1864, and in 1877 became its president, in which capacity he continued until 1907, when he resigned. He was president of the Old Colony Steamboat Company from 1877 to 1894, and during his administration was constructed the magnificent fleet of vessels which have made the Fall River line a famous means of transportation. This was leased on May 1, 1893, to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, of which Mr. Choate was a director, until 1907. He is a director and vice-president of the New England Trust Company, and his remarkable mathematical faculties were called into play as actuary of the Massachusetts Hospital Life Insurance Company, to which position he was elected June 15, 1893, and continued until 1891, when he was elected its president and so continues. Mr. Choate resided nearly thirty years in Cambridge, and in 1863 he represented that city in the state legislature, and was a member of the city government in 1864 and 1865. In 1883 he took up his residence in Southboro, and has a winter home in Boston. Despite his many years, Mr. Choate is still an active business man, and is widely esteemed for his ability and graces of character. He is a member of the Union

Club of Boston, and was for many years identified with the University and Algonquin clubs, and is still connected with the Union, Eastern Yacht and Commercial clubs, having served three years as president of the last. He is a member of St. Mark's (P. E.) Church of Southboro. Though a staunch Republican, he was offered by President Cleveland the post of superintendent of the coast survey.

He married, November 7, 1855, Elizabeth W. Carlile, of Providence, Rhode Island, daughter of Edward and Hannah (Thompson) Carlile, born August 8, 1834, died October 18, 1898. She was descended from a brother of Benjamin Franklin. Children: 1. Edward C., died in 1904. 2. Sarah C., wife of Joshua Montgomery Sears, of Boston. 3. Margaret M., (Mrs. Nathaniel I. Bowditch), of Framingham, Massachusetts. 4. Helen T., deceased. 5. Charles F., a leading attorney of Boston, head of the firm of Choate, Hall & Stewart.

This name has also been spelled

TOWNE Town, Towns, and other ways.

The earliest mention of it found in England is 1274, when William de la Towne, of Alvely, a village in Shropshire, prosecuted a lawsuit, and the following year he acted on a jury at Astley, in the same county. The arms of the Towne family were on the windows of a church at Kensington, Kent county, in the reign of Henry IV; and Thomas at Towne, bearing this coat-of-arms, owned land about Charing, and married Benedicta, only daughter of John Brampton. In the year 1459 William Town was made clergyman at Stow, in Lindsey, and in 1470 he was appointed almoner to King Henry VI; he died the same year.

(I) Richard Towne, of Braceby, Lincoln county, by wife Ann had children: Richard; Edward; Elizabeth; Helen; Prudence; Ann; Katherine, born October 14, 1599; Mary, born April 15, 1601; William, born May 21, 1603; and Margery. The name of Towne had been common in Lincoln county, England, fully a hundred years before this time.

(II) William, supposed to be son of Richard and Ann Towne, was born in England, and the earliest positive information found of him is his marriage to Joanna Blessing, on March 25, 1620, at Yarmouth, Norfolk county, on the east coast of England, about one hundred twenty miles from London, in the church dedicated to St. Nicholas in 1251, and still bearing the name. The baptism of their six children is also found in the church records here. He emigrated to America and settled at Salem, Massachusetts, where his name is found in 1640 in the list of early grants made; he received a "little neck of land over against his house on the other side of the river." His house was in the part of Salem known as Northfields, where he resided until 1651, and after the incorporation of Topsfield he purchased about forty acres in that town. In 1652 he sold his land in Salem, and in 1656 purchased additional land in Topsfield; in 1663 he gave his son Joseph two-thirds of the home where they lived, with barn, etc., at the time of his contemplated marriage to Phebe Perkins. Bosworth is an ancient English surname derived from a place name. The spelling is sometimes Boseworth and Bozworth. Edward Bosworth, immigrant ancestor, was born in England, and died on the ship "Elizabeth Dorcas," in 1634, on his way to

New England. Being sick unto death as the ship neared Boston, the old record tells that he "was carried on deck that he might see Canaan, the promised land". He died soon afterward and was buried in Boston. He left a widow, and probably five or six children. His widow died at Hingham, May 18, 1648. July 1, 1635, the general court voted that Mr. Henry Sewall should be paid for the transportation of the family by Jonathan and Benjamin Bosworth and William Buckland. Among his children were: 1. Edward Jr., one of the founders of Hull, Massachusetts. 2. Jonathan, mentioned below. 3. Benjamin, born 1615, in England, settled at Hingham, Massachusetts. 4. Nathaniel, died August 13, 1693; joined with his brother Benjamin in making a draft on Joseph Bosworth, of Coventry, England, a shoemaker by trade, perhaps an elder brother; Nathaniel settled at Hull.

(II) Jonathan, son of Edward Bosworth, was born in England, perhaps at Coventry, where he had relatives, about 1611. He was a proprietor in Cambridge, Massachusetts, in 1633, and was a tailor by trade. He deposed June 4, 1639, that he was twenty-six years old. He removed to Hingham about 1637, when he owned a house lot of two acres granted that year on Bachelor (Main) street, not far from the corner of what is now South street. He removed to Swansea about 1660, and died there, being buried July 16, 1676. While living in Swansea his name was always spelled Bozworth, and the spelling continued for several generations in some branches of the family. He married Susannah ———. It is impossible to give a list of his children that is unquestionably correct. The list given below was mainly from the Hingham baptisms. Children, with dates of baptism: 1. Jonathan, mentioned below. 2. Rebecca, February, 1641. 3. Bethia, January, 1644. 4. Benjamin, April, 1647. 5. Mehitabel. 6. Mary, July 29, 1649. 7. Nathaniel, July 29, 1649, settled at Rehoboth. 8. Jeremiah, July 29, 1649. 9. Hannah, July 16, 1650. 10. Deliverance, August 4, 1650. 11. Joseph, June 6, 1652; settled at Rehoboth. 12. Belany, November 3, 1654. 13. Edward. 14. Bridget. (These 14 children given in Mitchell's Bridgewater.)

(III) Jonathan (2), son of Jonathan (1) Bosworth, was born at Cambridge or Hingham, about 1638-40. He removed from Hingham to Swansea with his father, and about 1680 to Rehoboth. He married, at Swansea, July 6, 1661, Hannah, daughter of John Howland, who came in the "Mayflower" as steward for Mr. John Carver, and signed the compact and took an active part in the early explorations. He settled at Plymouth and was a town officer and a partner in the trading company of the colony; was prominent in the church and assisted in the ordination of Rev. John Cotton Jr.; married Elizabeth, daughter of John Tillie. Mr. Howland died February 23, 1672-3; "a profitable instrument of good; the last man that was left of those that came over in the ship called the May Flower that arrived in Plymouth". In his will he mentions daughter Hannah. May 8, 1708, Bosworth deeded land in Swansea to his son David of Plymouth, for love and affection (Bristol county deeds, book 10, p. 707). Bosworth was buried in Rehoboth in 1687. His wife died at Swansea in 1687. Children, born at Swansea: 1. Mercy, May 30, 1662. 2. Hannah, November 5, 1663. 3. A Nathaniel Bosworth of Rehoboth married (intention dated June 1738) Jane Brown, of Barrington. He and his brother David removed to Lebanon, Connecticut, about 1733, as shown by various deeds. Nathaniel married at Lebanon, in 1733, Bethia Hinckley. According to the account book of Thomas Newcomb (Gen. Reg. July, 1877) he was there from 1735 to 1738. In 1780 he removed to Sandisfield, Massachusetts, and he was one of the founders of the church there. His wife died in 1749. She was born in 1713, daughter of Gershom and Mary (Burt)

Hinckley. Gershom Hinckley was born in 1682, and died in 1774, son of John, (born July 26, 1694, died 1709) and Bethia (Lothrop) Hinckley (born September 29, 1699); grandson of Samuel Hinckley, the immigrant, who died in 1662, and his wife Sarah; also grandson of Thomas Lothrop. Thomas Lothrop married Sarah (Larnard) Ewer, widow of Thomas Ewer, December 11, 1639; his father, Rev. John Lothrop, minister at Egerton, England, and Barnstable, Massachusetts, was one of the greatest men of the Puritan church in the first generation in New England. He married, February 4, 1790, at New Marlborough, Lucretia Harmon, born April 5, 1770, at New Marlborough, died April 26, 1833, daughter of Jonathan and Lucretia (Bosworth) Harmon. Her father was born July, 1744, and died August 7, 1828; was a soldier in the revolution, private in Captain Zenas Wheeler's company, Colonel John Ashley's regiment, July and August, 1777, marching to Fort Edward, New York. He fitted for college at the New York Conference Seminary at Charlotteville, New York, a large and flourishing institution of the Methodist denomination. He expected to enter the junior class in Yale College, but had trouble with his eyes and was obliged to abandon a college course. He returned to Otis, and in 1860 was elected representative to the general court from the district consisting of Otis, New Marlborough and Sandisfield. He served on the committee on valuation and took part in the legislative action of that first critical year of the civil war. Early in his administration, President Lincoln appointed John Z. Goodrich, of Stockbridge, collector of the port of Boston, and soon afterward Mr. Bosworth was appointed an inspector in the Boston custom house, where he worked for three years. He was for a time in the office of the Fifth Auditor of the United States Treasury Department.

After the civil war he returned to Otis and took up the study of law. He applied himself closely, and at the end of six months passed a special examination with great credit, and was admitted to the Hampden county bar in 1866, in Lenox. He opened an office in Springfield, and in 1867 went into partnership with William S. Greene, and the partnership continued until the death of Mr. Greene in 1878. During the next five years he practiced law in Springfield without a partner, then for six years was in partnership with Charles H. Barrows. In 1885 Governor George D. Robinson appointed Mr. Bosworth one of the special justices of the Springfield police court to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Major Samuel B. Spooner. In December, 1889, by appointment of Governor Oliver Ames, Judge Bosworth succeeded Hon. Gideon Wells as judge of the Springfield police court. He was succeeded as special justice by Hon. Charles L. Long. At the age of seventy-seven, Judge Bosworth continues to administer justice in the local court. His kindly disposition, judicial temperament, common sense and uniformly good judgment have made his career on the bench notable. As a lawyer and magistrate Judge Bosworth ranks high, not only in the opinion of the lawyers of the county, but of the whole community. He is a Republican in politics, and has always taken a lively interest in political affairs. Though one of the most active and influential men he has not sought public office for himself. George Robinson, immigrant ancestor, is first heard of in Rehoboth, Massachusetts, in 1643, and died November 9, 1699. He purchased one share of land rights in 1666 in the North Purchase, in what is now Seekonk, and drew for a division March 18, 1668-69. He was a wheelwright by trade, and built his first frame house about 1660, in which all his children were born. It is still standing on part of the farm of George H. Robinson, of Seekonk. He transferred this to his son John, February 1, 1689, for "love and affection." The entire broad side of this house opened like a door, through which in winter a yoke of oxen drew a sled loaded with a large log for the fireplace. This was driven directly in front of the fireplace, which was open and occupied the entire end of the house, and the log was then rolled to the back, thus making the necessary "backlog." From the time of John the homestead was in the possession of the male line of the family for one hundred and fifty years, when it passed to the female line. Imprints of a seal on the early deeds of the Robinsons show that the immigrant brought to this country a coat-of-arms, whose colors were gold, green and black, but this was lost about forty years ago. George Robinson served in King Philip's war under Major Bradford, and was a witness to Robert Martin's will, May 6, 1660. He married, June 18, 1651, Joanna Ingraham, who died July 26, 1699. Children: Mary, born May 30, 1652; Samuel, October 3, 1654, buried April 23, 1688; George Jr., see forward; Elizabeth, April 3, 1657; William, March 29, 1662-3, died in 1690; Benjamin, January 8, 1664-5, died April 7, 1724; John, November 29, 1668-9, died April 23, 1688-9; Nathaniel, November 1, died November 9, 1673.

(I) George (2), second son and third child of George (1) and Joanna (Ingraham) Robinson, was born in Rehoboth, February 21, 1656. He owned rights near his father, was an inhabitant and proprietor, having rights and titles to the measures, tenements and lands to the quitclaim deed of William Bradford to the town of Rehoboth. He married, November 17, 1680, Elizabeth Guild. Children: John, born September 1, 1681; Samuel, November 16, 1683; Elizabeth, January 18, 1685; Mary, February 26, 1687-8; Margaret, June 9, 1690; Nathaniel, February 1, 1692-3; Abigail, March 18, 1694-5; Hannah, February 2, 1697-8; Noah, see forward.

(II) Noah, youngest child of George (2) and Elizabeth (Guild) Robinson, was born in Rehoboth, October 9, 1702, and died in Attleboro, Massachusetts. He was brought up on the family homestead and followed farming throughout his life. He was of frugal and industrious habits and was noted for his charity. He married, October 4, 1723, Patience, daughter of John and Sarah Daggett, of Chilmark, Massachusetts. Children, all born in Attleboro: Zephaniah, September 29, 1724, married, May 19, 1752, Deborah Stanley; Mary, December 20, 1725; Elijah, October 3, 1727, married, April 17, 1755, Sarah Sweet; William, October 25, 1732; Huldah, November 10, 1735, died December 12, 1735; Enoch, see forward; Comfort, June 7, 1740.

(IV) Enoch, fourth son and sixth child of Noah and Patience (Daggett) Robinson, was born in Attleboro, Massachusetts, November 4, 1738, and died in the same town. He was at first a blacksmith, then took up finer mechanical work, and upon the outbreak of the revolutionary hostilities began the manufacture of gunlocks under a sub-contract for the Continental army. At the close of the war he engaged in the making of kitchen clocks in connection with his trade of blacksmith. He was captain of the company which marched to Roxbury on the evening of the Lexington alarm. His two sons, Otis, afterward Rev. Otis, then ten years of age, and Obed, two years older, were eager to accompany their father, and later enlisted in the army. The record of Captain Enoch is very creditable, and may be found in any history treating of the revolutionary war. He married, December 17, 1761, Mindwell, born November 14, 1743, daughter of Nathaniel and Mindwell Shepard. Children: Obed, see forward; Otis, born June 7, 1764; Loaes, March 18, 1766, married, March 6, 1792, Jesse Daggett; Molly, September 17, 1768, married, December 7, 1791, Otis Tyler; George Whitfield, February 15, 1771, married, July 26, 1791, Silena Richardson; Lizza, February 20, died March 12, 1773; Elias, April 12, 1775, died April 29, 1776; Chloe, February 24, 1778, died January 27, 1786; Nancy Washington, November 20, 1780, died November 7, 1786; Willard Shepard, October 20, 1787.

(V) Obed, eldest child of Enoch and Mindwell Shepard) Robinson, was born in Attleboro, Massachusetts, October 7, 1762, and died in the same town. During the early days of jewelry manufacture in this country, he was one of the first in the town to take up his trade, his shop being at Attleboro Falls, adjacent to the present homestead of his granddaughter, Adelaide R. Mackreth. He manufactured earrings, pins and filagree work, in what was known as "pinchbeck", or imitation jewelry, this process having been invented by a Frenchman in his employ. He sold his wares in Boston, frequently walking the entire distance. He taught his trade to his two sons, Willard and Richard, and after his death the business was carried on by Richard, Willard acting as salesman, and subsequently they formed the partnership of R. & W. Robinson, which developed into one of the most important of its kind. Obed Robinson was a soldier during the revolution, having served in Captain Samuel Robinson's company, Colonel Isaac Dean's regiment, which marched March 6, 1781, and was in service in Rhode Island. He married, December 19, 1786, Abigail, born September 18, 1764, daughter of John and Rebecca (Herring) Richards. Children: Obed, born October 10, 1787, married, March, 1807, Abigail Everett; Otis, October 26, 1789; John Richards, April 30, 1792; Richard, May 20, 1794, married, December 1, 1814, Nancy Holmes; Henry, September 10, 1796, died June 2, 1799; Willard, see forward; Hannah Sweet, June 25, 1802, married, October 8, 1823, Virgil Blackington; Sarah Richards, November 19, 1805, married, April 18, 1831, Samuel Atherton.

(VI) Willard, sixth son and child of Obed and Abigail (Richards) Robinson, was born in Attleboro, June 15, 1799, and died December 24, 1879. His education was limited to that he obtained in the district school, and he early developed a genius for mechanics. He learned the jeweler's trade from his father, bringing to it a natural aptitude, and soon displayed much skill, especially in the manufacture of gilt buttons. In this he branched out for himself in 1821, and later became associated in a partnership with his brother Richard, under the firm name of R. & W. Robinson. A brick factory was erected in 1827, and their business was carried on upon a very extensive scale. Willard constructed new dies and introduced improved machinery, and having seen an "iris" button, studied up the idea until he had discovered the process and then proceeded to manufacture what he called an "opal" button. After the death of his brother Richard he carried on the business alone for five years under the old firm name. In 1843 the fashion of gilt and brass buttons was no longer in vogue except in military circles, and this caused Mr. Robinson to suspend his manufacturing operations for a time. Mr. Hatch, a skilled mechanic in his employ, had, however, entertained the idea of manufacturing trousers' buttons by machinery, taking the tin in bulk and proceeding step by step to the finished process. By the combined study and experiments of Messrs. Robinson and Hatch such a machine was perfected and patented, the product having the additional merit of not cutting the threads which held it to the garment. They entered into a partnership for the manufacture of these buttons, which proved very successful and profitable, and during the civil war filled many contracts with the government. Upon the death of Mr. Hatch, Mr. Robinson purchased his interests in the manufacture from the heirs, and continued the manufacture alone until his death, when his son, Arthur B., took charge of the affairs. Mr. Robinson was awarded five medals at various exhibitions for the superior merit of the article he manufactured. He was not only a representative manufacturer, but made his mark in all circles with which he was connected. He was public spirited, and did much to benefit and improve the town, although he consistently refused public office, which was offered him on numerous occasions. The beautiful village of Robinsonville (now Attleboro Falls) was largely indebted to him for its growth and prosperity, and he was noted for his charity to the poor. It was due to his unselfish assistance that not a few of the later day manufacturers of that section owe their start and success. He was upright and honorable in all his dealings, and becoming financially embarrassed at one time and losing all his property, he knew no rest until he had repaid every dollar he owed. He was a director of the North Attleboro National Bank, and his money and influence saved that institution during a time of financial panic. He received a commission from Governor William Eustis, September 1, 1827, as captain of a company of riflemen annexed to the Fourth regiment, Fifth division, Massachusetts militia. He attended the Baptist church of Attleboro Falls, and contributed liberally to the building of that edifice. His political affiliations were at first with the Whigs, later with the Republicans, and he was a steadfast admirer of Abraham Lincoln and the principles he so nobly upheld. Mr. Robinson was a charter member of Bristol Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, and a member of Adoniram Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, of New Bedford.

He married, October 25, 1825, Rebecca Whiting, born March 3, 1805, died August 16, 1888, daughter of Edward and Amy (Bucklin) Richards, of Attleboro. Children: 1. Ellen Rebecca, born January 25, 1828, died November 8, 1880; married Judge John C.

Several theories are offered as to the origin of this name, but certain it is that it is English. One authority says it derives its origin from a small village near Cambridge, England, which is built beside a rivulet which formerly abounded with eels; as "worth" is the Saxon word for place, the village was originally called Eelsworth, and as it was customary for the first settler to take the name of the place where lived, this became the name of the family. It has been changed gradually, to Ellsworth, and is also spelled Aylsworth, Elsworth, and in many other ways.

(I) Henry Ellsworth, the first of this family of whom there has been found a record, must at some time have lived at Pownal, Vermont, as he had children born there, but the name of his wife is not known, and his place in the family tree has not been found. His children were: Samuel, John, William, Henry Jr., Waity, Charity, Dolly and Polly.

(II) John, second son of Henry Ellsworth, was born at Pownal, Vermont, about 1780, and when a young man lived some time at Brookline, Massachusetts, where he had relatives. Soon after the birth of his third child he removed to Hardwick, Massachusetts, and later to Worcester, same state, where he died about 1863. In 1807 he married Lucretia Thayer; children: 1. Sabrina, born 1808. 2. Samuel, married Hannah Proctor. 3. Henry, born about 1813. 4. John Thayer. 5. Mary C., born January 17, 1825. 6. Alexander, August 27, 1827. 7. Lucretia. 8. Lucy. 9. Hannah Gardiner, April 17, 1830.

(III) John Thayer, third son of John and Lucretia (Thayer) Ellsworth, was born April 24, 1820, at Brookline, Massachusetts. He attended school only until he was ten years of age, then finished his education by studying at home, with such success that he was a valuable contributor to several agricultural journals. He had success in his business enterprises, and when he retired to his farm he managed same with all the care and attention to detail which is necessary in any enterprise, and was amply rewarded thereby. He was a Republican, and an attendant of the Congregational church. He married, about 1850, Hannah Maria, daughter of Moses Lawrence, of Hardwick, Massachusetts. Children: 1. Emory A., see forward. 2. John E., born January 21, 1854, in Hardwick, Massachusetts; lives in Peterboro, New Hampshire; married Susie Haire; children: John T., Lawrence, Edna and Ruth. 3. Child, died young.

(IV) Emory A., son of John Thayer and Hannah (Lawrence) Ellsworth, was born August 3, 1852, at Hardwick, Massachusetts. He received his education in the public schools, and graduated from the Massachusetts Agricultural College in the pioneer class of 1871, being a member of the Greek letter fraternity Q. T. V. He made a study of civil engineering, and later became an architect. In a strongly Democratic city he, as a Republican, served as engineer of water works from 1872 to 1890, and as city engineer from 1884 to 1890. He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, which is rather exclusive in its membership. Mr. Ellsworth also belongs to societies as follows: Boston Society of Civil Engineers, New England Water Works Association, and American Water Works Association. He attends the Congregational church. He married (first) Lucy J., daughter of Ansel K. and Mary C. (Jones) Bradford, who died September 16, 1900. They had three children: 1. Edith C., born September 20, 1875; married Eugene T. Bridges, and has children: Josephine, Robert and Dean Ellsworth. 2. Frank Lawrence, born May 3, 1881; educated at Massachusetts Agricultural College. 3. Henry Bradford, born April 30, 1889; educated at Williston Seminary and has entered the Agricultural College. Mr. Ellsworth married (second) January 15, 1903, Carrie M., daughter of Henry Meach, born August 25, 1858.

Three brothers of this name, GRIDLEY Richard, Samuel and Thomas, descendants of Robert de Greidley, was one of the barons to fight against King John, emigrated from Essex county, England, to Boston, where Richard settled, and had seven children. Samuel Gridley probably died soon after his arrival, at or near Boston, as nothing further is found of him or his descendants. Thomas Gridley settled at Hartford, Connecticut. Many of this name fought in the revolution, the most prominent being Colonel Richard Gridley, afterwards a major-general, a descendant of Samuel; he had been in the British army, but was chief engineer in the American army at the battle of Bunker Hill, where he was wounded. Captain Charles Vernon Gridley, a naval officer who won fame in the Philippines during the late war and died serving his country, was a descendant of Thomas Gridley, the emigrant.

(I) Thomas Gridley came to Hartford, Connecticut, in 1632, with Rev. Thomas Hooker's flock, and became a landholder before 1639. September 5, same year, he was in Windsor, being one of thirty men sent by that town with Captain Mason to fight the Pequot Indians, for which service his heirs received fifty acres bounty lands, October 12, 1671. He probably died about 1655, as the inventory of his estate was made June 12, that year, the amount being a little over two hundred eighty-two pounds. October 3, 1653 he attended a meeting of the original proprietors of Northampton, Massachusetts, held at Springfield, and he removed to the former place, but returned to Hartford before his death. He married, September 29, 1644, Mary Seymour, supposed to be daughter of Richard Seymour, who survived him many years, and after his death married Deacon John Langdon; she removed with her family to Farmington, where both the sons became original proprietors, and where the family lived for five generations. Thomas and Mary (Seymour) Gridley had two sons: Samuel, born November 25, 1647, and was twice married; and Thomas. They had one daughter, Mary, who married Thomas Root, of Westfield, Massachusetts.

(II) Thomas (2), younger son of Thomas (1) and Mary (Seymour) Gridley, was born in 1650, in Hartford, Connecticut, removed with his mother to Farmington, Connecticut, and died there in 1742. He married December 25, 1673, Elizabeth Clark, who died in Farmington, in 1696, and their children were: 1.

An infant, born and died in 1681. 2. An infant, born and died in 1682. 3. Thomas. 4. John, born October, 1684. 5. Samuel, March, 1686. 6. Mary, 1687, died young. 7. Mary born in 1689, married William Judd. 8. Jonathan, born October, 1690. 9. Elizabeth, born October, 1693, married Benjamin Andrews. 10. An infant, born and died 1697.

(III) Thomas (3), son of Thomas (2) and Elizabeth (Clark) Gridley, was baptized June 17, 1683, and died in Farmington, Connecticut, in 1754. He married, August 9, 1710, Elizabeth Bronson, and among their children were Jonathan and Thomas.

(IV) Thomas (4), son of Thomas (3) and Elizabeth (Bronson) was born probably at Farmington, Connecticut, where he resided. He was twice married, and had five children: 1. Roger, born in 1752; married June 1, 1775, Sarah Thompson, and died March 17, 1790. 2. Selah, born August 31, 1757; married, January 1, 1779, Lois (or Sarah) Russell, and (second) Elizabeth Tichley. 3. Rev. Elijah. 4. Doctor Giles, born December 10, 1769-70, died in May, 1816; married Ruth George. 5. Thomas H., born January 31, 1775, died August 4, 1857; married (first) Lucilla Kirtland, February 23, 1800; she died June 24, 1826, and he married (second) Mary Beaman.

(V) Rev. Elijah, third son of Thomas (4) Gridley, was born March 27, 1760, at Farmington, Connecticut, and died in Granby, Massachusetts, June 10, 1834. He graduated from Yale College in 1788, and the next year was installed as pastor of the Congregational church at Mansfield, Connecticut, where he resided for eight years, then became pastor of the Congregational church at Granby, Massachusetts, where he occupied a house which had been used by the two preceding pastors, and which was afterward occupied by his son Addison. He served the church for nearly forty years, and was a great power for good in the community, being an earnest and convincing speaker, and taking great interest in the well-being of his flock, visiting many of them on horseback. He had a friendly manner, a ready smile, and kind word for all. He married, April 29, 1789, Ruth, daughter of Hon. Ebenezer White, of Chatham, Connecticut, born November 11, 1767, died May 13, 1851, at Granby; they had nine children, of whom only three sons and one daughter reached maturity, viz.: 1. Ralph Wells Gridley, graduated at Yale College, was settled as pastor of Congregational Church at Williamston, Massachusetts; later removed to Ottawa, Illinois, and was a pastor of a church there until his death. 2. Deacon H. W. Gridley, also of Ottawa, Illinois. 3. Addison; see forward. 4. Laura Wells, married William Bowdoin, of South Hadley Falls, a lawyer there; she left one son.

(VI) Addison, son of Rev. Elijah and Ruth (White) Gridley, was born December 18, 1801, at Granby, Massachusetts, and died there July 4, 1901. He was educated in the schools of his native town, and lived on the place occupied by his father, carrying on a farm. In early life he was an enthusiastic Abolitionist, but after the organization of the Republican party espoused its cause. He was always a devout member of the Congregational church, and a contributor towards its support. He married (first), in 1827, Sybil, daughter of Chester and Lois (Preston) Ayers, by whom he had five children, of whom two were Henry Wells and Charles Addison. His wife died November 14, 1845, and he married (second) Maria, daughter of Thomas and Clarissa (Stevens) Burnham, by whom he had one child, Edward White, who removed to Holyoke.

(VII) Charles Addison, son of Addison and Sybil (Ayers) Gridley, was born October 27, 1845, at Granby, Massachusetts, where he received his early education. He afterward attended the high school at South Hadley and business college at Springfield, after which he remained at home and managed the farm until he reached the age of twenty-two, when he entered into business partnership with Eliot Montague, carrying on a general store at South Hadley; two years later he bought out his partner and took his brother Edward into the firm, and they did a very good business until 1876, when they were burned out, and Charles A. Gridley sold out. In 1878 Mr. Gridley engaged in business again, and now carries on the enterprise alone, and by his careful management has built up a large trade. Although a thorough business man, he finds time to interest himself in the welfare of the town, and for several years was a member of the school board. He also takes an active part in church affairs, having been chairman of the committee which superintended building the present church, and for many years served as parish treasurer. He was for some time superintendent of Evergreen Cemetery, which owes much of its beauty to the time and attention he bestowed upon same, and has been clerk of the Cemetery Corporation for twenty years. He is one of the successful business men and public-spirited citizens of South Hadley, which has been his home for many years. He is chairman of the trustees of the Gaylord Library Association, also a member of the Town Library Committee. He married, June 4, 1874, Martha P., daughter of Edward C. and Elizabeth (Smith) Miller, granddaughter of Joseph and Martha (Walker) Miller, great-granddaughter of Leonard Miller, who was a revolutionary soldier. They have two children: 1. James Leonard, born October 4, 1876; married Pauline, daughter of Joseph and Dorcas (White) Clark; and they have four children: i. Greta C., born March 30, 1904; ii. Elizabeth L., born January 26, 1906; iii. Charles L., born December 27, 1907; iv. child just born. 2. Bessie, born November 11, 1878; married, October 24, 1906, George F. Canny; one child, George Gridley.

The origin of Angell as a surname is uncertain. Some authorities claim it is derived from Angel, a town in France, and some claim it is from the Greek word meaning "messenger." In very ancient times it was used in connection with the christian name, to describe one, and later to show that the family was of extraordinary beauty. In the Byzantine Empire in 1185, Konstantinos Angelos was a young man of noble family who received his name for that reason.

(I) Thomas Angell, immigrant ancestor, was born in England about 1618. There is a tradition that he was the son of Henry Angell, of Liverpool, England, and that at the age of twelve he went to London to seek his fortune. In 1631 he came with Roger Williams in the ship "Lion" from London to Boston, and he was then regarded as a servant or apprentice of Williams. He went with Williams to Salem, remaining until 1636. He removed with him to Providence, Rhode Island, and had granted him the lot where now the First Baptist Church, the high school house and Angell street are situated, fronting on North Main street. In 1652-53 he was elected a commissioner, and in 1655 constable, which office he held for many years. He was a farmer. His will was dated May 3, 1685, and proved September 18, 1685. He was about seventy-six years old at the time of his death. He married Alice ———, whose will is dated October 2, 1694, and proved the January following. Children: 1. John, mentioned below. 2. Richard Arnold. 5. Deborah, married ——— Seabury. 6. Alice, married Eleazer Whipple. 7. Margaret, married Jonathan Whipple.

(II) John, son of Thomas Angell, was born in Providence and died there July 27, 1720. For a few years he lived on the Daniel Henckes' farm five miles from Providence, towards Lime Rock on the Lewisquisit road. He removed to Providence and continued farming. (III) Daniel, son of John Angell, was born in Providence, May 2, 1680, died June 16, 1750. Like his father he was a farmer, and a man of great size and strength. "He was in the habit of going to Boston market with his team, to trade in that town. On one of these occasions he put up at a tavern where there was a British officer with his fencing clubs, who challenged him for a duel. Mr. Angell told him he was no fighting man. The officer told him he could not be excused; he could have his choice in the fencing clubs. Well, said Mr. Angell, if I must fight, I believe I would rather have one of my wagon stakes than either of these clubs. This was agreed to and a ring was formed; the officer with his fencing club and Mr. Angell with his wagon stake grasped by the middle in his right hand. As they stepped into the ring, "I am not used to this business" said Mr. Angell; "you must tell me when you are ready." "All ready" replied the officer. These words were scarcely out of his mouth when the left fist of Mr. Angell came down upon the officer's nose like a sledge hammer, which laid him sprawling on the floor. The blood flowed freely and covered his face. After a few seconds he partially recovered from the shock and turned upon one side, when Mr. Angell told him to come again if he had not got enough. "Enough, enough," said the officer, "I am whipped." Mr. Angell married in Providence, May 2, 1702, Hannah, daughter of Samuel Winsor. Children: 1. Samuel, born December 12, 1707. 2. When a young man he sold his share in his father's farm and went to Saville, now Sunapee, New Hampshire, and carried on a farm with his brother Gideon. He later sold that farm and returned to Smithfield, Rhode Island, and rented farms at Smithfield and Providence. He was a member of the train band during the revolution. (VI) Rev. George, son of Benjamin Angell, was born at Smithfield, Rhode Island, March 24, 1785, and was educated there in the public schools and at Brown University. He removed to North Providence with his father in 1803, and followed farming during his boyhood and early manhood. In 1809 he was baptized and admitted to the Baptist church, and at that time determined to prepare himself for the ministry. After his marriage he took charge of a select school at Olneyville, near Providence. There being no religious society there, he established a meeting for prayer and exhortation, taking the lead in these exercises and thus securing valuable experience for his profession. He pursued the study of divinity while teaching, and from time to time, as opportunity offered, he preached. In the autumn of 1812 he was called to supply the pulpit of the Second Baptist Church at Woodstock, Connecticut, in the following spring was engaged as pastor, and was ordained there August 28, 1813. For three years he filled this pastorate to the entire satisfaction of his people and with great credit to himself. He was invited to preach for the Union society at Southbridge, Massachusetts, composed of persons of various denominations worshipping together in the old parish church after the Congregationalists had withdrawn. This was in September, 1816, a short time after the incorporation of the town. In this congregation were a number of members of Baptist churches in various adjacent towns, and they were anxious to unite in forming a Baptist society in Southbridge. Mr. Angell accepted this invitation to preach to these united people, and soon afterward was requested by them, without distinction of religious denominations, to become their pastor. He accepted the call with the distinct understanding that he should be settled as a Baptist clergyman, and this condition was accepted. He began his pastorate June 1, 1816. He organized a Baptist church in Southbridge January 29, 1817, with twenty-six members. He continued in this pastorate in the greatest harmony with his church and society until his untimely death, Sunday, February 18, 1827. He was greatly beloved in the community, and his death was sincerely lamented by all the people. He was an able and convincing preacher, a tireless worker, and a most earnest and pious Christian. He married (first) at Smithfield, November 25, 1810 (Rev. Rufus Tefft officiating) Lydia, daughter of Noah Farnum, granddaughter of Rev. Samuel Windsor, formerly pastor of the First Baptist Church of Providence. During the first two years of his pastorate at Southbridge, his wife and two children died. In 1819 he married (second) Rebecca Thorndike, youngest daughter of Lieutenant Paul Thorndike, of Dunstable and Tewksbury, Massachusetts. She was distinguished through life for her piety, charity and gentle and kindly character.

(VII) George Thorndike, only child of Rev. George and Rebecca (Thorndike) Angell, was born in Southbridge, Massachusetts, June 5, 1823. His early education was obtained in various schools of Massachusetts, Vermont and New Hampshire, as his mother, being left a widow with small means, found it necessary to teach for their support. Early in his boyhood he entered a large dry goods house in Boston where he worked for two years, and then, through the efforts of his mother, was placed in an academy at Meriden, New Hampshire, where he prepared for college. He entered Brown University in 1842. In order to partly support himself by teaching, he left there at the end of a year, next fall entering Dartmouth College, from which he graduated in 1846. After graduating he studied law with Hon. Richard Fletcher, judge of the Massachusetts supreme court, at the same time teaching school, studying nights and vacations. The next two years he was in the Harvard Law School, and studying in the office of Charles G. Loring, Boston. In December, 1851, he was admitted to the bar, and formed a partnership with Hon. Samuel E. Sewall, of Boston, in the practice of law, and continued with him for fourteen years. The partnership with Mr. Sewall was always a pleasant recollection of Mr. Angell in his after life, owing to its pleasant and harmonious character. He became the senior partner in the firm of Angell & Jennison, Boston, continuing in this relation several years.

From early childhood Mr. Angell was extremely fond of animals. In 1864, two years before the founding in America of any society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, he gave by will (being then unmarried) a large portion of his property to be used after his death in carrying humane education into schools and Sunday schools. In 1866 the driving to death in a forty-mile race of two of the best horses in the state, moved him to action for the establishment of a Massachusetts society for such education. He wrote to the Boston Daily Advertiser announcing his willingness to give both time and money to establish such a society, and stating that, if there were any other persons in Boston willing to unite with him in this object, he should be glad to be informed. The next morning he was called upon by an influential Boston lady, Mrs. William Appleton, who told him that she had been trying to form such a society, and also by other prominent citizens, and he soon found himself engaged in a work which led him to abandon his profession and devote himself and his means, without any pecuniary compensation, to the protection of dumb animals from cruelty, and to the humane education of the American people. He first obtained an act of incorporation for the new society from the Massachusetts legislature, and wrote and caused to be adopted the constitution and by-laws under which it has acted ever since. He was elected the first president of the new society, and held that office until his death, March 16, 1909. With the aid of Chief Justice Bigelow and Hon. William Gray, he prepared the laws under which the prosecutions of the society have been made ever since, and obtained their enactment by the legislature. These objects accomplished, he succeeded in getting the city government of Boston to put under his personal orders for three weeks, seventeen policemen picked from the whole force, to canvass the entire city, houses and stores, for funds to carry on the work; so, with the aid of gifts from various citizens, he raised about thirteen thousand dollars. Next, in behalf of the society, he started Our Dumb Animals, the first paper of its kind in the world for the protection of dumb animals, and caused to be printed two hundred thousand copies of the first number. These he distributed through the Boston police in every house in Boston, and in every city and town in the state, through the aid of the legislature and of General Butler, then postmaster of Boston. He next caused twenty drinking fountains for animals to be erected in Boston, and by his exposures of the terrible condition of the Brighton slaughter houses, laid the foundations of the abattoir which took their place. In 1869, worn out by the day and night labor of the past year, he went abroad for a rest; and while in England induced the Royal Society there to start a paper similar to his own, and, with the aid of Baroness Burdett-Coutts, to establish the Ladies' Humane Educational Committee, which has done a vast educational work in England. He also visited the continental societies, and was the only American representative at the World's Congress in Zurich, Switzerland, in 1869. Returning to America, Mr. Angell went, in the fall of 1870 to Chicago and spent nearly six months in the founding of the Illinois Humane Society, at a personal cost to himself of about six hundred dollars. It would require a volume to record fully Mr. Angell's work from that time. He gave addresses and aided in forming humane societies as far south as New Orleans, and as far west as North Dakota. He addressed state legislatures, national and international conventions of educational men, agricultural and religious conventions, union meetings of churches, numerous colleges and schools all over the country. He made an address before the National Grange at Washington, also at Richmond, and once addressed eight hundred and thirty-six of the police force of Philadelphia, and once about three thousand drivers of horses gathered in the Boston Theatre. In the winter of 1885-6 he addressed, during sixty-one days, all the high, Latin and normal schools of Boston. In 1882 he started the American Band of Mercy, of which he was made president. From this parent band sprang over twenty-one thousand branches, with probably between one and two million members. In 1874 he was elected a director of the American Social Science Association, and from that time to 1881 gave much attention to the labor question and the growth and prevention of crime, particularly crimes against public health in the sale of poisonous and adulterated foods and other articles. He succeeded in 1881 in obtaining a Congressional report on this subject, embodying a vast amount of evidence he had gathered, and caused over a hundred thousand copies of it to be distributed in this country and in Europe.

In 1889 he founded the American Humane Education Society, the first of its kind in the world, and obtained its incorporation from the Massachusetts legislature, with power to hold a half million dollars free from taxation. For this corporation he has employed missionaries forming humane societies in the south and west: has caused nearly two million copies of "Black Beauty" to be circulated in English and other languages; furnished the paper Our Dumb Animals regularly to many citizens and all the American newspaper and magazine editors north of Mexico. To this society he gave property valued at several thousand dollars, and he was elected the president. Mr. Angell's writings are circulated not only over the United States but largely in Europe and also in Asia, and some of them being used in places as far distant as China, Japan, and the public schools in New Zealand. He offered many prizes to American editors, colleges and university students, and many others, for the best essays on humane subjects.

Mr. Angell was very prominent in his college society, the Alpha Delta Phi, which he founded at Dartmouth, and which was the only secret society he ever joined, except the Masonic fraternity. He was liberal in religion and independent in politics. He died March 16, 1909, aged eighty-six years. His death was a loss to the whole country, and expressions of regret at his death and of appreciation for his noble life and work came from all parts of the world. His name was a household word, and stood for the finest instincts of human nature. The Congregationalist said of him: "In recent years Mr. Angell has made his headquarters at the Hotel Westminster, going down to the offices for directors' meetings. Before the hotel lies Copley Square, with its palisade of churches and public buildings. As the venerable president left its doors he could see the edifices of three sects, the public library, the museum of fine arts and farther on, the Institute of Technology. All these symbolize the agencies which he strove to interest and co-ordinate in his life-work. And now the keen eyes are closed, and the broad, clean-shaven mouth is set firm forever. Animaldom may well sadly chant, 'Le Roi est mort'. But, 'Vive le Roi'; his work goes forward in millions of homes and schools, scattered in many nations, a ceaseless agency for mercy and for love." Not only the religious press, but the secular press as well, gave expression to the universal loss caused by his death.

Mr. Angell married, at Lynn, Massachusetts, November 12, 1872, Eliza Ann Martin, born in Northfield, September 13, 1840, daughter of Warren and Lucy Augusta (Proctor) Mattoon and widow of Charles W. Martin. They had no children, but reared two—Mrs. Reuben Abbott, of Brookline, and Mrs. Elbridge P. Jones, of Newton Highlands.

Mr. E. H. Clement, in the "Listener", Boston Evening Transcript, gave a beautiful tribute to Mr. Angell's noble life, in the issue of March 17, 1909, as follows:

"If there indeed were, as many believe, some subtle means of communication between the human and sub-human orders, as there surely is within the races themselves, we might fancy that the news of Mr. Angell's completion of his labors here in Boston has flown far and wide by this time. It must have been received with genuine grief in hard-scrabble back towns of New England, where the patient and faithful creatures of poverty-struck farmers shiver through the winter in barns full only of cracks and holes. It must have been heard with dismay on the far Western plains—where no shelter whatever is ever thought of for animals herded on the base calculation that there will be still some small profit off each wretched surviving walking skeleton to offset the lingering deaths of thousands of its mates from starvation, thirst and freezing. It would surely be carried by the pigeons spared through his laws and prosecutions from trap-shooting matches of marksmanship—to meet the returning songsters on their way, or so many of them as have escaped from the wholesale slaughter in the South for restaurant suppers in our cities. It would circulate most rapidly, through these cities where the lame and halt, aged and blind and broken-winded horses pass in many cases even on their dying day, from one conscienceless buyer to another worse one; where neglected or heartlessly betrayed dogs and cats are saved nowadays from lingering death by starvation, or the worse 'death that nature never made'—thanks to the teaching and influence set in motion by Mr. Angell a generation ago.

"Such a man had to be constituted differently, of course, from the common run of men. It certainly was queer to see an energetic, capable, strong, quick, brainy man, devoting himself to something that there was no money in for himself—only time, which is money to a smart lawyer,—and money out for years. Ordinary good, respectable business-minding people are content to pass by on the other side when a case of animal agony or misery confronts them; most women turn and flee from such a sight and stop their ears at home to revelations of deliberate cruelties practiced. It takes an altogether singular courage to face the problems of diminishing the amount of misery about us. If some of Mr. Angell's singularities made the unthinking laugh, and others that he interfered with, rage, it must be taken into account that it is an appalling task to move the great mass of indifferent, sceptical, cold-hearted, self-centered, commonplace people. Of course, a man to do this sort of thing must be unlike anybody else. But only the extremist moves the world, or ever has done it. Mr. Angell's forty years of unique work for mercy among us lives after him in constantly expanding reach and power and blessing for human society and every living thing."

This surname is variously spelled

ABBEY Abba, Abbe, Abbee, Abbey, Abet, Abbie, Abie, Abbye and Abby.

The Enfield branch of the family has used the forms Abby and Abbey, while the Windham, Connecticut, branch has preferred Abbe as a rule. For convenience the spelling Abbey is used in this sketch. The origin of the name is doubtless from some location at or near an abbey from which some progenitor took a nickname that became a family name in accordance with a common process. The Abbe coat-of-arms: Gules five fusils in fesse between three scallop shells. Crest on a wreath

(I) The first settler doubtless came from England, and tradition fixes his home in the old country at Norwich, or county Norfolk. There is a tradition that the Enfield family came from John Abbe, a native of Maryland, of Huguenot stock, but the records seem clearly to show that the Enfield and Windham families are descended from John Abbe, of Wenham, Massachusetts. Some remote ancestor may have been Norman French, but John was undoubtedly English. He was received as an inhabitant of Salem, January 2, 1636-7, and allotted an acre of land "for an house next beyond ye gunsmiths and three acres of planting ground where ye town hath appoynted beyond Castle Hill." He had ten acres more granted in 1642 in Salem, probably in the part that was later Wenham. He was mentioned first in Wenham records in 1643, was a prominent citizen, and constable in 1669. He and his wife May conveyed land at Wenham to their sons John and Samuel, and completed the disposal of his real estate by deed dated August 3, 1683. He was at Reading, according to Savage, May 7, 1685, but records prove he left Wenham. He married (first) Mary ———, died September 9, 1672; (second) November 25, 1674, Mary Goldsmith. He died at Wenham about 1690, aged about seventy-four years. Children: 1. John, settled in Windham, Connecticut; was admitted an inhabitant there December 9, 1696; dismissed from Wenham to Windham church; died December 11, 1700. 2. Samuel, mentioned below. 3. Sarah. 4. Marah, married ——— Killam. 5. Rebecca, married, May 13, 1667, Richard Kimball. 6. Obadiah, settled at Enfield; married Sarah Warriner, widow of Joseph. 4. Thomas, ancestor of the Enfield family.

(II) Samuel, son of John Abbey, was born about 1650, in Salem, or Wenham, Massachusetts in Wenham, March 29, 1675, and he was a surveyor there in 1676. He bought land of Lot Kilham in Salem Village in 1682 and he and his wife were dismissed to form the Salem Village church November 15, 1689. He had other land transactions in Essex county. He sold his property April 3, 1697, to Zachariah White, of Lynn, and bought November 4, 1697, of Benjamin Howard, of Windham, Connecticut, for twenty-two pounds ten shillings, half an allotment of land (five hundred acres) being No. 2 at the Center, then at or sets. His father deeded to him ten acres of near Bricktop, with half the house, etc. He was admitted an inhabitant of Windham, December 21, 1697. He died in Windham in March, 1697-8, before he was fairly settled in his new home. He married, at Wenham, October 12, 1672, Mary Knowlton, and she married, after his death, April 27, 1699, Abraham Mitchell, an early Windham settler, by whom she had a son Daniel Mitchell, born and died December 10, 1700. Children, born at Wenham and Salem Village: 1. Mary, about 1674. 2. Samuel, about 1676; married Hannah Silsby, and died January 15, 1736-7. 3. Thomas, about 1679; died at Windham, April 1, 1700. 4. He settled at what is now North Windham, and may have lived in later life at Mansfield; was a member of the Hampton church in 1725. He married Mary Allen, daughter of Joshua, one of the early settlers of Mansfield, October 28, 1707, and he died December 5, 1758. She died in 1766. (VIII) Daniel J., son of Elijah Barber, was born in Pownal, Vermont, July 25, 1836, died August 27, 1909. He spent his boyhood on the farm, and his education was acquired in the district school, which he attended until the age of seventeen, the Oak Grove Seminary, Pownal, from which he graduated, and Williams College, from which he graduated in 1859. During his sophomore and junior years he taught school, a common practice among college students then, and in the summer of 1859 went south and taught a year in the state of Georgia. Political disturbances following the election of Abraham Lincoln as president interfered with Mr. Barber's return to Georgia to teach the same school another year. In the spring of 1861 he taught another term of school, and shortly after engaged in farming, which occupation he followed during the following five years. In October, 1865, in connection with the late Lieutenant-Governor William C. Plunkett, of Adams, Massachusetts, Mr. Barber bought a factory site at North Pownal, the partnership of Plunkett & Barber was formed, and a large cotton factory was erected for the manufacture of print cloth. The firm subsequently became merged in the corporation of Plunkett & Barber Manufacturing Company, and its business was conducted under the general management of Mr. Barber until October, 1871, when the several stockholders sold their stock, and the name was changed to the North Pownal Manufacturing Company. From 1863 to 1866 Mr. Barber owned a tannery in Stamford, Vermont, in company with Jonathan Brooks, who in 1872 was living in North Adams as part owner and manager of a tannery conducted under the firm name of O. H. Read & Company. In 1872 Mr. Barber bought a one-third interest in this tannery, and in 1875 purchased another third interest, and later, upon the death of Mr. Brooks, purchased the remaining interest and conducted the business alone. The product until 1876 was principally card leather, but from 1876 to 1881 it was chiefly preble grain leather for women's shoes, and during the following ten years it was mostly russet leather. In 1890 the old tannery, which had stood for sixty years, was burned, involving a loss of about double the amount covered by insurance. In the same year he erected a tannery at Greenbush, New York, and also purchased a tannery at Readsboro, Vermont, and the manufacture of russet leather and wax splits was carried on at both places. At Greenbush the firm name was Hudson River Leather Company and the members thereof were Mr. Barber and his son Frank J. At Readsboro the firm name was Readsboro Leather Company and the members thereof were Mr. Barber and his son Archer H. In 1892 the present large factory at North Adams was erected for receiving in the rough the product of both tanneries and converting it into russet, fancy leather and flexible splits. Then the Barber Leather Company was formed, consisting of Mr. Barber and his two sons; they manufactured more book-binding leather than any other firm in New England; Frank J. retired from the firm in 1895.

Politically Mr. Barber was a Republican, and always manifested a lively interest in the welfare of his adopted town. He served as selectman, member of prudential committee, assessor, trustee of one of the savings banks, also vice-president and member of investment board. He was a member of the Congregational church from 1858 until his death. He was essentially a self-made man. He did not achieve success by sharp practice or accumulate wealth by compromising his financial obligations. In social life he was gentlemanly and affable, and was one of the most enterprising and influential citizens of North Adams.

The name Brainerd or BRAINERD Brainard is of very ancient origin, and is a place name originally spelled Brendewood or Brendewode. Tradition says that the family came originally from the village of Braine in Flanders or France. The name is still common in both France and Germany, spelled Brainard and Brainerd. The family is, however, without doubt of English descent, being found in England as early as 1350. In Essex county, England, the name is spelled Brainwood, from Brentwood, meaning burnt wood.

(1) Daniel Brainerd, immigrant ancestor, was born probably in Braintree, England, in 1641. An old manuscript, bearing date of January 20, 1786, gives the following account of him: "Mr. Daniel Brainerd, who by the best account was stolen from his native town, Braintree, in the county of Essex in the island of Great Britain about eight years of age. Being brought to America, landed up Connecticut at Hartford, was sold for his passage to Mr. Wadsworth, farmer in said town. His conditions were—to be learned to read and write and at the time of his freedom, twenty-one years old, two suits of clothes. At the age of twenty-one years he labored for him one, perhaps two years in Hartford at farming, and in the year 1661 or thereabouts came and purchased a right of land near the centre west of Haddam, twenty-five miles below Hartford, upon the same river on the west side. Lived first in a cave covered like a small hut or cottage. We presume that he came over in the year 1649. It is said that his name was Brainwood and that the family owned and employed two spring looms, likewise that his mother at his emigration was a widow and by a certain letter sent him by her she married Mr. Grey. In Haddam he was the first justice of the peace and commanded great respect, a judicious, sagacious and penetrating man of superior sense but no learning". This manuscript is at present in the possession of the American Antiquarian Society of Worcester, Massachusetts. His home lot of four acres was No. 5½. He held many town offices: was constable, surveyor, fence viewer, assessor, collector, justice of the peace, and on committees for the laying out of highways. He was a commissioner to the general court in 1669, and deputy many years, between 1692 and 1706. He was deacon of the church many years, serving until his death, April 1, 1715. His gravestone is in the old cemetery at Haddam near the courthouse. He was elected captain of the trainband, but his appointment was never confirmed.

Commander Edward Hooker, HOOKER United States navy, in a paper read before the Hooker gathering in August, 1892, gives the following as the English ancestry of Rev. Thomas Hooker, American immigrant:

(1) John Hooker was of Devonshire, England. He had a brother Roger, and a sister Mary, who married John Russell, of Leicestershire. Children: 1. John, lived in Somersetshire. 2. Thomas, mentioned below. 3. Rev. Zachary, rector of St. Michaels, Cathays, Cornwall.

(II) Thomas, son of John Hooker, was of Devonshire. Children: 1. Daughter, married Dr. George Alcock, of London. 2. Rev. Thomas, mentioned below. 3. Dorothy, married John Chester, of Leicestershire.

(III) Rev. Thomas (2), immigrant ancestor, was born at Marfield, Leicestershire, England, July 7, 1586. Cotton Mather, in his "Magnalia" says of him: "He was born of parents that were neither unable nor unwilling to bestow upon him a liberal education;

whereunto the early, lively sparkles of wit observed in him did very much encourage them. His natural temper was cheerful and courteous; but it was accomplished with such a sensible grandeur of mind, as caused his friends, without the help of astrology, to prognosticate that he was born to be considerable." Regarding his education and conversion Sprague says: "He was educated at Emanuel College, Cambridge, of which, in due time, he became a Fellow. He acquitted himself in this office with such ability and fidelity as to secure universal respect and admiration. It was while he was thus employed that he became deeply impressed with the importance of eternal realities, and after a protracted season of bitter anguish of spirit, he was enabled to submit without reserve to the terms of the Gospel, and thus to find peace and joy in believing. His religious experience, in its very commencement, seems to have been uncommonly deep and thorough; and no doubt it was partly owing to this that he became so much distinguished, in after life, as a counsellor, comforter and guide, to the awakened and desponding." He frequently preached at Cambridge, and for some time in London and vicinity. In 1626 he became a lecturer and assistant to the Rev. Mr. Mitchell at Chelmsford, and among his hearers were noblemen and others of high standing in English society. He was accustomed, once a year, to visit his native county, and was once asked to preach in the great church at Leicester. One of the chief burgesses of the town was greatly opposed to his preaching there, and not being able to hinder him, he set persons to fiddling in the churchyard with a view to disturb him. But Mr. Hooker was able to retain command of his audience, and at last even the fiddler went to the door to listen, and the story goes that his conversion followed.

In 1630 a spiritual court which held its sessions at Chelmsford silenced Mr. Hooker for non-conformity. Although he was in accord with the doctrines of the English church, there were certain forms of worship which he could not practice, and on this ground he was forbidden to minister to the people. He continued, however, to live near Chelmsford, and was employed in teaching a school at Little Braddow, having John Eliot, afterwards the famous Indian Apostle, in his family as an usher. A petition signed by forty-seven ministers of the established church was sent to the spiritual court, asking to have Mr. Hooker re-established, but it did no good. After a short residence in retirement, under the patronage of his friend, the Earl of Warwick, he determined to seek a home in Holland, and his steps were watched by his persecutors, and he was followed even to the shore, but the ship, fortunately, had got off shore before his pursuers arrived. Mr. Hooker remained in Holland three years, and was at first employed as an assistant of Mr. Paget at Amsterdam. On account of a misunderstanding with him, Mr. Hooker removed to Delft, and was associated with Rev. Mr. Forbes, a Scotch minister. Two years later he accepted a call to Rotterdam to assist Rev. Dr. William Ames. Dr. Ames is said to have remarked that he had never met a man equal to Mr. Hooker as a preacher or a learned disputant.

Mr. Hooker decided to go to New England, but wished to return to England first, as the times were supposed to be somewhat more tolerant. On his arrival there, however, he found that his enemies were still active, and he was obliged to live in concealment until his departure for New England. He left England about the middle of July, 1633, from the Downs, on the ship "Griffin." Such was his peril that he and his friend, Mr. Cotton, were obliged to remain concealed until the ship was well out at sea. He arrived at Boston, Massachusetts, September 4, 1633, and on October 11, was chosen pastor of the church at Newtown (Cambridge). He remained here to the great satisfaction of the people for two and one half years. In June, 1636, he joined the company of those who went to make a settlement at Hartford, Connecticut, and from this time was identified with almost all the important public movements in the colony. He was one of the moderators of the first New England synod held at Cambridge, in the case of the celebrated Ann Hutchinson. He published many books and sermons between 1637 and his death. He fell a victim of a violent epidemic disease, and died July 7, 1647, a great loss to the community.

Rev. Thomas Hooker, according to family tradition, married a sister of John Pym, who was an intimate friend. Children: 1. Rev. John, born about 1636, returned and married in England and settled in the established church at Maseworth, Bucks. 2. Joanna, born about 1615, died April, 1646; married October 1637, Rev. Thomas Shepard, of Cambridge. 3. Mary, born about 1618, married Rev. Roger Newton, first pastor of Farmington, later of Milford, Connecticut. 4. Sarah, born about 1630, married Rev. John Wilson, of Medfield, son of Rev. John Wilson, pastor of Boston. 5. Daughter, married and became a widow. 6. Samuel, mentioned below.

(IV) Rev. Samuel, son of Rev. Thomas (2) Hooker, was born in 1633. He was educated at Harvard College, where he was graduated in 1653. He succeeded Rev. Roger Newton, his brother-in-law, and was second pastor of the church at Farmington, where he was ordained July, 1661. He was on a committee of four in 1662 to treat with the New Haven colony in reference to the proposed union with Connecticut under one colonial government. All of the descendants of Rev. Thomas Hooker, bearing the surname Hooker, are also his descendants. He was a fellow of Harvard and on account of his earnestness and piety was called "the fervent Hooker." He had the habit of committing his sermons to memory and was a powerful and effective preacher. He died at Farmington, November 6, 1697. He married, September 22, 1658, Mary Willett, born at Plymouth, May 4, 1643, daughter of Captain Thomas Willett, of Swansea, Massachusetts, afterward of Seekonk, Rhode Island. His mother was Mary (Brown) Willett. Mary (Willett) Hooker married (second) August 10, 1703, Rev. Thomas Buckingham, of Saybrook, Connecticut. Children: 1. Dr. Thomas, born June 10, 1659; married, in 1686, Mary (Smith) Lord, widow of Richard Lord. 2. Hezekiah, November 7, 1675, died 1686. 10. Daniel, March 25, 1679, mentioned below. 11. Sarah, May 8, 1681; married Rev. Stephen Buckingham, of Norwalk, Connecticut.

(V) Dr. Daniel, son of Rev. Samuel Hooker, was born in Farmington, March 25, 1679, died in 1742. He graduated at Harvard College in 1700, and was the first college graduate from his native town; first tutor in Yale College, 1702-03. He studied medicine at Wethersfield, Connecticut, and declined a call to succeed his father as minister at Farmington. He was living in Wethersfield in 1711 and continued there until his death. He also studied law and was admitted to practice in 1714-15, but there is no evidence that he followed the law as a profession, though he doubtless found his knowledge of law useful in drawing wills, deeds and other documents in connection with his practice of medicine. He was surgeon in the expedition to Canada in 1711. He married, June 24, 1707, Sarah Standley, daughter of Dr. John and Esther (Newell) Standley, of Waterbury, Connecticut, baptized at Waterbury, Connecticut, July 4, 1686, died June 15, 1720, aged thirty-six. (VI) Daniel (2), son of Dr. Daniel (1) Hooker, was born in Wethersfield, February 22, 1710. He studied medicine under his father and settled at West Hartford, Connecticut, where he practiced his profession during his active life. He married, April 2, 1729, Sarah Webster, of the Connecticut Webster family, to which the famous Noah Webster belonged. She died September 14, 1761, aged fifty-two years, at Hartford. Three of their sons died unmarried. Children, born at Hartford: 1. Daniel, 1730. 2. William, 1733. 3. Sarah, 1736, died young. 4. Susanna, 1738. 5. Sarah. 6. Thomas, 1740. 7. Chloe, 1742. 8. John, 1744. 9. Abigail, 1746. 10. Riverius, mentioned below.

(VII) Riverius, son of Daniel (2) Hooker, was born in Hartford, July, 1749. He settled in Maine in 1774. He enlisted in October, 1776, in Colonel Benjamin Bellow's regiment in New Hampshire and marched to reinforce the northern army at Ticonderoga in the revolution. He enlisted in the continental army from Colonel North's regiment at Gardinerstown, Maine, February 2, 1778, his residence then being Pownalborough, Maine, for three years. (See Vol. IV., p. 105; Vol. 43, p. 154, New Hampshire pay rolls at state house, Augusta, Maine). He married, in 1775, Mehitable Baker, daughter of Barnabas and Mehitable (Smith) Baker, now Cedar Grove, Pownalborough, Maine. They had an only son, Riverius, mentioned below.

(VIII) Riverius (2), son of Riverius (1) Hooker, was born at Pownalborough, Maine, March 18, 1776, died December 30, 1856. He was a soldier in the war of 1812 at Wiscasset, Maine, September 11 to 26, 1814, in Colonel John Stone's regiment. He married, November 28, 1799, Beulah Cannon. Emma J., July 16, 1826, died September 25, 1908, married Joseph Edgecomb; has no children.

(IX) Samuel, son of Riverius (2) Hooker, was born October 30, 1800, at Gardiner, Maine, died there July 15, 1873. He was educated in the district schools, and followed farming and lumbering all his active life, retiring a few years before his death. He married, June 8, 1828, Rhoda Edgecomb, born February 22, 1802, died September 14, 1850. Children: 1. George Washington, born August 30, 1827, mentioned below. 2. Eveline, married, November 10, 1861, Samuel S. Davis; child: Evelyn Hooker Davis, born November 15, 1872. Two others died in infancy.

(X) George Washington, son of Samuel Hooker, was born at Gardiner, August 30, 1827, died February 18, 1853. He was educated there in the public schools, and was a farmer and bookkeeper. He married, March 22, 1851, Eliza Annis Ballentine, a school teacher at Gardiner, who died in 1858 at Gardiner. They had only one child, Henrietta Edgecomb, mentioned below.

(XI) Henrietta Edgecomb, daughter of George Washington Hooker, was born at Gardiner, Maine, December 12, 1851. Her father died when she was one year old and her mother when she was seven. She went to live with her grandfather, Samuel Hooker, after her mother died, and attended the public schools of her native town. At the age of sixteen she entered Mount Holyoke Seminary, now Mount Holyoke College, completing the full four years course in two and a half. She taught school in various places and was principal of the schools at West Charleston, Vermont. After she graduated in 1873, she was offered the chair of botany at Mount Holyoke. She received the degrees of Ph.B., Ph. M. and Ph.D. from Syracuse University. She continued as professor of botany at Mount Holyoke College until Commencement, 1908, when she retired, receiving the retiring allowance under the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. She has recently built a residence at South Hadley, according to her own designs. She is devoting her attention to raising Buff Orpington chickens and has won many prizes at New York City and other poultry exhibitions.

Miss Hooker has written magazine articles from time to time, particularly on travel and on the history of Mount Holyoke College. She has traveled extensively in Europe and America having been eight times abroad, and last summer she spent in Alaska; she is still a very busy woman, writing, speaking and reading, but finds time to devote to her favorite pastime—her chickens.

The Cummins family seems CUMMINS to have had its origin in Comines, near Lille, between France and Belgium. The name is variously spelled Comins, Cumings, Cummings and Cummins, and there have been many other variations in the spelling. Some of the family believe that the famous Red Comin of Badenoch in the southeastern part of Invernesshire, Scotland, was a progenitor. The family is numerous in Scotland, Ireland, England and America.

(1) Patrick Henry Cummins, of the Irish family, was born in county Tipperary, Ireland, March 11, 1807, and was nephew of the great churchman, Dean Ryan, of Cashel, whose name is inseparably connected with the events of the memorable year of ninety-eight. He attended the schools of his native parish, but when a young lad his father, who held a high position as surveyor under the British government, decided to give him the advantages of life in a free country, and he was sent to Charleston, South Carolina, to the Right Rev. John England, the celebrated Catholic bishop of South Carolina, between whose family and that of the youth a warm friendship had existed for many years, and he became one of the first students of the Catholic College established at Charleston by Bishop England. In this institution he completed a general academic course, winning much distinction for proficiency in mathematics. He came to Boston in 1830 and in August, 1834, saw the burning of the Catholic convent at Mount Benedict, Charlestown, and never ceased to resent the outrage of the fanatical mob that committed this crime and sacrilege. Fortunately the indignation of the Catholic people was wisely restrained by Bishop Fenwick and no retaliatory action was taken, though the younger Catholics were ready and willing to give expression to their resentment. He was employed for many years at the United States navy yard in Charlestown as a pattern maker, having at the same time charge of the apprentices at the naval school. He engaged in business as a carpenter and builder and was very successful. He designed and built the staging used in the erection of the Bunker Hill monument, then deemed a work of extraordinary difficulty. Of an ingenious and constantly active mind, he invented several devices for the furnishing and equipment of ships, such as folding chairs, cabinets and improved berths. The cabinet work on Admiral Farragut's flag-ship, "The Hartford," was made under his direction. He superintended in part the wood work for the chapel of the Blessed Sacrament on Union Park street, Boston, connected with the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. From 1845 to 1860, prompted chiefly by the consideration of his health, he spent fifteen winters at Valparaiso and Buenos Ayres, South America, in charge of important contracts. He became an excellent Spanish scholar, and enjoyed his business relations with the South Americans. In 1875 he retired with an ample fortune and established his home in Charlestown, now part of Boston, where he spent the last years of his busy and fruitful life, enjoying a well-earned rest and attending to the education of his children. He prided himself on the career of his children, to everyone of whom he gave a collegiate or a convent education.

He was a Jacksonian Democrat, active and influential in politics. He was a good speaker and was often called to the support of his party on the public platform. His aggressiveness perhaps was detrimental to his own business interests, but his earnestness and ability were unquestioned. He never sought political honor for himself, but gave zealous support to the principles and candidates of his party in city, state and nation. Few men had a larger or stronger influence in public affairs in that section. He was loyal to the Catholic church, especially in the trying days of his young manhood when prejudice and bigotry had been inflamed by the falsehoods and attacks of Maria Monk, Theresa Reed and others. After the burning of the convent all Catholic property had to be guarded day and night against the attacks of mobs and he served the church loyally at every opportunity. Throughout his life he was a regular attendant and generous contributor to the church, a friend of the priesthood and an example to the younger generations.

He was married in Charlestown, at the old Church of St. Mary's, to Hannah Kiely, who was born in the city of Cork, county Cork, Ireland, and was educated at the Presentation Convent, Cork, under the direction of Madame England, sister of Bishop England, of Charleston. She lived with an uncle who was pastor of Ballymartle, county Cork, until his death in 1840, when she came to this country with another uncle, the Rev. Thomas O'Sullivan, then pastor at Bangor, Maine. After living some time in Bangor, she came to Charlestown, Massachusetts. Children: 1. Mary, born November, 1850; graduated from the celebrated Lancaster School at North End, Boston, conducted by Sisters of Notre Dame. 2. John F., September 17, 1852, mentioned below. 3. Thomas, 1854, mentioned below. 4. Henry, educated in the public and high schools, graduate of high school; studied pharmacy under B. O. & G. C. Wilson, botanic druggists, and succeeded in business; admitted his brother Edmund to partnership; died in 1905. 5. Edmund, attended the public schools and graduated from the full seven-year course at Boston College; a class-mate in college of Archbishop O'Connell, of Boston; was associated in the business of druggist with his brother Henry and since the death of his brother has carried on the drug store alone with much success. 6. Ellen, graduate of the Academy of Notre Dame, Lowell, Massachusetts. 7. Anna, graduate of the Academy of Notre Dame, and afterwards entered the Novitiate of the Sisters of Notre Dame at Cincinnati, Ohio. Within a year she died with her early ambition unfulfilled. Her death was caused by a hemorrhage of the lungs. 8. William, died young.

(11) Rev. John F., son of Patrick Henry Cummins, was born at Charlestown, Massachusetts, September 17, 1852. He was one of the early students in Boston College and his term there ended in 1872 before formal graduations were held. He won nine medals and three premiums for scholarship at Boston College in four years. He was the first student from Boston College to enter Holy Cross College at Worcester, Massachusetts, where he pursued the study of philosophy, winning one medal of honor. He was one of the two students in the graduating class. The oral examination for the medal that year showed the two men equally proficient and a written examination was held to decide between them. But again they were equally good, and dividing the honor they left the medal to be awarded the next year. His classmate was Rev. John T. Maddon, the present vicar general of Springfield, Massachusetts. Father Cummins took theology in the Seminary at Troy, New York, where he matriculated December 18th, 1875. His course here was completed in less than the allotted time and he was ordained a priest, and assigned to St. Mary's Church of the Annunciation, Cambridgeport, Massachusetts, December 23, 1875, Rev. Thomas Scully, pastor. In addition to the usual work of a curate, he organized in the three years he was in Cambridge a battalion of school cadets and a sanctuary choir in the church, besides assisting the pastor in establishing a parochial school, one of the first in the state, in which he was a teacher of Latin. From Cambridge he was sent to the parish of Saints Peter and Paul, where he accomplished much useful work among the boys of the parish. In the hope of benefiting his health he was sent to a rural parish at Holliston, Massachusetts, as curate at St. Mary's Church, but his health continued to fail, and after a year and a half he removed to California. Two years later, with his health fully restored, he returned to Boston. In 1888 he was appointed pastor of the church at Plymouth. While in this parish he secured the cemetery for his people in Kingston and it was consecrated by Archbishop Williams. He was the only Catholic priest ever selected to deliver the memorial oration at the annual commemoration of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth. Upon the occasion of the dedication of the Pilgrim monument the late John Boyle O'Reilly wrote and read his oft-quoted poem, "The Pilgrims." Father Cummins went from Plymouth to Hopkinton, charged with the special duty of completing the magnificent church begun by his predecessor, and after this task was performed he was appointed to his present pastorate in the parish of the Sacred Heart, Roslindale, in the city of Boston, in July, 1893. At that time the place of worship was a tent and he set to work to build a church and rectory. In ten months mass was celebrated in the new edifice. He was indefatigable in his efforts to raise funds. He devised an annual barbecue which became very popular. Such prominent men as Colonel John R. Fellows, Lieutenant Governor William F. Sheehan and Secretary of the Navy William McAdoo spoke at these great gatherings and over 100,000 people gathered at the several barbecues. He built a handsome church and a modest residence for the priests, and acquired a suitable lot for a parochial school within ten years. In addition to the onerous duties of pastor, he has had charge of the spiritual affairs of the Catholic patients in the insane, small-pox and isolation hospitals of the city of Boston. At the close of the Spanish-American war in 1898, he was appointed by Archbishop Williams to hospital service at the camp at Point Montauk, Long Island. Leaving a substitute in charge of his parish he turned to his new duty, finding ten thousand men of the twenty-five thousand landed at Montauk were sick of yellow fever and other diseases. He was state chaplain of the Ancient Order of Hibernians at the time and many of the soldiers belonged to that organization. A considerable part of the force were of his faith, and his labor was heavy. General Wheeler at length brought order out of chaos and the care of the sick and wounded proceeded with more satisfactory results. Father Cummins was especially grateful for the aggressive and manful efforts of Congressman John F. Fitzgerald in relieving suffering and improving the conditions in camp. Grafton D. Cushing, of Boston, another volunteer assistant of General Wheeler, was especially commended by the priest for his efficient and self-sacrificing service there. After three weeks in camp Father Cummins started home in charge of one hundred and thirty-five sick and convalescent men on the steamer "Lewiston," sent for the purpose by the Massachusetts Aid Association. The vessel was wrecked off Point Judith, but every one of the helpless crew was carried in safety to shore through the skill and heroism of the life saving service. After the wreck, while facing death himself, Father Cummins devoted himself to preparing the soldiers for the worst. The passengers of the ill-fated "Lewiston" were sent to Boston by train by way of Newport. After seeing his charges properly provided for in the hospitals of Boston, Father Cummins returned to Point Montauk where he remained as long as he was needed. Later in the year Father Cummins was voted the most popular pastor in Boston in a newspaper contest, receiving 600,000 votes from the readers of the Boston Traveler. In accordance with the terms of the contest, Father Cummins enjoyed a trip abroad.

Under the name of "Christopher Crux" he has contributed to various magazines. On two occasions he has been called upon by Boston College to deliver the Baccalaureate sermon and once he was Commencement orator. He received the degree of A. B. from Holy Cross and A. M. from Boston College. He has been counted among the most graceful and forcible public speakers in the Boston arch-diocese. He has often been chosen to represent his denomination at dedications of memorials and public buildings and other occasions of public interest.

Father Cummins takes some pride in the fact that he was an intimate friend of the late John Boyle O'Reilly from the time he came to this country. He is always interested in the movements for the welfare and freedom of Ireland; member of the Irish Historical Society; chaplain of Saint Ignatius Court, Catholic Foresters of America, and of John J. Williams Court, Knights of Columbus.

Besides his proficiency in literature and music, Father Cummins' artistic sense is most truly reflected in the beautiful church which he has just completed and to which he proudly points as his life-work. It is without question the architectural gem of the arch diocese of Boston. Standing at the junction of Brown avenue and Ashland street, built in the style of the early English Gothic, of buff brick and brown stone, with its stately castellated tower, it is an imposing structure and exteriorly attractive, but it is the beauty of the interior which marks the artistic mind of the man who planned the entire structure. It is a beautiful artistic unity. The whole interior is finished in white and gold. The stained glass windows, the altars, and stations of the cross, are all individual works of art, and were all made in Boston. "Why should we go across the water for art when such excellent work can be found here in Boston", Father Cummins confidently says. To Mr. Hugh Cairns, the sculptor, to Mr. George W. Spence, the stained glass artist, and to Emil Habistroh, the mural decorator, Father Cummins gives the palm of excellence among Boston artists and to them he has committed the execution of his ideas. The architects of this noble building who have carried out in detail the designs of Father Cummins are Messrs. Reid and McAlpine of the Studio building, Tremont street, Boston. The beautiful lighting fixtures and candelabra, the pulpit and sanctuary rail, all finished in verde antique, are choice specimens of the high grade work which comes from the studios of Gorham Company, Fifth avenue, New York. The grand organ built by James E. Cole & Company, Melrose, Massachusetts, is one of the finest electric pneumatic organs ever constructed. The well known and accomplished Boston musical director and organist, Miss Helen M. Burke, presides at this organ and directs the well-trained choir of seventy-five voices in the services of the church. Father Cummins is beloved by all his people, whom he has brought in these few years from a rude tent to a majestic temple.

(II) Thomas, son of Patrick Henry Cummins, was born in 1854. He attended the public schools and Boston College. He established the Cummins Pharmacy in 1872, which still stands in the street in Charlestown where he was born. He studied his profession in Bellevue Hospital Medical School, New York City; was appointed assistant instructor in surgery, but his health failed and he was obliged to resign. He continued his studies and research and wrote often for medical journals. He contributed to the Med- ical Review a series of articles on climatology, which attracted much favorable notice in the profession and were highly commended at the World's Congress of Physicians. He was finally obliged to give up business on account of failing health. He traveled extensively for his health and incidentally corresponded for various journals. He made a special investigation of climate in its relation to tuberculosis. He died January 1, 1889, at Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Rev. Edward Taylor, immigrant ancestor of this family, was born near Hineckley, Leicestershire, England, parish of Sketchly, about 1642. He came when a youth and graduated at Harvard College in the class of 1671. He preached in various places before he was ordained, coming to Westfield in 1668 and being ordained July 5, 1671, in Boston. A Samuel Taylor from this vicinity was in Captain Enoch Nobel's company, Colonel John Brown's regiment, in 1775. He and his brothers Jedediah and Colonel James Taylor were residents of Westfield in 1790, when the federal census was taken, and he then had in his family three sons under sixteen and one female. He married, February 16, 1786, Tirza Holcomb, born December 13, 1753, died January 7, 1851, aged ninety-eight years, daughter of Enoch and Ann Fowler. (V) Samuel Francis, son of Francis Taylor, was born in Westfield, February 10, 1837, and died there December 10, 1877. He was educated in the public schools of his native town, and during his boyhood and youth lived on his father's farm. His father died when he was a young child. He succeeded to the farm when he came of age and made a specialty of raising tobacco. He was also associated with Lamberton & Oakham, in the real estate business in Westfield. He was an able and successful business man, alert, enterprising, of sound sense and high character. His townsmen held him in the highest esteem and he had many friends, though not a member of any club or secret order. In politics he was a Republican. He was a member and liberal supporter of the Second Congregational Church. He was particularly fond of domestic life, and was fortunate and happy in his home and family. The surname Noble is of great antiquity in England. It first appears in 1199, in the reign of Richard I, and the name has been common since. It is found also in Scotland, and several noted merchants of the name lived in Edinburgh. Families in England, Scotland and Ireland bore arms. The principal seats of the family were in Cornwall, Belsion and Bishop's Tentor, county Devon, and Marming, near Maidstone, county Kent. This family bore these arms: Or two lions passant guard. in place azure between as many flanches of the last; over all a fesse gules charged with three bezants. Crest: A lion passant azure.

(I) Thomas Noble, immigrant ancestor, ancestor, was born as early as 1632, and died in Westfield, Massachusetts, January 20, 1704, aged at least seventy-two years. He was an early settler of Springfield, coming from Boston, where he was an inhabitant January 5, 1653. He had an account at the store of John Pyncheon in Springfield, and this account book shows that he visited England soon after removing from Boston. In 1664 he with others was given leave to set up a sawmill on "a brook below Ensigne Cooper's farme over Agawam river". He was an appraiser of the town. He had lands granted him in Westfield in July, 1666, on condition of settlement, and the grant was renewed January 9, 1668. He settled there as early as January 21, 1669, and was on a committee to decide the boundary lines. His homestead was about two and a half miles from the present centre of the town. He served as constable and took oath of allegiance January 23, 1678. He joined the Westfield church February 20, 1681, and was admitted a freeman October 12, 1681. He was fined five shillings at one time for travelling on a fast day. His home was exposed to Indian attacks during King Philip's war. Rev. Dr. Davis says: "One night during family prayers, Gray Lock (an old Indian), stepped up and pulled the string and let the door swing open, and as soon as all was quiet he would pull the string again. Mr. Noble was persuaded by his friends to move into town. Gray Lock said he had several opportunities of killing most of his children at a shot, but did not want scalps as much as captives". On March 2, 1666, Thomas Noble was chosen county surveyor. He was a tailor by trade. His will was dated May 11, 1697, and proved September 5, 1704. This family is ancient in SACKETT England, and its ancestors came from Normandy with William the Conqueror. The name is supposed to have come from one Adam le Sackere (Adam the sacker), who was a man engaged in the purchase and exporting of wool, which was put up in sacks. In 1340 King Edward III was granted thirty thousand sacks of wool to enable him to carry on the French War. The names Sackett, Sackett and Sackville are of the same family. In England, Thomas Sackville, Earl of Dorset, born 1636, bore arms, and was a lineal descendant of one of the band who accompanied William the Conqueror to England. The American immigrants Simon and John were without doubt of the same family, but the connection is not known.

(I) Simon Sackett, immigrant ancestor, with his brother John and nephew John, came to New England in the ship "Lion," which sailed December 1, 1630, from Bristol, England. He was in the company with Roger Williams. With Simon were his wife Isabel and their infant son Simon Jr. They landed after an unusually stormy voyage, at Boston, February 5, 1631. He settled in Cambridge, and his house was on the north side of what is now Winthrop street, in the centre of the block between Brighton and Dunster streets. He lived but a short time after coming to America, and died in October, 1635. November 3 following, his widow Isabel was granted leave to administer on his estate. At the same session of the court the memorable decree was entered which banished Roger Williams from the colony. The widow Sackett and her two sons were among the company which made the hard journey to form the settlement at Hartford, Connecticut. She married there (second) William Bloomfield. Children of Simon and Isabel Sackett: 1. Simon, born 1630; died July 9, 1659; married Sarah Bloomfield. 2. John, mentioned below.

(II) John, son of Simon Sackett, was born in 1632, in Cambridge, and is supposed to be the first white child born there. In 1653 he became a resident of Springfield and was granted land there. He married (first) November 23, 1659, Abigail Hannum, born 1640, died October 9, 1690, daughter of William and Honor (Capen) Hannum. Soon afterwards he sold his house and land at Springfield and removed to property he had purchased at Northampton. He lived here until 1665, when he again sold out and went to a farm bought of one Chapin, near Westfield, on what are now Sackett's Meadows. He was one of the first settlers at Westfield. He built a house and barn, both of which were burned October 27, 1675, by the Indians, who at the same time destroyed a large amount of other property and drove off his cattle. He rebuilt his house and barn, and erected a saw mill on a creek which ran into the Westfield river. The building of this mill brought about a law suit brought against him by the Deweys, who claimed that by the erection of this mill the water was backed up on their grist mill. The dam was ordered removed, with the help of the plaintiff's hired man and oxen for nine days. John Sackett was selectman in Westfield in 1672 and at various times afterwards, as late as 1693. He married (second) Sarah, daughter of John Stiles, widow of John Stewart, of Springfield. His will, dated May 10, 1718, was proved May 20, 1719. He gave all his real estate away before his death. The earliest mention of the GRANGER surname Granger in England is in the Roll of Battle Abbey, 1066. The word Grange is of French origin and was applied in England to the farm house or homestead, and the bailiff who presided over a farm was called Ate Grange, and afterwards, Granger. There are several crests known to have been borne by the Granger family, the most common being a dexter arm couped and embowed, in hand three wheat ears all proper. The Grangers of Staffordshire bore: A griffin passant; and the Essex family bore: a dexter arm bearing a portcullis.

(I) Launcelot Granger, immigrant ancestor, came from England to New England, was a resident of Ipswich, Massachusetts, in 1648. There is a tradition concerning him which appears in several different branches of the family thus giving the story some measure of probability. The story is as follows: "Launcelot Granger was born in the west of England, and, when a lad of twelve or fourteen years of age, he was stolen from his mother (his father being dead), and brought to Plymouth in Massachusetts, where he was sold (apprenticed) to serve two years for his passage. He had served on ship as a cabin boy. He afterward married a lady named Adams, and settled east of Boston, where he lived until two children had been born. Being the eldest of his family, he returned to England to obtain his inheritance.

On the way from the place where he landed to his mother's house, to which he travelled on foot, he had to pass through an uninhabited country, and, just before night, stopped at a little cottage. The old man of the house told him that frequent robberies had been committed on the road a short distance ahead, and advised him to put up for the night. But, not knowing but what he would be in as much danger at the cottage as on the road, and being in haste, he determined to proceed. After he had advanced some distance into the woods he perceived by the light of the moon a man step into the road before him and move on slowly until a second one joined him. When he came up to them they demanded his money. He told them he had but one crown, which was barely sufficient to pay his expenses to his friends, who lived at some distance. They, however, told him he must give up his money or they would take his life. He replied that if they got his money they must fight for it, on which they attacked him with their swords, while he defended himself with his quarter staff. With the butt end of this he knocked down one and dispatched him, and the other ran away. When he arrived at the next village he made oath before a magistrate to what he had done, and was suffered to proceed on his journey. The inhabitants of the village found the man who was slain to be one of their "honest" citizens.

"When he arrived at his mother's house he found his younger brother in possession of the estate, and very much displeased to see him, and, it is supposed, hired assassins to dispatch him. He walked out with them under the pretence of viewing the farm, and when behind a piece of woods, they attacked him with their swords, but he defended himself so manfully with his quarter staff that he killed two of them and the other fled. He returned and made known what he had done to the magistrates, who upon investigation, acquitted him of all blame. Meeting, however, with difficulties in obtaining his inheritance, he abandoned it and returned to America. Launcelot was a man of great resolution, was of full medium height and stockily built."

Launcelot Granger removed from Ipswich to Newbury at the time of his marriage in 1654 and leased the farm of Stephen Kent on Kent's Island. The site of his house there may still be seen. The house was torn down in 1884. About 1674 he removed to Suffield, Connecticut, and on September 14 of that year received a grant of sixty acres, and forty acres each for his two sons. He did not settle there permanently, however, until after the Indian hostilities were over, and in 1678 he was living on High street. During King Philip's war he lived at the stockade in Westfield. Rev. Mr. Taylor in a narrative regarding the Indian fight at Westfield, October 27, 1675, says that a Mr. Granger was seriously wounded in the leg. There is scarcely any doubt that it was Launcelot Granger, as the circumstance is well authenticated by the family. He lived in Suffield until his death in 1689. A large maple tree which was planted by him still stands in front of the site of his house, and is known at the present time as the Launcelot Granger Tree. He was a prominent man in the town and served as land measurer for several terms. He died September 3, 1689, and was buried in the graveyard which was opposite the meeting house on High street. He married, January 4, 1653-54, Joanna Adams, born in England in 1634, died after 1701 at Suffield, daughter of Robert and Eleanor Adams. Children, born at Newbury: 1. He fought in the Indian wars and in 1755 joined one of the English expeditions which marched north from Albany toward Lake Champlain country, and was present at the fierce battle which took place at Halfway Brook, between Fort William and Fort Edward. There is a tradition that he was present at the defeat of General Braddock. On the Lexington alarm, April 19, 1775, he formed a company of minute-men at New Braintree and marched to Cambridge, where his company was made a part of Colonel Larned's regiment. He is said to have taken part in the battle of Bunker Hill and the siege of Boston, but ill health forced him to resign after eight months of service. After the death of his first wife he lived a short time in Boston, and then removed to New Braintree, and built the house now known as the Granger Homestead, which is owned by his grandson, Daniel Granger. George Potter, immigrant ancestor of this family, and several others of the same surname, settled early in Rhode Island. He was born in England. He died soon after 1639, it is supposed, as no further record of him has been found. His widow married Nicholas Niles. Potter was admitted an inhabitant of the island of Aquidneck in 1638. He and twenty-eight others signed the following compact, dated April 30, 1639: "We whose names are underwritten do acknowledge ourselves the legal subjects of his Majesty King Charles, and in his name do hereby bind ourselves into a civil body politicke, unto his laws according to matters of Justice." Nathaniel Potter, probably his brother, signed the same compact.

(II) Abel, the only known child of George Potter, was doubtless born in England about 1638. His father-in-law (stepfather) Nicholas Niles bound him out to William Baulstone for the term of eighteen years. (He may have been three years old at the time, but probably older for the boy "gave his consent" so his apprenticeship extended until after he came of age). The town approved the contract "for the better security of Mr. Baulstone." He and Nathaniel Potter confirmed, September 5, 1664, a deed of eight acres that had once been in their fathers' possession, said deed having been made by Samuel Wilbur to John Tripp, shaft carpenter, 1663, May 7. By "fathers' possession" the respective fathers of each is meant. Nathaniel was son of Nathaniel. Abel Potter bought land of John Read for thirty-six pounds a right in Mashantatack at Dartmouth, Massachusetts, May 3, 1667. He and his wife Rachel of Mashantatack sold sixty acres, and commoning near Pawtucket Falls to Joseph Jenckes, said land formerly belonging to her grandfather, Ezekiel Holliman, the deed being dated at Providence, October 10, 1671. He was admitted a freeman May 1, 1677. He sold land October 6, 1682, to Roger Burlingame for two pounds.

His will was dated January 14, 1692, and proved March 9, following. His wife Rachel was executrix. He bequeathed to son George sixty acres "where he had made preparation for building", and various other property, he paying his sister Mary five pounds. He directed his wife to divide the remainder of the estate among the children, excepting George and Stephen. The latter was bequeathed at the death of the wife all the homestead, paying to his sister Mary five pounds and the sons Abel and Benjamin were to pay Mary five pounds within two years after they are of age. The will of the widow Rachel was dated November 23, 1724, her sons Ichabod and Job executors. She bequeathed to sons Abel, Benjamin, Stephen and John; to daughter Mary. Ichabod and Job had the lands at Mashantatack.

He spent his boyhood on his father's farm and was educated in the public schools of North Adams at Williams College, where both he and his brother, Arnold G. Potter, graduated in the class of 1856. Of this class of forty-two men no less than twenty-six entered the Union army in the civil war, including President James A. Garfield. Mr. Potter read law in the office of Gamewell & Bowerman, of Pittsfield, and in 1859 was admitted to the bar. He began the practice of his profession in partnership with E. M. Wood. After two years the firm of Potter & Wood was succeeded by Adam & Potter, his partner being Robert Adam, and this relation continued until Mr. Potter entered the service two years later.

He was commissioned by Governor Andrew as captain in July, 1862, in Company B, Thirty-fourth Massachusetts Regiment of Volunteer Infantry, being chiefly instrumental in raising that company and he was rapidly promoted. He was faithful and competent and was honored alike by subordinates and superiors in rank for his bravery, loyalty and efficiency. He was twice wounded, first at Piedmont in May, 1864, in General Hunter's command, and second at the battle of Winchester, Virginia, in Sheridan's command. While holding a captain's commission from early in 1864 to July, 1865, he commanded his regiment in various operations and battles. He received his commission as major in 1864 and at the end of the war was made colonel by brevet.

Upon the return of Colonel Potter to civil life, he resumed the practice of law at Bennington, Vermont. He entered partnership with his brother, Arnold G. Potter, who was practicing law in North Adams. The firm had offices at both North Adams and Bennington until 1887, when Colonel Potter removed to North Adams. The firm was for a generation one of the strongest in western Massachusetts and Vermont. Colonel Potter was a number of years the oldest member of the Berkshire bar and one of the oldest in the country. He was a member of Sanford Post, Grand Army of the Republic. There were several pioneer immigrants in New England bearing this name, and all left a very respectable and useful progeny. Among the most distinguished of the name may be mentioned the Rev. Jonathan Edwards, who left a strong impression upon educational and theological matters in the New England and the whole United States. The name belongs to the possessive class of Welsh origin, similar to Evans, Richards, Jones (John's), and many others.

(I) Alexander Edwards, a Welshman by birth, came early to Massachusetts and settled first in Springfield. He is of record there as early as 1642, having married April 28, that year, Sarah (Baldwin), widow of John Searle. In 1654 or the following year he removed to Northampton, Massachusetts, and died there September 4, 1690. He was proprietor of the first mill in that town, and was a prominent and useful citizen of the pioneer committee, helping to establish civilization in the midst of a wilderness. His house lot was on the southeast corner of the present Main and Pleasant streets. Six of his children were born in Springfield, and two in Northampton, namely: Samuel, September 1, 1643; Hannah, February 18, 1645; Joseph, August 8, 1647; Mary, September 20, 1840; Benjamin, June 24, 1652; Sarah, October 21, 1654; National, mentioned below; Elizabeth, February 22, 1659.

(II) Nathaniel, fifth son of Alexander and Sarah (Baldwin) Edwards, was born June 25, 1657, in Northampton, and resided in that town through life, dying October 3, 1731. He was a farmer by occupation, and owned numerous tracts of land, as indicated by the first inventory of his estate made December 24, 1631, including a house and homestead, thirteen acres of meadow, fourteen acres over Mill river, a lot in the long division, and lots and rights in meadows and commons. He married (first) May 17, 1688, Hepzibah Janes, born February 13, 1665; died November 9, 1691; daughter of William and Hannah (Broughton) Janes; (second) Elizabeth Stiles, who died April 5, 1719. His third wife, baptismal name Thankful, died May 13, 1727. He married (fourth) October 12, 1728, Hannah, widow of John Goodman, of Hadley. She died in 1724. Children: Lydia, born February 5, 1680; Daniel, June 26, 1690; Experience, married Jonathan Wright, 1709; Nathaniel, died young; Nathaniel, mentioned below; Joseph, died young; Joseph, March 19, 1698; and Elizabeth, who married (first) Daniel Bartlett, 1710, and (second) Joseph Parsons.

(III) Nathaniel (2), third son of Nathaniel (1) Edwards, and second child of his second wife, Elizabeth Stiles, was born July 26, 1694, in Northampton, and was a farmer in that town, a man of much means for his time, and of free-hearted disposition. He studied for a year in Yale College, and was a very apt scholar learning with little effort. He was subsequently a pupil for a time in a school maintained by Mr. Dwight, in Northampton. His free-hearted disposition and easy mode of life dissipated much of his property, and he died at the early age of fifty-one years, October 7, 1745. He married, May 18, 1720, Mary Strong, born May 19, 1701, died December 6, 1729, daughter of Samuel and Ruth (Sheldon) Strong; (second), 1733, Elizabeth Sykes, of Springfield, who married (second), 1748, Henry Curtis, of Coventry. Children: Ebenezer, died aged two years; Elizabeth, born November 29, 1723; Mary, November 23, 1725; Ebenezer, mentioned below; Ruth, August 15, 1729, died same year.

(IV) Ebenezer, second son of Nathaniel (2) and Mary (Strong) Edwards, was born September 4, 1727, in Northampton, where he was a farmer, and was killed by a falling tree, August 22, 1771, near the close of his forty-fourth year. The inventory of his estate, in October following his death, amounted to £972, 8s. He married, about 1748, Lucy Warner, born September 2, 1725, died August 19, 1807, daughter of Mark and Lydia (Phelps) Warner, of Northampton. Children: Nathaniel, born May 4, 1749; Timothy, March 25, 1751; Solomon, July 19, 1753; Oliver, mentioned below; Lucy, August 12, 1757; Lydia, baptized July 30, 1759; Nancy, August 16, 1761; Thaddeus, 1763; and Alanzon, January 19, 1766.

(V) Oliver, fourth son of Ebenezer and Lucy (Warner) Edwards, born August 29, 1775, in Northampton, was a soldier of the revolution. He enlisted first as private in Capt. Jonathan Allen's company of Gen. Pomeroy's minute-men, who marched April 20, 1775, on the Lexington alarm, and served eight days. He enlisted April 27, in same company, under Col. John Fellows, 8th Massachusetts regiment, muster roll dated August 1, 1775, service, over three months one week four days. He participated in Arnold's foolhardy and disastrous expedition against Quebec, in the winter of 1775-6, enlisting September 9, 1775. He was taken prisoner at Quebec, and released in August, 1776, returned home and was for a time released from poll tax on account of service. He received an order for money in lieu of bounty coat, at Dorchester, November 11, 1776, showing that he was again in the service at that time. His name appears in the list of men recruited for Continental army, sworn to in Hampshire county, April 8, 1779. He joined Capt. Jonathan Allen's company, Col. Putnam's regiment, for three years, was reported at one time as a deserter, but was reinstated. He probably served in the militia, as he is referred to in the records as Capt. Oliver Edwards. He is described as having light complexion, light hair, five feet six inches in height. Soon after the war he settled on Sugar Hill, in Chesterfield, Massachusetts, where his sons Luther and Oliver subsequently resided. He served as selectman of the town, 1790-94, 1800. He married, January 15, 1783, Rachel Parsons, born August 15, 1757, daughter of Isaac and Lucina (Strong) Parsons, of Northampton. The records of the town note baptisms: Rachel Parsons, January 5, 1783; Luther, January 11, 1784; Sereno, January 22, 1786. There were several other children born in Chesterfield, among them: Mrs. William Pomeroy and Mrs. Ambrose Stone, of Williamsburg, and Joshua Bates, of Spancatus, New York.

(VI) Dr. Elisha, son of Captain Oliver and Rachel (Parsons) Edwards, was born January 26, 1795, in Chesterfield, and died February 7, 1840, in Springfield, Massachusetts. When a young man he went to Northampton, and was employed in the apothecary store of E. Hunt as clerk, and about 1815 removed to Springfield, where he engaged in business on his own account. From about 1820 to 1825 he was in partnership with Henry Stearns in the same business, and in 1828 became associated with Charles J. Upham, under the firm name of C. J. Upham & Co. He was one of the subscribers for land now used as Court Square. In 1822-3-4 and 1826, was on parish committee of the Unitarian Society of Springfield. He was one of the organizers in 1836 of the Chicopee Bank of Springfield, now known as the Chicopee National Bank, and was one of its first nine directors. The following tribute to his character is from the pen of one who knew him well.

"In the death of Dr. Elisha Edwards the community has lost one of her most esteemed citizens; the town, an enterprising, high minded merchant; and his family, a most kind and affectionate friend and counsellor. Few men among us have been more successful in business than Dr. Edwards, and very few can be found who possessed the independent enterprise and perseverance with which he was endowed. Blessed as he was in affluence, he used it not for himself alone. The genuine sympathies of his nature were always alive to the misfortunes and wants of others. His hand was ever open to minister to the necessities of the poor and the destitute. No one in distress appealed to him in vain. In his friendship he was warm, decided and unwavering. Clouds might arise, winds blow, and storms beat, but he was true as the needle to the pole. The home, the garden, and the flowers he once loved and cherished, remain. The flowers will again bloom, but not for him. The hand that reared them is laid low. The clods of the valley cover him as he rests in his narrow dwelling, but he is gone, and we trust to a brighter and better world, where 'the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.'

He married, in 1821, Eunice, daughter of Daniel and Sylvia (Burt) Lombard, born October 13, 1797, died December 15, 1875, surviving him more than thirty-five years. She was a lineal descendant of John Lombard, pioneer settler of Springfield. Her mother was descended from Henry Burt, also an early settler, and his wife Eulalia. John Lombard was twenty-three years postmaster at Springfield, and one of the first removed from office under the "spoils system" inaugurated by Jackson in 1828. Mrs. Edwards was remarkable for her beauty, which she retained during her seventy-eight years of life. She was endowed by unusual capacity for business and cared for her ten children and the family estate with remarkable judgment and success. Children: 1. Caroline L., wife of William L. Smith, Springfield. 2. Sophia Orne, married James H. Johnson; home in Bath, New Hampshire. 3. Charlotte E., married, November 28, 1848, Benjamin F. Warner, who died in 1862; children: i. Caroline, born December 3, 1849, died December 19, 1886; ii. Ellen Warner, born May 31, 1854, married William M. Davis, professor, Cambridge University; children: Richard Mott Davis, Nathaniel Burt Davis, Edward Mott Davis; Frank Edwards Warner, born May 31, 1856, married Blanche Fay, child, Richard Fay Warner; Mr. Warner is connected with Bell Telephone Company Boston. Mrs. Charlotte E. Warner resides in Springfield. 4. William, merchant, Cleveland, Ohio. 5. Julia E., married Charles H. Hurd, of Dorchester, Massachusetts. 6. General Oliver, see forward. 7. Mary E., wife of Oscar A. Child, of Cleveland, Ohio.

In 1824 Dr. Edwards built the house at No. 5 Chestnut street, Springfield, where the remainder of his life was passed and where his children grew up. It was the cheerful abode of harmony and kind hospitality. When a young man, Mr. Edwards was read out of the

First Church at the time of the Unitarian secession, but its pastor, Dr. Osgood, remained his firm friend to the end. Dr. Edward's home on Chestnut street was known as "Rose Cottage," and its piazzas were covered with climbing roses. His garden was of the best, and here he reared fruit, flowers, and vegetables in profusion. In speaking of this home, one of his children says: "In the early days of peach culture there was such a yield the peaches were gathered in quantities under a large willow tree in sight of the so-called 'back gate' for free distribution. That same willow tree! Boys and girls, do you remember the swing that seemed to carry us skyward, almost to Heaven; the elastic branch that bent but never broke, swaying in perfect harmony with the motion of the swing; and the fruit orchard yielding its fruit all the summer months, cherries, plums, early pears, apples, such immense red sweet apples as only that one tree was ever known to bear, its branches growing on purpose to make comfortable seats, where the children could pass hours in play or study. The Fourth of July picnics in that same orchard sometimes in the grove opposite, do you remember? Also in the winter months, when the fruit that often seemed to boys the 'sweetest' was no longer there to tempt, its covering of shining ice attracted both boys and girls. Only this winter a sixty-year 'young' man recalled the jolly old times in that same ice-clad orchard."

(VII) General Oliver (2) Edwards, son of Dr. Elisha and Eunice (Lombard) Edwards, was born January 30, 1835, in the Chestnut street home in Springfield, where he grew up. He was among the most valiant soldiers of the civil war, enlisting early in 1861 in the 10th Massachusetts Regiment, in which he was made first lieutenant and adjutant, June 21 of that year. He was mustered as colonel of the 37th Massachusetts Regiment, September 4, 1862, and was brevetted brigadier-general, October 19, 1864, for gallant and distinguished service at the battle of Spotsylvania, and was appointed brigadier-general May 19, 1865. He received mention for meritorious conduct at the battle of Winchester, and was brevetted major general April 5, 1865, for conspicuous gallantry at Sailor's Creek, Virginia; was mustered out January 15, 1866, and subsequently took up his residence at Warsaw, Illinois.
